“ For the uſe of the Surplice, we are contented that all Men be left to their liberty to do as they ſhall think fit, without ſuffering in the leaſt degree for wearing or not wearing it. Provided that this Liberty do not extend to our own Chapel, Cathedral or Collegiate Churches, or to any College in either of our Univerſities, but that the ſeveral Statutes and Cuſtoms for the uſe thereof in the ſaid Places, be there obſerv'd as formerly.

“ And becauſe ſome Men, otherwiſe Pious and Learned ſay, they cannot conform unto the Subſcription required by the Canon, nor take the Oath of Canonical Obedience, we are content, and it is our Will and Pleaſure (ſo they take the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy) that they ſhall receive Ordination, Inſtitution and Induction, and ſhall be permitted to exerciſe their Function, and to enjoy the Profits of their Livings, without the ſaid Subſcription or Oath of Canonical Obedience: And, moreover, that no Perſons in the Univerſities ſhall for the want of ſuch Subſcription be hinder'd in the taking their Degrees. Laſtly, That none be judg'd to forfeit his Preſentation or Benefice, or be deprived of it upon the Statute of the thirteenth of Queen Elizabeth, Chapter the twelfth, ſo he read and declare his Aſſent to all the Articles of Religion, which only concern the Confeſſion of the true Chriſtian Faith, and the Doctrine of the Sacraments compriſed in the Book of Articles in the ſaid Statute mention'd. In a word, we do again renew what we have formerly ſaid in our Declaration from Breda, for the Liberty of tender Conſciences, that no Man ſhall be diſquieted, or called in queſtion for differences of Opinion in matters of Religion, which do not diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom: And if any have been diſturb'd in that kind ſince our Arrival here, it hath not proceeded from any Direction of ours.

“ To conclude, and in this place to explain what we mention'd before, and ſaid in our Letter to the Houſe of Commons from Breda [a], that we hop'd in due time ourſelf to propoſe ſomewhat for the Propagation of the Proteſtant Religion that will ſatisfy the World, that we have always made it both our Care and our Study, and have enough obſerv'd what is moſt like to bring diſadvantage to it: We do conjure all our loving Subjects to acquieſce in and ſubmit to this our Declaration, concerning thoſe Differences which have ſo much diſquieted the Nation at home, and given ſuch Offence to the Proteſtant Churches abroad, and brought ſuch Reproach upon the Proteſtant Religion in general from the Enemies thereof; as if upon obſcure Notions of Faith and Fancy, it did admit the Practice of Chriſtian Duties and Obedience to be diſcountenanc'd and ſuſpended, and introduce a Licence in Opinions and Manners, to the Prejudice of the Chriſtian Faith. And let us all endeavour and emulate each other in thoſe Endeavours, to countenance and advance the Proteſtant Religion abroad, which will be beſt done by ſupporting the Dignity and Reverence due to the beſt Reformed Proteſtant Church at home; and which being once freed from the Calumnies and Reproaches it hath undergone from theſe late ill Times, will be the beſt Shelter for thoſe abroad, which will by that Countenance both be the better protected againſt their Enemies, and be the more eaſily induced to compoſe the Differences amongſt themſelves, which give their Enemies more Advantage againſt them: And we hope and expect, that all Men will henceforward forbear to vent any ſuch Doctrine in the Pulpit, or to endeavour to work in ſuch manner upon the Affections of the People, as may diſpoſe them to an ill Opinion of us and the Government, and to diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom; which if all Men will in their ſeveral Vocations endeavour to preſerve with the ſame Affection and Zeal we ourſelf will do; all our good Subjects will by God's Bleſſing upon us enjoy as great a meaſure of Felicity, as this Nation hath ever done, and which we ſhall conſtantly labour to procure for them, as the greateſt Bleſſing God can beſtow upon us in this World. Given at our Court at Whitehall this twenty fifth Day of October 1660.

Excellency of this Declaration.

This Declaration, tho' very large, cannot be tedious to any good Reader, becauſe it has a Spirit of Truth and Wiſdom and Charity above any one Publick Profeſſion, that was ever yet made in Matters of Religion. It ſhews the admirable Temper and Prudence of the King and his Council in that tender Juncture of Affairs: It proves the Charity and Moderation of the ſuffering Biſhops in thinking ſuch Conceſſions to be juſt and reaſonable for Peace and Unity; and it ſhews a Diſpoſition in the chief Leaders of the other Party, to have accepted of Terms of Union conſiſtent with our Epiſcopacy and Liturgy: It condemns the unhappy Ferments that ſoon after followed for want of coming to this Temper; and it may ſtand for a Pattern to Poſterity, whenever they are heartily diſpoſed to reſtore the Diſcipline and heal up the Breaches of the Church. A very Learned Conformiſt Writer has given this Character of it; If ever a divine Sentence was in the Mouth of any King, and his Mouth erred not in Judgment, I verily believe it was thus with our preſent Majeſty, when he compoſed that admirable Declaration; which next to Holy Scripture I adore, and think that the united Judgment of the whole Nation cannot frame a better, or a more unexceptionable Expedient for a firm and laſting Concord of theſe diſtracted Churches [b].

Speech of Chancellor Hyde.

A little time before this Declaration was publiſhed, Chancellor Hyde (whoſe Head and Hand were moſt in it) had given notice of it in a Speech to the Parliament, wherein he tells them, “ He was commanded to mention to them two things recommended to them by his Majeſty in his Declarati-

[a] See his Majeſty's Speech to both Houſes, profeſſing that he owes his being here to God's Bleſſing upon the Intentions and Reſolutions he had expreſs'd in his Declaration from Breda. The Speech July 17. 1660.

Dr. Bates in his Funeral Sermon upon Mr. Baxter ſaid, That when there was a Motion made in the Houſe of Commons that the Declaration might paſs into an Act, it was oppos'd by one of the Secretaries of State, which was a ſufficient Indication of the King's Averſneſs to it.

[b] The Papiſts were watching and working to hinder all Union and Accommodation among Proteſtants. Dr. Stillingfleet honeſtly relates, that about the time of the King's coming in, a Letter of Advice was written by Seignior Ballerini, concerning the beſt way of managing the Popiſh Intereſt in England upon his Majeſty's Reſtoration; wherein it was adviſed eſpecially to obſtruct the Settlement of the fundamental Conſtitution of the Kingdom, to ſet up the proſperous way of Fears and Jealouſies of the King and Biſhops, to aſperſe the Biſhops and Miniſters of the Church of England, and to repreſent its Doctrine as coming too near to the Church of Rome, to ſecond the Factious in promoting an Indulgence, &c. Pref. to Unreaſonabl. of Separat. 4to.

“ on

1660. 12 Car. II.

“ on from Breda, the one for compoſing thoſe unhappy Differences and Diſtempers in Religion, which had too much diſturbed the Peace of the Kingdom. This (ſaith he) is a ſad Argument indeed, it is a Conſideration that muſt make every religious Heart to bleed, to ſee Religion, which ſhould be the ſtrongeſt Obligation and Cement of Affection, and brotherly Kindneſs and Compaſſion, made now by the perverſe Wranglings of paſſionate and froward Men, the ground of all Animoſity, Hatred, Malice and Revenge; and this unruly and unmanly Paſſion, I fear, too frequently tranſports thoſe who are in the right, as well as thoſe who are in the wrong,[a] and leaves the latter more excuſable than the former. When Men who find their Manners and Diſpoſitions very conformable in all the neceſſary Obligations of Human Nature, avoid one another's Converſation, and grow firſt Unſociable and then uncharitable to each other, becauſe one cannot think as the other doth. ——

My Lords and Gentlemen,

“ this Diſquiſition hath coſt the King many a Sigh, many a ſad Hour, when he hath conſidered the almoſt irreparable Reproach the Proteſtant Religion hath undergone from the Diviſions and Diſtractions which have been ſo notorious in this Kingdom. What pains he hath taken to compoſe them, after ſeveral Diſcourſes with Pious and Learned Men of different Perſuaſions, you will ſhortly ſee by a Declaration he will ſhortly publiſh upon that occaſion; by which you will ſee his great Indulgence to thoſe who can have any pretenſion from Conſcience to differ from their Brethren.

The Presbyterians had not been wanting to uſe their Endeavours of preventing the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Church: For as the Lord Clarendon relates, “ With the Commiſſioners ſent from the Parliament and from the City, to wait on the King at the Hague, in the beginning of May, there came a company of their Clergymen, to the number of eight or ten, who would not be look'd upon as Chaplains to the reſt, but being the popular Preachers of the City (Reynolds, Calamy, Caſe, Manton, and others the moſt eminent of the Presbyterians) deſired to be thought to repreſent that Party. They intreated to be admitted all together to have a formal Audience of his Majeſty; where they preſented their Duties, and magnified the Affections of themſelves and their Friends; who, they ſaid, had always, according to the Obligation of their Covenant, wiſhed his Majeſty very well, and had lately, upon the opportunity that God had put into their Hands, informed the People of their Duty; which, they preſum'd, his Majeſty had heard had proved effectual, and been of great uſe to him. They thank'd God for his conſtancy to the Proteſtant Religion; and profeſſed, that they were no Enemies to moderate Epiſcopacy; only deſired that ſuch things might not be preſſed upon them in God's Worſhip, which in their Judgment who uſed them were acknowledged to be Matters indifferent, and by others were held unlawful.

“ The King ſpoke very kindly to them, and ſaid, that he had heard of their good Behaviour towards him, and that he had no purpoſe to impoſe hard Conditions upon them, with reference to their Conſciences; that they well knew he had referr'd the ſettling all Differences of that Nature to the Wiſdom of the Parliament, which beſt knew what Indulgence and Toleration was neceſſary for the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom. But his Majeſty could not be ſo rid of them; they deſired ſeveral private Audiences of him, which he never denied; wherein they told him, the Book of Common-Prayer had been long diſcontinued in England, and the People having been diſuſed to it, and many of them having never heard it in their Lives, it would be much wonder'd at, if his Majeſty ſhould at his firſt landing in the Kingdom, revive the uſe of it in his own Chapel, whither all Perſons would reſort; and therefore they beſought him, that he would not uſe it intirely and formally, but have only ſome parts of it read, with mixture of other good Prayers, which his Chaplains might uſe.

“ The King told them with ſome warmth, that whilſt he gave them Liberty, he would not have his own taken from him; that he had always uſed that Form of Service, which he thought the beſt in the World, and had never diſcontinued it in Places where it was more diſliked than he hop'd it was by them; that when he came into England he would not ſeverely inquire how it was uſed in other Churches, though he doubted not he ſhould find it uſed in many; but he was ſure he would have no other uſed in his own Chapel. Then they beſought him with more importunity, that the uſe of the Surplice might be diſcontinued by his Chaplains, becauſe the ſight of it would give great offence and ſcandal to the People. They found the King as inexorable in that Point as in the other; he told them plainly, that he would not be reſtrained himſelf, when he gave others ſo much Liberty; that it had been always held a decent Habit in the Church, conſtantly practis'd in England till theſe late ill Times; that it had been ſtill retained by him; and though he was bound for the preſent to tolerate much Diſorder and Indecency in the Exerciſe of God's Worſhip, he would never, in the leaſt degree, by his own Practice, diſcountenance the good old Order of the Church, in which he had been bred. Though they were very much unſatiſfied with him, whom they thought to have found more flexible, yet they ceaſed farther troubling him, in Hope and Preſumption, that they ſhould find their Importunity in England more effectual[b].

Sept. 20. Dr. Juxon Biſhop of London was tranſlated to the See of Canterbury, and Dr. Sheldon was made Biſhop of London, and Dr. Frewen Biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield tranſlated to York, and the other Sees filled with Prelates of eminent Piety and Learning, who yet took not their Seats in the Houſe of Lords, becauſe of the Act ——— that took away the Biſhops Votes in Parliament, tho' as to their Spiritual Juriſdiction, and all other Rights of Ordination, Inſtitution, Cenſures, and even Uniformity of Worſhip, they were now in poſſeſſion of them. For without any new Acts, or Repeal of any aboliſhing Ordinances, by reſtoring the Conſtitution of this Kingdom, the Church of England was by Law Eſtabliſh'd. It ought to be obſerv'd, that the King on the very next Day after he had took poſſeſſion of his Royal Palace, publiſh'd A Proclamation againſt vicious, debauch'd and profane Perſons; given at Whitehall May 30. in the twelfth Year of his Reign. And happy had it been for the Peace and Honour of this Reign, if the Example of the Court had confirmed the Order of it. (Promotions of Biſhops.)

Anno 1661. His Majeſty's Coronation was with great State and Splendor performed on April 23. St. George's Day, his Majeſty the Day before making (Coronation of the King.)

[a] The very Quakers were complaiſant to the King: They publiſh'd A Viſitation of Love unto the King 1660, 4*to.* inſcribed to Charles Stuart, who is proclaimed King, and to all you that are called and known by the Name of Royal Party and Cavaliers, and who have ſuffer'd in your Cauſe and for your Principle, in the Name of the People call'd Quakers. With a Poſtſcript againſt Plots and Inſurrections. Written about the middle of the third Month call'd May, 1660. Subſcribed Edward Burrough, &c.

[b] See the firſt Addreſs and Propoſals of the Preſbyterian Miniſters preſented to the King, in Mr. Baxter's Life, Fol. p. 233. With the Anſwer of the Biſhops and Epiſcopal Divines, p. 242.

a ſo-

1661. 13 Car. II.

a ſolemn Proceſſion from the Tower thro' the City, amidſt Triumphal Arches, and all the poſſible Tokens of Reſpect and Joy. At the opening of the new Parliament on May 8. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons, made this Speech.

Meeting of the Parliament.

My Lords and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

King's Speech.

"I Will not ſpend the time in telling you why I called you hither, I am ſure I am very glad to ſee you here. I do value myſelf much upon keeping my Word, upon making good whatſoever I promiſe to my Subjects: And I well remember, when I was laſt in this place, I promiſed that I would call a Parliament as ſoon as could be reaſonably expected or deſired; and truly conſidering the Seaſon of the Year, and all that hath been done ſince we parted, you could not reaſonably expect to meet ſooner than now we do: If it might have been a Week ſooner, you will confeſs there was ſome reaſon to deferr it to this Day: For this Day, we may without Superſtition love one Day, prefer one Day before another, for the Memory of ſome Bleſſing that befel us that Day; and then you will not wonder that the Memory of the great Affection the whole Kingdom ſhew'd to me this Day twelve Month, made me deſirous to meet you again this Day, when I dare ſwear you are full of the ſame Spirit, and that it will be laſting in you. I think there are not many of you who are not particularly known to me; there are very few of whom I have not heard ſo much good, that I am as ſure, as I can be of any thing that is to come, that you will all concurr with me, and that I ſhall concurr with you in all things which may advance the Peace, Plenty and Proſperity of the Nation, I ſhall be exceedingly deceived elſe.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"You will find what Method I think beſt for your Proceeding, by two Bills which I have cauſed to be prepared for you, which are for confirmation of all that was enacted at our laſt Meeting: And above all, I muſt repeat what I ſaid when I was laſt here: That next to the miraculous Bleſſing of God Almighty, and indeed as an immediate Effect of that Bleſſing, I do impute the good Diſpoſition and Security we are all in, to the happy Act of Indemnity and Oblivion, that is the principal Corner-Stone which ſupports this excellent Building, that creates Kindneſs in us to each other, and Confidence in our joint and common Security.

"I am ſure I am ſtill of the ſame Opinion, and [illegible] if it be poſſible of that Opinion, than I [illegible]s by the Experience I have of the benefit of it, and from the Unreaſonableneſs of what ſome Men ſay againſt it, tho' I aſſure you not in my hearing. In God's Name provide full Remedies for any future Miſchiefs; be as ſevere as you will againſt new Offenders, eſpecially if they be ſo upon old Principles, and pull up thoſe Principles by the Roots. But I ſhall never think him a wiſe Man who would endeavour to undermine or ſhake that Foundation of our publick Peace, by infringing that Act in the leaſt degree; or that he can be my Friend, or wiſh me well, who would perſuade me ever to conſent to the Breach of a Promiſe I ſo ſolemnly made when I was abroad, and performed with that Solemnity; becauſe, and after I promiſed it, I cannot ſuſpect any Attempts of that kind by any Men of Merit and Vertue.

"I will not conclude without telling you ſome News; News that I think will be very acceptable to you, and therefore I ſhould think myſelf unkind and ill-natur'd, if I ſhould not impart it to you. I have been often put in mind by my Friends, that it was high time to marry; and I have thought ſo myſelf ever ſince I came into England: But there appeared Difficulties enough in the Choice, tho' many Overtures have been made to me; and if I ſhould never marry till I could make ſuch a Choice, againſt which there could be no foreſight of any Inconvenience that may enſue, you would live to ſee me an old Batchellor, which I think you do not deſire to do. I can now tell you, not only that I am reſolv'd to marry, but whom I reſolve to marry if God pleaſe. And towards my Reſolution, I have uſed that Deliberation, and taken that Advice, as I ought to do in an Affair of that Importance; and truſt me, with a full Conſideration of the good of my Subjects in general, as of myſelf; it is with the Daughter of Portugal. When I had, as well as I could, weighed all that occurred to me, the firſt Reſolution I took, was to ſtate the whole Overtures which had been made to me, and in truth all that had been ſaid againſt it, to my Privy Council; without hearing whoſe Advice I never did nor ever will reſolve any thing of publick Importance. And I tell you, with great Satiſfaction and Comfort to myſelf, that after many Hours Debate in a full Council, for I think there was not above one abſent; and truly I believe upon weighing all that can be ſaid upon that Subject, for or againſt it, my Lords, without one diſſenting Voice, yet there were very few that ſate ſilent, adviſed me with all imaginable Cheerfulneſs to this Marriage; which I look'd upon as very wonderful, and even as ſome Inſtance of the Approbation of God himſelf, and ſo took my own Reſolution, and concluded all with the Ambaſſador of Portugal, who is departing with a whole Treaty ſigned, which you will find to contain many great Advantages to the Kingdom: And I make all the haſte I can to fetch you a Queen hither, who I doubt not will bring great Bleſſings with her to me and you. I will add no more, but refer the reſt to the Chancellor.

And accordingly the Lord Chancellor told them, "that the King had called them hither by his Writ, which was the only good and lawful way to the meeting of a Parliament, they ought to thank God he had reſerved them to this Day, a Day that many good Men had died praying for, that after all the Prodigies in Church and State, they had lived to ſee the King at the opening of the Parliament. That the King had cauſed a Bill or two to be prepared for the Confirmation of all that was enacted in the laſt Parliament; which, tho' not call'd by the King's Writ, might be reaſonably thought to have been called by God himſelf, upon the Supplication and Prayer of the King and the whole Nation, as the only means to reſtore the Nation to its Happineſs, to its ſelf, to its Honour, and even to its Innocence. That for the King after ſo many Injuries and Loſſes, to have been not only willing to confirm and to re-enact the Act of Oblivion and Indemnity, but to prepare ſuch an Act for them, to conjure them by all that was precious, by their Friendſhip to him, to diſpatch thoſe Acts with expedition, was ſuch a piece of fatherly Tenderneſs and Piety, as could proceed from no Heart, but ſuch a one in which God had treaſured up a ſtock of Mercy and Juſtice and Wiſdom to redeem a Nation. That the laſt Parliament which had done ſo very much, had ſtill left great things for them to do; they would find the Revenue the laſt Parliament intended to raiſe for the King, very much ſhort of what they promiſed: They would find the publick Debts for the diſcharge of the Army and the Navy, which the laſt Parliament thought they had provided for ſufficiently, to be ſtill in Arrear and unpaid. That they were now the great Phyſicians of the Kingdom; and God knows had many wayward and froward and diſtemper'd Patients, ſome who in truth were very ſick, others who thought themſelves ſicker than they were, and ſome who thought themſelves in Health, and were

" moſt

1661. 13 Car. II.

“ moſt ſick of all: They were therefore to uſe all the Diligence, Patience and Compaſſion which good Phyſicians have for their Patients, all the Cheerfulneſs and Complacency and Indulgence, their ſeveral Habits and Conſtitutions and Diſtempers might require. —— But there were a ſort of Patients who deſerved not their Lenity or Indulgence, thoſe were the ſeditious Preachers, who could not be contented to be diſpenſed with for their full Obedience to ſome Laws eſtabliſhed, without reproaching and inveighing againſt thoſe Laws how eſtabliſhed ſoever. That when the King ſpake laſt in this place before this Day, he ſaid, when he ſhould call the next Parliament, he ſhould receive their Thanks for what he had done ſince he had diſſolv'd the laſt Parliament: For, he ſaid, he ſhould not more propoſe to himſelf any one Rule in his Actions or Councils than this, What is a Parliament like to think of this Action, or of that Counſel? And that it ſhould be want of Underſtanding in him, if it would not bear that Teſt. That in a little time after the Diſſolution of that Parliament, while his Majeſty accompanied his Royal Mother to the Sea-ſide, the moſt deſperate and prodigious Rebellion brake out in this City that had been heard of in any Age; and by the multitude of intercepted Letters from and to all the Counties of England, in which the Time was ſet down wherein the Work of the Lord was to be done, by the deſperate Carriage of the Traitors themſelves, and the bragging of their Friends, it might be concluded the Combination reached very far; and if the indefatigable Induſtry of the Lord Mayor had not prevented it, probably the Fury would not have been extinguiſh'd, before this famous City, or a great part of it, had been burnt to Aſhes: and therefore it would become their Wiſdoms to provide new Remedies for new Diſeaſes, and to ſecure the precious Perſon of our dear Sovereign from the firſt Approaches of Villainy, and the Peace of the Kingdom from the firſt Overtures of Sedition. That the King had now told them, he was reſolv'd to marry, and reſolved whom to marry; the moſt grateful News that the whole Kingdom could receive. That it would be judg'd an irrecoverable Error in Policy, if Portugal ſhould be ſuffered again to be ſwallow'd up by Spain. That the Spaniſh Ambaſſador was ſollicitous to obſtruct this Match; and the King had not concealed from his Council, what that Ambaſſador had offered againſt this Marriage; what Profers he had made of others, what Threats of War in one caſe, what Advantage of Dowry in another; nay, that he had been ſo ſollicitous for the Advancement of the Proteſtant Religion, that he had offer'd ſeveral Proteſtant Princeſſes to whom his Maſter ſhould give a Portion, as with the Infanta of Spain; but had withal preſſed very earneſtly the delivering up of Dunkirk and Jamaica; by which it was plain the Spaniſh King would have that Recompence for the Portion he would give. That there being a unanimous Advice from his Council to his Majeſty to make this Marriage, he had ſent for the Portugal Ambaſſador, had declared his Reſolution to him, had writ himſelf to Portugal, and was preparing his Fleet to fetch home our Queen. ———

1661. 13 Car. II.

The Commons returned to their Houſe, and choſe for their Speaker Sir Edward Turner, the Duke of York's Sollicitor General, who in his Speech when preſented excuſed himſelf, and petition'd for the Liberties of the Houſe, and expreſs'd their hopes, that as his Majeſty had maniſeſted his Royal Favours to the late adopted Parliament, ſo he had a Bleſſing left for this his natural Parliament. On May 13. both Houſes attended his Majeſty at Whitehall, expreſſing their humble Acknowledgments and Thanks for communicating to them his Royal Intentions to marry with the Infanta of Portugal, which they could not but receive with great Joy and Satisfaction; and with all Earneſtneſs ſhould beg a Bleſſing upon it, and a ſpeedy Accompliſhment of it[a]. On May 22. by Order of Parliament, the Solemn League and Covenant was publickly burnt at London and Weſtminſter by the common Hangman, as afterward over all England; and on May 28. the pretended Act for the Trial of King Charles I. was burnt in Weſtminſter-Hall by a like Order of Parliament. The Commons were ſo unanimous and zealous in their Loyalty and Affections to the King, that the Common-wealth Party began to ſuſpect that the late Act of Oblivion and Indemnity would not ſecure them from being called to the old Accounts; they doubted the Validity of that Act might be queſtion'd, unleſs confirmed and expreſſly eſtabliſhed by the preſent Parliament: They had ſollicited the King for this new Security, and he had promiſed to procure it for them: but for fear the Inclinations of the Houſe would not ſo readily meet the King's Deſire, upon the importunity of thoſe who were conſcious of their Guilt and Danger, his Majeſty ſent this gracious Letter to the Houſe of Commons, to paſs the Bill for confirming the Act of Oblivion and Indemnity.

Sir Edw. Turner choſen Speaker.

Both Houſes approve the King's Marriage.

A Loyal Parliament.

Charles R.

TRuſty and Well-beloved we greet you well. At the opening of our Parliament you were told, that we had a great Deſire this Summer to make a Progreſs thro' ſome Parts of our Kingdom, which we reſolve to begin in Devotion to our City of Worceſter, that we may pour out our Thanks to God for our Deliverance there; and the Seaſon of the Year quickens us in that Inclination, as we preſume it diſpoſes you to withdraw from this City, and to viſit your Countries. But you may remember we told you then, that we had cauſed ſome Bills to be prepared for you, for confirmation of what we enacted at our laſt meeting; and we ſaid all we could to you of the Value we ſet upon the Act of Indemnity (as we have great reaſon to do) and if we could have uſed ſtronger Expreſſions to have conjured you ſpeedily to have diſpatched it, we aſſure you we would have done it. And we did think what we ſaid would have made an Impreſſion in all who profeſs a de-

King's Letter for Indemnity.

[a] The King's Marriage is thus related by a very good Writer: The Portugueſe ſent Franciſco de Mello de Tonez, Count de Ponte, and afterward Marquis of Sandes, in Quality of Extraordinary Ambaſſador to congratulate the King's Return, and the Queen gave him in charge to confer with Chancellor Hyde, and to engage him to diſpoſe the King, his Maſter, to eſpouſe the Infanta of Portugal, —— France had in a manner abandon'd the Portugueſe, —— ſo it ſeem'd to be their moſt expedient Courſe to enter into a ſtrict Alliance with England. They rightly conſider'd the King would have need of Money to reward ſuch as had done him Service. —— Wherefore the Marq. of Sandes propoſed to the King to marry the Infanta, putting him in hopes of ſome Millions of Money with her: And he ſo manag'd Matters, that by the means of Chancellor Hyde he perſuaded the King in ſpite of all the oppoſition of the Spaniards. —— The Spaniard for his part profer'd to give as much as Portugal, if King Charles would marry a Proteſtant Princeſs; and that if neither a Daughter of Saxony, nor of Denmark, would pleaſe him, he might have the Princeſs of Orange upon the ſame Conditions that he had formerly deſired: Or he might have the Princeſs of Parma, to whom the King of Spain, upon that very account, had given a conſiderable Dowry. —— This Matter was debated in the King's Council, where it was agreed, that ſeeing the Spaniards would undoubtedly fail in their Promiſes touching the Marriage, it was moſt expedient to embrace the Propoſals of Portugal, who with the Infanta would give the Town of Tangier in Africk, and that of Bombay in the Eaſt-Indies, with three Millions of Livres, and Jewels to a great Value. —— Thoſe who with impartial Eyes look'd on theſe Intrigues, could not but admire that a Proteſtant Chancellor ſhould perſuade the King his Maſter to eſpouſe a Catholick Princeſs, when at the ſame time a Catholick King propos'd to that Prince a Proteſtant Conſort. Memoirs of Monſ. d' Ablancourt.

ſire to ſerve us; and therefore we expected every Day, that the ſame Bill would have been preſented to us for another Aſſent: We confeſs, we hear you have ſhewed great Affection to us, ſince your coming together, and that you have already prepared and paſſed ſome very good Bills (for which we heartily thank you) that are ready for the Royal Aſſent: Yet we cannot but tell you, that though we are enough concerned to expedite thoſe Bills, we have no mind to paſs them, till the Act of Indemnity be likewiſe preſented to us, upon which (if you take our Word) moſt of our Quiet and Good depends, and in which we are ſure our Honour is concerned: Therefore we muſt again, and as earneſtly as is poſſible, conjure you to uſe all poſſible Expedition in the paſſing that Act in the ſame Terms we already paſſed it (to which we take ourſelf obliged) and that you will for the preſent lay aſide all private Buſineſs, that ſo betaking yourſelves only to the Publick, you may be ready to adjourn by the middle of next Month, which will beſt ſuit with all our Occaſions. And ſo not doubting of your Readineſs to comply with us in theſe our juſt and neceſſary Deſires, we bid you heartily Farewel. Given at our Court at Whitehall the two and twentieth Day of June 1661. in the thirteenth Year of our Reign.

To our Truſty and Well-belov'd Sir Edward Turner, Kt. Speaker of our Houſe of Commons, to be communicated to the Houſe.

Bills paſſed.

This Letter had the deſired Effect of prevailing with the Commons, and of pleaſing the People: And ſo the Bills were diſpatch'd and paſs'd For Confirmation of the Act of Oblivion, for Regulating Corporations, for Reſtoring the Biſhops to their Privilege of ſitting as Peers in the Houſe of Lords, and ſome other Acts, and then the Houſes were adjourn'd to Nov. 20.

King's Progreſs put off.

The King had mention'd in his Letter the Deſign of a Summer Progreſs, and eſpecially to Worceſter, and to that end his Tent-Office was held at Clerkenwell-Green, to prepare all things for his Equipage and Accommodation: But either for Cares or Pleaſures intervening, the Progreſs was deferr'd to another Summer, and not then made.

Several of the Regicides and principal State Criminals had been kept in Cuſtody as reſerved, by the Act of Oblivion, to any Puniſhment that a Parliament ſhould determine to be inflicted on them. Under this Condition the Lord Munſon, Sir Henry Mildmay, and Mr. Robert Wallop, had been brought to the Bar of the Lords, the Commons then preſent, where their Eſtates were declared confiſcate, and they degraded from all Titles and Arms of Gentility, and farther ſentenc'd to be drawn from the Tower thro' the City of London to Tyburn on Jan. 30. next, and ſo back again with Halters about their Necks upon Sledges, and to ſuffer perpetual Impriſonment. Several others of them were in October ſent away from the Tower to remote Priſons in Caſtles and Iſlands to continue there for Life.

Mercy to the Regicides.

Succeſs of our Fleet.

The Earl of Sandwich had the Command of our Fleet, and ſet Sail with his Vice-Admiral Sir John Lawſon, on June 19. toward the Streights, to reduce the Pirates, who had very much obſtructed our Trade and Navigation. On July 29. he came before the Port of Algier, and ſent a Meſſage to the Dey of that Place, to come out and confirm the League formerly made with England. A Treaty was begun, but the Algerines appear'd ſo inſolent in their Terms, that the Admiral weigh'd and ſtood in to their Harbour, but found it ſo well ſecur'd in a new manner by a Mole and Forts and Batteries, that after the firing ſome few Ships, and ſtriking the Town into great Conſternation, he found it adviſeable to bring off the Fleet which had ſuffer'd extremely in their Sails and Rigging, and leaving Sir John Lawſon to block them up, he ſailed away with part of the Fleet to the Coaſt of Spain, then croſs to Tangier, and ſo back by Liſbon, according to his Orders. The old Republicans made their envious and ſeditious Remarks, that the Naval Force of England would not be ſo great under Monarchy, as it had been under a Common-wealth.

Among other Branches of the Royal Family that came over to congratulate the Reſtauration of the King, was Elizabeth Queen of Bohemia, the King's Aunt, and only ſurviving Daughter of King James I. the happy Mother of a Proteſtant Heir to this Crown, the Princeſs Sophia. She had been married to the unfortunate Elector Palatine on Feb. 14. 1612. and having been out of England forty nine years, had endured and ſurvived all the poſſible Misfortunes of her Family, and came now to her Native Country to die in Peace: For ſhe had arrived here on May 17. and departed this Life in Leiceſter-Houſe the 13*th* of February following, in the ſixty ſixth Year of her Age, and was privately buried in the ſame Vault with Prince Henry her eldeſt Brother, in the Chapel of Henry VII.

Death of the Queen of Bohemia.

Ireland.

The Government of Ireland had been committed to three Juſtices, the Earl of Orrery, Sir Maurice Euſtice, and Sir Charles Coot Earl of Mountrath, of which the latter dying this Year, James Duke of Ormond was by his Majeſty appointed Lord Lieutenant of that Kingdom, where he had before ſhewn his Loyalty and Wiſdom and Valour in a very eminent degree[a].

Biſhops reſtor'd to their Seats in Parl.

According to the Adjournment, the two Houſes met Nov. 20. now firſt in their true Parliamentary Conſtitution of Lords Spiritual, Temporal and Commons; for the Biſhops by Virtue of the Act of Repeal made in the laſt meeting, did now take their Places; and the King in his Speech congratulated them upon the Reſtitution of their Rights, and ſaid it was a Felicity which he had much deſired to ſee accompliſhed, as the only thing wanting to compleat the goodly Fabrick of Church and State.

State of Religion.

Religion was now to undergo the ſame happy Change with the Civil Government. A new Parliament had met on May 8. and tho' there was no legal Neceſſity for a Convocation to attend it, yet the latter Cuſtom had prevail'd for the King to ſend out his Writs to the two Archbiſhops to ſummon the Clergy of their reſpective Provinces to aſſemble in Convocation much about the ſame time with the ſitting of Parliament, becauſe to treat among themſelves of the ſame Affair in Aiding and Aſſiſting the Crown; and becauſe they may be ready as the Church Repreſentative to conſult in any Matters of Doctrine or Diſcipline or Worſhip, that may happen to come under the Conſideration of the whole Legiſlature. But becauſe the Conſtitution of the Church was not yet perfectly re-eſtabliſhed, and becauſe the King had promiſed another ſort of Synodical meeting of Commiſſioners, Epiſcopal and Presbyterian Divines; therefore it was not reſolv'd to call a Convocation with this Parliament. While this Matter was held in ſuſpence, Dr. Heylyn wrote this Letter to the chief Miniſter of State.

Parl. intended to be called without a Convocation.

[a] The Iriſh Papiſts made bold to expect the King's Favour. Father Peter Walſh does acknowledge, that the Catholick Clergy of Ireland, by an Inſtrument bearing Date January 1660, O. S. ſigned and ſealed by the chief Prelates and Officials of their Religion then at home in their Countrey, deputed a Perſon of their own Communion and Profeſſion to kiſs his Majeſty's Hand in their Name, and expreſs their hearty Gratulations for his thrice happy Return to his Dominions, and to preſent withal their moſt humble Supplications for his Majeſty's either Juſtice or Clemency for a free Exerciſe of their Religion, purſuant to thoſe favourable Conceſſions of the Peace granted, and Articles made with the Catholicks of that Nation in the Year 1648, &c. More ample Account, &c. by F. Pet. Walſh, 1662. 8*vo.* p. 1.

Right

1661. 13 Car. II.

Dr. Heylyn's Letter on that occaſion.

Right Honourable and my very good Lord,

"I Cannot tell how welcome or unwelcome this Addreſs may prove in regard of the greatneſs of the Cauſe, and the low Condition of the Party. But I am apt enough to perſuade myſelf, that the honeſt Zeal which moves me to it, not only will excuſe but endear the Boldneſs.

"There is, my Lord, a general Speech, but a more general Fear withal, amongſt ſome of the Clergy, that there will be no Convocation called with the following Parliament; which, if it ſhould be ſo reſolved on, cannot but raiſe ſad Thoughts in the Hearts of thoſe who wiſh the Peace and Happineſs of our Engliſh Sion. But being the Biſhops are excluded from their Votes in Parliament, there is no other way to keep up their Honour and Eſteem in the Eyes of the People, but the retaining of their Places in the Convocation. Nor have the lower Clergy any other means to ſhew their Duty to the King, and keep that little Freedom which is left unto them, than by aſſembling in ſuch Meetings where they may exerciſe the Power of a Convocation in granting Subſidies to his Majeſty, tho' in nothing elſe. And ſhould that Power be taken from them, according to the conſtant (but unprecedented) Practice of the late long Parliament, and that they muſt be taxed and rated with the reſt of the Subjects without their liking and conſent; I cannot ſee what will become of the firſt Article of Magna Charta, ſo ſolemnly, ſo frequently, confirmed in Parliament: or what can poſſibly be left unto them, of either the Rights or Liberties belonging to an Engliſh Subject.

"I know 'tis conceived by ſome, that the Diſtruſt which his Majeſty hath in ſome of the Clergy, and the Diffidence which the Clergy have of one another, is look'd on as the principal Cauſe of the Innovation; for I muſt needs behold it as an Innovation, that any Parliament ſhould be called without a Meeting of the Clergy at the ſame time with it. The firſt Year of King Edward VI. Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth, were Times of greater Diffidence and Diſtraction than this preſent Conjuncture; and yet no Parliament was called in the Beginning of their ſeveral Reigns, without the Company and Attendance of the Convocation, tho' the Intendments of the State aimed then at greater Alterations in the face of the Church, than are now pretended or deſired. And, to ſay the truth, there was no Danger to be feared from a Convocation, tho' the Times were ticklish and unſettled, and the Clergy was divided into Sides and Factions, as the Caſe then ſtood, and ſo ſtands with us at this preſent time. For, ſince the Clergy in their Convocations are in no Authority to propound, treat, or conclude any thing (more than the Paſſing of a Bill of Subſidies for his Majeſty's Uſe) until they are impowered by the King's Commiſſion; the King may tye them up for what time he pleaſes, and give them nothing but the opportunity of entertaining one another with the News of the Day.

"But if it be objected, That the Commiſſion now on foot for altering and explaining certain Paſſages in the Publick Liturgy, may either paſs inſtead of a Convocation, or elſe is thought to be neither competible nor conſiſtent with it; I hope far better in the one, and muſt profeſs, that I can ſee no reaſon in the other. For Firſt, I hope that the ſelecting ſome few Biſhops and other learned Men of the Lower Clergy to debate on certain Points contained in the Common Prayer Book, is not intended for a Repreſentation of the Church of England, which is a Body more diffuſed, and cannot legally ſtand bound by their Acts and Counſels. And if this Conference be for no other purpoſe, but only to prepare Matters for a Convocation (as ſome ſay it is not) why may not ſuch a Conference and Convocation be held both at once? For neither the ſelecting of ſome learned Men out of both the Orders for the Compoſing and Reviewing of the two Liturgies digeſted in the Reign of King Edward VI. proved any Hindrance in the calling of thoſe Convocations which were held both in the ſecond and third, and in the fifth and ſixth of the ſaid King's Reign. Nor was it found, that the holding of a Convocation together with the firſt Parliament under Queen Elizabeth, proved any Hindrance to that Conference or Diſputation which was deſigned between the Biſhops and ſome learned Men of the oppoſite Parties. All which conſidered, I do moſt humbly beg your Lordſhip to put his Majeſty in mind of ſending out his Mandates to the two Archbiſhops for ſummoning a Convocation (according to the uſual Form) in their ſeveral Provinces; that this poor Church may be held with ſome degree of Veneration, both at home and abroad.

"And, in the next place, I do no leſs humbly beſeech your Lordſhip to excuſe this Freedom; which nothing but my Zeal for God's Glory, and my Affection to this Church, could have forced from me. I know how ill this preſent Office does become me, and how much fitter it had been for ſuch as ſhine in a more eminent Sphere in the holy Hierarchy, to have tendered theſe Particulars to Conſideration: which ſince they either have not done, or that no viſible Effect hath appeared hereof, I could not chuſe but caſt my poor Mite into the Treaſury; which, if it may conduce to the Church's Good, I ſhall have my Wiſh; and howſoever ſhall be ſatisfied, in point of Conſcience, that I have not fail'd of doing my Duty to this Church, according to the Light of my Underſtanding: and then what happens unto me ſhall not be material. And thus again, moſt humbly craving Pardon for this Preſumption, I kiſs your Lordſhip's Hands, and ſubſcribe my ſelf,

My Lord,

Your Lordſhip's moſt humble Servant to be commanded,

Peter Heylin.

Upon ſuch Reaſons and Application to the Miniſters of State, long after the Writs for Parliament, the King ſent out his Mandates for a Convocation in each Province; that to William Archbiſhop of Canterbury dated Apr. 11. for his Suffragans and Clergy to meet before him in the Church of St. Paul in London on the 8th of May following[a]. At which time and Place the Convocation was opened by Divine Service, and a Sermon preach'd in Latin by Dr. Thomas Pierce on Acts xv. 28. the Biſhop of London preſiding (inſtead of the Archbiſhop, detained by Age and Infirmities) and by Schedule continuing and proroguing the Convocation unto the 16th of May in the Collegiate Church of Weſtminſter: On which Day Dr. Henry Fearne, Dean of Ely, having been in the former Seſſion elected Prolocutor, was now preſented to the Preſident, and confirmed by him. After which, the Lower Clergy being diſmiſs'd, the Preſident and other Biſhops treated of a Form of A Convocation regularly ſummon'd.

Dr. Fearne Prolocutor.

[a] The Proceeding in Elections of Members for this Convocation is complain'd of in the Conformiſts Plea for the Nonconformiſts, 1681. 4to. p. 35. to frame a Convocation to their Mind, great Care and Pains were uſed to keep out and to get in by very undue Proceedings. Proteſtations were uſed againſt all Incumbents not ordained by Biſhops, &c.

Mr. Baxter makes complaint of the Election of Proctors in Convocation for the Clergy of London at Chriſt Church on the ſecond of May 1661. His Life, p. 333.

1661. 13 Car. II.

Forms of Prayer for May 29. and Jan. 30.

Prayer to be uſed on the 29th of May, to be obſerved as a ſolemn Thankſgiving for the King's Birth and Reſtoration; and for another ſpecial Form of Prayer to be uſed on the 30th of January. The drawing up theſe Forms was referred to two ſeveral Committees, each conſiſting of four Biſhops and eight of the Inferiour Clergy. And then the Convocation was by Schedule prorogued to May 18. In which third Seſſion, the Preſident delivered the Form of Prayer for May 29. to the Prolocutor, to be conſidered and conſented to by him and the Lower Houſe; and then intimated the want of a particular Form for the Miniſtration of Baptiſm to thoſe of riper Years, and referred it to a Committee of three Biſhops, and ſix of the Lower Clergy. In the eighth Seſſion, June 7. Richard Aldworth, Eſq; preſented to the Biſhop of London, as Preſident, his Majeſty's

Royal Licence.

Royal Licence under the Great Seal of England for Amending, Reforming, Expounding, and Correcting the Conſtitutions and Canons already made, and for Ordaining and making new Conſtitutions and Ordinances concerning the Peace and Good of the Church of England. After which, the Attorney General brought in a Copy of his Majeſty's Proclamation for a ſolemn Faſt; which being read by the publick Notary, the Preſident and Biſhops conſulted about a Form of Prayer for the ſaid Faſt, to be obſerved on the 12th of June, and referred this Matter to a Committee of four Biſhops and eight of the Inferiour Clergy. In the tenth Seſſion, June 19. the Preſident informed the other Biſhops, that (there having been ſome Defect in the former Licence) he had obtained from his Majeſty new Letters Patents for a more effectual Licence to proceed in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs: by vertue of which, a Committee of 12 Biſhops and 24 of the Lower Clergy, was appointed to examine the Canons already made, and to conſider of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, and the Regulation of Spiritual Courts and Officers. In the next Seſſion, June 21. the Biſhop of London ſitting Preſident, and the Archbiſhop of York, with the Biſhops of Durham and Cheſter appearing there, a Debate was had for the drawing up one uniform Book of Articles of Enquiry to be uſed in the Viſitation of every Biſhop, referred to a Committee of both Houſes, with a Deſire to the Biſhops of the Province of York to be preſent, and to aſſiſt in that Buſineſs. In the 14th Seſſion. July 3. the Preſident and Biſhops treated and conſidered of an Act about Printing, and referred the Matter to another Committee. In the 18th Seſſion, July 17. the Biſhop of Sarum brought in a Draught of ſome Canons, which were read and amended, and recommitted. In the 23d Seſſion, July 27. the Preſident and Biſhops made their Subſcription ſingly for a Royal Benevolence to be preſented to the King. At the ſecond Meeting of the Parliament, Novemb. 20. the Convocation met the Day following, when the King's Letters were read for a Review of the Book of Common Prayer, and a Committee was appointed for that Purpoſe. This important Buſineſs took up the Care and Application of both Houſes till the 48th Seſſion, Decemb. 20. when the Book of Common Prayer ſo Reviſed and Amended, was ſolemnly Received, Approved, and Subſcribed, by [a] all the Members of each Houſe. In the 50th Seſſion, Jan. 8. the Preſident and Biſhops treated about Reviſing the Canons and Conſtitutions that were made in 1640. to conſider which of them might be duly and fitly obſerved and uſed; and this Matter in the 53d Seſſion, was committed to a ſelect Committee. In the 56th Seſſion the Upper Houſe treated and conſulted about the Act for Uniformity of Publick Prayers. And in their next Seſſion, Jan. 31. the Queſtion fell under Debate among the Biſhops, how far it was ſafe or lawful for the Biſhops to ſit or be preſent in the Houſe of Lords in the Trial and Condemnation of Perſons impeach'd of Treaſon: and after many Arguments, it was agreed to take Advice of the beſt common Lawyers and Civilians. The Convocation met again the Day following; and then the ſeveral Lawyers who had been conſulted in this Caſe were admitted into the Upper Houſe, who, after ſeveral Queſtions and Arguments, deliver'd in their Opinion in Writing, That the Biſhops might ſit with the other Peers in Parliament, without any Detriment or Prejudice, during the ſaid Buſineſs of Condemn'd Perſons. In the 62d Seſſion, Feb. 18. the Preſident ſent for the Lower Houſe, and admoniſhed them to chuſe another Prolocutor and Referendary in the Place of Dr. Henry Fearne, promoted to the See of Chicheſter: and they accordingly choſe

A new Licence more effectual.

K's Letters for Review of the Common Prayer.

1661. 13 Car. II.

Biſhops to ſit in Trials for Blood.

Dr. Barwick Prolocutor.

and preſented Dr. John Barwick, Dean of St. Paul's, accepted and approved by the Preſident with conſent of his Brethren. In the next Seſſion, Feb. 22. the Upper Houſe made ſome farther Progreſs in Reviſing the Canons and Conſtitutions made in 1640. and in drawing up a Book of Articles to be uſed in every Epiſcopal Viſitation. In the 66th Seſſion, March 5. the Preſident and Biſhops conſulted about Alterations in the Liturgy.

the Amendments and Alterations which had been made by the Parliament in the Book of Common Prayer, and committed the Reviſal of them to George Biſhop of St. Aſaph, Richard Biſhop of Carliſle, and Brian Biſhop of Cheſter, whoſe Report was approved by both Houſes. In the next Seſſion, March 8. John Biſhop of Durham deliver'd into the Hands of the Preſident, a Book of Articles to be uſed in Viſitations; which was order'd to be tranſmitted to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury for his Grace's Peruſal and Correction. Then a Debate was held about taking care of the Impreſſion of the Book of Common Prayer; and it was agreed, that Dr. Sancroft ſhould be Superviſor, and Mr. Scattergood and Mr. Dillingham ſhould be Correctors of the Preſs. In the 70th Seſſion, the Preſident ſent for the Prolocutor and Clergy, and told them, that the Book of Common-Prayer, and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, according to the Uſe of the Church of England; together with the Form of Ordaining and Conſecrating Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons, as Reviſed by the Convocation, had been well accepted in the Houſe of Lords: and that the Lord Chancellour, as well in his own Name, as in the Name of all the Peers in Parliament, had returned Thanks to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops of [a] Dr. Tho. Teniſon, afterward Archbiſhop of Canterbury, did obſerve in his Diſcourſe concerning the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion in 1689, that the Spirit of Popery was already moving at Court, and obſtructing Reformation and Union. His Words are; Our Conſtitution was review'd in 61. And yet notwithſtanding that Review, is capable of another; the Commiſſioners of that time did not add the laſt Hand to that Work, ſo as to render it incapable ever after of being corrected and improv'd. Some who have well conſider'd all the Alterations and Additions then made by them, (which amount to the number of about 600) are ſufficiently convinc'd, that if they had reaſon for thoſe Changes, there is equal, if not greater reaſon for ſome farther Improvements. If they had foreſeen what is ſince come to paſs, I charitably believe they would not have done all that they did, and juſt ſo much, and no more. And yet I alſo believe, that if they had offer'd to move much farther, a Stone would have been laid under their Wheel by a ſecret but powerful Hand. The Myſtery of Popery did even then work, and a Romaniſt has very frankly inform'd us of the Expectation raiſ'd in that Party in the beginning of the Summer, 61. They had ſome Hopes cheriſh'd in them of Liberty of Conſcience, of the Removal of the Sanguinary and other Penal Laws, and of forty Chapels to be opened for them in and about the City of London. Much more is underſtood by thoſe who have penetrated into the Deſign of a certain Paper, call'd commonly the Declaration of Somerſet-Houſe.

See a Catalogue of the Prelates and Clergy of the Province of Canterbury in the upper and lower Houſe of Convocation now ſitting at Weſtminſter. Publiſhed by Order. London, for N. Brook, 1 Sheet Fol. 1661.

See the ſolemn Petition and Advice of Dr. Henry Hammond to the Convocation, with Directions to the Laity how to prolong their Happineſs. Publiſh'd by Tho. Smith of Chriſt's Coll. Cambr. 1661. 8*vo.*

both

1661. 13 Car. II. both Provinces, for their great Care and Induſtry in Reviſing the ſaid Book of Common Prayer: and that the ſaid Lord Chancellor had deſired him to return the like Thanks to the Prolocutor, Prelates, and Clergy, for their reſpective Care and Labour in the ſaid Work. On Saturday, March 22. the 71ſt Seſſion, the Preſident and Biſhops conſulted about a publick Form of Conſecration of Pariſh-Churches and Chapels, and committed that Matter to the ſole Care of John Lord Biſhop of Durham.

Before the opening of this Convocation, a Conference was begun at the Savoy between the Biſhops with their Epiſcopal Clergy, and the Presbyterian Divines, by vertue of a Commiſſion given by his Majeſty to the Archbiſhop of York, the Biſhops of London, Durham, Rocheſter, Sarum, Worceſter, Lincoln, Peterborough, Cheſter, Carliſle, Exeter, and Norwich, Dr. Earles, Dr. Heylin, Dr. Hacket, Dr. Barwick, Dr. Gunning, Dr. Pearſon, Dr. Pierce, Dr. Sparrow, Mr. Thorndike, on the one part; Dr. Tuckney, Dr. Conant, Dr. Spurſtow, Dr. Wallis, Dr. Manton, Mr. Calamy, Mr. Baxter, Mr. Jackſon, Mr. Caſe, Mr. Clark, Mr. Newcomen, Dr. Horton, Dr. Jacomb, Dr. Bates, Mr. Rawlinſon, Mr. Cooper, Dr. Lightfoot, Dr. Collins, Mr. Woodbridge, and Mr. Drake, on the other part; to adviſe upon and review the Book of Common Prayer, comparing the ſame with the moſt ancient Liturgies which have been uſed in the Church in the primitive and pureſt Times —— and to take into their ſerious and grave Conſiderations the ſeveral Directions and Rules, Forms of Prayer, and Things in the ſaid Book of Common Prayer contained; and to adviſe and conſult upon and about the ſame, and the ſeveral Objections and Exceptions which ſhall now be raiſed againſt the ſame; and (if occaſion be) to make ſuch reaſonable and neceſſary Alterations, Corrections and Amendments, as ſhall be agreed upon to be needful and expedient for the giving Satiſfaction to tender Conſciences, and the reſtoring and continuance of Peace and Unity in the Churches under his Majeſty's Protection and Government —— And to certify and preſent to his Majeſty in Writing, under their ſeveral Hands, the Matters and Things whereupon they ſhall ſo determine to be by his Majeſty approved and eſtabliſhed —— As by the Letters Patents dated at Weſtminſter the 25*th Day of* March in the thirteenth Year of our Reign.

The Place of Meeting was the Savoy, in the Lodgings of Dr. Sheldon, Maſter of the Savoy, and Biſhop of London. When they firſt met, the Biſhop of London, in a Speech, opened the Occaſion of their Meeting; and told the Presbyterian Divines, "That "the King had graciouſly appointed this Conference "at their Requeſt, and for their Satisfaction, they "having been deſirous of ſome Alterations in the "Liturgy: And therefore he propoſed that they "would bring in all their Objections againſt the "Liturgy in Writing, and all the additional Forms "and Alterations which they thought proper to be "made to it. This Method the Presbyterian Divines had before declined when it had been offer'd by the King, and again by the Lord Chancellour, excuſing themſelves by ſaying, They were but few, and had no Commiſſion from their Brethren to expreſs their Minds; and therefore begg'd leave to acquaint their Brethren in the Country, that they might know their Senſe. And when the King again preſs'd them for their Propoſals, they declar'd, That they could not pretend to ſpeak for or oblige others; and that therefore what they did, muſt ſignify but the Minds of ſo many Men as were preſent. And being farther required to deliver in their Deſires of Alteration, which ſhould be taken as their own Judgment, without including the Senſe of their whole Party; they again endeavoured to evade it, by begging of his Majeſty, that if they made their Propoſals, the other ſide might bring in their Conceſſions at the ſame time, containing the utmoſt of what they could abate and yield in order to Peace; that ſo when both were ſeen and compar'd together, a Judgment might be the better form'd as to the probability of Succeſs. According to this Art of Reſervedneſs, the Presbyterian Commiſſioners objected againſt the Propoſal of the Biſhop of London for ſtating their Caſe in Writing, and moved for an Amicable Conference, according to the intent as they preſumed of the Commiſſion, and which they thought more likely to contribute to a Diſpatch of their great End of meeting; whereas writing would be a tedious, endleſs Buſineſs, and prevent their Familiarity and Acquaintance with each others Minds, which would beſt facilitate Peace and Concord. But the Biſhop of London prudently inſiſted on the ſafer and more certain way of bringing in all their Exceptions, Alterations and Additions in one view in Writing, to which they ſhould receive diſtinct Anſwers likewiſe in Scriptis. After ſome Debate it was agreed, That they ſhould bring all their Exceptions at one time, and all their Additions at another time.

Savoy Conference.

The Exceptions were accordingly drawn up by Dr. Reynolds, Dr. Wallis, Mr. Calamy, Mr. Newcomen, Dr. Bates, Mr. Clark, Dr. Jacomb, &c. and preſented to the Biſhops under this Title, The Exceptions of the Presbyterian Brethren againſt ſome Paſſages in the preſent Liturgy, dated Aug. 30. 1661. In this Paper they propoſed much more than they themſelves could expect to be granted: For they propoſed, that the Prayers and Materials of the Liturgy might have nothing in them doubtful, or queſtion'd among pious, learned Perſons (a thing impracticable) that the Repetitions and Reſponſals of Clerk and People might be omitted (a pious Cuſtom of the Primitive Church, and which Mr. Baxter himſelf had ſaid, was firſt owing to the devout Raptures of the People in breaking in upon the Prieſt, and taking their Share in the holy Offices) that the Petitions of the Litany might be caſt into one ſolemn Prayer to be offer'd up by the Miniſter alone. That there be nothing in the Liturgy countenancing the Obſervation of Lent as a Religious Faſt. That the Obſervation of Saints Days be omitted. That the Gift of Prayer be not excluded from being a part of Publick Worſhip. That the new Tranſlation of the Scriptures be every where uſed inſtead of the Old Verſion. That all Apocryphal Leſſons be omitted. That no part of the Liturgy be read at the Communion Table. That the Word Prieſt and Curate be turned into that of Miniſter, and Sunday into Lord's-Day. And finally, that no Ceremonies of Habit or Poſture be impoſed, but thoſe things be left to the liberty of Diſcretion in the Miniſter. After theſe general Propoſals, they added their particular Exceptions to ſeveral Parts and Paſſages of the Liturgy, and expreſs'd or ſuggeſted the Amendments and Alterations to be made to them. The Epiſcopal Clergy gave in their Anſwer, and accepted of the others Reply. And ſeveral Amendments and Alterations were made in the Publick Liturgy: But, after all, it was an unhappy Prejudice to the Peace of the Church and Nation, that the Presbyterian Divines thought theſe Conceſſions and Amendments to be not enough for their own Honour and the general Satisfaction of their Party: And on the other ſide, the Biſhops and Clergy were apt to think that the more they yielded the more importunate Demands would be made upon them, as they ſaw by the Practice of Mr. Baxter: For when the drawing up the Additions or new Supplements to be made to the Liturgy, was by his Brethren committed to him alone, he drew up an abſolute Form of his own, and ſtyl'd it The Reformed Liturgy, as if he had the Modeſty to think, that the Old Liturgy compiled by a number of very learned Confeſſors and Martyrs, muſt now give place to a new Form compoſed by a ſingle Man, and he by Education much inferior to many of his other Brethren.

Exceptions of the Presbyterians.

No Satisfaction.

After ſeveral ineffectual Papers of Propoſals, Exceptions, Anſwers, Replies and Rejoinders; when the Commiſſion was within ten Days of expiring, the

The Bps yield to a Conference.

1661. 13 Car. II.

the Presbyterian Divines earneſtly deſired the Biſhops to admit them to a Perſonal Conference upon the Subject Matter of the Papers which had paſs'd between them. And to cut off all occaſion of Complaint, the Biſhops who had all along diſliked this way of Altercation, did now yield to it: And ſo a Diſputation was held for ſeveral Days, wherein the chief and choſen Managers were Dr. Pierſon, Dr. Gunning, and Dr. Sparrow on the one ſide, and Dr. Bates, Dr. Jacomb and Mr. Baxter on the other. There was much frivolous Debate in ſettling the Order of Diſputation, which ſide ſhould oppoſe and which ſhould anſwer; the Epiſcopal Party arguing, that they were in Poſſeſſion of the Liturgy and Ceremonies, and therefore were to be only on the defenſive Side, and to anſwer the Objections which the other Party ſhould urge to them. But, however, for greater Condeſcenſion, they agreed to oppoſe and anſwer by turns, the Presbyterians beginning to be the firſt Opponents. After much time ſpent to little purpoſe, Biſhop Coſins produced a Paper as containing a Method to end the Controverſie, by a Motion to put the Complainers upon diſtinguiſhing between the Things they charged as ſinful, and thoſe which they accepted againſt as inexpedient only. The Presbyterian Miniſters were deſired to draw up an Anſwer to it, which they did the next Morning, and deliver'd it, but in their own Names only. They charg'd eight things in the Liturgy as flatly ſinful and contrary to the Word of God.

Charge of things unlawful in the Liturgy.

1. "That no Miniſter be admitted to baptize without the preſcribed uſe of "the tranſient Image of the Croſs. 2. That no "Miniſter be permitted to read or pray, or exerciſe the other Parts of his Office, that dare not "wear a Surplice. 3. That none be admitted to "Communion in the Lord's Supper, that dare not "receive it kneeling. 4. That Miniſters be forc'd "to pronounce all baptiz'd Infants regenerate by the "Holy Ghoſt. 5. That Miniſters be forc'd to "deliver the Sacrament of the Body and Blood "of Chriſt unto the Unfit both in Health and Sickneſs, and that with perſonal Application, putting "it into their Hands. 6. That Miniſters be forced "to abſolve the Unfit, and that in abſolute Expreſſions. 7. That Miniſters are forced to give "Thanks for all whom they bury, as Brethren "whom God hath delivered and taken to himſelf. "8. That none may be a Preacher that dare not ſubſcribe, that there is nothing in the Common-Prayer-"Book, the Book of Ordination and the thirty "nine Articles, that is contrary to the Word of God.

Unreaſonableneſs of this Charge.

It ſeems very ſtrange, that theſe Men ſhould undertake to mention eight unlawful things in the Liturgy, when they could not affirm any one of thoſe things to be in it ſelf unlawful; but argu'd altogether upon the unlawful Impoſition of them, which they might as well have done by the ſame Argument in eight hundred of other indifferent and moſt innocent Matters. And it muſt be confeſt to be ſtranger ſtill, that of the eight ſinful things which they here enumerate, two of them, the fifth and the ſixth, are poſitively falſe in the ſuppoſition of them: For by the Liturgy the Miniſter was not forced either to adminiſter the Sacrament or the Abſolution to unfit Perſons.

Diſingenuity of Mr. Baxter.

This Diſingenuity, chiefly owing to Mr. Baxter, had taken away all hopes of Accommodation; but yet they proceeded to diſpute upon the Queſtion, Whether it was ſinful to enjoin Miniſters to deny the Communion to thoſe who would not receive it Kneeling? Where a great many Arguments were warmly urg'd about the making things in their Nature Indifferent to be in their Uſe Neceſſary, by the Command of a lawful Authority. In this Diſpute Mr. Baxter is repreſented as very perverſe in denying every Propoſition when made never ſo plain and evident. For this major Propoſition being laid down by the Epiſcopal Divines, That Command which commandeth only an Act in it ſelf lawful, is not ſinful. Mr. Baxter denied it, becauſe it might include another Act or Circumſtance unlawful: Whereupon they chang'd it into this Propoſition, That Command which commandeth an Act in itſelf lawful, and no other Act or Circumſtance unlawful, is not ſinful. This Mr. Baxter deny'd, becauſe that may be accidentally a Sin which is not ſo in itſelf; and a lawful Command may be commanded under an unjuſt Penalty: Upon which they thus clear'd up the Propoſition, That Command which commandeth an Act in itſelf lawful, and no other Act whereby any unjuſt Penalty is enjoyn'd, nor any Circumſtance whence directly or per accidens any Sin is conſequent, which the Commander ought to provide againſt, is not ſinful. Mr. Baxter perſiſted in his Denial, giving this Reaſon, "That the firſt Act commanded may "be accidentally unlawful, and the Penalty unjuſt, "tho' no other Act or Circumſtance be ſuch. The Opponents therefore once more advanc'd this Propoſition of Compliance with him, That Command which commandeth an Act in itſelf lawful, and no other Act whereby any unjuſt Penalty is enjoyn'd, nor any Circumſtance whence directly or per Accidens any Sin is conſequent, which the Commander ought to provide againſt, hath in it all things requiſite to the lawfulneſs of a Command, and particularly cannot be guilty of commanding an Act per accidens unlawful, nor of commanding an Act under an unjuſt Penalty. Which Propoſition he alſo deny'd, and referr'd only to his foregoing Reaſons. This Behaviour of Mr. Baxter was afterward complain'd of in Print by Biſhop Morley, In a Letter to a Friend for Vindication of himſelf from Mr. Baxter's Calumny; in which the Biſhop obſerv'd, that ſuch a way of Denial was not only frivolous and falſe, but it was deſtructive of all Authority Human and Divine, as not only denying all Power to the Church of making Canons and Conſtitutions for the Peace and Order of it, but alſo taking away all Legiſlative Power from the King and Parliament, and even from God himſelf. And ſo ended this Conference without Union or Accommodation; the Presbyterian Divines depending too much on the Encouragement they had received from the King and his chief Miniſters, on the Aſſurances given them by ſome of the leading Members of the Parliament, and on the Affections of the People: In all which they were miſtaken as much as in the Merit of their Cauſe [a].

Ill Succeſs of this Conference.

1662.

King's Marriage.

The King's Match formerly intimated to his Parliament, was now coming on to a Conſummation. The Princeſs Donna Catherina Infanta of Portugal, was born Nov. 14. 1638. Daughter of Juan Duke of Braganza, reſtored to the Crown of Portugal after that Monarchy had been interrupted for near one hundred Years, and only Siſter of Don Alphonſo VI. and Don Pedro ſucceſſively Kings of Portugal. After the return of the Conde de Mello with the Articles of Treaty and Marriage to Liſbon, ſhe was married by ſolemn Proxy in the Perſon of his Excellency the Earl of Sandwich, and under his Conduct ſhe embark'd for England April 23. attended by a large Squadron of the Royal Navy, and was met at the Iſle of Wight by the Duke of York Lord High Admiral. At Portſmouth ſhe was received by the King, and privately there married by Dr. Gilbert Sheldon Biſhop of London, as was commonly reported, to ſatisfie the People of England. But others knew better, that the Queen refuſed to be married by any but [a] The Papiſts thought they had an Intereſt at Court, and pleaded for a Toleration; and having petition'd the Lords and Commons, that by their Mediation to his Majeſty they may receive the Benefit of a gracious and general indulgence, they drew up a Paper, intituled, The Anſwer of the Roman Catholicks to the Queſtion, Whether their Opinions be conſiſtent with their Obedience to the King and the Peace of the Kingdom, 1661. MS.

The Quakers were of ſo turbulent a Spirit, that they were frequently impriſon'd; but the King ſeem'd to pity them, as Men who by their preſent Spirit could not help it. And therefore he publiſh'd a Proclamation of Royal Grace for the Enlargement of Priſoners called Quakers. Given May 11. 1661.

a Prieſt

1662. 14 Car. II. a Prieſt of her own Religion. And therefore the Earl of Briſtol in the very next Year charged the Lord Chancellor Hyde, that he had brought the King and Queen together without any ſettled agreement in what manner the Rites of Marriage ſhould be perform'd; whereby the Queen refuſing to be married by a Proteſtant Prieſt, in caſe of her being with Child, either the Succeſſion ſhould be made uncertain for want of the due Rites of Matrimony, or elſe his Majeſty to be expoſed to a ſuſpicion of having been married in his own Dominions by a Romiſh Prieſt. The ſame Earl farther charg'd the Lord Chancellor, That being intruſted with the Treaty betwixt his Majeſty and his Royal Conſort the Queen, he had concluded it upon Articles ſcandalous and dangerous to the Proteſtant Religion. But to return to Portſmouth, from thence the Royal Pair remov'd to Hampton-Court, and on Aug. 23. to Whitehall in great Pomp and Magnificence, being received at Chelſea by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London. The Portion which the Queen brought with her, was two Millions of Croiſadoes, about 40000 l. Sterling, with the Inheritance of Tangier and the Iſle of Bombay in the Eaſt-Indies; in conſideration whereof a Jointure of thirty thouſand Pounds a Year was ſettled on her. This Match was unhappy in nothing but the want of Royal Iſſue; and ſome People did afterward pretend, that it was a proſpect of this want that induced the Lord Chancellor Hyde to provide this Match, ſo to conſult the Honour and Intereſt of his own Blood, in his only Daughter the Dutcheſs of York. The ſuſpicion of his Policy in this Affair, and of his Corruption in the Sale of Dunkirk, tho' groundleſs or at leaſt uncertain and improbable, loſt him many Friends, and gave his Enemies a great advantage. Roger Coke Eſq; A late Author who ſeldom ſpared the Character of Courtiers, gives us this Opinion of theſe matters. "Here I take leave, ſo well as I can, to vindicate the Memory of my Lord Chancellor Hyde from two Aſperſions (as I conceive) caſt upon him; one, that he was the Adviſer of giving up Dunkirk to the French; the other, that he was the Procurer of the King's Marriage with the Infanta of Portugal. For the firſt, I was aſſured by a credible Perſon (tho' a Confident of my Lord Chancellor's) that he was ſo far from adviſing the King to give up Dunkirk to the French, that only he and my Lord Treaſurer Southampton (upon whoſe Honour my Lord Chancellor relied more than on any other) of all the Council, enter'd their Proteſtations againſt it: Vindication of Chancellor Hyde. The truth of this may be reſolv'd by inſpecting the Privy Council Books. It's true, I cannot prove negatively, that my Lord Chancellor did not firſt propound the King's Marriage with the Infanta of Portugal, yet it ſeems to me reaſonable he did not, for theſe Reaſons. I never heard of any Diſcourſe of this Match, before the arrival of the Queen-Mother in England; or if any were, it's probable that Monſieur Courtin had this in his Inſtructions, as well as that of moving the King not to abandon Portugal; for both theſe tend to the ſame End, and the French King all his Reign after, ſought to attain his Ends by Women as well as other ways. Nor can it be believ'd that the Prince of Portugal, now engag'd in War againſt Spain, ſhould pay the Queen's Portion, 40000 l. I believe he did what he could, give up Tangier and Bombay to the King, which laſt place he leaſed to the Eaſt-India Company for 10 l. per Ann. but the Money was paid by the French King.

Parl. prorogu'd. On Monday May 19. the King prorogued the Parliament to Feb. 18. having paſſed ſeveral Bills, of which the moſt conſiderable was that for Uniformity, which was found neceſſary for the Peace and Safety of the State, as well as for the Good and Glory of the Church. Act of Uniformity. It was undoubtedly the Faction and Sedition of the ſeveral Sects and Parties that work'd up the Wiſdom of the Nation into this expedient Awe and Reſtraint upon them. The true Reaſon had been given by the Lord Chancellor in his Speech at the opening of this Parliament, when telling the Lords and Commons, they were the great Phyſicians of the Kingdom, he proceeded thus; Speech of Chancellor Hyde againſt Diſſenting Teachers. "There are a ſort of your Patients that I muſt recommend to your utmoſt Vigilance, utmoſt Severity, and to no part of your Lenity or Indulgence; ſuch who are ſo far from valuing your Preſcriptions, that they look not upon you as their Phyſicians but their Patients; ſuch, who inſtead of repenting any thing that they have done amiſs, repeat every Day the ſame Crimes, for the Indempnity whereof the Act of Oblivion was provided. Theſe are the ſeditious Preachers, who cannot be contented to be diſpenſed with for their full Obedience to ſome Laws eſtabliſh'd, without reproaching and inveighing againſt thoſe Laws how eſtabliſh'd ſoever: who tell their Auditories that the Apoſtle meant, when he bid them ſtand to their Liberties, that they ſhould ſtand to their Arms; and who, by repeating the very Expreſſions, and teaching the very Doctrine they ſet on foot in the Year 1640. ſufficiently declare, that they have no mind that 20 Years ſhould put an end to the Miſeries we have undergone. What good Chriſtian can think, without horror, of theſe Miniſters of the Goſpel, who by their Function ſhould be Meſſengers of Peace, and are in their Practice the only Trumpets of War, and Incendiaries towards Rebellion? How much more Chriſtian was that Athenian Nun in Plutarch! and how ſhall ſhe riſe up in Judgment againſt theſe Men! who, when Alcibiades was condemned by the publick Juſtice of the State, and a Decree made that the Religious, the Prieſts and the Nuns, ſhould revile and curſe him, ſtoutly refuſed to perform that Office, ſaying, that ſhe was profeſſed Religious, to pray and to bleſs, not to curſe and ban. And if the Perſon and the Place can improve and aggravate the Offence, as no doubt it doth both before God and Men; methinks the preaching Rebellion and Treaſon out of the Pulpit, ſhould be as much worſe than the advancing it in the Market, as poyſoning a Man at the Communion would be worſe than killing him at a Tavern. And it may be in the Catalogue of thoſe Sins which the Zeal of ſome Men declares to be againſt the Holy Ghoſt, there may not be any one more reaſonably thought to be ſuch, than a Miniſter of Chriſt's turning Rebel againſt his Prince, which is a moſt notorious Apoſtaſy from his Order; and his preaching Rebellion to the People as the Doctrine of Chriſt, adding Blaſphemy and Pertinacy to his Apoſtaſy, hath all the Marks by which good Men are taught to know and avoid that Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt. If you do not provide for the thorow quenching theſe Firebrands, King, Lords, and Commons, ſhall be their meaneſt Subjects, and the whole Kingdom kindled into one general Flame.

The other conſiderable Act that now paſs'd was, Chimney-Money. for ſettling an annual Revenue of two Shillings upon every Fire-hearth in the Nation upon the Crown for ever. This Duty, commonly called Chimney-money, was a Burden more uneaſie to the People of England than any other ſeems to have been to their Forefathers; and the arbitrary way of collecting it, made it the more inſufferable. The King himſelf met with a blunt Rebuke for it, when thinking himſelf to be unknown in a Barge, and allowing himſelf and his Company to droll upon the Watermen that paſs'd by, one of them knowing the King's Face, inſtead of other common Ribaldry, cried out only, Chimney-ſweep, Chimney-ſweep. A Burden that lay upon the Minds much heavier than upon the Fortunes of the People: and therefore the Remiſſion of it by King William, was as wiſe a part of Popularity as could well be acted. The Name of

Things

1662. 14 Car. II.

Things is often more odious than the Nature of them; the ſame Weight may be tolerable when it is wrapt up in a ſofter Word.

Money given.

This Parliament was indeed very ready to ſupply the King with a very large Revenue, and yet hardly equal to his Occaſions: The Debts he had contracted in his Exile, the Returns he was to make to foreign Obligations, the Recompences that many loyal Sufferers expected, the Gratuities to bold Men, the Rewards to faithful Servants, and, above all, the exceſſive Civilities to Women, made the King continually want even more than this bountiful Parliament could raiſe[a]. We may here take in the Obſervation of a late Writer: Says he, "It "looks as if Heaven took a more than ordinary "Care of England, that we did not throw up our "Liberties all at once, upon the Reſtoration of the "King; for tho' ſome were for bringing him back "upon Terms; yet after he was once come, he poſ"ſeſs'd ſo entirely the Hearts of his People, that "they thought nothing was too much for them to "grant, or for him to receive. Among other De"ſigns to pleaſe him, there was one formed at "Court, to ſettle ſuch a Revenue upon him by "Parliament during Life, as ſhould place him be"yond the Neceſſity of asking more, except in the "Caſe of a War, or ſome ſuch extraordinary Oc"caſion. The Earl of Southampton, Lord High Trea"ſurer, came heartily into it, out of a mere Prin"ciple of Honour and Affection to the King; but "Chancellor Clarendon ſecretly oppos'd it. It hap"pen'd, that they two had a private Conference a"bout the Matter; and the Chancellor being ear"neſt to bring the Treaſurer to his Opinion, took "the Freedom to tell him, that he was better ac"quainted with the King's Temper and Inclinations "than Southampton could reaſonably expect to be, "having had long an intimate Acquaintance with "his Majeſty abroad; and, that he knew him ſo "well, that if ſuch a Revenue were once ſettled up"on him for Life, Neither of them two would be of "any farther uſe; and that they were not, in probabi"lity, to ſee many more Seſſions of Parliament during "that Reign. Southampton was brought over; but "this Paſſage could not be kept ſo ſecret, but it "came to King Charles's Ears; which, together "with other things wherein Clarendon was miſre"preſented to him, prov'd the true Reaſon why he "abandon'd him to his Enemies[b].

James Wellwood M. D.

Prerogative advanced.

This Parliament farther ſhew'd their Loyalty and Affection to the King in all imaginable ways of advancing his Prerogative as well as his Revenue; as by this Declaration or Acknowledgement to be ſubſcribed by every Dignitary, Parſon, Vicar, Curate, and Schoolmaſter, according to the Act of Uniformity: I A. B. do declare, That it is not lawful, upon any Pretence whatſoever, to take Arms againſt the King; and, that I do abhor that traiterous Poſition of taking Arms by his Authority againſt his Perſon, or againſt thoſe that are Commiſſion'd by him. And farther, by enacting the ſole Right of the Militia to be in the King, with ſuch Reaſons for it as would not have been given in the brighteſt part of his Father's Reign.

Regicides taken.

And to ſhew their greater Zeal for the ſafety of his Perſon, they fell again upon enquiring after the Regicides and Traitors excepted from the Act of Oblivion. Several of them had fled beyond the Seas, among whom were Miles Corbet, Colonel Okey, and Colonel Barkſtead; who having rambled through many Parts of Germany, return'd in the beginning of this Spring to Delft in Holland, having appointed their Wives to meet them there, to underſtand the Condition of Affairs in England: Theſe Letters being intercepted by the Vigilance of Sir George Downing, his Majeſty's Reſident at the Hague, they were all three taken, and by the States Order put on board the Blackmore Frigat, then lying at Helver-Sluce, and ſo brought over and committed to the Tower; from whence on Apr. 16. they were brought to the King's-bench Bar, and there demanded what they could ſay for themſelves, why they ſhould not die according to Law, the Act of Attainder being read to them. They put the Court to a Proof that they were the ſame Perſons expreſt in that Act; which Proof being ſoon made by Witneſſes and a Jury, they received their Sentence, and were executed on Saturday Apr. 19. at Tyburn, making a better End than moſt of their other Accomplices; for they acknowledg'd a quiet Submiſſion to the King's Government, as of God, and exhorted others ſo to do; profeſſing they had no Malice to his late Majeſty, and that they had miſtaken the Parliament's Authority for good and ſufficient in that unhappy Act[c]. After this, the Houſe of Commons addreſs'd the King to bring Sir Henry Vane and John Lambert, Eſq; to their Trials; who accordingly were Arraign'd at the King's-Bench Bar before Sir Robert Foſter Lord Chief Juſtice: the firſt, for imagining and compoſing the Death of the late King; the latter, for levying War againſt his preſent Majeſty. Sir Henry diſown'd his being any way concern'd in the King's Death, but pleaded the Authority of the Long Parliament, and juſtified that Authority as ſuperiour to any other: And as for his Behaviour in the other Governments in Being after the King's Death, he urged this Pretence of Law, that his preſent Majeſty being at that time but King de jure, and not de facto, he could not be indicted for Treaſon committed before his Reſtoration. He made a great deal of noiſe, and gave the Court a great deal of trouble. After a due Sentence, at the Interceſſion of ſome of his Friends, who better deſerved the King's Favour, he was beheaded on Tower-Hill June 14. and on the very Scaffold run out into ſuch Lectures of Treaſon and Enthuſiaſm, that they were forced to drown him with the noiſe of Drums and Trumpets, and were going to take his Papers from him; but with great Indignation he tore them in pieces, and ſubmitted to the Block in a very diſcompoſed manner[d]. Lambert, at his Trial, behav'd himſelf with very great reſpect and defe-

Trial of Sir Henry Vane.

Trial of Lambert.

[a] The Lord Holles in his memorable Letter to Monſ. Van-Benninghen in 1676. writes thus. This Parliament repreſented the Humours and Diſtempers of the Times wherein they were choſen; and conſequently their Actions were violent, and they did many things afterwards to be repented of; and no doubt, had they done what they have done to a deſigning and parſimonious Prince, he might have taken advantage of their Hearts to have undone England. For what with that great Revenue, and all thoſe moſt mighty Aids they have given him, he might have made ſo great a Bank, and annex'd ſo great a Revenue of Lands to the Crown, that he might have maintain'd an Army, over-balanc'd the Nobility, and have reign'd without Parliaments, and ſo have brought England into the ſame Condition with France. I am without all doubt therefore, that the Profuſeneſs and Inadvertency of the King have ſaved England from falling into Deſtruction under this Parliament.

[b] It is much for the Honour of my Lord Clarendon, that the Papiſts thought him the great Obſtructor of Arbitrary Power. Father Orleans writes thus. Moſt of thoſe who had been the King's greateſt Enemies, expreſs'd the greateſt Zeal for his honourable Reception; and had it depended only on thoſe who till then had been the moſt violent againſt Monarchical Government, Charles II. would have had the Honour of reſtoring the Crown of England to its ancient Prerogatives. It is reported, that Chancellor Hyde being led by that Engliſh Spirit, which is always jealous of the Liberty of the Nation, did not let that Prince ſee all the Advantages he might reap from that good Diſpoſition of the Minds of the People.

[c] See the Speeches, Diſcourſes and Prayers of Col. John Barkſtead, Col. John Okey, and Mr. Miles Corbet, upon the 19th of April, the Day of their ſuffering at Tyburn; with an account of the Occaſion and Manner of their Taking in Holland, &c. Printed in the Year 1662. 4*to*.

[d] See the Tryal of Sir Henry Vane, Knt. at the King's Bench, June 26, 1662. his Pleas, Speech, Prayer and Behaviour on the Scaffold. Printed in the Year 1662. 4*to*.

His Friends attempted to make him a Saint and Martyr in a Book publiſh'd within the ſame Year, entituled, The Life and Death of Sir Henry Vane, Knt. With a true Account of his purely Chriſtian, Peaceable, Spiritual, Goſpel Principles, Doctrine, Life, and way of worſhipping God; for which he ſuffered Contradiction and Reproach from all ſorts of Sinners, and at laſt a violent Death, June 14, 1662. With his laſt Exhortation to his Children the Day before his Death. Printed in the Year 1662. with his Picture.

rence

1662. 14 Car. II. rence to the Court, as if he had depended on the Royal Mercy he received at the Bar, which was a Reprieve from Death, and a Confinement during Life in the Iſle of Guernſey; where he continued above thirty Years a patient and diſcreet Priſoner. And the better to ſecure the King and Government againſt all Attempts and Deſigns of the old Inſtruments of Rebellion, a Proclamation was publiſh'd to command all Officers, under any of the late uſurped Powers, that had been disbanded, to depart 20 Miles from the City and Suburbs of London, and not to return within eight Months, unleſs by expreſs Licence obtained from the Privy Council.

King and Parl. differ only in the Caſe of Tolerat. The only Matter wherein the King and his Parliament could ſeem to differ, was in that of Indulgence and Toleration to the Nonconformiſts; of whom the Presbyterians had the beſt Title to be favourably conſidered; for they had generally wiſh'd for the King's Return, and were eminently inſtrumental in it; and moſt of their Divines had appeared in a good Temper for Moderation and Union, declaring for a Regulated Epiſcopacy, and for a reformed Liturgy. For which Reaſons the King had been very kind and gracious to them, and had given them great hopes, that he would either not paſs the Bill for Uniformity, or get them a Clauſe of Exception in it: But finding themſelves diſappointed in both theſe Hopes, and agreeing generally to be ejected at the Feaſt of St. Bartholomew; they ſoon after applied themſelves to the King and Council for a Diſpenſation from the Penalties of that Act. The Council ſhew'd their Averſeneſs to a diſpenſing Power in general, and eſpecially to this particular Exerciſe of it: But the King betray'd a great Inclination for it, and ſeem'd to labour under a Promiſe that he would do it. And therefore to make it the leſs Offence and Surprize, he publiſh'd a ſmooth Declaration on the 26th of December, to ſignify to all his loving Subjects, "That he would be conſtant "in the Obſervation of the Act of Indemnity; "that he would by no means introduce the way of "governing by a Military Power; that he ſhould "deſire the Houſe of Commons to prepare ſome "Laws againſt the Growth and Progreſs of Popery; that he would likewiſe recommend to the "Commons the preparing of Laws againſt Licentiouſneſs and Impiety; and alſo to provide ſumptuary Laws, and Laws for the Advance of Trade; "and that he himſelf would endeavour to retrench "the Charge and Expences in his own Family; and "even that he reſolved to maintain the Act of Uniformity; only he ſhould diſpenſe with ſome Matters in it. And in his Speech at the next Seſſion, he concluded with the gentle Intimation of ſome Indulgence which he had granted to Diſſenters; yet renouncing, in a manner, his diſpenſing Power, and ſaying ſoftly, That if the Diſſenters would demean themſelves peaceably and modeſtly, he could heartily wiſh he had ſuch a Power of Indulgence to uſe upon occaſion.

King's Declaration of Tenderneſs.

The Houſe of Commons, who were juſtly apprehenſive of the Dangers of a Toleration, becauſe the Papiſts as well as all other Sectaries, would find their Account in it; appointed Wedneſday the 25th of February, to take into Conſideration his Majeſty's gracious Declaration of the 26th of December laſt, and his Speech made at the opening this Seſſion: At which time they unanimouſly reſolved, That the Thanks of the Houſe ſhould be returned to the King's Majeſty for all the other Parts of his Declaration; but as to the point of Indulgence, they reſolved, That it be preſented to the King's Majeſty, as the humble Advice of this Houſe, that no Indulgence be granted to the Diſſenters from the Act of Uniformity. And they ordered, that a Committee be appointed to collect and bring in the Reaſons of this Houſe for this Vote upon the preſent Debate. On the next Day, Feb. 26. a Report was made to the Houſe from the Committee by Sir Heneage Finch, his Majeſty's Sollicitor General; and after ſome Amendments and Additions, the Reaſons and Addreſs were agreed to, and preſented to his Majeſty in the Banqueting-Houſe at Whitehall on Saturday Feb. 17. where Mr. Speaker deliver'd himſelf in manner following.

The Parl. againſt Indulgence.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

Speaker's Speech. THE Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes of the Commons Houſe of Parliament, did with great Joy receive your Majeſty's moſt gracious Speech at the opening this Seſſion of Parliament: And being thereby invited to conſider of your Declaration of the 26th of December laſt, they have with all Sobriety, Duty, and Affection, examined the Grounds thereof; and do by me preſent unto your Majeſty their moſt hearty Thanks for the ſame, and humble Advice thereupon. Both which, I do beſeech your Majeſty, that you will vouchſafe me to deliver in their own Words.

May it pleaſe your moſt Excellent Majeſty,

Addreſs of the Commons. "WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal "Subjects, the Knights, Citizens, and "Burgeſſes of the Houſe of Commons in Parliament aſſembled, having with all Fidelity and Obedience conſidered of the ſeveral Matters compriſed in your Majeſty's late gracious Declaration "of the 26th of December laſt, and your moſt gracious Speech at the beginning of this preſent "Seſſion:

"Do in the firſt place for ourſelves, and in the "Names of all the Commons of England, render to "your ſacred Majeſty the Tribute of our moſt "hearty Thanks for that infinite Grace and Goodneſs wherewith your Majeſty hath been pleaſed "to publiſh your Royal Intentions of adhering to "your Act of Indemnity and Oblivion, by a conſtant and religious Obſervance of it. And our "Hearts are farther enlarged in theſe Returns of "Thankſgivings, when we conſider your Majeſty's "moſt Princely and Heroick Profeſſions of relying "upon the Affections of your People, and abhorring "all ſort of Military and Arbitrary Rule. But above all, we can never enough remember, to the "Honour of your Majeſty's Piety, and our own "unſpeakable Comfort, thoſe ſolemn and moſt endearing Invitations of us your Majeſty's Subjects, "to prepare Laws to be preſented to your Majeſty, "againſt the Growth and Increaſe of Popery; and "withall, to provide more Laws againſt Licentiouſneſs and Impiety; at the ſame time declaring "your own Reſolutions for maintaining the Act of "Uniformity. And it becomes us alway to acknowledge and admire your Majeſty's Wiſdom "in this your Declaration, whereby your Majeſty "is pleaſed to reſolve, not only by ſumptuary Laws, "but by your own Royal Example of Frugality, "to reſtrain that Exceſs in Men's Expences which "is grown ſo general and ſo exorbitant; and to direct our Endeavours to find out fit and proper "Laws for Advancement of Trade and Commerce.

"After all this, we moſt humbly beſeech your "Majeſty to believe, that it is with extream unwillingneſs and reluctancy of Heart, that we are "brought to differ from any thing which your Majeſty hath thought fit to propoſe; and tho' we do "no way doubt, but that the unreaſonable Diſtempers of Men's Spirits, and the many Mutinies and "Conſpiracies which were carried on, during the "late Intervals of Parliament, did reaſonably incline your Majeſty to endeavour by your Declaration to give ſome allay to thoſe ill Humours, "till the Parliament aſſembled; and the hopes of "Indulgence, if the Parliament ſhould conſent to "it, eſpecially ſeeing the Pretenders to this Indulgence did ſeem to make ſome Titles to it, by virtue of your Majeſty's Declaration from Breda. "Nevertheleſs, we your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful

 "and

1662. 14Car.II. “ and Loyal Subjects, who are now return'd to “ ſerve in Parliament, from thoſe ſeveral Parts and “ Places of your Kingdom, for which we were “ choſen, do humbly offer to your Majeſty's great “ Wiſdom, that it is in no ſort adviſable that there “ be any Indulgence to ſuch Perſons, who preſume “ to diſſent from the Act of Uniformity, and the “ Religion eſtabliſhed:

“ For theſe Reaſons.

“ We have conſider'd the Nature of your Maje-“ ſty's Declaration from Breda, and are humbly of “ Opinion that your Majeſty ought not to be preſs'd “ with it any farther:

“ Becauſe it is not a Promiſe in it ſelf, but only “ a Gracious Declaration of your Majeſty's Inten-“ tions, to do what in you lay, and what a Parlia-“ ment ſhould adviſe your Majeſty to do; and no “ ſuch Advice was ever given, or thought fit to be “ offer'd; nor could it be otherwiſe underſtood, be-“ cauſe there were Laws of Uniformity then in be-“ ing, which could not be diſpenſed with but by “ Act of Parliament.

“ That they who do pretend a Right to that ſup-“ poſed Promiſe, put the Right into the Hands of “ the Repreſentatives, whom they choſe to ſerve “ for them in this Parliament, who have paſs'd, “ and your Majeſty conſented to, the Act of Uni-“ formity. If any ſhall preſume to ſay, that a “ Right to the Benefit of this Declaration doth ſtill “ remain after this Act paſſed,

“ It tends to diſſolve the very Bonds of Govern-“ ment, and to ſuppoſe a Diſability in your Ma-“ jeſty and the Houſes of Parliament, to make a “ Law contrary to any part of your Majeſty's De-“ claration, though both Houſes ſhould adviſe your “ Majeſty to it.

“ We have alſo conſider'd the Nature of the In-“ dulgence propos'd, with reference to thoſe Conſe-“ quences which muſt neceſſarily attend it.

“ It will eſtabliſh Schiſm by a Law, and make “ the whole Government of the Church precarious, “ and the Cenſures of it of no Moment or Conſide-“ ration at all.

“ It will no way become the Gravity or Wiſdom “ of a Parliament, to paſs a Law at one Seſſion for “ Uniformity, and at the next Seſſion (the Reaſons “ of Uniformity continuing ſtill the ſame) to paſs “ another Law to fruſtrate or weaken the Execu-“ tion of it.

“ It will expoſe your Majeſty to the reſtleſs Im-“ portunity of every Sect or Opinion, and of eve-“ ry ſingle Perſon alſo, who ſhall preſume to diſſent “ from the Church of England.

“ It will be a cauſe of encreaſing Sects and Secta-“ ries, whoſe Numbers will weaken the true Prote-“ ſtant Profeſſion ſo far, that it will at leaſt be diffi-“ cult for it to defend itſelf againſt them: And, “ which is yet farther conſiderable, thoſe Numbers, “ which by being troubleſome to the Government, “ find they can arrive to an Indulgence, will, as “ their Numbers encreaſe be yet more troubleſome, “ that ſo at length they may arrive to a general “ Toleration, which your Majeſty hath declared “ againſt; and in time ſome prevalent Sect will at “ laſt contend for an Eſtabliſhment, which, for “ ought can be foreſeen, may end in Popery.

“ It is a thing altogether without Precedent, and “ will take away all means of convicting Recuſants, “ and be inconſiſtent with the Method and Pro-“ ceedings of the Laws of England.

“ Laſtly, it is humbly conceiv'd, that the Indul-“ gence propoſed will be ſo far from tending to the “ Peace of the Kingdom, that it is rather likely to “ occaſion great Diſturbance. And on the contrary, “ that the aſſerting of the Laws and the Religion “ eſtabliſhed, according to the Act of Uniformity, “ is the moſt probable means to produce a ſettled “ Peace and Obedience throughout your Kingdom: “ Becauſe the variety of Profeſſions in Religion, “ when openly indulg'd, doth directly diſtinguiſh “ Men into Parties, and withal gives them oppor-“ tunity to count their Numbers; which, conſider-“ ing the Animoſities, that out of a Religious Pride “ will be kept on foot by the ſeveral Factions, “ doth tend directly and inevitably to open Di-“ ſturbance. 1663. 14Car.II.

“ Nor can your Majeſty have any ſecurity, that “ the Doctrine or Worſhip of the ſeveral Factions, “ which are all govern'd by a ſeveral Rule, ſhall “ be conſiſtent with the Peace of your Kingdom.

“ And if any Perſons ſhall preſume to diſturb the “ Peace of the Kingdom, we do in all Humility “ declare that we will for ever, and in all occaſi-“ ons, be ready with our utmoſt Endeavour and “ Aſſiſtance, to adhere to and ſerve your Maje-“ ſty, according to our bounden Duty and Al-“ legiance.

The Speaker's Report of the Subſtance of his Majeſty's Gracious Anſwer.

King's Anſwer.

That his Majeſty gave them hearty Thanks for their many Thanks; that never any King was ſo happy in a Houſe of Commons as he in this; that the Paper and Reaſons were long, and therefore he would take time to conſider of them, and ſend them a Meſſage; that they could never differ but in Judgment, and that muſt be when he did not rightly expreſs himſelf, or they did not rightly underſtand him; but their Intereſt was ſo far link'd together, that they could never diſagree.

Diſſenters greateſt Intereſt in the King and Court.

The King had by this Propoſal of Indulgence ſatisfied the more ſober Diſſenters, that he had a tender regard for their Eaſe and Indemnity: And they were now made ſenſible, that they had leſs Intereſt in a Parliament than they had in the Court. It was indeed a great Unhappineſs that they found ſo much Countenance from the King and ſome of his prime Miniſters; for this did but help to harden them in their Prejudices againſt the Church, and made them leſs and leſs inclinable to Conformity and Union; becauſe they flatter'd themſelves with the continual Hopes of Liberty and Toleration. Whereas if they had loſt all dependence on a Court Intereſt, and had found the King and his Miniſtry as intent upon the ſtrict obſervance of the Act of Uniformity, as the Commons of England now were, moſt of the Diſſenters no doubt would at this Juncture have conformed, and brought in a great Strength and Glory to this Church and Nation.

Why the King ſo indulgent to Diſſenters.

What Motives diſpoſed his Majeſty to be ſo favourable to them, and to encourage their contending with the Laws of the Land, is not ſo eaſie to determine. Whether the innate Goodneſs and Clemency of his Majeſty's own Royal Diſpoſition, that naturally hated all the appearance of Severity and Rigour? Or whether a tender regard of making good the Hopes and Promiſes, which before, and at the time of his Reſtauration, he had been forc'd to oblige them with? Or whether a generous Senſe of Honour and Gratitude to the Presbyterian Party, who had moſt of them contributed very much to his eaſie and happy Return? Or whether a real Judgment and Perſuaſion, that a greater Liberty of Conſcience than the eſtabliſhed Laws allow'd, was the fundamental Right of Chriſtian People? Or whether a Political Opinion, that preſſing a Conformity by the execution of Penal Laws, would alienate the Hearts of his People, and endanger the beloved Peace and Quiet of his Reign? Or whether above or beyond any of theſe Motives, the ſecret and reſerved Reaſon was, under the cover of an Indulgence to Proteſtant Diſſenters, to give the better Protection and Advantages to Popery? To reſolve which of theſe Cauſes had the greateſt Influence upon the

Mind

1662. 14 Car. II.

Mind of the King, is, I ſay, no eaſy and perhaps no decent Matter [a].

Intereſt and Policy of the Papiſts.

But by the Sequel of Affairs, it ſeems very probable that the laſt Reaſon had not the leaſt weight with it. For the Papiſts in this Reign had alway a conſiderable Intereſt at Court, and uſed all poſſible Intrigues in the Management of it: And it was plauſible enough for them to promote an Indulgence toward Proteſtant Diſſenters, to bring on by degrees a general Toleration, that could not fail to give Breath and Life to them and their Religion. There is ſome Evidence of this Artfulneſs in what was intended to be a part of the King's Declaration, as the Account is thus given by the Diſſenters; "As the "Lord Chancellor read over the Declaration, each "Party was to ſpeak to what they diſliked, and the "King to determine how it ſhould be as he liked "himſelf. There were various Altercations about "Prelacy and Re-ordination, and the Particulars of "the Declaration; and when the whole was peruſ'd, "the Lord Chancellor drew out another Paper intimating that the King had alſo been petition'd by "the Independents and Anabaptiſts for Liberty, "and therefore he read an additional part of the "Declaration to this purpoſe, that others alſo be permitted to meet for Religious Worſhip, ſo be it they do "it not to the diſturbance of the Peace; and that no "Juſtice of Peace or Officer diſturb them. This being "deſign'd to ſecure Liberty to the Papiſts, there "was a general Silence upon the reading it. The "Biſhops thought it a nice Point, and therefore "ſaid nothing: The Presbyterians were afraid to "ſpeak againſt it, leaſt all the Sects and Parties "ſhould look upon them as the Cauſers of their "Sufferings; and they ſhould be repreſented as "groſly Partial in deſiring Liberty themſelves, "while they would have no others have it with "them. At length Mr. Baxter fearing their Silence "might be miſinterpreted, ſpake to this purpoſe, "That Dr. Gunning a little before ſpeaking againſt "Sects, had named the Papiſts and Socinians, that "for their parts, they did not deſire Favour to themſelves alone, and rigorous Severity againſt none; "but as they humbly thank'd his Majeſty for his declared Indulgence to themſelves, ſo they diſtinguiſh'd "the Tolerable Party from the Intolerable: For the "former they humbly crav'd juſt Lenity and Favour; "but for the latter, ſuch as the two ſorts mention'd, "for their parts they could not make their Toleration "their Requeſt. To which his Majeſty ſaid, that "there were Laws ſufficient againſt the Papiſts: And "Mr Baxter reply'd, that they underſtood the Queſtion to be, Whether thoſe Laws ſhould be executed or "not? Upon which the Matter was dropp'd.

Abridgment of Mr. Baxter his Life.

Among the other Occurrences of this Year it may be remember'd, that the Vice-Admiral Sir John Lawſon leaving the Earl of Sandwich to Convoy the Queen from Liſbon, failed with a Squadron into the Streights, and there ſtruck ſuch a terror into all the Neſts of Pirates, Tunis, Tripoli and Algiers, that he made them all ſtoop to the Offer of a Treaty, and to the Acceptance of former Articles. Upon the Concluſion of this Peace, the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Deans and Chapters, to their eternal Praiſe, contributed a great Sum of Money, and ſent their Collection by two of their own Number, the Archdeacon of Bath, and a Prebendary, to Algiers, with which they redeem'd above one hundred and fifty Chriſtian Slaves, Engliſh, Scotch and Iriſh, from the Miſeries of a Turkiſh Captivity. We had the better Advantage of keeping the African Parts in awe by our poſſeſſion of Tangier; to which the Lord Rutherford, late Governor of Dunkirk, newly made Earl of Tiviot, was ſent to be Governor in the room of the Earl of Peterborough; and the King made it now a free Port, and granted it all the Privileges of a Merchant-City, being ſeated very commodiouſly for Strength and Safety to guard our Ships, and to command thoſe Seas: But the vaſt Expence in Fortifying and Defending, and the neceſſity at laſt of demoliſhing that Place, made it more a Burden than a Portion to the Crown of England.

Succeſs of our Fleet.

Poſſeſſion of Tangier.

The Town and Port of Dunkirk might have been another great Advantage to our Trade and to our Power in the Channel; and under this proſpect there had been a Reſolution in the Houſe of Commons to prepare an Act to annex it for ever to the Imperial Crown of theſe Realms; but this not being done, the King with Advice of his Privy-Council, for the Sum of five hundred thouſand Pounds deliver'd it up to the French King, and it was ingloriouſly put into his Poſſeſſion under the Government of the Count d'Eſtrades, and his Deputy the Marquis of Montpear; the Engliſh Governour with two Companies guarding the Gates at their Entrance, and delivering the Keys of them. This Action was very ill reſented by the Body of the People of England, who were apt to think that the Sale of ſuch an Important Place (after the Parliaments giving and applying Money for the maintenance of it) was the deplorable Sign of a weak and mercenary Court.

Dunkirk ſold to the French.

The Lord Clarendon, becauſe the prime Miniſter, was to bear the Odium of it; and therefore his new ſtately Houſe, built oppoſite to the Front of the Palace of St. James, was commonly in Reproach call'd Dunkirk-Houſe: Nay, and in the very next Year, the Earl of Briſtol put it into the Articles of High-Treaſon and other Miſdemeanours exhibited againſt him in the Houſe of Lords, That the ſaid Earl of Clarendon had told his Majeſty, that it was better to ſell Dunkirk than to be at the Mercy of the Parliament for want of Money, or Words to that effect. And that he had wickedly and maliciouſly, contrary to his Duty of Counſellor, and to a known Law made laſt Seſſions, by which Money was given and particularly applied for the maintaining of Dunkirk, adviſed and effected the Sale of the ſame to the French King. And in the Articles of Impeachment preferr'd by the Commons in 1667. this was one, That he adviſed and effected the Sale of Dunkirk to the French King, being part of his Majeſty's Dominions, together with the Ammunitions, Artillery, and all ſorts of Stores there, and for no greater Value than the ſaid Ammunitions, Artillery and Stores were worth.

The Odium caſt on the Ld Chancellor.

William Lenthal Eſq; Speaker of the Long-Parliament, having by the Mercy of the King and Parliament obtained an Indemnity for his Life, died this Year on Sept. 3. and left this Memorial of his Penitence, or as his Enemies would repreſent it, of his low and timorous Spirit, as extracted out of a Letter written from Oxford, by the Perſon who viſited him in his laſt Sickneſs, Dr. Ralph Brideoak.

Death and Repentance of Mr. Speaker Lenthal.

"When I came to his Preſence, he told me, he "was very glad to ſee me; for he had two great Works "to do, and I muſt aſſiſt him in both: to fit his Body for "the Earth, and his Soul for Heaven; to which purpoſe he deſired me to pray with him. I told him "the Church had appointed an Office at the Viſitation of the Sick, and I muſt uſe that: He ſaid, "Yes, he chiefly deſired the Prayers of the Church; "wherein he join'd with great Fervency and Devotion. After Prayers he deſired Abſolution: I "told him I was very ready and willing to pronounce it; but he muſt firſt come to a Chriſti-

[a] Mr. Baxter and his Party ſeem'd to underſtand that the King chiefly meant an Indulgence to the Papiſts. See his Life, L. 1. P. 11. p. 432.

It is plain by Father Walſh, that the Iriſh Papiſts might have had full Indulgence by agreeing to the Remonſtrance of Loyalty, which was preſented to his Majeſty May 6, 1662.

And in England the Papiſts were compounding for Indulgence, by excepting the Jeſuits only from it. But the Jeſuits publiſh'd their Reaſons why they ſhould not be exempted from that Grace. And the ſecular Prieſts appear'd againſt them in a Diſcourſe, entituled, The Jeſuits Reaſons Unreaſonable; charging them with Treaſons and Seditions in Principles and Facts inconſiſtent with the Peace and Security of the Engliſh Government.

1662. 14 Car. II.

an Confeſſion and Contrition for the Sins and Failings of his Life: Well, Sir, ſaid he, then inſtruct me to my Duty. I deſired him to examine his Life by the Ten Commandments, and wherein he found his Failings to fly to the Goſpel for Mercy. Then I read the Ten Commandments in order to him, mentioning the principal Sins againſt each Commandment. To paſs by other things (under the Seal of this Office) when I came to the fifth Commandment, and remember'd him that Diſobedience, Rebellion and Schiſm were the great Sins againſt this Commandment. Yes, Sir, ſaid he, there's my trouble, my Diſobedience, not againſt my natural Parents but againſt the Pater Patriæ, our deceaſed Sovereign. I confeſs with Saul, I held their Cloaths whilſt they murthered him; but herein I was not ſo criminal as Saul was; for, God, thou knoweſt! I never conſented to his Death; I ever pray'd and endeavour'd what I could againſt it; but I did too much, Almighty God forgive me! I then deſired him to deal freely and openly in that Buſineſs, and if he knew any of thoſe Villains that plotted or contriv'd that horrid Murther, who were not yet detected, now to diſcover them. He anſwer'd, He was a ſtranger to that Buſineſs; his Soul never enter'd into that Secret: but what concerns myſelf, ſaid he, I will confeſs freely. Three things are eſpecially laid to my Charge, wherein indeed I am too guilty: That I went from the Parliament to the Army; that I propoſed the bloody Queſtion for trying the King; and that I ſat after the King's Death. To the firſt I may give this Anſwer, That Cromwel and his Agents deceived a wiſer Man than myſelf, that EXCELLENT KING, and then might well deceive me alſo, and ſo they did. I knew the Presbyterians would never reſtore the King to his juſt Rights, thoſe Men ſwore they would. For the ſecond no excuſe can be made, but I have the King's Pardon, and I hope Almighty God will ſhew me his Mercy alſo: Yet, Sir, ſaid he, even then, when I put the Queſtion, I hop'd the very putting the Queſtion would have cleared him; becauſe I believed four for one were againſt it, but they deceived me alſo. To the third I make this candid confeſſion, that it was my own Baſeneſs and Cowardice and unworthy Fear, to ſubmit my Life and Eſtate to the Mercy of thoſe Men that murther'd the King, that hurried me on againſt my own Conſcience to act with them; yet then I thought alſo I might do ſome Good, and hinder ſome Ill. Something I did for the Church and Univerſities, ſomething for the King, when I broke the Oath of Abjuration, as Sir O. B. and your ſelf know; ſomething alſo too for his return, as my Lord G. Mr. J. T. and your ſelf know. But the Ill I did over weigh'd the little Good I would have done; God forgive me for this alſo. After this I remember'd him, that the Fathers of the Church alſo had been barbarouſly murthered and ruin'd, and aſk'd whether he had any Hand, or gave any Conſent therein? He anſwer'd, None, for he always did believe that was the Primitive and beſt Government of the Church, and ſaid, he died a dutiful Son of the Church of England, as it was eſtabliſhed before theſe Times; for he had not yet ſeen the Alteration of the Liturgy. After this Office, wherein indeed he ſhewed himſelf a very hearty Penitent, he again deſired the Abſolution of the Church, which I then pronounced, and which he received with much Content and Satisfaction: For, ſays he, now, now indeed do I find the Joy and Benefit of that Office which Chriſt hath left in his Church. Then praying for the King, that he might long and happily reign over us, and for the Peace of the Church, he again deſired Prayers. The next Day he received the Sacrament; and after that work I deſired him to expreſs himſelf to Dr. Dickenſon (a learned Phyſician, Fellow of Merton College, who received the Sacrament with him) concerning the King's Death, becauſe he had only done it to me in Confeſſion, which he did to the ſame Effect as he had to me. The reſt of his Time was ſpent in Devotion and Penitential Meditations to his very laſt."

1662. 14 Car. II.

State of Religion.

The Church of England was now fully reſtor'd and happily eſtabliſhed by the Act of Uniformity, concerning which there were theſe Proceedings in the two Houſes. The Commons, who had brought in the Bill and agreed to it with all imaginable Zeal and Affection, had ſent it up to the Lords, and ſeem'd impatient of any delay in the diſpatch of it; and therefore on Tueſday, Jan. 13. they order'd that a Meſſage be ſent to the Lords, to deſire them to give diſpatch to the Bill of Uniformity. This occaſioned a Conference between the two Houſes, and on Thurſday, April 10. a Report was made in the Houſe of Commons from the Conference had with the Lords upon the Bill for Uniformity, that the reaſon of the Delay of the ſaid Bill was, "That the Book of Common-Prayer had, by reference from his Majeſty, been under the Conſideration of the Convocation, who had made ſome Alterations and Additions thereunto; and that the Lords had peruſed the ſame, as alſo the Bill ſent from the Houſe, and had returned the ſame, together with the Book of Common-Prayer, as the ſame is amended, and by them agreed to, and ſome Amendments and Proviſoes to the Bill. On Saturday, April 12. the Commons read the Amendments and Additions ſent from the Lords to the Bill of Uniformity; and on Monday, April 14. they read the Amendments to the Book of Common-Prayer. On Wedneſday, April 16. the Houſe of Commons reſumed the Debate upon the Amendments ſent down from the Lords to the Bill of Uniformity. And the Queſtion being propounded, "Whether Debate ſhall be admitted to the Amendments made by the Convocation in the Book of Common-Prayer, and ſent down by the Lords to this Houſe, it paſs'd in the Negative. And the Queſtion being put, "Whether the Amendments made by the Convocation, and ſent down by the Lords to this Houſe, might, by the Order of this Houſe, have been debated? It paſs'd in the Affirmative. Then the Commons for ſeveral Days reſumed the Debate upon the Amendments ſent from the Lords to the Bill of Uniformity, and on Monday, April 28. a Proviſo for being uncover'd, and for uſing reverend Geſtures at the time of Divine Service was twice read; but the matter being held proper for Convocation, it was order'd, that ſuch Perſons as ſhall be employ'd to manage the Conference with the Lords, do intimate the Deſire of this Houſe, that it be recommended to the Convocation to take Order for reverend and uniform Geſtures and Demeanours to be enjoined at the time of Divine Service and Preaching.

Proceedings in the Bill for Uniformity.

Proceedings in Convocation.

The Proceedings in Convocation upon this great Buſineſs of Uniformity were to this Effect: On Saturday, Apr. 12. the Biſhop of London as Preſident, and the Biſhops, conſidered of a Subſcription to be made to the three Articles compriſed in the 36th Canon, and referred to a Committee of Biſhops the drawing up a Form and Manner of Subſcription. And they treated farther of fit Perſons to be employed for correcting the Impreſſion of the Book of Common-Prayer, and of a fit Method for procuring printed Copies of the ſaid Book to be diſperſed to all Country Churches. On Monday, April 21. the Preſident and Biſhops conferred about Printing the Book of Common-Prayer before the 24th of Auguſt next; and of receiving Directions from the Lord Chancellor of England, how the Word Children inſtead of Perſons (not baptized) might be inſerted in the ſaid Book by the Houſe of Commons. Then the Biſhop of London, with Conſent of his Brethren, decreed and ordain'd, that the Biſhop of Durham ſhould be joined to the Commiſſioners for Review and and Alteration of the Liturgy appointed by Letters Patents dated March 25. laſt paſt, in the room of the Biſhop of Cheſter deceaſed; and farther decreed, that no Ordination of Clerks ſhould be made by any Biſhop, but only within the four Ember Weeks ſolemnly appointed for that holy Office; and, that no Biſhop ſhould ordain beyond the Bounds of his own Dioceſe, but by Letters dimiſſory firſt obtained from his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury. On Saturday Apr. 26. the three Forms of Prayer, for the 5th of November, the 30th of January, and the 29th of May, were brought into the upper Houſe, and publickly read, and unanimouſly approv'd. And the care of tranſlating the Book of Common-Prayer into the Latin Tongue was committed to Dr. John Earle, Dean of Weſtminſter, and Dr. John Pearſon. On Saturday May 10. the Preſident and Biſhops held a Debate upon the Direction receiv'd from the Houſe of Commons about reverend and uniform Geſtures and Demeanours at the time of Divine Service; and the Majority agreed, that the Conſtitution in the Book of Canons, made in 1603, intitled, Of ſolemn Reverence to be uſed in time of Divine Service, ſhould be preſented to the Houſe of Commons, after Conſideration firſt had in the Lower Houſe of Convocation. On Monday May 12. the ſaid Canon or Conſtitution was brought up to the Biſhops from the Lower Clergy with ſome Alterations and Amendments, which were agreed to by their Lordſhips. And, without farther proceeding, on Tueſday May 20. the Convocation, by virtue of the King's Writ, was prorogued to Thurſday Febr. 19. by the Biſhop of Bath and Wells, as Commiſſary of the Biſhop of London.

1662. 14 Car. II.

Subſtance of the Act of Uniformity.

In the mean time the Act of Uniformity ordained, "That whereas in the firſt Year of the late "Queen Elizabeth, there was one uniform Order of "Common Service and Prayer, and of the Adminiſtration of Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies in the Church of England, agreeable to "the Word of God and Uſage of the Primitive "Church —— very comfortable to all good People, "deſirous to live in Chriſtian Converſation, and "moſt profitable to the Eſtate of this Realm, upon which the Mercy, Favour, and Bleſſing of "Almighty God, in no wiſe ſo readily and plentifully praiſed as by Common Prayers —— Yet "notwithſtanding, a great number of People in divers parts of this Realm, following their own "Senſuality, and living without Knowledge and "due Fear of God, do wilfully and ſchiſmatically "abſtain, and refuſe to come to their Pariſh "Churches — And whereas by the great and ſcandalous Neglect of Miniſters in the ſaid Order or "Liturgy, great Miſchiefs and Inconveniences, during the Times of the late unhappy Troubles, "have ariſen and grown; and many People have "been led into Factions and Schiſms, to the great "Decay and Scandal of the Reformed Religion of "the Church of England, and to the hazard of many Souls. For prevention whereof in time to "come, for ſettling the Peace of the Church, and "for allaying the preſent Diſtempers —— the King's "Majeſty had granted his Commiſſion to ſeveral "Biſhops and other Divines to review the Book of "Common-Prayer, and to prepare ſuch Alterations "and Additions as they thought fit to offer. And "afterwards the Convocations of both Provinces, "by his Majeſty called and aſſembled, and by him "authorized and required to review the ſaid Book "of Common-Prayer, and the Book of the Form "and Manner of the making and conſecrating of "Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons —— upon full and "mature Deliberation they had accordingly reviewed the ſaid Books, and had made ſome Alterations, "which they thought fit to be inſerted to the ſame, "and ſome Additional Prayers, and had preſented "the ſame unto his Majeſty in Writing, in one "Book, intitled, The Book of Common-Prayer, and "Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, &c. All which "his Majeſty having duly conſidered, had fully approved and allowed the ſame, and recommended "to this preſent Parliament, to be appointed to be "uſed under ſuch Sanctions and Penalties as the "Houſes of Parliament ſhall think fit. Now in regard that nothing conduceth more to the ſettling "the Peace of this Nation (which is deſired of all "good Men) nor to the Honour of our Religion "and the Propagation thereof, than an univerſal "Agreement in the publick Worſhip of God —— It "was enacted, That all and ſingular Miniſters ſhall "be bound to ſay and uſe the Morning Prayer, Evening Prayer, and all other Common Prayer, in "ſuch Order and Form as is mention'd in the ſaid "Book. And that every Parſon, Vicar, or other "Miniſter, ſhall before the Feaſt of St. Bartholomew "1662, after reading the ſaid Book, declare his unfeigned Aſſent and Conſent to the Uſe of all "Things in the ſaid Book, contained or preſcribed "in theſe Words.

1662. 14 Car. II.

"I A. B. do here declare my unfeigned Aſſent and "Conſent to all and every thing contained and pre- "ſcribed in and by the Book, entitled, The Book of "Common-Prayer and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments and other Rites and Ceremonies of the "Church of England, together with the Pſalter or "Pſalms of David, pointed as they are to be ſung "or ſaid in Churches, and the Form or Manner of "Making, Ordaining, and Conſecrating of Biſhops, "Prieſts, and Deacons.

"And all Perſons neglecting or refuſing, ſhall ipſo facto be deprived of all ſpiritual Promotions. "And every Perſon hereafter to be preſented or "collated to any Benefice or Promotion, ſhall within two Months after Poſſeſſion, upon ſome Lord's-Day, read Morning and Evening Prayers, and declare the like Aſſent and Conſent under like pain "of Deprivation. And where the proper Incumbent of any Benefice doth reſide on his Living, "and keep a Curate, the Incumbent himſelf in Perſon ſhall once at leaſt in every Month openly and "publickly read the Common Prayers and Service, "upon pain to forfeit the Sum of five Pounds to "the Uſe of the Poor of the Pariſh. And every "Miniſter and Schoolmaſter ſhall before the ſaid "Feaſt of St. Bartholomew 1662, or at or before "their reſpective Admiſſion, ſubſcribe the Declaration or Acknowledgement following.

"I A. B. do declare, That it is not lawful, upon "any pretence whatſoever, to take Arms againſt the "King; and that I do abhor that traiterous Poſition of taking Arms by his Authority againſt his Perſon, or againſt thoſe that are commiſſion'd by him; "and, that I will conform to the Liturgy of the Church "of England, as it is now by Law eſtabliſhed. And "I do declare, that I do hold, there lies no Obligation upon me or on any other Perſon, from the Oath "commonly called The Solemn League and Covenant, to endeavour any Change or Alteration of Government either in Church or State, and that the "ſame was in itſelf an unlawful Oath, and impoſed "upon the Subjects of this Realm againſt the known "Laws and Liberties of this Kingdom.

"The ſaid Declaration and Acknowledgement "to be Subſcribed by every Dignitary and Miniſter "before the Archbiſhop, Biſhop, or Ordinary of "the Dioceſe, upon pain of Deprivation; and by "every Schoolmaſter and Tutor, under pain of three "Months Impriſonment for the firſt Offence, and "for every other Offence three Months Impriſonment and the Forfeiture of five Pounds to his Majeſty. Provided, that from the 25th of March "1682. there ſhall be omitted in the Declaration "theſe Words: And I do declare that I do hold there “ lies no Obligation on me or any other Perſon from the Oath commonly called The Solemn League and Covenant, to endeavour any Change or Alteration of Government either in Church or State, and that the ſame was in itſelf an unlawful Oath, and impoſed upon the Subjects of this Realm againſt the known Laws and Liberties of this Kingdom.

1662. 14 Car. II.

“ No Perſon ſhall be capable of any Benefice, or preſume to conſecrate and adminiſter the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, before he be ordained Prieſt by Epiſcopal Ordination; upon pain to forfeit for every Offence the Sum of one hundred Pounds.

“ No Form or Order of Common Prayer to be uſed in any Church, Chapel, or other publick Place of College or Hall, other than what is here preſcribed and appointed. Provided that it may be lawful to uſe the ſaid Form in Latin within all Colleges and Halls, in the Colleges of Weſtminſter, Wincheſter, and Eaton, and in the Convocations of the Clergies of either Province.

“ That none be received as a Lecturer, or permitted to preach, or read any Sermon or Lecture in any Church or Chapel, unleſs approved and licenſed by the Archbiſhop or Biſhop, and ſhall read the XXXIX Articles of Religion with a Declaration of unfeigned Aſſent to the ſame; and the firſt time he preacheth any Lecture or Sermon, ſhall openly read the Common Prayer and declare his Aſſent to it, and ſhall upon the firſt Lecture-day of every Month afterwards, before Lecture or Sermon, read the Common Prayers and Service, under pain of being diſabled to preach; and if he preach while ſo diſabled, for every Offence to ſuffer three Months Impriſonment. And at all other times of any Sermon or Lecture, the Common Prayer ſhall be read, and the Lecturer then to preach ſhall be preſent at the Reading of it.

“ The ſeveral Laws and Statutes formerly made for Uniformity of Prayer, ſhall be in Force and Strength for eſtabliſhing and confirming the preſent Book of Common Prayer, and be applied for puniſhing all Offences contrary to the ſaid Laws, with relation to the ſaid Book and no other.

“ Provided the Names of King, Queen, or Royal Progeny, may be alter'd from time to time according to the Direction of lawful Authority.

“ A true printed Copy of the ſaid Book to be gotten in every Pariſh Church, Chapel, College, and Hall, at the Coſt and Charge of the Pariſhioners or Society, before the Feaſt of St. Bartholomew, 1662. upon pain of forfeiting three Pounds by the Month.

“ The ſaid Book to be tranſlated into the Britiſh or Welſh Tongue by the Care of the Biſhops of Hereford, St. Davids, Aſaph, Bangor, and Landaff, and ſo to be imprinted and uſed in every Church where the Welſh is commonly ſpoken or uſed.

“ That all Deans and Chapters ſhall at their proper Coſts and Charges, before the 25th of Decemb. 1662. obtain a true and perfect Copy of this Act, and of the ſaid Book annexed hereunto, to keep and preſerve in ſafety for ever. And true and perfect Copies to be delivered into the reſpective Courts at Weſtminſter, and into the Tower of London, to be there kept and preſerved for ever.

“ Provided, this Act ſhall not extend to the King's Profeſſor of the Law within the Univerſity of Oxford for the Prebend of Shipton within the Church of Sarum, united and annexed to the Place of Profeſſor by the late King James.

The Wiſdom and Moderation of this Act.

The World has reaſon to admire not only the Wiſdom of this Act, but even the Moderation of it, as being effectually made for Miniſterial Conformity alone; and leaving the People unable to complain of any Impoſition. It would certainly have had the deſired and moſt happy Effect of Unity and Peace, if the Government had been in earneſt with the execution of it; if the Miniſters inclined to Separation had not been encouraged in it by the Connivance of the Court, and the promis'd Indulgence of the King. The firſt open Violation of the Act was committed by Mr. Calamy late Miniſter of Aldermanbury, who being preſent at Church on Dec. 28. this Year, upon the Default of a Preacher there expected, to prevent a Diſappointment, and anſwer the Importunity of the People, he went up into the Pulpit and preached; and had he taken a practical Subject, and kept to it, no notice would have been taken of that one occaſional neceſſity as it were of preaching: But it look'd like a Plot or formed Deſign, that he choſe a Subject of old Eli's Concern for the Ark of God, and ſo applied the Danger of the Church and Religion to the preſent Times; that he could not be thought leſs than a ſeditious, as well as a diſabled, Preacher[a]. And therefore, by Warrant of the Lord Mayor, he was committed to Newgate, where he lay but few Days, before he was diſcharged by his Majeſty's expreſs Order, without the due manner of a legal Diſcharge: Which brought a Contempt upon the Law and Church eſtabliſh'd, and gave ſuch a juſt Offence to the Houſe of Commons, that they made ſome Enquiry into the Reaſons of it; and ſome excuſe was made, that the Releaſe of Mr. Calamy from his Impriſonment was not owing to the ſole Command of the King, but to a Deficiency in the Act of Parliament, that had not fully provided for his longer reſtraint. Upon which we find this Entry in the Journal of the Houſe of Commons: Die Jovis, Febr. 19. 1662. Upon Complaint made to this Houſe, that Mr. Calamy being committed to Priſon upon Breach of the Act of Uniformity, was diſcharged upon pretence of ſome defect in the Act: Reſolved, That it be referred to a Committee, to look into the Act of Uniformity as to the Matter in queſtion, and to ſee whether the ſame be defective, and wherein. But what Proceedings there were in this Caſe, it does not appear. No doubt, it made the Commons ſenſible, that the King was too much inclined to diſpenſe with the Act of Uniformity, or at leaſt to protect and indemnify the breakers of it: And this reaſonable Suſpicion made them the more unanimous to appoint a Committee immediately after, to bring in the Reaſons of the Houſe for their Advice to the King againſt a Toleration, with an Addreſs to his Majeſty.

1662. 14 Car. II.

Mr. Calamy guilty of the firſt Breach of it.

Better Maintenance of the Clergy.

The next Eccleſiaſtical Affair of greateſt importance, was the providing a better Maintenance for the conformable Clergy. The Uſurpation of the Monks and Regulars upon the Parochial Prieſts, in robbing God and them of the better part of Tithes and Offerings; the Heat and Haſte and Self-intereſt of the Governours at the Reformation, in alienating thoſe Tithes to mere Lay-men; and the continued Iniquity of Times and Men, in diveſting and deſpoiling the Patrimony of the Church and Clergy more and more; theſe things had brought a great number of Pariſhes into a very miſerable Deſolation. In many of them, the whole Profits intirely appropriated to ſome other Uſes, and a ſorry Stipend allow'd to ſome officiating Curate: In many others, a Vicarage ordain'd, but ſo very ſlenderly endow'd, that a Vicar (tho' a ſingle Perſon) could not tolerably ſubſiſt upon it. This Defect had been the Burden and the Scandal of the Nation, alway complain'd of, but never ſufficiently redreſt. At the King's firſt coming in, all Men of Senſe and Conſcience ſaw that the Church of England could not be eſtabliſhed with any Honour or Safety, without providing a more competent Maintenance for the Parochial Clergy. And becauſe many of the Impropriate Rectories did belong to Sees, or Cathedral

[a] See Maſter Edmund Calamy's Leading Caſe: With the Lord Mayor's Warrant, dated Jan. 5. 1662. 4to.

and

1662. 14 Car. II.

and Collegiate Bodies, or to other Eccleſiaſtical Dignities; therefore it was very proper, that the good Example ſhould begin among the Clergy themſelves, who were then more eſpecially enabled to augment the Cures, becauſe of the very conſiderable Fines received by them. Hence a Bill was depending in Parliament, for Rules and Orders to be obſerved in ſuch Augmentation of poor Vicarages and other inſufficient Cures. But, to prevent the paſſing ſuch a Bill, it was thought more adviſable, to refer the Matter to the King's Inſtructions; who, accordingly, directed his Royal Letters to the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Deans, and Chapters, requiring them, "That forthwith Proviſion be made for the Augmentation of all ſuch Vicarages and Cures where the Tithes and Profits are appropriated to them and their Succeſſors in ſuch manner, that they who immediately attend upon the Performance of Miniſterial Offices, in every Pariſh, may have a competent Portion out of every Rectory Impropriate, &c.

K.'s Letter to Biſhops, Deans and Chapters.

But tho' chearful Compliance was generally paid to theſe Letters, and very conſiderable Augmentations were made in moſt of the Rural Churches appropriated to Eccleſiaſtical Bodies; yet this Advice did not reach to the Lay Impropriators, who held many Rectories wherein the Vicar or Curate had not wherewithal to live. There was a pious Diſpoſition in the Commons of England to remedy this Evil, and to make every Benefice or Cure a ſufficient Portion for a Miniſter to ſubſiſt upon it with ſome Comfort and Credit. In order to this excellent End, there were many Votes and Reſolutions, tho', alas! all of them ineffectual.

Augmentations made by religious Appropriators.

Nothing done in Lay Impropriations.

On Tueſday Jan. 7. 13 Car. II. "It was order'd by the Houſe of Commons, that a Committee appointed for this purpoſe, ſhould call before them Philip Nye the younger, who was Clerk to the late pretended Triers, and to require and receive from him all Preſentations to any Eccleſiaſtical Benefices or Promotions made in the time of the late uſurp'd Powers, and Entries of any Admiſſions, Inſtitutions, or Inductions thereupon, now in his Cuſtody. On Monday Jan. 20. it was order'd, "That the ſame Committee have Power to call before them all other Perſons, and to require and receive from them all Preſentations, &c. This was chiefly in order to reſtore the Epiſcopal ſequeſtred Clergy, and to eject thoſe who, under the Violence of the late Times, had intruded upon them; but it likewiſe ſerved the good Deſign of coming to the knowledge of the ſtate of Parochial Cures, and ſo of being the better able to judge of their Neceſſities, and a relief of them. To this immediate purpoſe, a wholſom Bill was brought in, For increaſing the Maintenance of Miniſters. And on Thurſday Apr. 3. 1662. a Report was made from the Committee, to which the Houſe agreed; that The beſt way to effect what is deſired in the Bill for increaſing the Maintenance of Miniſters, is, That the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes do inquire the value of all Livings in their ſeveral Precincts contained in the Bill, and that they conſider of the beſt Expedients for the better Maintenance of the Miniſters therein, and to inform the Committee thereof at their next Meeting after their Receſs. But the King's craving Wants of Aid and Supply, and the Jealouſie and Avarice of ſome Lay Patrons and Impropriators, and the Profaneneſs and Irreligion of many of the leading Courtiers, let this Deſign drop into a Forgetfulneſs of God and the Cure of Souls.

Attempts in the Houſe of Commons.

To make as much as poſſible an Uniformity in Preaching as well as in Prayers, his Majeſty ſet forth Directions concerning Preachers, with a Royal Letter prefixed and directed to the moſt Reverend Father in God William Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, &c. Given at Whitehall Octob. 14. in the 14th Year of our Reign, 1662. Which the ſaid Archbiſhop tranſmitted to the Lords the Biſhops within his own Province, with his Letter of Advice and Monition, to communicate the Copies of his Majeſty's ſaid Directions throughout their reſpective Dioceſes; dated from Lambeth Octob. 23, 1662[a].

Directions for Preachers.

That pious and judicious Prelate Dr. Robert Sanderſon, Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, died in his Palace at Buckden on Jan. 29. 1662. and within three Weeks before his Death he made his laſt Will and Teſtament; wherein he gave ſuch a ſolemn Account of his Faith and Perſuaſion in Matters of Religion and Church Government, that it well deſerves to be here inſerted.——"And here I do profeſs, that as I have lived, ſo I deſire, and (by the Grace of God) reſolve to die, in the Communion of the Catholick Church of Chriſt, and a true Son of the Church of England; which, as it ſtands by Law eſtabliſhed, to be both in Doctrine and Worſhip agreeable to the Word of God, and in the moſt, and moſt material Points of both, conformable to the Faith and Practice of the godly Churches of Chriſt in the primitive and purer Times, I do firmly believe; led ſo to do, not ſo much from the Force of Cuſtom and Education (to which the greateſt part of Mankind owe their particular different Perſuaſions in point of Religion) as upon the clear Evidence of Truth and Reaſon, after a ſerious and impartial Examination of the Grounds, as well of Popery as Puritaniſm, according to that meaſure of Underſtanding, and thoſe Opportunities which God hath afforded me; and herein I am abundantly ſatisfied, that the Schiſm which the Papiſts on the one hand, and the Superſtition which the Puritan on the other hand, lay to our Charge, are very juſtly chargeable upon themſelves reſpectively. Wherefore I humbly beſeech Almighty God, the Father of Mercies, to preſerve the Church by his Power and Providence, in Peace, Truth, and Godlineſs, evermore to the Worlds end; which doubtleſs he will do, if the Wickedneſs and Security of a ſinful People (and particularly thoſe Sins that are ſo riſe, and ſeem daily to increaſe among us, of Unthankfulneſs, Riot, and Sacrilege) do not tempt his Patience to the contrary. And I alſo farther humbly beſeech him, that it would pleaſe him to give unto our gracious Soveraign, the Reverend Biſhops, and the Parliament, timely to conſider the great Danger that viſibly threatens this Church in point of Religion, by the late great increaſe of Popery, and in point of Revenue by ſacrilegious Incloſures; and to provide ſuch wholſom and effectual Remedies as may prevent the ſame before it be too late.

Death of Biſhop Sanderſon.

An. 1663. Both Houſes of Parliament were highly ſenſible, that the King's Profeſſion of Indulgence toward the Proteſtant Diſſenters did very much encourage the Confidence of Romiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits, and ſeemed to be made in favour of them. And therefore they agreed on, An humble Repreſentation and Petition of the Lords and Commons aſſembled in Parliament concerning Romiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits, to the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty;

Repreſentation of Lords and Commons concerning the Dangers of Popery.

Shewing,

"THat notwithſtanding your Majeſty's unqueſtionable Affection and Zeal for the true Proteſtant Religion, manifeſted in your conſtant

[a] See Rex Theologus: A Diſcourſe, ſhewing that the King's Majeſty's Letter to the late Archbiſhop of Canterbury is moſt conformable to the Judgment and Practice of Antiquity. London 1663. 4to.

The Queſtion to whom it belonged anciently to preach, and whether all Prieſts might or did: Diſcuſſed out of Antiquity. By Meric Caſaubon, D. D. occaſioned by the late Direction to Miniſters, ſent by his Grace to all Miniſters. London 1663. 4to.

"Profeſſion

1663. 15 Car. II. "Profeſſion and Practice, againſt all Temptations "whatſoever; yet, by the great Reſort of Jeſuits "and Romiſh Prieſts into this Kingdom, your good "Subjects are generally much affected with Jealou-"ſie and Apprehenſion, that the Popiſh Religion "may much increaſe in this Kingdom (which your "Majeſty hath moſt piouſly deſired may be pre-"vented) and ſo the Peace both in Church and "State may be inſenſibly diſturbed, to the great "Danger of both.

"Your two Houſes of Parliament are therefore "humble Suitors to your Majeſty to iſſue out your "Proclamation, to command all Jeſuits, and all "Engliſh, Iriſh, and Scotiſh Popiſh Prieſts, and all "ſuch other Prieſts as have taken Orders from the "See of Rome, or by Authority thereof (except "ſuch foreign Jeſuits or Prieſts as by Contract of "Marriage are to attend the Perſons of either of "the Queens, or by the Law of Nations to attend "foreign Ambaſſadors) to depart this Kingdom by "a Day under pain of having the Penalties of the "Law inflicted upon them.

His Majeſty's Speech at the Reception of the Petition.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

His Majeſty's Speech. "YOU do not expect that I ſhould give you "an Anſwer preſently to your Petition, yet "I will tell you, that I will ſpeedily ſend you an "Anſwer, which I am confident will be to your Sa-"tisfaction. It may be the general Jealouſie of the "Nation hath made this Addreſs neceſſary, and in-"deed I believe nothing hath contributed more to "that Jealouſie than my own Confidence, that it "was impoſſible there ſhould be any ſuch Jealou-"ſie, and the Effects of that Confidence: But I "ſhall give you Satisfaction, and then I am ſure you "will eaſily ſatisfy and compoſe the Minds of the "Nation.

"I confeſs (my Lords and Gentlemen) I have "heard of one Jealouſie, which I will never forgive "the Authors of, that I had a jealouſie of your Af-"fections, that I was offended with the Parliament "to that degree that I intended to diſſolve it. They "ſay Men are naturally moſt angry with thoſe Re-"proaches which reflect upon their Underſtanding, "which makes them thought weak Men: Truly, I "I ſhould appear a very weak Man, if I ſhould have "any ſuch Paſſion, any ſuch Purpoſe. No, my Lords "and Gentlemen, I will not part with you upon "thoſe Terms; never King was ſo much beholden "to a Parliament as I am to you; and if my Kind-"neſs to you, and my Confidence in you be not "proportionable, I am behind hand with you, which, "God willing, I will not be.

"Mr. Speaker, and you Gentlemen of the Houſe "of Commons, I am willing to take this occaſion "to give you my particular Thanks for your great "kindneſs in taking hold upon an eaſie Intimation, "rather than an Invitation from me, to enter upon "the Conſideration of my Revenue: It was kindly "done, and I ſhall never forget it. I have given "Order, that you be fully informed of the State of "it, and then I know you will do that which is "good for me and you: And I pray purſue your "good Reſolution, in putting the Kingdom into "ſuch a Poſture, that we may prevent, at leaſt not "fear any deſperate Inſurrection.

His Majeſty's moſt Gracious Anſwer to the Petition.

CHARLES R.

Written Anſwer to the Petition. "HIS Majeſty having ſeriouſly conſider'd and "weigh'd the humble Repreſentation and "Petition of his Lords and Commons aſſembled in "Parliament, and the great Affection and Duty "with which the ſame was preſented to him: And "after having made ſome Reflections on himſelf and "his own Actions, is not a little troubled that his "Lenity and Condeſcenſions towards many of the "Popiſh Perſuaſion (which were but natural effects "of his Generoſity and Good-nature, and after ha-"ving lived ſo many Years in the Dominions of Ro-"man Catholick Princes; and out of a juſt Memo-"ry of what many of them had done and ſuffered "in the Service of his Royal Father of bleſſed Me-"mory, and of ſome eminent Services perform'd "by others of them, towards his Majeſty himſelf "in the time of his greateſt Affliction) have been "made ſo ill uſe of, and ſo ill deſerv'd, that the "Reſort of Jeſuits and Prieſts into this Kingdom "hath been thereby increaſed; with which his Ma-"jeſty is, and hath been long highly offended: And "therefore his Majeſty readily concurs with the Ad-"vice of his two Houſes of Parliament, and hath "given Order for the preparing and iſſuing out ſuch "a Proclamation as is deſired, with the ſame Clauſe "referring to the Treaty of Marriage, as was in the "Proclamation, which, upon the like occaſion, iſ-"ſued out by the Advice of both Houſes of Parlia-"ment in the Year 1640. And his Majeſty will "take farther Care, that the ſame ſhall be effectual "at leaſt to a greater degree than any Proclamation "of this kind hath ever been.

"And his Majeſty farther declares, and aſſures "both his Houſes of Parliament, and all his loving "Subjects of all his Dominions, that as his Affecti-"on and Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion and the "Church of England hath not been conceal'd, or "untaken notice of in the World; ſo he is not, nor "will ever be, ſo ſollicitous for the ſettling his own "Revenue, or providing any other Expedients for "the Peace and Tranquillity of the Kingdom, as for "the Advancement and Improvement of the Reli-"gion eſtabliſhed; and for the uſing and applying "all proper and effectual Remedies to hinder the "growth of Popery, both which he doth in truth "look upon as the beſt Expedient to eſtabliſh the "Peace and Proſperity of all his Kingdoms. Given "at our Court at Whitehall this firſt Day of April "1663. in the fifteenth Year of our Reign.

Proclamation againſt Prieſts and Jeſuits. Accordingly his Majeſty did publiſh ſuch a Proclamation, commanding all Jeſuits and Popiſh Prieſts to depart this Kingdom, dated April 9. in the 15th Year of his Reign. But it did not ſeem to be much more in the Intentions of the Court than another popular Proclamation for the better Obſervation of the Lord's-Day, and for renewing a former Proclamation againſt vitious, debauched and profane Perſons, dated Aug. 22. 1663. For notwithſtanding theſe Profeſſions toward pleaſing of the People, it is certain that Popery and Profaneneſs were not altogether out of Favour.

The Court more Popiſh. Some Advances toward the Intereſt of Rome were thought to appear in the King's change of ſome Miniſters of State. His faithful and wiſe Servant Sir Edward Nicholas was removed from his Office of Secretary of State, and Sir Henry Bennet, lately the King's Reſident in Spain, was put into that Station, one who ſecretly eſpouſed the Cauſe of Popery, and died at laſt in the open Profeſſion of it [a].

The Lord Chancellor Clarendon was ſenſible of this Change in his Majeſty's Counſels and Affections; and afterward took occaſion thus to expreſs himſelf in a Petition and Addreſs to the Lords at the time of his departing the Kingdom. For more than two Years I never knew any difference in the Councils.—But from the time Mr. Secretary Nicholas was removed from his Place there were great Alterations; and whoſoever knew any thing of the Court and Counſels, knew well how much my Credit hath ſince that time been diminiſhed.——Nor hath there been from that time to this above one or two Perſons brought to the Council, or preferred to any conſiderable Office in Court, who have been of my intimate Acquaintance, or ſuſpected to have any Kindneſs for me, and moſt of them moſt notoriouſly known to have been very long my Enemies, and of different Judgment and Principles from me both in Church and State.

[a] Dr. Peter du Moulin, in his Reply to a Perſon of Honour, 1673. 4to. tells him, That by his Anſwer to a Jeſuitical Libel, called Philanax Anglicus, in 1662. he had brought ſuch a Charge againſt the Engliſh Jeſuits, and ſtruck ſuch a Terror in the Roman Catholick Party, that all the Strength of Somerſet-Houſe (where a Man of great Note was concerned in that Charge) roſe up to crave Juſtice againſt him, and he was forbidden by Letter from the Secretary of State to write any more: Which Prohibition was not taken of till upon his Petition in 1668.

1663. 15 Car. II.

Lord Clarendon out of Favour.

And it was indeed from this Juncture of a Popiſh prevailing Intereſt, that the Lord Chancellor Clarendon began now to decline in his Royal Maſter's Favour, and to ſtand ready to be given up to his Enemies, and to bear the Odium of every publick Miſcarriage or Misfortune. And therefore in this Seſſion of Parliament, on July 10, 1663. the Earl of Briſtol exhibited theſe Articles of High-Treaſon and other heinous Miſdemeanours againſt Edward Earl of Clarendon, Lord High Chancellor of England in the Houſe of Lords [a].

Articles preferr'd againſt him.

I. "That being in place of higheſt Truſt and Confidence with his Majeſty, and having arrogated a ſupreme Direction in all his Majeſty's Affairs, both at Home and Abroad, hath wickedly and maliciouſly, and with a traiterous Intent to draw Scandal and Contempt upon his Majeſty's Perſon, and to alienate from him the Affections of his Subjects, abuſed the ſaid Truſt in manner following, viz.

"That he hath traiterouſly and maliciouſly endeavoured to alienate the Hearts of his Majeſty's Subjects from him by Words of his own, and by artificial Inſinuations of his Creatures and Dependencies, that his Majeſty was inclined to Popery, and had a Deſign to alter the Religion eſtabliſhed in this Kingdom.

"That in purſuance of that traiterous Intent, he hath to ſeveral Perſons of his Majeſty's Privy Council held Diſcourſes to this Effect, viz.

"That his Majeſty was dangerouſly corrupted in his Religion, and inclined to Popery.

"That Perſons of that Religion had ſuch Acceſs and ſuch Credit with him, that unleſs there were a careful Eye had unto it, the Proteſtant Religion would be overthrown in this Kingdom; and in purſuance of the ſaid wicked and traiterous Intent, upon his Majeſty's admitting Sir Henry Bennet to be principal Secretary of State in the place of Mr. Secretary Nicholas, he hath ſaid theſe Words, or Words to this Effect.

"That his Majeſty had given 10000 l. to remove a zealous Proteſtant, that he might bring into that Place of High Truſt a concealed Papiſt, notwithſtanding that the ſaid Sir Henry Bennet is known to have ever been, both in his Profeſſion and Practice, conſtant to the Proteſtant Religion.

"That in purſuance of the ſame traiterous Deſign, ſeveral near Friends and known Dependencies of his have ſaid aloud, that were it not for my Lord Chancellor's ſtanding in the Gap, Popery would be introduced in this Kingdom, or Words to that Effect.

"That in purſuance of the aforeſaid traiterous Deſign, he hath not only adviſed and perſuaded the King to do ſuch things, contrary to his own Reaſons and Reſolutions, as might confirm and increaſe the Scandal, which he had endeavour'd to raiſe upon his Majeſty as aforeſaid, of his Favour to Popery, but more particularly to allow his Name to be uſed to the Pope, and ſeveral Cardinals, in the Sollicitation of a Cardinal's Cap for the Lord Aubigney, one of his own Subjects, and great Almoner at preſent to his Royal Conſort the Queen.

1663. 15 Car. II.

"That in purſuance of the ſame wicked and traiterous Deſign, he had recommended to be employ'd to the Pope one of his own Domeſticks, Mr. Richard Bealing, a Perſon (tho' an avow'd Papiſt) known to be truſted and employ'd by him in Diſpatches and Negotiations concerning Affairs of greateſt Concernment to the Nation.

"That in purſuance of the ſaid traiterous Deſign, he being the chief Miniſter of State, did himſelf write by the ſaid Mr. Richard Bealing Letters to ſeveral Cardinals, preſſing them in the King's Name to induce the Pope to confer a Cardinal's Cap on the ſaid Lord Aubigney, promiſing, in caſe it ſhould be attained, Exemption to the Roman Catholicks of England from the Penal Laws in force againſt them; by which Addreſs unto the Pope for that Eccleſiaſtical Dignity for one of his Majeſty's Subjects and Domeſticks, he hath as far as from one Action can be inferr'd, traiterouſly acknowledg'd the Pope's Eccleſiaſtical Sovereignty, contrary to the known Laws of this Kingdom.

"That in purſuance of the ſame traiterous Deſign, he has called unto him ſeveral Prieſts and Jeſuits, whom he knew to be Superiors of Orders here in England, and deſired them to write to their Generals at Rome, to give their help for the obtaining from the Pope the Cardinal's Cap for the Lord Aubigney, as aforeſaid, promiſing great Favour to Papiſts here, in caſe it ſhould be effected for him.

"That he hath promiſed to ſeveral Papiſts he would do his Endeavour, and ſaid, he hop'd to compaſs the taking away all Penal Laws againſt them, which he did in purſuance of the traiterous Deſign aforeſaid, to the intent they might preſume and grow vain upon his Patronage, and by their publiſhing their Hopes of a Toleration, increaſe the Scandal endeavoured by him and by his Emiſſaries to be raiſed upon his Majeſty throughout the Kingdom.

"That in purſuance of the ſame traiterous Deſign, being intruſted with the Treaty betwixt his Majeſty and his Royal Conſort the Queen, he concluded it upon Articles ſcandalous and dangerous to the Proteſtant Religion.

"That in purſuance of the ſame traiterous Deſign, he concluded the ſame Marriage, and brought the King and Queen together, without any ſettled Agreement in what manner the Rites of Marriage ſhould be performed, whereby the Queen refuſing to be married by a Proteſtant Prieſt, in caſe of her being with Child, either the Succeſſion ſhould be made uncertain for want of the due Rites of Matrimony, or elſe his Majeſty to be expoſed to a Suſpicion of having been married in his own Dominions by a Romiſh Prieſt, whereby all the former Scandals endeavour'd to be rais'd upon his Majeſty by the ſaid Earl, as to Point of Popery, might be confirmed and heighten'd.

"That having thus traiterouſly endeavour'd to alienate the Affections of his Majeſty's Subjects from him upon the ſcore of Religion; he hath endeavour'd to make uſe of all the malicious Scandals and Jealouſies, which he and his Emiſſaries had raiſed in his Majeſty's Subjects, to raiſe from them unto himſelf the popular Applauſe of being the zealous Upholder of the Proteſtant Religion, and a Promoter of new Severities againſt Papiſts.

"That he hath traiterouſly endeavour'd to alienate the Affections of his Majeſty's Subjects from him, by venting in his own Diſcourſe, and by the Speeches of his neareſt Relations and Emiſſaries, opprobrious Scandals againſt his Majeſty's Perſon and courſe of Life, ſuch as are not fit to be mention'd, unleſs Neceſſity in the way of Proof ſhall require it.

[a] See the Proceedings of the Commons againſt the Earl of Clarendon. Publiſh'd in 8*vo.* 1700.

1663. 15 Car. II.

" That he hath traiterouſly endeavour'd to alienate the Affections of his Highneſs the Duke of York from his Majeſty, by ſuggeſting unto him Jealouſies, as far as in him lay, and publiſhing abroad by his Emiſſaries, that his Majeſty intended to legitimate the Duke of Monmouth.

" That he hath wickedly and maliciouſly, contrary to the Duty of a Privy-Counſellor of England, and contrary to the perpetual and moſt important Intereſt of this Nation, perſuaded his Majeſty againſt the Advice of the Lord General, to withdraw the Engliſh Garriſons out of Scotland, and to demoliſh all the Forts built there, at ſo vaſt a Charge to this Kingdom.

" That his Majeſty having been graciouſly pleaſed to communicate the Deſires of the Parliament of Scotland, for the remove of the ſaid Garriſons to the Parliament of England, and to ask their Advice therein, the ſaid Earl of Clarendon not only perſuaded his Majeſty actually to remove thoſe Garriſons, without expecting the Advice of his Parliament of England concerning it, but did by Menaces of his Majeſty's Diſpleaſure deter ſeveral Members of Parliament from moving the Houſe, as they intended, to enter upon Conſideration of that Matter.

" That he had traiterouſly and maliciouſly endeavoured to alienate his Majeſty's Affections and Eſteem from this his Parliament, by telling his Majeſty, That there was never ſo weak and inconſiderable a Houſe of Lords, nor never ſo weak and heady a Houſe of Commons, or Words to that Effect, and particularly, that it was better to ſell Dunkirk than to be at their Mercy for want of Money, or Words to that Effect.

" That he hath wickedly and maliciouſly, contrary to his Duty of Counſellor, and to a known Law made laſt Seſſions, by which Money was given, and particularly apply'd for the maintaining of Dunkirk, adviſed and effected the Sale of the ſame to the French King.

" That he hath contrary to Law enriched himſelf and his Treaſures by the Sale of Offices.

" That contrary to his Duty he hath wickedly and corruptly converted to his own uſe, great and vaſt Sums of publick Money raiſed in Ireland by way of Subſidy, private and publick Benevolency, and otherwiſe, given and intended to defray the charge of Government in that Kingdom: by which means a ſupernumerary and diſaffected Army hath been kept up there, for want of Money to pay them off, occaſion'd it ſeems to be becauſe of the late and preſent Diſtempers of that Kingdom.

" That having arrogated to himſelf a ſupreme direction of all his Majeſty's Affairs, he hath with a malicious and corrupt Intention, prevail'd to have his Majeſty's Cuſtoms farmed at a far lower Rate than others do offer, and that by Perſons with ſome of whom he goes a Share, in that and other parts of Money reſulting from his Majeſty's Revenue.

July 10. 1663. BRISTOL.

A Perſonal Quarrel and Popiſh Deſign.

This Accuſation ſeems rather to have been a Perſonal Quarrel than any ſerious Concern for publick Truth and Juſtice. The Words that are charged as ſpoken by him, were generally thought to have been the real Expreſſions or Suggeſtions of that great Man, and was there not a Cauſe? They may be taxed for an indecent Freedom, but they can never be imagined to have proceeded from any want of Integrity or Honour. But indeed there ſeems a perverſe Turn in the Articles, firſt to repreſent the Lord Chancellor as jealous of Popery, and complaining of the King's Inclination to it, by taking new Miniſters Popiſhly affected; and yet after all, to make the Chancellor himſelf the Inſtrument of thoſe very Deſigns that were laid for Popery and the profeſt Promoter of them; which the World did not then believe, and Poſterity does leſs believe.

1663. 15 Car. II.

Proceedings of the Lords.

On the Day theſe Articles were exhibited, this Order was made by the Houſe of Peers. Die Veneris 10. Julii 1663. Order'd, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, that a Copy of the Articles or Charge of High-Treaſon, exhibited this Day by the Earl of Briſtol againſt the Lord Chancellor, be delivered to the Lord Chief Juſtice; who with all the reſt of the Judges are to conſider, whether the ſaid Charge hath been brought in regularly and legally; and whether it may be proceeded in, and how; and whether there be any Treaſon in it or no; and make Report thereof to this Houſe on Monday next if they can, or elſe as ſoon after as poſſibly they may.

Whereupon all the Judges met at Serjeants-Inn in Fleetſtreet, and did upon Conſideration unanimouſly agree upon this enſuing Anſwer, which on Monday July 13. the Lord Chief Juſtice Foſter did deliver in, viz.

Anſwer of the Judges.

WE conceive that a Charge of High-Treaſon cannot, by the Laws and Statutes of this Realm be originally exhibited by one Peer againſt another unto the Houſe of Peers; and that therefore a Charge of High-Treaſon by the Earl of Briſtol againſt the Lord Chancellor, mentioned in the Order of Reference to us of the tenth of this inſtant July, hath not been regularly and legally brought in; and if the Matters alledg'd in the ſaid Charge were admitted to be true, altho' alledg'd to be traiterouſly done, yet there is no Treaſon in it.

Ld Chancellor honourably acquitted.

This Anſwer being read in the Houſe of Peers, the Earl of Briſtol took Exceptions at it, and ſome of their Lordſhips, who were Friends to the Chancellor, inferr'd, that if it were not a regular and legal Charge it was a Libel, and ought to be condemned, and the Author of it cenſur'd. To ſatisfie the Houſe, one of the Judges upon Conference with his Brethren, did on Tueſday July 14. deliver the Reaſons of the Opinion of the Judges in their ſaid Anſwer. And the Earl of Briſtol, a little to excuſe himſelf, ſaid the Articles were not intended by him as a Charge, but as an Information. And then their Lordſhips, after a Debate upon the Queſtion, did unanimouſly reſolve to declare their Concurrence with the Opinion of the Judges: And ſo the Plot of running down this great Man fell at preſent; and yet this early ſtep in it had gained very much of the deſign'd Effect, which was to make him leſs Gracious with his Royal Maſter, and leſs reſpected in the Parliament, and leſs beloved by the People; and ſo by degrees a more eaſie Prey, when his Enemies ſhould again meet to hunt him down.

King's Speech at proroguing the Parl.

On June 3. his Majeſty by Commiſſion under the Great Seal of England, to the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treaſurer, Lord Privy Seal, Duke of Albemarle, Marquis of Dorcheſter and Lord High Chamberlain, had paſſed three publick and ſeven private Bills: And now on July 27. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Peers, and ſending for the Houſe of Commons to attend him, made a ſhort Speech, wherein " He expreſt a great Satisfaction for what the Parliament had done for him, and how cheerfully he concurred with them in all the Bills they had prepared for the good of the Nation; and had given Directions and Commands to all his Judges, in relation to thoſe Affairs, which the Seaſon and other Neceſſities would not permit to paſs into Acts. Then he gave his Royal Aſſent to An Act for four entire Subſidies granted to his Majeſty by the Temporalty. An Act to confirm four Subſidies granted to his Majeſty by the Clergy. An Act for the Relief of Indigent Officers. An Act for ſettling the Profits of the Poſt-Office and Wine Licenſes upon the Duke of York and his Heirs. An Act for better collecting the Duty of Exciſe, &c. And ſo Prorogued the Parliament to the 16th of March following.

There

1663. 15 Car. II.

Plots for Schiſm and Rebellion.

There was a ſecret Correſpondence carried on between the Bigots for Schiſm and a Commonwealth, to conſpire for the good old Cauſe, and to take Arms for reſtoring of it. The place of Plotting was chiefly in the North, becauſe more remote from the Court, and more near to Scotland, where they had their Agitators employ'd among the hotter Kirk Party. They had ſeveral meetings in Yorkſhire, and a good number of them were actually in Arms at Farnley-Wood. They had an Oath of Secrecy enjoin'd, and had their Agents to ſollicite for Aſſiſtance in London, and in moſt of the Counties of England. They had agreed to riſe on October 12. and gave aſſurance to their Friends, that the Inſurrection would be general; that Whitehall ſhould be ſecured; that Nottingham, Gloceſter and Newcaſtle ſhould be ſeiz'd for the moſt convenient Paſſes over the Severn, Trent and Tine; and Boſton in Lincolnſhire for a Sea-port to receive Succours out of Holland and other Foreign Parts. Their Pretences were to redeem themſelves from the Exciſe and all Subſidies; to re-eſtabliſh a Goſpel Magiſtracy and Miniſtry; to reſtore the Long Parliament, and to reform all Orders and Degrees of Men, eſpecially the Lawyers and the Clergy. This Conſpiracy being in good time diſcovered, a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer was ſent to York for Trial of the principal Leaders of them. Some at their Arraignment confeſt, that the Deſign began in a private Committee at London; that Lambert or Ludlow was propoſed and promiſed to be at the Head of them; that the riſing was to have began in Ireland, to have followed in England, and then in Scotland. Others of the Priſoners behaved themſelves with moſt inſufferable Inſolence, eſpecially Cotton, Denham and Atkins, of whom Cotton proteſted in the Face of the Court, that in ſuch a Cauſe he valued his Life no more than the Judge did his Handkerchief. After the Conviction of many of them, they were executed, ſome at York, ſome at Leeds, and others in other Places. They had retained a Printer in London to print for them a ſort of Declaration or Call to Rebellion, wherein were theſe Words; [a] If there be any City, Town or County in the three Nations that will begin this righteous and glorious Work, they may be aſſured, &c. The Printer being found guilty was drawn, hang'd and quarter'd: And another Printer, Bookſeller and Bookbinder were on the ſame occaſion condemn'd to the Pillory, with their Offence expreſſed in theſe Words: For ſelling and uttering Malicious, Scandalous and Seditious Books, againſt the King, the State and Peace of the Kingdom.

Inſolence of theſe Traitors.

King's Progreſs.

In the Long Vacation, his Majeſty, to divert himſelf, and to pleaſe his People, reſolved upon a Progreſs, and a Viſit to the Bath, ſetting out with the Queen on Aug. 26. and returning to Whitehall Octob. 2. after many ſplendid Entertainments given at Newberry by Sir Thomas Doleman, at Marlborough by the Lord Seymour, at Long-Leet by Sir James Thynne, at Badminton by the Marquis of Worceſter, at Cornbury by the Lord Chancellor Hyde, and at Oxford by the Univerſity [b].

The Parliament, according to Prorogation, met at Weſtminſter on March 16. and their Proceedings will fall in with the following Year.

Death of Archbiſhop Juxon.

Dr. William Juxon, Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, died in his Palace of Lambeth on June 4. and was interred in the Chapel of St. John's College in Oxford, to which he was a great Benefactor. His beſt Character was that which his Royal Maſter King Charles I. gave him, that Good Man.

1663. 15 Car. II.

Succeſſion of Dr. Sheldon.

Dr. Gilbert Sheldon, Lord Biſhop of London, who (by reaſon of the good Archbiſhop's Age and Infirmities) had manag'd the Affairs of the whole Province ever ſince the King's Return, was now tranſlated to the See of Canterbury with great Solemnity and general Satisfaction. The See of London was filled with Dr. Humphry Henchman, tranſlated from Sarum, a Man of popular Gravity and Temper; and of a Judgment and Wiſdom ſo agreeable to his Aſpect, that he was ſworn one of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council on Dec. 9.

Death of Archbiſh. Bramhal.

Near the ſame time with Archbiſhop Juxon, died another Primate Dr. John Bramhal, Archbiſhop of Armagh, who had gone over into Ireland as Chaplain to the Lord Deputy, the Earl of Strafford; and being there highly ſerviceable to the King and the Church, had been juſtly promoted to the See of Londonderry, and after a long Exile with the King, was, at the Reſtoration, deſervedly advanc'd to the chief See and Primacy of Ireland.

Diſpoſition of the chief Diſſenters.

The Church of England was now ſo firmly by Law eſtabliſh'd, that there could have been nothing wanting toward Peace and Conformity, but a ſteady Execution of the Laws, and ſome tender regard to the ejected Miniſters, who were many of them Men of Piety and Moderation, and did not pretend that the Church Communion was unlawful as to Lay Communion, tho' they thought the Terms of Miniſterial Conformity too hard for them; and therefore after the Exerciſe of their Miniſtry in ſome private Meetings, they uſually came to the publick Offices in their Pariſh-Church, and join'd with the Prieſt and Congregation, not only in Prayers, but in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper; ſo beginning the Example of Occaſional Conformity, not for Intereſt, or with any ſecular Intention, but to all appearance for Charity and Brotherly-love. So that at this Juncture had the State been true to the Laws, and the Church been indulgent to the ejected Miniſters; there muſt have been a general Unity and Peace. It was certainly the Strength of Popery that now chiefly made the Separation of Proteſtants from the Church of England: The Papiſts laboured for a Liberty, which they knew not how to enjoy without a common Relaxation of the Laws againſt all other Diſſenters. It was purely this Deſign, that put the King upon his Declaration on Decemb. 26. 1662. expreſſing his purpoſe to grant ſome Indulgence or Liberty in Religion, not excluding the Papiſts; Many of whom (he ſaid) had deſerved ſo well of him. The Intent of this Declaration was ſo apparently in favour of Popery, that the Proteſtant Diſſenters did but ſuffer by it in their Intereſt and Credit; for, they were ready to catch at any Offer of Liberty and Eaſe, without ſtaying to conſider the Regularity and Validity of the Grant, or the indirect End and Deſign of that Favour to them. This made the Parliament more jealous of them, as now made inſtrumental to Popery and Arbitrary Power; and therefore the Houſe of Commons made their Votes and their Addreſs againſt all ſuch Royal Indulgence, and forc'd the King to retract all Thoughts of it. This made the Biſhops and Clergy more averſe to them, when they ſaw them now capable of becoming the Tools and Engines of the Church of Rome. Nay and this, in the conſequence, made the King and his Court more deſpiſe them, when they were found too weak to defend their own Project of Liberty againſt the Body of the Parliament, and the Weight of the Nation. It may be moſt impar-

Papiſts deſire an Indulgence.

[a] The Intelligencer, No. 6. 4*to*. writes thus. London, October 7. Here was this Morning ſeiz'd in the Preſs a Libel, not only affirming in terminis, that the People may put their King to Death, and that the Law of God excepts the King no more than any other Perſon, the Lord commanding his Saints to take a two edged Sword in their Hands, to execute his Judgments written in his Word upon wicked Kings. But this horrid Libel does expreſly adviſe and encourage an Attempt upon the Life of his moſt ſacred Majeſty, telling the People, that if ever there were a Seaſon that required the Lord's People to ſell their Garments, and to buy Swords, it was now. This Man (meaning our moſt Gracious Sovereign) had his Authority from the People of England, or elſe he has none: That we are none of this Tyrant's Servants, but he ours: And exhorting the People to caſt off the Yoke of this preſent Tyrant.

[b] See an Account from Oxford, dated Sept. 28, 1663. of the Reception of the King and Queen in that Place, as put into the Weekly Intelligencer by Mr. L'Eſtrange.

1663. 15 Car. II. tial to repreſent the preſent Caſe of the Diſſenters from one of their own Advocates, who tells us, that after the King's Declaration of Indulgence on December. 26. “ Some of the Nonconformiſts were here-

Account given by Mr. Calamy.

“ upon much encourag'd, and waiting privately on “ the King, were fill'd with Hopes. They would “ have perſuaded their Brethren to have thank'd “ the King for his Declaration; but they refus'd, “ leſt they ſhould make way for the Toleration of “ the Papiſts. The Declaration took not at all ei- “ ther with Parliament or People; and ſo the poor “ Nonconformiſts were expos'd to great Severities. “ They who at the King's coming in were ſo much “ careſs'd, were now treated with the utmoſt Con- “ tempt.——About the middle of this Summer, “ there was a freſh Diſcourſe raiſed of Liberty de- “ ſign'd for the ſilenc'd Miniſters. They were bla- “ med by many for not Petitioning the Parliament, “ tho' they had reaſon enough againſt it. Many “ Members of Parliament encouraged the Expecta- “ tion of either an Indulgence, or a Comprehenſion. “ And it was thereupon warmly debated, which of “ the two would be the more deſirable. Some were “ for Petitioning for a general Indulgence, thus ar- “ guing with their Brethren: You are blind, if you “ ſee not that the Act of Uniformity was made ſo rigo- “ rous, and the Weight of Conformity ſo much increas'd, “ that ſo the Number of the ejected Miniſters might be “ ſo great as to force them to be glad of a general To- “ leration, which might take in the Papiſts. And if “ you think to ſtand it out, they will yet bring you to it “ in deſpight of you: They will encreaſe your Burdens, “ and lay you in Priſons till you are glad to Petition for “ ſuch a Toleration. And ſtand it out as long as you “ can, you ſhall be forc'd to procure the Papiſts Liber- “ ty; and the Odium of it ſhall not lie on the Biſhops, “ but on you that are ſo much againſt it. The Biſhops “ ſhall ſpeak againſt it, and they will force you to beg “ for it who are againſt it. And if you will not do it “ now, you do but ſtay till the Market riſe, and your “ Sufferings be made greater, and you ſhall be glad to “ do it at dearer Rates. To whom others reply'd, “ that they would ſuffer any thing rather than pro- “ mote Popery.

“ Mr. Baxter was about this time conſulted by a “ Perſon of Honour concerning the matter ſo much “ talk'd of; he preſs'd him to give him his Judg- “ ment whether the way of Indulgence or Compre- “ henſion was more deſirable. He freely gave him “ his Thoughts to this purpoſe: That he was not “ for Comprehenſion without Indulgence, nor for “ Indulgence without the Enlargement of the Act “ of Uniformity to a greater Comprehenſion; but “ for the conjunction of both. He was not for Com- “ prehenſion alone, becauſe when they had gone the “ fartheſt many worthy Perſons, whoſe Gifts in the “ Church might be very uſeful, would be ſtill left “ out; and there would be much want when all “ were employ'd; and the Loſs by their being ut- “ terly ſilenc'd would redound to the Souls of ma- “ ny. He was not for Indulgence alone, unleſs the “ Law were made more Comprehenſive; becauſe “ the Impoſitions and Reſtrictions of the Law were “ really unaccountable; becauſe nothing can be “ more deſirable than the Strength and Unity of “ the eſtabliſh'd Body of the Clergy; and becauſe “ a bare Indulgence would be apt to occaſion ſuch “ Jealouſies and Animoſities as that it would not “ be long enjoy'd in Peace: And therefore he de- “ clared, that he was for a Comprehenſion of as “ many fit Perſons as might be taken in by Law, “ and then a Power reſerv'd to his Majeſty to in- “ dulge the Remnant as far as might be con- “ ducible to the Peace and Benefit of Church “ and State.

“ But inſtead of Indulgence or Comprehenſion on “ the laſt Day of June, the Act againſt private “ Meetings for religious Exerciſes paſſed the Houſe “ of Commons, and ſhortly after was made a Law, “ the Sum of it was, That every Perſon above ſixteen 1663. 15 Car. II. “ Years, who is preſent at any Meeting under Colour “ or pretence of any Exerciſe of Religion, in other man- “ ner than is allowed by the Liturgy or Practice “ of the Church of England, where there are five “ Perſons more than that Houſhold, ſhall for the firſt “ Offence by a Juſtice of Peace be recorded and ſent to “ Gaol three Months, till he pay five Pounds; and “ for the ſecond Offence ſix Months till he pay ten “ Pounds; and for the third time being convicted by “ a Jury, ſhall be baniſh'd to ſome of the American “ Plantations, excepting New England or Virginia. The Author who is giving this Account takes a wrong occaſion to complain, It was a great “ hardſhip that attended this Act, that ſo much Power “ was given by it to Juſtices of the Peace, to record a “ Man an Offender without a Jury: And if they did “ it cauſeleſly, there was no Remedy, ſeeing every Ju- “ ſtice was made a Judge. A wrong Complaint, “ and a Reflection upon many other of our whol- “ ſome Laws, which could never be executed, if E- “ vidence upon Oath before a Juſtice of Peace could “ not make him ſo far a Judge as to pronounce the “ Penalty expreſt in the Letter of the Law, with- “ out the Formality of a Court and a Jury. It is “ ſufficient, that the greater Offences and the grea- “ ter Penalties, affecting Life or Liberty or Eſtate, “ ſhall not be determin'd by any private Juſtices, “ but in the more ſolemn manner of Court and “ Judge and Priſoner and Jury. And ſo it was by “ this very Act accordingly provided, that no one “ ſhould be convicted of the third Offence which “ incurr'd Baniſhment, without a regular Trial by a “ Jury. The Author goes on to tell us much more pertinently, that “ before this Act the Danger and “ Sufferings lay on the Miniſters only, but now the “ People alſo were ſorely try'd. And that after this, “ the Nonconformiſts were not a little divided a- “ mong themſelves, as to the lawfulneſs and expedien- “ cy of worſhipping God in the publick Churches, “ over and above their private Meetings ſtill kept “ up with great Secrecy. Mr. Baxter and Dr. “ Bates, and ſeveral others with them, were for “ frequenting the publick Churches, when better “ helps were not to be had: And for reſorting to “ them now and then, tho' they had their choice “ to ſhew their Charity. They were for having their “ moſt uſual Communion with thoſe Aſſemblies, “ which they thought were managed moſt agree- “ ably to the rule and end of Worſhip; and yet for “ having occaſional Communion with others, as “ Members of the Catholick Church, to ſhew their “ Catholick Communion with all the Body of Chriſt: “ But others were vehement for an entire Sepa- “ ration.

Miſtakes of this Author.

To this Account it may be fairly added, that it was the Judgment of the two Houſes of Parliament, and of the Body of the People of England, that nothing could ſo effectually ſecure the Peace of the State, as the continuing and confirming a general Conformity to the eſtabliſh'd Church: And again, that nothing would more encourage and promote Popery, than the Advantage to be gain'd by a Toleration of Proteſtant Diſſenters. And had the Adminiſtration of Affairs turn'd even and conſtant upon this Baſis, Peace and Happineſs muſt have needs enſued. But the Error in Politicks was ſtill the ſame: The Legiſlative Power drew one way, and the Executive another: The Parliament for a ſtrict Uniformity, the King for Toleration: And therefore the ſtricteſt Laws had their full Influence no longer than during the Seſſion that made them; or at leaſt the returns of a ſitting Parliament. In every Interval, the King relented, and the Judges muſt connive; which extraordinary way of giving and aſſuming Liberty of Conſcience brought in more Miſchief than a legal Toleration could have done. For by this means the King was gaining a Party to ſupport him in the Pretenſions of a Diſpenſing Power. The Diſſenters

Relaxing the Laws dangerous to Church and State.

1664. 16*Car*.II. Diſſenters were taught to ſlight the Laws of the Land, as much as thoſe of the Church; and to fly to the Royal Prerogative for a Protection againſt the common courſe of Juſtice. The Biſhops and Clergy were diſcourag'd from truſting to their legal Conſtitution, and if they proſecuted any upon the Penal Laws, they found the way of Juſtice ſo obſtructed, that they gain'd the Odium of being Perſecutors without Power, and that was all. While the Papiſts [a] triumph'd in their deſired Oppoſition of Church and Conventicle, teaching the Diſſenters to be enraged at the grievous Penal Laws, and the Churchmen to be offended at the trifling Suſpenſion of them; and labouring to poſſeſs the King with the pleaſure of Governing without a Parliament, that his own Indulgence might be a ſtanding Law; the fear of which raiſed ſo many Jealouſies in the Minds of the beſt and wiſeſt People, that his Majeſty was forced to wipe them off in his next Speech to the Parliament.

Proceedings of Convocation. The Convocation finding the Church to be ſufficiently by Law eſtabliſhed, thought it not proper to meddle with any other Buſineſs relating to Religion. on April 20. the Biſhops were conſidering of the Expediency of a new Form of Grammar, fit to be enjoin'd for the Uſe of all publick Schools: And a Committee of both Houſes was appointed May 4. to examine and review the ſaid Form, but nothing was determined in it. And at their next meeting with the Parliament Nov. 25. nothing was done but a Prolocutor Dr. John Dolben Dean of Weſtminſter Elected and Approv'd in the room of Dr. John Barwick Dean of Paul's, lately deceaſed. Only on Feb. 18. the Archbiſhop required the Biſhops then preſent, when they came into their reſpective Dioceſes, to certifie to him the Names and Sirnames of all Clerks within their Juriſdiction who had been ejected from their Cures, with the places of their preſent abode. And on March 4. the Archbiſhop deſired all his Suffragan Brethren to take all poſſible Care and Diligence, that all Miniſters, Rectors, Vicars and Curates, ſhould in their Surplices read Divine Service fully and diſtinctly, without omitting any part.

Parliament meets. 1664. The Parliament meeting at the time to which they had been prorogued March 16. the King came to the Houſe of Lords on Monday March 21. and made this Gracious Speech to both Houſes.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The K's. Speech. "YOU ſee, God be thank'd, you have met together again at the time appointed, and "I do aſſure you, I have been ſo far from ever intending it ſhould be otherwiſe, that I do not "know one Perſon who ever wiſh'd it ſhould be "otherwiſe. Think, therefore, I pray, what good "Meaning thoſe Men could have, who from the "time of the Prorogation to the Day of your "meeting, have continually whiſper'd and induſtriouſly infuſed into the Minds of the People, that "the Parliament ſhould meet no more; that it "ſhould either be preſently diſſolv'd, or ſo continued by Prorogation, that they ſhould be kept "without a Parliament. I pray watch theſe Whiſperers all you can, as Men who uſe their utmoſt "Endeavours to ſow Jealouſies between you and "me: And I do promiſe you they ſhall not prevail "with me, and I do promiſe myſelf they ſhall not "prevail with you: And the truth is, we are both "concern'd they ſhould not, and we ſhall then with "God's Bleſſing prevent all the Miſchief they intend.

"You may judge by the late Treaſon in the North, "for which ſo many Men have been executed, how "active the Spirits of many of our old Enemies ſtill "are, notwithſtanding all our Mercy. I do aſſure "you, we are not yet at the bottom of that Buſineſs: Thus much appears manifeſtly, that this "Conſpiracy was but a Branch of that which I diſcover'd as well as I could to you about two Years "ſince, and had been then executed nearer hand, if "I had not by God's goodneſs come to the knowledge of ſome of the principal Contrivers, and ſo "ſecured them from doing the Miſchief they intended. And if I had not by the like Providence "had timely notice of the very Hour, and ſeveral "places of their Rendezvous in the North, and provided for them accordingly, by ſending ſome of "my own Troops, as well as by drawing the Train'd-Bands together, their Conjunction would have "been in greater Numbers than had been convenient.

"You will wonder (but I tell true) they are "now even in thoſe parts, and at this time, when "they ſee their Friends under Trial and Execution, "ſtill purſuing the ſame Conſultations: And it is "evident they have Correſpondence with deſperate "Perſons in moſt Counties, and a ſtanding Council "in this Town, from which they receive their Directions, and by whom they were adviſed to defer their laſt intended Inſurrection; but thoſe Orders ſerved only to diſtract them, and came too "late to prevent their Deſtruction. I know more "of their Intrigues than they think I do, and hope "I ſhall ſhortly diſcover the bottom; in the mean "time I pray let us all be as watchful to prevent, "as they are to contrive their Miſchief.

"I cannot omit upon this occaſion to tell you "that theſe deſperate Men in their Counſels (as "appears by ſeveral Examinations) have not been "all of one Mind in the ways of carrying on their "wicked Reſolutions. Some would ſtill inſiſt upon the Authority of the Long Parliament, of "which they ſay they have Members enough willing to meet; others have fancied to themſelves "by ſome Computation of their own, upon ſome "Clauſe in the Triennial Bill, that this preſent Parliament was at an end ſome Months ſince, and "that for want of new Writs, they may aſſemble "themſelves, and chuſe Members for Parliament; "and that this is the beſt Expedient to bring themſelves together for their other Purpoſes. For the "long Parliament you and I can do no more than we "have done, to inform and compoſe the Minds of "all Men, let them proceed upon their peril. But "methinks there is nothing done to diſabuſe them "in reſpect of the Triennial Bill. I confeſs to you, "my Lords and Gentlemen, I have often myſelf read "over that Bill, and though there is no colour for "the Fancy of the Determination of this Parliament, "yet I will not deny to you, that I have always "expected you would, and even wonder'd that you "have not conſider'd the wonderful Clauſes in that "Bill, which paſſed in a time very uncareful for "the Dignity of the Crown, or the Security of the "People; I pray Mr. Speaker, and you Gentlemen "of the Houſe of Commons, give that Triennial "Bill once a reading in your Houſe, and then in "God's Name do what you think fit for me and "your ſelves, and the whole Kingdom. I need "not tell you how much I love Parliaments; never "King was ſo much beholden to Parliaments as I "have been; nor do I think the Crown can ever "be happy without frequent Parliaments. But aſſure your ſelves, if I ſhould think otherwiſe, I "would never ſuffer a Parliament to come together "by the means preſcribed by that Bill.

"My Lords and Gentlemen, I muſt renew my

[a] See A Word in Seaſon, or the great Plot of reſtoring Popery by oppoſing Uniformity. Printed in the Year 1663. 4*to*. Wherein ſeveral Diſcoveries are made of the Papiſts Intrigues, how much they have tamper'd with our Diſſenters, fomented our Diviſions, and thereby promoted the Growth of Popery in our Nation.

"Thanks

1664. 16 Car. II.

" Thanks to you for the free Supply you gave me this laſt Seſſion of four Subſidies; yet I cannot " but tell you, that the Supply is fallen much ſhort " of what I expected or you intended: It will hard- " ly be believ'd, yet you know it to be true, that " very many Perſons who have Eſtates of three and " four thouſand Pounds a Year, do not pay for theſe " four Subſidies ſixteen Pounds: So that whereas " you intended and declared, that they ſhould be " collected according to former Precedents, they " do not now ariſe to half the Proportion they did " in the time of Queen Elizabeth; and yet ſure the " Crown wants more now than it did then, and the " Subject is at leaſt as well able to give.

" The Truth is, by the Licenſe of the late ill " Times, and ill Humour of this, too many of the " People, and even of thoſe who make fair Profeſ- " ſions, believe it to be no Sin to defraud the Crown " of any thing that is due to it. You no ſooner " give me Tonnage and Poundage than Men are de- " viſing all the ways they can to ſteal Cuſtom; nor " can the Farmers be ſo vigilant for the Collection " as others are to ſteal the Duties. You give me the " Exciſe, which all People abroad believe to be the " moſt inſenſible Impoſition that can be laid upon a " People: What Conſpiracies and Combinations are " enter'd into againſt it by the Brewers, who I am " ſure bear not that Burthen themſelves, even to " bring that Revenue to nothing, you will hear in " Weſtminſter-Hall. You have given me the Chim- " ney Money, which you have reaſon to believe is " a growing Revenue, for Men build at leaſt faſt e- " nough; and you will therefore wonder, that it is " already declin'd, and that this half Year brings " in leſs than the former did: I pray therefore re- " view that Bill, and ſince I am ſure you would " have me receive whatſoever you give, let me have " the Collecting and Husbanding of it by my own " Officers, and then I doubt not but to improve " that Receipt, and will be cozen'd of as little as I " can.

" I will conclude with deſiring and conjuring " you, my Lords and Gentlemen, to keep a very " good Correſpondence together, that it may not " be in the Power of any ſeditious or factious Spirits " to make you jealous of each other, or either of " you jealous of me, till you ſee me pretend one " thing and do another, which I am ſure you have " never yet done; truſt me, it ſhall be in no body's " Power to make me jealous of you. I pray con- " trive any good ſhort Bills, which may improve " the Induſtry of the Nation; and ſince the Seaſon " of the Year will invite us all ſhortly to take the " Country Air, I deſire you would be ready for a " Seſſion within two Months or thereabouts, and " we will meet next earlier in the Year. And ſo " God bleſs your Counſels.

Murmurs againſt the Dutch.

At the firſt opening of this Seſſion, there was a general Diſcontent and Murmur againſt the Dutch for breaking in upon our Trade, and affronting our Nation with ſeveral publick Injuries and Inſolencies that were indeed very provoking, wherein they were encourag'd by the French Court, and had a promiſe of Support and Aſſiſtance from it. The Houſe of Commons took this matter into their firſt Conſideration, and appointed a Committee to examine the Complaints of the Encroachments made by the Hollanders upon the Trade of England, and after a Report made by Mr. Clifford, the Houſe agreed upon Reſolutions to this effect.

Reſolutions of the Commons.

That the Wrongs, Diſhonours and Indignities, the Damages, Affronts and Injuries done by the Subjects of the United Provinces to our Merchants, were the greateſt Obſtructions to all Foreign Trade. And therefore, that his Majeſty ſhould be moved to take ſpeedy and effectual Courſe for the Redreſs thereof; and that they would aſſiſt him with their Lives and Fortunes againſt all Oppoſition whatſoever.

Addreſs of both Houſes.

The Lords concurred in this Senſe of publick Honour and Intereſt; and ſo both Houſes attended his Majeſty with an Addreſs to repreſent the common Danger. His Majeſty declar'd his high Eſteem of their Care and Tenderneſs for the Honour and Good of the Nation, and expreſs'd his own Royal Senſe of preſerving the Freedom of Trade and the Dominion of the Seas; letting them farther know, that he would examine and prove the particular Complaints; that he would demand Satisfaction by a publick Miniſter, and do his utmoſt Endeavours to ſecure his Subjects from the like Violences for the future, depending upon the Promiſe of both Houſes to ſtand by him. For which Royal Aſſurance, both Houſes return'd their humble and hearty Thanks.

A new Act for Triennial Parliaments.

The next Care of the Commons was to debate on that part of his Majeſty's Speech which related to the Act for Triennial Parliaments; upon which they brought in a Bill to repeal that Act, and to eſtabliſh a better Expedient for holding Parliaments once in three Years. At the paſſing of this Act on April 6. his Majeſty gave them his Thanks for their ready concurring in a Matter ſo advantagious to the Nation, and for annulling a former Law ſo prejudicial to the Love and Union between King and People, and founded on a fatal Suppoſition, that the Crown was jealous of Parliaments, or the Parliaments jealous of the Crown.

On April 5. the Houſe of Lords adjourned to the 18th Inſtant, and on the Day following the Houſe of Commons made the like Adjournment: Both Houſes unanimouſly reſolving to aſſiſt his Majeſty with their Lives and Fortunes againſt all his Enemies and Oppoſers whatſoever. On May 17. the King came to the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons to attend him, in a ſhort Speech he let them underſtand, " his Royal Approbation of their " Cares and Labours for the Good of the Publick; " and his Acknowledgments to them for their rea- " dy Compliance with his Advice in the Diſpatch " of all Buſineſs depending in the laſt Seſſion; and " concluding with his Reſolution to prorogue them " to the 20th of Auguſt next enſuing; but declaring " farther, that unleſs ſomething extraordinary ſhould " fall out, it was his purpoſe not to call them to- " gether till November following, whereof they " ſhould have timely Notice by his Royal Procla- " mation. Then Sir Edward Turner, Speaker, repreſented to his Majeſty, " the humble Thanks of " the Houſe for his gracious Acceptance of their " Endeavours in the Service of his Majeſty and the " Publick. After which, he inſiſted upon the un- " ſettled Condition of the Country by reaſon of the " diſaffected Parties of Fanaticks, Sectaries, and " Nonconformiſts, who threatned the Diſturbance " of Church and State. Then he touch'd upon the " Injuries complain'd of by our Merchants, and the " Frauds and ill Practices of our Neighbours the " Dutch in the Eaſt and Weſt Indies, in Turkey, A- " frica, and other Parts, which beſides the Indignity " offered to his Royal Majeſty and the Crown of " England, amounted to no leſs than the Value of " ſeven or eight hundred thouſand Pounds: and " then he preſented ſeveral Bills for the Royal Aſ- " ſent, among which was the memorable Act to pre- " vent and ſuppreſs ſeditious Conventicles[a].

King's Speech.

Act againſt Conventicles.

Under

[a] See a Letter of Mr. Secretary Bennet to the Duke of Ormond, expreſſing the ſecret Sentiments of the Court at this Juncture, dated Apr. 25, 1664.—The Houſes have agreed to the Vote of Trade, with that complemental Addition which your Grace ſees in the incloſed Paper, and which, if it have no farther Effect, would at leaſt be a point of infinite Reputation to his Majeſty's Government: And in ſo ſhort a Seſſion the World ſhall ſee the Triennial Bill be repeal'd, and ſuch a Vote as this, after they had been prepared to expect nothing but Conteſts and Diſputes with the Crown in the moſt jealous

Points

1664. 16 Car. II.

Memorial given to the States of Holland.

Under this Diſpoſition of the Parliament and People to quarrel with the Dutch, the King had given his particular Inſtructions to his Ambaſſador Sir George Downing, who about the middle of May gave in a Memorial to the States-General of the great Damages which the Engliſh complained to have ſuffered in their Trade and Commerce by the Subjects of thoſe Provinces. The States wiſely declin'd a preſent Anſwer, and came off with a Promiſe of ſending their own Ambaſſadors to the King of Great Britain, which had the appearance of a more ſolemn Reſpect, and what was more intended, gave them the opportunity of deliberation and delay.

A Fleet fitted out.

But the King, to loſe no time, gave Orders for ſetting out a conſiderable Fleet, to ſecure his Subjects in their freedom of Trade, and to vindicate the Honour and Intereſt of the Engliſh Nation. But he had one continual Misfortune upon him, the want of ready Money: To ſupply this defect, he ſent ſome Lords of his Privy Council to move the City of London for the Loan of an hundred thouſand Pounds upon this extraordinary Occaſion. The Common Council of the City, who were ſenſible of their Sufferings in Trade, readily complied with the King's Requeſt, and voted an immediate Supply of that Sum, to be repaid upon moderate Terms concerted with the Lord Treaſurer.

Satisfaction demanded.

Sir George Downing, upon the dilatory Meaſures taken by the States, came over into England for more private and poſitive Inſtructions; and returning back held ſeveral Conferences with the Deputies of the States, and deliver'd in ſuch particulars of Damages and Injuries ſuſtained by the Engliſh; for which he demanded Reparation. The States again declined all expreſs Anſwer, and put off all Propoſals of making Satisfaction. The King underſtood their Craft to be, the keeping him in ſuſpence till they had got home their ſeveral Fleets of Merchant Men, reſolved to intercept them in the Channel, by way of repriſal, without waiting the Ceremony of a declared War. The Heer Van Goch was ſent as Ambaſſador from the States, to expoſtulate with the King upon his viſible Preparations for a War againſt them; and had a ſolemn Audience on June 23. but ſeem'd to have no ſufficient Inſtructions to propoſe or accept any ways of preventing an open Rupture[a]. So that the King made it his Buſineſs and his great Pleaſure to viſit his Docks and Ports, and give Orders for fitting and furniſhing a Fleet with all poſſible Expedition, to be under the Command of Prince Rupert, and to ſail for Guinea, if the Dutch Fleet under Admiral Opdam ſhould happen to paſs the Channel, and purſue their intended Voyage to thoſe Coaſts. On Octob. 15. Prince Rupert, with his Squadron of ſixteen Men of War, came to the Spit-Head; and at the beginning of November the Duke of York, Lord High Admiral of England, went down to Portſmouth, and joining with the Prince and Earl of Sandwich, took Charge of the Navy, and ſtruck ſuch a Terror upon the Coaſts of Holland, that Opdam was glad to lay ſtill with his Fleet in the Goree, while the Dutch Bourdeaux Fleet, laden home with Wine and Brandy, fell moſt of them into Engliſh Hands, and with many other of their laden Ships, to the Number of above one hundred and thirty, were brought into our Ports, and by Admiralty condemn'd for lawful Prizes, tho' no War had been actually declared; which Proceeding was thought to be more Arbitrary than the Law of Nations did allow. It is however a Juſtice to obſerve, that this way of dealing with our Friends before we had pronounc'd them Enemies, was not merely a Trick of France, or an Intrigue of our own Miniſtry, (as ſome have labour'd to repreſent it) but it was the very Voice of the Engliſh People, and eſpecially the Cry of all our Merchants and Traders. The City of London were ſo full of ill Reſentments againſt the Dutch for engroſſing and uſurping upon Navigation and Commerce, that they not only lent a hundred thouſand Pounds (as before remembred) for Expedition of the Fleet; but, when the King ſtill wanted another like Sum, they advanc'd it with the ſame readineſs, upon a Motion of the Earl of Mancheſter Lord Chamberlain, in a Speech deliver'd at the Guild-hall in London on Thurſday Dec. 1. where were preſent many Members of both Houſes of Parliament, who brought with them an Order preſented by the Lord Chamberlain to the Lord Mayor, and read by Mr. Avery Deputy Town-Clerk, in theſe Words: " Die Veneris 25 Novemb. " 1664. Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, that the Thanks of both Houſes of Parliament be given unto the City of London for their forwardneſs in aſſiſting his Majeſty; and in particular by furniſhing him with ſeveral great Sums of Money toward his Preparations for the Honour, Safety, and Trade of the Nation.

1664. 16 Car. II.

Dutch Ships taken, even before a War declared.

The Voice of the People.

The Parl. thank the City.

King's Speech.

The Parliament, according to Prorogation, had met again on Novemb. 24. when the King in a hearty Speech expreſt to them, " How unkindly he had been treated by his Neighbours the Dutch; how much he thought it his Duty to vindicate the Rights of his Subjects, and the Honour of himſelf and his Kingdoms; how, to this end he had, upon the Stock of his own Credit, ſet forth a Navy, that would guard his Seas, and would not decline meeting with all the Naval Power of the United Provinces; that he had almoſt emptied his own Stores, and had very liberally borrowed of the City of London; ſo that to diſcharge the one, and repleniſh the other, would require little leſs than eight hundred thouſand Pounds; that he had Reaſon to expect from them a ſpeedy and ſubſtantial Supply, and muſt deſire them to frame their Reſolutions with all neceſſary Expedition. The moſt affecting Words of the Speech were theſe: Mr. Speaker, and you Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, I know not whether it be worth my Pains to endeavour to remove a vile Jealouſie which ſome ill Men ſcatter abroad, and which, I am ſure, will never ſink into the Breaſt of any Man who is worthy to ſit upon your Benches, That when you have given me a noble and proportionable Supply for the Support of a War, I may be induced by ſome evil Counſellors (for they will be thought to think very reſpectfully of my Perſon) to Points belonging to it. —— In another of May 14, 1664.—— We hoped his Majeſty would have been this Day at the Parliament to prorogue it; but the Difficulties that offered themſelves in paſſing the Conventicle Bill, ſpun out the time till it was too late. But what was not done this Day, will be on Monday, by the Grace of God. Altho' there be Safety (as Solomon ſays) in a multitude of Counſellors, yet we cannot but think our ſelves at eaſe when we are fairly rid of them. Earl of Arlington's Letter in Miſcellan. Aulic. 8vo. p. 353, 357.

See a Letter from Mr. Secretary Bennet to Sir Richard Fanſhaw, Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Whitehall, June 2, 1664.--- My laſt News was the quiet Receſs of the Parliament, and the Encouragement it had bequeathed his Majeſty to enter into Expoſtulations with the Dutch for the Wrongs they daily do us in our Trade; ſince which time all his Majeſty hath yet openly done thereupon, is to make ready ſuch a Fleet as may ſecure us from any Affront from them, and to call hither for a few Days Sir George Downing, who is newly arrived, from whom his Majeſty looks for a clear Report of the Temper of that Countrey towards us, who are working Night and Day to ſet out a Fleet of thirty Sail at leaſt. —— Earl of Arlington's Letters, Vol. II. p. 24.

[a] Another Letter of Mr. Secretary Bennet to Sir Richard Fanſhaw, dated, Whitehall, June 23, 1664. —— Tho' the Town be full of the Talk of a Holland War, God be thanked we are yet in Peace at Home and Abroad: And this Day a Holland Ambaſſador hath made his Entry, who in the private Audiences he hath had with his Majeſty, recommends much to him the Aſſurances of the States to give us all reaſonable Satisfaction, and his Majeſty is immediately diſpatching back again Sir George Downing to receive the Fruits of it.

make

1664. 16 Car. II. make a ſudden Peace, and get all the Money for my own private Occaſions. But let me tell you, and you may be confident of it, that when I am compelled to enter into a War for the Protection, Honour, and Benefit of my Subjects; I will (God willing) not make a Peace, but upon the obtaining and ſecuring thoſe Ends for which the War is entred into; and when that can be done, no good Man will be ſorry for the determination of it. The Speaker was inſtructed to anſwer, that "The Commons of England could not ſufficiently expreſs their Loyalty and Affection to the "King, nor the deep Senſe which they all had of "the Injuries and Violations committed by the "Dutch; that they had conſidered the Burden of "his Majeſty's Expences, and the neceſſity of his "Naval Preparations; and begged leave to aſſure "him of their Readineſs and Conſtancy to yield him "all the Duties of Aſſiſtance and Obedience with "their Lives and Fortunes[a].

By the 11th of February the Bill was ready for the King's Aſſent, and paſs'd into an Act for granting a Royal Aid of twenty four hundred threeſcore and ſeventeen thouſand and five hundred Pounds. Hitherto no War proclaim'd, tho' the Acts of Hoſtility had been in a manner commanded by an Order of the King in Council dated in December, ſetting forth, that his Majeſty taking into due Conſideration the Injuries, Affronts, and Spoils done by the Subjects of the United Provinces, to the Ships, Goods, and Perſons of his Majeſty's Subjects, and having made frequent Demands of Redreſs which were ineffectual, he did therefore now, by Advice of his Privy Council, order, that general Repriſals ſhould be granted againſt the Ships, and Goods, and Subjects of the United Provinces.

But the Hearts of the trading part of the Nation being now entirely turn'd againſt the Dutch, and the Parliament ſhewing the Senſe of the People by a Royal Aid apparently meant for that purpoſe, the King order'd the drawing up a formal Declaration of War, which it is proper to inſert.

Declaration of War.

At the Court at Whitehall, Feb. 22. 1664.

Preſent

The King's moſt Excellent Majeſty.

His Royal Highneſs the D. of York.	Earl of Carliſle.
His Highneſs Pr. Rupert.	Earl of Lauderdale.
Ld. Abp. of Canterbury.	Earl of Carbery.
Duke of Buckingham.	Lord Wentworth.
Duke of Albemarl.	Lord Berkley.
Marquis of Dorcheſter.	Lord Aſhley.
Lord Great Chamberlain	Mr. Treaſurer.
Lord Chamberlain.	Mr. Vice-Chamberlain.
Earl of Berkſhire.	Mr. Secretary Morice.
Earl of Angleſey.	Mr. Secretary Bennet.
Earl of Bath.	Mr. Chancellor of the Dutchy.

"His Majeſty's Declaration touching his Proceedings for Reparation and Satisfaction for ſeveral Injuries, Affronts, and Spoils done by the "Eaſt and Weſt-India Companies, and other the "Subjects of the United Provinces, being this Day "read at the Board, was approved: And it was order'd, that his Majeſty's Printers do forthwith "cauſe the ſame to be printed and publiſh'd.

Richard Brown.

And it was ſo printed and publiſhed in theſe Words:

"WHereas upon Complaint of the ſeveral Injuries, Affronts, and Spoils done by the "Eaſt and Weſt-India Companies, and other the "Subjects of the United Provinces, unto and upon "the Ships, Goods and Perſons of our Subjects, to "their grievous Damages, and amounting to vaſt "Sums; inſtead of Reparation and Satisfaction, "which hath been by us frequently demanded, we "found that Orders had been given to De Ruyter, "not only to abandon the Conſortſhip againſt the "Pirates of the Mediterranean Seas (to which the "States General had invited us) but alſo to uſe all "Acts of Depredation and Hoſtility againſt our Subjects in Africa.

"We thereupon gave Order for the detaining "the Ships belonging to the States of the United "Provinces, their Subjects and Inhabitants; yet "notwithſtanding we did not give any Commiſſion "for Letters of Mart, nor were there any Proceedings againſt the Ships detained, until we had "a clear and undeniable Evidence that De Ruyter "had put the ſaid Orders in execution, by ſeizing "ſeveral of our Subjects Ships and Goods.

"But now ſince finding by theſe freſh Injuries "and Actings of theirs, and the Intelligence we "have had of their great Preparations for War, "and their granting of Letters of Mart againſt our "People, that both our Forbearance and the other Remedies we have uſed to bring them to a "Compliance with us, have proved ineffectual, and "that they are reſolved what they have done by "Wrong, to maintain by Arms and War againſt us.

"We have thought fit, by and with the Advice "of our Privy Council, to declare, and do hereby "declare to all the World, that the ſaid States are "the Aggreſſors, and that they ought in Juſtice to "be ſo looked upon by all Men; ſo that as well "our Fleets and Ships, as alſo all other Ships and "Veſſels, that ſhall be commiſſionated by Letters "of Mart from our dear Brother the Duke of York, "Lord High Admiral of England, ſhall and may "lawfully fight with, ſubdue, ſeize, and take all "Ships, Veſſels and Goods belonging to the ſaid "States of the United Provinces, or any of their "Subjects or Inhabitants within any their Territories.

"And we do hereby Command as well all our "own Subjects, as advertiſe all other Perſons of "what Nation ſoever, not to tranſport or carry any "Soldiers, Arms, Powder, Ammunition, or any "other contraband Goods, to any of the Territories, Lands, Plantations, or Countries of the ſaid "States of the United Provinces; declaring, that "whatſoever Ship or Veſſel ſhall be met withal, "tranſporting or carrying any Soldiers, Arms, Powder, Ammunition, or other contraband Goods to "any of the Territories, Lands, Plantations, or "Countries of the ſaid States of the United Pro-

[a] See the Letters of Mr. Secretary Bennet to Sir Richard Fanſhaw in Spain, dated, Whitehall Novemb. 24. 1664.—— Our laſt Letters from Holland do almoſt aſſure us that the Dutch Fleet will not come out. However, his Royal Highneſs doth not yet think it fit to leave the Fleet, and we have begun the Buſineſs now by the only way left us; that is, by ſeizing of their Ships whereſoever we meet them. And this Day our Parliament met, very well diſpoſed, in appearance, to contribute liberally towards the Maintenance of the War. By this Day Se'night I hope I ſhall be able to ſend you a good Vote of theirs upon this Subject.——Another of the ſame Miniſter to the Lord Hollis, Ambaſſador in France, dated, Whitehall Nov. 28. 1664. My laſt told your Excellency of the opening of the Parliament by his Majeſty's Speech, and the next Day to juſtify all the fair hopes we had of their ſupporting cheerfully this War, the Houſe of Commons voted the raiſing to his Majeſty in three Years two Millions five Hundred Thouſand Pounds Sterling: But coming the next Day to debate the manner of raiſing it, they did not agree ſo well, but parted late in the Evening with great Heat.—— Earl of Arlington's Letters, Vol. II. p. 60.

vinces;

1664. 16 Car. II. " vinces; the ſame being taken, ſhall be condemned " as good and lawful Prize.

" And we do farther declare, that whatſoever " Ship or Veſſel, of what Nation ſoever, ſhall be " met withal having any Goods, Merchandiſes, or " any number of Perſons in her belonging to the ſaid " States of the United Provinces, or any of their Sub- " jects or Inhabitants, the whole being taken, ſhall " be adjudged as good and lawful Prize. As like- " wiſe all Goods and Merchandizes, of what Nation " ſoever, whether of our own or of Foreigners, that " ſhall be laden aboard any Ship or Veſſel, that ſhall " belong to the States of the United Provinces, or " any of their Subjects, or any inhabiting with " them, and ſhall be taken, the whole ſhall be con- " demn'd as good and lawful Prize; except the ſaid " Ship or Veſſels has ours or our dear Brother's Let- " ters of ſafe Conduct granted to them.

" And to the End that due Intimation and Publi- " cation of this our Declaration may be made, and " publick Notice thereof be taken, it is our Will " and Pleaſure that this our preſent Declaration be " publiſhed in due and uſual Form.

Richard Browne.

Baſeneſs of De Ruyter. The higheſt Provocation to this War was the perfidious baſeneſs of De Ruyter, who commanded the Squadron ſent by the States in conjunction with an Engliſh Fleet under Sir John Lawſon, to reduce the Algerines to the terms of Peace and free Trade; when as ſoon as De Ruyter enter'd the Streights, and had cruiſed a little about Gibraltar, he deſerted the Engliſh and the common Service, and ſail'd away to the Coaſts of Guiney, and diſpoſſeſſed the Engliſh of their Factories at Cape-Verd and the Iſle of Gogee; and after that ſtruck off to the Barbadoes, and made an attempt of landing, but was beat off with loſs and ſhame; and then ſtood for Long-Iſland, and there committed great Depredations upon the Engliſh; thus ingloriouſly beginning a Piratick War under the ſacred Bands of Friendſhip and Alliance. And they inſulted the Engliſh for the loſſes by ſuch treachery brought upon them: For a Dutchman in London pretending himſelf to be a Swede, lately come from Guiney, made it his profeſt Buſineſs and Pleaſure to report the utter deſtruction of the Engliſh there by De Ruyter; for which Inſolence he was on Feb. 25. whipp'd thro' the Streets of London.

The States all the while affected to be ſilent, and hop'd to decline the Imputation of being the firſt Aggreſſors; tho' their Orders and the execution of them ſufficiently betray'd, that they did not wait to be on the Defenſive ſide. When charg'd by our Ambaſſador with many Inſtances of their Violation of Faith and Honour with us; they condeſcended to publiſh a very diſingenuous Libel entitul'd, An Extract of the Memorials of the States General of the United Provinces upon the Memorial of Sir George Downing, Envoy Extraordinary of the King of Great Britain. Paper War. Wherein were ſo many Invectives againſt the King, and ſo many Aſperſions upon the Engliſh Nation, that it put Sir George upon the neceſſity of a printed Vindication. And the States (as if deſigning no more than a Paper War) contented themſelves with a ſecond Libel called, A ſummary Obſervation and Deduction deliver'd by the Deputies of the States General, upon the Memorial of Sir George Downing, Envoy, &c. When they ſaw the Engliſh upon denial of Satisfaction to be in earneſt for a War, they ſent away Monſieur Benninghen to inform the King of France of their proſpect of a Rupture with England, who ſeemed to promiſe them his Favour and Protection; and yet to take advantage of their Neceſſities, he orders his Ambaſſador in Holland to demand Reparations for the loſs of two very conſiderable Eaſt-India Ships formerly taken from his Subjects [a]. 1664. 16 Car. II.

Church Affairs. We ought to look back on the Church of Scotland, where Presbytery began to vaniſh upon the firſt appearance of Monarchy; and all the Miſeries and Confuſions of that Kingdom were expreſly enough charged upon the Kirk Party, in one of the firſt Acts of Parliament for obſervation of the twenty ninth of May, having this Preamble, The States of the Parliament of the Kingdom of Scotland, taking into their Conſideration the ſad Condition, Slavery and Bondage this ancient Kingdom has groaned under theſe twenty three Years; in which, under very ſpecious Pretences of Reformation, a publick Rebellion has been by the Treachery of ſome and Miſperſuaſion of others, violently carried on againſt ſacred Authority, to the Ruin and Deſtruction, as far as was poſſible, of Religion, the King's Majeſty and his Royal Government, the Laws, Liberties and Property of the People, and all the publick and private Intereſts of the Kingdom; ſo that Religion itſelf hath been proſtituted for the warrant of all theſe treaſonable Invaſions made upon the Royal Authority, and diſloyal Limitations upon the Allegiance of the Subject: Therefore, &c. The Scots ſenſible of the evils of Preſbytery. And yet the Kirk had a right of Eſtabliſhment by Law, but ſo weak in the Hearts of the People, and eſpecially of the Nobles and Lairds, that it was to fall of itſelf, without the Honour of a legal Diſſolution. Upon this proſpect of a favourable turn, in the beginning of 1661. ſome of the moſt worthy Scotch Presbyters Mr. James Sharp, Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Farwel, Mr. Loghton came to London, and were there firſt ordained Deacons and Presbyters, and then conſecrated Biſhops, by the Biſhop of Wincheſter and two other aſſiſting Engliſh Prelates; by which Act they expreſly renounc'd the Validity of their former Ordination, and obtain'd a Royal Proclamation dated Sept. 6. declaring the King's Pleaſure to be for reſtoring the Government of the Church of Scotland by Archbiſhops and Biſhops, as it was exerciſed in the Year 1637. and farther ſignified that he had nominated and preſented Archbiſhops and Biſhops, to the ſeveral Sees, to be inveſted with the ſame Authority they had in the Reign of his Royal Grandfather. To obey and execute this good Intention, the Privy Council of Scotland, Jan. 9. following, did ſtrictly diſcharge all Eccleſiaſtical meetings in Synods, Presbyteries and Seſſions, until they ſhould be authoriz'd by the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, upon their entry on the government of their reſpective Sees. And in farther purſuance of this good Deſign, the reſtoring Epiſcopacy in Scotland, the Parliament in their ſecond Seſſions made an Act to redintegrate the Biſhops to the Exerciſe of their Epiſcopal Function, and to all their Privileges, Dignities, Juriſdictions and Poſſeſſions, due and formerly belonging thereunto. And another Act did command all Miniſters to repair unto their Dioceſan Aſſembly, and concur in all Acts of Church Diſcipline, as they ſhould be thereunto required by the Archbiſhops or Biſhops of the Dioceſe, under pain of being ſuſpended from their Office and Benefice, till the next Dioceſan meeting for their firſt fault; and if they amend not, to be deprived and the Church to be declared vacant. And whereas by the Presbyterian Diſcipline all the Right of Patronage in Parochial Churches was taken from the Nobility and other Laity, and even from the Crown; the Parliament did now provide in their ſecond Seſſion 1662. that all Miniſters who had enter'd to the Cure of any Pariſh within Burgh or Land, in or ſince the Year of God 1649. to have no right to uplift the Rents of their reſpective Benefices, modified Stipends, Marſh or Glebe for this in-

Scotch Biſhops.

Epiſcopacy reſtor'd.

Acts of Parl. for an Epiſcopal Ch.

[a] See a Letter of Lord Holles in the French Court to Sir Richard Fanſhaw, Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Paris 4, Febr. 1664.—Here the Dutch Envoy, Van Benninghen, preſſes hard for a Declaration of Aſſiſtance, &c. Fanſhaw's Letters, 8*vo*. p. 456.

1664. 16Car.II.

ſtant Year 1662. nor for the Year following, unleſs they ſhould obtain a Preſentation from the lawful Patron, and have collation from the Biſhop of the Dioceſe where he liveth, before the twentieth of September next. And to pluck up the root of all Evil, on Sept. 5. 1662. the Parliament formed a Declaration to be ſubſcrib'd by all who ſhall have any publick Charge, Office or Truſt within the Kingdom in theſe Words:

Declaration againſt the ſolemn League and Covenant.

I A. B. do ſincerely affirm and declare, that I judge it unlawful to Subjects, upon pretence of Reformation, or any other Pretence whatſoever, to enter into Leagues and Covenants, or to take up Arms againſt the King, or thoſe commiſſionated by him; and that all theſe Gatherings, Convocations, Petitions, Proteſtations, and erecting and keeping Counſel Tables, that were uſed in the beginning, and for the carrying on the late Troubles, were unlawful and ſeditious. And particularly that thoſe Oaths whereof the one is called the National Covenant, and the other entituled A ſolemn League and Covenant, were and are in themſelves unlawful Oaths; and were taken by and impoſed upon the Subjects of this Kingdom againſt the Laws and Liberties of the ſame: And that there lieth no Obligation upon me, or any of the Subjects from the ſaid Oaths, or either of them, to endeavour any Change or Alteration of the Government, either in Church or State, as it is now eſtabliſhed by the Laws of the Kingdom.

This Revolution and Eſtabliſhment of the Church of Scotland was during the Commiſſion of the Earl of Middleton, who did all that was poſſible to aſſert the King's Supremacy, and to ſettle him a good Revenue. But in the beginning of 1663. the Earl of Middleton was remov'd, and the Earl of Rothes was appointed to be High Commiſſioner of Scotland, a Ringleader of the Presbyterians under King Charles I. and even the principal of thoſe Conſpirators who ſubſcribed a Letter to the King of France, directed Au Roy, to aid their Kirk and Covenant againſt their lawful Prince. And yet now under his Adminiſtration the Presbyterians loſt ground more and more. The ſtanding High Commiſſion for Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes was in Hands that extended their Authority in a moſt vigorous manner. And the Parliament to demoliſh all the Remains of Kirk Diſcipline, ordain'd a new Conſtitution of a National Synod or General Church Aſſembly, whereby the external Government of the Church was declared to be inherent in the King, by virtue of his Prerogative Royal in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical; that the Members of this Synod were to be only Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Deans, Archdeacons, the Moderators of Meetings for Exerciſes, with one Miniſter of each Meeting, to be choſen by the Moderator and plurality of Miniſters for the ſame. The Synod to meet at ſuch Time and Place only as his Majeſty ſhould appoint by Proclamation; and to debate of ſuch Matters only relating to the Government and Doctrine of the Church, as his Majeſty ſhould recommend. And laſtly, no Aſſembly to be held without the preſence of his Majeſty or his Commiſſioner. And in the next Seſſion of Parliament, a Proclamation was iſſued out, commanding all Miniſters who had enter'd before the Year 1649. and ſince the reſtitution of the Church Government by Archbiſhops and Biſhops, had relinquiſhed their Miniſtry, or had been depoſed by their Ordinary, to remove themſelves within forty Days after their relinquiſhment or depoſal, out of the Pariſhes whereof they had been Incumbents, and not to reſide within twenty Miles of the ſame, nor within ſix Miles of Edinburgh, or any Cathedral, nor within three Miles of any Burgh Royal, nor to inhabit two in one Pariſh, upon penalty of incurring the Laws made againſt Movers of Sedition.

Form of Scotch Synods.

1664. 16Car.II.

Death of Archbp. Frewen.

The Church of England loſt a great Prelate, Dr. Accepted Frewen Archbiſhop of York, who had been elected Preſident of Magdalen College in Oxford 1626. and inſtall'd Dean of Glouceſter 1631. and conſecrated Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield 1644. and tranſlated to York in October 1660. He died at his Manor of Biſhop's-Thorp on March 28. 1664. and was buried on May 3. under the great Eaſt Window of his Cathedral Church, with a ſplendid Monument ſoon after erected for him [a].

Proceedings in Convocation.

The Convocation of the Province of Canterbury held their frequent Seſſions, and having diſpatch'd the Buſineſs of Religion, they fell upon a matter of Eccleſiaſtical cogniſance, the better Government of Grammar Schools. Several Complaints had been made of the Faults and Defects of Lilly's Grammar: The uſe of which had been preſcrib'd by the Royal Eccleſ. Supremacy; and therefore it was thought proper that a new publick Form of Grammar ſhould be now drawn up and approv'd in Convocation, to be enjoin'd by the ſame Royal Authority. Hence on April 20. the Archbiſhop and his Brethren conſulted of bringing in ſuch a new Form of Grammar, and of appointing fit Perſons for the Examination and Correction of it. On May 4. ſuch a Form of Grammar was brought in by Dr. John Pierſon, and the Reviſal of it was recommended to a Committee of both Houſes. But this matter dropp'd as a dubious and difficult Task, or at leaſt was interrupted by the death of the Prolocutor Dr. John Barwick Dean of St. Paul's; into whoſe place the inferior Clergy elected Dr. John Dolben Dean of Weſtminſter, who was preſented to the Archbiſhop, and confirmed by him on Friday December 2. Nothing more was done till Febr. 18. when the Archbiſhop deſired the Biſhops, when they ſhould come to their reſpective Dioceſes, to return to him an account of the Names of all Miniſters who had been ejected from their Cures, and the places of their Habitation. And on March 4. his Grace recommended to the ſaid Biſhops, their taking all poſſible Care and Diligence that all Miniſters and Curates within their reſpective Dioceſes ſhould read the Divine Service as preſcribed by Law, diſtinctly and fully, without omiſſion of any part in the right Order and in Canonical Habit.

The Clergy firſt tax'd by the Houſe of Commons.

This Year began a very remarkable Change in the Liberties and Properties of the Clergy of England, by altering the way of taxing themſelves, and being tax'd in common with the People in Parliament. It muſt be obſerv'd, that by original Conſtitution the Lords Spiritual and Prelates and Clergy were eſteem'd one of the three Eſtates of the Realm, and therefore met in Eccleſiaſtical Aſſemblies on the civil account of giving their own Money, and ſecuring their own Secular Rights and Liberties. This was the true and only Reaſon of the inferior Prelates and Clergy being call'd to Parliament by a Clauſe of Præmunientes inſerted in the Parliamentary Writ of Summons to every Biſhop, as the Practice began in 23 Ed. 1. by which Parliamentary Summons, the lower Clergy never found place among the Temporal Commons, as the Biſhops had long before done among the Temporal Lords; but they were only to meet in a diſtinct Aſſembly in Parliament time, for the Parliamentary purpoſe of aiding the King with Money, and making their Petitions for any redreſs of Grievances, or grant of Liberties, &c. And theſe Parliamentary Convocations meddled only with the Civil Rights of the Church, not concerning themſelves with Doctrine or Diſcipline or other Spiritual things, which were reſerved to the proper Eccleſiaſtical Synods, that were called independently on Parliaments, to meet in two Provincial Aſſemblies, before the reſpective Archbiſhops. This Conſtitution of the Church was not alter'd by the Reformation,

[a] See the Intelligencer, Numb. 36.—York, Apr. 30. 1665. On Monday laſt the Body of his Grace the late Archbiſhop of York was brought into this City, and lies now in State at a Houſe of a Kinſman's of his in the Cloſe of the Cathedral, &c.

any

any farther than as the Eccleſiaſtical Synods could no longer be called but by the King's Writ, nor act but by his Authority, becauſe he was now declared the Supreme Head. And there was a leſs Change in the Parliamentary Convocations, they gave their Money as before, only their Grants of Subſidy were now generally confirm'd by Acts of Parliament; and yet they gave Benevolences as formerly, to be levied and paid according to Rules and Conſtitutions of their own making. But by degrees theſe two different Aſſemblies of the Clergy in Eccleſiaſtical Synods and in Parliamentary Convocations, grew in effect into one Body, becauſe the Provincial Writs generally brought the Clergy together at the ſame time with the Præmunientes Clauſe; not but that they had ſtill a diſtinct Capacity, and might have a ſeparate Being; and they actually had ſo in 1640. when the Parliamentary Convocation expiring with the Parliament diſſolv'd, the Provincial Synod did continue in a legal Being, till diſſolved by a ſeparate Writ, as the Judges themſelves affirmed to be Law. In ſhort, by virtue of ſuch original Conſtitution, the Clergy tax'd themſelves, and were never included in any Bill of the Lay Commons, till the times of Rebellion and Uſurpation, when the Church of England being diſſolv'd, this Right among others was ſwallow'd up; and the Schiſmatical Miniſters having no great title to be diſtinguiſh'd from the common People, had their Benefices tax'd in common with Lay Eſtates. But when the Church was reſtor'd in 1660. this original Right was reſtor'd with it; and was exerciſed at the Beginning of this Convocation, when the Clergy granted to the King four Subſidies, and had their ſeparate Grant confirm'd by Act of Parliament, Stat. 15 Car. II. cap. 10. But it ſo happen'd, that the Biſhops and Clergy now thought themſelves griev'd in this Method of Taxing, by which they paid more in proportion than the Laity, and were ſubject more to the Pleaſure of the Court, and more to the Humour of the Commons, who expected and often requir'd that the Clergy ſhould give beyond their Proportion, and even beyond their Abilities. And beſides all theſe Miſchiefs and Dangers, the Body of the Clergy were left too much at the mercy of the Convocation Divines, who were many of them Court-Chaplains and Seekers of Court-Preferment, and ſo might be tempted to raiſe their own Fortune by laying a heavier Burden on their Brethren. The Experience or the Fear of theſe Evils put the Archbiſhop and ſome of the chief Biſhops into a Conſult with the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Treaſurer, and ſome other prime Miniſters of State; wherein it was concluded, that the Clergy ſhould tacitly recede from the Cuſtom of Taxing themſelves, and ſhould be included in the Money-Bills prepared by the Houſe of Commons; and to encourage their Aſſent, ſhould have two of the four Subſidies remitted to them; and ſhould have a Clauſe of ſaving the ancient Rights belonging to the Clergy, as in this part of the Act for granting a Royal Aid unto the King's Majeſty, in the Seſſion held at Weſtminſter Nov. 24. 1664. "——Provided always, and be it enacted by " the Authority aforeſaid, that all ſpiritual Promo-" tions, and all Lands, Poſſeſſions, or Revenues an-" nex'd to, and all Goods and Chattels growing or " renewed upon the ſame or elſewhere, appertaining " to the Owners of the ſaid ſpiritual Promotions or " any of them, which are or ſhall be charged, or " made contributary by this Act towards the Pay-" ments aforeſaid, during the time therein appoint-" ed, (which was to be rais'd, levied, and paid in the " ſpace of three Years) ſhall be abſolutely freed and " diſcharg'd from the two laſt of the four Subſidies " granted by the Clergy to his Majeſty, his Heirs " and Succeſſors, by an Act made in a former Seſ-" ſion of this preſent Parliament, intitled, An Act " for confirming of four Subſidies granted by the Clergy, " any Clauſe or Thing in the ſaid Act to the contra-" ry notwithſtanding. —— Provided always, that " nothing herein contained ſhall be drawn into Ex-" ample to the Prejudice of the ancient Rights be-" longing unto the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, " or Clergy of this Realm, or unto either of the " Univerſities, or unto any Colleges, Schools, Alms-" Houſes, Hoſpitals, or Cinque-Ports.

The firſt Act of Taxing the Clergy with the People.

Whether this great Change in the manner of Taxing now introduc'd, and likely to continue, be more to the Intereſt or to the Prejudice of the Church and Clergy in England, is not ſo eaſy to determine; tho' excepting the former Independence of the State of the Clergy, and the Danger of being oppreſs'd when they ſhall hereafter fall under the Diſpleaſure of a Houſe of Commons; we muſt confeſs, that they have been hitherto better dealt with than while they tax'd themſelves, and they ſeem only to have loſt the Benefit of preſenting their Articles of Grievances, and obtaining the more eaſy Redreſs of them, as a Reward of their Liberality to the Crown. Nay the Clergy have gain'd one Privilege, that of all Rectors and Vicars voting for Members of Parliament, which they never did, till their Money was now given by the Lay Commons; and therefore they ought to be now repreſented by them, and ought for the ſame Reaſon to loſe their Votes in all Parliamentary Elections, if ever they could reaſſume the Practice of Taxing themſelves. There is a Clauſe that does ſufficiently reſerve that Right: But ſuppoſing the Clergy ſhould think fit to claim it, it is a great Queſtion whether the Houſe of Commons will allow it; who, being now in poſſeſſion of the Cuſtom of Taxing the Clergy, may not be willing to relinquiſh that Cuſtom.

Duke of York Admiral.

On March 23. his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York ſet out, with a noble Attendance, to go aboard the Engliſh Fleet [a]; which being now ready to ſail, a proper care was taken to complete the Preparation by an Order for a General Faſt to be obſerved on April 5. To implore the Bleſſing of God upon his Majeſty's Forces employed againſt the Dutch. And it was remarked, that the Queen-Mother and Queen-Conſort did eminently ſhew their Zeal on this Occaſion; and did, by expreſs and particular appointment, command all their Domeſticks to ſet themſelves apart with entire Abſtinence and extraordinary Devotions for the Service of the Day [b].

The Dutch not willing to enter into a War.

The Dutch were not ready to come forth; and did not indeed ſeem to be in earneſt for a War:

[a] See Letter of Mr. Secretary Bennet to Sir Richard Fanſhaw, dated, Whitehall, March 16. 1664/5. ——— To morrow his Royal Highneſs, in the Evening, leaves this Town, to go and embark himſelf with part of that Fleet that is ready expecting his Pleaſure, which will contribute much to the compleating of all things, he being unwilling the Enemy ſhould be at Sea before him, &c. ———Another of March 30. 1665. ———A Spaniſh Ambaſſador is hourly expected here; and the French Ambaſſador's arriving together with his, and upon a very preſſing and urgent Subject, they are not likely to leave us much Leiſure to talk with other Men. His Royal Highneſs is in the mean time in the Fleet at Harwich, and hath above ſixty brave Ships with him, and Men who perſuade themſelves they can conquer the World. God give them Succeſs according to their Confidence. ——— Letters of Earl of Arlington, 8vo. Vol. II. p. 72.

[b] There be many other Inſtances to prove, that a War with the Dutch was puſh'd on by the French and Popiſh Intereſt. And even the Mediation of the French King was but a Feint, to ſet us more effectually together by the ears. Our Miniſters ſaw it, and in effect confeſs'd it. Mr. Secretary Bennet to Sir Richard Fanſhaw, our Ambaſſador in Spain, dated Apr. 27. 1665. ——— We have expected all this Week what Progreſs the French Ambaſſadors would make towards an Accommodation betwixt the Hollander and us; but yet nothing appears from them upon that Point. It is poſſible the Dutch did not hope the King our Maſter would ſo readily have accepted of the French King's Mediation, &c. Ib. p. 75. ——— In another of May 25. 1665. ——— The French Ambaſſadors are preparing ſome Proportions of Accommodement betwixt his Majeſty and Holland; but, by what we hear of them, not ſuch as are likely to pleaſe us.

1665. 17 Car. II.

They were rather ſolliciting the King of France to interpoſe; who, accordingly, ſent Monſieurs Verneuel and Courtine his Ambaſſadors extraordinary to our Court, who came to London Apr. 6. and had Audience of the King May 9. Their chief Errand was reported to be the Mediation and Compoſure between England and Holland; but they could not effect it, becauſe it is moſt probable their Maſter did not intend it. In the mean while, all the Dutch could do, was to enlarge their Embargo upon the Engliſh, and to provide, that none of the Subjects of that State ſhould inſure any Goods belonging to the Subjects of the King of England, and to forbid all Neuters to carry Counterband Goods to any of the Dominions of his Britannick Majeſty.

The King of France ſeems to mediate.

Some of our Cruiſers began with good Succeſs, and took three Dutch Frigats; the firſt a Caper of 7 Guns and 47 Men; the other two were Direction-Ships; one of 32 Guns and 80 Men, taken by the Diamond, wherein Captain Golding, a brave Officer, was ſlain; the other of 22 Guns and 60 Men, taken by the Yarmouth, after a ſtout Reſiſtance. One of theſe Direction-Ships was commanded by young Everts, whom the Duke treated with great Courteſie, and the King gave him his Liberty, and a conſiderable Preſent, as an acknowledgement for the good Offices he had formerly received from his Father in Holland. On April 21. his Royal Highneſs ſet ſail with the whole Fleet, made up of one hundred and fourteen Sail; and finding the Chanel clear, he reſolved to viſit the Dutch upon their own Coaſts, and came before the Texel on Apr. 28. and ſent in a Squadron ſo near the Shore and Harbour, that the Dutch were in a great Alarm and Conſternation, and erected Beacons all along the Sands from the Texel to the Maeſe, to give notice upon any Attempt of Landing. All this daring of the Engliſh could not draw out the Dutch Fleet; and therefore, after the taking many rich Merchant-Men in the very Mouth of the Rivers and Ports, the Duke carried back his Navy to the Engliſh Coaſts. The Dutch took that Opportunity of coming out, and by May 29. appeared about the Dogger Sands, divided into ſeven Squadrons; 14 Men of War and 2 Fireſhips under Opdam, a like number under John Everts, 15 Men of War and 1 Fireſhip under Cortenaer, 14 Men of War and 1 Fireſhip under Stillingwers, 16 and 1 Fireſhip under Trump, 14 and 1 Fireſhip under Cornelius Everts, and 16 with 2 Fireſhips under Schram; in all 103 Men of War, 11 Fireſhips, and 7 Yatchs, beſides Tenders. And by the Duke's retiring from the Holland Coaſts, they took the Advantage of intercepting our Hamburgh Fleet, who had ſent to the Duke, lying before the Texel, for a Convoy, which was diſpatch'd to them; and bringing them along the Holland Coaſts when the Duke was ſail'd away, and miſſing of the Roe-Ketch, which the Duke had ſent to meet them, and give them Notice of the Duke's removal, they fell in with a Squadron of the Dutch ſent out on purpoſe to watch and attack 'em, and were moſt of them taken.

Opening of the War.

The Duke ſails to the Coaſts of Holland,

And returns.

Then the Dutch came out.

And take our Hamburgh Fleet.

This incenſed the Duke to come the ſooner to a general Engagement. So having weighed Anchor from the Gunfleet on May 30. he came to Southold Bay on June 1. and bore up to the Dutch Fleet, and engaged them June 3. and obtained a very ſignal Victory, taking 18 capital Men of War, and ſinking and firing about 14 more, and blowing up Opdam in his Flag Ship, with 500 Men and 84 Guns. On our ſide was loſt but one Ship, the Charity; and that had been before taken from the Enemy: But we loſt many brave Men of Quality and Courage; the Earl of Falmouth, the Lord Muskerry, and the Honourable Mr. Boyle, fell all three by one Cannon Shot, ſo very near the Perſon of the Duke that he was ſprinkled with their Blood and Brains. The Earl of Portland, the Earl of Marlborough, and Rear-Admiral Sampſon, were kill'd in the Fight; and Sir John Lawſon ſoon after died of his Wounds[a].

The Duke fights and obtains a ſignal Victory.

Our Loſs of many great Men.

It is fit for Hiſtory to be adorn'd with this admirable Letter, wrote on Shipboard upon the Coaſts of Holland by the Right Honourable James Earl of Marlborough, a little before his death; directed To the Right Honourable Sir Hugh Pollard, Comptroller of his Majeſty's Houſhold.

A Letter from the Earl of Marlborough.

S I R,

" I Believe the Goodneſs of your Nature, and the " Friendſhip you have always borne me, will " receive with Kindneſs the laſt Office of your Friend. " I am in Health enough of Body, and (through " the Mercy of God in Jeſus Chriſt) well diſpoſed in Mind. This I premiſe, that you may be " ſatisfied that what I write proceeds not from any " fantaſtick Terror of Mind, but from a ſober Reſolution of what concerns my ſelf, and earneſt deſire to do you more Good after my Death, than " mine Example (God of his Mercy pardon the " Badneſs of it) in my Life-time may do you harm. " I will not ſpeak ought of the Vanity of this " World; your own Age and Experience will ſpare " that Labour. But there is a certain thing that goeth up and down the World, call'd Religion, dreſſed and pretended fantaſtically, and to Purpoſes " bad enough, which yet by ſuch evil-dealing loſeth " not its Being: The great good God hath not left " it without a Witneſs, more or leſs, ſooner or later, in every Man's Boſom, to direct us in the " purſuit of it: And for the avoiding of thoſe inextricable Diſquiſitions and Entanglements our " own frail Reaſons would perplex us withal, God " in his infinite Mercy hath given us his holy Word, " in which as there are many things hard to be underſtood, ſo there is enough plain and eaſie, to " quiet our Minds, and direct us concerning our " future Being. I confeſs to God and you, I have " been a great neglecter, and I fear a deſpiſer of it: " God of his infinite Mercy pardon me the dreadful Fault: But when I retired myſelf from the " Noiſe and deceitful Vanity of the World, I found " no true Comfort in any other Reſolution than " what I had from thence. I commend, from the " bottom of my Heart, the ſame to your (I hope) " happy Uſe. Dear Sir Hugh, let us be more generous than to believe we die as the Beaſts that " periſh; but, with a Chriſtian, Manly, Brave Reſolution, look to what is eternal. I will not trouble you farther. The only great God, and holy " God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, direct you " to an happy End of your Life, and ſend us a joyful Reſurrection. So prays,

Old-James near the Coaſt of Holland, April 24. 1665.

Your true Friend,

Marleburgh.

I beſeech you to commend my Love to all mine Acquaintance: particularly I pray you that my Couſin Glaſcock may have a ſight of this Letter, and as many Friends beſides as you will, or any elſe that deſire it.

To return to the glorious Victory. Two thouſand

Particulars of the Victory.

[a] The Earl of Arlington in a Letter to our Engliſh Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Whitehall, June 15, 1665.——In fine, after all our own Relations, we do not reckon upon more Miſchief than the Hollanders, as is to be ſeen in this incloſed Liſt of their Ships burnt and taken, upon the exact Truth of which you may depend. 'Tis true, the diſſipating their Fleet, killing their Admirals, forcing them into their Ports again, is what we value our ſelves moſt upon: And all this, with the loſs of one Ship only on our Side, 283 Men killed, and 440 wounded. Whereas, beſides their Ships, the Enemy will find they want at leaſt 7000 of their Men; a conſiderable Article in the Proviſion they are making to come quickly out again. Earl of Arlington's Letters, Vol. II. p. 80.

1665. 17 Car. II.

ſand ſixty three Dutch Priſoners, whereof thirteen were Commanders, were brought to Colcheſter on June 15. before which Day the Duke himſelf came Poſt to Whitehall, and received the Congratulations of the Court. And a ſolemn Day of publick Thankſgiving for the late Victory, was obſerved in London and Weſtminſter on June 30, and throughout all other Parts of England and Wales on July 4. And the King having waited on his Royal Mother to the Sea Coaſts of Kent, in order to her return into France, on June 29. went aboard the Royal-Charles in the Buoy of the Nore, where he beſtowed the Honour of Knighthood upon ſeveral Captains who had behav'd themſelves with the moſt diſtinguiſhing Valour in the late Fight, as Rear-Admiral Tyddeman, Captain Jordan, Captain Spragge, and Captain Cuttings; as he had ſome few Days before conferred the ſame Honour, for the ſame Service, on Capt. Chriſtopher Mimmes and Capt. Jeremy Smith. In Holland, the Misfortunes of their Fleet put the common People into ſo many Complaints and Murmurs, that the States were forced to comply with the popular Paſſions, and to queſtion many of the Officers for Cowardice, or for ill Management, or even for Treachery itſelf; and, for a Sacrifice, to execute three of their Sea-Captains at the Helder; and to order two more to have their Swords broken over their Heads, and to make another ſtand ſome Hours upon a Scaffold with a Halter about his Neck. All which Ceremony of Juſtice was rather to appeaſe the madneſs of the People, than to vindicate the Honour of their Country.

Many of the Captains Knighted.

Diſcontents in Holland.

The great Plague.

The Joys in England were ſoon abated by the dreadful Calamity of a raging Peſtilence, which broke out in London about the middle of May, and ſpread with intolerable Infection through the City and Suburbs; and within thoſe Bounds ſwept away 97306 Perſons. It happen'd juſt forty Years after the Plague that dreadfully prevail'd in 1625, and made ſome People impute a Fatality to that Number; as if in this ſenſe the Land was to have Reſt but forty Years. The King retired to Hampton-Court, and thence to Saliſbury, leaving the contagious Cities of London and Weſtminſter to the affectionate Care of George Duke of Albemarle, who in the heat of the Diſtemper continued at Whitehall, and gave Orders and Relief with ſuch an unſhaken Courage, as if he had been born to triumph over Diſeaſes and Death. The firſt Method of Healing was by Proclamation to command a General Faſt, to be Religiouſly obſerved throughout the Kingdom of England, to the end that Prayers and Supplications might be every where made for the removal of ſo heavy a Judgment; in a Form drawn up by the Biſhops, and appointed by the King to be likewiſe uſed in all Churches and Chapels within the Bills of Mortality, on every Wedneſday in the Week, during the Contagion. A ſecond Office of Piety and Charity, was to order the making of continual Collections, publick and private, for Relief of the Sick and Needy in the time of ſuch miſerable Diſtreſs. A third Means of ſtopping the Plague, or hindring the Tumults and Diſtractions that might ariſe upon it, was to publiſh A Proclamation requiring all disbanded Officers and Soldiers who had ſerved in the Armies of any of the late uſurped Powers, to depart the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and not to return within twenty Miles of the ſame till November following. And laſtly, Another way of reſtoring wholſome Breath was made uſe of, by ordering continual Fires to be kindled and kept in all the Streets and open Places of the City three whole Days and Nights together, to purify the Air[a].

A Faſt.

Collections.

Proclamation.

The Lord High Admiral, the Duke of York, cared not to adventure his Perſon in another Sea-fight, and therefore committed to the Earl of Sandwich the chief Command of the Navy; which, having repaired the Loſſes ſuſtained in the late Action, and having fitted out for Service ſeveral of the Dutch Prizes, on the 5th of July they weigh'd about ſixty Sail from Soulbay, and made for the Coaſt of Holland; the Standard was born by the Earl of Sandwich, under whom Sir George Aſcue was Vice-Admiral, and Sir Thomas Tyddeman Rear-Admiral, Sir William Pen was Admiral of the White, under him Sir William Berkley Vice-Admiral, Sir Joſeph Jordan Rear-Admiral. The Blue Flag was carried by Sir Thomas Allen, whoſe Flag Officers were Sir Chriſtopher Mimmes, and Captain Harman. The Dutch waited for the return of De Ruyter from Newfoundland, to which Place, after his being beat off from Barbadoes, he had ſteer'd his Courſe with 17 Dutch Men of War, and arriving at St. John's, he took the Diamond of Plimouth and the Unity of Dartmouth, and plunder'd the Colony of their Proviſion and their very Cloaths: At Bay Bull's Harbour he took two Ships more, and in Pitt's Harbour three other Ships, and ranſack'd all the Fiſhing Coaſts, and brought away above a hundred of the moſt able Seamen, becauſe they refuſed to enter into the Service of the States. With theſe few Prizes and his own Ships extremely damag'd, he crept home by the Coaſt of Norway and Denmark, and was immediately made Admiral of the Dutch Fleet, yet rather to carry the Flag than to command the maritime Affairs, which in a new Model were put under the Superintendency of three of their great Men, De Witt, Huygens and Boreel.

Return and Exploits of De Ruyter.

Actions of the Earl of Sandwich.

[b] The Earl of Sandwich finding the Dutch Fleet were not yet ready to meet him, ſailed in three Squadrons toward the North-Seas, and having notice that the Dutch Smyrna and Streights Fleet, with ſome of their Eaſt-India Men, were got into the Harbour of Bergen in Norway, he ſent a Squadron of 22 Men of War under the Command of Sir Thomas Tyddeman, with Orders to ſail directly and attack them in that Port. This Enterprize had been more ſucceſsful, but that the Wind did not ſerve the Engliſh at the Mouth of the Harbour, and the Danes aſſiſted the Dutch in raiſing a Battery on the Banks of it; but, however, the Engliſh Ships lay and fir'd with ſo much Reſolution, that ſome few of the Dutch were fir'd, and many were diſabled. In this Action was ſlain a near Relation of the Earl of Sandwich, the Honourable Edward Mountague, Son to the Lord Mountague of Boughton. After this Attempt, the Engliſh Fleet on Aug. 30. ſet ſail for the Coaſt of Holland, and having ſuffer'd much by a Storm that carried them back Northward, on Sept. 4. they met with the Dutch Eaſt-India Men, and ſeveral other Merchant-men under a good Convoy; and tho' the ſtormy Weather

[a] See the beſt Account, given by Dr. Gumble in his Life of General Monk, 8*vo*. p. 415.——A Judgment ſo great and grievous, that this Relator, who was Reſident with the General at the Cock-Pit all the time, cannot write of it without Terror and Trembling.——I cannot write this without Tears, much leſs could I ſee it, as I did all the time, without the greateſt Grief and Horror.——

[b] See Letter of Lord Arlington to our Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Hampton-Court, July 20, 65.——We have received Letters this Day from my Lord Sandwich till the 17th, at which time he and all his Fleet were in good Health, very cheerful and impatient of coming to ſome Action, with their Eyes about them every way, to ſee what will firſt offer it ſelf. He is gone to the Northward towards the Coaſt of Denmark, whither we ſuppoſe, by all our Intelligence, all their Fleet coming home is directed. The Dutch Fleet is not come out yet.——Another dated Aug. 13, 65. We have no News from our Fleet ſince my laſt. De Ruyter is gotten in, and the Dutch Fleet is ready to go out, if not already. They have made him Commander in chief, upon which Tromp refuſeth to ſerve. A third dated, Sarum, Aug. 22, 65.——Since my laſt we have had a Repulſe at Bergen. My Lord Sandwich detached a Squadron of about 20 Ships to take or burn 50 of the Hollanders Merchants there, whereof ten from the Eaſt-Indies; and notwithſtanding the Difficulties in the Undertaking, it was executed with all poſſible Valour and good Conduct, and, if the Wind had not fail'd us, would in all probability have had a proportionable Succeſs; but the Caſtles and Ships uniting themſelves againſt us, we loſt many of our brave Men, and ſome Captains, and were fain to retire.

1665. 17 Car. II. much favour'd the Eſcape of the Dutch, yet we took eight good Men of War, two of their beſt Eaſt-India Ships, and twenty Sail of their Merchant-men. And on Sept. 9. a part of our Fleet fell in with 18 Sail of Hollanders, and took the greateſt part of them, bringing away with the other Prizes four Dutch Men of War, and above one thouſand Priſoners.

Parl. meet at Oxford.

The Parliament having been prorogued from March 2. to June 21. was by Proclamation on May 30. farther prorogu'd to a time which ſhould be prefixed at their Day of meeting on June 21. when it was accordingly prorogu'd to Aug. 1. and then again prorogu'd to meet at Oxford on Octob. 9. the King and Court chuſing that Place, as the moſt free from Infection. So on October 10. the King ſeated on a Throne at the upper-end of the great Hall in Chriſt-Church, made an acceptable Speech before the two Houſes to this effect:

King's Speech.

"That they might confidently believe, that had "it not been abſolutely neceſſary to conſult with "them, he would not have now called them toge-"ther, when the Contagion had ſpread it ſelf over "ſo many parts of the Kingdom. That he had en-"ter'd upon a War with the States General, by their "Advice and Encouragement; and that therefore "he deſired they might receive Information of the "Conduct and Effects of it, to the end he might "have the continuance of their cheerful Supply. "That this War had prov'd more chargeable to him "than he could imagine it would have done. That "the Addition and Recruits which the Dutch made "to their Fleets, made it unavoidably neceſſary for "him to make a proportionable Preparation. That "as the Dutch endeavour'd by falſe Suggeſtions to "make themſelves Friends, ſo he himſelf had not "been wanting to encourage thoſe Princes who had "been wrong'd by the Dutch, to recover their own "by force; to which end he had aſſiſted the Biſhop "of Munſter with a conſiderable Sum of Money. "That for theſe Reaſons his Supply already grant-"ed was near ſpent, and the Publick Occaſions "would require much greater Aid. However, that "he made not War for War's ſake, but was ready "to receive all fair Propoſitions; tho' he thought "indeed the Dutch were no leſs inſolent than ever; "and yet had gain'd no Advantage that he knew "of.

Speech of the Lord Chancellor Hyde.

When his Majeſty had done ſpeaking, the Lord Chancellor Hyde made a much larger Speech, running over the whole Proceſs of State Affairs from before his Majeſty's Reſtauration to the preſent Juncture, obſerving, "That notwithſtanding the Af-"fronts put upon the Royal Family in Holland du-"ring the Uſurpation, his Majeſty was pleaſed to "imbark himſelf in one of their Ports, tho' preſs'd "by the two Neighbour Kings to have taken his "Paſſage thro' any part of their Territories. That "being return'd, the King was forc'd to ſupport "himſelf upon Credit, till the Armies were diſ-"banded, and the Fleet paid off; which Debt was "heighten'd by the neceſſary Supplies of his Ma-"jeſty's Stores, ſo exhauſted at that time, that there "was not Arms for five thouſand Men, nor Provi-"ſions for the ſetting out ten new Ships. That "under all theſe Difficulties, his Majeſty had re-"pleniſh'd his Stores, had reduc'd the Expence of "his Navy, by providing only a neceſſary Guard "for the Narrow Seas, and a Fleet againſt the "Pyrates, which had brought them to Submiſſion. "Then he repeated the ſeveral Injuries and Inſo-"lencies committed by the Dutch; the neceſſity of "vindicating the Rights and Honour of our Na-"tion; the King's referring of this Cauſe to the "Parliament, the Parliaments humble Deſires of "Redreſs; the States Preparations for War; and the "whole Series of the War, and its Succeſs until "that time; and then reflecting upon the greatneſs "of the King's Expence, he concluded with an "earneſt Motion for farther ſpeedy and effectual "Supplies. 1665. 17 Car. II.

Proceedings of the Commons.

In anſwer to this, the Houſe of Commons ſoon "return'd their Thanks to his Majeſty for his gra-"cious Care and Conduct, for the preſervation of "his People, and advancement of the Honour of "the Nation; declaring they would aſſiſt him with "their Lives and Fortunes in carrying on the pre-"ſent juſt and neceſſary War. And they readily made good their Promiſe by granting an additional Supply of 1250000*l.* to be raiſed by monthly Aſſeſſments, and threw in for a Benevolence one Months continuation of the Tax, to come in the Rear after the expiration of the other Payments, which they deſir'd his Majeſty would beſtow upon his Royal Highneſs[a].

The Honour done to the University.

On the laſt Day of their Seſſions the Houſe of Commons conſidering, that they ſate in the Convocation Houſe, voted, that the Thanks of their Houſe ſhould be given to the Chancellor, Maſter and Scholars of the famous Univerſity of Oxford, for their eminent Loyalty to his Majeſty, and to his Father of bleſſed Memory during the Rebellion; particularly for their Zeal and Courage in refuſing to be viſited by the uſurp'd Powers, and to ſubſcribe the Solemn League and Covenant; and in publiſhing to the World their excellent Reaſons to juſtifie their refuſal, and to aſſert his Majeſty's and their own Rights. Which Thanks were accordingly preſented to the Univerſity in a full Convocation, by Mr. Lawrence Hyde, Sir Heneage Finch, Sir John Berkenhead, and Colonel Strangways, all which were now, or a little before, made Doctors of Laws. And then on this 20th of October the Money Bill, the Bill of Attainder of certain Engliſh Fugitives who had join'd with the Dutch, and a Bill for farther reſtraint of the Nonconformiſt Teachers, with ſome other Bills being paſs'd, the Parliament was prorogued to the twentieth of February next enſuing, then to meet at Weſtminſter, and at that meeting was again prorogued to April 23.

Acts paſs'd.

The Term kept at Oxford.

On October 11. his Majeſty by Proclamation had adjourn'd the Michaelmas Term from Weſtminſter to Oxford; ſo that ſoon after the Receſs of the Parliament, the ſeveral Courts of Juſtice ſate in the publick Schools; Sir John Keeling then firſt appearing on the Bench as Lord Chief Juſtice of England, and Sir William Morton one of the Judges of the ſame Court, in the place of Sir Wadham Windham deceas'd. The next Hilary Term was from hence adjourn'd to Windſor, but upon ceaſing of the Plague was from thence reſtored to Weſtminſter.

Dutch Ambaſſador.

In the heat of this Summer's War, the Dutch had ſtill their Ambaſſador Van Gotch Reſident in England, but when they found his Sollicitations for a Peace were to no purpoſe, they recalled him, and he took his leave of the King at Oxford, then receiving his Majeſty's Letter to the States, wherein he poſitively charg'd them to be Authors of the War, yet ſignified to them his readineſs to come to any fair and honourable Terms of Accommodation. In the mean time, the Mediterranean Seas were well ſecured by a good Squadron of Ships under the Command of Sir Jeremy Smith, and the Chanel by another ſtrong Squadron Commanded by Sir Chriſtopher Mimmes; who hearing of a Dutch Squadron near Oſtend, ſail'd after them, and chaſed them into the Weilings; and clearing the Seas and the very Coaſts of all Dutch Veſſels, he ſail'd away for the Coaſt of Sweden, and

Our Seas ſecured.

[a] See Letters of Lord Arlington to the D. of Ormond in Ireland, dated, Oxon. 12. Octob. 1665. —— The Parliament looks as well towards that end [of giving Money] as we could wiſh. Monday they met, and yeſterday the King ſpoke very well to both Houſes in Chriſt-Church: My Lord Chancellor ſeconded his Majeſty with a very long and material Narrative of all the Proceedings with the Dutch ever ſince his coming to Breda; which being printed, will much forward the general Inclinations to ſupport it vigorouſly. —— Miſcell. Aulica, 8*vo.* p. 362.

came

1665. 17 Car. II. came to an Anchor at the Mouth of the Elve, where General Wrangle travell'd above thirty Miles to give a Viſit and a Complement to the Engliſh Admiral, who entertained him on Ship-board with great Civility and Splendor.

Biſhop of Munſter againſt the Dutch.

While the Dutch were ſo great Sufferers at Sea, they had greater difficulty to defend themſelves by Land. For the Biſhop of Munſter, ſupported by the King of England's Money, had advanc'd into the Country of Frieſland, and defeating ſeveral conſiderable Parties of the Dutch, had taken ſome Towns, and had ſpoil'd and burnt ſeveral Villages, whilſt Prince Maurice with eighteen thouſand Men was able to do little more than to look on. The Dutch had no Friends or Aſſiſtants but the King of France, and Dukes of Lunenberg, and the Brandenburghers; theſe laſt were cold in the Cauſe, and choſe rather to be negotiating a Mediation between the States of Holland and the Biſhop of Munſter. The Dukes of Lunnburg were altogether as indifferent in the matter, and ſent to excuſe themſelves to the King of England, for what they had done, and pretending ignorance of the Grounds and Cauſes of the Biſhops taking Arms. The greateſt Hopes and Dependance of the States were in the French King, who yet ſent them only a Supply of ſome ſickly Troops, who could do no other Service but that of infecting a Camp, and therefore were ſent to Quarter in the Brandenburgher's Country, as if going merely for freſh Air.

King of France faintly aſſiſts them.

Is afraid of the Advantage of the Engliſh.

In the middle of Winter the French King began to be very ſenſible, that the Engliſh by Sea were much Superior to the Dutch, and therefore his Deſigns having been barely to keep the Balance even, and to let them fight till they were both equally weaker than himſelf, he was now ſo much afraid of the [a] prevalency of the Engliſh, that he threaten'd to declare a War againſt them; but yet to make it rather an Intrigue than an open Rupture, he began with acquainting the Queen-Mother of England, that tho' he could no longer keep off a Declaration of War againſt his Majeſty of Great-Britain, yet he ſhould always preſerve the ſame Eſteem and Value for his Majeſty's Perſon, hoping his Britannick Majeſty would always continue the ſame Kindneſs and Affection for him. Accordingly upon January 27. the French King's Declaration of War was publickly Proclaim'd, upon pretence of ſuccouring the States General, in conſequence of the Treaty made with them in 1662. The Lord Hollis being then Ambaſſador in France, enter'd his Remonſtrance againſt the Injuſtice of that ſudden Declaration, which ſubjected all Engliſhmen in their Perſons and Effects to the immediate Acts of Hoſtility, contrary to the Treaties between the two Crowns, which allow'd the Subjects of each Kingdom three Months time for the withdrawing their Eſtates and Perſons after any Rupture. And this prevail'd with the French King to iſſue out a ſecond Order, giving the Engliſh the ſaid Liberty of three Months to tranſport themſelves and their Goods. King Charles had no inclination to break with the French, and therefore demurr'd a while, but finding his People heartily diſpoſed to it, and knowing no other way to ſave his Honour, he did on Febr. 10. publiſh a Declaration, ſhewing, that whereas the French King pretending an Alliance Defenſive with the States General, had proclaimed War againſt his Subjects, he was reſolved to proſecute the War which the French King had ſo unjuſtly undertaken againſt him with his utmoſt Force by Sea and Land. He then iſſued out his Orders to all the Maritime Counties to put themſelves into a poſture of Defence, which they did with all poſſible alacrity, ſhewing the good old natural Averſion to the encroaching Power of France, and offering the continual Attendance of their Militia in Arms; but the King unwilling to give them a needleſs Trouble and Expence, was pleaſed to direct their diſmiſſion and return home till farther occaſion ſhould require.

Declares War againſt England.

K. Charles not inclin'd to a War with France.

1665. 17 Car. II.

Parl. in Ireland.

The Duke of Ormond Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, was remanded back to that Kingdom, and being receiv'd at Dublin in great Splendor and Magnificence, held a Parliament there at the end of this Year, wherein ſeveral of the Members were accuſed and examined for having been in the Plot againſt the Government in 1663. and Robert Shapcot, Eſq; Alexander Staples, Eſq; and five others were called to the Bar, and there expelled the Houſe, and made incapable of ever ſitting in any Parliament of that Kingdom.

Parl. in Scotland.

The Parliament in Scotland iſſued out a ſevere Proclamation againſt the Conventicle Preachers as movers of Sedition; being provok'd to it by the inſolent Carriage of one Alexander Smith a depoſed Miniſter, who being taken at a Conventicle, was conven'd before the High Commiſſion Court, where he gave ſuch reviling Language to the Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, who ſate there as Preſident, that the Lord Commiſſioner order'd him to be put in Chains twenty four Hours in the Thieves Hole.

State of Religion.

As to Religion, the Government was more and more jealous of the Nonconformiſts, partly becauſe ſome of the rigid Fanaticks went into the actual Service of the Dutch againſt their own natural Prince and Country, for which they were attainted in the Oxford Parliament, and the King afterward ſet forth his Proclamation, commanding Colonel John Desborough, Colonel Thomas Kelſey, and ſeveral others, who had been Officers in the late disbanded Armies to return into England by July 22. 1666. or elſe to ſtand guilty and be liable to the Pains of High-Treaſon: And partly becauſe the more moderate Diſſenters ſhew'd no affection to a War againſt the Dutch, but rather deſired they might be alway our Proteſtant Allies, and upon a Peace made with them to turn our Arms againſt the French: And again partly, becauſe the Conventiclers in Scotland were very mutinous and inſolent, and were thought to have held Correſpondence with ſome of the Brethren in England. Hence to be the better informed of the Number and Strength of their teaching Leaders, there were Orders and Inſtructions ſent from the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to the ſeveral Biſhops of his Province, "requiring them "punctually to obſerve all the Canons and Rules "concerning Ordination; and that, for the future, "they yearly certify the Names of all ordained by "them; and that they forthwith make a Return of

The Government provok'd by the Diſſenters.

Orders of the Abp. of Canterbury to find out the number of Diſſenting Teachers.

[a] A Letter of the Earl of Arlington to the Duke of Ormond in Ireland, dated, Oxon. Nov. 1. 1665.——— Yeſternight at Six a-Clock his Majeſty diſmiſſed the two Houſes with a ſhort Speech, which ſhall be ſent to your Grace by the next, with Mr. Speaker's long one. They are prorogued till the 20th of February; but his Majeſty declared they ſhould not meet till April, unleſs ſome preſſing Occaſion did oblige it. Since my laſt, the French Ambaſſador made ſome new Propoſitions to his Majeſty towards an Agreement with Holland; and not being ſatisfactory, his Majeſty took occaſion of declaring to them, that things would be very improperly left to the French King's Arbitrage, (for that was a part of ſome of the Propoſitions) ſince he had declared himſelf ſo partial to the Hollanders, and his being under the Tye of a ſecret Treaty with them. Miſcellan. Aulica, p. 366.———

Nothing was more evident than a Diſpoſition in the People of Holland, and in the Prince of Orange, to have a Peace made with England: But the French King obſtructed it all that was poſſible by his Miniſters and Creatures in England, and by his engaging the prime Counſellor De Wit in Holland, and by ſecretly offering, and at laſt openly declaring a War againſt England to encourage the Dutch to ſtand out.——Our chief Secretary of State, the Lord Arlington, was ſenſible enough of theſe French Intrigues in the ſame Letter, Oxon. November 1. 1665.—— The beſt News we have out of Holland is, that their vaſt Expences and Loſſes this Year make the Generality call for Peace; and the Province of Overyſſel has made a formal Propoſition to the States General, which is likewiſe printed, to ſend the Prince of Orange as Ambaſſador to the King to make Peace; but 'tis likely, when De Wit returns, theſe things will be ſuppreſs'd.

"the

1665. 17 Car. II.

"the Names and Degrees of all their Beneficed "Clergy, and of Lecturers, Schoolmaſters, and "Uſhers, and Practitioners of Phyſick; as likewiſe "of all ejected Nonconformiſt Miniſters, with their "Place of Abode, and Manner of Life. Dated "July 7. 1665. The Returns of the ſeveral Biſhops made hereupon are ſtill preſerved in Lambeth Library. And the Parliament at Oxford ſeem'd to be ſo apprehenſive of Danger from that Party, that they made a Law more ſevere than any former againſt the Teachers of them, to prohibit their dwelling or coming, unleſs upon the Road, within five Miles of any Corporation, or any other Place where they had been Miniſters, or had preach'd after the Act of Oblivion, unleſs they firſt took the following Oath.

Corporation Act.

I A.B. do ſolemnly declare, that it is not lawful upon any Pretence whatſoever to take up Arms againſt the King[a]: And that I do abhor the traiterous Poſition of taking Arms by his Authority againſt his Perſon, or againſt thoſe that are commiſſion'd by him, in purſuance of ſuch Commiſſion. And I do ſwear, that I will not at any time to come endeavour the Alteration of the Government either in Church or State. So help me God.

Diſſenters own Judgment of it.

If the Reader would have the Diſſenters own Opinion and Account of this Act, he muſt take this late Report made of it in the Abridgment of Mr. Baxter's Life.——"The main Promoters of this Act among "the Clergy were Archbiſhop Sheldon, and Biſhop "Ward of Salisbury: And tho' the Earl of Southampton, Lord Treaſurer (who was one that had ever "adher'd to the King, but underſtood the Intereſt "of his Country and of Humanity) vehemently "oppoſed it, yet the Lord Chancellor and his Party carried it. When this Act came out, thoſe Miniſters that had any Maintenance of their own, "found out ſome Dwellings in obſcure Villages, or "in ſome few Market-Towns that were not Corporations. And ſome that had nothing, left their "Wives and Children, and hid themſelves abroad, "and ſometimes came ſecretly to them by Night; "but the moſt, reſolved hereupon to preach the "more freely in Cities and Corporations, till they "went to Priſon.———But the Nonconformiſts "being in this Act charg'd with ſeditious Doctrines "and heinous Crimes, many were much concern'd. "And hereupon they endeavour'd to find out a "Senſe in which the Oath might be taken ſafely, "to prevent their paſſing under that Brand to Poſterity. Dr. Bates conſulted the Lord Keeper "Bridgman, who profeſs'd a great Reſpect for him, "about his taking it in a ſound Senſe. He, to ſatisfie him, promis'd to be at the next Seſſions, "and there on the Bench to declare openly, that "by Endeavour in the Oath to change Church Government, was meant only unlawful Endeavour. "Upon which Declaration he and ſundry other "Nonconformiſts, to the number of twenty, took "it at the Seſſions, to avoid the Imputation of ſeditious Doctrine."

Many Diſſenters take the Oath with a very odd Diſtinction.

1666. 18 Car. II.

The Matters of Fact here deliver'd are very much to be queſtion'd, and the Scruple itſelf ſeems very unreaſonable; for there hardly appears to be any diſtinction in a private Perſon's lawfully or unlawfully endeavouring any Alteration of the Government in Church or State, ſince whoever endeavours it, will be ſure to think it lawful ſo to endeavour: And yet while a lawful Government is legally eſtabliſh'd, the very Endeavours of private Men to alter it ſeem to be in themſelves unlawful. There ought perhaps rather to have been a Scruple at the round Expreſſion of not taking Arms againſt thoſe that are commiſſionated by the King, in purſuance of ſuch Commiſſion; and they might rather deſire to have it thus explain'd or underſtood, Thoſe that are legally commiſſionated, in a legal purſuance of ſuch Commiſſion.

Diſſenters alway favour'd by the King.

Tho' our own Diſſenting Brethren did, for the Reaſons before mentioned, and upon Account of the then receiv'd Opinion, that Indulgence to them was a Favour to the Papiſts, happen to raiſe the Zeal or Jealouſie of the two Houſes of Parliament againſt them; yet the King and his ſecret Council were alway diſpoſed to countenance and protect them: And the King, in Clemency and Good-nature, if not in Judgment and Conſcience, gave a very generous and faithful Protection to the Foreign Proteſtants, and eſpecially the French, even after the Breach with that Court; reſerving his Promiſes of Safety and Protection to them in his Declaration of War; for which, on Feb. 28. ſome Deputies from the French Church in the Savoy attended his Majeſty, with the humble Thanks of that Church for his good Protection and kind Indulgence expreſt toward them in his late Declaration againſt France. And to give them the greater Invitations of Security and Eaſe, the French Proteſtants had the Favour to have a new Church, and full Liberty of uſing it, granted to them in the City of Dublin: And when their firſt Aſſembly met at the opening of it, the Lord Lieutenant honour'd them with his Preſence, and with a firm Aſſurance of continuing to them their Liberty and a peaceable Enjoyment of it.

The King protects the French Proteſtants.

The States of Holland having concluded a Peace with the Biſhop of Munſter, a mercenary Prince, and alſo with the King of Denmark, and depending on a joint Fleet from the King of France, began to put early out to Sea. Our Navy was in equal Forwardneſs: And becauſe the Duke of York was no more to adventure in Perſon, and the Earl of Sandwich was ſent Ambaſſador to Spain, therefore Prince Rupert and the Duke of Albemarle were appointed to be his Majeſty's Generals at Sea for this Summer's Expedition, having Sir Thomas Allen Admiral of the White, and Sir William Berkley of the Blue; and on Apr. 23. they went down to the Fleet, and entred on their Command of it. They lay ſome time in the Buoy in the Nore, where they were viſited by his[b] Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs on May 3. and on 1666.

Pr. Rupert and the D. of Albemarle joint Commanders at Sea.

[a] A Letter from a Perſon of Quality to his Friend in the Country, publiſh'd 1675. 4*to.* tells the truth, that this Oath in the Five-Mile Act was ſtrongly oppoſed by the Lord Treaſurer Southampton, Lord Wharton, Lord Aſhley, and others.——And another Writer has added, this Act was ſeconded the ſame Seſſions by another Bill in the Houſe of Commons to have impoſed that Oath on the whole Nation; and the Providence by which it was thrown out was very remarkable; For Mr. Peregrine Bertie being newly choſen, was that Morning introduced into the Houſe by his Brother the now Earl of Lindſey, and Sir Tho. Oſborn, now Lord Treaſurer, who all three gave their Votes againſt that Bill; and the Numbers were ſo even upon the Diviſion, that their three Votes carried the Queſtion againſt it.

[b] See the French playing their double Game, as in a Letter of Lord Arlington, Secretary of State to our Engliſh Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Whitehall 26 Apr. 1666.——France makes it their Buſineſs to aſſure them in Flanders, that they will not break the Peace with them. As long as this Art will take place, we do not look they ſhould cloſe with us; but what Security they can have that we ſhall be in the ſame State of embracing their Friendſhip, I cannot imagine. For France ſtill hold out their hands to us, and would certainly very willingly be Friends, foreſeeing our War with Holland cannot laſt long, if but for the Expence on both Sides. And tho' their Propoſitions to my Lord Holles of agreeing as at the ſame time with Holland and them, are frivolous, and ſuch as his Majeſty rejected as ſoon as he ſaw them; yet it is probable they will find ſome Means or other to entertain us in Talk, even when my Lord Holles is come away, whom his Majeſty hath now very poſitively again ordered to depart without Delay; finding they make ill uſe of thoſe ſeeming Treaties to debauch all our Friends from us, as they have lately done the Biſhop of Munſter, after a thouſand needleſs Proteſtations made by him, and ſigned with his Hand, that whatſoever Appearances he was obliged to entertain of treating, he would never conclude any thing without his Majeſty's Participation. And thus they likewiſe amuſe the Party in Holland, that he is inclined to Peace, adviſing them to forbear the Proſecution of it, ſince it is ſo far advanced in their Hands. The ſame Art they uſed towards Swedeland, whom they would fain divert from a Conjunction with us, aſſuring them they are agreeing with us.

Our Fleet divided.

the 22[d] arriv'd at the Gun-fleet, and were riding in the Downs on May 29, when Prince Rupert receiv'd Orders to ſail with the White Squadron to the Weſt, to fight the French Fleet; who, by Report, were come out to join the Dutch: An artificial Rumor, that ſeems to have been given out on purpoſe to anſwer a double Deſign, of diſappointing the Dutch and dividing the Engliſh. What follows is ſaid to be an Account given by Sir John Harman himſelf, who was Vice-Admiral of the Blue.

Sir John Harman's Account.

"At the ſame time Prince Rupert ſailed from the Fleet, the Dutch put out to Sea, the Wind at North-Eaſt, a freſh Gale. This brought the Dutch Fleet on the Coaſt of Dunkirk, and carried the Prince to St. Helens on the Iſle of Wight. But the Wind ſuddenly turning into the South-Weſt, blew a ſtrong Gale, which brought the Dutch and Duke to an Anchor; when Captain Bacon of the Briſtol, by firing of his Guns, gave notice to the Duke of the approach of the Dutch. The Duke ſummoned all the Captains on board, and in a Council of War agreed to weigh Anchor, and fight the Enemy. This was June 1. the Wind at South-Weſt, blowing a ſtiff Gale, ſo that the Dutch were forc'd to cut their Cables, not having time to weigh Anchor: And tho' the Engliſh had the Weathergage of the Dutch, yet the Wind ſo bowed the Engliſh Ships, that they could not uſe their loweſt Tire when they came up to fight. Sir William Berkley's Squadron led the Van: The Duke, when he came on the Coaſt of Dunkirk, to avoid running on a Sand, made a ſudden Tack, which brought his Top-maſt to the Board; whereupon he was forced to lie-by four or five Hours, till another was ſet up: But the Blue Squadron knowing nothing of this, ſailed on, fighting through the Dutch Fleet, which were five to one to the Blue. Here Sir William was kill'd, and his Ship the Swiftſure, a ſecond Rate, taken; ſo was the Eſſex, a Frigat of the third Rate; and Sir John Harman, in the Henry, got among nine Ships of the Zealand Squadron, commanded by Vice-Admiral Everts; and theſe ſo diſabled the Henry, that Everts offered Sir John Quarter if he would yield; but Sir John told him it was not come to that yet, and gave him a Broadſide, and killed Everts.

"Hereupon this Zealand Squadron ſailed to aſſiſt their Fellows behind, and left Sir John to the Mercy of three Fireſhips; one of which grappled the Henry on her Starboard Quarters: The Dutch Fireſhips do not take Fire at firſt, as the Engliſh do, but firſt raiſe a Smoak incredibly ſtinking, and ſo thick as nothing can be ſeen at the leaſt diſtance; ſo as it could not be ſeen where the Fireſhip's Grappling-Irons were fixed; but upon the Fireſhip's taking Fire, Sir John's Boatſwain ſwang himſelf into the Fireſhip, and by the light of the Fire found where the Grappling-Irons were fixed in the Fireſhip, and let them looſe, and got on Board again. But another Fireſhip grappled the Henry in her Lar-board Quarter Deck, and took Fire; and Sir John's Chaplain, and about 50 more skipped into the Sea: Whereupon Sir John ran among the Mariners, and threatned to kill any who did not aſſiſt in quenching the Fire; whereupon Sir John's Cabbin-Boy ſeeing the Sails on Fire, with wet Cloths encounter'd, and put it out; but the Cordage being burnt, the Croſs-beam fell upon Sir John's Leg, and brake it. By this time the third Fireſhip made towards the Henry; but four Pieces of Cannon, laden with Chain-Shot, diſabled her; ſo that Sir John made a hard ſhift to bring his Ship into Harwich, and the next Day after fitted her up; and tho' his Leg were broke, went out to Sea again to have fought, but the Fight was over before he could come up to the Fleet.

"In this Day's Fight, the Engliſh could make no uſe of their lower Tire of Guns, and therefore Sir Thomas Tiddiman, Rear-Admiral of the Red, refuſed to engage; the Engliſh were much damnified in their Rigging, yet next Day the Duke engaged the Dutch again, tho' above double his Number of Ships, and the Dutch hourly receiving freſh Supplies: So he did the Day after, the 3[d] of June, when the Duke cauſed ſeveral of his moſt diſabled Ships, after he had taken out their Men, to be burnt, and had but ſixteen Ships left able to fight, with which he retreated, putting them between the Dutch and his unburn'd diſabled Ships.

"Towards the Evening the Engliſh eſpied the White Squadron making up towards them, and therefore were ſtriving to make the neareſt way to meet them. The Prince-Royal, commanded by Sir George Askew, run on a Sand and was loſt, and Sir George made Priſoner: Yet next Day the Fleets fought again; and by the Help of the White Squadron, with much ado got into Harbour.

This Account ſeems to have too much Sharpneſs in it, as wrote with a ſtrong Biaſs of Prejudice to the Court and Councils of that time; and therefore concludes with leaving it a Problem, whether it were a greater Treachery to divide the Fleet, or Madneſs to fight the Dutch with the reſt, when they could not uſe their lower Tire of Guns. By more authentick Reports it did appear, that in the firſt Day's Fight the Dutch had two of their great Ships fired; and in the ſecond Day's Engagement loſt three ſail more; and in the laſt Day, when the Prince was joined, the Engliſh fought through the Dutch Fleet five ſeveral times with good Advantage, and ſo broke them, that they had not above 25 in any one Body, who only maintained a running Fight; having loſt above 15 Ships and 21 Captains, and of common Seamen above five thouſand.

A farther Account.

The Policy of the French King was on this occaſion very eminent and odious; for, inſtead of ſending his promiſed Fleet to aſſiſt the Dutch, he ſent it to deſtroy the Engliſh in their Plantations upon the Leeward Iſlands, and almoſt totally expell'd the Engliſh out of St. Chriſtopher's, and interrupted all the Trade in thoſe Parts. And to do ſecret Miſchief nearer home, he ſends the Governour of Chouſey over from France in a ſmall Boat to carry a [a] Letter to Major General Lambert there in Priſon, and to offer him good Terms for contriving how to de-

Policy and Treachery of the French King.

[a] It was very plain that the French purpoſely declin'd joining the Dutch, that they and the Engliſh might beat one another. The Earl of Arlington in a Letter to the Duke of Ormond in Ireland, dated, Whitehall, June 26. 1666. — We can learn nothing poſitively of the Deſign of France, or of de Beaufort's Proceeding toward us.—— We know not where he is; but we are aſſured from Holland their Fleet expect a Conjunction with his in this threaten'd Deſcent, and they there complain he hath delayed his Conjunction longer much than was promiſed. — In another of the 3[d] of July. The News this Night tell us, that they [the Dutch] are lying at the Gun-Fleet, and that they are hourly expecting the Arrival of the French Fleet to them. My Lord of St. Alban's Letter to the King ſpeaks uncertainly of Monſieur de Beaufort's being at Rochel; — and he uſes many Expreſſions of the Unwillingneſs there to make the Quarrel with us more deſperate than the pure Obligation of Honour engages them. Notwithſtanding this, we have convincing Arguments to aſſure us, that the French by a Conjunction with the Dutch are endeavouring to kindle a Flame in his Majeſty's three Kingdoms; that he is induſtriouſly ſeeking a General to command the diſcontented Party here, and had ſet on foot a Practice to ſet Lambert at liberty, and another for as conſiderable a Head; that their hopes of ſucceeding this way are more piquant in Scotland; and that the Invaſion from the Dutch at leaſt is deſigned upon Scotland, and the French upon Ireland. Miſcell. Aulica, 8*vo*. p. 406. —— And again to July, 1666. We cannot yet hear any more of Monſ. Beaufort, than from the Reports at Paris, that he is at Rochel. — And July 24. 66. We have no certain News of Monſ. de Beaufort: They complain much of his Abſence in Holland from the great Engagement; which being over, perhaps they will think themſelves free to treat without them.

1666. 18 Car. II.

liver up that Iſland to the French; But this perfidious Governour being apprehended, did at laſt confeſs the whole matter, and he and the Pilot were executed on the common Gallows for Spies.

The Dutch come out again.

The Dutch had the credit of appearing at Sea again before the Engliſh were ready to come out; and therefore ſeem'd to ride braving on our Coaſts, and often to make toward France, in a ſecond expectation of meeting a French Fleet to join them, under the Command of Beaufort, who had other ſecret Orders. By July 19. the Engliſh Fleet under the ſame Command of Prince Rupert and the Duke of Albemarle, ſailed from the Buoy in the Nore, the Flags being carried by Sir Joſeph Jordan, Sir Robert Holmes, Sir Thomas Allen, Sir Thomas Tiddiman, Captain Utburt, Sir Jeremy Smith, Sir Edward Spragge, and Captain Kempthorn. They ſoon came up with the Dutch, and obtain'd a glorious Victory, ſinking and burning above 20 of their Ships, killing Evertſon, Admiral of Zealand, Tirrick Hiddes, Admiral of Friezland, the Vice-Admiral of Friezland, and Rear-Admiral Van-Saen, with above 4000 common Seamen, and near 3000 wounded; and chaſing their Ships along the Coaſts of Zealand and Holland, till with the Advantage of Flats and Banks, over which our great Ships could not follow them, they got into the Weilings. And the good uſe that was made of this Victory in a wiſe purſuit of it, was a greater Honour to the Engliſh, and a ſeverer Blow to the Dutch, than the Victory itſelf. There is this Account of it given by Authority.

Engliſh Fleet gains a Victory.

Account of it given by the Publick.

A true and perfect Narrative of the great and ſignal Succeſs of a part of his Majeſty's Fleet under his Highneſs Prince Rupert, and his Grace the Duke of Albemarle, burning one hundred and ſixty Dutch Ships within the Ulie: As alſo the Town of Brandaris upon the Iſland of Schelling, by ſome commanded Men under the Conduct of Sir Robert Holmes, the 8th and 9th of this inſtant Auguſt.

" ON the 29th of July his Majeſty's Fleet, under his Highneſs Prince Rupert, and his Grace the Duke of Albemarle, weighed Anchor from within ſight of Zealand, and ſteer'd their Courſe for the Ulie; But the Winds being contrary, they did not make the Iſland till the 7th of Auguſt, in which time ſeveral rich Ships happen'd to get in, which had otherwiſe fell into their hands. Being come to an Anchor, the Generals were informed, that the Iſlands of Ulie and Schelling were very ill guarded, notwithſtanding there were Storehouſes both for the States and the Eaſt India Fleet, and Riches to a good Value; and what did weigh moſt, a conſiderable number of good Merchant-Ships uſually riding there. Upon which, it was reſolved by the Generals, that there ſhould be a ſpeedy Attempt made. A Council of Flag-Officers was called; and it was determined there, that it ſhould be carried on in the manner following, viz. That 300 Men ſhould be drawn out of each Squadron, conſiſting of two parts Landmen and the third Seamen: Theſe to be commanded by nine Captains, viz. Sir Robert Holmes, Rear-Admiral of the Red, to command in chief, Sir Philip Howard to command 120 Voluntiers, Captain John Bellaſis, Captain Hayman, Captain Wiltſhire, Captain Haddock, Captain Guy, Captain Silver, Captain Healing, Captain Butler, Captain John Holmes, each to Command a Company. Sir William Jennings was alſo order'd, that in caſe they had attack'd both Iſlands at one time, he ſhould have Commanded one Diviſion of the whole. The Ships appointed for this Expedition were the Advice, Hampſhire, Tyger, Dragon and Aſſurance Fourth Rates; the Garland, Pembroke, Sweepſtakes Fifth Rates; five Fireſhips and ſeven Ketches; which being in a readineſs on Wedneſday the 8th inſtant, about eight in the Morning weighed from the reſt of the Fleet, and came to Anchor about a League from the Buoys, where they met the Prince's Pleaſure-Boat called the Fan-Fan, who had diſcover'd within a conſiderable Fleet of Ships near the Ulie, which proved to be 170 Merchant Ships, the leaſt of which was not leſs than 200 Tons Burthen, with two Men of War, who had lately convoy'd near 100 of the aforeſaid Ships from the Northward homeward bound; ſome from the Streights, ſome from Guinea, ſome from Ruſſia, ſome from the Eaſt-Countries, the reſt were outward bound Ships, all likewiſe richly laden.

" Sir Robert Holmes conſidering, that if it ſhould proceed, as his Deſign was, firſt to attempt the Land, that numerous Fleet might poſſibly pour in ſuch numbers of Men as might render the Succeſs hazardous, reſolv'd to begin with the Ships, and accordingly having order'd the Advice and Hampſhire to lie without the Buoys, he weigh'd with the reſt of his Fleet; and the Wind being contrary, he turn'd with much ado into Schelling Road, where the Tyger came to an Anchor, and immediately Sir Robert went on Board the Fan-Fan and put out his Flag; upon which the Officers came on Board him, where it was order'd, that the Pembroke, which drew the leaſt Water, with the five Fireſhips, ſhould fall in amongſt the Enemies Fleet with what ſpeed they could; Captain Brown with his Fireſhip choſe very bravely to lie the biggeſt Man of War on Board, and burnt him downright. Another Fireſhip running up at the ſame time to the other Man of War, he backing his Sails eſcap'd the preſent execution of the Fireſhip; but ſo as to run himſelf by it on Ground, where he was preſently taken by ſome of the Long-boats and fir'd. The other three Fireſhips clapp'd the three great Merchant Men on Board, which carried Flags in their Main-tops, and burn'd them. This put all their Fleet in a great confuſion, which Sir Robert Holmes perceiving, made Sign for all the Officers to come on Board again, and preſently gave Order that Sir William Jennings, with all the Boats that could be ſpar'd, ſhould take the advantage and fall in and burn and deſtroy all they could; but with a ſtrict Command they ſhould not Plunder. The Execution was ſo followed, each Captain effecting his Share, ſome 12, ſome 15 a-piece, that of the whole Fleet there eſcap'd not above eight or nine Ships, one of which, a Guiney Man of 24 Guns, and three ſmall Privateers, who being driven up into a narrow corner of the Stream, ſerv'd to protect four or five Merchant-Men that were a-head of them; where it was not poſſible for our Boats to come at them, tho' even theſe few were much damag'd. This Work took up moſt part of that Day, being the ninth of Auguſt, ſo that we had that Day enough to fall upon the Iſland of the Ulie; Sir Robert Holmes being alſo inform'd by ſome Priſoners, that the Place was not ſo conſiderable as it had been repreſented; and Night coming on, and perceiving two of our Frigots, viz. the Dragon and Garland aground, it was thought moſt convenient for all Hands firſt to go to work to get them off, which being done, he continued in his Intention of attempting the Ulie the next Morning, aſſoon as the High-water would permit the Motion of his Veſſels, but his Deſign was then likewiſe prevented; for ſo great a Guſt and Rain happen'd that Night, that the Arms and Ammunition in the Boats, Hoys and Ketches having receiv'd much Damage, he thought it beſt to weigh, and as the Wind ſtood to attempt ſomething upon the Iſland of Schelling; which, the Morning proving moderate Weather, he accordingly proſecuted, landing by the help of his Long Boats 11 Companies on ſhore, where he diſcover'd only ſome few ſcattering Fellows, but met with little " or

1666. 18 Car. II.

"or no oppoſition. Leaving therefore one Company to ſecure his Boats, himſelf with ten Companies marched up three Miles to the Capital Town call'd Brandaris, a very fair Town or Dorp of above 1000 Houſes, where keeping five Companies upon the ſkirts of the Town, to prevent any Surprize of the Enemy, he ſent the other five to fire and burn the Town; but finding them (as his Vigilance was to ſecure a ſafe Retreat) ſomewhat ſlow to execute that Order, and fearing they might be tempted to forget themſelves in the Pillage, he himſelf was forc'd to ſet fire to ſome Houſes on the Windward, the ſooner to perfect the Work and haſten his Men away; which burnt with that violence, that in half an Hour's time the moſt part of the Town was in a Flame. The Town was reported by thoſe that were found in it to have been very Rich, and ſo it appear'd by ſome of the Soldiers Pockets; but very few People were to be ſeen in it, having had time to run away from the Danger, except ſome old Men and Women, who were uſed with all gentleneſs and humanity.

"The remaining Villages of that Iſland, which are two or three, had certainly run the ſame Fortune, but conſidering it was near High-water, Sir Robert thought it not fit to loſe that opportunity of getting off to Sea, which he thought more conſiderable than to ſtay 24 Hours for the deſtruction of them, remembring likewiſe, that the Chanels between the Buoys were narrow, and not bold without a frank Wind. By High-water he got off all his Men, and ſet Sail out of that place, retaining ſtill his firſt Intention of falling in upon the Ulie; but as he was going on Board he receiv'd Orders from the Generals to return to the Fleet with all ſpeed, which accordingly he did that Evening, being Auguſt 10. leaving behind him the Marks of a ſingular Conduct and moſt vigorous Execution, and bringing off beſides a conſiderable Booty to the private Soldiers and Seamen, the States Pleaſure-Boat of 12 Guns, without other loſs than of ſix Men kill'd, and about as many wounded.

The Dutch put to Sea again.

To recover theſe Diſaſters, or to ſeem not to feel them, the Dutch put to Sea again about the end of Auguſt, and on September 1. paſſed by Dover, making for the Coaſts of France, ſtill purſuing the vain hopes of being join'd by the French Admiral the Duke of Beaufort, who lay at Rochel with 40 Sail. Our Fleet under the ſole Command of Prince Rupert ſtood after them to the Bulloign-Road, where the Dutch to avoid fighting hawl'd cloſe to ſhore, and had been there burnt and ſtav'd, if a ſudden Storm had not oblig'd the Engliſh to return to St. Hellens, and given the Dutch opportunity to reach their own Coaſts. The French Fleet made a little ſhew of ſailing, when three or four Men of War being ſeparated from the reſt, fell among a Squadron of ours, Commanded by Sir Thomas Allen, who took the Ruby, a Ship of 1000 Tuns and 500 Men, Commanded by Monſieur la Roche; which Accident was a fair Pretence for the French Fleet to come no farther. And De Ruyter being forc'd to go home by Sickneſs, made the States recal their Fleet, and brought the People into great Murmurs at the ill Succeſs of it. Van Tromp and De Ruyter fell out, and laid the Miſcarriage upon one another; [a] the States favour the latter, and took away Tromp's Commiſſion, and confin'd him to Amſterdam, and examin'd many of the Captains for Cowardice or Ill-conduct, putting ſome to death and fining others.

Fire of London.

In the mean time there came a moſt dreadful Calamity upon the City of London, of which, this Account was given by Authority. "On September 2. at one of the Clock in the Morning, there happen'd to break out a ſad and deplorable Fire in Pudding-lane near New-fiſh-ſtreet, which falling out at that Hour of the Night, and in a Quarter of the Town ſo cloſe built with wooden pitch'd Houſes, ſpread it ſelf ſo far before Day, and with ſuch diſtraction to the Inhabitants and Neighbours, that Care was not taken for the timely preventing the farther diffuſion of it by pulling down Houſes, as ought to have been: So that this lamentable Fire in a ſhort time became too big to be maſter'd by any Engines or working near it. It fell out moſt unhappily too, that a violent Eaſterly Wind fomented it, and kept it burning all that Day and the Night following, ſpreading it ſelf up to Grace-Church-ſtreet, and downwards from Cannon-ſtreet to the Water-ſide as far as the Three Cranes in the Vintry.

"The People in all parts about it diſtracted by the vaſtneſs of it, and the particular Care to carry away their Goods; many Attempts were made to prevent the ſpreading of it, by pulling down Houſes, and making great Intervals, but all in vain; the Fire ſeizing upon the Timber and Rubbiſh, and ſo continuing itſelf even through thoſe Spaces, and raging in a bright Flame all Monday and Tueſday, notwithſtanding his Majeſty's own, and his Royal Highneſſes indefatigable and perſonal Pains to apply all poſſible Remedies to prevent it, calling upon and helping the People with their Guards, and a great number of Nobility and Gentry unweariedly aſſiſting therein, for which they were requited with a thouſand Bleſſings from the poor diſtreſſed People. By the favour of God the Wind ſlacken'd a little on Tueſday Night, and the Flames meeting with Brick Buildings at the Temple, by little and little it was obſerv'd to loſe its force on that ſide; ſo that on Wedneſday Morning we began to hope well; and his Royal Highneſs never deſpairing or ſlackning his perſonal Care, wrought ſo well that Day, aſſiſted in ſome parts by the Lords of the Council before and behind it, that a ſtop was put to it at the Temple Church, near Holbourn-Bridge, Pye-Corner, Alderſgate, Cripplegate, near the lower end of Coleman-ſtreet, at the end of Baſing-hall-ſtreet, by the Poſtern, at the upper end of Biſhopſgate-ſtreet and Leaden-hall-ſtreet, at the Standard in Cornhil, at the Church in Fan-Church-ſtreet, near Cloathworker's-Hall in Mincing-lane, and at the middle of Mark-lane, and at the Tower-Dock.

"On Thurſday by the Bleſſing of God it was wholly beat down and extinguiſh'd; but ſo, as that Evening it unhappily burſt out again afreſh at the Temple, by the falling of ſome Sparks (as is ſuppoſed) upon a Pile of wooden Buildings: But his Royal Highneſs who watch'd there that whole Night in Perſon, by the great Labours and Diligence uſed, and eſpecially by applying Powder to blow up the Houſes about it, before Day moſt happily maſter'd it.

"Divers Strangers, Dutch and French, were du-

[a] The chief Miniſter was Monſ. de Wit, who had inflam'd the People againſt England, and had enter'd into ſecret Meaſures with France, even to give up his Country to them, as our Court underſtood, the Lord Arlington expreſſing himſelf thus in a Letter to the Duke of Ormond, dated, Whitehall, Aug. 28. 1666.—Our Fleet was to ſet Sail this Day, and we know nothing yet what contradicts that Reſolution. They are ſtronger than ever, and, if poſſible, with better Hearts to fight. God ſend them good Succeſs; for notwithſtanding the Conjectures of the Intentions to join Monſieur de Beaufort, we are aſſur'd the Reſolution of the Enemy is to come ſtrait to fight us. Un Coup des Eſpoir of Monſieur de Wit, who thinks he cannot without it maſter the Diſcontents at home, ſeeing his inevitable Ruin if he be beaten, and reſolving to caſt his Country under the Power of France, if it be never ſo little a Succeſs. He is Maſter enough of them to make them take that Reſolution. This will ſeem ſtrange to your Grace, but we have the Aſſurance of it from good Hands. Miſcell. Aulica, p. 416.

1666. 18 Car. II.

“ ring the Fire apprehended, upon ſuſpicion that they contributed miſchievouſly to it, who are all impriſon'd, and Informations prepar'd to make a ſevere Inquiſition thereupon by my Lord Chief Juſtice Keeling, aſſiſted by ſome of the Lords of the Privy Council, and ſome principal Members of the City; notwithſtanding which Suſpicions, the manner of the burning all along in a Train, and ſo blown forward in all its way by ſtrong Winds, makes us conclude, the whole was the effect of an unhappy Chance, or to ſpeak better, the heavy Hand of God upon us for our Sins, ſhewing us the terrour of his Judgment in thus raiſing the Fire, and immediately after his miraculous and never enough to be acknowleg'd Mercy in putting a ſtop to it, when we were in the laſt Deſpair; and that all Attempts for the quenching it, however induſtriouſly purſued, ſeem'd inſufficient. His Majeſty then ſate hourly in Council, and ever ſince hath continued making Rounds about the City in all parts of it where the Danger and Miſchief was greateſt, till this Morning, September 8. that he hath ſent his Grace the Duke of Albemarle, whom he hath called for to aſſiſt him on this great Occaſion, to put his happy and ſucceſsful Hand to the finiſhing this memorable Deliverance.

Such was the Account given by Authority the ſame Week wherein this Conflagration happen'd On the Monument afterward erected near the place where the Fire began there was an Inſcription to this effect, that the [a] dreadful Flames broke out in a Lane adjoining, about Midnight, and being driven by a high Wind, conſumed not only the adjacent Parts, but Places far remote; and with incredible noiſe and fury deſtroy'd eighty nine Churches, among which was the Cathedral of Paul's, City-Gates, Guild-Hall, many publick Structures, Hoſpitals, Schools, Libraries, a vaſt number of ſtately Edifices, thirteen thouſand two hundred dwelling Houſes, four hundred Streets; of ſix and twenty Wards it utterly ruin'd fifteen, and left eight others ſhatter'd and half burnt. The Ruins of the City were four hundred thirty ſix Acres, extending from the Tower along the Thames ſide to the Temple Church, and from the North-Eaſt Gate along the City Wall to Holbourn-Bridge or Fleet-Ditch. It was mercileſs to the Eſtates and Fortunes of the Citizens, but favourable to their Lives, that it might in all things reſemble the laſt and great Conflagration. The Deſtruction was ſudden, for in a ſhort time the ſame City which was ſeen in a flouriſhing Condition was reduc'd to nothing; and after three Days, when the fatal Fire had in appearance overcome all means of Reſiſtance and Humane Counſels, by the Will of Heaven it ſtopt and was extinguiſh'd.

Account inſcribed on the Monument.

Conject. how this Fire began.

Various were the Opinions how this Fire began. Moſt People did then look upon it to be the Hand of God in a terrible Judgment upon a wicked City: Some ſaid it was contriv'd and carried on by a Conſpiracy of Papiſts, which was offer'd to be made appear in the Popiſh Plot [b]. Others did ſuſpect it an inſidious way of the Dutch and French making War upon us, their two Fleets being neareſt to joining at that very time. There was but one Man tried at the Old-Bailey for being the Incendiary, who was convicted by his own Confeſſion, and executed for it. His Name was Robert Hubert, a French Hugonot of Rohan in Normandy. Some People ſhamm'd away this Confeſſion, and ſaid he was Non Compos, and had a mind it ſeems to aſſume the Glory of being hang'd for the greateſt Villain: Others ſay he was Sober and Penitent; and being after Conviction carry'd thro' the Ruins to ſhew where he put Fire, he himſelf directed thro' the Aſhes and Rubbiſh, and pointed at the very Spot whereon the firſt burning Houſe had ſtood. It was ſoon after complain'd of, that Hubert was not ſufficiently examin'd, who ſet him to work, or who join'd with him. And Mr. Hawles in his Remarks upon Fitz-Harris's Trial, is bold to ſay, that the Commons reſolving to examine Hubert upon that matter, next Day Hubert was hanged before the Houſe ſate, and ſo could tell no farther Tales. But among all the Proofs or Conjectures, nothing is more certain than this, that in the beginning of this very Year, John Rathbone, William Sanders, and ſix others, formerly Officers or Soldiers in the great Rebellion, were Tried, Convicted and Executed for conſpiring the Death of his Majeſty, and the Subverſion of the Government; in order whereunto the City of London was to be ſet on Fire by them on Sept. 3. which by ſome Aſtrological Scheme they pitch'd upon as a lucky Day for ſuch an Enterprize. So as the Fire being afterward at the height of that very Day, made People call that late Trial to Remembrance, and ſent them back to a publick Gazette of Apr. 30. 1666. Numb. 48. wherein a notorious Account of the Diſcovery and Evidence of that Plot to fire the City is deliver'd in Print. And it ſo far encreaſed a Suſpicion of the Malice of our Foreign Enemies, that thoſe Conſpirators ſo condemn'd and executed were ſaid to be under the Direction of a Committee who ſate conſtantly in London, and received Orders from another Council in Holland.

Parliament meet.

The Parliament this Year was to have met on April 23. but for fear of the Contagion yet remaining, the King by Proclamation of April 6. prorogu'd the Parliament to Sept. 18. next enſuing. At which time they met, and the King in a Speech expreſſed his Satisfaction to ſee them happily come together, after the ſad Calamities of the Peſtilence and the Fire; he then ſpoke of the Progreſs of the War, and his vaſt Expences in it; and concluding with recommending the urgent Occaſions of Supply. The Commons immediately reſolved, that the humble and hearty Thanks of the Houſe ſhould be return'd to the King's Majeſty for his great Care in the management of the War; and that they would grant a Supply proportionable to the great Occaſions of carrying on the War. And ſoon after they voted a Royal Aid of one Million eight hundred thouſand Pounds. And on Sept. 25. about three in the Afternoon, the two Houſes of Parliament in a Body attended his Majeſty, according to his appointment at the Banquetting-Houſe in Whitehall, to manifeſt their hearty Concurrence in the Vote for ſupplying his Majeſty with whatſoever was neceſſary for the carrying on of the War, which his Majeſty received with all the Satisfaction imaginable, and very graciouſly diſmiſs'd them. Both Houſes were truly ſenſible of the reſtleſs and implacable Spirit of the Papiſts, and made their Addreſs to his Majeſty for putting the Laws in Execution againſt them: Upon which, on November 10. a Proclamation was given, for ſuppreſſing the Inſolencies of the Papiſts, by charging and requiring all Popiſh Prieſts and Je-

The K.'s Speech.

[a] Of the various conjectures about the occaſion of this Fire; whether Chance or Deſign, or Judgment of God: See Sir William Dugdale's Hiſtory of Paul's, Fol. p. 151. The Houſe of Commons enquir'd into the Cauſe, and appointed a Committee for that purpoſe, before whom Informations and Depoſitions were taken ſufficient to prove there was Treachery in it. See London's Flames reviv'd, or an Account of the ſeveral Informations exhibited to a Committee appointed by Parliament, &c. 1689. 4*to*. The King in his Speech to the two Houſes, Sept. 21. 1666. only mention'd the Calamity in general Words. My Lords and Gentlemen, I am glad to meet ſo many of you together again, and God be thanked for our meeting together again in this Place. Little time hath paſſed ſince we were in deſpair of having this Place to meet in: You ſee the diſmal Ruins the Fire hath made, and nothing but a Miracle of God's Mercy hath preſerved what is left from the ſame Deſtruction.

[b] Sir Henry Capell, in a Speech in the Houſe of Commons in 1680. ſpoke thus. In April 1666. ſome Perſons that were then hang'd confeſs'd they had been treated with, and had treated with others to burn the City of London in September following; of which Confeſſion we then took as little notice, as we have of other Diſcoveries ſince. However, accordingly in September thirteen Thouſand of the Houſes of the City of London were burnt; and thoſe that were taken in carrying on that Work, generouſly diſcharg'd without any Tryal; and one Papiſt that confeſs'd that himſelf and others did ſet the City on fire was in great haſte hang'd; and ſo the Buſineſs was huſh'd up, branding Hubert that then made that Confeſſion with Madneſs, as theſe laſt Witneſſes with Perjury, Sodomy, and what not.

ſuits

1666. 18Car.II. ſuits to depart the Kingdom, &c. On Friday Jan. 18. his Majeſty went to the Parliament, where he was pleaſed with the uſual Solemnities to paſs ſeveral Bills, of which theſe five were Publick. 1. An Act for raiſing Money by a Poll, and otherwiſe, towards the Maintenance of the preſent War. 2. An Act againſt Importing Cattle from Ireland, or other Parts beyond the Seas, and Fiſh taken by Foreigners. 3. An Act for encouraging of Coinage. 4. An Act to continue a former Act for preventing Theft and Rapine upon the Northern Borders of England. 5. An Act for burying in Woollen only. Then after a Gracious Speech to both Houſes, his Majeſty return'd, leaving them to finiſh the remaining Buſineſs of this Seſſion, which he was pleaſed to declare, he intended ſhould end on Monday ſeven-night next. And accordingly on Feb. 8. his Majeſty went again to the Houſe of Lords, where appearing in his Robes, with the Crown on his Head, after a kind and affectionate Speech made to both Houſes of Parliament, he was graciouſly pleaſed to paſs ſeveral Publick and Private Acts, proroguing the Parliament till October 10. next. The Publick Acts were, 1. An Act for granting the Sum of twelve hundred fifty ſix thouſand three hundred forty ſeven Pounds and thirteen Shillings to his Majeſty, towards the Maintenance of the preſent War. 2. An Act explanatory of an Act for raiſing Money by a Poll, and otherwiſe, towards the Maintenance of the preſent War. 3. An Act for erecting a Judicature for determining of Differences, touching Houſes burnt or demoliſhed, by reaſon of the late Fire in London. 4. An Act for rebuilding the City of London. 5. An Act to prevent the Diſturbances of Seamen and others, and to preſerve the Stores belonging to his Majeſty's Navy Royal. 6. An Act for the Relief of poor Priſoners, and ſetting them on work. 7. An Act for extending a former Act concerning Replevins and Avowries to the Principality of Wales and the County Palatine. 8. An Act for the Redreſs of Inconveniences by want of Proof of the Deceaſe of Perſons beyond the Seas, or abſenting themſelves, on whoſe Lives Eſtates depend.

Bills paſt.

Parl. prorogued.

The Lord Hollis had return'd from his Ambaſſy to France, and the Lord Bellaſis from his Government of Tangier in the beginning of May. Henry Coventry Eſq; arrived at Whitehall from his Ambaſſy to Sweden on June 21. Sir Richard Fanſhaw Ambaſſador to Spain died at Madrid June 26. The Lord Willoughby, Governor of the Caribbee Iſlands, was unfortunately loſt in a Hurricane near Martinico at the latter end of July. The Earl of Oſſory was ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council on June 12. and being called by his Majeſty's Writ to the Houſe of Peers, took his Place on Sept. 18. On the Death of Sir Hugh Pollard, Knight and Baronet, the Place of Comptroller of his Majeſty's Houſhold was conferred on Sir Thomas Clifford, who was alſo ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council, with this publick Character, that it was "For "the ſingular Zeal, wherein he had on all occaſi"ons merited in his Majeſty's Service, and more "eminently in the honourable Dangers of this War "againſt the Dutch and French, where he has been "all along a conſtant Actor, having been obſerved "to have made it his Choice to take his Share in "the warmeſt part of thoſe Services. On Dec. 12. Robert Earl of Lindſey, Lord High Chamberlain of England, was ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council; and the Earl of Bridgwater was likewiſe ſworn on Feb. 13. On March 8. came out a Proclamation for apprehending George Duke of Buckingham, importing, "That it did appear to his "Majeſty, that the ſaid Duke, who was of his "Majeſty's Privy Council, and otherwiſe employ'd "in great Truſt, relating to his Majeſty's Perſon "and the Publick, and not only bound by com"mon Duty and Allegiance, but farther obliged by "ſpecial and extraordinary Ties of Gratitude and "Fidelity to the Crown, had, notwithſtanding, "held and maintained ſecret Correſpondencies by "Letters and other Tranſactions, tending to raiſe "Mutinies in ſome of his Majeſty's Forces, and "ſtir up Sedition amongſt his People, and other "traiterous Deſigns and Practices. And that when, "to bring the ſaid Duke to anſwer what might be "objected againſt him, his Majeſty had given Or"der to one of his Serjeants at Arms to uſe all dili"gence to apprehend him, his Majeſty's Miniſter "was ill treated, and contemptuouſly reſiſted, not "without the Knowledge of the ſaid Duke himſelf, "who, as conſcious of his Demerits, had now ſe"cretly eſcaped and withdrawn himſelf, and did "hide in Places obſcure and unknown: Therefore "his Majeſty commands the ſaid Duke to render "himſelf to one of his Majeſty's Secretaries of State "or his Lieutenant of the Tower, charging all his "Subjects to be diligent to apprehend him, and "threatning all Severity to thoſe who ſhould har"bour or conceal him.

Places and Preferments.

Proclamation for apprehending the Duke of Bucks.

1666. 18Car.II.

In Ireland the Garriſon of Karickfergus fell into a Mutiny about the middle of May, proteſting in a Declaration, under their Hands, againſt diverting the publick Money to other Uſes when it was deſigned for their Pay: They turn'd their Officers out of Town, and poſſeſs'd themſelves of the Caſtle, and were making themſelves a formidable Party; but the Earl of Arran with four Companies of the Royal Regiment, being ſent from Dublin in the Dartmouth Frigat to reduce them, forc'd them from the Walls of the Town, and purſued them to the Caſtle, where they defended themſelves with great Obſtinacy, till his Grace the Lord Lieutenant himſelf arrived with ſome of his Horſe Guards, and made them yield upon Diſcretion. The Tories were very inſolent and troubleſome, one Gorſteloe at the Head of a great Party of them aſſaulted the Caſtle of Cornet-Ormſby in the County of Mayo, and took it. In Ulſter ſeveral other Parties of them got together and did much Miſchief. Sir James Ware, his Majeſty's Auditor General, died at Dublin on Saturday Dec. 1. and was buried there the Tueſday following, his Place being conferred on his Son, who was on St. Andrew's Day ſworn in the Exchequer.

Iriſh Affairs.

In Scotland the rigid Presbyterians were as mutinous as the Popiſh Tories were in Ireland. Fifteen hundred of them got into a Body, and by degrees formed themſelves into an Army, having their Foot commanded by one Wallace, and their Horſe by one Lairmont, formerly a Taylor; moſt of the other Leaders of their Troops were caſhier'd Preachers, by whoſe Advice they all took the Covenant at Lanrick, and being drawn up for Battle on Pentland Hills, their Word was, The Covenant. They were abſolutely defeated and diſpers'd by the King's Forces, who had on their Right Wing his Majeſty's two Troops of Guards, and the Major Generals Troop making four Squadrons; and on the Left the Lieutenant General Duke Hamilton, the Earls of Athol and Aysby, and many other Noblemen. Of the Rebels about 500 were kill'd, and 100 taken Priſoners, of which moſt were executed. After the quieting of this dangerous Inſurrection, the Convention of the Eſtates met at Edinburgh in January, and fell immediately upon the effectual Means of ſecuring the Kingdom from publick and domeſtick Dangers, and of putting the ſame into a poſture of Defence, and of raiſing ſix thouſand Pounds Engliſh by the Month, to maintain ſuch Forces as ſhould be employ'd in his Majeſty's Service.

Tueſday Aug. 14. was with Joy and Devotion obſerv'd as a Day of Thankſgiving for the ſignal Victory it pleaſed God lately to give his Majeſty's Fleet over the Dutch, with a Form of publick Thankſgiving compoſed for that Occaſion, and an excellent Sermon preach'd before his Majeſty at Whitehall by the Reverend Dr. Dolben, Clerk of the Closet and Dean of Weſtminſter, publiſhed by his Majeſty's ſpecial Command. This Example ſet in the

State of Religion.

1666. 18 Car. II.

the Cities of London and Weſtminſter on Aug. 14. was by like Authority follow'd in all Parts of England upon Thurſday Aug. 23. A Proclamation was given September 13. in a very pious and affectionate Style, for enjoining a General Faſt to be obſerv'd throughout England and Wales, to be ſolemnly obſerv'd on [a] Wedneſday October 10. upon occaſion of the late dreadful Fire in London. And by Act of Parliament the ſecond of September was to be annually obſerv'd within the Bills of Mortality, for a Day of Faſting and Humiliation, with a publick Office preſcrib'd for that purpoſe. The dreadful Plague had by ſlow degrees abated, but was not perfectly extinct till the beginning of this cold Winter, when Nov. 14. his Majeſty in Council was pleaſed to order, that Tueſday the twentieth of this Month ſhould be obſerv'd in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and the ſeveral Pariſhes within the Weekly Bills of Mortality, as a Day of Thankſgiving to God for aſſwaging the late Contagion and Peſtilence.

Annual Thankſgiving on Sept. 2.

Dangers of Popery.

The Fears and Jealouſies of Popery were very juſt and very great, and were chiefly owing to the Mediations of the Queen-Mother in France, the private Sollicitations of the Duke of York, and the unhappy perverſion of his Ducheſs, the like Inclinations of the new Miniſtry, and eſpecially of Bennet and Clifford; and the King's own Diſpoſition to any thing that he was told ſhould be conſiſtent with his Intereſts and Pleaſures. The Lords and Commons in Parliament, tho' ſo many of the Members were themſelves a part of the Court, Camp and Miniſtry, would not be ſilent under theſe imminent Perils, but agreed in a zealous Addreſs to the King for executing the Laws againſt Popiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits, who were labouring to pervert his Majeſty's Subjects; and for maintaining the true Religion eſtabliſh'd in the Church of England. Which concurrent Senſe of the two Houſes could not ſuffer the King to do leſs than to publiſh a Proclamation Nov. 10. [b] for the Baniſhment of all Popiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits, and putting the Laws in ſpeedy and due execution againſt all other Popiſh Recuſants; his Majeſty therein declaring, "That he had ſeriouſly "conſider'd of the late Addreſs and humble Deſire "made to him by the Lords Spiritual and Tempo- "ral and Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſem- "bled, for ſuppreſſing the Inſolencies of the Papiſts; "and accepting with much contentment their great "Care for the preſervation of the true Religion e- "ſtabliſh'd in this Kingdom; and therefore he had "thought fit to charge and require all Popiſh "Prieſts and Jeſuits to depart the Kingdom before "Decemb. 10. next enſuing, upon pain of having "the Laws and Statutes of this Realm inflicted up- "on them, the Magiſtrates and Officers in all Ports "having Order upon their declaring themſelves [c], "to aſſiſt them in ſeeing them ſhipp'd and ſent a- "way; and charging the Judges and all Magiſtrates "and Miniſters of Juſtice to put the Laws in exe- "cution againſt all Papiſt Recuſants, and ſuch as "are ſuſpected ſo to be, in order to their Convicti- "on; and that in their reſpective Courts, Aſſizes, "Goal-deliveries, and Quarter-Seſſions, they pub- "lickly give the Laws in charge againſt them; and "that the Judges of Aſſize in their Returns give an "Account of their Proceedings therein to the Chan- "cellor for the time being.

Addreſs of both Houſes to ſuppreſs the Inſolence of the Papiſts.

A Proclamation enſues.

Caſe of the Diſſenters.

The Proteſtant Diſſenters were by the King's principle of Government as much unmoleſted as the Juſtices and Magiſtrates would poſſibly allow; and the deſtruction of Churches, and diſperſion of the Clergy of London, gave the Nonconformiſt Preachers a better opportunity of gathering Congregations to them, their own Hiſtory tells us, "This unhappy Fire "made the way of the Nonconformiſts yet the "plainer to them: For the Churches being burnt, "and the Pariſh Miniſters gone, for want of Places "and Maintenance, the People's Neceſſities became "unqueſtionable, for they had no Places now to "worſhip God in, ſaving a few Churches that were "left ſtanding, which would not hold any conſi- "derable part of them. Whereupon the Noncon- "formiſts open'd publick Meeting Houſes, and were "very full: And as Circumſtances then ſtood, to "have forbid the People to hear them, had been in "effect to forbid them all publick Worſhip of God, "and require them to live like Atheiſts.

Repreſented by themſelves.

1667.

Commiſſioners for publick Accounts.

His Majeſty at the cloſe of the laſt Seſſion had promiſed his two Houſes of Parliament, that he would conſtitute Commiſſioners for taking the Accounts of the ſeveral Sums of Monies which had been raiſed and aſſign'd to his Majeſty, during the preſent great and important Wars, to the end that his Majeſty and his People might be ſatisfied in the faithful Application and Expence of them. In diſcharge of this Royal Word and Promiſe, the King granted a Commiſſion under his Great Seal of England to John Earl of Bridgewater, Oliver Earl of Bolingbrook, Robert Earl of Ailesbury, Edward Viſcount Conway, John Lord Lucas, and John Lord Crew, Peers of this Realm, together with Sir William Lowther, Sir Tho. Meares, Sir Humphry Winch, Sir Tho. Littleton, Sir William Thompſon, Sir Thomas Osborne, Sir Thomas Gower, Col. Sam. Sandys, Giles Strangways, William Garway, Edward Boſcowen and John Jones, Eſquires, being Members of the Houſe of Commons, with full Power to examine and ſtate the ſaid Accounts; and they open'd their Commiſſion on Wedneſday April 17. by which manner of Proceeding it appear'd, that the Enquiry into publick Accounts was hitherto reſerv'd to the King, and by him graciouſly promiſed to the People, and purſued in a Method that ſeem'd to ſignify, the Lords were as much concern'd in this matter as the Commons.

Negotiations for a Peace with Holland.

The Ambaſſadors Extraordinary from Sweden (who took leave of his Majeſty in a ſolemn Audience on April 26.) were Mediators for a Treaty of Peace with the Dutch to be negotiated at Breda: And for the Management of it the King appointed the Right Honourable Denzil Lord Hollis, one of the Lords of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council, and the Honourable Henry Coventry, Eſq; of his Majeſty's Bed-Chamber, his Ambaſſadors Extraordinary for the ſaid Treaty, who took their leave of his Majeſty on May 1. and arriving in few Days at Breda, made their publick Entry there in a very ſolemn [d] manner, and fell upon adjuſting the Preliminaries of a common Treaty, which being ſettled about the beginning of June, the Ambaſſadors of England,

[a] Dr. Sancroft, Dean of Paul's, preach'd before his Majeſty. Dr. Seth Ward, Biſhop of Exeter, before the Lords; and Mr. Stillingfleet and Mr. Frampton before the Commons.

[b] See a large Preface to the Romaniſts, dated Novemb. 10. 1666. Prefix'd to the Hiſtory of Romiſh Treaſons and Uſurpations. Fol.

[c] This Zeal againſt the Papiſts proceeded from a general Suſpicion that the City had been fir'd by the Papiſts: And the wiſer People underſtood, that Hubert the Frenchman, who confeſs'd himſelf the prime Incendiary, was really a French Papiſt, tho' he was to be call'd a Huguenot. The ſober Writer of An Anſwer to the Apology of the Papiſts in behalf of the Proteſtants, 1667. 4*to*. ſays thus to the Popiſh Author: (ſuppos'd to be Roger Palmer—E. of Caſtlemain) You call Hubert your Enemy, and a Huguenot Proteſtant; which Hubert, after Father Harvey had had him in Confeſſion, did indeed affirm himſelf to be a Proteſtant; but then being ask'd whether he meant an Huguenot, (which it ſeems was beyond his Inſtructions to ſay) he earneſtly denied that, as he very well might: For he then alſo declared, that he believ'd Confeſſion to a Prieſt was neceſſary to his Salvation; and being admoniſh'd to call upon God, he repeated an Ave-mary, which was his uſual Prayer. So that it evidently appears, that he was not either Huguenot or Proteſtant, nor your Enemy upon any account of Religion.

[d] The Artifices of France in keeping this Peace in ſuſpence for their own Terms upon it, are to be ſeen in the Letters now written by our prime Miniſters of State. The Earl of Arlington to the Lord Sandwich in Spain, Feb. 21. 166$\frac{6}{7}$.— His Majeſty hath not yet received any Anſwer to his Letter from Holland: The Party of the Univerſality ſhew a great Diſpoſition to embrace the Offer; but the Party influenc'd by

1667. 19 Car. II.

England, France and Sweden, the Plenipotentiaries of the States, and of Denmark, repaired to the Caſtle belonging to the Prince of Orange, and fell upon the Buſineſs of a general Accommodation with great Care and Diligence. Mr. Coventry, one of the Engliſh Ambaſſadors, to prepare for the finiſhing Stroaks was ſent over to the Engliſh Court for a private Conference with the King and his Cabinet Council, and came back with the full Reſolutions of Agreement. So that on June 21. the Articles were ſign'd by the ſeveral Miniſters; yet the Inſtruments of Ratification were not interchang'd till Auguſt 14. when the Peace was immediately proclaim'd before the Doors of all the Plenipotentiaries; and was publiſh'd by Proclamation in the City of London on Aug. 24. and was afterward confirm'd by an additional Treaty, concluded by Sir William Temple in January following.

Made and publiſh'd.

Falſe ſteps in this Affair.

There was this falſe ſtep in the Management of this Affair, that the King conſented to a Motion for this Treaty without requiring a Ceſſation of Arms: and yet imagin'd that the commencing of a Treaty would of it ſelf as effectually bring on that Ceſſation. So the King in a reliance upon the Honour of the Dutch, that they would not be open Enemies while they were treating to be Friends; and being eaſily inclin'd to ſave ſo great a part of the Revenue for other occaſions, ſet out no Fleet, and ſeem'd to make no Preparations for it. The Dutch took their Advantage of this Negligence and Security, and appeared abroad at Sea with a Fleet of above 70 Sail; and well knowing that our great Ships were laid up, they rode in triumph upon our Coaſts, and at the Mouth of the Thames, and ſeeing no oppoſition they ſailed up to the Medway, and made themſelves Maſters of the Fort of Sheerneſs, tho' ſtoutly defended by Sir Edward Spragge. To ſtop their farther Progreſs ſeveral Veſſels were ſunk about Muſcle-Bank, the narroweſt part of the River, and a ſtrong Chain was put croſs, and the Lord General, the Duke of Albemarle, was got down there with a Land Force to oppoſe them. But having the Advantage of an Eaſterly Wind and a ſtrong Tide, they preſt on and broke through the Chain, and burnt the three Ships that lay to guard it, the Mathias, the Unity and the Charles the Fifth, all three Dutch Ships taken in the preſent War, damaging many other of our Veſſels, and carrying along with them the Hull of the Royal Charles, which was twice fired by the Engliſh and as often quench'd by the Enemy. They advanc'd with ſix Men of War and five Fireſhips as far as Upnore-Caſtle, and burnt the Royal-Oak, and much injur'd the Loyal-London and the Great James, which they left moſt part under Water: And after all this Inſult and Miſchief, they fell down the River again with no great Damage to themſelves but the running a-ground two of their Men of War, which they were forc'd to ſet on Fire.

Advantage taken by the Dutch coming up the River.

Conſternation at Court.

The Conſternation at Court, and in the City of London was extremely great. An Eye Witneſs has thought fit to give this Account of it. "I was on "June 10. in the Morning walking in St. James's "Park, when a Gentleman whiſper'd to me, that "the Dutch were enter'd the River. Then the King "had fed his Ducks, and was walking on the Weſt "ſide of the Park; and as we walked Prince Rupert overtook us, and met the King at the farther "end of the Pall-Mall; and the King told the "Prince how he had ſhot a Duck, and ſuch a Dog "fetch'd it; and ſo they walked on till they came "to St. James's Houſe, and there the King ſaid to "the Prince, Let's go ſee Cambridge and Kendal (the "Duke's two Sons who then lay a dying) but upon his return to Whitehall he found all in an Uproar, the Counteſs of Caſtlemain (as 'twas ſaid) "bewailing above all others, that ſhe ſhould be the "firſt torn in pieces.—— I was at London in the "Plague and Fire Years, yet in neither did I obſerve ſuch Conſternation and Confuſion in the "Looks of all Men, as at this time, and with great "Cauſe: For if the Dutch had then come up to "London they had found all open to them; [a] not one "Gun mounted at Tilbury-Fort, nor one Frigot "ready in the River, ſo as they might have forced "all the Ships in the River up to the Bridge, and "there have burnt them, which would have "certainly fired the Tower and all the Suburbs "Weſt to Blackwall, as well as Southwark below "Bridge.

Mr. Roger Cook.

Other Attempts of the Dutch.

When the Dutch got out to Sea again, they made many other Attempts of Bravery, or rather Revenge; even after the Peace was actually concluded at Breda, they ſail'd to Portſmouth with a Deſign upon our Ships in that Harbour, but finding them too well ſecured by the Diligence of the Earl of Macclesfield and Captain Eliot (whom the King had ſent thither for that purpoſe) they appear'd before Plymouth on July 15. and made an Attempt upon Torbay on July 19. but were beaten off; then they ſtood Eaſtward, and again enter'd the River of Thames on July 23. and got above 25 Sail into Tilbury-Hope, where we had all our Naval Strength lying, about 18 Men of War and Fireſhips. Sir Edward Spragge who Commanded this Engliſh Squadron was unluckily abſent when the Dutch came firſt up to them; and therefore the Dutch with their Fireſhips did ſome conſiderable Miſchief; but Sir Edward returning on Ship-board, and being ſoon after join'd with a ſmall Squadron from Harwich under Sir Joſeph Jordan, the Dutch were glad to fall down the River again, with as much Damage to themſelves as to us. After this they bid defiance to the Town of Harwich, and landed three thouſand Men near Felſtone-Cliff, and made two Aſſaults upon Languard-Fort, and made a ſtand againſt the Train'd-Bands, under Command of the Earl of Suffolk, and without any great loſs or execution they imbark'd and ſailed away again for the River Thames, and came up once more as far as Hull-Haven, and engaged the Squadron of Sir Edward Spragge, made up of the Succeſs and 18 other Men of War; where the Encounter was ſo ſharp that the Engliſh ſtood off for Graveſend, and left the Dutch at Anchor in the Hope; but they ſoon fell down to the Buoy in the Nore, and leaving Sir Edward Spragge the Honour of ſeeming to purſue them, they got to Sea again, and made to the Weſtern Coaſts, and attempted to land firſt at Wenbury in Devonſhire, and then near Cawland in Cornwal, and hover'd about with continual Alarms and Offers of Deſcent, till not be-

France would fain elude it: They are expecting Reſolutions from France, &c.——The ſame to the Duke of Ormond, Feb. 18. 1667.——And again to the Earl of Sandwich in Spain, dated Whitehall, Feb. 18. 1667.——France, whom his Majeſty endeavoured by my Lord St. Albans to render inclinable to the Peace, ſhew'd at firſt a great Eaſineſs in it, but ſince they ſeem to have humour'd the Dutch, in inſiſting upon unreaſonable Conditions, ſo as we have cauſe to doubt their Sincerity towards us. And tho' in a Letter they wrote lately to the States they recommended to them the coming to treat at Dover, yet that Letter is full of ſo many malicious Reflections on his Majeſty, that we can by no means like it; and among them one notorious Untruth, where they ſay, my Lord St. Albans was in that Court with a full Power to treat the Peace there, for which they give a ſcurvy Excuſe, that if they had thought of it they would not have put it in.——Earl of Arlington's Letters, Vol. II. p. 221.

[a] Of the great Security and Negligence that gave the Dutch Encouragement to come up the River, &c. See Gumble's Life of General Monk, 8*vo.* p. 449.—That the French ſet them on, is thus intimated by the Earl of Arlington in his Letter to our Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Whitehall, June 10. 1667.—By what you find in the incloſed Relation, you will ſee the Affront and Spoil the Enemy hath made upon us at Chatham, and from all our Letters, what a Conſternation is put upon this Town.—They are deſigning new Miſchief upon expecting the French to join with them therein.——

ing

1667. 19 Car. II.

ing able any longer to diſſemble their knowledge of a Peace, De Ruyter invited ſome of the Corniſh Gentlemen on Board him, and gave them a liberal Entertainment; and excuſing ſome of his later Acts of Hoſtility, he diſmiſt them civilly and ſail'd home.

No ſatisfaction made for theſe Inſults.

It was ſome wonder to the wiſer Men, that theſe hoſtile Attempts of the Dutch did not ſeem at all to interrupt or retard the depending Treaty; there ſeem'd to be no thoughts of Repriſal, or of any demand of Satisfaction; nay, to obviate the Expectance of any Reparation, this Article was inſerted, That all Offences, Injuries, Damages, and Loſſes ſuſtained on either ſide by the King and States, or their Subjects, during this War, or at any time before, upon any Cauſe or Pretence whatſoever, be totally expunged and buried in Oblivion: With another 4th Article, That all Ships, Goods and Moveables which had come at any time into the Power of either Party, or their Subjects, ſhould remain with the preſent Poſſeſſors thereof, without any Compenſation or Reſtitution for the ſame, without any exception of Time, Place or Things.

Fall of the Earl of Clarendon.

The Miſcarriages of this Summer made it neceſſary that ſome one great Miniſter of State ſhould bear the Odium of 'em, and be given up for a Sacrifice to the murmuring part of the People. In purſuance of this common Policy, on Aug. 31. his Majeſty thought fit to take the Great Seal from his faithful Miniſter the Earl of Clarendon, and give it to Sir Orlando Bridgman, with the Title of Lord [a] Keeper; and by that Mark of Diſgrace to give up the Lord Clarendon to the Malice of his Enemies, who ſoon hunted him into Impeachment and Baniſhment; though, no doubt, the greateſt Diſpleaſure taken at him, was for his heartily oppoſing Popery, and thoſe new Miniſters who were the profeſs'd Favourers and Promoters of it. The King diſcharg'd this wiſe Counſellor when he had greateſt need of him; for he had within few Months before loſt his other greateſt Stateſman, the Lord Treaſurer Southampton; and the King not knowing where to find a ſingle Perſon of equal Capacity for ſo great a Truſt, made Commiſſioners for executing the Office of Lord High Treaſurer of England, his Grace the Duke of Albemarle Lord General, the Right Honourable the Lord Aſhley Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Thomas Clifford, Comptroller of the Houſhold, Sir William Coventry and Sir John Duncomb Knights and Privy Counſellors.

Commiſſioners for the Treaſury.

The Terrors of the Dutch Fleet made another great Alteration in calling the Parliament together before their time; for the King was ſo ſurpriz'd, and the Miniſtry ſo afraid, that on June 26. his Majeſty declared by Proclamation, That whereas the Parliament now in being did ſtand Prorogued till the 10th Day of October next, his Majeſty having had reaſon to believe at the time of the ſaid Prorogation, that his Affairs might have permitted the Attendance of the Members of both Houſes on his Majeſty's Service and their own Occaſions in their reſpective Countries until that time; his Majeſty now finding this his Kingdom invaded during a Treaty of Peace, and eſteeming himſelf ever moſt ſafe in the Advice and Affection of his People, in Parliament, hath therefore thought fit to call together both his Houſes of Parliament, ſtraitly charging and commanding all and every the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and all Knights, Citizens, Burgeſſes, and Barons of the Cinque-Ports, that they and every of them do perſonally appear, re-aſſemble themſelves, and give their Attendance at Weſtminſter on the 25th Day of July next, then and there to treat of the weighty Affairs of his Majeſty's Kingdom.

Parliam. to meet before their time.

1667. 19 Car. II.

In Obedience to this his Majeſty's Proclamation, on Thurſday the 25th of July the two Houſes aſſembled at Weſtminſter [b], and upon his Majeſty's Deſires, made known to them by the Lord Chancellor, adjourn'd till Monday the 29th inſtant, at which time his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords with the uſual Ceremonies, and made a gracious Speech to the two Houſes, “excuſing the Trouble of extraordinary Attendance, and telling them the Occaſions of their Meeting were now leſs urgent, and therefore he could again diſmiſs them to the Day formerly prefix'd, and ſhould take an Opportunity, in the mean while, to do ſome things which he hoped would not be unwelcome to them; and ſo Prorogu'd them to the 10th of October.

King's Speech.

Accordingly on Thurſday Octob. 10. his Majeſty with the uſual Solemnity came into the Houſe of Lords, where the Houſe of Commons with their Speaker attending him, his Majeſty in a ſhort Speech acquainted them, “That at their laſt Meeting, about eleven Weeks ſince, he thought fit to Prorogue them to this Day, reſolving there ſhould be a Seſſion now, and in the mean while giving himſelf time to do ſome things which he hoped would not be unwelcome to them, but be a Foundation for a greater Confidence between them for the future; which things he had ſince done, and would therefore now leave the other Reaſons of their Prorogation, with ſome other Matters of which he was pleaſed to acquaint them, to be declared by the Lord Keeper. And accordingly the new Lord Keeper Bridgman, in Obedience to his Majeſty's Commands, began in a larger Speech to acquaint the two Houſes with “his Majeſty's farther Reaſons for the late Prorogation, together with his Deſires of recommending to their Wiſdom the Obſtructions of foreign Commerce, and the Settlement of ſuch a Balance of Trade between the Subjects of this Kingdom and thoſe of Scotland, that we may not be prejudiced by the Import of their Commodities hither, nor yet they ſo far diſcourag'd as to leave off Trading here, and find out another Vent abroad; in which his Majeſty had uſed ſome Endeavours, but found it too hard for him without the Aſſiſtance of his Parliament. That as to the Accounts of the Monies given towards the War, which his Majeſty formerly promiſed ſhould be given them, his Majeſty had commanded his Officers to make them ready; and ſince that way of Commiſſion wherein he put the Examination of them had been ineffectual, his Majeſty was willing the Parliament ſhould follow their own method to examine them in what way and as ſtrictly as they pleaſed, aſſuring them he will leave every one concerned to ſtand or fall according to his own Innocency or Guilt. That his Majeſty having reaſon to believe, that ſome diſaffected Perſons taking Advantage of the publick Neceſſity, had ſpread abroad Diſcourſes and Rumours reflecting upon the Government; yet his Majeſty promis'd himſelf, from the good Affections of his Parliament, King's ſecond Speech.

Lord Keeper's Speech.

[a] The Earl of Arlington tells the Lord Sandwich in a Letter, dated, Whitehall, Septemb. 5. 1667. —His Majeſty hath taken the Seals from the Lord Chancellor, and given them to my Lord Bridgman, with a great deal of Satisfaction to the World, and to himſelf; and he hopes, that rectifying ſome other important things before the Parliament, he may expect they will deliver him out of the Straits he is ſo unhappily fall'n into.——Letters of Lord Arlington, Vol. II. p. 235.

[b] I have by me the original Letter of Sir William Coventry to his Brother Henry Coventry Eſq; Ambaſſador at Breda, dated July 26. 1667.——The Parliament met at the Day; and after the Speaker took the Chair, he told us that the King had ſent for him the Night before, and told him he believed the Houſe would be thin, ſo would have us adjourn till Monday next. But that did not ſerve the turn; but we paſſed a Vote to ſend the Privy Counſellors (which were Members) to the King, to deſire, that ſo ſoon as the Peace was made he would diſband the new raiſed Troops; which being done, the Houſe adjourned till Monday. Much Anger there is ſtirring; where it will fall, I cannot tell.

“ that

"that every one of them, in their ſeveral Places, "would endeavour to preſerve a good Underſtanding betwixt him and his People: Adding, That if "any juſt Grievances ſhall have happen'd, his Majeſty will be as willing and ready to redreſs them "for the future, as they to have them repreſented: "His Majeſty not doubting but that they will give "healing and moderate Counſels, and imprint that "known Truth into his Subjects Hearts, that there "is no diſtinct Intereſt betwixt the King and his "People, but that the good of the one is the good "of both.

Proceedings of the Commons.

The Houſe of Commons took into Conſideration his Majeſty's gracious Speech, and reſolved upon an Addreſs of Thanks to his Majeſty, in which they deſired and obtained the Concurrence of the Lords: Accordingly on Octob. 15. after Noon, the two Houſes in a Body, with their Speakers, attended his Majeſty in the Banquetting-Houſe at Whitehall, where the Lord Keeper, as Speaker of the Houſe of Lords, in the Name of the two Houſes, made this following Addreſs to his Majeſty.

Addreſs to the K.

"WE your Majeſty's Loyal and Faithful Sub-"jects, the Lords and Commons in Par-"liament aſſembled, having taken into our ſerious "Conſideration your Majeſty's gracious Speech, "wherein you were pleaſed to let us know, that "your Majeſty thought fit to Prorogue this Parlia-"ment till the 10th of October, that you might give "your ſelf time to do ſomething which would not "be unwelcome, but a Foundation for a greater "Confidence for the future between your Majeſty "and your People; we find ourſelves bound in "Duty to return your Majeſty our humble and "hearty Thanks for the gracious Declaration of "your Royal Intentions in that your Majeſty's "gracious Speech, and in that deliver'd by your "Majeſty's Command by the Lord Keeper. And "particularly that your Majeſty hath been pleaſed "to diſband the late raiſed Forces, and to diſmiſs "the Papiſts from out your Guards and other mili-"tary Employments: For your Majeſty's Care in "quickening the Execution of the Act for reſtrain-"ing the Importation of foreign Cattel: For cau-"ſing the Canary Patent to be ſurrender'd and va-"cated: And that, more eſpecially, your Majeſty "hath been pleaſed to diſplace the late Lord Chan-"cellor, and remove him from the Exerciſe of "Publick Truſt and Employment in Affairs of "State.

King's Anſwer.

To which Addreſs his Majeſty was pleaſed to make his Return to this effect: That he thanked the Houſes for their Thanks; that he was glad that what he had done had ſo well pleaſed them; and, that for what concerned the Earl of Clarendon, he ſhould not, during his Life, be employed in any Places of Publick Truſt.

Caſe of the E. of Clarendon.

As to the Caſe of this great Man, the Earl of Clarendon; It was on Octob. 26. that Mr. Edward Seymour charg'd him in the Houſe of Commons vivâ voce [a] with many great Crimes: whereupon, after a long Debate upon the manner of Proceeding, a Committee was appointed to reduce the Accuſation to Heads, and preſent them to this Houſe. And accordingly on Novemb. 6. Sir Thomas Littleton reported, that the Accuſation was reduced to Heads, which he read in his Place, and afterward delivered the ſame in at the Clerk's Table; which are as followeth:

Charge againſt him.

I. "That the Earl of Clarendon hath deſigned a "Standing Army to be raiſed, and to govern the "Kingdom thereby, and adviſed the King to diſ-"ſolve this preſent Parliament, to lay aſide all "Thoughts of Parliaments for the future, to go-"vern by a military Power, and to maintain the "ſame by free Quarter and Contribution.

II. "That he hath, in the Hearing of the King's "Subjects, falſly and ſeditiouſly ſaid, That the King "was in his Heart a Papiſt, or Popiſhly affected; "or Words to that effect.

III. "That he hath received great Sums of Mo-"ney for the procuring of the Canary Patent, and "other illegal Patents; and granted illegal Injun-"ctions to ſtop Proceedings at Law againſt them, "and other illegal Patents formerly granted.

IV. "That he hath adviſed and procured divers "of his Majeſty's Subjects to be impriſoned againſt "Law, in remote Iſlands, Garriſons, and other "Places, thereby to prevent them from the Benefit "of the Law, and to produce Preſidents for the "impriſoning any other of his Majeſty's Subjects "in like manner.

V. "That he procured his Majeſty's Cuſtoms to "be farmed at Under-rates, knowing the ſame; "and great pretended Debts to be paid by his Ma-"jeſty, to the Payment of which his Majeſty was "not in ſtrictneſs bound; and afterwards received "great Sums of Money for procuring the ſame.

VI. "That he received great Sums of Money "from the Company of Vintners, or ſome of them, "or their Agents, for inhancing the Prizes of "Wines, and for freeing them from the Payment "of legal Penalties which they had incurred.

VII. "That he hath in a ſhort time gained to "himſelf a greater Eſtate than can be imagined to "be gained lawfully in ſo ſhort a time, and, con-"trary to his Oath, he hath procured ſeveral Grants "under the Seal, from his Majeſty to himſelf and "Relations, of ſeveral of his Majeſty's Lands, He-"reditaments, and Leaſes, to the Diſprofit of his "Majeſty.

VIII. "That he hath introduced an Arbitrary "Government in his Majeſty's foreign Plantations, "and hath cauſed ſuch as complained thereof be-"fore his Majeſty and Council, to be long impri-"ſoned for ſo doing.

IX. "That he did reject and fruſtrate a Propoſal "and Undertaking approved by his Majeſty for the "Preſervation of Nevis and St. Chriſtopher's, and "reducing the French Plantations to his Majeſty's "Obedience, after the Commiſſions were drawn for "that purpoſe; which was the Occaſion of our "great Loſſes and Damage in thoſe Parts.

X. "That he held Correſpondence with Cromwel and his Complices when he was in Parts be-"yond the Seas attending his Majeſty, and thereby "adhered to the King's Enemies.

XI. That he adviſed and effected the Sale of "Dunkirk to the French King, being part of his "Majeſty's Dominions, together with the Ammu-"nitions, Artillery, and all ſorts of Stores there, "and for no greater Value than the ſaid Ammuni-"tions, Artillery, and Stores were worth.

XII. "That the ſaid Earl did unduly cauſe his "Majeſty's Letters Patents under the Great Seal of "England to one Dr. Crowther, to be alter'd, and "the Enrollment thereof to be unduly raſed.

XIII. "That he hath in an arbitrary way exami-"ned and drawn into queſtion divers of his Maje-"ſty's Subjects, concerning their Lands, Tene-"ments, Goods, Chattels, and Properties, deter-"mined thereof at the Council-Table, and ſtopped "Proceedings at Law by Order of the Council-Ta-"ble, and threatned ſome that pleaded the Statute "of 17 Car. 1.

[a] A late Author writes thus: The Count D'Eſtrades informs us, that it was by the Intrigues of the Count de Molina and the Baron Iſola, that Chancellor Hyde was diſgrac'd. But we can hardly think any thing good was intended by it, when the chief Promoter of it was Mr. Edward Seymour, whoſe whole Life cannot produce one Action that tended to the Good of the Commonwealth, except his taking Arms againſt King James at Exeter.

1667. 19*Car.* II.

XIV. “ That he hath cauſed Quo Warranto's to “ be iſſued out againſt moſt of the Corporations of “ England, immediately after their Charters were “ confirmed by Act of Parliament, to the Intent he “ might require great Sums of Money of them for “ renewing their Charters; which when they com- “ plied withal, he cauſed the ſaid Quo Warranto's “ to be diſcharged, and Proſecution therein to “ ceaſe.

XV. “ That he procured the Bills of Settlement “ of Ireland, and received great Sums of Money “ for the ſame in a moſt corrupt and unlawful man- “ ner.

XVI. “ That he hath deluded and betrayed his “ Majeſty and the Nation in all foreign Treaties “ and Negotiations relating to the late War, and “ betrayed and diſcovered his Majeſty's ſecret Coun- “ ſels to his Enemies.

XVII. “ That he was a principal Author of that “ fatal Council of dividing the Fleet about June “ 1666.

After a ſecond reading of theſe Heads of Accuſation, it was reaſonably moved, that in regard the Articles were many, they might be referr'd to the Committee to ſee how far they were true, becauſe Fame is too ſlender a ground to bring a Man upon the Stage. But this was carried in the negative; and the Articles were again ſingly and ſeparately read over, and ſeveral Members ſpoke to the Truth or Probability of them: And the Queſtion being put, Whether this Houſe hath ſufficient Inducement to Impeach, it was carried in the affirmative. And after farther Debate, whether to Impeach of Treaſon or high Miſdemeanors only, it was reſolved that an Impeachment of Treaſon, and other Crimes and Miſdemeanors, be carried up to the Lords againſt Edward Earl of Clarendon by Mr. Seymour; who on Novemb. 12. went up to the Houſe of Lords, and the Lord Keeper Bridgman being come to the Bar to meet him, he deliver'd himſelf to this purpoſe.

Reſolutions to impeach him.

My Lords,

Mr. Seymour's Speech at his carrying up the Impeachment.

THE Commons aſſembled in Parliament having been informed of ſeveral traiterous Practices, and other high Crimes and Miſdemeanors committed by Edward Earl of Clarendon, a Member of this honourable Houſe, have commanded me to impeach him; and I do accordingly impeach him of High Treaſon, and other Crimes and Miſdemeanors, in the Name of the ſaid Commons, and of all the Commons of England. And they have farther commanded me to deſire your Lordſhips to ſequeſter him from Parliament, and to commit him to ſafe Cuſtody, and in convenient time they will exhibit Articles againſt him.

Lords not ſatisfied with this Proceeding.

The Lords were generally diſſatisfied with this Proceeding, and did not commit the Earl to Cuſtody, and gave this Reaſon for their not doing it, in a Conference with the Commons, Becauſe the Accuſation is only of Treaſon in general, without charging any thing in particular [a]. The Commons highly diſpleaſed at the Lords not committing the Earl, referred it to a Committee to bring in Reaſons why a Perſon generally charged by the Houſe of Commons for High Treaſon ought to be committed to ſafe Cuſtody, tho' the particular Treaſon be not ſpecified at the time of ſuch Charge. Which Reaſons and the Precedents to inforce them were communicated at a free Conference; after which, on December 2. the Lords ſent down a Meſſage to the Commons by two Judges to this effect, That upon the Report made to them of the laſt free Conference, they are not ſatisfied to commit or ſequeſter from Parliament the Earl of Clarendon, without the particular Treaſon be mention'd or aſſign'd. And in return the Commons did reſolve, That the Lords not having complied with the Deſire of the Commons in committing the Earl of Clarendon, and ſequeſtring him from Parliament upon the Impeachment from this Houſe, is an obſtruction to the publick Juſtice of the Kingdom, and is a Preſident of evil and dangerous Conſequence.

Difference between the two Houſes.

1667. 19*Car.* II.

The Earl ſeeing no hopes of allaying this Storm ſo raiſed againſt him, thought it moſt adviſeable to withdraw himſelf, and only to leave behind him ſome written Vindication of his Innocence and Honour, which he did in a Paper thus entitul'd.

The Earl withdraws and leaves a Paper.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, the Humble Petition and Addreſs of Edward Earl of Clarendon.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips,

“ I Cannot expreſs the inſupportable Trouble and “ Grief of Mind I ſuſtain under the Appre- “ henſion of being miſrepreſented to your Lord- “ ſhips; and when I hear how much of your Lord- “ ſhips time hath been ſpent upon the mention of “ me, as it is attended with more publick Conſe- “ quences, and of the Differences of Opinion which “ have already, or may probably ariſe between your “ Lordſhips and the Honourable Houſe of Com- “ mons, whereby the great and weighty Affairs of “ the Kingdom may be obſtructed in the time of ſo “ general a diſſatisfaction.

“ I am very unfortunate to find myſelf to ſuffer “ ſo much under two very diſadvantagious Re- “ flections, which are in no degree applicable to “ me.

“ The Firſt, from the greatneſs of my Eſtate and “ Fortune collected and made in ſo few Years, “ which if it be proportionable to what is report- “ ed, may very reaſonably cauſe my Integrity to be “ ſuſpected.

“ The Second, That I have been the ſole Mana- “ ger and chief Miniſter in all the Tranſactions of “ State ſince the King's return into England to Auguſt laſt, and therefore that all Miſcarriages and “ Misfortunes ought to be imputed to me and my “ Councils.

“ Concerning my Eſtate, your Lordſhips will not “ believe that after Malice and Envy have been ſo “ inquiſitive and ſo ſharp-ſighted, I will offer any “ thing to your Lordſhips but what is exactly true; “ and I do aſſure your Lordſhips, in the firſt place, “ that (excepting from the King's Bounty) I have “ never received nor taken one Penny but what was “ generally underſtood to be the juſt lawful Perqui- “ ſites of my Office, by the conſtant Practice of the “ beſt Times, which I did in my own Judgment “ conceive to be that of my L[d] Coventry and my L[d] “ Elſmere; the Practice of which I conſtantly ob- “ ſerved, altho' the Office in both their Times was “ lawfully worth double to what it was to me, and “ I believe now is. That all the Courteſies and Fa- “ vours which I have been able to obtain from the “ King for other Perſons in Church or State, or in “ Weſminſter-hall, have never been worth to me five “ Pounds: So that your Lordſhips may be confident “ I am as innocent from Corruption as from any “ diſloyal thought, which after near 30 Years Ser- “ vice of the Crown in ſome Difficulties and Di- “ ſtreſſes, I did never expect would be objected to “ me in my Age. And I do aſſure your Lordſhips, “ and ſhall make it very manifeſt, that the ſeveral

[a] See the Letter of Lord Arlington to the Earl of Sandwich in Spain, dated, Whitehall, Novemb. 28. 1667.—— All our Days are ſpent in attending the Parliament, where the Privileges of both Houſes, inſiſted on earneſtly by both, have yet delay'd the Progreſs. In the Impeachment of the Earl of Clarendon this Day, they had a free Conference upon this Matter; and to morrow 'tis likely either of the Houſes will accommodate to the other's Opinion, or ſo finally adhere, as the Impeachment will fall to the ground betwixt them.

Sums

1667. 19Car.II.

“ Sums of Money, and ſome parcels of Land, which “ his Majeſty hath bountifully beſtowed upon me, “ ſince his return into England, are worth more “ than all I have amounts unto; ſo far am I from “ advancing my Eſtate by indirect means. And “ tho' this Bounty of his hath very far exceeded my “ Merit or my Expectation, yet ſome others have “ been as fortunate at leaſt in the ſame Bounty,
“ who had as ſmall pretences to it, and have no
“ great reaſon to envy my Condition.

“ Concerning the other Imputation of the Credit
“ and Power of being Chief Miniſter, and ſo cauſing
“ all to be done that I had a mind to, I have no
“ more to ſay, than that I had the good Fortune
“ to ſerve a Maſter of a very great Judgment and “ Underſtanding, and be always join'd with Per-“ ſons of great Ability and Experience, without “ whoſe Advice and Concurrence never any thing “ hath been done.

“ Before his Majeſty's coming into England, he “ was conſtantly attended by the then Marquis of “ Ormond, the late Lord Culpeper, and Mr. Secre“ tary Nicholas, who were equally truſted with my “ ſelf, and without whoſe joint Advice and Concur“ rence, when they were all preſent (as ſome of “ them always were) I never gave any Council. As “ ſoon as it pleaſed God to bring his Majeſty into “ England, he eſtabliſhed his Privy Council, and “ ſhortly out of them he choſe a number of Honour“ able Perſons of great Reputation (who for the “ moſt part are ſtill alive) as a Committee for Fo“ reign Affairs, and Conſideration of ſuch things
“ as in the nature of them required much Secrecy,
“ and with theſe Perſons he vouchſafed to join me;
“ and I am confident this Committee never tranſact-
“ ed any thing of Moment (his Majeſty being al“ ways preſent) without preſenting the ſame firſt to
“ the Council Board, and I muſt appeal to them “ concerning my Carriage, and whether we were “ not all of one Mind in matters of Importance.

“ For more than two Years I never knew any “ Differences in the Councils, or that there were “ any Complaints in the Kingdom, which I whol“ ly impute to his Majeſty's great Wiſdom, and
“ the entire Concurrence of his Counſellors, with“ out the vanity of aſſuming any thing to myſelf:
“ And therefore I hope I ſhall not be ſingly char“ ged with any thing that hath ſince fallen out a“ miſs. But from the time Mr. Secretary Nicholas
“ was removed from his Place there were great Al“ terations; and whoſoever knew any thing of the “ Court and Councils, know well how much my “ Credit hath ſince that time been diminiſhed, tho'
“ his Majeſty graciouſly vouchſafed ſtill to hear my “ Advice in moſt of his Affairs: Nor hath there
“ been from that time to this above one or two “ Perſons brought to the Council, or preferred to “ any conſiderable Office in the Court, who have “ been of my intimate Acquaintance, or ſuſpected to “ have any kindneſs for me; and moſt of them moſt
“ notoriouſly known to have been very long my E“ nemies and of different Judgment and Principles
“ from me, both in Church and State, and have ta“ ken all opportunities to leſſen my Credit with the “ King, and with all other Perſons, by miſrepre-“ ſenting and miſreporting all that I ſaid or did;
“ and perſuading Men I have done them ſome pre“ judice with his Majeſty, or croſſed them in ſome
“ of their Pretenſions; tho' his Majeſty's Goodneſs
“ and Juſtice was ſuch, that it made little Impreſſi-
“ on upon him.

“ In my humble Opinion, the great Misfortunes
“ of the Kingdom have proceeded from the War, to “ which it is notoriouſly known, that I was always “ moſt averſe, and may without Vanity ſay, I did
“ not only foreſee, but declare the Miſchiefs we “ ſhould run into, by entring into a War before any “ Alliances made with the Neighbouring Princes,
“ and that it may not be imputed to his Majeſty's
“ want of Care, or the Negligence of his Counſel-
“ lors, that no ſuch Alliances were enter'd into, I “ muſt take the boldneſs to ſay, his Majeſty left “ nothing unattempted in order thereunto, and “ knowing this well, that France reſolv'd to begin
“ a War upon Spain, as ſoon as his Catholick Ma-“ jeſty ſhould depart this World, which being “ much ſooner expected by them, they had in the “ two Winters before been at great Charges in pro“ viding plentiful Magazines of all Proviſions upon
“ the Frontiers, that they might be ready for the “ War, his Majeſty uſed all poſſible Means to pre“ pare and diſpoſe the Spaniard with that Appre-
“ henſion, offering his Friendſhip to that degree
“ as might be for the Benefit and Security of both “ Crowns.

“ But Spain flattering itſelf that France would not “ break with them, at leaſt, that they would not “ give them any Cauſe, by adminiſtring matter of “ Jealouſy to them, never made any real Approach “ towards a Friendſhip with his Majeſty, but both
“ by their Ambaſſadors here, and to his Majeſty's
“ Ambaſſador at Madrid, always perſiſted as Preli“ minaries upon the giving up of Dunkirk, Tangier
“ and Jamaica.

“ Tho' France had an Ambaſſador here, to whom
“ a Project of a Treaty was offer'd, and the Lord
“ Hollis his Majeſty's Ambaſſador at Paris, uſed all “ Endeavours to purſue and proſecute the ſaid Trea“ ty, yet it was quickly diſcern'd, that the princi“ pal Deſign of France was to draw his Majeſty in-
“ to ſuch a nearer Alliance as might advance their “ Deſign, without which they had no mind to en“ ter into the Treaty propoſed. And this was the “ State of Affairs, when the War was enter'd in-
“ to with the Dutch, from which time neither “ Crown much conſider'd the making any Alliance
“ with England.

“ As I did from my Soul abhor the entring into
“ this War, ſo I preſumed never to give any Ad“ vice or Counſel for the way of managing it, but
“ by oppoſing many Propoſitions, which ſeemed to “ the late Lord Treaſurer and myſelf to be unrea-
“ ſonable, as the payment of the Seamen by Tickets,
“ and many other Particulars which added to the “ Expence, my Enemies took all occaſions to inveigh
“ againſt me, and making their Friendſhip with o“ thers out of the Council of more licentious Prin“ ciples, and who knew well enough how much I “ diſliked and complained of the Liberty they took
“ to themſelves of reviling all Counſels and Coun“ ſellors, and turning all things ſerious and ſacred
“ into Ridicule; they took all ways imaginable to “ render me ungrateful to all ſorts of Men (whom “ I ſhall be compelled to name in my defence) per-“ ſuading thoſe who miſcarried in any of their De“ ſigns, that it was the Chancellor's doing; where-
“ of I never knew any thing. However, they could “ not withdraw the King's Favour from me, who “ was ſtill pleaſed to uſe my Service with others, “ nor was there ever any thing done but with the “ joint Advice of at leaſt the major part of thoſe
“ who were conſulted with. And as his Majeſty “ commanded my Service in the late Treaties, ſo I “ never gave the leaſt Advice in private, nor wrote
“ one Letter to any one Perſon in either of thoſe
“ Negotiations but upon the Advice of the Council,
“ and alſo after it was read in Council, or at leaſt
“ by the King himſelf and ſome others: And if I “ prepared any Inſtructions or Memorials it was by
“ the King's Command, and the Requeſt of the “ Secretaries who deſired my Aſſiſtance: Nor was
“ it any Wiſh of my own, that any Ambaſſador
“ ſhould give me any Account of the Tranſactions,
“ but to the Secretaries, whom I was always rea“ dy to adviſe; nor am I conſcious to myſelf of “ ever having given Advice that both proved miſ“ chievous or inconvenient to his Majeſty; and I
“ have been ſo far from being the ſole Manager of

1667. 19 Car. II.

“ Affairs, that I have not in the whole laſt Year been above twice with his Majeſty in any Room alone, and very ſeldom in the two or three Years preceding. And ſince the Parliament at Oxford, it hath been very viſible that my Credit hath been very little, and that very few things have been hearken'd to, which have been propoſed by me, but contradicted eo nomine becauſe propoſed by me.

“ I moſt humbly beſeech your Lordſhips to remember the Office and Truſt I had for ſeven Years, in which, in diſcharge of my Duty, I was obliged to ſtop and obſtruct many Mens Pretences, and refuſed to ſet the Seal to many Pardons and other Grants, which would have been profitable to thoſe who procured them, and many whereof, upon my Repreſentation to his Majeſty, were for ever ſtopt, which naturally has raiſed many Enemies to me. And my frequent concurring, upon the Deſires of the late Lord Treaſurer (with whom I had the Honour to have a long and vaſt Friendſhip to his Death) in repreſenting ſeveral Exceſſes and Exorbitancies, the yearly Iſſue ſo far exceeding the Revenues, provok'd many Perſons concern'd, of great Power and Credit, to do me all the ill Offices they could. And yet I may faithfully ſay, that I never meddled with any part of the Revenue or the Adminiſtration of it, but when I was deſired by the late Lord Treaſurer to give him my Aſſiſtance and Advice, having had the Honour formerly to ſerve the Crown as Chancellor of the Exchequer, which was for the moſt part in his Majeſty's Preſence. Nor have I ever been in the leaſt degree concerned in point of Profit, in letting any part of his Majeſty's Revenue, nor have ever treated or debated it but in his Majeſty's Preſence, in which my Opinion concurr'd always with the major part of the Counſellors who were preſent.

“ All which upon Examination will be made manifeſt to your Lordſhips, how much ſoever my Integrity is blaſted by the Malice of thoſe who I am confident do not believe themſelves. Nor have I in my Life upon all the Treaties, or otherwiſe, received the value of one Shilling from all the Kings or Princes in the World (excepting the Books of the Louvre Print, ſent me by the Chancellor of France by that King's Direction) but from my own Maſter, to whoſe entire Service and the Good and Welfare of my Country, no Man's Heart was ever more devoted.

“ This being my preſent Condition, I do moſt humbly beſeech your Lordſhips to entertain a favourable Opinion of me, and to believe me to be innocent from thoſe foul Aſperſions, until the contrary ſhall be proved, which I am ſure can never be by any Man worthy to be believ'd: And ſince the Diſtempers of the Times, and the Difference between the two Houſes in the preſent Debate, with the Power and Malice of my Enemies, who gave out that I ſhould prevail with his Majeſty to prorogue or diſſolve this Parliament in Diſpleaſure, and threaten to expoſe me to the Rage and Fury of the People, may make me to be look'd upon as the Cauſe which obſtructs the King's Service, and Unity and Peace of the Kingdom.

“ I moſt humbly beſeech your Lordſhips, that I may not forfeit your Lordſhips Favour and Protection by withdrawing myſelf from ſo powerful a Perſecution, in hope that I may be able by ſuch withdrawing hereafter to appear, and make my Defence, when his Majeſty's Juſtice (to which I ſhall always ſubmit) may not be obſtructed or controuled by the Power and Malice of thoſe who have ſworn my Deſtruction.

CLARENDON.

1667. 19 Car. II

Upon News at Court of the Earls withdrawing, there was care taken to give this publick Advertiſement of it. Whitehall December 4. Yeſterday Morning became publick the firſt notice of the Earl of Clarendon's having withdrawn himſelf, but the time when he retired is not certain. This Afternoon his Majeſty was pleaſed to declare his Pleaſure in Council, that the ſaid Earl be put out of the Council, and remain henceforth diveſted of the Place of a Counſellor. The Lords, on Dec. 3. ſent a Meſſage to the Commons by two Judges, that they had received a large Petition from the Earl of Clarendon, which intimated that he was withdrawn. Whereupon the Commons order'd, that Sir Thomas Clifford, Comptroller of the King's Houſhold, be ſent to the King, to deſire the Ports may be ſtopped. And at a Conference between the two Houſes, the Duke of Buckingham deliver'd up the Earl's Petition in this way of Inſult and Deriſion; “ That the Lords had commanded him to deliver to the Commons that ſcandalous and ſeditious Paper ſent from the Earl of Clarendon: they bid me preſent it to you, and deſire you in convenient time to ſend it to them again; for it has a Style which they are in love with, and they deſire to keep it. This way of ridiculing the Afflictions of a great Man, and turning the Juſtice of the Nation into a Jeſt, could not but offend all ſober ſerious People, and made them the more capable of underſtanding Who it was Whom the Earl in his Paper chiefly meant, when he complained of ſome Enemies of more licentious Principles, who took to themſelves the Liberty of reviling all Counſels and Counſellors, and turning all things ſerious and ſacred into Ridicule.

Publick Account of the E.'s with-drawing.

Proceedings upon it in Parliament.

Inſult of the D. of Buck.

The Commons, to juſtify their own Proceeding, reſolved upon the Queſtion, That the Paper ſent to the Lords by the Earl of Clarendon, and by them ſent down to the Houſe of Commons, and now read, is ſcandalous and ſeditious, and doth reproach the King and the publick Juſtice of the Nation. And after a Motion and Debate for burning the Paper, or deſiring the Lords to burn it (as was done by the Hands of the common Hangman on Dec. 12.) and a Propoſal for bringing in a Bill of Attainder; the Houſe at laſt agreed in this Vote, Reſolved, that this Houſe taking notice of the Flight of the Earl of Clarendon, being under an Impeachment of High Treaſon by this Houſe, the King's Majeſty be humbly deſired to iſſue out his Proclamation for ſummoning the ſaid Earl to appear by a Day, and to apprehend him in order to his Trial. And Reſolved, To ſend to the Lords for their Concurrence to this Vote. But the Lords, who ſeemed to have a more favourable Opinion of the Perſon accuſed, as well as a Concern for their own Rights, would not concur; and on Dec. 14. deliver'd their Reaſons for not concurring, having the Day before ſent down to the Commons a Bill for baniſhing the ſaid Earl, and therefore now declaring, that their Lordſhips, upon Conſideration of the whole State of Affairs, and of the Kingdom, had, upon Grounds of Prudence and Juſtice, thought fit, for ſecuring of King and Kingdom, to proceed in a Legiſlative way againſt the ſaid Earl, and had to that end paſs'd and ſent down to them a Bill of Baniſhment and Incapacity againſt him. After many Speeches and Debates among the Commons, ſome being againſt the Bill, becauſe it went too far in condemning a Man before the Hearing of him; others oppoſing it upon a contrary Opinion, that the Penalties of Incapacity and Baniſhment were not adequate to the Crimes which that Houſe had charged againſt him; on Dec. 18. the Bill was read the third time, and the Queſtion being put for paſſing of it, ſixty five were for it, and forty two againſt it. And it eaſily obtained the Royal Aſſent; for it was indeed the wiſeſt Courſe to prevent a Legal Anſwer, and to ſtop the Diſcovery of ſome Secrets that muſt have been otherwiſe expoſed.

The Earl's Paper cenſur'd by the Commons.

A Bill of Baniſhment.

Paſs'd by the King.

This Summer the French King, with a mighty Army, had fallen into Flanders, and taken Charleroy, Actions of the French.

Oudenard,

Oudenard, Tournay, Doway, Courtrich, Liſle, and other Parts of the Spaniſh Netherlands; and had farther advanc'd his Conqueſts in Alſatia and Franche-Comte; that he began to ſtrike a Terror upon the Dutch, and a reaſonable Jealouſy upon the Engliſh, and to make it their mutual Intereſt and Inclination to ſtop the furious Progreſs of his Arms. Under this Diſpoſition the King ſent to Sir William Temple, his then Reſident at Bruſſels, to take joint Meaſures with the States for a defenſive Alliance againſt the French. The States being very apprehenſive of their Danger, did wiſely and readily comply with the Propoſals offer'd by Sir William, who ſtept over to wait on the King, and to take his more immediate Inſtructions, and within five Days after was ſent back with Powers to conclude a ſtricter Defenſive League between his Majeſty and the States General, which was ſoon concluded and ſigned at the Hague, and brought over to Whitehall by Mr. Temple, Brother to the Envoy on Jan. 19. And becauſe the Swedes ſoon after enter'd into it, it was call'd the Triple Alliance; ſo grateful to the Parliament, and ſo very pleaſing to the People, that it was of mighty Service to the King and his Miniſtry, and cover'd them a while from all Suſpicion of Popery and a French Intereſt.

Triple League.

On Decemb. 19. after paſſing the Bill againſt the Earl of Clarendon, and a Bill for taking the Publick Accounts, &c. the Parliament adjourned to Feb. 6. and then meeting, adjourned again to Monday, Feb. 10. on which Day his Majeſty was pleaſed to come to the Houſe of Lords, and having on his Crown and Robes, with the uſual Solemnity took his Seat, where the Houſe of Commons with their Speaker attending him, his Majeſty was pleaſed to expreſs himſelf to both Houſes in this following Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

"I Am glad to ſee you here again, to tell you " what I have done in this Interval; which " I am confident you will be pleaſed with, ſince it " is ſo much for the Honour and Security of this " Nation. I have made a League Defenſive with " the States of the United Provinces, and likewiſe a " League for an efficacious Mediation of Peace be- " tween the two Crowns; into which League that " of Sweden, by its Ambaſſador, hath offer'd to en- " ter as a Principal.

" I did not at our laſt Meeting move you for any " Aid, tho' I lie under great Debts contracted in the " laſt War; but now the Poſture of our Neighbours " abroad, and the Conſequence of this new Alliance, " will oblige me, for our Security, to ſet out a " conſiderable Fleet to Sea this Summer; and be- " ſides, I muſt build more great Ships; and 'tis as " neceſſary that I do ſome things in order to the " fortifying ſome of our Ports. I have begun ſome- " thing my ſelf in order to theſe Ends; but if I " have not your ſpeedy Aſſiſtance, I ſhall not be " able to go through with it. Wherefore I do ear- " neſtly deſire you to take it into your ſpeedy Con- " ſideration; for the loſs of a little time now, may " beget a Prejudice not to be repaired. And for the " ſettling a firm Peace as well at home as abroad, " one thing more I hold my ſelf obliged to recom- " mend to you at this preſent, which is, that you " would ſeriouſly think of ſome Courſe to beget a " better Union and Compoſure in the Minds of my " Proteſtant Subjects in Matters of Religion; where- " by they may be induced not only to ſubmit quiet- " ly to the Government, but alſo cheerfully give " their Aſſiſtance to the Support of it.

Peace with Spain and Portugal.

Nigh the ſame time, by the Mediation of the Earl of Sandwich, his Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary to Spain, and of Sir Robert Southwell [a], his Majeſty's Envoy to Portugal, a Peace was concluded between thoſe two Crowns, and the King of England declared the Mediator and Guarantee of it. So that all things ſeem'd to be put into a condition of reducing the exorbitant Power of France, and reſtoring the Balance of Europe.

Death of Great Men.

At the beginning of this Year, March 25. died the Earl of Cleveland, Captain of his Majeſty's Band of Penſioners; which Office was conferred on the Lord Bellaſis. On Wedneſday, May 22. died at the Palace of St. James's the Duke of Kendal, ſecond Son to his Royal Highneſs; and the Duke of Cambridge, his elder Brother, after a grievous and tedious Diſtemper, died at Richmond on Thurſday June 20. to the great Affliction of the Court. The wiſe and good Miniſter of State, Thomas Earl of Southampton, Lord High Treaſurer of England, died on May 16. at his Houſe in New Southampton Square. The excellent Poet Mr. Abraham Cowley died on July 28. and had the Honour of a publick Funeral and a proper Monument beſtow'd on him by the Generoſity of the Duke of Buckingham: And this Account was publiſh'd of it; Whitehall, Aug. 4. Yeſterday in the Evening the Body of Mr. Abraham Cowley, who died the 28th paſt, was conveyed from Wallingford-Houſe to Weſtminſter-Abbey, accompanied by divers Perſons of eminent Quality, who came to perform this laſt Office to one who had been the great Ornament of our Nation, as well by the Candour of his Life as the Excellency of his Writings.

State of Religion.

In Matters of Religion, it is obſervable that the Nonconformiſts were pleaſed with the Fall of the Earl of Clarendon, looking upon him as a ſtout and ſteady Protector of the Church of England; and rejoiced as much that the Duke of Buckingham was received into the King's Favour, and into the Reputation of prime Miniſter, eſteeming him their great Patron. They themſelves give this Account. " In " the Year 1667. the Lord Chancellor Hide was " impeached and diſcarded: And it ſeem'd a re- " markable Providence of God, that he who had " been the grand Inſtrument of State in the fore- " going Tranſactions, and had dealt ſo ſeverely with " the Nonconformiſts, ſhould at length, by his own " Friends, be caſt out and baniſh'd, while thoſe " whom he had perſecuted were the moſt moderate " in his Cauſe, and many for him. The Duke of " Buckingham ſucceeded him as chief Favourite: " He was a Man for Liberty. Under him the Non- " conformiſts in London were conniv'd at; and Peo- " ple went openly to their Meetings, without fear. " This encourag'd the Country Miniſters, who did " the like in moſt Parts of England, and Crowds of " the moſt religiouſly-inclined People were their " Auditors. It muſt be added to the Foot of this Account, that it could be no Credit to the Diſſenting Party to have had the Earl of Clarendon their Oppoſer, and the Duke of Buckingham their Promoter; the firſt oppoſing them upon no worſe Principle, than a Zeal to the eſtabliſh'd Church, as the moſt effectual Bulwark againſt Popery; and the other appearing in their Intereſt upon no better Account, than a ſtrong Affection to the univerſal Liberties of Opinion and of Practice.

Prejudice of the Diſſenters againſt the E. of Clarendon.

Judgment of the Commons that Popery was promoted by Indulgence to Diſſenters.

But the Houſe of Commons, who run down the Earl of Clarendon, had ſtill a Majority of the ſame Judgment with his Lordſhip, " That Popery had " its Encouragement and Growth under the Cover " of indulging the Proteſtant Diſſenters: And therefore tho' his Majeſty had graciouſly obliged them in his Speech of Feb. 10. by recommending to the two Houſes, that they would ſeriouſly think of ſome Courſe to beget a better Union and Compoſure in the Minds

[a] See the ſeveral Letters of Sir William Godolphin and the Lord Sandwich. Both in Embaſſy to Spain to my Lord Arlington of the Negotiations of Peace between Spain and Portugal in 1667. Publiſh'd from the Originals. 1703. 8*vo.*

of

1667. 19*Car*.II. of his Proteſtant Subjects; yet the Commons were ſo ſenſible that this Royal Motion made the Nonconformiſts too preſuming in their Liberty, and the Papiſts too inſolent in their Hopes and Expectations; and therefore their Houſe, upon ſolemn Debate and Reſolution, made and preſented a Humble Petition to his Majeſty, "That he would iſſue out his Proclamation for enforcing the Laws againſt Conventicles; and that Care might be taken for Preſervation of the Peace of the Kingdom againſt unlawful Aſſemblies of Papiſts and Nonconformiſts.

Petition of the Commons againſt Popery.

And accordingly on March 10. his Majeſty (who was under expectance of a liberal Supply from the Commons) was pleaſed to iſſue out his Proclamation, declaring, "That upon Conſideration of the late "humble Petition of his Loyal Subjects the Commons in Parliament aſſembled, and upon Information that divers Perſons, in ſeveral Parts of this "Realm, abuſing the Clemency which had been uſed towards Perſons not conforming to the Worſhip and Government eſtabliſh'd in the Church "of England (even whilſt it was under Conſideration to find out a way for the better Union of his "Proteſtant Subjects[a]) have of late frequently and "openly, in great Numbers, and to the great [b] Diſturbance of the Peace, held unlawful Aſſemblies "and Conventicles; therefore his Majeſty had been "pleaſed in Council to declare, that he will by no "means permit ſuch notorious Contempts of himſelf and his Laws to go unpuniſh'd; but by Advice of his Privy Council does order this his Proclamation to be iſſued out, requiring, charging, "and commanding all Lord-Lieutenants, Deputy-Lieutenants, Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer, Juſtices of Aſſize and Goal-Delivery, Juſtices of "Peace, Mayors, Bayliffs, and all other his Majeſty's Officers whatſoever, that they be circumſpect "and vigilant each of them in their ſeveral Charges "and Juriſdictions, to inforce and put in Execution all the Laws now in force againſt unlawful "Conventicles; ſtrictly charging and commanding "his ſaid Magiſtrates and Officers, that they, and "every of them in their ſeveral Places, do take care "for the Preſervation of the Peace of his Kingdom, "againſt unlawful Aſſemblies of Papiſts and Nonconformiſts.

The K's. Proclamation.

1668. The French King was ſo afraid of the Conſequence of the Triple League, and the Peace between the two Crowns of Spain and Portugal, that he immediately enter'd upon a Treaty at Aix la Chapelle, employing in that Affair his greateſt Miniſter Monſieur Colbert, and the King of England ſending thither his Ambaſſador Extraordinary Sir William Temple. By their Negotiation a Peace was there concluded and ratified between France and Spain, the Miniſters of the King of England and of the States-General of the United Provinces attending the French King at Paris on May 18. and there exchanging the Inſtruments of Ratification[c].

Peace between France and Spain.

On May 9. his Majeſty was pleaſed to be preſent in the Lord's Houſe; where the Commons attending him, the Speaker preſented him theſe following publick Acts: 1. "An Act for raiſing three hun- "dred and ten thouſand Pounds by an Impoſition "on Wines and other Liquors. 2. An additional "Act againſt the Importation of foreign Cattel. "3. An Act for proceeding to Judgment on Writs "of Error brought in the Exchequer. 4. An Act "for giving Liberty to buy and export Leather and "Skins Tanned or Dreſſed. 5. An Act for the better Payment of Monies received for the Uſe of "the Crown. 6. An Act for the Increaſe and Preſervation of Timber within the Foreſt of Dean. "7. An Act to regulate the Trade of Silk-throwing. Which, with ſeveral private Bills, his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to paſs; and the Parliament afterwards adjourn'd till the 11th of Auguſt next enſuing; and then again, by his Majeſty's Direction, adjourn'd themſelves to the 1ſt of March: But the King being in Peace and Plenty, did by Proclamation, dated Dec. 18. Prorogue the Parliament upon and from the ſaid 1ſt Day of March until the 19th Day of October next following.

Acts paſs'd in Parliament.

1668. 20*Car*.II.

After this general Peace of Europe, the King, to maintain the friendly Correſpondence, ſent away Sir William Godolphin, lately Knighted by him, to reſide as his Ambaſſador in the Court of Spain; and Sir Edward Spragge as Envoy to the Conſtable of Caſtile upon his entry on the Government of the Spaniſh Netherlands, and Sir William Temple as his Ambaſſador Extraordinary in Holland; and Sir Daniel Harvey as Ambaſſador to Conſtantinople; Sir John Trevor as Envoy Extraordinary to France; the Earl of Carliſle Ambaſſador to the Crown of Swedeland; and received Monſieur Colbert as Ambaſſador from his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, who made his publick Entry into London Aug. 17. as did likewiſe, on September 17. Signior Pietro Morcenigo, Ambaſſador from the State of Venice.

Ambaſſadors ſent abroad.

The King conferred the Honour of Knighthood on John Vaughan, who being ſolemnly ſworn Serjeant at Law in the Court of Chancery on Friday May 22. was next Day admitted Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of Common-Pleas. On Friday Morning June 12. died of a ſhort Apoplectical Diſtemper Charles Lord Viſcount Fitz-Harding of the Privy-Council, and Treaſurer of his Majeſty's Houſhold, which Office his Majeſty was pleaſed to confer upon Sir Thomas Clifford formerly Comptroller of his Majeſty's Houſe, and that of Comptroller upon Francis Lord Newport, who on July 1. was ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council. On Sept. 19. the Duke of Monmouth in Hyde-Park was plac'd by his Majeſty in the Command of Captain of his Life-Guard of Horſe, void by the Reſignation of the Lord Gerard of Brandon. Sir John Trevor who had return'd from his Employment as Envoy Extraordinary to the moſt Chriſtian King on June 18. and had given his Majeſty a ſatisfactory Account of his Negotiation in that Court, was on Sept. 29. ſworn

Honours and Preferments.

[a] For uniting the Proteſtant Intereſt, a Comprehenſion, as they call'd it, abating the Terms of Communion for all moderate Diſſenters to conform, was projected and carried on with good Meaning on both Sides; tho' it had been better effected, if a reaſonable Scheme had been ſettled of Alterations and Amendments on the Church Side only. For before both Parties could be ſatisfied, Time and Patience were gone: The Well-wiſhers to it of the Church Communion were the Lord Keeper Bridgman, Sir Matthew Hale, Sir John Barber, Dr. Wilkins, Biſhop of Cheſter, and others eminent for Goodneſs, Wiſdom and Learning. See the Life of Mr. Baxter, written by himſelf, and of Sir Mat. Hale, by Dr. Burnet. Life of Lady Eliz. Brook, by Mr. Parkhurſt. A Breviate of the Bill for Comprehenſion and Indulgence. 1668.

[b] The Popiſh Intereſt Abroad was employ'd to protect and cover their Friends in England: And the Peace between France and Spain was recommended by the Pope for that Purpoſe. As the Lord Sandwich, our Ambaſſador at Madrid, ſufficiently intimated in a Letter to the Earl of Arlington, dated, Nov. 16. 1667. On Sunday laſt the Count Penaranda came to me from the Queen with a Meſſage to this Purpoſe: That her Majeſty had lately heard of renewed Sufferings of the Roman Catholicks in England, and did deſire the King my Maſter, as much as was poſſible, to take off or mitigate the ſame, &c.

[c] This Peace was made by the neceſſity of Affairs, not with the good Will of the Kings and chief Miniſters of England and France. The ſecret Intention was for England and France to come to another War with Holland. Sir William Temple obſerves, that the Deſign of a War was not only laying, but well advanc'd by the Practices of Monſieur Colbert upon the Miniſters of our Court, (where he was now Ambaſſador) and by the violent Humour of my Lord Clifford to enter the Leagues then projected by France. So that the very Day the Parliament gave his Majeſty a mighty Sum of Money to complement him upon ſo applauded a Counſel and Succeſs as that of the Triple Alliance in this Year 1668, that Lord coming out of the Houſe of Commons, where he was now a Member, could not hold ſaying to a Friend of mine that came out with him, that for all this great Joy, it muſt not be long before we have another War with Holland. Temple's Memoirs. II. p. 162.

one

1668. 20 Car. II.

one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State upon the Reſignation of Sir William Morrice.

Our Fleet at Sea.

It having been a fatal Error in the Adminiſtration not to have had a Fleet at Sea in time of War the laſt Summer; it was now amended by another extreme, the keeping out our Fleet in a time of Peace with all our Neighbours. This Fleet under Command of Sir Thomas Allen, was viſited by his Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs in the Downs on June 23. and was thence order'd to ſail Weſtward, and having ſafely ſhew'd their Grandeur in the Chanel, Sir Thomas upon expreſs Orders on Aug 20. ſailed by Plymouth towards the Mediterranean, and at the end of September came before Algiers; and threatning the Town made them offer a Releaſe of all the Captive Engliſh, and renew their former Peace with us, upon good additional Articles to this effect, 1. That all their Captives ſhould be commanded to let all Engliſh Veſſels paſs without Damage or Moleſtation, upon their ſhewing Engliſh Colours. If in any Veſſel the Engliſh were equal to the Strangers, they ſhould then be free; if the Strangers exceeded the Engliſh, then lawful Prize; yet, if they could ſhew an Engliſh Paſs, to be let go. 2. That none of their little Frigots with Oars ſhall ſtop any Veſſels laden with Proviſions or Ammunition for Tangier. 3. That they ſhall not deliver any of their little Frigots with Oars to any of the Salley Men to make uſe of. 4. That if any of their little Veſſels intended for Tangier, they ſhould take a Paſs from the Engliſh Conſul at Algier.

Algiers brought to ſubmiſſion.

State of Religion.

As to Religion, the Church and State were equally in Peace and Quiet, and the Nonconformiſts finding no hopes of a legal Toleration were the better diſpoſed to deſire a Comprehenſion, and to accept any reaſonable Terms of being brought into one Communion. They themſelves have thus repreſented their Inclinations and Attempts this Year. "In "January 1668. Mr. Baxter received a Letter from "Dr. Manton, intimating that he was told by Sir "John Barber, that the Lord Keeper Bridgman deſired to confer with them two about a Comprehenſion and Toleration. Hereupon he came to London, and they two waited on the Lord Keeper, "who told them, that he had ſent for them to "think of a way of their Reſtauration: To which "end, he had ſome Propoſals to offer to them, "which were for a Comprehenſion for the Presbyterians, and an Indulgence for the Independents and "the reſt[a]. They ask'd him, whether it was his "Pleaſure, that they ſhould offer him their Opinion "of the Means, or only receive what he offer'd to "them? He replied, that he had ſomething to offer, "but they might alſo make their own Propoſals. "Mr. Baxter told him, he thought they might be "able to offer him ſuch Terms (without injuring "any one) as might take in both Presbyterians and "Independents, and all ſound Chriſtians into the publick eſtabliſh'd Miniſtry. He anſwer'd, that that "was a thing that he would not have, and ſo it "was agreed to go firſt upon the Comprehenſion. A "few Days after he ſent his Propoſals. After this "they met with Dr. Wilkins and Mr. Burton to confer about the matter. The thing they moſt differ'd about was Re-ordination. At length by Conference with Sir Matthew Hale that Point was thus "adjuſted, that there ſhould be an admiſſion into the "Miniſtry of the Church of England, of thoſe who "had been Ordained before, according to this Form "of Words, Take thou legal Authority to preach the "Word of God, and adminiſter the Holy Sacraments "in any Congregation of England, where thou ſhalt "be lawfully appointed thereunto. It was agreed the "Ceremonies ſhould be left indifferent, and the Liturgy alter'd; and that there ſhould be an Indulgence of ſuch as could not be Comprehended; the "Names of the Teachers and all the Members of "their reſpective Congregations being Regiſter'd: "And a Bill was accordingly drawn up by Judge "Hale to be preſented to the Parliament. But they "no ſooner ſate than the High-Church Party made "ſuch an Intereſt, as that upon putting it to the "Vote, it was carry'd that no Man ſhould bring "an Act of this Nature into the Houſe; and ſo they "prevented all Talk or Motion of ſuch a thing: "And the Lord Keeper who ſet it on Foot, grew "as indifferent about it as any one, when he ſaw "which way the Stream was ſtrongeſt.

Nonconformiſts offer at a Comprehenſion.

1669. 21 Car. II.

1669.

Prince of Tuſcany comes into Engl.

This Year begin with the Reception of the Prince of Tuſcany, who in the Portland Frigot from Corunna after being driven into Kingſale in Ireland, and again into the Iſle of Silly, arrived at Plymouth on Mar. 22. and being there honourably received by Sir John Skelton the Governour, he left the Town on the 27th and lay the next Night at Exeter, being there complemented and attended by the Mayor and his Brethren. On April 1. he came to Saliſbury, where he was waited on by the Earl of Pembroke, with the Mayor and Aldermen in their Habits; the next Day he was nobly entertain'd by the Earl at his Houſe in Wilton; and proceeding on his Road, he was met and Complemented in his Majeſty's Name at Brentford, by the Lord Viſcount Mandeville in one of his Majeſty's Coaches, and coming to London April 5. Incognito, he was at his arrival attended by Sir William Killigrew with a Complement from her Majeſty, by the Earl of Peterborough from his Royal Highneſs, and from her Royal Highneſs by Sir William Powel the Maſter of her Horſe. At the end of the Month he went along with the King and the Duke of York and Prince Rupert to Newmarket, and having diverted himſelf with the Recreations of that Place, he went to Cambridge on May 1. and was received with all Reſpect imaginable by the Univerſity and Town, being attended at his Lodgings, and Complemented in the Name of the Univerſity by the two Divinity Profeſſors accompanied by all the young Noblemen then Students there, and by the Mayor and Aldermen from the Town; which done his Highneſs being pleaſed to go abroad, the Vice-Chancellor with the Doctors and both the Proctors, ſtood ready in their Habits of Formality to receive him at the publick Schools, all the Scholars being ranged on each ſide of the way; the publick Orator entertain'd him with a Speech at the Gate, from whence his Highneſs was conducted into the Regent-Houſe, where was held a Congregation for creating in all Degrees and Faculties on this occaſion, by the particular Command of his Majeſty, where a ſecond Speech was made to him by the ſame Orator. In the Afternoon he was pleaſed to be preſent at a Philoſophy Act appointed for that purpoſe, and performed to the great Satisfaction of the Prince and the whole Auditory. The Prince went away to Northampton, and being entertain'd at Dinner on His Reception at Cambridge.

[a] See the Perjur'd Phanatick, or the malicious Conſpiracy of Sir John Croke of Chilton, Baronet, Juſtice of Peace in Com. Bucks, Henry Larimore, Anabaptiſt Preacher, and other Phanaticks, againſt the Life of Robert Hawkins, M. A. Miniſter of Chilton, occaſioned by his Suit for Tythes: Diſcover'd in a Tryal at Aileſbury before the Right Honourable Sir Matthew Hale, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, on Thurſday March 11. 1668. Publiſh'd by his Lordſhip's Command. Fol. 1669. Note, the Miniſter ſo tried and acquitted, publiſh'd a ſecond Edition of this Tryal two and forty Years after it, in 1710. With a Preface to the Reader, giving a more full Account of the Occaſion of his Troubles. He was ſtill a ſtrong hearty old Man; and giving me a printed Copy of the new Edition of his Tryal, which he diſtributed for want of being provided for, he told me, that after his Tryal, tho' acquitted, he was forc'd to remove from Chilton, and to accept of Beckley, a poor Curacy, near Oxford, not exceeding 10 l. per Ann. being at the ſame time employ'd by Mr. Croke of Studley to preach the Lecture there, founded by his Anceſtor Judge Croke: But upon that Gentleman's Deceaſe he was depriv'd of the Lecture; and being reduc'd to great Neceſſities, he was forc'd to come up and take Refuge in London, where he had no other Support but 12 l. per Ann. for helping to bury the Dead in the Pariſh of Cripplegate, and what he could get by the occaſional reading of Prayers in other Churches in or near the Town.

Monday

1669. 21 Car. II.

Andat Oxford.

Monday May 3. he came very late that Night to Oxford, and refuſing the Lodgings offer'd him by the Vice-Chancellor in Chriſt-Church, went to be more private in the Angel-Inn; where the next Morning he was attended by the Vice-Chancellor and Doctors in their Scarlet to Complement him, and to know his Pleaſure when he would be at leiſure to be received in Convocation; the Vice-Chancellor with ſome Doctors afterwards waiting on him the ſame Morning to ſhew him moſt of the chief Colleges, where he was received by the reſpective Societies and Complemented with Speeches. In the Afternoon the Vice-Chancellor and Doctors went again to his Lodgings, and conducted him thence to the Convocation, his Highneſs being pleaſed to walk all the way on Foot, thro' the Ranks of Scholars placed on each ſide from his Lodgings to the Schools. The Maſters of Arts being ſet in the Convocation-Houſe attended there his Arrival, upon which the Convocation began, the Prince being firſt ſeated in a Chair of State provided for that occaſion on the right hand of the Vice-Chancellor, then the publick Orator Dr. South made him an Oration, which ended, and ſeveral Academical Affairs diſpatch'd, to ſatisfy his Highneſs of the manner of acting in thoſe Aſſemblies; his Phyſician (a Doctor of Bononia) was incorporated and admitted to the ſame Degree. Then the Prince was conducted to the New-Theatre, and ſo to the publick Library, where he had a view of the choiceſt Manuſcripts, Coins, and other Rarities of that Place; and hence to the ſeveral Schools, in moſt of which the Profeſſors and Lecturers were reading in their ſeveral Faculties, and Diſputations held in the others: His Highneſs was pleaſed particularly to take a Seat in that of Geometry, and to hear a learned Lecture read by Dr. Wallis; and having heard ſome Diſputations in the School of Tongues, and in that of Natural Philoſophy, he was entertain'd in the Muſick School with Vocal and Inſtrumental Muſick, and at ſeven in the Evening was reconducted to his Lodgings by the Vice-Chancellor and ſome of the Doctors, who attended him again the next Morning, and took their leave upon his departing that Day for Windſor. On May 11. he was carried by his Majeſty into Hyde-Park, to take a view of the three Troops of his Majeſty's Horſe-Guards, and ſeven of the Regiment of Guards Commanded by the Earl of Oxford, with fourteen Companies of the Foot Guards of his Majeſty's Regiment, and of the Generals Regiment of Guards, all drawn up in excellent Order and Equipage. On Monday May 31. his Majeſty and Royal Highneſs were pleaſed to do the Prince the Honour to ſup with him at St. Alban's Houſe in St. James's-Fields, and were entertain'd by him with great Magnificence. The next Day he took his leave of the Court, and departed for Holland much ſatisfied with his Reception here, and the Honours he had received.

At the beginning of July Prince George of Denmark, after a ſhort Tour in France, came over to ſee the Engliſh Court, and on Wedneſday July 21. was by the Lord Chamberlain conducted to his Majeſty, and in the Afternoon was introduc'd to the Queen, and after an honourable Reception return'd again for Denmark.

Opening of the Theatre at Oxford.

On Friday July 9. the Univerſity of Oxford being aſſembled in a full Body, went to take poſſeſſion of the new Theatre, the Magnificent Benefaction of his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, where after the reading of his Graces Grant by the Regiſter of the Univerſity, Dr. South, the publick Orator made an excellent Speech upon the Occaſion: In the Afternoon, being again aſſembled and placed in the Theatre, after the Muſick, were pronounc'd ſeveral Panegyricks, the firſt in Proſe, then one in Pindarick Verſe; after that an Oration, then a Dialogue in Poetry; which having taken up a conſiderable time, the Auditory was diverted with excellent Muſick, Vocal and Inſtrumental; which ended, they were again entertain'd with another Oration, follow'd by two Speeches in Poetry, and afterwards by a Diſcourſe in favour of Learning, then a ſhort Speech from the Muſick Gallery, uſhering in two Odes, which were excellently ſung; after which follow'd another Speech, which concluded the Solemnity of that Day.

D. of Ormond made Chancellor of Oxford.

On Wedneſday Aug. 4. was held a Convocation by the Univerſity in the uſual Place, in which upon a Reſignation of the Chancellorſhip, which was ſent by his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury to the Vice-Chancellor, the Univerſity according to Statute proceeded to a new Election, and unanimouſly made choice of his Grace the Duke of Ormond to ſucceed in that honourable Charge. This Reſignation of the Archbiſhop was made upon a Reſolution of his retiring from publick Buſineſs, and a Satisfaction to himſelf that he had ſerved the Univerſity with as much Affection and greater Munificence than any of his Predeceſſors. He earneſtly recommended the Duke of Ormond to be his Succeſſor, having a great and juſt Opinion of the Duke's Integrity and Honour; and to ſhew the higher Eſteem of him, he did this at a Juncture, when the Duke was out of Favour at Court; having been called out of Ireland, and leaving his Son the Lord Oſſory to command in his Abſence, was ſoon ſucceeded by the Lord Roberts, but left a Reputation and an Intereſt in that Kingdom exceeding great; and upon the firſt News of the Change, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of Dublin, the Provoſt of the College, the Dean of Chriſt-Church, and moſt of the Clergy attended the Lord Oſſory, to make a ſolemn Acknowledgement of the many Benefits which the City had receiv'd from the Government of his Father and himſelf, and the Protection and Favours which the Church had enjoy'd, as well by their good Examples as by the plentiful Proviſion made by them for the Clergy.

His good Character

Ambaſſadors ſent abroad.

Mr. Montague was ſent Ambaſſador from his Majeſty of Great Britain to the French King, and made his publick Entry into Paris April 25. and with great State [a] and Ceremony had his Audience the next Day. Sir Peter Wich was ſent Envoy to the Court of Muſcovy, and arrived at Riga on May 1. having been upon the way civilly treated and complemented

---

[a] The Intrigues of the French Court were already working how to break the Triple Alliance betwixt England, Holland, and Sweden; and Monſieur Colbert, the French Ambaſſador at London, had his Inſtructions to ſpread about his Maſter's Gold for that purpoſe. A Letter of Sir William Temple, Ambaſſador in Holland, to the Lord Keeper, dated, April 2. 1669. N. S. gave his Lordſhip early Notice, informing him, that Monſieur Paffendorf, the Swediſh Agent, in his late Return from Paris, had acquainted Monſieur De Wit, that the French Miniſters had told him in that Court that England would certainly fail in the Triple Alliance and Meaſures with Sweden and Holland: And when he queſtion'd this Report, M. Jurenne at laſt ſhew'd him a Letter from M. Colbert, their Ambaſſador in England, wherein he gave an Account of the happy Succeſſes he had met with in his Negotiations in our [Engliſh] Court; of the good Diſpoſitions there, and eſpecially thoſe of ſome of our chief Miniſters; upon which he added theſe Words: Et Je leur ay enfin ſentir tout l'etendue de la Liberalite de ſa Majeſte.

A late Writer under very good Inſtruction has told us: It is not to be imagin'd how the French King's Agent deſcended in their Briberies; they made uſe of the meaneſt Tools, and fix'd their Gold on Fellows that never ſaw any before in their Lives; as I have read ſomewhere of the Traffick of the French Ambaſſador in King Charles's Reign, who dealt even with Slaves to gain his Ends. His Maſter was then endeavouring to bring England to join with France againſt Holland, and gave his Money away very freely. Among others that had taſted of his Bounty, was a Black belonging to a Perſon of Quality, from whom this Story came, and in one of the moſt ſervile Employments of his Family. The Ambaſſador found a way to give this Boy ten Guineas, only to get out of him what he heard the Servants of a higher Form talk about a Holland War. —— There was a certain great Favourite in King plemented by the Magiſtrates of Dantzick, and afterwards entertain'd at Coningsbergh in Pruſſia by his Electoral Highneſs of Brandenburgh, and honourably treated through the Territories of the Duke of Courland. Sir Thomas Higgons had gone Envoy Extraordinary to his Highneſs the Elector of Saxony, and had carried to him the Order of the Garter, returning in the beginning of June, and reporting that he had been treated with extraordinary Kindneſs and Bounty. Sir William Godolphin was ſent with the like Character to the Court of Portugal, and arriving at Liſbon on May 18. had his publick Audience from the Prince and Princeſs, to which he was conducted in the Prince's Coach by Don Lucas de Portugal. The Lord Howard being appointed by his Majeſty to go in an Ambaſſy to the Emperor of Morocco, imbark'd himſelf with a very ſplendid Train at Plimouth, in a Squadron under the Command of Sir Thomas Allen. The Lord Viſcount Falconbridge being diſpatch'd on an Ambaſſy Extraordinary to the Republick of Venice, and ſeveral Princes of Italy, departed from London on Jan 18.

1669. 21 Car. II.

Death of great Men.

On July 16. died the Right Honourable the Earl of Berkſhire of a lingering Diſtemper, occaſion'd ſome Months ago by an accidental Fall; on the twentieth in the Evening his Body was honourably attended to his Interment in Weſtminſter-Abbey. He was near the 90th Year of his Age, and the eldeſt Knight of the Right Honourable Order of the Garter. The Queen-Mother Henrietta Maria, who in June 1665. had again croſs'd the Seas to reſide in her Native Country, departed this Life on Aug. 10. N. S. about four in the Morning, at her Houſe at Colombe four Leagues from Paris, in the 60th Year of her Age. Her Body was Embalm'd and expoſed ſome time in an Apartment within the Caſtle of Colombe with great Ceremonies; her Heart was in a Veſſel of Silver inſcrib'd with her Name and Title carried in a Mourning Coach to the Monaſtery of Chaliot, attended by the Lord Montague her Almoner and a long Retinue: Her Body was convey'd to St. Dennis, and receiv'd at the Door of the Church by the Religious with Tapers in their Hands, where the grand Almoner made a Diſcourſe upon the Subject, which was anſwer'd by the Prior; then the Body was placed in a Chapel behind the Quire, and afterward interr'd with great Solemnity. She was no more Popular in the Reign of her Son, than ſhe had been in that of her Royal Husband, and had the common Imputation of bringing no leſs Miſchiefs on the one Reign than ſhe had Miſeries on the other.

And of the Queen-Mother.

Of Sir Ed. Nicholas.

On Wedneſday Sept. 1. Sir Edward Nicholas one of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council, a Perſon of great Abilities and Integrity, by which he had faithfully ſerv'd his Majeſty and his Royal Father, in the Employment of Secretary of State, dy'd at his Houſe in Horſley in the County of Surry, after a long Sickneſs, in the 77 or near the 78th Year of his Age.

Duke of Albemarle.

The Duke of Albemarle had fallen this Summer into a long and dangerous Diſtemper, but in the beginning of of July he thought himſelf perfectly recover'd and reſtor'd to his former Health by the Aſſiſtance of a Quack, one William Sermon of Briſtol, whoſe Pills had that Succeſs as to bring him perfectly to his Sleep and Appetite, and wholly to abate all the Symptoms of his Diſeaſe, ſo that on July 12. as being perfectly cur'd, he diſmiſſed his Phyſicians from their farther Attendance; and next Day Mr. Sermon was preſented to his Majeſty in St. James's-Park, where he had the Honour to be admitted to kiſs his Majeſty's Hand, and to receive his Thanks for the good Service of that excellent Cure performed upon his Grace. But toward Winter the Duke fell into a Relapſe, and died at the Cockpit by Whitehall on Jan. 3. in the ſixty ſecond Year of his Age. His Garter being brought to the King, was by his immediate Command carried back to the Earl of Torrington then by his Father's Death Duke of Albemarle; with a kind Aſſurance that he ſhould ſucceed in the place of Gentleman of his Bed-Chamber, and Lord Lieutenant of the County of Devon; and as the laſt Mark of his Majeſty's Gratitude to the immortal Memory of the Deceaſed, his Majeſty would himſelf take care for the Funeral, to be celebrated with a Solemnity, ſuch as may become the glorious Things he did in the Service of the Crown, and the eminent Senſe and Value his Majeſty will ever retain of them. Accordingly after the Body had lain in State ſome time in Somerſet-Houſe, a publick Funeral was magnificently celebrated in a ſolemn Proceſſion from thence to Weſtminſter-Abbey on April 30. 1670. accompanied by a long Train of Perſons of Quality, with all the Triumphs of Honour becoming ſo great a General, and was buried on the North ſide of King Henry VII's Chapel, with an Eloquent Sermon preach'd and publiſh'd by Seth Lord Biſhop of Sarum. As he had been ſingularly happy in being the chief Inſtrument of the King's Return, he was no leſs happy in the Senſe the King ever continu'd to expreſs of ſo great an Obligation: It ſhew'd him to be a Man of great Sincerity and true Judgment, that he did not ſeem to over value his own Services, but kept himſelf all along in the Eſteem of the Court and the Affections of the People. His Wife the Dutcheſs died in the ſame Houſe the twenty third Day of the ſame Month, and was privately interr'd in the ſame Chapel.

Meeting of Parliament.

On October 19. the two Houſes of Parliament according to their laſt Prorogation met at Weſtminſter, where his Majeſty in a gracious Speech acquainted [a] them with his Joy to ſee them at that time, and the Hopes he had of a happy meeting, which he promiſed to himſelf from the great Experience he had of their Affection and Loyalty, of which he doubted not the continuance; briefly minding them of his Debts, which tho' preſſing, he was unwilling to call for their Aſſiſtance till this time; acquainting them, that what they laſt gave was wholly apply'd to the Navy, and to the extraordinary Fleet for which it was intended, deſiring they

King Charles's Court, who thought of a pretty Device to receive a great Sum of Money to ſerve the French Intereſt, and to do it with Decency. It muſt be own'd he was faithful to that Intereſt to the laſt, at the Expence of his Maſter's Honour, and the Safety of his Country. Whether the Sum was too great to be paid ſecretly, or whether he choſe to let the World ſee a new Art of taking a Bribe openly, without running the hazard of being call'd in Queſtion; true it is, that tho' he was very far from being a Gameſter, he found Means to put a vaſt Sum in his Pocket; and it was no hard matter to do it, when the Gentleman that play'd with him loſt it willingly, and in concert with him that won it. On this Head a Man of Worth and Intelligence wrote thus above twenty Years ago.—— There is a certain Gentleman in England, at this very Day, that has paid many thouſands of Pounds of the French King's Money, in order to enſlave England; and which is ſtrange, both ignorant of the Perſons to whom he paid it, and is notwithſtanding a very honeſt Man himſelf. But the manner of his paying it ſeem'd to be copied exactly from Cardinal Richlieu's Pattern. Being in the Service of a great Foreign Miniſter, the then Diſtributer of the Favours of Lewis XIV. He was ſometimes charg'd with a greater, ſometimes a leſſer Bag of Money, according as People's different Services deſerv'd; but for the moſt part, St. James's Park was the Place where thoſe Showers of Gold fell. It was to ſuch or ſuch a particular Tree, as number'd in ſuch a Row in the Park, that this Gentleman was directed; and there he was, without ſpeaking one ſingle Word, to deliver ſuch a particular Purſe of Money to a Man he ſhould find in ſuch or ſuch a Poſture, leaning againſt a Tree in ſuch a particular Habit, but always with his Face cover'd ſome way or other. Secret Hiſt. of Engl. P. II. 284.

[a] Before the meeting of Parliament, the Miniſtry were to diſpoſe the Commons to give much Money, and to make no Complaints; as Lord Arlington to Sir William Godolphin in Spain, by Letter, dated, Whitehall, Auguſt 26. 1669.——Our next Buſineſs will be to turn our ſelves to expect the Parliament in October, which we pray may be a quiet and bountiful one to his Majeſty. We have need of both thoſe Qualifications in them. Letters of Lord Arlington. Vol. II. p. 279.

1669. 21 Car. II.

would now take his Debts effectually into their Conſideration; afterwards hinting to them a Propoſal of great Importance concerning the Uniting of England and Scotland, which requiring ſome length, his Majeſty left it and ſome other things to his Lord Keeper to open them more fully; which his Lordſhip accordingly did in a larger Speech. After which the Commons return'd to their Houſe and Adjourn'd till the Thurſday following, and the Houſe of Lords Adjourn'd till Monday.

Thanks of the two Houſes for ſuppreſſing Conventicles.

On November 6. both Houſes in purſuance of a Vote of the third inſtant attended his Majeſty in the Banqueting-Houſe at Whitehall, where the Lord Chief Juſtice Vaughan, ſupplying the room of the Lord Keeper then indiſpoſed, in the name of both Houſes return'd his Majeſty their Thanks for his Care of the Publick, in iſſuing out his Proclamation for ſuppreſſing Conventicles; deſiring his Majeſty to continue the ſame Care for the future: To which his Majeſty return'd a gracious Anſwer to the ſatisfaction of both Houſes. On December 11. the Black Rod was ſent from the Houſe of Peers to that of the Commons, to tell them, that the Lords Authorized by Commiſſion from his Majeſty, deſired the Attendance of that Honourable Houſe immediately in the Houſe of Peers, who accordingly went thither with their Speaker, to whom his Majeſty's ſaid Commiſſion being read, the Parliament was Prorogu'd till Feb. 14. next enſuing. On Thurſday December 23. his Majeſty in Council order'd a Proclamation to declare his full Purpoſe and Reſolution, that the Parliament ſhould meet and ſit on the ſaid Feb. 14. and therefore to require the Attendance of all the Peers and Commons preciſely on that Day, his Majeſty expecting a ready Conformity to his Royal Will and Pleaſure. And accordingly on Monday February 14. his Majeſty went to Weſtminſter in a Coach, preceded by his Trumpets and Kettle-Drums at the head of his new Guards, and followed by his Horſe-Guards, and in his Robes took his Seat in the Houſe of Lords, where he was attended by the Houſe of Commons with their Speaker, to whom he made a gracious Speech, which was enlarged by another from the Lord Keeper. Then the Houſe of Commons return'd to their own Houſe, and voted his Majeſty's Speech to be taken into Conſideration the Thurſday following. Upon which there aroſe an unhappy Difference between the two Houſes; but publick Information was given from Whitehall February 22. that this Day the two Houſes of Parliament did, at his Majeſty's gracious Recommendation, come to an happy Agreement in the Matter in Difference between them, to the great Joy and Content of all that wiſh well to the Proſperity of his Majeſty's Government, and the Publick Quiet of this his Kingdom.

Parl. meet again.

The Parliament in Scotland met the ſame Day with that of England October 19. and his Majeſty wrote this Letter to them.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

K.'s Letter to the Parl. in Scotland.

"WE do often reflect, with Thankfulneſs and "Joy, upon the Goodneſs of Almighty "God, for reſtoring us to our Kingdoms, and them "to their former Liberty and Peace: And we ac"knowledge, it a farther Inſtance of God's Good"neſs, that as he hath filled our Heart with Kind"neſs towards our Subjects of that our antient "Kingdom, and with a conſtant Zeal to promote "what we judge conducible to their Welfare; ſo "he hath bleſt us with returns from them of Love, "Loyalty, and ready Compliance with our Pleaſure "on all Occaſions, moſt ſuitable thereunto; of which "our late Parliament hath given ſignal Proofs, as "well as our other good Subjects. And this gives "us Confidence, that the earneſt Deſire we have "to render this Iſland more happy than ever it was "in times paſt, by ſettling amongſt all our good "Subjects within the ſame a mutual Affection that "may endure to all Poſterity, ſhall meet with a free "Concurrence from you our Parliament, whom we "have call'd together chiefly for this End.

"The bringing of theſe two Kingdoms of Scot"land and England to as cloſe and ſtrict an Union "as is poſſible, is the means that we propoſe for "the effectuating thereof; which as it is the high"eſt and nobleſt Deſign we can have, for witneſ"ſing our Royal Affection to them both; ſo the "Accompliſhment of it will raiſe our Satisfaction "almoſt as high as our Wiſhes. For by the Union "of the Hearts and Hands of our People, not only "our Throne ſhall be ſtrengthned, and they have "Peace and Love ſettled among them for ever; but "we ſhall have the Glory of accompliſhing what "our Royal Grandfather King James, of ever bleſ"ſed Memory, attempted, as the greateſt thing he "could deviſe, and wherein he, who was a compe"tent Judge, placed the Happineſs of the Crown "and Kingdoms, and wherein he meant to have "gloried as the chiefeſt Action of his Life.

"We have fully inſtructed our Commiſſioner "with our Intentions as to this Subject, and con"cerning ſuch other Matters as ſeem to us to be "uſeful for the conſtant Peace and Welfare of the "Church and State in that our Kingdom. You are "to give him full Credit, and he will acquaint us "with all Matters; and what is farther neceſſary "for us to do, will be ſpeedily performed. So we "bid you heartily farewel.

At the opening of the ſaid Parliament, his Grace the [a] Earl of Lauderdale, his Majeſty's High Commiſſioner, made this Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

E. of Lauderdale's Speech.

"BY the Authority of the King, and his ſpecial "Command, you are here aſſembled in his "high Court of Parliament. You have heard his "Royal Intentions under his own Hand, with the "chief Reaſons of his calling you together. You "have heard his moſt gracious Expreſſions of his "Kindneſs to his Subjects in this his antient King"dom, and his Confidence of you their Repreſen"tatives. And I ſhall, as ſhortly as I can, acquaint "you with what I have farther in Command from "my Maſter to ſay in his Name at the opening of "this his Parliament.

"And firſt I am to aſſure you of his Majeſty's "conſtant and unalterable Zeal for maintaining and "defending the true Reformed Proteſtant Religion

[a] The Earl of Lauderdale knew well that the Duke of York was a Papiſt, and in fear of a Popiſh Succeſſion, he gave in to a Scheme of obtaining a Divorce for the King, to leave him at liberty for lawful Iſſue. His Chaplain Dr. Burnet, when Biſhop of Saliſbury, was charg'd with a Paper written by him, ſtating the Lawfulneſs of Divorce in caſe of Barrenneſs, with relation to King Charles II.'s Marriage, which they ſaid was a Project of the Earl of Shaftſbury's and his Party to put by the Duke of York. To which the Biſhop anſwered, what the Earl of Shaftſbury's Deſigns were in that Matter I do not know; for he never once ſpoke of them to me. But I remember well that the Duke (then Earl) of Lauderdale moved it to me. He was the firſt that ever diſcover'd to me the Secret of King James's Religion; and when he ſaw me ſtruck with great Apprehenſions upon it, he fell upon the Head of Divorce, and told me many Particulars that I think fit to ſuppreſs. I afterwards knew that the Matter of Fact was falſly ſtated to me. I was then but ſeven and twenty, and was pretty full of the Civil Law, which had been my firſt Study: So I told him ſeveral things out of the Digeſts, Code and Novels upon that Head; and in a great Variety of Diſcourſe we went through many Parts of it. He ſeem'd ſurpriz'd at many things that I told him, and he deſir'd me to ſtate the Matter in Paper. I very frankly did it. Yet I told him I ſpoke of the ſudden; but when I went home among my Books, I would conſider it more ſeverely. The following Winter, I writ to him, and retracted that whole Paper. —— He knew that he had preſſed me to talk of this Subject to the King himſelf, which I had refuſed to do. A great deal more belongs to this Matter, which I think fit to ſuppreſs.

"in 1669. 21 Car. II. " in this his Kingdom, for which he will conſtantly " lay out his whole Power and Authority; as alſo " for diſcouraging and puniſhing all Atheiſm and " Profanities, and all that is contrary to true Reli- " gion and Godlineſs.

" I am farther particularly commanded to aſſure " you, that with no leſs Zeal and Conſtancy he " will maintain and defend the ancient Government " by Archbiſhops and Biſhops, as now it is happily " ſettled, as a ſure Fence for the true Reformed " Proteſtant Religion. A Government moſt ſuit- " able to Monarchy; and well may I call it anti- " ent; for, whoever will look into Antiquity, ſhall " find Epiſcopal Government hath continued in the " whole Catholick Church, both Eaſt and Weſt, " even from the moſt Primitive and Apoſtolick " Times. I ſhall not inſiſt on the ſad Calamities " and Confuſions which the violent and rebellious " Endeavours to overturn this Government produ- " ced in this Kingdom. His Majeſty's gracious " Act of Pardon and Oblivion forbids the ripping " up thoſe Sores which his own Royal Hand hath " cured; and long may they be buried in Oblivion. " Yet ſure I am, the Reflexions on thoſe diſmal " Days ought to raiſe no leſs Zeal in the Parlia- " ment, and in all good Subjects, for the maintain- " ing of that Government, as now it is happily " ſettled: For in his Majeſty's Name, and by his " ſpecial Command I do aſſure you, he will employ " his utmoſt Power in the Maintenance of that Go- " vernment, and will protect the Perſons of my " Lords the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and of the " Loyal, Orthodox, and peaceable Clergy, in the " Exerciſe of their Functions. He will not endure " thoſe numerous and unlawful Conventicles which " tend to Sedition and Schiſm, which have been too " frequent in ſome few Shires of this Kingdom. " Good Laws have been made, and in Proſecution " of thoſe Laws, the Lords of his Majeſty's Privy " Council have ſhewn their Care for ſuppreſſing " thoſe ſeditious Aſſemblies: Yea, and of late his " Majeſty has graciouſly indulged the planting of " ſome who were eſteemed peaceable Men, in va- " cant Churches (though they came not up to the " Rules eſtabliſh'd.) It will be expected, that they " walk worthy of ſo great a Favour: But if, after " this removal of the very Pretence of unlawful " Conventicles, any factious People ſhall, in con- " tempt of his Majeſty's Laws, yea and of his In- " dulgence alſo, ſeditiouſly aſſemble themſelves un- " der pretence of Religious Worſhip, his Majeſty " doth require his Parliament, and all in Authority " under him, vigorouſly to ſuppreſs ſuch Meetings, " and to bring the pretended Preachers, and the " Ringleaders of ſuch unlawful Aſſemblies, to con- " dign and exemplary Puniſhment.

" In the next place, I am commanded to let you " know that I am ſufficiently inſtructed to give his " Majeſty's Royal Aſſent to ſuch Laws as ſhall be " prepared in this Parliament, for the conſtant " Peace and Welfare of this Church, and of the " Kingdom in all its Relations: But the chief Oc- " caſion of calling this Parliament, is the proſecu- " ting that great and glorious Deſign of bringing " his Kingdoms of Scotland and England to a ſtrict- " er and nearer Union. This Deſign was begun by " his Royal Grandfather of bleſſed Memory, who " went ſo far on towards this great Work, that in " the firſt Year of his Reign over Great-Britain, " King James named Commiſſioners for this King- " dom, who by Act of Parliament were authorized " to treat and conſult with Commiſſioners for the " Kingdom of England concerning ſuch an Union: " And in purſuance of their Treaty, Acts were made " for the Repealing of hoſtile Laws, and the utter " abolition of all memory of Hoſtility between the " two Nations: And in the ſeventh Year of his " Reign, it was by the Judges of all the Courts of " Weſtminſter-Hall in England, ſolemnly adjudged " in the Caſe of the Poſtnati, that thoſe who after " the deſcent of the Crown of England to K. James " were born in Scotland, were no Aliens in England, " and conſequently were capable not only of Land, " but of all other Immunities, as if they had been " born in England; ſo much was done in King " James's time. And the occaſions of his Majeſty's " Reſolutions to proſecute the great Work, were " theſe: Complaints having been made to his Ma- " jeſty, that ſince the 25th Day of March in the " 12th Year of his Reign, new Duties were impoſed " in England upon divers Commodities of the " Growth, Production, and Manufacture of Scot- " land, and Incapacities laid upon the Subjects of " Scotland; it pleaſed the King to appoint divers " Meetings upon this matter, tho' without Succeſs; " whereupon the late Parliament in this Kingdom " impoſed in their third Seſſion Ann. 1663. great " Duties upon the Commodities of the Growth, " Production or Manufacture of England, which " by his Majeſty's Command were ſuſpended, and " have not been exacted, tho' the Duties in Eng- " land ſtill continue; and upon his Majeſty's Re- " commendation to the Parliament of England, " an Act was lately made for ſettling Freedom and " Intercourſe of Trade between the two Kingdoms: " Thereupon Commiſſioners were nominated and " appointed by his Majeſty for both Kingdoms to " treat upon that Affair, who had many Meetings, " but produced no Effect, unleſs it were a Convi- " ction of the difficulty, if not impoſſibility, of ſet- " tling it in any other way, than by a nearer and " more complete Union of the two Kingdoms.

" His Majeſty is fully perſuaded, that nothing " can tend more to the Good and Security of both " Nations than ſuch an Union: And finding that in " his Royal Grandfather's time ſo great an advance " was made towards this Union, and that the con- " tinuance under the ſame Obedience for near ſe- " venty Years having begotten the ſame common " Friends and common Enemies to both Nations, " and taken off a great part of thoſe Difficulties " which at the firſt (notwithſtanding the Union in " Obedience to one Sovereign) ſtood in the way; " his Majeſty well hopes, that what is yet wanting " to the perfecting of it, may be now accompliſh'd. " And therefore, in his Majeſty's Name, I do moſt " heartily recommend this great Work unto you: " and I doubt not but you will ſpeedily ſend ſuch " an humble Anſwer to his Majeſty's moſt gracious " Letter, as may witneſs how well-grounded that " Confidence is which his Majeſty hath expreſſed " of you.

" This Day the Parliament of England meets, and " the King will, both by himſelf and his Lord- " Keeper, make the like Propoſals (as to the Uni- " on) unto both Houſes: And I am confident that " Loyal Parliament, who have all along given ſuch " ample Teſtimonies of their Duty and Affection to " his Majeſty, will upon this Occaſion make a " ſuitable return to his Propoſals. What is farther " to be propoſed upon this Matter, ſhall be offer'd " at your next Days meeting: And the King doubts " not, but that after the meeting of Commiſſioners " for both Kingdoms, theſe things will be tender'd " to your Conſideration, in order to the Union, as " ſhall tend to the Honour of his Majeſty, and the " common Good of all his Subjects. Theſe things " I was commanded before I came away from his " Majeſty, to acquaint you with; and I have ſince, " upon another occaſion, received an Order in Wri- " ting, bearing Date the 7th of this Month, by " which I am again commanded amply to declare " his Majeſty's unchangeable Reſolution to main- " tain Epiſcopal Government in the Church. So " having begun and ended with this Declaration, I " hope both the groundleſs Jealouſies on the one " hand, and the vain and idle Hopes on the other, " ſhall be at an end.

1669. 21 Car. II.

After ſome Conſideration the Parliament of Scotland returned this Anſwer to his Majeſty's gracious Letter.

Anſwer of the Scots Parliament to the King's Letter.

Moſt Sacred Soveraign,

" THE Goodneſs of God in reſtoring your Ma-" jeſty to your Government, and thereby " this your antient Kingdom to its former Liberty " and Peace; hath been, and will ever, with all hum-" ble Duty and Thankfulneſs, be acknowledged as " the greateſt Bleſſing we are capable of in this " World. And the many ſingular and renewed " Teſtimonies this Kingdom hath ſince met with, " of your Fatherly Care, Kindneſs, and Zeal to " promote its Welfare and Happineſs in all its Con-" cerns, have ſo engaged the Hearts and Affections " of your Subjects, that we can with Confidence " aſſure your Majeſty of a chearful Concurrence " from this Kingdom in every thing that may tend " to your Majeſty's Honour, or the good of your " Subjects.

" We do, with the like Duty and Thankfulneſs, " acknowledge your Majeſty's Grace and Goodneſs " in your Deſires to render this Iſland more happy " than ever it was in former times, by ſettling a-" mong your good Subjects within the ſame, ſuch a " mutual Affection as may endure to all Poſterity. " And ſince the bringing of your two Kingdoms of " Scotland and England to as cloſe and ſtrict an Union " as is poſſible, is the Mean your Majeſty propoſes, " for effectuating thereof we ſhall be ready to give " our hearty Concurrence therein; and in order " thereunto, are willing that Commiſſioners be ap-" pointed for this Kingdom, to treat with ſuch as " ſhall be employ'd for the Kingdom of England, " upon the Grounds and Conditions of this Union; " reſerving always to the Parliament, to whom the " Reſolution of theſe Commiſſioners are to be re-" turned, the Conſideration thereof, and the allow-" ing or diſallowing of the ſame, as they ſhall " judge fit. And in confidence of your Majeſty's " moſt excellent Judgment, and great Affection in " all things relating to the happineſs of your Peo-" ple, whereof this Kingdom hath already had ſuch " ſignal Proofs, we do freely and heartily offer to " your Majeſty the nomination of the Perſons to " treat for this Kingdom, with the appointing of " their Number, Quorum, Time, and Place of their " meeting: And upon ſignification of your Maje-" ſty's Pleaſure therein, we ſhall give ſuch Commiſ-" ſions and Orders for promoving of the Treaty, as " (reſerving the full determination of all to the Par-" liament, as aforeſaid) ſhall witneſs our cheerful " Compliance with your Majeſty's deſires.

" The Earl of Lauderdale, whom your Majeſty, " to the great Satisfaction of your People, and In-" tereſt of your Service, has been pleaſed to autho-" rize as your Commiſſioner, hath in your Majeſty's " Name renewed to us the Aſſurances of your Ma-" jeſty's Care and Reſpect, to the good of this your " antient Kingdom; for which we do humbly re-" turn unto your Majeſty the offer of our Lives " and Fortunes for the Advancement of your Maje-" ſty's Honour and Greatneſs, and Maintenance of " your Royal Authority and Government: And in " every thing ſhall be propoſed by him, we ſhall " not only give Credit as to your Commiſſioner, " but alſo ſuch chearful and ready Obedience, as " may evidence to the World the Loyalty of our " Hearts. And in Teſtimony hereof, theſe Preſents " are by Warrant, and in the Name of your Par-" liament, Signed by,

Moſt Sacred Soveraign,

Edinburgh, Octob. 22, 1669.

Your Majeſty's moſt faithful, moſt obedient, and moſt humble Subject and Servant,

ROTHES, Cancell.

In præſentia Dominorum PARLIAMENTI.

1669. 21 Car. II.

Farther Proceedings of the Scots Parliam.

We preſent theſe Letters and Speech to the Reader, to ſhew what Inclinations and what Attempts have been for a Union between the two Kingdoms; and how the former Motions of that kind have been heavily carried on, and abruptly ended. During this Seſſion of the Scots Parliament, they made An Act aſſerting his Majeſty's Supremacy over all Perſons and in all Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical, to a higher and more effectual degree than had ever been before legally declared. And they made another Act for the Benefit of Trade by the Naturalization of Strangers within the Kingdom of Scotland; providing, that all Strangers of the Proteſtant Religion, who ſhould think fit to bring their Eſtates into the ſaid Kingdom, or ſhould come to ſet up new Works and Manufactures therein, ſhould be received and treated as Native-born Subjects to all Intents and Purpoſes. The King farther declaring, that upon Application made to him by ſuch Strangers, he would grant them the free and publick uſe of their Religion in their own Language, and the Liberty of having Churches of their own. But in the mean time, as to the Union, nothing in Parliament was done, and very little mention'd of the matter. It is obſervable, that tho' the Deſign tended moſt to the Intereſt of Scotland, and the Wiſhes and Deſires of it ſeem'd to come from thence; yet the Objections and Interruptions were chiefly from the ſame Quarter, and were owing to the Jealouſies of ſuffering as the weaker ſide, to the Love of Independence, and the Affectation of a ſeparate Intereſt, and the Remembrance of being an antient Kingdom within itſelf; which Principles muſt needs indiſpoſe them to the Propoſal or Reception of any effectual Terms of Union; tho' indeed under all theſe Diſadvantages, they were in great meaſure united by Oliver Cromwel.

State of Religion.

Nonconformiſts indulged.

The Nonconformiſts had their open Meetings more full and frequent, and their Intereſt and Figure growing more conſiderable, by reaſon of the King's apparent Inclinations of Indulgence to them; and by the particular Countenance and Protection of ſome of the chief Miniſters of State, who agreed in the Patronage of them, tho' on a different Principle; ſome out of Humanity and Moderation, but others from a worſe Motive of gaining the more Liberty to Papiſts, and weakning the Communion of the Eſtabliſh'd Church. Under theſe Advantages the Nonconformiſts aſſum'd a Liberty that became very offenſive to thoſe who were by Conſcience in the Communion of the Eſtabliſh'd Church, and had a reſpect for the legal Conſtitution of the Kingdom. For by their own Account, " Mr. Baxter and other " Teachers now openly boaſted of the Act againſt " Conventicles being no longer in Force; of their " Meetings being not now contrary to Law; of no " Act in being that could convict them of keeping " Conventicles; of the Oxford Act only ſuppoſing " Perſons already convicted, but not enabling any " to convict them; of the Oxford Oath no way con-" cerning their Teachers, and that it ought not to " be put upon them. And to make themſelves a more formidable Body againſt the Church, the two chief Parties, the Presbyterians and Independents, were now projecting a Union with one another, as the Fact and Method are thus deliver'd in their own way. " At this time (1669) Mr. Baxter was pro-" jecting an Agreement with the Independents for " the ſtrengthning of the common Intereſt: Dr. " Owen, in his Catechiſm, had made two conſide-" rable Conceſſions, viz. That the People have not " the Power of the Keys; and, That they give not the " Power of the Keys, or their Office Power to the Pa- " ſtors. Theſe Conceſſions he thought very improv-" able, and therefore he propoſed to him, that they " two ſhould ſee how far they could go towards an " Accommodation, before the Matter was commu-" nicated to others. The Method he offer'd was Union propos'd between Presbyter. and Independ.

" this:

1669. 21 Car. II.

"this: That they ſhould firſt fix the Eſſentials of Religion and Communion, which are the Terms that all Chriſtians agree in; and then endeavour to find out the Means of bringing both Sides to conſent to Communion upon thoſe Terms. He thought the moſt likely Method would be, the drawing up a Writing containing all the Points of Diſcipline, great and ſmall, which the two Parties were really agreed in, which would make the few things they differ'd in ſeem ſo ſmall, as not to be ſufficient to hinder Communion. He was for each of them to draw up a draught, and then conſider the Matter together; but the Dr. highly approving the Motion, deſired him to undertake it. Whereupon he drew up a great many Theſes, as the Matter of their common Concord. He complained they were too many, and might be abridg'd: Whereupon he quickly carried him another Draught, of ſo many of thoſe things which both Presbyterians and Independents are agreed in, as are neceſſary to their practical Concord and Communion with reſpect to the things wherein they are or ſeem diſagreed. The Dr's Objections were principally four: That the Particulars inſiſted on were too many for the firſt Attempt; that the Socinians would agree to make the Creed, as expounded in the firſt four Councils, the Teſt of Orthodoxy; that ſome Expreſſions ſuited to prevent future Diviſions and Separations, would ſeem to reflect on former actings; and, that the inſiſting on the Power of the Magiſtrate, eſpecially as under Civil Coercion and Puniſhment, was not neceſſary in the firſt Attempt."

Confidence of the Diſſenters.

Under this Diſpoſition of all the Diſſenters jointly to oppoſe the Church of England, they ſeem'd to deſpiſe, and indeed to defy the Laws againſt them. When Mr. Baxter was brought before the Juſtices of Peace, and told by them, that he was convict of keeping Conventicles contrary to the Law, and ſo tender'd him the Oxford Oath; he anſwer'd boldly, That he took not his Meeting to be contrary to Law; and that the Oxford Oath did not concern him; nor could he apprehend they were impower'd by the Act to put it upon him. And when for his Offence and Contempt he was committed to Goal for ſix Months, many at Court mov'd for him; the Earl of Orrery, Earl of Mancheſter, Lord Arlington, and Duke of Buckingham, intimated to the King, that his Impriſonment was not for his Service: And Sir John Barber came to him in Priſon, to let him know, that the King in Diſcourſe had ſignified to him, That he was not willing to be ſeen to relax the Law, but that he would not be offended if he ſought his Remedy at Law. And accordingly, his Habeas Corpus was demanded at the Common Pleas, and granted: The Judges declar'd the Mittimus invalid, and he was diſcharged; "having receiv'd in Priſon 20 Broad Pieces from Sir John Bernard, 10*l.* from the Counteſs of Exeter, and 5*l.* of Alderman Beard; which defray'd his Law and Priſon Charges."

Abridgm. of Mr. Baxter's Life.

A formidable Party.

The whole Party were indeed ſo bold in trampling upon the Laws and Conſtitution, that it juſtly raiſed not only the Indignation of the Church-Men, but the Jealouſie of all who were honeſtly concern'd for the Government, and the legal Adminiſtration of it. And therefore the better to diſcover their Numbers and places of publick Meeting, the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſent his circular Letter, dated from Lambeth June 8. 1669. requiring the Bp of London and his other Suffragans, to take a particular Account of them within their reſpective Dioceſes. And the Return of this Enquiry made ſuch a due Impreſſion on the better part of the Miniſtry, that on Friday July 16. "Upon ſeveral Informations which had been given in to his Majeſty from ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom, that thoſe who ſeparate themſelves from the eſtabliſh'd Worſhip, do meet in greater Numbers than formerly, to ſuch a degree as may endanger the publick Peace, by which his Majeſty could not but take notice how far his known and ſtill avowed Eaſineſs to indulge tender Conſciences was abuſed thereby; his Majeſty was pleaſed, by the Advice of his Privy Council, to order his Proclamation to be iſſued out, ſtraitly charging and commanding all his Juſtices of the Peace, within the Limits of their ſeveral Juriſdictions, where they ſhall find ſuch Meetings to be held; that they put the Laws in execution for Suppreſſion thereof, and particularly proceed againſt the Preachers, according to the Statute made in the 17th of his Majeſty's Reign, intitled, An Act for reſtraining Nonconformiſts from inhabiting in Corporations." This Proceeding of the King in Council met with ſuch a general Approbation from the Nobility and Gentry, that at the next Meeting of the Parliament, both Houſes, in a ſolemn manner, on "Novemb. 6. return'd his Majeſty their Thanks for his Care of the Publick, in iſſuing out his Proclamation for ſuppreſſing Conventicles; and humbly deſired his Majeſty to continue the ſame care for the future."

Proclamation for ſuppreſſing Conventicles.

Royal Favours to the Sees of Exeter and Sarum.

His Majeſty was pleaſed this Year to confer two ſignal Marks of Favour upon the two Epiſcopal Sees of Exeter and Sarum. For upon the Vacancy of the Deanery of St. Burien in Cornwal, the Dignity and Revenue thereof was by Royal Authority annex'd and united for ever to the Biſhoprick of [a] Exeter, for the better ſupport of that See miſerably impoveriſh'd at the Reformation. And in a Chapter of the moſt noble Order of the Garter held at Whitehall on Nov. 19. the Sovereign then declared, that the Reaſon of calling this Chapter was to conſider of the Pretenſions of Dr. Seth Ward Biſhop of Saliſbury, exhibited in a Petition concerning the Title and Claim of himſelf and his Succeſſors unto the Office of Chancellor of the moſt noble Order of the Garter (when the ſame ſhould become void) the Biſhop grounding the Equity of his Claim upon a Charter firſt granted by King Edward the Fourth, in the fifteenth Year of his Reign, unto Richard Beauchamp Biſhop of Saliſbury, and his Succeſſors for ever; which Charter hath been ſince confirm'd under the Great Seal of England by other Kings and Queens, and particularly by King Charles the Firſt, of ever bleſſed Memory: Hereupon the Biſhop being called in, and commanded to produce his Proofs to make good that his Pretenſion, accordingly the Biſhop humbly offer'd an authentick Copy of the Original Charter of the ſaid King Edward [b] the Fourth, renewed and confirmed by the ſaid King Charles the Firſt, in the fourth Year of his Reign; the which being read and truly conſider'd, together with the Objections to the contrary, particularly that the Poſſeſſion and Execution of the ſaid Office of Chancellor, had been for above an hundred Years committed unto Lay-Men; notwithſtanding which, the Sovereign and Companions be-

[a] The Gazette gave an Account of his Majeſty's annexing the Revenue of the vacant Deanery of St. Burien to the Biſhoprick of Exeter, for the better Support of that Dignity. Numb. 384. And Dr. Pope, in his Life of Dr. Seth Ward, then Biſhop of Exeter, tells us he made the Biſhoprick better than he found it, by procuring the Deanery of St. Burien, near the Lands-End in Cornwall, to be ſettled upon the Biſhops of Exeter for ever by the King's Letters Patents after the Death of Dr. Weeks, who was then incumbent. It did not become void till Biſhop Sparrow's Time. He firſt enjoy'd it, and it does ſtill, and I hope ever will (ſaith the Doctor) continue in the Poſſeſſion of the Biſhops of Exeter. But there is now a Failure of thoſe Hopes. Upon the Death of Biſhop Blackhall, the See was given to Dr. Blackburn, and the Deanery to Mr. Harris, Clerk of the Cloſet to the Prince.

[b] See Aſhmole of the Garter, Fol. p. 243.

ing

1669. 21 Car. II. ing fully ſatisfied with the juſtneſs of the Claim of the ſaid Biſhop, grounded upon the aforeſaid Charters, and likewiſe conſidering, that the returning of the ſaid Office to the firſt Inſtitution would be for the Honour and Dignity of the ſaid moſt Noble Order; the Sovereign thereupon with the unanimous conſent of the moſt noble Companions then preſent, did declare and ordain, that the Biſhop of Sarum, and his Succeſſors for ever, ſhall have and execute the Office of Chancellor of the ſaid moſt Noble Order, and receive and enjoy all Rights, Privileges and Advantages thereunto belonging, immediately upon the firſt vacancy of the ſaid Office.

Dr. Peter Gunning made Bp. of Chicheſter. March 6. The Ceremony of Conſecration of the Right Reverend and Learned Dr. Peter Gunning Biſhop of Chicheſter, was performed in the Chapel of his Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, with the uſual Solemnities, in preſence of both the Archbiſhops, moſt of the Biſhops now in Town, and many Perſons of Honour and Quality.

Acts paſt in Parl. 1670. The Parliament having prepar'd their Bills and diſpatch'd all other Buſineſs, on Monday April 11. in the Afternoon, his Majeſty was pleaſed to be preſent in the Houſe of Peers, where the two Houſes being met, the King gave his Royal Aſſent to theſe publick Acts.

1. An Act for granting his Majeſty an Impoſition upon all Wines and Vinegar imported, between June 24. 1670. and June 24. 1678.

2. An Act for taking away the Benefit of Clergy from ſuch as ſteal Cloth from the Racks, and from ſuch as ſhall ſteal or embezel his Majeſty's Ammunition and Stores.

3. An Act for Improvement of Tillage, and the Breed of Cattle.

4. An Act for aſcertaining the Meaſures of Corn and Salt.

5. An Act for the repairing the Haven and Peers of Great Yarmouth.

6. An additional Act for the better repairing of Highways and Bridges.

7. An Act for advancing the Sale of Fee-Farm Rents, and other Rents.

8. An Act to ſuppreſs and prevent Seditious Conventicles [a].

9. An Act for ſettling the Impoſition on Brandy.

10. An Act for Authorizing ſeveral Commiſſioners of the Realm of England, to treat with Commiſſioners of Scotland for the Weal of both Kingdoms. 1669. 21 Car. II.

11. An additional Act for rebuilding of the City of London, uniting of Pariſhes, and rebuilding of the Cathedral and Parochial Churches within the ſaid City.

12. An Act to enable the King's Majeſty to make Leaſes, Grants and Copies of Offices, Lands, Tenements and Hereditaments, parcel of his Highneſſes Dutchy of Cornwal, or annex'd to the ſame.

13. An Act for Sale of part of the Eſtate of Sir John Petiman, for ſatisfaction of a Debt due to the King's Majeſty.

After the paſſing theſe and 25 other private Acts, his Majeſty ſignified his Pleaſure, that the two Houſes ſhould adjourn till October 24 next; which was accordingly done.

The Act of treating for a Union between the two Kingdoms, was by concert follow'd in Scotland, with an Act of that Parliament for appointing their Commiſſioners to meet and act in purſuance of that great Affair: But after many Conferences and ſeeming Reſolutions of Agreement in the main things, they broke off in mutual Jealouſies and a general diſſatisfaction. I have heard one of the Scots Commiſſioners themſelves confeſs it was their own Fault in being over-wiſe and nice in the ſmaller terms of Accommodation. Union of the two Kingdoms a Project ineffectual.

The Dutcheſs of Orleans the King's Siſter was preparing for a Voyage to England, in appearance for a Viſit of Love and Reſpect to her Brothers, in deſign for a Meſſage from the French Court, to break the Triple League, and to draw in the King of England to aſſiſt France againſt the Dutch. His Majeſty in a kind expectation of her ſent the Advice, the Guernſey, and ſeveral Yatches to receive her Royal Highneſs at Dunkirk, and haſted himſelf to Dover on Sunday May 15. accompanied by the Duke of [b] York, Prince Rupert, the Duke of Monmouth, and many other Perſons of Honour and Quality. The Dutcheſs landed the next Morning, and was received and entertain'd by his Majeſty with all poſſible Expreſſions of Kindneſs. She was attended by the Mareſchal De Pleſſis Praſlin, and his Brother the Biſhop of Tournay, Madam De Pleſſis the Mareſchal's Son's Lady, the Counteſs of Grammont, and a beau- Dutcheſs of Orleans meets the King at Dover.

[a] In preparing this Act againſt Conventicles. March 17, 1669/70. Leave given in the Houſe of Commons to bring in a Bill for ſuppreſſing of Conventicles. March 9, 1669/70. the Commons paſs'd the Bill for ſuppreſſing Conventicles, and ſent it to the Lords. The next Day, March 10, Mr. Trevor acquainted the Houſe of Commons, that upon attending his Majeſty with their Votes and Deſires for ſuppreſſing of Conventicles, and putting the Laws in Execution againſt the Papiſts, his Majeſty was pleaſed to declare, that effectual Courſe ſhould be taken with both. March 25, 1670. the Lords debated the Bill for ſuppreſſing of Conventicles, and made ſeveral Amendments to it. March 28. the Bill for ſuppreſſing Conventicles was ſent back to the Houſe of Commons, who agreed to ſeveral Amendments of the Lords, but adher'd to their own Clauſe of making above Five an unlawful Aſſembly. March 30. the Commons had a Conference with the Lords, manag'd by Sir Heneage Finch, who gave the Reaſons for their Adherence, and ſome Amendments in the Bill to ſuppreſs Conventicles.

[b] Father Orleans, who pretends to have been let into Secrets by King James II. in his Hiſtory of the Revolutions in England, tells us expreſſly, that Madame, the late Dutcheſs of Orleans, concluded now a Treaty between England and France, when ſhe made that myſterious Voyage beyond the Sea: And that in this Treaty one Article related to Religion, i. e. the granting of Liberty of Conſcience for favouring of the Catholicks: That all the Debate was concerning the Extent of that Liberty; and the two Kings acting in Concert, that Affair was handled in their Treaty. Several Propoſals were made, ſome more, ſome leſs advantageous to the Catholicks. France was for the more moderate, as the ſafeſt and moſt ſeaſonable; that his Majeſty ſhould grant Liberty of Conſcience to all his Subjects in general. I am not ignorant, (ſays a later Writer) that many will not allow there ever was a formal Treaty concluded at Dover: But whether there was any ſuch Convention or no, the Event abundantly ſhew'd that King Charles was drawn into a verbal Aſſurance at leaſt, and Promiſe to favour the French Deſigns, &c. Life of Sir William Temple. 8*vo.* p. 165.

This Intrigue was underſtood in Holland as well as in France. The Hiſtory of Cornelius and John De Wit, printed in French in two Volumes, tells it thus. Vol. II. p. 344. If the King of Sweden was not dazled with French Gold, it gain'd more on the King of England, by the Perſuaſions of the Dutcheſs of Orleans, his Siſter, ſupported by Monſieur Colbert the French Ambaſſador, who made the King believe what he would. A hundred thouſand Piſtoles were remitted to that Miniſter, which he laid out to Advantage, to engage thoſe that had the greateſt Intereſt in the King. The Lords of the CABAL had the greateſt part of that Money; they were known to be the moſt mortal Enemies of the United Provinces, &c.

There was an Opera prepared for the Entertainment of the Dutcheſs of Orleans at her Return to Paris, called de Genie de France, written by Monſieur St. Ange, a Penſioner of the French King, wherein the Author thus addreſs'd himſelf to the Dutcheſs: "It is from your heavenly Wiſdom to manage "your Royal Brother's tender Soul, that we expect the happieſt of Conſequences. 'Tis from the Torch of your Love "to our Catholick Apoſtolick Church we hope to ſee his "Britannick Majeſty's Zeal to the ancient Religion of his "Anceſtors take Flame, by the Sympathy of a neareſt Relation. We long with ſomewhat of Impatience for the "happy Reſult of your Conſultations: We doubt not to ſee "that Monſter Hereſy lie grovelling at our invincible Monarch's "and your Brother's Feet, and her Supporters expiring in Chains.

The Abbot Primi in his Hiſtory of the Dutch War, printed at Paris 1682. is poſitive that ſome things engag'd the King of England to ſign a ſecret Treaty with France: And to make it the more firm, Henrietta, Dutcheſs of Orleans, went over into England in 1670, and propos'd a Treaty to her Brother in the Name of the moſt Chriſtian King, wherein ſhe proffer'd to ſecure to him an abſolute Authority over his Parliament, and the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Catholick Religion in his three Kingdoms.

tiful Servant Madam De Quenovaille, whom ſhe left behind her, an Object of the King's Affection and the Nation's Hatred, the enamouring and intriguing Dutcheſs of Portſmouth.

The French King ſeem'd impatient in the Expectance of his Siſter's return, as if ſhe were to bring him News of very great Importance; and therefore he came to Dunkirk and ſtay'd there ſome Days for her arrival: The King of England ſending over my Lord Bukhurſt, and his Royal Highneſs Mr. Thinne to complement his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty in that Port, which ought rather to have been ſtill in Engliſh hands. She embark'd from Dover on Thurſday June 2. and landed at Calais the ſame Evening. But her ſtay in England having been longer than Monſieur her Husband allow'd or expected, it raiſed a Jealouſie, or at leaſt a Diſcontent in him; and it was plainly owing to his unkind Reception of her, that in her perfection of Strength, and Health, and Age, ſhe was hurried out of the World within few Days after her return. Our Court in great Amazement † durſt not betray a ſuſpicion of her indirect way of dying, but gave this ſoft Account of it, June 22. This Day arrived an Expreſs from Mr. Montague his Majeſty's Ambaſſador at Paris, with the ſad News of the Death of Madam his Majeſty's only Siſter, to the infinite Grief and Affliction of their Majeſty's and Royal Highneſſes, as well for the greatneſs of this loſs as for the aſtoniſhing ſuddenneſs of it. She died at St. Clou about four of the Clock on Monday Morning of a ſudden and violent Diſtemper, which had ſeized her at five of the Clock the Evening before, and was by the Phyſicians taken for a kind of Bilious Cholick.

Her ſudden Death.

Prince of Orange viſits the King.

His Majeſty receiv'd this Year a more happy Viſit from his Nephew the Prince of Orange, who had lately at eighteen Years of Age been choſen Firſt Noble of Zealand, and began now to ſhew himſelf very forward, and to deſerve the Character of being a moſt extreme hopeful Prince: And to ſpeak more plainly (in Sir William Temple's own Words) ſomething much better than he expected, a young Man of more Parts than ordinary, and of the better ſort, that is, not lying in that kind of Wit which was neither of uſe to ones ſelf nor any Body elſe; but in good plain Senſe, which ſhews Application if he had Buſineſs that deſerved it, and with extreme good and agreeable Humour and Diſpoſitions, and thus far of his way without any Vice; beſides, being ſleepy always by ten a Clock at Night, and loving Hunting as much as he hated Swearing, and preferring Cock-Ale before any Wine.

About the beginning of June he had been introduced into the Council of State, and that with all the pleaſing Circumſtances of being ineffectually oppoſed, and of prevailing by the Affections of the People. At this Juncture he reſolv'd upon a Journey into England, but before he ſet out, he was very earneſt with the Engliſh Ambaſſador to have his Opinion, whether he was likely to procure any Satiſfaction in his Pretenſions there; ſaying, that all his beſt Friends in Holland were of Opinion, that in caſe that ſhould wholly fail him, his Journey would prove of great prejudice to his Affairs at home, by letting his Friends ſee how little he was conſidered by his Majeſty, whoſe Countenance would be a great ſupport to him in the courſe of his Fortunes. Theſe Pretenſions of his were ſuppoſed to be ſome Money owing from England upon the account of his Mother's Fortune; for the Ambaſſador's Anſwer to him on this Subject was, That he was wholly ignorant of all his Majeſty's Affairs, beſides what related to that Country, and particularly of the preſent State of his Revenue, or how much the late Supplies had contributed towards the eaſe of it. Upon which the Prince ſeem'd very deſirous that the Ambaſſador (Sir William Temple) ſhould touch on it to one of the chief Miniſters in England, ſo as to have his Thoughts upon it before he went. This Motion was ſuppoſed to have proceeded chiefly from the Princeſs Dowager, who declared her Opinion poſitively ſome Weeks before to the Ambaſſador upon that matter to the ſame purpoſe, and for ſome time perſiſted in it. This private Affair might be one Motive and the more profeſt Reaſon of his Journey to England; but no doubt he had ſome more publick Thoughts and Cares upon him, relating to his own Honour and Hereditary Claims, and the Intereſt of his Country, and the common Good of Europe, which were all now upon a very Critical Turn.

His Reception.

But whatever were the main Hopes and Deſigns of his Journey, it was diſcourag'd and protracted from time to time; yet with a Spirit not eaſily diverted from any Reſolution, he embark'd at the Bril on October 27. upon one of his Majeſty's Yatches that waited there for him, and arrived at Margate on October 29. He immediately took poſt for Canterbury, and lay that Night at Rocheſter, and went forward next Morning to Graveſend, where he was attended by Sir Charles Cotterel Maſter of the Ceremonies, with his Majeſty's Barges, and ſo conducted to Whitehall, where landing, he was received at the Stairs foot by the Lord Chamberlain, and conducted to the Preſence of both their Majeſty's, who received him with all poſſible demonſtrations of Affection and Joy, as did likewiſe their Royal Highneſſes, to whom he was in like manner conducted, and thence to the Apartment prepared for him at the Cockpit. On Nov. 10. the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs and [a] Aldermen of London came and Complemented his Highneſs upon his arrival in England, as foreboding his being the future Reſtorer and Preſerver of their Rights and Liberties. On Nov. 26. being at New-market he viſited Cambridge, where he was honourably received by the whole Body of the Univerſity, entertain'd in Congregation with Speeches, and treated at Dinner by Dr. Fleetwood Provoſt of King's-College. On December 6. he was treated with extraordinary Magnificence by the Lord Mayor and City at Draper's-Hall. December 18. he went to Windſor, and from thence next Day to Oxford, where he was received at the Eaſt-Gate by the Mayor and Aldermen, and at St. Mary's was attended by the Vice-Chancellor and the whole Body of the Univerſity, and at the great Gate of Chriſt-Church was received and complemented by the Dean, Canons and whole Society, and by them conducted to his Apartment in that College, where his Highneſs and his Train were nobly treated by the Dean the generous Dr. Fell. The next Morning his Highneſs went to view the ſeveral Colleges, and found the Heads with their reſpective Societies ſtanding at the Gates in a readineſs to receive him. After Noon he viſited the Schools, the Library and Theatre, in which laſt place a Convocation was held, where his Highneſs was Complemented in a Speech by the Orator Dr. South, and did the Univerſity the Honour of accepting a Degree (as did ſeveral other Honourable

† The ſeveral Authorities for concluding that the Dutcheſs was certainly poiſon'd, are well put together in the Secret Hiſtory of Europe. P. I. p. 108. He has omitted one thing in a Diſcourſe upon the Death of the Earl of Eſſex in the Tower.—The King had not the Courage to reſent the poiſoning his own Siſter by her Huſband the D. of Orleans, at a juncture when he might have made France feel the Effects of his Juſtice and Diſpleaſure.—For I remember, that when the late Sir Thomas Armſtrong had come Poſt from Paris to give his Majeſty an Account how Orleans had poiſoned the Princeſs Henrietta, he only replied, Orleans is a Raſcal; but pray thee, Tom, do not ſpeak of what he hath done.

[a] See a Letter of the Lord Arlington to Sir William Godolphin in Spain, dated, Whitehall, Nov. 21. 1670. —— The Prince of Orange hath been now three Weeks amongſt us, much to the Satisfaction of the King, and all that have ſeen him; being a young Man of the moſt extraordinary Underſtanding and Parts, beſides his Quality and Birth, that makes him ſhine the better. His Majeſty hath promiſed him to pay his Debt, or aſſign it upon a good Fond, before he goes, which he hopes will be an Encouragement to the Queen of Spain to do the like. Letters of Earl of Arlington. Vol. II. p. 311.

Perſons

1669. 21 Car. II.

Perſons of his Train) and of an Invitation from the Vice-Chancellor to his College of St. John's, where he was entertain'd with an excellent and liberal Dinner. On Monday February 15. the Prince parted from Whitehal early, in order to his return for Holland, infinitely ſenſible of the great Tenderneſs and Affection expreſt to him by their Majeſty's during the time he had been in England, and not leſs ſatisfied with the univerſal Eſteem and Reſpects of the Court and People here. His Highneſs din'd at Rocheſter, and thence having view'd the Ships that lie in the River, he embarked about five in the Evening on board his Majeſty's Yatch at Sheerneſs, being accompany'd by the Earl of Oſſory, whom his Majeſty had particularly appointed to attend his Highneſs in his Paſſage over. He came to the Hague privately on Saturday Evening, in an ordinary Stage-Coach, attended by one or two Servants, to avoid all publick Ceremony; all which could not hinder the People, who had known of his arrival, from flocking to ſee him paſs, and were not wanting to expreſs by loud Acclamations their Joy for his Highneſs's ſafe return.

His Return.

The King by his Siſter's Importunity and other Solicitations was now unhappily diſpoſed to a nearer Alliance and Correſpondence with the French King, who had ſeconded the Motions ſuppoſed to be whiſper'd from the Dutcheſs of Orleans, by his Ambaſſador in Ordinary Monſieur Colbert [a], and by another expreſs Agent the Marquis De Bellefonds; and to ſoften things, had deſcended from his former ſtiffneſs, and had deliver'd up to Sir Charles Wheeler the Engliſh Portion of St. Chriſtophers, yet deſtroy'd all the Plantations, and carried away all that was portable, and left the Country in a worſe Condition than if it had never been inhabited. By this Intrigue of new Friendſhip, the French King was enabled to keep the Emperor and the Duke of Lorrain from entring (as before inclin'd) into the Triple League; and to engage the Archbiſhop of Cologne and the Biſhop of Munſter (two Princes of the Empire) againſt the Dutch; and to prepare a Fleet more formidable than the Kingdom of France had ever before pretended to ſhew; wherein he was aſſiſted by Engliſh Shipwrights and Engliſh Timber, to the reproach of our Court, and the great damage of our Dominion and Trade at Sea.

A nearer Alliance with Fr.

James Duke of Monmouth was admitted into the Privy Council on April 28. he was the eldeſt and beſt beloved Natural Son of King Charles by Mrs. Lucy Walters, born at Rotterdam on April 9. 1649. and bearing the Name of James Crofts till his Majeſty's Reſtoration; bred chiefly at Paris under the Eye of the Queen-Mother, and the Government of Thomas Roſs, Eſq; afterwards Secretary to Mr. Coventry Ambaſſador to the King of Sweden, Keeper of the King's Library, and Groom of the Privy Chamber: His Beauty, his Mien and Behaviour, in thoſe Years of Childhood were ſaid to be Graceful and Majeſtick, and to Charm all that ſaw him. He was brought over to England in July 1662. and received by the King at Hampton-Court with all poſſible Demonſtrations of Joy and Affection. He had an Apartment fitted up for him in the Privy Gallery at Whitehall; he had his Gentlemen and Pages to attend him, with other Equipage, Train, and Penſion, ſuitable to his Birth and Royal Relation. The ſame Year he was created Duke of Orkney in Scotland, and the 25th of Febr. Duke of Monmouth. He then took his Seat in the Houſe of Peers, and in April 1663. he was inſtall'd Knight of the Garter, with the uſual Solemnities, at Windſor. In 1665. he was entred a Member of Chriſt-Church in Oxford, having been before incorporated a Maſter of Arts in both Univerſities: In this ſame Year he was made Maſter of the Horſe, and ſoon after married Anne Daughter and Heir to Francis Earl of Buccleugh in Scotland, generally eſteem'd the greateſt Fortune and the fineſt Woman in the three Kingdoms. His Majeſty gave him ſeveral other Places of Honour and Profit, as General of his Land-Forces, Captain of his Life-guards of Horſe, Lord Lieutenant of the Eaſt-Riding of Yorkſhire, Governour of the Town and Citadel of Kingſton upon Hull, Chief Juſtice in Eyre on the South-ſide of Trent, and in Right of his Lady, Duke of Buccleugh, and Lord Great Chamberlain of Scotland: And, what was above all other Titles, he grew every Day more and more a Favourite of the King and of the People.

Duke of Monmouth comes into Favour.

John Lord Berkley was appointed by the King to be Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; and arriving at Dublin on April 21. entred that Day upon the Poſſeſſion of his Government, the Lord Roberts delivering up the Sword to him, with a ſhort Speech, in Council. On Tueſday Apr. 26. the Univerſity of Dublin attended his Excellency, introduced by the Lord Primate, where Dr. Ward made him an excellent Oration in Latin; to which his Excellency made his return in Engliſh, letting them know the Kindneſs he had for Learning and Learned Men; concluding with this Counſel to them, that they would apply their Minds and Studies to the moſt uſeful Parts of Learning, ſuch as did moſt conduce to the Benefit of Mankind, to which he promiſed them all due Encouragement.

Ld. Berkley made Lieutenant of Ireland.

The Earl of Eſſex was ſent Ambaſſador from his Majeſty of Great Britain to the King of Denmark, and made his ſolemn Entry into Copenhagen May 14. Henry Earl of Ogle, the only Son of his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle, was ſworn a Privy Counſellor on June 15. The Duke of Buckingham was ſent with [b] private Inſtructions to the French King, and had Audience from him at St. Germains in the beginning of Auguſt, where his Majeſty entertain'd him with a Review of his Army drawn out of the Camp at St. Sebaſtien, with which he preſently after took Poſſeſſion of Lorrain. Sir William Temple return'd from his Embaſſy in Holland, and was graciouſly received by his Majeſty on Sept. 20.

Embaſſies abroad.

His Majeſty, by entring into new Counſels and a ſtricter Correſpondence with the French King, became the more jealous of the Diſcontents of his own People: And it was on this account, that on June 10. his Majeſty order'd a Proclamation to be iſſued out, commanding all Officers and Soldiers ſerving in any of the Armies of the late Uſurped Powers,

[b] This intimate Correſpondence between the two Courts of England and France to the Jealouſy of Holland was ſufficiently confeſs'd in a Letter of the Earl of Arlington to Sir William Godolphin in Spain, dated, Whitehall, Aug. 19, 1670.— This part of the World, apt to be diſcompoſed upon any new Motion of the King of France's Troops, as they were alarm'd at the beginning of the Year by that King's March to the Frontiers, and are now again by the raiſing of his Camp about St. Germains, and ſending his Troops thither. Monſieur Van Benninghen was with me yeſterday brimful of theſe Apprehenſions, and inferring poſitively from them, that the Peace would be immediately broken. I told him I could not believe it, becauſe the King our Maſter hath all the moral Aſſurances that can be receiv'd from his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, that he will inviolably keep the Peace of Aix la Chapelle: On the Confidence of which we live in a perfect good Underſtanding with that Court; and ſuch Civilities paſs between the two Kings, as give much Umbrage and Offence to Monſ. Van Benninghen, &c.

[b] The Mareſchal de Bellefond had been lately ſent over by the French, under a pretence of condoling the Death of Madam, the Dutcheſs of Orleans. His Arrival at London alarm'd the Dutch Miniſters in our Court; and Monſ. De Wit no longer doubted of a good Underſtanding between K. Charles and Lewis XIV. tho' the Miniſtry in England acted their Parts very well, purſuant to the Inſtructions given them by France, not to ſeem at all inclin'd to break the Alliance, till the two Courts were ready to ſtrike the deciſive Blow. Tho' the Duke of Buckingham was diſpatch'd to France to return Monſieur de Bellefond's Compliment, and purſue his Negotiations; yet ſo well did the Court of England diſſemble, that they diſſipated all Monſieur Van Benninghen the Dutch Ambaſſador's Apprehenſions, and made him look on the Voyages of the Mareſchal and Duke as pure Ceremonies only. Secret Hiſt. of Europe. P. I. p. 114.

1670. 22Car.II.

not having a conſtant Habitation, to depart out of the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, on or before the 16th of June, and not to return again, or come within 20 Miles, till after the 10th Day of December next, and in the mean time to carry no Sword, Piſtol, or other Arms.

Meeting of Parl.

Monday Octob. 24. the two Houſes of Parliament, according to their adjournment, re-aſſembled at Weſtminſter, where his Majeſty made a ſhort gracious Speech to the two Houſes, leaving the Lord Keeper to open to them more at large the Particulars, which were, "The great Care his Majeſty " had taken of them and of the Kingdom ſince their " laſt Receſs, and that beſides the Triple-League " he had made many advantageous Alliances, both " for Security and Profit of Trade, with the Swede, " Dane, Spaniard, and the Duke of Savoy: But ſince " the Dutch and French made ſuch vaſt Naval Pre- " parations, it was neceſſary, for the Safety and " Honour of the Nation, that the King ſhould at " leaſt keep equal pace with them, which could " not be done without great Supplies, which muſt " be ſpeedily granted; for the King intended to put " an end to this Seſſion before Chriſtmas. This done, the Commons, with their Speaker, returned to their Houſe, and the ſame Morning adjourned, as did alſo the Houſe of Lords till Thurſday[b]. And notwithſtanding his Majeſty's declar'd Intention, they continued to ſit till Monday March 6. when his Majeſty gave his Royal Aſſent to ſeveral Bills preſented to him; among which, the publick ones were theſe that follow: 1. " An Act for regulating the " making of Kidderminſter Stuffs. 2. An Act to " prevent the malicious Burning of Houſes, Stacks " of Corn, and Hay, and killing and maiming of " Cattel. 3. An Act to prevent malicious maim- " ing and wounding. 4. An Act for re-veſting the " Power of granting Wine-Licenſes in his Majeſty's " Heirs and Succeſſors, and for ſettling a Revenue " on his Royal Highneſs in lieu thereof. 5. An Act " for granting a Subſidy to his Majeſty for Supply " of his extraordinary Occaſions. 6. An Act for " continuance of a former Act, entitled, An Act " to prevent delays in extending Statutes, Judg- " ments and Recognizances. 7. An Act for con- " tinuance of a former Act, to prevent Arreſts of " Judgments, and ſuperceeding Executions. 8. An " Act for an additional Exciſe on Beer, Ale, and " other Liquors.

Acts paſſed.

Barbarous Aſſaults on the D. of Ormond and Sir John Coventry.

In the ſame Month of December this Year, there were two barbarous Aſſaults made; one upon the Duke of Ormond, and the other upon Sir John Coventry; which gave expreſs occaſion to the above-mentioned Act for preventing malicious Maiming and Wounding, and therefore commonly called Coventry's Act. The Relations of theſe Facts were thus given by Authority. " On Tueſday the 6th of this inſtant " December, between the Hours of Six and Seven in " the Evening, a barbarous and inhumane Attempt " was made upon the Perſon and Life of his Grace " James Duke of Ormond, who was ſet upon in the " Streets, as he was going in his Coach, between " St. James's and Clarendon-Houſe, by ſix Perſons " armed and mounted on Horſes, who forced him " out of his Coach, and then cauſed him to be ſet " on Horſe-back behind one of their Company, with " intent to have carried him to ſome obſcure Place " out of Town, where they might with more priva- " cy have executed their villanous and bloody Con- " ſpiracy, until at laſt, the ſaid Duke endeavouring " to reſcue himſelf, by diſarming and diſmounting " him that rode before him, was very much woun- " ded in that Conflict, and lies languiſhing under " thoſe Wounds at his Lodgings in Clarendon-Houſe. " His Majeſty ſet forth a Proclamation, promiſing " a Reward of one thouſand Pounds to any Perſon " who ſhould diſcover any one of thoſe ſix Per- " ſons, or any of their Aiders or Abettors. It ſeems the Perſons with great probability ſuſpected, were Richard Hallowell alias Holloway, a Tobacco-Cutter in Frying-pan Alley in Petticoat-Lane without Biſhopſgate; Thomas Allen, alias Ally, alias Ayliffe, a pretended Chirurgion or Doctor of Phyſick, lodging near Aldgate; Thomas Hunt, and one Hurſt: But the chief of them, a Leader of the reſt of the Crew, was Blood, a notorious Traitor, out-law'd in Ireland, who with his own Hand pull'd his Grace out of the Coach, and with the help of Ralph Alexander, mounted him behind his eldeſt Son, Blood himſelf following with a Blunderbuſs to keep off the People; but his Grace's Porter ſeeing what had happen'd, ran after his Maſter, and help'd to diſingage him, and after great oppoſition to carry him ſafe to his own Houſe. Blood's Pretence was, that he intended no Injury to his Grace's Perſon, but only to keep him in private on the other ſide of the Water, till his Grace had ſign'd ſome Writings to ſurrender an Eſtate to Blood that he had forfeited by Rebellion in Ireland[c]: A deſperate Villain! who failing in this Attempt, made another on the Crown it ſelf in the following Year. ——— In the Preamble of the Act to prevent malicious Maiming and Wounding, this Account is given of the other more bloody Aſſault. " On Decemb. 21. a violent and inhumane Attempt " was made upon the Perſon of Sir John Coventry, " Knight of the Honourable Order of the Bath, be- " ing a Member of the Commons Houſe of Parlia- " ment, and then attending the Parliament, and up- " on the Perſon of his Servant William Wylkes, by " a conſiderable number of armed Men, both on " Foot and Horſeback, whereby the ſaid Sir John " Coventry and his Servant then loſt ſeveral Goods, " and the ſaid Sir John Coventry received divers " Wounds, ſome of which were given him in ſuch " barbarous manner, that ſome of the Offenders held " him whilſt others wounded him. The Fact, by " Bills of Indictment, was found to be committed " by Sir Thomas Sandys, Knight, Charles Obrian, " Eſq; Simon Parry and Miles Reeves, who were " fled from Juſtice, not daring to abide a legal " Trial.

State of Religion.

Act to ſuppreſs Conventicles.

The Act made in the former Seſſion to prevent and ſuppreſs ſeditious Conventicles, was (as the Preamble ſet forth) for " Providing farther and more ſpeedy " Remedies againſt the growing and dangerous Pra- " ctices of ſeditious Sectaries and other diſloyal Per- " ſons, who under Pretence of tender Conſciences, " have or may at their Meetings contrive Inſurre- " ctions, as late Experience hath ſhewn. And there- " fore it is Ordained, That if any Perſon of Sixteen

---

[a] Mr. Marvell in his Growth of Popery 4to, 1677. tells us of this Parliament, that they met Octob. 20. 1670. and it is not without much labour that I have been able to recover a written Copy of the Lord Bridgman's Speech, none being printed but forbidden. He ſpoke thus: My Lords, and you the Knights, Citizens,———when the two Houſes were laſt adjourned, this Day, as you well know, was prefixed for your Meeting again, &c.

[b] See Letter of Lord Arlington to Sir William Godolphin in Spain, dated Whitehall, Octob. 27. 1670.——By the Copies of the King's and Lord Keeper's Speeches, you will ſee what is ſaid to the Parliament meeting on Monday laſt, which adjourned itſelf to this Day, and the Houſe of Commons for a good beginning cheerfully voted, Nemine Contradicente, that the King ſhould be ſupplied proportionable to his preſent Occaſions.

[c] People began now to be afraid of the King's Guards, and that they would be employ'd not to defend the King, but to aſſault the Subject. The Reverend Mr. Samuel Johnſon wrote thus in his Notes on the Paſtoral Letter, of thoſe ſtanding Guards in the time of Peace, the Parliament Men us'd to ſay, there go our Maſters; and ſo they had reaſon after Sir John Coventry's uſage, and which all the great Lawyers in England declar'd to be illegal from the firſt, and ſuch a Force upon the Nation as the Law abhors. The Lord chief Juſtice Vaughan had the Honeſty and Courage to tell my Lord Macclesfield ſo; though he then commanded and was at the Head of them. My Lord very honourably remembred this as an Inſtance of that Great Man's Integrity, &c.

1670. 22 Car. II. "Years or upwards ſhall be preſent at any Aſſembly, Conventicle, or Meeting, under colour or "pretence of any Exerciſe of Religion, in other "manner than according to the Liturgy and Practice of the Church of England, where five Perſons or more ſhall be aſſembled beſides the Family, and be thereof convicted by Confeſſion of the "Party, or the Oath of two Witneſſes, ſhall pay "five Shillings for the firſt Offence, and ten Shillings for the ſecond: And every Perſon taking "upon him to teach or preach in ſuch Meeting, "ſhall forfeit for the firſt Offence twenty Pounds, "and for the ſecond Offence forty Pounds; and if "the Preacher cannot be found, or be unable to "pay, then the Penalty to be levied by Warrant "upon the Goods and Chattels of any who were "preſent. And every Perſon wittingly and willingly ſuffering any Conventicle in his or her Houſe, "to forfeit the Sum of twenty Pounds. For the "better execution of the Act, Juſtices and Conſtables were impowered to break open Doors upon "refuſal of admiſſion: And Lieutenants, Deputy-Lieutenants, and commiſſion'd Officers of the "Militia, were, on Certificate made by any Juſtice, to diſperſe the ſaid Conventicles. The Act, "and all Clauſes in it, to be conſtrued moſt largely and beneficially for the ſuppreſſing of Conventicles, and for the Juſtification and Encouragement of all Perſons to be employ'd in the execution thereof. There was a concluding Clauſe to provide, That neither this Act, nor any thing therein "contained, ſhould extend to invalidate or void his "Majeſty's Supremacy in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs.

Diſſenters much grieved at this Act.

This new Act was thought by the Diſſenters a mighty Grievance; and it ſeem'd the greater to them, becauſe they depended on the King's Diſpoſition of Indulgence, and a Court Intereſt that was running into a general Toleration of Papiſts, and, for the ſake of them, of all Proteſtant Diſſenters. They complain therefore of the new Hardſhips put upon the poor Nonconformiſts, and give their own Hiſtory of this Year in theſe Words: "The Act againſt Conventicles was renew'd, and made more ſevere than "ever: Several new Clauſes were put in; as, that "the fault of the Mittimus ſhould not diſable it; that "all doubtful Clauſes in the Act ſhould be interpreted as "would moſt favour the ſuppreſſion of Conventicles; "and that they that fled, or remov'd their dwelling "into another Country, ſhould be purſu'd by Execution, "&c. Dr. Manton, tho' he had great Friends and "mighty Promiſes of Favour, was ſent Priſoner to "the Gatehouſe for Preaching the Goſpel in his own "Houſe in the Pariſh where he had formerly been "Miniſter, and for not taking the Oxford Oath, "and yet coming within five Miles of a Corporation: And he continued there ſix Months, and all "that time the Meetings in London were diſturb'd "by Bands of Soldiers, to the Terror of many, and "the Death of ſome. About this time my Lord "Lauderdale going into Scotland, ſignify'd to Mr. "Baxter a purpoſe there was of taking off the Oath "of Canonical Obedience, and all Impoſitions of "Conformity there, ſave only that it ſhould be neceſſary to ſit in Presbyteries and Synods with the "Biſhops and Moderators; and told him, he had "the King's Conſent to offer him what Place in "Scotland he would chooſe, either a Church, or a "College in the Univerſity, or a Biſhoprick. From "accepting which Motion he excus'd himſelf, from "his Weakneſs and Indiſpoſition, and the Circumſtances of his Family. After that the Earl of "Lauderdale was in Scotland, Sir Robert Murley, a "great Confident of his, ſent Mr. Baxter the Frame "of a Body of Church-Diſcipline for Scotland, and "deſir'd his Animadverſions. The Scheme was "handſomly contriv'd, and ſavour'd of much Moderation; but the Power of Synods was contrived to be in the King: Mr. Baxter made his Remarks as he was deſired.

Their Complaints of it.

The Reaſons for this Act.

We ſhall do them this Juſtice all along, to give their own Story in their own Words. But tho' the Wiſdom of the Nation had very good Reaſons to make a more effectual Law againſt Conventicles[a], yet 'tis certain the Diſſenters had no great Reaſon to complain of the rigorous execution of it: It was a needful Reſtraint and Awe, rather than an actual Storm upon them. Nor did all the Sufferers of that Party ſeem to ſuffer for Conſcience-ſake, if we believe this Relation given by Authority. "Wincheſter, Novemb. 1. Two Perſons, a Man and his "Wife, both Nonconformiſts, and great pretenders "to Godlineſs, being upon ſome Miſdemeanors "committed to the Houſe of Correction in this "City, the Woman was ſeveral times obſerved to "encourage her Husband to do what (ſhe ſaid) the "Lord had put in his Heart, and not to be fainthearted; of which the Keeper ſuſpected not her "meaning, till entring the Room to give them "Correction, of which he pardoned the Man upon "his Submiſſion, and gave but four Stripes to the "Woman, tho' by her Haſtineſs and ill Behaviour "ſhe had much provok'd him; he was, as he was "going out of the Room, ſuddenly ſtabb'd by the "Man into the left Breaſt with a Knife; which "Wound, 'tis feared, may prove mortal. The "Priſoners are ſo little ſenſible of the heinouſneſs "of the Fact, that they have expreſſed themſelves "to be ſorry that they had not diſpatch'd the Keeper "and his Wife together; and ſeem to fear the "Knife has not done what they deſired.

Meeting-Houſes turned into Tabernacles.

That the People by ſuppreſſing of Conventicles might not be deprived of equal Opportunities to worſhip God in a ſolemn and lawful manner; it was order'd by the King and Council, that all ſuch Places of Meeting within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter ſhould be turned into ſtated Tabernacles and be regularly ſupply'd by the Church-Divines: And therefore on June 15. publick Notice was given, "That the Places under-named, of late made "uſe of for Conventicles and unlawful Aſſemblies, "are now by his Majeſty's particular Command in "Council appointed to be uſed every Lord's-day "for celebrating divine Worſhip and Preaching the "Word of God, by approved Orthodox Miniſters, "thereto to be appointed by the Right Reverend "Father in God the Lord Biſhop of London, to begin on the next Lord's Day, for the benefit of the "Inhabitants, of the Pariſhes near adjoining reſpectively, where the Pariſh Churches have been "conſumed by the Fire.

"In Fiſher's-Folly in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet a convenient Place with two Galleries, Pews and Seats.

"In Hand-Ally in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet a large "Room purpoſely built for a Meeting-Houſe, with "three Galleries, thirty large Pews, and many "Benches and Forms, known by the Name of "Vincent's Congregation.

"In St. Michael's-Lane, a large Room with two "Galleries and thirty nine Forms.

"In Mugwel-ſtreet Mr. Doolittle's Meeting-Houſe,

[a] It was about this time to ſerve French Popery that the High Church Folks were taught to ſay, I had rather be a Papiſt than a Preſbyterian; which Dr. Lewis du Moulin forgot not in his Appeal of the Nonconformiſts, printed 1681. 4*to*. They have made it now become a common Proverb in the Mouths of this corrupt Church of England Party, that they had rather be Papiſts than Preſbyterians; and that were there a turn of State (as God forbid) they would ſooner turn Papiſts than Preſbyterians——Yet upon the Popiſh Plot this fooliſh Diſtinction vaniſh'd, and could not get Breath under all the Shams of a Preſbyterian Plot, and was hardly heard of again till toward the latter end of Queen Anne; when no doubt it was the Deſign and the Intereſt of France and the Pretender, that the good People of England ſhould rather be Papiſts than Preſbyterians.

"built

1670. 22 Car. II. " built of Brick with three Galleries, full of large " Pews, and thirty eight large Pews below, with " Locks and Keys to them, beſides Benches and " Forms.

" The Cockpit in Jewin-ſtreet, a Meeting-Houſe " of one Grimes, three Galleries, many Pews, Forms " and Benches.

" In Black-Friers Mr. Wood's Meeting-Houſe, " four Rooms opening into one another, with Lat- " tice Partitions, each Room conveniently filled " with Benches and Forms.

" In Salisbury-Court four Rooms opening into " one another, in the Poſſeſſion of John Fowl a " School-Maſter.

" In New-ſtreet within Shoe-Lane four Rooms " opening into one another, with ſeventeen Pews " and divers Benches, in the poſſeſſion of Mrs. " Turner.

Dangers of Popery. The Lords and Commons in Parliament gave a ſufficient Proof that their Care in ſuppreſſing Conventicles was a neceſſary Means to diſcourage Popery, and to prevent the Hopes and Deſigns of that growing Faction: And therefore the two Houſes join'd in an humble Addreſs to the King, repreſenting [a] their Fears and Apprehenſions of the growth of the Popiſh Religion, and their Deſires to have the Laws impartially executed on all Popiſh Recuſants, and eſpecially on the Prieſts and Jeſuits. Upon which his Majeſty could not forbear to iſſue out his Royal Proclamation of the 23d of March, declaring, "That " whereas the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and " Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, " have by their humble Petition repreſented to his " Majeſty their Fears and Apprehenſions of the " growth and encreaſe of the Popiſh Religion in " theſe his Majeſty's Dominions, together with the " Cauſes thereof, and alſo ſuch Remedies as they con- " ceive may be proper to prevent ſuch growing " Miſchiefs. Which Petition of theirs his Majeſty " having ſeriouſly conſider'd, and with much Con- " tentment and Satisfaction, accepting and appro- " ving the great Care of the ſaid Lords Spiritual and " Temporal, and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, " for the Preſervation of the true Religion eſtabliſh'd " in this Kingdom; to which his Majeſty declares, " as he hath always adhered againſt all Temptati- " ons whatſoever, ſo he will ſtill employ his utmoſt " Care and Zeal in the Maintenance and Defence of " it. And therefore ſtrictly charges and commands " all Jeſuits and Romiſh Prieſts, that before the " firſt of May they depart out of England upon pain " of having the Penalties of the Laws and Statutes " of this Realm inflicted upon them. And for the " better diſcovery of all others who are Popiſh Re- " cuſants, or juſtly ſuſpected to be ſo, his Majeſty " commands, that all the Judges, Barons of the Ex- " chequer, Juſtices of Peace, &c. do not only ob- " ſerve his Majeſty's Will and Pleaſure therein be- " fore expreſſed, but alſo forthwith put all other " the Laws in due Execution againſt all Popiſh Re- " cuſants, and ſuch as are ſuſpected to be ſo, in or- " der to their ſpeedy Conviction and due Proceſs " upon ſuch Convictions. And becauſe there may " be ſome Prieſts impriſoned in this Realm, yet un- " known to his Majeſty, all Sheriffs, Bayliffs and " Keepers of Priſons are within twenty Days after " publication of this Proclamation to advertiſe ſome " of the Lords of the Privy Council of their Names, " and by whom and for what Cauſe they were com- " mitted, to the end Order may be given for their " Tranſportation. 1670. 22 Car. II.

Conſecration of Dr. Creighton. On June 19. Dr. Creighton Biſhop of Bath and Wells was ſolemnly Conſecrated at Lambeth with the uſual Ceremonies; at which aſſiſted the Biſhop of London in the place of his Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury not then fully recover'd from his late Diſtemper, with the Biſhops of Wincheſter and Ely, where the Sermon was preach'd on that occaſion by Dr. Hill Chaplain to his Grace the Duke of Ormond; after which, the Biſhops, ſeveral of the Nobility and many Perſons of Quality were entertain'd at a plentiful Dinner.

Conſecration of the Church of Shadwel. On Sunday, March 12. the new Church in Shadwell, formerly in the Pariſh of Stepney, and now made Parochial by Act of Parliament, and plentifully endowed by the Dean of St. Pauls and —— Neal, Eſq; was with the uſual Solemnity conſecrated by the Right Reverend Father in God John Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, commiſſionated thereunto by Humphrey Lord Biſhop of London, as being in his Dioceſe. Moſt of the Gentry of thoſe Quarters aſſiſting at the Ceremony, which being ended, the ſaid Biſhop of Rocheſter made an excellent and moſt learned Sermon upon that Occaſion, to the great Satisfaction and Applauſe of all that were preſent.

1671. Death of the Dutcheſs of York. This Year begins in Mourning for the Death of Anne Dutcheſs of York, the eldeſt Daughter of Edward Earl of Clarendon, late Lord Chancellor of England: After a growing Corpulency that caſt her into a long Indiſpoſition of Health, ſhe died in the 34th Year of her Age at the Palace of St. James's on Friday March 31, between two and three in the Afternoon, and on Wedneſday April 5. was interr'd in a large Vault on the South Side of King Henry VII.'s Chapel; her Body being accompanied from the Painted Chamber in the Palace at Weſtminſter (whither it was privately brought from St. James's) by his Highneſs Prince Rupert, who appear'd as chief Mourner, and by moſt of the Nobility, who follow'd in Order; the Kings and Officers of Arms giving their Attendance; their Majeſty's and Royal Highneſſes Servants, and ſeveral Gentlemen and Perſons of Quality preceding the Corps to the Place of Interment, with the Solemnities uſually practis'd on the like Solemnities. She left Iſſue by James Duke of York one Son, Edgar Duke of Cambridge, who after a long Weakneſs from his very Birth, died at Richmond on Thurſday June 8. and two incomparable Daughters, the Princeſs Mary and the Princeſs Anne, both preſerved for a moſt ſingular ſucceſſive Bleſſing to this Church and Nation, and one other younger Daughter, Catherine, who at about ten Months old died at Whitehall on Wedneſday December 6. within this ſame Year.

Addreſs of the two Houſes. The two Houſes on their laſt Day of Sitting, April 22. waited in a Body upon his Majeſty in the Banquetting-Houſe at Whitehall, with their humble Addreſs, "That his Majeſty would be graciouſly plea- " ſed by his own Example to encourage the conſtant " wearing of the Manufactures of his own Kingdom " and Dominions, and diſcountenance the Wear of " any Manufactures made in Foreign Countries. His " Majeſty very graciouſly accepted their humble " Motion, and was pleaſed to declare, that he would " comply with their Deſires; that he had in his own Per- " ſon as little uſed them as any, and for the future would

[a] These Dangers of Popery were the more apparent by the growing Intimacy and Intrigues betwixt the Courts of England and France, and the Proſpect of a Rupture with Holland, the Dutch Ambaſſador going away in diſcontent; as in a Letter of the Lord Arlington to Sir William Godolphin, dated, Whitehall, Decemb. 22. 1670. Monſieur Van Benninghen, the Dutch Ambaſſador, hath left us ſomewhat in a ſtrange manner. His whole Diſcourſe ran upon the Argument of the Greatneſs of France, the Solicitation of the Concerns of the Duke of Lorrain, the Incluſion of the Emperor in the Guaranty of Peace, and many hot Skirmiſhes with us upon the Buſineſs of Surinam; in which, notwithſtanding his great Talent, being worſted by us, he took Pet, and a Reſolution to leave us ſooner than we expected ——

A Letter of March 30. 1671.——The Hollanders Fears increaſing, the States have by their Letters to his Majeſty and Ambaſſador reſiding here, made an Overture of a ſtricter Alliance in the nature of an offenſive and defenſive Treaty with them regulated, that now upon an Aggreſſion we ſhould likewiſe break with the Aggreſſor, [i. e. the French;] but this was rejected.

1671. 23Car. II. " diſcountenance thoſe that ſhould. In the Afternoon of the ſame Day, his Majeſty with the uſual Solemnities being preſent in the Houſe of Peers, and the Houſe of Commons with their Speaker there attending, was pleaſed to give his Royal Aſſent to ſeveral Bills then preſented to him, fourteen private Acts and eighteen publick, of which laſt were, 1. " An Act to prevent the delivery up of Merchants " Ships, and for the Encreaſe of good and ſerviceable Shipping. 2. An Act for exporting of Beer, " Ale and Mum. 3. An Act for laying Impoſitions on Proceedings at Law. 4. An Act for the " better ſettling of Inteſtates Eſtates. 5. An Act " for determination of Differences touching Houſes " burnt or demoliſhed within four Years ſince the " late dreadful Fire in London. 6. An Additional " Act for aſcertaining the Meaſures of Corn and " Salt. 7. An Act for the better and more certain " Recovery of Fines and Forfeitures due to his Majeſty. 8. An Act for the better paving and clearing the Streets and Sewers in and about London. " 9. An Act for the Relief and Releaſe of poor diſtreſſed Priſoners for Debt. 10. An Act for the " Diſcovery of ſuch as have defrauded the Poor of " the City of London of the Monies given for their " Relief, at the times of the late Plague and Fire, " and for the recovery of the Arrears thereof. 11. " An Act for the better regulating of Work-houſes " for ſetting the Poor on Work. 12. An Act for " the better ſettlement of the Maintenance of the " Parſons, Vicars and Curates in the Pariſhes of " the City of London, burnt by the late dreadful " Fire there. 13. An Act for veſting certain Fee-Farm Rents, and other ſmall Rents, in Truſtees. " 14. An Act to prevent Frauds in the buying and " ſelling Cattle in Smithfield and elſewhere. 15. An " Act for the better Preſervation of the Game, and " for the ſecuring Warrens not encloſed, and the ſeveral Fiſhings of the Realm. 16. An Act for taking the Accompts of 60000 l. and other Monies " given to the Loyal Indigent Officers. 17. An Act " to prevent the Planting of Tobacco in England, " and for regulating the Plantation Trade. 18. An " Act to revive a former Act entituled, An Act to " prevent the Diſturbances of Seamen and others, " and to preſerve the Stores belonging to his Majeſty's Navy Royal, with ſome Alterations and Additions. After the paſſing of which Acts my Lord Keeper by his Majeſty's Command prorogued the Parliament till April 16 next.

Acts paſſed.

Attempt to ſteal the Crown.

May 9. a bold and incredible Attempt was made to ſteal the Crown out of the Tower of London in this manner: About ſeven in the Morning four Men came to Mr. Edwards, Keeper of the Jewel Houſe in the Tower, and deſired to ſee the Regal Crown remaining in his Cuſtody; he carried them into the Room where it was kept, and ſhewed it to them as to innocent and undeſigning Strangers; but they to carry on their villainous Intention, clap'd a Gag of a ſtrange Form into the old Man's Mouth, who making what Noiſe and Reſiſtance he could, they ſtabb'd him a deep Wound in the Belly with a Stilletto, adding ſeveral other dangerous Wounds in the Head with a ſmall Beetle, which they had brought for the purpoſe of beating together and flattening the Crown, to make it the more eaſily portable; which having, together with the Ball put into Bags provided by them for that uſe, they fairly walk'd out, leaving the old Man groveling on the Ground gagged and pinioned. Thus they paſſed by all the Sentinels, till, in the mean time, the Son-in-Law of Mr. Edwards caſually paſſing by, and hearing the Door ſhut and ſome buſtle, went in to look what the matter might be, where he found his old Father in the miſerable Condition they had left him; whereupon running out in all haſte, and crying to ſtop the Authors of that horrid Villainy, the Perſons began to mend their Pace, and to make a ſpeedier Eſcape, which the laſt Sentinel perceiving, bid them ſtand; but inſtead of ſtanding to give an Account of themſelves, one of them fired a Piſtol at the Sentinel, and he his Musket at them; which gave the Alarm ſo, as with the purſuit of Mr. Edwards's Son-in-Law, two of the Malefactors were immediately ſeized; but two more with another that held their Horſes without the Tower-Gate eſcaped: With the two that were taken were found the Crown and Ball, only ſome few Stones miſſing, which had been looſen'd with the beating of the Crown together with the Mallet. Thoſe two were immediately carried to Whitehall, and one of them proved to be Blood, apparell'd in the Habit of a Clergyman to cover all Suſpicion, a notorious Traitor and Incendiary, who had been out-law'd for the Rebellion in Ireland eight Years ago; the other was one Perrot, a Dyer in Thames-ſtreet. Within two Hours after a third was apprehended, as he was eſcaping on Horſeback, and he proved to be Thomas Hunt, mention'd in his Majeſty's Proclamation for the diſcovering of the Perſons who had lately committed that horrid Attempt upon his Grace the Duke of Ormond, but by whatever Name he went he was indeed Son of the ſaid Blood, who with great Impudence confeſs'd, that they two were with ſeven others in that Action. They were all three ſent cloſe Priſoners to the Tower.

1671. 23Car. II.

Knights of the Garter.

On Sunday May 28. being the Eve of the Celebration of St. George's Feaſt, appointed to be kept this Year on the Anniverſary of his Majeſty's Birth and ever happy Reſtoration, the King as Sovereign of the Order of the Garter accompanied by the Duke of York, Prince Rupert, and ſeveral other Companions, all in their Habits proceeded in the Afternoon to the Chapel of St. George in Windſor with great Solemnity, where before the Divine Service began, the Earl of Carliſle, introduc'd between his Royal Highneſs and Prince Rupert, was Inſtalled as Proxy of the King of Sweden; and the Earl of Winchelſea between the Dukes of Ormond and Buckingham as Proxy for the Elector of Saxony, both which Princes had been inveſted with the full Habit of the Order in the Year 1669. and after them the Duke of Albemarle, introduc'd between the Earls of Sandwich and Oxford, was likewiſe inveſted and ſet in his Stall. The next Day the Feaſt was celebrated with extraordinary Splendor and Magnificence; and the Day following the Sovereign proceeding to the Chapel, after he had taken his Stall, the Companions before they aſcended to theirs, offer'd in Order the Atchievements of Arms, viz. the Banners, Swords and Creſts of ſeven deceaſed Knights, being William Earl of Saliſbury, Thomas Earl of Berks, Algernon Earl of Northumberland, Thomas Earl of Southampton, George Duke of Albemarle, Mountague Earl of Lindſey, and Edward Earl of Mancheſter.

Death of great Men.

This Edward Earl of Mancheſter, Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, and Chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge, died at Whitehall on Friday May 5. about twelve a Clock at Night, in the 69th Year of his Age, much to the Regret of his Majeſty and the Grief of the whole Court. His Majeſty was pleaſed to make choice of the Right Honourable Henry Earl of St. Albans, to ſucceed in the Office of Lord Chamberlain, and was pleaſed to deliver him the Staff on May 13. and immediately his Lordſhip enter'd upon the execution of that Honourable Charge; and the Dignity of Chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge was ſoon after by Election conferr'd upon his Grace the Duke of Buckingham. This indeed was a Year of reigning Mortality among the Great Men: On Tueſday May 9. died at his Houſe in Town Sir John Keyling Knight, Lord Chief Juſtice of his Majeſty's Court of King's Bench, after a long weakneſs and decay of Strength, much regretted for his great Integrity and Worth: And his Majeſty was pleaſed to confer that important Place upon the Lord Chief Baron Hales, who after having taken the uſual Oaths before the Right Honourable the Lord Keeper, took his Seat on that

Bench

1671. 23 Car. II.

Bench Thurſday May 18. leaving his Seat in the Exchequer to be filled with his Majeſty's choice of Sir Edward Turner Knight, Sollicitor General, who on Tueſday May 23. in obedience to his Majeſty's Writ, commanding him to take his Degree of Serjeant at Law, he appeared at the Chancery Bar, and according to Cuſtom took the uſual Oath before the Right Honourable the Lord Keeper, and then perform'd the due Ceremonies before the Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas, after which he was called by the Lord Keeper to the Exchequer Bar; and being there ſworn Lord Chief Baron of that Court, he took his Place on the Bench; while his Majeſty was pleaſed to make choice of Francis North Eſq; Son to the Lord North, to ſucceed in the Truſt of Sollicitor General, who having receiv'd the Honour of Knighthood, was ſworn into the Place on Tueſday May 23. His Grace William Duke of Somerſet died Dec. 26. in the twentieth Year of his Age, after five Days Illneſs of the Small-Pox, to the great Affliction of that Noble Family, leaving his Uncle the Lord John Seymour Heir of his Honour and Eſtate. Sir Thomas Ingram, Chancellor of the County Palatine and Dutchy of Lancaſter, died ſoon after Chriſtmas at his Houſe in Thiſtleworth; and his Majeſty deliver'd the Seals of that Office on Febr. 14. to Sir Robert Carr, Knight and Baronet, as a gracious Mark of the Eſteem his Majeſty had for his Worth and Loyalty; and he was the ſame Day admitted of the Privy Council, and took his Place at the Board. On Thurſday Feb. 22. the Right Honourable Thomas Lord Leigh died at his Houſe at Stoneleigh in Warwickſhire in the 77th Year of his Age, leaving Heir to his Eſtate and Honour his Grandchild Thomas, Son to his eldeſt Son Sir Thomas Leigh deceaſed.

French Intrigues.

Ill Counſellors, Ladies and Relations, drew away the King to promote the Grandeur of France and the Advance of Popery; and to incite the Court to theſe fatal Meaſures, great Sums of Money were ſent over from the French King to buy in the Engliſh Miniſtry and their Maſter himſelf. The Plot of France was no leſs than to diſſolve the Triple Alliance, to make a new War between England and Holland, to procure Liberty and Relaxation of Laws to the Roman Catholicks, and (to prevent interruption in theſe Deſigns) to keep the Parliament from ſitting. And all theſe things were fatally accompliſh'd.

Ambaſſies abroad.

To break the Triple Alliance, Henry Coventry Eſq; was ſent Ambaſſador Extraordinary from his Majeſty to the King of Sweden, and embark'd at Greenwich in one of his Majeſty's Yatchs in the beginning of September, and did his Buſineſs ſo effectually, that at our firſt declaring War againſt the Dutch, the Swediſh King ſtood Neuter, and ſoon after join'd with us and the French King againſt them. And there ſeems to be truth in what a late Writer obſerves, This Succeſs Mr. Coventry had, that for this Buſineſs, which put all Chriſtendom into a Flame, he was by the King made Principal Secretary of State, and it may be preſented with his fine Rangers place in Enfield-Chaſe too; and that perhaps with thrice more by the French King: Whereas Sir William Temple, who was the principal Inſtrument in the Peace at Nimeguen, loſt two thouſand two hundred Pounds by it, and his only Recompence was to be Secretary of State in Mr. Coventry*'s Place, if Sir* William would give him 10000 l. for it.

Roger Coke Eſq;

Other Ambaſſies were order'd to expedite the great Deſign, or to cover over the Intentions of it, Sir Robert Southwel went Envoy Extraordinary to the Count De Monterey, Governor for his Catholick Majeſty of the Spaniſh Netherlands, and began his Journey to Bruſſels October 30. the Earl of Sunderland went Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Crown of Spain, ſetting out for Dover on Nov. 22. intending to paſs from thence to Calais, and ſo to proceed by Land, as if he had Inſtructions to receive upon the Road from the Court of France. And Sir George Downing was appointed his [a] Majeſty's Ambaſſador to the States General of the United Provinces, and embark'd at Greenwich for his Tranſportation about the beginning of December; but he did the Buſineſs there with ſo little Art, that within a Day after his Return on Feb. 7. he was privately examined by ſome of the Lords of the Council, and an Account thereof being given to his Majeſty, he was by his Majeſty's Warrant ſent Priſoner to the Tower, for not having obey'd the Orders ſent to him. For fear a Parliament ſhould inquire into the Intrigues that were now depending, his Majeſty was pleaſed to iſſue his Royal Proclamation on Sept. 22. for the farther proroguing of the Parliament from April 16. next enſuing, till Octob. 30. following, which ſhould be in the Year 1672.

Parl. prorogu'd.

Some good Subjects would have thought, that the King could never enter into a War with Holland without Advice of his Parliament, or at leaſt that he could never ſupport himſelf in any War without their Aid and Aſſiſtance. But to ſalve this Matter, a fatal Expedient was found out, that was ſaid to be the Suggeſtion of my Lord Aſhley to Sir Thomas Clifford, or at leaſt was the joint Project of theſe Miniſters who then govern'd all, viz. Clifford, Aſhley, Buckingham, Arlington and Lauderdale, the Initial Letters of whoſe Names made up their proper Title of CABAL. This Expedient was to ſhut up the Exchequer, wherein the Bankers who had furniſh'd the King with mighty Sums of Money at very extorſive Intereſt, had lodg'd between thirteen and fourteen hundred thouſand Pounds of other Subjects Money. To put ſome Colour on ſo unjuſt a Practice, his Majeſty being preſent in Council upon Tueſday January 2. was pleaſed to declare, "That "ſeeing all the Princes and States, his Neighbours, "were making great Preparations for War [b], both "by Sea and Land; his Majeſty, for the Safety of "his Government and People, look'd upon himſelf "as oblig'd to make ſuch Preparations as might be "proportionable for the Protection both of the one "and the other; and to that end had already given "Orders for the fitting and preparing a very conſiderable Fleet, to be ready againſt the Spring. "That by this inevitable Neceſſity, his Majeſty

Shutting up of the Exchequer.

[a] This Counſel was carried on ſo ſecretly, that no Man at Court had ſufficient Warning to call in his Money out of the Bankers Hands, till Sir Tho. Clifford propos'd the thing in Council Jan. 2. 167$\frac{1}{2}$. &c. Life of Sir Will. Temple, 8*vo.* p. 189. See a Letter of Lord Arlington to Lord Sunderland in Spain, dated, Whitehall Jan. 8. 1672.——Sir George Downing hath begun his Negotiation in Holland, or rather his Complaints, which he gave in by a Memorial upon the States Ships denying in Auguſt laſt to ſtrike to his Majeſty's Flag, &c.——In my laſt to Sir William Godolphin, I gave him an Account of his Majeſty's having ſuſpended all Payments upon Aſſignations in the Exchequer for one whole Year; according to which the incloſed Declaration of his Majeſty in Council was finally reſolved upon, and ordered to be printed. Since which Reſolutions the Diſtempers have continued in the Town, and the angry Diſcourſes upon them; but his Majeſty having Yeſterday conven'd the Bankers before him at the Treaſury, and after many kind and confident Aſſurances given them that he would punctually ſatisfy his Debt to them, either out of what the Parliament ſhould give him in the next Seſſion, or out of his own Revenue; he told them likewiſe this ſhutting up of the Exchequer has been commonly aſcrib'd to the Lord Clifford; but I have heard wiſe Men obſerve that it was the prime Invention of my Lord Shaftſbury, who drinking over Night with his Brethren of the CABAL, and engaging in the Diſpute of what to do for Money, he ſeem'd to affect Drunkenneſs, and to mutter out, that there was one ſure way, to receive All in, and to pay Nothing out. Lord Clifford catch'd at thoſe Words, and got a farther Explication of them, and propoſed it to the King next Morning, who had the Sagacity to tell him, that he could not be the Author of that Expedient; it muſt come from my Lord Shaftſbury.

[b] See Letter of Lord Arlington to Sir William Godolphin in Spain, dated, Windſor-Caſtle, July 6. 1671. Sir William Temple's three Years being upon the point to expire, his Majeſty hath by Letters to the States General notify'd his Revocation of him, as likewiſe his Intention to ſend another Perſon in his ſtead, which his Majeſty deſires to find out with a rougher Hand.

" conſidering the great Charges that muſt attend ſuch " Preparations, and after his ſerious Debates and " beſt Conſiderations, not finding any poſſibility to " defray ſuch unuſual Expences, by the uſual ways " and means of borrowing Monies, by reaſon his " Revenues were ſo anticipated and engaged, he " was neceſſitated (contrary to his own Inclinati-" ons) upon theſe Emergencies, and for the pub-" lick Safety at the preſent, to cauſe a ſtop to be " made of the Payment of any Monies, now being, " or to be brought into his Exchequer, for the " ſpace of one whole Year, ending the laſt Day of " December next, upon any Perſon or Perſons what-" ſoever, by vertue of any Warrant, Securities or " Orders, whether regiſter'd or not regiſter'd there-" in, and payable within that time. And after " ſome Promiſes of Repayment, and that no Per-" ſon ſhould be defrauded of any thing that was " juſtly due to him, his Majeſty was farther graci-" ouſly pleaſed to declare, that nothing could have " urg'd his Majeſty to an Act of this Nature but " ſuch a Conjuncture of Affairs, when all the neigh-" bouring Princes and States were making ſuch " threatning Preparations, that his Government " could not be ſafe, without appearing in the ſame " poſture.

The French K. draws the Engl. into a War with Holland.

We are told that the French King, having got the King of England into this Net, uſed him very ill, by openly declaring, that to break with the Dutch, was none of his own Quarrel, and that he only engaged in it out of reſpect to his Perſon; and therefore before any War was declar'd, the King of England muſt firſt break the Peace by ſome Attempt at Sea.[a]

Accordingly Sir Robert Holmes was order'd to lie off of Portſmouth, to meet the Dutch Smyrna and Streights Fleet, and find a Pretence to intercept them. An Account of this diſhonourable Action was thus given by Authority from Whitehall, " That " on Wedneſday March 13. five of his Majeſty's Fri-" gots cruizing by the Iſle of Wight, met with the " Dutch Fleet of Smyrna Men and others, of about " fifty Sail, convoy'd by ſix Men of War, and of " their Merchant-Men twenty at leaſt carried be-" tween twenty and forty Guns apiece, when our " Frigots came near them, we ſhot to make them " ſtrike and lower their Top-ſails, which the Dutch " refuſing to do, our Frigots ſhot thro' and thro' " them; and tho' they then lower'd their Top-" ſails, yet they refuſed to ſtrike, upon which the " Fight began; this happen'd about three of the " Clock that Afternoon, and continued until Night, " at which time three more of our Frigots came in. " Thurſday, the next Morning, the Fight begun a-" gain, and continued all that Day; in the Even-" ing were taken five of their richeſt Merchant-" Men, and Captain John Holmes in the Glouceſter " boarded their Rear-Admiral, and took her; but " ſhe was ſo ſhatter'd and torn, that ſhe ſunk with " in a few Hours in his poſſeſſion. This Squadron " was commanded by Sir Robert Holmes in the Saint " Michael, the Earl of Oſſory was Vice-Admiral in " the Reſolution, and Sir Fretcheville Hollis, Rear-" Admiral in the Cambridge, Captain Legg com-" manded the Fairfax, Captain Elliot the York, " Captain Fowlis the Diamond, and Captain Watſon " the Succeſs, who all behaved themſelves with " great Gallantry.

We are told that the Dutch, alarm'd at the Attempt [b] upon their Smyrna Fleet, and being in no condition to reſiſt both Kings, ſent Deputies to both, to know upon what Terms they would agree to Peace. Thoſe ſent to our King were denied Audience, and kept at Hampton-Court till it were known what the French King's Pleaſure was; but thoſe ſent to the French King had Anſwer, That what the King had was his own, and what he ſhould conquer ſhould be his without an Equivalent; and declared, the States might deal with England as they pleaſed, and come off as cheap as they could, becauſe by their Treaty they were not bound to procure them any Advantages.

A Declaration of War was reſolved upon; but it required ſome Art to repreſent ſufficient Reaſons for it. To furniſh the Government with ſome fair Pretenſions at leaſt, the Committee for the Eaſt-India Company was ſummon'd to ſhew Cauſe, whether the Dutch had not broke in upon their Trade, or committed any Violence abroad, for which publick Satisfaction ought to be demanded of them. They anſwer'd and gave it under their Hands, that ſince the Treaty at Breda the Dutch had ſufficiently obſerved the Articles of Trade; and they knew no Cauſe, on that Account, of breaking with them. However, the Miniſtry was reſolved to find Cauſes, or make them: And therefore on the 17th of March was publiſhed his Majeſty's Declaration of War againſt the States General of the United Provinces, containing the Motives and Reaſons inducing his Majeſty thereunto; of which, the firſt was, " The " pretended Inſults of the Dutch upon the Engliſh " in their Trade in the Eaſt and Weſt Indies, and " particularly the detaining our Engliſh Planters in " Surinam after it was reſtored into their Hands. A ſecond was, " The making bold with the King's " Royal Perſon by abuſive Pictures and falſe Hiſto-" rical Medals and Pillars. A third was, Their " invading the Right of the Flag, and refuſing Sa-" tisfaction. It concluded with a Paragraph that was thought a Jeſt to all wiſe People; a Promiſe to maintain the Triple League, even by this expreſs Violation of it: The Words were, And whereas we are engaged by a Treaty to ſupport the Peace made at Aix la Chapelle, we do finally declare, That notwithſtanding the Proſecution of this War, we will maintain the true Intent and Scope of the ſaid Treaty; and that in all the Alliances which we have or ſhall make in the Progreſs of this War, we have and will take care to preſerve the Ends thereof inviolable, unleſs provoked to the contrary. To the Reaſons of this Declaration the Dutch anſwer'd, That as to Trade, they had

Declaration of War with Holland.

Anſwer of the Dutch.

[a] The firſt Attempt of breaking the Peace with Holland, by catching at ſome pretence of Quarrel, was in Auguſt 1671; when the Dutch Fleet floating in the Channel, were commanded to ſtrike Sail to a ſingle Yatcht that carried over Sir William Temple's Lady; and upon their not doing it, fir'd at them. See the Life of Sir William Temple, 8*vo*. p. 187. and the Letter of the Earl of Arlington to Sir William Godolphin, dated, Whitehall, Sept. 7. 1671. Vol. II. p. 331.

[b] The Miniſtry did all they could to cover the King's Intentions of breaking with Holland in favour of France. The Lord Arlington to Sir William Godolphin in Spain, dated, Euſton-Hall, Octob. 9. 1671. We have here my Lord Sunderland, whoſe Preparations are making at London with all poſſible ſpeed for his Embaſſy into Spain, whither he goes under the Character of his Majeſty's Extraordinary Ambaſſador. I will not anticipate any thing upon the occaſion of his going, more than that he will carry Overtures, which we think will be grateful to that Court; and alſo his Majeſty's new Declaration of his firm Reſolution to maintain the Peace of Aix la Chapelle, according to his Engagement in the Triple Alliance, whatever Calumnies our Neighbours are pleaſed to throw up on us, as if his Majeſty had an Intention to depart from it. Beſides which, it is an uncomfortable Obſervation we make to ourſelves, that whilſt by our temporizing with France we have kept the Peace theſe three Years paſt, we are only accuſed of Intentions and Deſigns to break it, &c. Vol. II. p. 335.

See the Earl of Sunderland and Sir William Godolphin's Paper deliver'd to the Conde de Penaranda January 26, 167$\frac{1}{2}$, declaring his Majeſty's Reſolution to make War againſt Holland with Aſſiſtance of the moſt Chriſtian King, deſiring her Catholick Majeſty to join in it, or atleaſt to remain in a perfect Neutrality.——With the wiſe Anſwer of the Conde de Penaranda, deliver'd Feb. 10, 167$\frac{1}{2}$, telling them roundly, that the moſt ſecure and eaſy Expedient of preſerving the Peace of Europe will be not breaking with the Hollanders,——but obſerving the triple League——her Majeſty not being able to hear without the greateſt Admiration, that the King of England ſhould begin a War againſt his own Ally, and unite himſelf for that effect with his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, who was the ſole Motive of eſtabliſhing the ſaid Triple Alliance, &c. See Letters from the Spaniſh Court, 1703. 8*vo*. p. 148.

made

1671. 23 Car. II.

made ſo unjuſt Inroads upon any the Engliſh Factories or Plantations: And as to the Engliſh Planters in Surinam, they themſelves were not willing to forſake their Effects and Subſiſtence; and therefore ſtaid behind upon their own choice. As to the Pictures and Medals, they ſaid they knew of none, except one Medal, which might be liable to any ill conſtruction; but as ſoon as they knew of it, they cauſed the Stamp to be broken. As to the Flag, the States diſown'd the refuſal of it, and offer'd to make any reaſonable Satisfaction.

The Dutch make the Prince of Orange their Admiral and General.

The States of Holland ſeeing this terrible Storm falling on them, had recourſe to the young Prince of Orange, and ſeem'd to depend upon him, as born for their Defence and Protection; and therefore they preſented him, being now 22 Years of Age, with the Charge of their Armies, and Admiral of the United Provinces. The States did this the more willingly upon a Proſpect of ſoftning the Engliſh Court, and talked of ſending an Extraordinary Ambaſſador thither to buy Good-will, ſaying, That the Prince's Promotion, and Satisfaction upon the Flag, would certainly appeaſe them; wherein, it ſeems, they were encouraged by their own Ambaſſador then at London. The Prince having accepted of theſe Commands, went to the Army, that lay not far from Nienkop, where he kept his Poſt againſt the united Forces of the French, and conſtrained them to retire with Loſs and Diſhonour. But the Frontier Towns and Garriſons in Holland falling every Day into the Hands of the French, the People would not be ſatisfied without the advancement of the Prince of Orange to the Office of Stadt Holder, which had been oppoſed and reſolved againſt by the States and the Miniſtry.

And at laſt their Stadt Holder.

This Affection of the People appeared firſt in Dort, where the People roſe in Multitudes and Arms, and would not be pacified till the Magiſtrates had ſent for the Prince from the Army, and declared him Stadt Holder, with the ſame Power, Dignity, and Authority, which his Anceſtors had formerly enjoyed. This Example, by the Importunities of the People, was ſoon followed by all the Cities of Holland, and Zealand, and Weſt-Frieſland. And becauſe it was chiefly oppoſed by the Penſionary De Wit, and his Brother Cornelius Bailiff of Putten, they were torn in pieces by the Rabble at the Hague.

The Prin. refuſes the Bribes of the French.

When the Prince was thus advanced, the French made their Applications to him, with a Propoſal of making him Prince Soveraign of thoſe Provinces, under the Protection of England and France. But tho' the Temptation at that time was very inviting, he had the Honour to deſpiſe it, and anſwer, that he would not betray the Truſt repoſed in him, nor ever ſell the Liberty of his Country which his Anceſtors had ſo long defended. Yet the Game he play'd was then thought ſo deſperate, that one of his greateſt Confidents expoſtulated the matter with him, and ask'd him, How he pretended to live after Holland was loſt? And whether he had thought ſo far? He anſwer'd, He was reſolved to live upon his Lands in Germany, and that he had rather ſpend his Life in Hunting there, than ſell his Country or his Liberty to France at any price.

State of Religion. Eccleſiaſtical Preferments.

As to Church Affairs; on the death of Dr. Skinner, Walter Lord Biſhop of Oxford was on June 13. at St. Mary Savoy, in the Preſence of all the Biſhops in Town, with the uſual Solemnity, tranſlated to the See of Worceſter; and did Homage to his Majeſty in the uſual Forms on June 18. And on June 27. Dr. Nathaniel Crew, Son to the Lord Crew and Clerk of the Cloſet to his Majeſty, Biſhop elect of Oxford; and Dr. Thomas Wood, late Dean of Litchfield, Biſhop elect of Coventry and Litchfield, receiv'd their Confirmation at St. Mary's Savoy; and on Sunday July 2. were ſolemnly conſecrated in the Chapel at Lambeth by his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, aſſiſted by the Biſhops of London, Ely, Lincoln, Worceſter, and Rocheſter; with a Sermon preach'd by Mr. Tomkins one of his Grace's Chaplains. On Sunday Oct. 1. Dr. Henry Bridgman Dean of Cheſter, was, in the Quire of that Cathedral Church, conſecrated Biſhop of Sodor and Man, by the Lord Biſhop of Cheſter, as Subſtitute of his Grace the Archbiſhop of York, aſſiſted by the Biſhops of Bangor, St. Aſaph, and Cloghar, in the Preſence of many Perſons of great Quality, who were afterwards very nobly entertain'd by the new Biſhop at his own Houſe. On February 12. upon the Vacancy of the Biſhoprick of Durham upon the death of Dr. John Coſin Lord Bp. and Count Palatine, who departed this Life upon the 15th of January laſt, in the 77th Year of his Age, and left a moſt ample Teſtimony to the World of his great Piety and Charity; his Majeſty was pleaſed, in order to the Adminiſtration of Juſtice in Civil Affairs within that County Palatine, to conſtitute Sir Gilbert Gerard Kt. and Baronet to be High Sheriff of the ſame, as likewiſe to appoint Sir Francis Goodrick, Temporal Chancellor of the ſaid County, to be Keeper of the Great Seal of the ſaid Biſhoprick and County Palatine; and then kept the See vacant, aſſigning over the great Revenues to no very honourable Purpoſe. Apr. 19. 1672. the Funeral of Biſhop Coſins proceeded in great State from the Houſe of Sir Gilbert Gerard in the Pall-Mall near St. James's through the Strand to the Temple, and thro' Chancery-Lane and Grays-Inn Lane out of Town, in order to an Interrment at Biſhops Aukland near Durham, which Palace he had, in his Life-time, with exemplary Piety and Munificence repaired, having added a fair and noble Chapel, and there choſe the Place of his Sepulture. On Sunday Dec. 17. the new Church called now Chriſt-Church near Paris-Garden in Southwark, built by Mr. John Marſhal, late Inhabitant there (who beſide other large charitable Bequeſts, had likewiſe plentifully endowed the ſame) and made Parochial by Act of Parliament, was conſecrated by the Right Reverend Father in God the Biſhop of Wincheſter, Dioceſan, with the uſual Solemnity; and an excellent and learned Sermon preach'd by Dr. Littleton.

Complaints of the Diſſenters.

The Diſſenters thus report their Sufferings in this Year. "The Dioceſe of Salisbury was moſt "fiercely driven on to Conformity by Dr. Seth "Ward their Biſhop: Many Hundreds did he proſe- "cute with great Induſtry; and among the reſt, "that learned, humble, holy Gentleman, Mr. Tho- "mas Grove, an ancient Parliament Man, of as "great Sincerity and Integrity as moſt in the Land: "he ſtood it out a while in a Law-Suit, but was "overthrown, and forc'd to forſake his Country, "with multitudes of others. During the Mayoralty "of Sir Samuel Sterling, many Jury-men in London "were Fin'd and Impriſon'd by the Judge for not "finding certain Quakers guilty of violating the "Act againſt Conventicles: They appeal'd and "ſought Remedy: The Judges remain'd about a "Year in ſuſpence, and then by the Lord Chief "Juſtice Vaughan deliver'd their Reſolution againſt "the Judge, for the Subjects Freedom from ſuch "ſort of Fines. He dilated upon it in a Speech of "two or three hours, which was received with great "Joy and Applauſe by the People, and the Judges "thereupon cried up as the Pillars of Law and Li- "berty.

Their Caſe repreſented.

The Diſſenters ſhould not have complain'd of Perſecution, without confeſſing the true Reaſons of it. The Laws had impoſed moderate Penalties upon them; the two Houſes were expreſs for the Execution of thoſe Laws; the Biſhops and Clergy might be ſincerely zealous in it; but the King and the Miniſtry were for ſtopping the legal Proceedings againſt them, and were in the Secret of Diſpenſing with the Laws Eccleſiaſtical and Civil for the ſake of indulging the Papiſts and the Nonconformiſts. This encourag'd the Diſſenters to defie the Laws, 1671. 23 Car. II. to which they would moſt of them have ſubmitted if they had found a ſteady and impartial Execution of them. And this again provok'd the honeſt Juſtices and Magiſtrates to bear the more hard upon them, when they ſaw them ſo bold in deſpiſing and evading the Juſtice of the Nation.

This Reaſon the Men of Separation have indeed themſelves confeſt, tho' not ſo fully as they ought to have done. Their Words are theſe: Even by their own Confeſſion. "The Parliament having made the Laws againſt Nonconformiſt's Preaching and private Religious Meetings ſo ſevere as hath been repreſented, the King altho' he conſented to thoſe Laws, became the Patron of their Liberty. Not by any legal Abatements, but by his Connivance as to the execution; the Magiſtrates, for the moſt part, doing what they perceived to be his Will. The Miniſters were encourag'd by Sir John Barber and others, to make their Addreſſes to the King, to profeſs their Loyalty, and acknowledge his Clemency: and they did ſo. The King told them, That tho' ſuch Acts were made, he was againſt Perſecution, and hop'd e're long to ſtand on his own Legs, and then they ſhould ſee how much he was againſt it. By this means they gain'd Peace and Quiet in their Meetings in the City: And in all Sir Richard Ford's Mayoralty (though he was ſuppos'd one of their greateſt and moſt knowing Adverſaries) they remained undiſturbed.

Roger Coke Eſq; Another Author, who was enough tender of the Diſſenting Parties, does obſerve, "That the Vizard-Mask under which the Popiſh Party covered their Hypocriſy, was for the King, againſt the Judgment of the two Houſes, to diſpenſe with Penal Laws againſt Diſſenters from the Church of England, ſo to conjoin the Proteſtant Diſſenter's Intereſt with the Popiſh: And this not only appeared by Practice, but by Deſign in Coleman's Letters to Fathers Ferrier and la Chaiſe, the French King's Confeſſors. And therefore, as before the firſt Dutch War the King iſſued out his Declaration of Indulgence for Diſpenſing with the Penal Laws in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, in the Interval of the ſitting of the Parliament; ſo did he before this ſecond War.——And before this Declaration of Indulgence in England, the King on Febr. 26. iſſued out his Proclamation in Ireland for granting general Licence to all Papiſts to live in Corporations, and exerciſe any Trade therein, and enjoy the ſame Privileges as other Subjects ought to do.

1671. 23 Car. II. There ſeems to be this farther Policy in the timing this Indulgence, [a] That the Church-Party in general were ſo Loyal in their Affections to the King, that they were not forward to ſuſpect the Intrigues of the Court, and therefore fell in with the Meaſures of aſſiſting the French and ruining the Dutch, with an implicit Faith it was the Wiſdom of the Miniſtry ſo to do. But the Diſſenters, in the ſeveral Parties of them, had no ſuch profound Veneration for the Government, but were rather jealous of the Adminiſtration of it; and therefore at this Juncture were the more naturally diſpoſed to murmur at the Politicks of the Court in eſpouſing the Cauſe of France againſt our Proteſtant Neighbours in Holland, and ſhew'd their Fears and Jealouſies very much (and indeed very juſtly) on this occaſion. So that it was the more neceſſary to ſtop the Mouths of theſe Men by an Indulgence, and divert them from the Proſpects of Popery and Arbitrary Power, which lay ſo open before them. And excepting this one political Reaſon of giving Content and Quiet, there was no other Cauſe of Indulging, but that of giving Liberty to Papiſts, and of gaining a new Precedent for an Arbitrary Diſpenſing Power, without which Popery could never prevail in theſe Kingdoms. The wiſer Diſſenters were themſelves ſenſible, that this Favour was not purely granted for their ſake; as they acknowledge in theſe Words: The beginning of the Dutch War made the Court think it neceſſary to grant an Indulgence to the Diſſenters, that ſo there might be Peace at home while there was War abroad: and upon this occaſion they had Liberty given them, tho' much to the Diſſatisfaction of thoſe who had had a hand in framing all the ſevere Laws againſt them.——This Indulgence was applauded by ſome among the Nonconformiſts, while others fear'd the Conſequences: for they well knew, that the Toleration was not chiefly for their ſakes, but for the Papiſts, and, that they ſhould hold it no longer than their Intereſt would allow it them: and withal, they feared it would continue the Diviſions, which might be much better heal'd by a Comprehenſion. However, they concluded on a cautious and moderate Thankſgiving for the King's Clemency and their own Liberty, and were introduc'd by my Lord Arlington. Mr. Baxter was not very forward to take the Advantage of this Indulgence: He was deſirous of Liberty in another way, and was fearful what this Method would iſſue in.——And they relate it as a very ob-

[a] The Earl of Sunderland in his Letter March 23, 1689. was of opinion, that this Liberty of Conſcience was only for the Foundation of Popery; that it was firſt offered at by the Lord Clifford, who by it had done the Work, even in this King's time, if it had not been for his Weakneſs, and the Weakneſs of his Miniſters.

The Author of the Letter from a Perſon of Quality, 1675, 4to, ſeems to have been well acquainted with this Court Intrigue. Says he, the Lord Clifford, a Man of a daring and ambitious Spirit, took the opportunity of the War with Holland the King was then engaged in, to propoſe the Delaration of Indulgence, that the Diſſenters of all ſorts, as well Proteſtants as Papiſts, might be at reſt, and ſo vaſt a number of People not be made deſperate at home while the King was engaged with ſo potent an Enemy abroad. This was no ſooner propoſed, but that the Earl of Shaftſbury, a Man as daring, but more able (though of Principles and Intereſt diametrically oppoſite to the other) preſently cloſed with it; and perhaps the opportunity I have had by my Converſation with them both, may give you light into their Deſigns.—My Lord Clifford did in expreſs Terms tell me one day in private Diſcourſe, that the King, if he would be firm to himſelf, might ſettle what Religion he pleas'd, and carry the Government to what Height he would: For if Men were aſſured in the Liberty of their Conſciences, and undiſturb'd in their Properties, able and upright Judges made in Weſtminſter-Hall to judge the Cauſes of Meum and Tuum; and if on the other hand the Fort of Tilbury was finiſhed to bridle the City, the Fort of Plymouth to ſecure the Weſt, and Arms for twenty Thouſand Men in each of theſe, and in Hull for the Northern Parts, with ſome Addition (which might be eaſily and undiſcernedly made) to the Forces now on foot, there were none who would have either Will, Opportunity, or Power to reſiſt.——The Lord Shaftſbury (with whom I had more Freedom) I with great Aſſurance aſked what he meant by the Declaration; for it ſeem'd to me (as I then told him) that it aſſumed a Power to repeal and ſuſpend all our Laws, to deſtroy the Church, to overthrow the Proteſtant Religion, and to tolerate Popery. He replied, half angry, that he wonder'd at my Objection, there being not one of theſe in the Caſe: For the King aſſumed no Power of repealing Laws, or ſuſpending them, contrary to the Will of his Parliament or People.——As to the Church, he conceived the Declaration was extremely their Intereſt; for the narrow Bottom they had plac'd themſelves upon, and the Meaſures they had proceeded by, ſo contrary to the Properties and Liberties of the Nation, muſt needs in ſhort time prove fatal to them: Whereas this led them into another way to live peaceably with the diſſenting and differing Proteſtants both at home and abroad, and ſo by neceſſary and unavoidable Conſequences to become the Head of them all: For that Place is due to the Church of England being in Favour,——and thus the Archbiſhop of Canterbury might become not only alterius Orbis, but alterius Religionis Papa; and all this Addition of Honour and Power, without the leaſt Loſs or Diminution of the Church. It not being intended, that one Living, Dignity, or Preferment, ſhould be given to any but thoſe that were ſtrictly conformable. As to the Proteſtant Religion, he told me plainly, it was for the preſerving of that, and that only, that he heartily join'd in the Declaration: For beſides that, he thought it his Duty to have a Care in his Place and Station of thoſe he was convinced were the People of God, and feared him, tho' of different Perſuaſions; he alſo knew nothing elſe but Liberty and Indulgence that could poſſibly (as our Caſe ſtood) ſecure the Proteſtant Religion in England.——[With much more very wiſe and true.]

ſervable

1671. 23 Car. II. ſervable thing, That no Man was more zealous in oppoſing this Declaration in the Houſe, than Alderman Love, a City Member and a noted Diſſenter; who declar'd, he had much rather ſtill go without their deſired Liberty, than have it in a way that would prove ſo detrimental to the Nation.—— But without farther Reflections, we preſent the Reader with a Copy of the ſaid Declaration.

His Majeſty's Declaration to all his loving Subjects March 15. 167½. Publiſhed by the Advice of his Privy Council.

The K.'s Declaration of Indulgence. "OUR Care and Endeavours for the Preſervation of the Rights and Intereſts of the Church, have been ſufficiently manifeſted to the World by the whole Courſe of our Government ſince our happy Reſtoration, and by the many and frequent ways of Coercion that we have uſed for reducing all erring or diſſenting Perſons, and for compoſing the unhappy Differences in Matters of Religion, which we found among our Subjects upon our Return; but it being evident, by the ſad Experience of twelve Years, that there is very little Fruit of all thoſe forcible Courſes, we think ourſelf obliged to make uſe of that Supreme Power in Eccleſiaſtical Matters which is not only inherent in us, but hath been declared and recognized to be ſo by ſeveral Statutes and Acts of Parliament: And therefore we do now accordingly iſſue this our Declaration, as well for the quieting the Minds of our good Subjects in theſe Points, for inviting Strangers in this Conjuncture to come and live under us, and for the better Encouragement of all to a chearful following of their Trade and Callings, from whence we hope, by the Bleſſing of God, to have many good and happy Advantages to our Government; as alſo for preventing, for the future, the Danger that might otherwiſe ariſe from private Meetings and ſeditious Conventicles.

"And, in the firſt place, we declare our expreſs Reſolution, Meaning, and Intention to be, That the Church of England be preſerved and remain entire in its Doctrine, Diſcipline, and Government, as now it ſtands eſtabliſhed by Law; and that this be taken to be, as it is, the Baſis, Rule, and Standard of the general and publick Worſhip of God, and that the orthodox conformable Clergy do receive and enjoy the Revenues belonging thereunto; and that no Perſon, tho' of a different Opinion and Perſuaſion, ſhall be exempt from paying his Tythes, or other Dues whatſoever. And farther we declare, That no Perſon ſhall be capable of holding any Benefice, Living, or Eccleſiaſtical Dignity or Preferment of any kind in this our Kingdom of England, who is not exactly conformable.

"We do, in the next place, declare our Will and Pleaſure to be, That the Execution of all and all manner of Penal Laws in Matters Eccleſiaſtical, againſt whatſoever ſort of Nonconformiſts or Recuſants, be immediately ſuſpended; and they are hereby ſuſpended. And all Judges, Judges of Aſſize, and Goal-Delivery, Sheriffs, Juſtices of the Peace, Mayors, Bailiffs, and other Officers whatſoever, whether Eccleſiaſtical or Civil, are to take notice of it, and pay due Obedience thereunto.

"And that there may be no Pretence for any of our Subjects to continue their illegal Meetings and Conventicles, we do declare, That we ſhall from time to time allow a ſufficient number of Places, as they ſhall be deſired, in all Parts of this our Kingdom, for the Uſe of ſuch as do not conform to the Church of England, to meet and aſſemble in, in order to their publick Worſhip and Devotion; which Places ſhall be open and free to all Perſons.

1671. 23 Car. II. "But to prevent ſuch Diſorders and Inconveniences as may happen by this our Indulgence, if not duly regulated, and that they may be the better protected by the Civil Magiſtrate; our expreſs Will and Pleaſure is, That none of our Subjects do preſume to meet in any place until ſuch place be allowed, and the Teacher of that Congregation be approved by us.

"And leſt any ſhould apprehend, that this Reſtriction ſhould make our ſaid Allowance and Approbation difficult to be obtained, we do farther declare, That this our Indulgence, as to the Allowance of the publick Places of Worſhip, and Approbation of the Preachers, ſhall extend to all ſorts of Nonconformiſts and Recuſants, except the Recuſants of the Roman Catholick Religion, to whom we ſhall in no wiſe allow publick Places of Worſhip, but only indulge them their Share in the common Exemption from the Execution of the Penal Laws, and the Exerciſe of their Worſhip in their private Houſes only.

"And if, after this our Clemency and Indulgence, any of our Subjects ſhall preſume to abuſe this Liberty, and ſhall preach ſeditiouſly, or to the Derogation of the Doctrine, Diſcipline, or Government of the Eſtabliſh'd Church, or ſhall meet in Places not allowed by us; we do hereby give them Warning, and declare, we will proceed againſt them with all imaginable Severity: And we will let them ſee we can be as ſevere to puniſh ſuch Offenders, when ſo juſtly provoked, as we are indulgent to truly tender Conſciences.

Given at our Court at Whitehall this 15th Day of March, in the Four and twentieth Year of our Reign.

1672. Second Dutch War. And now begins in earneſt the ſecond Dutch War. According to his Majeſty's Proclamation, Wedneſday the 27th of March was obſerved in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter as a ſolemn Faſt for the Bleſſing of God upon his Majeſty's Naval Forces: And it was indeed a Day of Sorrow and Humiliation to all honeſt and diſcerning Perſons. The next Day the War was proclaimed in a ſolemn manner by the Heralds, at four ſeveral Places, Temple-Bar, the End of Chancery-Lane, the End of Woodſtreet in Cheapſide, and the Royal-Exchange. The People were encouraged to Shouts and Acclamations, and the Lord Mayor invited the Heralds and the Guards to a plentiful Dinner, that the World might imagine this War to be undertaken at the Deſire and to the Satisfaction of the City. On the 7th of April the King of France, ſeeming to follow an Example that he had really given, publiſh'd his Declaration of War againſt the States General, containing, That the Diſſatisfaction his Majeſty has in the Carriage of the States General of the United Provinces of the Low-Countries towards him for ſome Years paſt, being come to that point, that his Majeſty cannot longer, without Diminution of his own Glory, diſſemble the Indignation raiſed in him, by a Treatment ſo unſuitable to the great Obligations which his Majeſty and the Kings his Predeceſſors have ſo liberally heaped upon them; his Majeſty had reſolved to declare War againſt the ſaid States; forbidding therefore all his Subjects to hold any Correſpondence with them on pain of Death, &c. (Declaration of the French King.)

Honours and Preferments. Under the general Diſſatisfaction of his Subjects, his Majeſty hop'd to make himſelf the more popular by taking into his Council theſe four Perſons of good Reputation among the People; Henry Marquis of Worceſter, Lord Preſident of the Council of Wales; Arthur Earl of Eſſex, whom his Majeſty declared he was ſending into Ireland as Lord-Lieutenant of that Kingdom; Thomas Viſcount Falconberg, Captain of his Majeſty's Band of Penſioners, and George Viſcount Hallifax; who being admitted on the 17th of April, took the uſual Oaths and their Places at the Board. But the Cabinet Council were diſtinguiſh'd with with more peculiar Favours; for on April 20. his Majeſty was pleaſed to create the Right Honourable John Earl of Lauderdale, principal Secretary of State of Scotland, Duke of Lauderdale, in the Kingdom of Scotland; Henry Lord Arlington his Majeſty's principal Secretary Earl of Arlington and Viſcount Thetford; Anthony Lord Aſhly Earl of Shaftsbury and Baron Cooper of Paulet; and Sir Thomas Clifford Treaſurer of his Majeſty's Houſhold Baron Clifford of Chudleigh. And the Duke of Lauderdale was made Knight of the Garter on Thurſday April 18. as likewiſe the Earl of Arlington in another Chapter of that Order held on June 15. And another able Miniſter was now raiſed up, Sir Tho. Oſborne Baronet, who was admitted of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council on May 3. And on May 29. Henry Marquis of Worceſter, the Earl of St. Albans, and the Earl of Bedford, were inſtall'd Knights of the Garter in a Chapter held at Whitehall. On Sept. 30. Thomas Earl of Oſſory was inveſted with the ſame Honour of the George and Garter.

1672. 24*Car.* II.

The King diſpenſes with ſome Laws.

As his Majeſty began the War with a Diſpenſation of the Laws, relating to Religion, by virtue (as he claim'd) of his ſupreme Power in matters Eccleſiaſtical, ſo he now proceeded to diſpenſe with another Law in a matter purely Civil. For on May 10. his Majeſty was pleaſed in Council to order and declare, that the Act of Parliament made in the twelfth Year of his Majeſty's Reign, For the Encouraging and Encreaſing of Shipping and Navigation, be totally ſuſpended and diſpens'd with, as likewiſe another Act made in the 13th Year of his Majeſty's Reign, entitul'd, An Act for the Encouragement of Trade: His Majeſty declaring, that the Suſpenſion of thoſe Laws ſhall continue during his own Royal Will and Pleaſure; and that when his Majeſty ſhall think fit to determine this Diſpenſation, he will by Proclamation give ſix Months notice thereof. Tho' the diſpenſing in theſe Matters, under the Neceſſities of a War, was perhaps to the common Good, yet the doing of it by Royal Will and Pleaſure, without Advice and Conſent of Parliament, was a very ill Example, and might grow into other more pernicious Acts of Arbitrary Power.

Expedition of the French Fleet joined by the Engliſh.

The King of France ſent out a Squadron of his Ships under the Count D'Eſtrees Vice-Admiral of France, who arriving at St. Hellens on May 3. the King and his great Officers went immediately to Portſmouth to pay Complements to him, and the Engliſh [a] Fleet ſail'd from the Downs and join'd with them. The Duke of York as Admiral was Commander of the Red, Monſieur D'Eſtrees of the White, and the Lord Sandwich of the Blue. The Dutch were as early abroad, and were ſeen off of Dover ſtanding for Calais on Thurſday May 9. and chas'd the Glouceſter and other Frigots into the River as far as Sheerneſs on May 13. On Sunday May 19. the Engliſh and French Fleet got their firſt Sight of the Dutch about eight Leagues E. S. E. of the Gunfleet, and put themſelves in a readineſs for Engagement the next Morning; but being again ſeparated and hinder'd by hazy Weather, the Engliſh ſtood into Sould-Bay, and lay there at Anchor till May 28, when the Dutch fell in with them and ſurpriz'd them.

Fight at Sould-Bay.

The Day before there had been great Jollity and Feaſting in the Engliſh Fleet; in the midſt of which my Lord of Sandwich was obſerv'd to ſay, That as the Wind ſtood the Fleet rode in danger of being ſurpriz'd by the Dutch, and therefore thought it adviſable to weigh Anchor and get out to Sea. The Duke of York, Lord High Admiral, ſlighted the Advice, and retorted upon the Earl, that he ſpake this out of Fear, which Reflection his Lordſhip is thought to have ſo far reſented, as the next Day out of Indignation to have ſacrific'd his Life, which he might have otherwiſe preſerv'd. The Dutch began the Engagement with the Blue Squadron, and the Royal James, commanded by the Earl of Sandwich, was the firſt Ship that fir'd, and after great Execution was at laſt burnt by a Dutch Fireſhip, and the Noble Earl periſh'd in her with many brave Gentlemen, Captain Haddock getting off with a Wound in his Thigh. The Duke was becalm'd, and could not draw into a Line of Battle, and yet receiv'd much Damage; the French had moſt Sea-room, and might have weather'd the Dutch and diſingaged the Engliſh, but they fir'd at a diſtance, and moſt of their Shot fell ſhort, yet their Vice-Admiral was kill'd. The Fight continued till nine at Night, when Sir Joſeph Jordan getting the Weather-gage of the Dutch, they ſtood away, and the Duke ſailing after them, got the appearance of a Victory. On our Side were kill'd the Noble Earl of Sandwich, Mr. Digby Capt. of the Henry, Sir Fretcheville Holles Capt. of the Cambridge, Sir John Fox Capt. of the Prince, Capt. Pearce of the St. George, Capt. Waterworth of the Anne, Capt. Hannam of the Triumph, Capt. Yennes of the Alice and Francis Fireſhip, Monſieur De la Rabiniere Rear-Admiral of the French; and of our Volunteers, the Lord Maidſtone, Mr. Mountague, Mr. Richard Nicholls and Mr. Roger Vaughan, both of his Royal Highneſſes Bed-Chamber, Mr. Trevanian his Gentleman-Uſher, Sir Philip Cartwright, Sir Charles Harbord, Capt. Bromley, Capt. Bennet, Mr. Cotterel, Capt. Burgh, Capt. Barry, Mr. Napier, Brother to a Scotch Lord of that Name, Mr. Bowles, and very many wounded. The Body of the Earl of Sandwich was diſcover'd floating on the Sea by one of his Majeſty's Katches, and was taken up and brought into Harwich, where it was receiv'd and embalm'd by the Governour Sir Charles Littleton, who ſending notice of it to Whitehall, his Majeſty declar'd, That out of his Princely regard to the great Deſervings of the ſaid Earl and his unexampled Performances in this laſt Act of his Life, he reſolved to have his Body brought up to London, there at his Charge to receive the Rites of Funeral due to his great Quality and Merits.

Policy of the Fr.

Loſs of the Engliſh.

French rapid Succeſs by Land.

While the French were content to have no Victory at Sea, they advanced their Conqueſt by Land in a very rapid manner. The French King in Perſon paſt the Mayeſe, and putting to flight the Dutch Troops there poſted to oppoſe him, he took Orſoy, Rhinburgh and Doſſery, all which ſurrender'd upon his firſt Approach before them. Wezel was deliver'd to the Prince of Conde upon the firſt opening the Trenches; and advancing, he took many other Towns, which put the States into ſuch a Terror, that they remov'd from the Hague to Amſterdam for their better Security, opening the Sluces, and put-

[a] As the French Fleet was to join the Dutch in the laſt War, ſo they were in this to join the Engliſh, but with equal Caution not to fight themſelves, but to ſee us beat one another; while our Reliance on their Help made us the more forward, not the more able to engage.——A Letter of Lord Arlington to Sir Bernard Gaſcoigne in Germany, dated, Whitehall, Apr. 19, 1672. ſhews how ſanguine the Court was upon opening this Scene at Sea.——Some Day the next Week the King and Queen reſolve to give the Duke a Viſit before he goes to Sea; and when the French Fleet ſhall be joined with him, under the Bleſſing of God we ſhall think we have a fair Game.—By this Scheme you ſee the Mortification of Holland as probable by Land as by Sea. God ſend it quickly, that we may have a ſhort War, &c. Miſcel. Aulica. 8*vo.* p. 68.——Another of May 10, 1672.—I have attended his Majeſty firſt to Sheerneſs, and ſince to Portſmouth.——On Tueſday laſt, by his Majeſty's Command, I happen'd to be on board his Royal Highneſs, lying out at Sea beyond the Iſle of Wight, when the French Fleet joined with him, which was not only a very fine Sight, but a moſt welcome one, that Force having render'd us, we computed, much ſuperior to the Dutch, towards whom his Royal Highneſs purpoſed to ſail the next Morning. Ib. p. 69.

The Count de Meriole in his Hiſtory of the War of Holland, takes notice, that the King of England being then at Portſmouth, had the Goodneſs to go on board the Count D'Eſtrees his Ship, to ſhew the mutual Confidence of the two Nations in one another.

ting

1672. 24 Car. II.

ting the Country round under Water, to the Damage of eighteen Millions of Gilders: For by June 28. the French had advanc'd within four Leagues of Rotterdam, and about the ſame diſtance from Amſterdam, with a Royal Army of at leaſt 118000 Foot and 26000 Horſe, compoſed of the beſt Troops that had been ever ſeen together, Commanded by two of the greateſt Generals of the Age, the Prince of Conde and the Mareſchal Turenne, who being encourag'd by the King in Perſon, like an impetuous Torrent carry'd all before them.

The Dutch in a dreadful Conſternation.

Theſe rapid Victories put the Dutch into a dreadful Conſternation, and the States General as well as De Wits muſt have been ſacrificed to the Fury of the People, if they had not concluded on July 1. that the perpetual Edict, by which they obliged themſelves never to admit of a Stadt-Holder, ſhould ceaſe and be of none effect, and had conſented to reſtoring the Prince of Orange to that Hereditary Honour.

The Engl. in great diſcontent.

And the People of England were ſo much diſpoſed to Murmurs and Complaints upon the ſucceſsful Progreſs of the French, that his Majeſty was obliged to iſſue his Proclamation for ſuppreſſing that unlawful and undutiful kind of Diſcourſe, by a moſt ſtrict and exemplary Puniſhment of all Perſons who ſhould be found ſpreaders of falſe News, or promoters of any malicious Slanders and Calumnies in any Coffee-Houſe or other publick or private Meeting. And under this juncture of Affairs the King was neceſſitated to publiſh a Declaration even in Favour of the Dutch, That notwithſtanding the War, if any of the Low-Country Subjects, either out of Affection to his Majeſty or his Government, or becauſe of the Oppreſſion they met with at home from their Governours, ſhould come into his Kingdoms, they ſhould be by his Majeſty protected in their Perſons and Eſtates, his Majeſty continuing in the ſame gracious Inclination towards all ſuch of the Subjects of the ſaid Low-Countries as ſhall deſire to deliver themſelves from the Calamity and Diſtreſs into which the ill Counſels of ſome prevailing Perſons in the Government of thoſe Countries had juſtly drawn them.

The Dutch ſend over Deputies to Engl.

Under theſe frightful Apprehenſions the States-General ſent over their Deputies to the King of England to repreſent the common Dangers of Europe, and the Ruin of their own Country, and the neceſſity of [a] putting a ſtop to the violent Progreſs of the French Arms. On Thurſday June 20. his Majeſty ſent four of the Lords of his Privy Council, viz. the Duke of Bucks, the Earl of Arlington, the Earl of Shaftsbury, and the Lord Clifford to thoſe Deputies of the States-General of the United Provinces at Hampton-Court, to know what Propoſals they had to offer to his Majeſty. They reply'd they had no Power or Inſtructions to make any offer, but to hear what his Majeſty would demand. Upon which his Majeſty appointed the Duke of Bucks, the Earl of Arlington, and the Lord Hallifax to be his Ambaſſadors Extraordinary and Plenipotentiaries, to treat jointly with ſuch as ſhould be appointed by the moſt Chriſtian King, with any Deputies or Commiſſioners from the ſaid States. Who for this purpoſe ſail'd from the Buoy in the Nore on June 23. and landing at Maeſland-ſluce, were received with great Joy and Satisfaction by the People, out of hopes they came to conclude a Peace, and were met near the Hague by a multitude of Men, Women and Children, who joined in their Acclamations all along as they paſſed, of God bleſs the King of England, God bleſs the Prince of Orange, and the Devil take the States. Theſe Ambaſſadors are ſaid to have ſent an Account of their Mediation to the King of France, who made a very imperious Anſwer, That the King of England might treat as he pleaſed, but that what he himſelf had got by his Arms was his own, and that what he ſhould get he would not reſtore without an Equivalent.

Imperious Humour of the French.

Upon which our Ambaſſadors are ſaid to have a great Indignation, and to have promiſed the States and the Prince of Orange, that they would engage to their utmoſt to bring the French King to be ſatisfied with Maeſtricht, and of keeping Garriſons upon the Rhine, belonging to the Electors of Brandenburgh and Cologn. And under this appearance of Amity the Duke of Bucks proceeded to wait on the French King at Utrecht, where they are ſaid to have changed their Minds, and within four Days after to have ſent Word to the Prince of Orange, that the States muſt give Satisfaction to both Kings jointly, and that neither would treat ſeparately.

And changeable diſpoſition of the Engliſh Miniſters.

So that on July 21. [b] the Plenipotentiaries return'd to Whitehall with this Account given to the Publick, That all their Excellencies could effect for the preſent was, to compoſe a promiſſory Act between the two Kings, not to treat or conclude without Participation and Incluſion of each others Pretences. The Intrigue of this Ambaſſy is beſt diſcover'd by theſe Queries made upon it by Mr. Secretary Coventry.

Queries of Mr. Secretary Coventry.

I. Whether they were ſent to promote the French Conqueſts? If not, why, by making the Peace impoſſible, as far as in them lay, would they force the Dutch to ſubmit to the French Dominion?

II. Whether they did not know that the French Demands alone had been rejected by the States; and that the granting of them would make it impoſſible for the Dutch to give the King any Satisfaction?

III. Whether having received, from the Prince and States, all imaginable Aſſurances of their Deſigns to return to the King's Amity, and to purchaſe it at any Rate they could, they could faithfully neglect theſe, and enter into a new Engagement ſo prejudicial to England?

IV. How far thoſe who were join'd in Commiſſion did concur in their Judgment; and whether theſe Conſiderations, with many others, were not repreſented to them, and urged by ſome who deſired to ſerve the King faithfully?

V. Whether or no it was for that Reaſon they oppoſed ſo fiercely my Lord Viſcount Hallifax*'s (who came a Day or two after them) appearing and acting jointly with them, tho' in the ſame Commiſſion with them, in as ample a manner as themſelves?*

VI. Who were thoſe who (after my Lord Hallifax could be kept out no longer) went privately to the French Camp under Pretences, and had Negociations of their own on foot?

VII. Whether they had order to call the French King, King of France, and to name him before their Maſter, as well in the French Demands as of his Majeſty's, in all their Agreements which they ſent to the Prince of Orange?

VIII. Whether they had Inſtructions to ſtand in behalf of the French, upon the publick Exerciſe of the Roman Catholick Religion in the United Provinces;

---

[a] Theſe Deputies were at firſt receiv'd with Contempt. For the Earl of Arlington in one Letter of June 10, 1672. ſeem'd full of Joy for the Accounts of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty's great and happy Progreſs. And in another of June 17th he ſeems angry that the States have ſent four Deputies to the King of France, and as many to the King our Maſter, two of which are coming hither, and met Monſieur Boreel as he was going out of the River, who coming hither without any Leave or Paſſport, are ſent to Hampton-Court, to ſtay there till his Majeſty ſhall think fit to allow them an Audience.—— Earl of Arlington*'s Letters.* Vol. II. p. 374.

[b] See a Letter of Lord Clifford to Sir Bernard Gaſcoigne, then negotiating a Popiſh Match for the Duke of York, dated, Whitehall, July 17, 1672.——Our Plenipotentiaries return without making Peace. The Prince of Orange and the Hollanders think both our Demands and the King of France's too high for their conſenting to them yet; ſo that the War goes vigorouſly on both by Sea and Land, though his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty be returning to Paris. The great Artifice of the Hollanders was to cauſe Jealouſies, and then to divide the two Kings, and they have uſed great Art in it; but have been ſo far from prevailing, that they have been the Cauſe of uniting more and more the Affections of them; and I do aſſure you there was never ſo much Confidence in one and the other of each others Proceedings, as at this preſent. Miſcellan. Aulica, p. 72.

1672. 24Car.II. the Churches to be divided to the Roman Prieſts to be maintained out of the publick Revenues? And to bind the King's Hands; ſo that the French King may be ſure of his Bargain, theſe Plenipotentiaries (two of them) agreed with the French, that the King ſhould not treat nor conclude a Peace with the Dutch without them: But the French King ſhall find no more Security herein, than the Dutch and Spaniard did in the King's joining in the Triple League.

The Right Honourable Sir John Trevor, [c] one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, and of his Honourable Privy Council, died on Tueſday May 28. about ten of the Clock at Night, after ſix Days Diſtemper of a Feaver, in the forty ſeventh Year of his Age, and on Friday Night following was honourably interr'd at St. Bartholomew's in Smithfield. Into whoſe Place Henry Coventry, Eſq; late Ambaſſador at the Court of Sweden, was ſworn one of the principal Secretaries of State in July 3. and was at the ſame time, together with Sir Robert Long Knight and Baronet, admitted into the Privy Council. The Earl of Eſſex having been appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in the room of the Lord Berkeley, began his Journey toward that Kingdom on July 22. with a very noble Equipage, and arriving at Dublin had on Aug. 5. the Sword of State deliver'd to him by the Lord Berkeley, who the next Day imbark'd for England. The great Change in Officers of State was thus reported by Authority. " November 17. " his Majeſty reflecting upon the Age and conti- " nual Indiſpoſition of Sir Orlando Bridgman, Lord " Keeper of the Great Seal of England, hath thought " fit to admit of his Reſignation thereof, with all " demonſtration on his Majeſty's part, of his kind- " neſs and eſteem of the ſaid Lord Keeper's Merit " toward him. And his Majeſty willing to gratify " the uninterrupted good Services of the Earl of " Shaftsbury, Chancellor of his Exchequer, and one " of the Lords Commiſſioners of the Treaſury, was " pleaſed this Day to give unto him the keeping of " the ſaid Great Seal, with the Title of Lord Chan- " cellor of England. Nov. 20. his Majeſty was plea- " ſed to appoint Sir John Duncumb Knight, one of " the Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Treaſury, to " be Chancellor and under-Treaſurer of his Exche- " quer, upon the Reſignation of thoſe Offices by the " Earl of Shaftsbury Lord Chancellor of England. " Nov. 30. his Majeſty valuing the many eminent " Services of the Right Honourable Thomas Lord " Clifford, Treaſurer of his Majeſty's Houſhold, and " one of the Lords Commiſſioners of the Treaſury, " and more particularly the great Abilities and Ex- " perience in the Affairs of his Majeſty's Treaſury, " was pleaſed on Thurſday 28. inſtant to advance " him to the place of Lord High Treaſurer of En- " gland, remaining void ſince the Death of the late " Earl of Southampton, and accordingly his Lord- " ſhip having that Morning received the Staff, was " accompanied by the great Officers, and other " principal Perſonages of the Court, to Weſtminſter- " Hall; where, in the Court of Chancery, the uſual " Oaths were adminiſtred to him by the Lord High " Chancellor of England. The Place of Treaſurer " of the Houſhold was at the ſame time conferred " by his Majeſty on the Right Honourable the Lord " Newport, and that of Comptroller, formerly poſ- " ſeſſed by his Lordſhip, given to the Right Ho- " nourable the Lord Maynard, as a Mark of the " Eſteem his Majeſty is pleaſed to retain of his con- " ſtant Loyalty and Affection to his Majeſty and " the Crown. Jan. 6. his Majeſty was pleaſed to " create the Marquis of Blanquefort, younger Bro- " ther to the Duke de Duras, a Baron of England, " by the Title of Lord Duras, Baron of Holdenby in " the County of Northampton, to encourage his emi- " nent Virtue and Merit in his Service: And his " Royal Highneſs to render this Grace of his Ma- " jeſty the more complete, hath beſtowed the Ho- " nour of Holdenby upon him the Lord Duras, he ha- " ving been actually theſe ten Years paſt in his Roy- " al Highneſs's Service; in his firſt Entrance to " which, he was Naturaliz'd in this Kingdom, and " hath particularly ſignalized himſelf in the many " and memorable Occaſions at Sea, in which his " Royal Highneſs hath expos'd himſelf during this " preſent and the former War, in which he was e- " ver a near Attendant on his Royal Highneſs's " Perſon. Jan. 25. Upon the Death of his Grace " the Duke of Richmond (who died in his Embaſſy " at Sweden) one of the Knights of the moſt noble " Order of the Garter, his Majeſty was pleaſed to " ſummon a Chapter of the ſaid Order in the Red " Room (at Whitehall) where the Sovereign and " nine Companions being preſent, the Right Ho- " nourable the Earl of Southampton was unanimouſly " elected Companion of that moſt noble Order. " Jan. 29. The Corps of the Right Honourable the " Earl of Derby was interred at Ormeſchurch in Lan- " caſhire, the antient Burying-place of that Noble " Family, which was accompanied with very great " Numbers of Perſons of the beſt Quality in that " and the adjacent Counties, who voluntarily came " in to pay their laſt Reſpects to the Noble Lord " deceaſed: Both Gentry and Commonalty expreſ- " ſed a great ſenſe of the Loſs of ſo Loyal a Subject " to his Majeſty, ſo true a Son of the Church, and " ſo worthy a Patriot of his Country; but yet re- " ceived much Satisfaction in his Son the now Earl, " whoſe Parts, Temper, and Behaviour, have given " them great hopes that he will in nothing that is " good and honourable be inferior to any of his moſt " renowned Anceſtors. And his Majeſty and Royal " Highneſs have been pleaſed to take ſo much no- " tice of his own Qualifications, as well as the " Merits of his Family, that they have conferred " on him thoſe Places of Truſt which his Father " had.——Friday Mar. 7. the Right Honourable " James Earl of Northampton was admitted of his " Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council; and " after the uſual Oaths adminiſtred to him, took " his Place at the Board accordingly.

Honours and Preferments.

Duke of Monmouth ſent abroad.

The Duke of Monmouth was now ſent abroad to diſtinguiſh himſelf by Arms and ſome Experience in them. The K. of England by his Agreement with Lewis XIV. was to ſend ſix thouſand Men into his Service by Land. Theſe Forces being Engliſh and Scots, were Commanded by the Duke of Monmouth, who arrived in the French Camp near Charleroy at the latter end of April. A Detachment of twenty thouſand Men, and a Train of Artillery, under the Viſcount de Turenne, were ſent towards Maeſtricht; and the next Day the French King followed with the Body of the Army, accompanied by the Dukes of Orleans and Monmouth. The Count de Lorge inveſted the Place with three thouſand Horſe; but the King calling a great Council of War, at which the Duke of Monmouth aſſiſted, 'twas there reſolved, to turn the intended Siege of Maeſtricht into a Blockade. So twenty thouſand Men were left before it for that purpoſe, and the reſt of the Army march'd to the Rhine. The Duke was at the taking of Orſoy, Rhineberg, Wezel, Emmerick, Doesburg, Zutphen, and was in the French King's Camp near Utrecht when that [c] Sir John Trevor Secretary of State, with Prince Rupert and the Duke of Ormond, had been remov'd from the Committee for foreign Affairs to make room for ſuch as would give themſelves entirely up to the Management of France. Secret Hiſt. of Europe, P. I. p. 104. And at p. 143. it is again affirm'd, that Mr. Secretary Trevor, for favouring the States Intereſt in Oppoſition to the French, was ſo far in diſgrace at Court, and upon occaſion of the Plenipotentiaries being ſent to the French Court, he drew up the following Queries, &c. that ſhew, that in the moſt deprav'd Times, there have always been Engliſhmen diſpos'd to the Publick Good, and the Cauſe of Liberty.

1672. 24 Car. II.

City ſent her Keys to the Conqueror. On the 5th of July, the Duke, with the Engliſh Noblemen and Gentlemen Volunteers in the French Army, went to view the Town, and were honourably entertained by the Magiſtrates. The 11th of July the Army broke up, and march'd back to Flanders; and the Campaign being over, the King return'd to Saint Germains, and the Duke to England. On his arrival at London, he was received with univerſal Joy; for, tho' the People diſlik'd the War, yet they were pleaſed to hear how much the Duke was a Hero in it. On the 25th of Auguſt his Dutcheſs was deliver'd of a Son, Chriſtned Charles, who died in 1679. In November the Duke went again to France, on News that the Prince of Orange was ſet down before Charleroy; but the Prince leaving that Siege to attack Bon, Flanders was quiet the reſt of the Winter. The Duke landed at Calais, and went thence to Dourlens, where his Regiment quarter'd. In his way thither, the Duke of Elbeuf, Governour of Montrevil, receiv'd him in an extraordinary manner. At Beville the Militia were drawn up, and the Mayor complemented him at the Gates. Near Dourlens the Governour met him with his Coaches, attended with forty Horſe; waited upon him into the Town, entertain'd him ſplendidly for five Days, and received the Word from him every Night. Here the Duke took a Review of his Regiment, which he found in good Order, and well diſciplin'd. Thence he went to Paris, and ſo to St. Germains, where he was received by the King with particular Honours. He made no long ſtay at the French Court, but finding there was no likelihood of any ſudden Action, he return'd to England, and remain'd there till the opening of the Campaign.

Parliam. farther prorogu'd.

Sept. 17. his Majeſty in Council order'd a Proclamation to be ſet forth, That whereas he had lately prorogued the Parliament from the 16th Day of Apr. laſt unto the 30th of October next enſuing; for divers weighty Reaſons he did again Prorogue the ſaid [a] Parliament from the ſaid 30th of October until the 4th Day of February next enſuing. In the mean time his Majeſty was to raiſe Men, and provide Money, by his own Intereſt and Authority. On Dec. 4. he was pleaſed in Council to declare, That he found it neceſſary, during the preſent War, to raiſe more Soldiers, and to form them into Regiments, and diſpoſe of them in ſeveral Quarters, until there ſhould be occaſion for their Service againſt the Enemy; and therefore order'd a Proclamation, to forbid any Rudeneſs or Miſdemeanor in their reſpective Quarters. And that the Fund of his Exchequer might not be deficient for this occaſion, on Dec. 11. he order'd a Declaration to be publiſh'd for a farther ſtop to the payment of any former Debts, confeſſing that he had before Declar'd the ſtop of Payments ſhould not continue beyond the laſt Day of this Inſtant December. But notwithſtanding his Majeſty hath not been wanting on his Part to comply with all honourable ways and means that might operate ſuch happy Effects, yet the continuance of thoſe inevitable Neceſſities which firſt inforced his Majeſty contrary to his own Inclinations to cauſe a ſtop to be made of Payment of Monies, compels him at this preſent to continue the ſame ſtop of payments of any Monies now being or to be brought into his Exchequer, until the firſt Day of May next enſuing——Doubting not but that all his loving Subjects have ſuch Truſt and Confidence in his Juſtice, that it will take away all apprehenſions of their being in the leaſt defrauded of any thing that is juſtly due to them.

Declaration of the King's being yet unable to pay his Debts.

Meeting of Parl.

On Tueſday Feb. 4. the two Houſes of Parliament, according to his Majeſty's Prorogation, met at Weſtminſter; where his Majeſty having commanded the Houſe of Commons to attend him in the Lords Houſe, the Lord Chancellor did, by his Majeſty's Command, acquaint them, that by the late Advancement of Sir Edward Turner Kt. to the Place of Lord [b] Chief Baron of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer, the Place of Speaker of that Houſe was now void; and that it therefore was his Majeſty's Pleaſure they ſhould forthwith return to their Houſe, and chooſe a Speaker, with Directions to preſent him the next Day at Three in the Afternoon to his Majeſty, for his Allowance and Approbation; which the Houſe of Commons accordingly did, having unanimouſly made Choice of Sir Job Charlton Kt. to ſupply that Place. On Feb. 5. his Majeſty was pleaſed to return to the Houſe of Lords, where the Commons attended and preſented their new Speaker, whom his Majeſty was pleaſed to accept and allow of. Then his Majeſty made a Speech to the two Houſes, acquainting them, That he had entred into an expenſive War, and wanted Money to ſupport it, and to pay his Debts; which he left to their ſpecial care; and telling them farther, That he had granted an Indulgence, and was reſolved to ſtand to it [c]. The Lord Chancellor Shaftsbury was to make a farther Declaration of his Majeſty's Mind, which he did in a large Speech, wherein he was very bitter againſt the Dutch, repreſenting them as our Rivals, and ſworn Enemies in Honour and Trade, and applying to Holland, Delenda eſt Carthago; farther adding, That the States of the United Provinces were in a mortal Oppoſition to us both by Intereſt and Inclination; and magnified our Happineſs in a League with France, as the greateſt Advantage that could happen to England. It muſt be own'd, that this was a falſe and a ſcandalous Speech, and was ſoon condemn'd by the Speaker himſelf, who preſently found the fatal Influence of joining with France, and the wiſe neceſſity of eſpouſing the

The Commons chooſe Sir Job Charlton Speaker.

Speeches of the K. and Lord Chanc.

[a] That this Prorogation of the Parliament was purpoſely to ſerve the French and Popiſh Intereſt, and to prevent their adviſing a Peace with Holland, is made plain by the Letters of the Earl of Arlington, one to Sir Bernard Gaſcoigne, dated, Whitehall, Septemb. 20, 1672.——The laſt Week his Majeſty reſolv'd in Council a farther Prorogation of the Parliament to the 4th of Febr. next, by which a great Meaſure of the Hollanders is broken, having fancied to themſelves that they ſhould prevail with many of the Members of it to make them clamorous upon his Majeſty for a ſeparate Treaty upon eaſy Terms, and with Excluſion of France.——Another to our Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Whitehall, Sept. 26, 1672.—All our Letters from Holland do ſufficiently explain their Backwardneſs to come to a Treaty, beſides the Auxiliary Forces marching in Germany to their Aſſiſtance. Some diſcontented People have flatter'd them with an Opinion, that the Parliament, meeting the latter End of October, would do Wonders for them, and prevail with his Majeſty to give them an eaſy Peace, and ſeparate from France. To undeceive them therein, his Majeſty has reſolved the Proroguing of the Parliament till February next, in which Seaſon of the Year it muſt of neceſſity be determined whether we ſhall have War or Peace. Lord Arlington's Letters, Vol. II. p. 389.

[b] The Dutch were again in hopes, that upon the Meeting of the Parliament the Senſe of the Nation would be for a ſeparate Peace between England and Holland, excluſive of France. The Earl of Arlington's Letter to our Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Whitehall, Decemb. 26. 1672.——Our freſheſt Letters from Flanders tell us, they flatter themſelves much in Holland upon a vain Imagination, that the Parliament, which is to meet on the 4th of February, will make preſſing Inſtances to the King to conclude a ſeparate Peace with them to the Excluſion of France, which is but a ſmall Hold for ſo great a Buſineſs as theirs, and ſuch a one as I perſuade myſelf will never appear publickly for their Satiſfaction. Lord Arlington's Letters, Vol. II. p. 398——Again January 31, 1673.—The Coldneſs wherewith the States ſeem to entertain the Overtures of Peace, makes us fear it is a great way off; and what betwixt the Diviſions they have with their Allies, and the Expectation of great Troubles in our Parliament, which meets on Tueſday next, they remain as fierce and preſumptuous as if they were the Conquerors.——ib. p. 403.——Father Orleans complains, that the Reaſon why Holland was not perfectly ſubdued, was the ill Fortune that King Charles too ſoon ſtood in need of his Parliament's Aſſiſtance.

[c] The Earl of Shaftsbury had the Seals given to him for this purpoſe of breaking the Triple League, and entring into new Alliance with France, into which Meaſures Sir Orlando Bridgman, to his immortal Honour, would not enter, and therefore was oblig'd to reſign the Seals on the 17th of November, 1672. He had honeſtly declar'd, as ſoon as the Triple League was made, that he would endeavour in his Station the inviolable Obſervation of it.

defence

1672. 24 Car. II.

defence of Holland, and took Refuge at laſt in that Country as the ſureſt Place of Protection for his Liberty and Life.

On February 7. the two Speeches of the King and Chancellor were read in the Houſe of Commons, and the Matter of them was taken into Conſideration. And that their Zeal for the King's Service might the better juſtiſie their freedom of debating on this Subject, upon a Motion for Supply, the Houſe forthwith reſolved into a Committee of the whole Houſe, to conſider of that Motion, and immediately upon a Report from the Committee, the Houſe reſolved Nemine contradicente, That a Supply be given to his Majeſty of eighteen Months Aſſeſſment, according to the Proportion of the laſt Royal Aid, not exceeding Seventy thouſand Pounds per Menſem.

Commons vote a Supply.

When the Commons reſum'd the Debate of the Speeches of the King and the Lord Chancellor, they ſeem'd to awake out of a profound Security into very ſenſible Jealouſies and Fears of Popery and Deſpotick Power. An Army encamped at Black-Heath under many Popiſh Officers, raiſed without Advice of Parliament, to ſend againſt Proteſtant Neighbours already too far ſwallowed up by the French: And the Diſpenſing Power exerciſed in a Declaration of Indulgence, for the ſake of Popiſh Recuſants as well as of Proteſtant Diſſenters: Theſe things, and the Dangers of an ill conſequence of them, alarm'd the Commons, tho' by Cuſtom and Obligations addicted to the Court. They firſt agreed upon an humble Addreſs to the King, wherein they preſent, that conſidering his Declaration of Indulgence, they found themſelves bound in Duty to inform him, that Penal Statutes, in Matters Eccleſiaſtical, cannot be ſuſpended but by Act of Parliament. To which the King made an Anſwer, to ſoften them and divert them from their Motion: But the Houſe not ſatisfied with it, renew'd their Addreſs by way of a Reply, and inſiſted on the Illegality of a Royal Diſpenſing Power, with ſo much Reſolution, that his Majeſty was forced to yield to them. Theſe Debates were ſo warm, and ſo unacceptable to the Court, that they are thought to have made the Speaker weary of his Chair before he was ſettled in it. His leaving the Place is thus reported by Authority in the beſt Colour it could bear: Saturday Feb. 15. Sir Job Charlton, Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, having been taken ill the Night before, ſo as not to be able to proceed in the Service of the Houſe that Day; the Houſe, notwithſtanding the great and preſſing Affairs now depending before them, thought fit to adjourn till Tueſday; at which time Mr. Speaker, finding his Indiſpoſition to continue ſtill upon him, did by Letter make his humble Suit to his Majeſty, that he might be eaſed of the Burden he was not able longer to ſuſtain: Whereupon his Majeſty ſignified to the Houſe, by Mr. Secretary Coventry, his Permiſſion to them to chooſe a new Speaker (they having the ſame Morning received a Letter from the Speaker, to have Leave to retire into the Country) and immediately the Houſe did unanimouſly make Choice of Edward Seymour Eſquire, much to his Majeſty's Satisfaction, for his known Loyalty and great Abilities to diſcharge that Place. And accordingly the Houſe of Commons, having preſented him to his Majeſty in the Houſe of Lords for his Majeſty's Approbation, his Majeſty was pleaſed very graciouſly to accept and allow of the Choice.

And are apprehenſive of Popery and Arbitrary Power.

Declare againſt the King's Diſpenſing Power.

Speaker weary of his Chair

Edward Seymour Eſq; choſen Speaker.

Soon after both Houſes of Parliament did join in an humble Petition and Addreſs, Repreſenting to his Majeſty their Fears and Apprehenſions of the Growth and Encreaſe of the Popiſh Religion in theſe his Majeſty's Dominions, together with the Cauſes thereof, and alſo ſuch Remedies as they conceive may be proper to prevent ſuch growing Miſchiefs. Upon which his Majeſty iſſued out his Proclamation of the 13th of March, Declaring that his Majeſty had ſeriouſly conſidered of the ſaid Petition, and with much Contentment and Satisfaction did accept and approve the great Care of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, for the Preſervation of the true Religion eſtabliſhed in this Kingdom; wherein his Majeſty declares, as he hath always adhered againſt all Temptations whatſoever, ſo he will ſtill employ his utmoſt Care and Zeal in the Maintenance and Defence of it: And therefore ſtrictly charges and commands all Jeſuits and Romiſh Prieſts to depart the Kingdom, and the Laws to be put in due execution againſt all Popiſh Recuſants, or juſtly ſuſpected to be ſo.

Addreſs againſt Popery.

But the Proclamation of this kind having been formerly things of courſe, the two Houſes were not ſatisfied, but on the next Day preſented to his Majeſty another Addreſs, humbly repreſenting the beſt Means, in their Opinion, for the ſatisfying and compoſing the Minds of his Subjects. And the King ſeeing them now in earneſt, began to recede from his Diſpenſation of Indulgence, and his declared Reſolution of keeping to it; and very graciouſly aſſured them, that He freely and readily agreed to what they had propoſed, and would take care to ſee it performed accordingly. And on the Morrow after this Aſſurance given, his Majeſty renew'd it in a more ſolemn manner by a gracious Speech to both Houſes, which was publiſhed on March 15. and was as follows.

Another Addreſs.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

"YEſterday you preſented me an Addreſs, as the "beſt means for the ſatisfying and compo-"ſing the Minds of my Subjects, to which I freely "and readily agreed, and ſhall take care to ſee it "performed accordingly.

"I hope on the other ſide, you Gentlemen of the "Houſe of Commons will do your part; for I muſt "put you in mind, it is near five Weeks ſince I de-"manded a Supply, and what you then voted una-"nimouſly, did both give Life to my Affairs at "home and diſhearten my Enemies abroad; but the "ſeeming delay it hath met withal ſince, hath made "them take new Courage, and they are now pre-"paring for this next Summer a greater Fleet (as "they ſay) than ever they had yet; ſo that if the "Supply be not very ſpeedily diſpatch'd it will be "altogether ineffectual, and the Safety, Honour "and Intereſt of England muſt of neceſſity be ex-"poſed. Pray lay this to Heart, and let not the "Fears and Jealouſies of ſome draw an inevitable "Ruin upon us all.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"If there be any Scruple yet remaining with you, "concerning the diſpenſing with Penal Laws, I "here faithfully promiſe you, that what hath been "done in that particular, ſhall not for the future be "drawn either into Conſequence or Example.

"And as I daily expect from you a Bill for my "Supply, ſo I aſſure you, I ſhall as willingly re-"ceive, and paſs any other you ſhall offer me, that "may tend to the giving you Satisfaction in all your "juſt Grievances.

This Speech ſo far ſweetned the Commons, that they proceeded in the Supply and diſpatch of the other Bills before them; and yet in the Money Bill they would not expreſſly own the Dutch War, nor ſeem to maintain it, but worded it only to ſupply the King's extraordinary Occaſions. And before they parted with the Bill they tack'd a Proviſo to it, That no Papiſt ſhould be capable of holding any publick Employment. It muſt be obſerv'd, that while the Commons ſhew'd ſo much reſentment at the King's Indulgence to Proteſtant Diſſenters, they excepted more againſt the way of doing it than againſt the thing it ſelf, if done in a legal manner: For on Feb. 14. the Commons Reſolv'd Nemine Contradicente, That a Bill be brought in for the eaſe of his Majeſty's Subjects, who are Diſſenters in Matters of Religion from the Church of England. And the Bill having paſſed paſſed that Houſe, was carried to the Lords and thrown out by them.

Proceedings of the Commons.

A Bill for the Eaſe of Proteſtant Diſſenters.

1674. 24 Car. II.

Diſpenſing Power eſtabliſhed by Law in Scotland.

In Scotland the Duke of Lauderdale Lord High Commiſſioner, got the King's diſpenſing Power to be eſtabliſhed by Law: For in this ſecond Parliament held by him at Edinburgh this Summer, he procured an Act, declaring That by virtue of the King's Supremacy, the ordering the Government of the Church does properly belong to his Majeſty and Succeſſors, as an inherent Right of the Crown; and that he may enact and emit ſuch Conſtitutions, Acts and Orders concerning Church Adminiſtrations, Perſons, Meetings and Matters, as he in his Royal Wiſdom ſhall think fit, &c. any Law Act or Cuſtom to the contrary notwithſtanding. And while Indulgence was a part of the Politicks of the Engliſh Court, he took away all hopes of it in Scotland, for with a ſtanding Army, living upon free Quarter, he made all ſorts of People depoſe upon Oath, their knowledge of the Perſons of Diſſenters, not Popiſh meetings; in the Exerciſe of their Worſhip, upon Penalty of Fining, Impriſonment, Baniſhment and Tranſportation, and to be ſold for Slaves; Impriſoning all outed Miniſters, who ſhall preach out of their Families, till they give Security of 5000 Marks Scot not to do the ſame again; every hearer being a Tenant to pay 25 l. Scot, and Cotter 12, Toties Quoties, they ſhall offend; and that it ſhall be death for any to preach in Fields or Houſes, where any are without Doors, and 500 Marks Reward for any to ſecure ſuch dead or alive; and gave Orders that every Man for himſelf, and all under him, ſhould give Bond not to go to Field Meetings, and to inform againſt, purſue and deliver up all outed Miniſters to Judgment.

Bravery of the Prince of Orange.

[a] The Prince of Orange being now Stadtholder of Holland, was in effect the only Protector of the Liberties of Europe, and the only oppoſer of the exceſſive Powers of France. It was a general Report that deſerves Credit, when the Duke of Buckingham with the Lords Arlington and Hallifax was ſent upon an Ambaſſy this Summer to the French King at Utrecht, his Grace had a long Diſcourſe with the Prince about the bad Poſture of the Affairs of his Country, and uſed many Arguments to him in vain for his accepting the Sovereignty of it under the Protection of England and France; he told him at laſt, he wonder'd what he could propoſe to himſelf in ſuch a deſperate Caſe, ſince according to the Humour he perſiſted in, he muſt unavoidably ſee the final Ruin of it. To which the Prince reply'd, That what his Grace ſaid concerning their dangerous Condition was indeed true; but yet, that he had one way ſtill left not to ſee it compleated, which was to lie in the laſt Dike; by which he meant the fighting of it out to the laſt.

1672. 24 Car. II.

Under this intrepid Reſolution he attack'd Woerden, and beat off the Duke of Luxembergh from two ſeveral Attempts of relieving the Town, but having loſt Colonel Zuleſtein, who refuſing Quarter was ſlain, he was forc'd to riſe from that Siege, and to march for Roſendale, the place appointed for the general Rendezvous. A certain Colonel by the way had the Curioſity to ask him, What great Deſign he had at that time againſt the French? He put another Queſtion to him by way of Reply, Whether he would diſcover his Deſigns to any Perſon in the World that ſhould be ſo impertinently inquiſitive to ask him? And the Colonel anſwering him in the Negative: Then, ſaid the Prince, my Tongue is alſo endow'd from Heaven with the ſame Grace.

From Roſendale (with an Army of 24000 Horſe and Foot) he march'd directly toward the Country of Liege, and made the Count de Duras retire with his Army to Waſſemburgh, and decline a Battle which the Prince provok'd him to; after this the Prince by a ſtrong Detachment took in the ſtrong Caſtle of Valkeren, and then inveſted Charleroy, but finding a formal Siege impracticable, made himſelf Maſter of Binch, and retiring thro' Brabant, diſperſed his Army into Winter Quarters. And when Luxemburgh with an Army of 14000 Horſe and Foot march'd over the Ice to invade the Province of Holland, about the end of December, the Prince haſted to Alfen, and by his preſence upon a ſudden Thaw, made the French glad to retire with conſiderable loſs.

State of Religion.

As to the State of Religion, it has already appeared, that the dangers of Popery were viſible to all who had their Eyes open. And it did not a little [b] contribute to the common Fears and Jealouſie, that the Dutcheſs of York, who had been bred and had long lived a firm and zealous Member of the Church of England, was in the time of her Weakneſs and Sickneſs importun'd and over-power'd to declare herſelf a Roman Catholick; and ſhe had ſome time before betray'd her Inclinations, had left this Copy of a Paper written by her ſome few Months before her Death.

Dutcheſs of York dies a Papiſt.

"IT is ſo reaſonable to expect, that a Perſon al-
" ways bred up in the Church of England,
" and as well inſtructed in the Doctrine of it (as
" the beſt Divines and her Capacity could make her)
" ſhould be liable to many Cenſures for leaving that,
" and making herſelf a Member of the Roman Ca-
" tholick Church, to which I confeſs I was one of

[a] See the Dutch Remonſtrance concerning the Proceedings and Practiſes of JOHN DE WIT, Penſionary, and RUWAERT VAN PUTTEN his Brother, with others of that Faction. Drawn up by a Perſon of Eminency there, and printed at the Hague, and tranſlated out of Dutch August 30, 1672. 4to.

[b] The wiſer part of the Nation ſeem'd to underſtand that this Year 1672 was very likely to have brought about the Return of Popery. The Duke of York within this Year withdrew from the Communion of the Church of England: He was this Year to have married the Dutcheſs of Inſpruck upon Terms of her Religion, in defiance to the Laws. So ſaid the Earl of Arlington in a Letter to our Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Whitehall, Octob. 28, 1672. —— Sir Bernard Gaſcoigne hath concluded the Articles of his Royal Highneſs's Marriage with the young Archdutcheſs upon Terms ſomewhat incongruous as to our Government here, but in Subſtance much to his Majeſty's and Royal Highneſs's Satisfaction. — The new Lord Treaſurer Clifford was a Papiſt, and Lord Arlington no better. King Lewis and King Charles were in the ſtricteſt Band of Amity againſt the Dutch. One of the Engliſh Lords, who was ſent over to cultivate this cloſe Friendſhip, tells us the Reſult of it; the Earl of Arlington in a Letter to our Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Whitehall, July 25, 1672. —— His Majeſty ſent my Lord Duke of Buckingham and my ſelf as his Plenipotentiaries to the moſt Chriſtian King. —— Our whole Negotiation ended in framing an Act, to oblige both the Kings anew not to treat or conclude a Peace with the common Enemy, [the Dutch] without the Participation and Concurrence of each other. —— Again, Aug. 30, 1672. Our Kings will not part till both be pleaſed. —— The great uſe of the Declaration of Indulgence had been to ſkreen and protect the Papiſts; as the very Church-men perceiv'd. The judicious Writer of the Letter from a Perſon of Quality, 4to. 1675. ſpeaks thus of the Indulgence. I could have wiſh'd the Declaration of Indulgence had had a longer Continuance, and better Reception, than it had; for the Biſhops took ſo great offence at it, that they gave the Alarum of Popery through the whole Nation, and by their Emiſſaries the Clergy raiſed ſuch a Cry, that thoſe good and ſober Men, who had long feared the Continuance and Increaſe of Popery, began to believe the Biſhops were in earneſt, had their Eyes opened, tho' late; and therefore joined in heartily with them. —— A later Writer tells us of a more expreſs Toleration of Popery, undertaken to be granted in this Seſſion Febr. $167\frac{2}{3}$, if the Jeſuits themſelves had not hinder'd it for want of allowing their Share in it. —— King Charles (ſays he) was inclin'd to Popery; and had he not been afraid of bringing the Parliament about his Ears, he was willing to conſent to any thing in favour of it. His Temper was not unknown to the Papiſts; a Deſign was ſeveral Years on foot to procure a Toleration for them. The King had a Privy Council fit for the Purpoſe; and he was not out of hopes to meet a Parliament as pliable, if Money could be commanded from a Neighbouring Prince, as the Jeſuit had promis'd him. But when theſe good Men underſtood, that it was to be a Clauſe inſerted in the Act of Toleration, that no Jeſuit ſhould be ſuffer'd to live in England, there was no Money to be had; the Lords, who were to bring it about, were deſired to let it drop. The King was fool'd, and the general Intereſt of Popery ſacrific'd to the private Intereſt of the Jeſuits. Hiſt. of the Coll. of Doway, 1713. 8vo. p. 13.

" the 1672. 24 Car. II. "the greateſt Enemies it ever had; That I rather "choſe to ſatisfy my Friends by reading this Paper, "than to have the trouble to anſwer all the Queſtions that may daily be asked me. And firſt, I "do proteſt in the preſence of Almighty God, that "no Perſon, Man or Woman, directly nor indirectly, ever ſaid any thing to me ſince I came into "England, or uſed the leaſt endeavour to make me "change my Religion; It is a Bleſſing I wholly "owe to Almighty God, and I hope the hearing "of a Prayer I daily made him, ever ſince I was "in France and Flanders; where, ſeeing much of "the Devotion of the Catholicks, (tho' I had very "little myſelf) I made it my continual Requeſt to Almighty God, that if I were not, I might before I "died, be in the true Religion. I did not in the leaſt "doubt but that I was ſo, and never had any ſcruple "till November laſt, when reading a Book called "The Hiſtory of the Reformation, by Dr. Heylin, "which I had heard very much commended, and "have been told, if ever I had any doubt of my Religion that would ſettle me: Inſtead of which I found "it the deſcription of the horrideſt Sacrileges in the "World, and could find no reaſon why we left the "Church, but for three the moſt abominable ones "that were ever heard of among Chriſtians. Firſt, "Henry VIII. renounces the Pope's Authority, becauſe he would not give him leave to part with his "Wife, and marry another in her life-time. Secondly, Edward VI. was a Child, and govern'd by "his Uncle, who made his Eſtate out of Church "Lands; and then Queen Elizabeth, who being "no lawful Heireſs to the Crown, could have no "way to keep it but by renouncing a Church that "could never ſuffer ſo unlawful a thing to be done "by one of her Children. I confeſs, I cannot think "the Holy Ghoſt could ever be in ſuch Councils; "And it is very ſtrange, that if the Biſhops had no "deſign, but (as they ſay) the reſtoring us to the "Doctrine of the Primitive Church, they could never think upon it till Henry VIII. made the breach "upon ſo unlawful a Pretence. Theſe Scruples "being rais'd, I began to conſider of the difference "between the Catholicks and us, and examin'd "them as well as I could by Holy Scripture, which, "tho' I do not pretend to be able to underſtand, "yet there are ſome things I found ſo eaſy, that I "cannot but wonder I had been ſo long without "finding them out: As the real Preſence in the "Bleſſed Sacrament, the Infallibility of the Church, "Confeſſion and Praying for the Dead. After this I "ſpoke ſeverally to two of the Biſhops we have in "England, who both told me there were many "things in the Romiſh Church which (it were very much to be wiſh'd) we had kept; as Confeſſion, which was no doubt commanded by God: "That praying for the Dead was one of the ancient things in Chriſtianity: That for their parts, "they did it daily, tho' they would not own it. "And afterwards preſſing one of them very much "upon the other Points, he told me, That if he "had been bred a Catholick he would not change his "Religion; but that being of another Church (wherein he was ſure were all things neceſſary to Salvation) he thought it very ill to give that ſcandal, as "to leave that Church wherein he received his Baptiſm. All theſe Diſcourſes did but add more to "the deſire I had to be a Catholick, and gave me "the moſt terrible Agonies in the World within "myſelf; for all this, fearing to be raſh in a matter of that weight, I did all I could to ſatisfy my "ſelf, made it my daily Prayer to God, to ſettle me "in the right, and ſo went on Chriſtmas-day to receive in the King's Chapel: After which I was "more troubled than ever, and could never be at "quiet till I had told my Deſign to a Catholick, "who brought a Prieſt to me, and that was the "firſt I ever did converſe with upon my Word. "The more I ſpoke to him the more I was confirm'd in my Deſign: And as it is impoſſible for "me to doubt of the Words of our Bleſſed Saviour, "who ſays, The Holy Sacrament is his Body and "Blood, ſo I cannot believe that he who is the Author of all Truth, and has promiſed to be with "his Church to the end of the World, would permit them to give that Holy Myſtery to the Laity but in one kind, if it were not lawful ſo "to do.

Sheldon Abp of Cant. Blanford Biſhop of Worceſter.

"I am not able, or if I were, would I enter into "Diſputes with any Body: I only in ſhort, ſay this "for the changing of my Religion, which I take "God to witneſs I would never have done, if I had "thought it poſſible to ſave my Soul otherwiſe. I "think I need not ſay, it is any Intereſt in this "World leads me to it: It will be plain enough "to every Body, that I muſt loſe all the Friends "and Credit I have here by it; and have very "well weigh'd which I could beſt part with, my "ſhare in this World or the next: I thank God I "found no difficulty in the choice.

"My only Prayer is, That the poor Catholicks of "this Nation may not ſuffer for my being of their Religion; that God would but give me Patience to bear "them, and then ſend me any Afflictions in this World, "ſo I may enjoy a bleſſed Eternity hereafter.

St. James's, Aug. 20. 1670.

This Paper ſeems to be written with as much Partiality and Prejudice as a new Convert could be taught to have. To ſay that the real Preſence in the Bleſſed Sacrament (that is in her Senſe Tranſubſtantiation) and Infallibility of the Church, were things ſo eaſy, that ſhe could not but wonder ſhe had been ſo long without finding them out, does argue her to have been eaſily diſpoſed to any Faith. What ſhe ſays of the Biſhops was from a failure of Memory at leaſt, for they themſelves ſurviving did ſolemnly deny the Words. Her change of Religion muſt be imputed to the Zeal of his Royal Highneſs, who tho' he did not yet openly profeſs that Religion, yet he was unhappily perverted to it in the Court of France: Where, upon the Artifices of his Royal Mother and her Confeſſor Mr. Mountague, his Brother King Charles wrote this memorable Letter to him, of which, the Original, found among the Papers of Dr. Berwick, a Phyſician, is now in the Hands of a very faithful Perſon, who has atteſted this to be a very true Copy of it.

Cologne, Nov. 10. 1654.

Dear Brother,

"I Have receiv'd yours without a Date, in which "you mention that Mr. Mountague has endeavour'd to pervert you in your Religion. I do "not doubt but you remember very well the Commands I left with you at my going away concerning that Point, and am confident you will "obſerve them; yet the Letters that come from "Paris ſay, that it is the Queen's purpoſe to do all "ſhe can to change your Religion, which if you "hearken to her, or any body elſe in that matter, "you muſt never think to ſee England or me again; "and whatſoever Miſchief ſhall fall on me, or my "Affairs from this time, I muſt lay all upon you, "as being the only Cauſe of it; therefore conſider "well what it is not only to be the cauſe of ruining a Brother that loves you ſo well, but alſo of "your King and Country, do not let them perſuade "you either by force or fair Promiſes; for the firſt "they neither dare nor will uſe, and for the ſecond, "as ſoon as they have perverted you, they will "have their End, and will care no more for you. (Letter of K. Charles to his Brother James D. of York.)

"I am alſo inform'd, that there is a Purpoſe to "put you in the Jeſuits College, which I command "you upon the ſame Grounds never to conſent unto, and whenever any body ſhall go to diſpute "with you in Religion, do not anſwer them at all;

for

1672. 24 Car. II. " for though you have the Reaſon on your ſide, yet " they being prepar'd, will have the Advantage of " any body that is not upon the ſame Security that " they are. If you do not conſider what I ſay to " you, remember the laſt Words of your dead Fa- " ther, which were to be conſtant to your Religi- " on, and never to be ſhaken in it; which if you " do not obſerve, this ſhall be the laſt time you " will ever hear from

Dear Brother,

Your moſt affectionate Brother

Charles R.

The Readers of this Letter will hardly forbear to make this one Remark upon it[a], that James Duke of York, by his revolt to Popery, forfeited the Bleſſing of his Father; incurr'd the Curſe denounc'd by his Grandfather; rejected the moſt importunate Advices of his Brother, and went his own way to Misfortunes and Ruin. But whatever unhappy influence he had upon his Conſort, it was a ſingular Bleſſing of Providence, that the two Princeſſes his Daughters were not corrupted by any familiar Advice or Example; but were ſtrictly bred up in the Proteſtant Religion, and were both married to Proteſtant Princes, and became both the greateſt Inſtruments of ſecuring and adorning the Reformation. And this Juſtice muſt be done to the Father of the Dutcheſs, the Earl of Clarendon, to obſerve, that he very much lamented this Perverſion of his Daughter[b]; and wrote to the Duke and Dutcheſs two Expoſtulatory Letters on this occaſion, with hearty concern for the Sin and the Scandal of it.

Caſe of the Diſſenters as repreſented by themſelves. To return, the Nonconformiſts thus repreſent their own Opinion of the Parliament obliging the King to recal his Declaration of Indulgence. " In " February the Parliament met, and voted down " the King's Declaration as illegal; and the King " promis'd it ſhould not be brought into Precedent. " And thereupon they conſulted of a Bill for the " Eaſe of Proteſtant Diſſenters, and many Mem- " bers profeſſed their Reſolution to carry it on; " but when they had granted the Tax deſired, they " turn'd it off and left it undone; taking away from " the poor Diſſenters the ſhelter of the King's De- " claration, and ſo leaving them to the Storm of " the ſevere Laws that were in force againſt them, " which by ſome Country Juſtices were rigorouſly " put in Execution, tho' the moſt forbore. The Abridger of this Account has added this farther Obſervation. On Feb. 14. the Commons reſolv'd Nemine Contradicente that a Bill be brought in for the Eaſe of his Majeſty's Subjects who are Diſſenters in matters of Religion from the Church of England. 1672. 24 Car. II. And a Bill paſſed the Houſe accordingly, but was ſtopp'd in the Houſe of Lords. But the Motion of the Lower Houſe in this Affair was therefore the more remarkable, becauſe it was the ſame Houſe of Commons who ten Years before ſo warmly voted the contrary. A good Argument they were now convinc'd of a greater danger of Popery than they could before be perſuaded to believe. Whatever this Reflection is, the Truth was only thus: The Commons in this Parliament were by long Experience more and more ſenſible, that the Papiſts were for their own Pleaſure and Advantage, playing and ſtriking the Church-men and Diſſenters one againſt another. At one time the Patrons of Indulgence, to break the eſtabliſh'd Communion, and for their own ſakes to let in a univerſal Toleration; at another time the Puſhers on of Severity and Perſecution, to exaſperate the Nonconformiſts againſt the Laws and the Church, and make them fly toward Popery and a diſpenſing Power for Refuge and Protection. And therefore the Commons, upon a view of theſe double Deſigns, were obliged to take their different Meaſures, for the ſame good Ends of the Peace and Union of the Proteſtant Intereſt. When they ſaw Indulgence and Toleration ſet up by arbitrary Means for ill Purpoſes, they acted by the ſtricteſt Rules of Honour and Conſcience to preſs the Uniformity by Law eſtabliſh'd. And while they ſaw that a rigorous Proſecution of Diſſenters might ſerve the Hopes and Deſires of Rome as effectually as a Royal Indulgence, they would have provided againſt the one as well as againſt the other; and by granting a legal and limited Eaſe to them, would have ſettled a mutual Forbearance for the Foundation of a mutual Love; and at leaſt have ſo far reconcil'd the Members of the Church and the Diſſenters from it, that they ſhould have been alway ready to unite againſt the common Enemy of the Reformation.

A more true Account.

As to the Parliaments apprehending the Advancement of Popery, the ſame Author thus repreſents the Matter.

" The Parliament at length grew into great Jea- " louſies of the prevalence of Popery. An Army " (pretended to be deſign'd for Service againſt the " Dutch) lay encamp'd at Black-Heath, many of " the Commanders were Papiſts. It was the gene- " ral Apprehenſion that having no hopes to get " the Parliament to ſet up their Religion by Law, " it was their Intention to put down Parliaments " and reduce the Government to the French Model, " and Religion to their State by a ſtanding Army. " All that lov'd their Country had diſmal Expecta- " tions, the Parliament made an Act that no Man

[a] Father Orleans confeſſes the Duke of York came into England a Catholick, but many weighty Reaſons at firſt oblig'd him to conceal that Change from publick view.—— Yet inſenſibly growing heedleſs, and keeping a leſs Watch upon himſelf than he had done, he gave others the opportunity to obſerve him, and conclude that he was not of the Religion of his Country. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury and two of his Brethren reprov'd him. He had the Patience to hear, and did not refuſe to confer with them; but their Arguments were ſo far from ſhaking or altering, that they rather confirm'd him in his Faith. Hiſt. of the Revolut. 1711. 8*vo.* p. 232.

[b] See the Copy of a Letter of Edward Earl of Clarendon to his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, upon the Report that the Dutcheſs is become a Roman Catholick; the Fear and Apprehenſion of it, and the many Reflections made from thence, to the Prejudice of his Royal Highneſs's Perſon, and even of the King's Majeſty's.——Another to the Dutcheſs, his Daughter, upon the Reproaches concerning her Defection in Religion, and the great Impreſſion made upon good Men in England upon it——&c. Both written in his Baniſhment, and both reprinted in the Life of Edward Earl of Clarendon. 8*vo.* Edit. 2. 1712.

[c] The Lord Clifford, who liv'd and died a Papiſt, and was now the chief Miniſter, ſeem'd to make no great Scruple of owning the Deſign at this Juncture to introduce Popery and Arbitrary Power. He told thus much in Converſation with an honeſt Man, that the King, if he would be firm to himſelf, might ſettle what Religion he pleas'd, and carry the Government to what Height he would: For if Men were aſſured of the Liberty of their Conſciences, and be undiſturbed in their Properties, able and upright Judges made in Weſtminſter-Hall, to judge the Cauſes of Meum and Tuum; and if on the other hand the Fort of Tilbury was finiſh'd to bridle the City, the Fort of Plymouth to ſecure the Weſt, and Arms for 20000 in each of theſe, and in Hull for the Northern Parts, which might be eaſily and undiſcernably made to the Forces now on foot, there were none that would have either Will, Opportunity, or Power, to reſiſt. To this he added, he was ſo ſincere in the Maintenance of Property and Liberty of Conſcience, that if he had his Will, tho' he ſhould introduce a Biſhop of Durham of another Religion, yet he would not diſturb any of the Church beſide, but ſuffer them to die away. I think it has not been yet obſerv'd, that when the Lord Clifford ſpoke this, the Biſhoprick of Durham was actually void by the Death of Biſhop Coſin, and was kept void nigh three Years; tho' before it fell, it had been actually promiſed to Dr. Seth Ward, Biſhop of Sarum: So as the Scheme ſeem'd really to be according to the Profeſſion of Lord Clifford, namely, to introduce a Popiſh Biſhop of Durham, but when the Times would not bear it, ſtill they would not truſt Biſhop Ward, but Biſhop Crew, who was tranſlated from Oxford to Durham, Octob. 22. 1674. the mean Profits being given to ſuperſtitious or profane Uſes.

1670. 22 Car. II. " ſhould be in any Office of Truſt, who would not " take the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance and " receive the Sacrament according to the Order of " the Church of England. Hereupon the Duke of " York, who was General of the Army, and the " Lord Treaſurer Clifford, laid down all their Places.

The Teſt Act. This Teſt Act was entitul'd, An Act for preventing Dangers which may happen from Popiſh Recuſants, and it did require, [a] " That all Perſons bearing any Office " or Place of Truſt or Profit ſhould take the Oaths " of Supremacy and Allegiance in publick and open " Court, and ſhould alſo receive the Sacrament of " the Lord's Supper according to the uſage of the " Church of England, in ſome Pariſh-Church, upon " ſome Lord's-Day immediately after Divine Ser- " vice and Sermon, and deliver a Certificate of ha- " ving ſo received the Sacrament under the Hands " of the reſpective Miniſter and Churchwarden, pro- " ved by two credible Witneſſes upon Oath, and put " upon Record in Court, and that all Perſons ta- " king the ſaid Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance " ſhould likewiſe make and ſubſcribe this Declara- " tion following: I A. B. do declare, that I do be- " lieve there is not any Tranſubſtantiation in the Sa- " crament of the Lord's-Supper, or in the Elements of " Bread and Wine, at, or after the Conſecration there- " of, by any Perſon whatſoever. Which Act and Teſt therein preſcrib'd were a great Security to the Proteſtant Religion; and therefore the Repeal and Abrogation of them were the great Deſign and Labour of the next Popiſh Reign.

Letter of the Abp of Cant. to his Suffragans for Catechiſing and ſuppreſſing irregular Schools. Under theſe united Dangers of Popery and Fanaticiſm, it was the great Wiſdom of the Archbiſhop and Biſhops to prevail with the King to require and command, the more diligent uſe of publick Catechiſing in the Church, and to ſuppreſs all Schools ſet up by diſaffected People, not conforming to the uſe of the Church Catechiſm: As appears by this Circular Letter of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſent to every Suffragan by the Dean of the Province, the Ld Bp of London, in form and manner following:

My Lords,

" I Have receiv'd a Letter from his Grace the Lord " Archbiſhop of Canterbury, a Copy whereof " I am requir'd to tranſmit to your Lordſhip, by " which you will underſtand the Duty which his " Majeſty requires of your Lordſhip.

The Letter is as followeth.

" The King's moſt Excellent Majeſty being truly " ſenſible that the growing increaſe of the prevail- " ing Sects and Diſorders among us, proceed chief- " ly from the general neglect of inſtructing the " younger ſort of Perſons, or their erroneous Inſtru- " ctions in the Grounds and Principles of true Re- " ligion, is therefore pleaſed to command me, that " in his Name I require your Lordſhip, and by " you, the reſt of my Brethren, the Biſhops of this " Province, that by yourſelf and Officers, you will " at all ſeaſonable times re-inforce the execution of " ſuch Laws and Conſtitutions, as enable us to enjoin " the uſe and exerciſe of our Church Catechiſm; " and that by the moſt effectual Remedies that may " be, ſuch as without Licenſe either publickly or " privately teach School within your Lordſhip's or " their Juriſdiction be forthwith proceeded againſt, 1672. 24 Car. II.
" according to ſuch Rules as are preſcribed unto us " for their Reſtraint; and to the end that this Miſ- " chief may be prevented for the future, he more- " over ſtrictly chargeth us, that none be admitted to " that Office without ſuch Subſcription, Oaths and " Declaration as are exactly requiſite. But in the " mean time I deſire that your Lordſhip and they " will with the firſt conveniency let me know, how " we are already defective in theſe Particulars, that " I may be able to give ſuch Satisfaction as hereaf- " ter will be neceſſary. I bid your Lordſhip hear- " tily farewel.

Lambeth-Houſe, Feb. 6. $167\frac{2}{3}$. Your Lordſhip's very affectionate Friend and Brother, Gilb. Cant.

" Your Lordſhip does hereby fully underſtand " his Majeſty's Pleaſure, which I am required to let " you know.

Your Ldp's very lov. Broth. and Serv.

London-Houſe, Feb. 8. $167\frac{2}{3}$. Humfr. London.

The Parliament were now ready to conclude their 1673.
Buſineſs and their Seſſion. On Wedneſ. Mar. 26. the Commons preſented an Addreſs to the King for the more effectual reſtraining and puniſhing of Popiſh Recuſants, and for the better Security of the Proteſtant Religion. And on Mar. 29. after Noon, his Majeſty was preſent in the Houſe of Lords, and the Commons attending, the Speaker preſented ſeveral Bills, to which his Majeſty was pleaſed to give his Royal Aſſent. The publick Acts were theſe that follow:

1. " An Act for raiſing the Sum of Twelve hun- " dred thirty eight thouſand ſeven hundred and fif- " ty Pounds, for Supply of his Majeſty's extraor- " dinary Occaſions. Acts paſſed.
2. " An Act for the King's Majeſty's moſt graci- " ous, general, and free Pardon.
3. " An Act for continuing a former Act concer- " ning Coinage.
4. " An Act for enabling his Majeſty to make Lea- " ſes of his Lands belonging to his Dutchy of Corn- " wal.
5. " An Act for preventing Dangers which may " happen from Popiſh Recuſants.
6. " An Act for reviving the Judicature for the " determination of Differences touching Houſes " burn'd down and demoliſhed by reaſon of the late " Fire which happen'd in London, and for rebuild- " ing the Navy-Office.
7. " An Act for taking off Aliens Duties upon " Commodities of the Growth and Manufactures of " this Nation.
8. " An Act for Encouraging the Greenland and " Eaſtland Trades, and for the better ſecuring the " Plantation Trades.
9. " An Act for Repeal of a Clauſe in a former " Act to prohibit Saleſmen from ſelling fat Cattel.
10. " [b] An Act to enable the County Palatine of " Durham to ſend Knights and Burgeſſes to ſerve " in Parliament.

After

[a] On Feb. 28. $167\frac{2}{3}$ the Houſe of Commons upon Debate of the Growth of Popery, and Suppreſſion thereof, reſolved, that an Addreſs be made to his Majeſty for the ſuppreſſing of the Growth of Popery; and that the ſame be drawn up upon the Subject Matter of the like Addreſs, paſſed Octob. 28, in the 18th Year of his Majeſty's Reign. And that a Bill be brought in for incapacitating all Perſons who ſhall refuſe to take the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and the Sacrament according to the Church of England, of all publick Employments Military and Civil. Monday March 3. $167\frac{2}{3}$. the Addreſs to the King for the ſuppreſſing of Popery agreed to, and ordered to be carried up to the Lords for their Concurrence.——Proceedings of the Houſe of Commons, MSS.

[b] The Proteſtant Intereſt run ſo high in this Parliament, that a Bill came up from the Commons to the Houſe of Lords in favour of the diſſenting Proteſtants, and had paſſed the Lords, but for want of Time. Beſides another excellent Act paſſed the Royal Aſſent, for the excluding all Papiſts from Office; in the oppoſition of which the Lord Clifford fell: And yet, to prevent his Ruin, this Seſſion had the ſpeedier End. Notwithſtanding the Biſhops attained their End fully, the Declaration being cancell'd, and the Great Seal being broken off from it.——Letter from a Perſon of Quality, 1675. 4*to.* p. 6.

It is plain the King and Miniſtry were fearful leſt the Commons ſhould interrupt the Friendſhip with France, and preſs a new

1673. 25 Car. II.

Claim of James Percy to the Earldom of Northumberland.

After which the Parliament adjourned till the 20th of October next enſuing. On the Day before their riſing, the Lords, upon reading the Petitions of James Percy, ſetting forth his Claim to the Title of Earl of Northumberland, &c. and his refuſing to make appear any Probability towards the ſaid Claim, notwithſtanding he had a Months time given him before, and cauſed above forty Witneſſes to be ſworn at the Bar; and their Lordſhips having fully heard the elder Counteſs of Northumberland's Counſel, who chargeth the ſaid James Percy to be an Impoſtor; it was Reſolved, that both the Petitions of the ſaid James Percy for his Claim, &c. ſhould be diſmiſſed the Houſe; and they were diſmiſſed accordingly. And by a ſucceeding Vote it was reſolved, that the Conſideration of what farther Proceedings ſhould be had againſt the ſaid James Percy, concerning the ſaid Impoſture, ſhould be taken up the next Morning. This Percy was a Trunkmaker who came out of Ireland, and brought Evidence with him of his being deſcended from the ancient noble Family of that Name. When rejected by the Lords, he carried on ſome Pretenſions at Common Law; but being an Impoſtor, or at leaſt a Beggar, he could have no ſucceſs. At the end of this Seſſion, the new Speaker, Edward Seymour Eſquire, was thought to have deſerved ſo well of the King and his Court, that on Apr. 9. he was ſworn and admitted one of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council, and took his Place at the Board accordingly.

Redemption of Slaves.

At the beginning of April, thoſe Lords of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council who were appointed a Committee for the Redemption of Captives from Algiers and Salley, publiſhed a Liſt of all thoſe Perſons who had been Redeemed from Captivity by the Monies collected by virtue of his Majeſty's Letters Patents dated in Auguſt 1670. and gave notice, that the whole Collection paid into the Chamber of London amounted unto Twenty thouſand and five hundred Pounds; out of which Sum, Fifteen thouſand one hundred and ſeventy Pounds had been already iſſued out for the Redemption of Two hundred forty ſeven Perſons; and the remainder was impreſted and actually employing towards the carrying on the ſaid Redemption with all the Expedition that may be.

Affairs at Sea.

This Summer was full of Action at Sea: The Dutch, with their uſual Diligence, were firſt abroad[a], and intended ſome Advantage by their early Expedition. For on April 30. O. S. Admiral de Ruyter ſailed from the Maeſe with forty two Ships of War, to the Mouth of the Thames, in hopes, by ſinking ſome Veſſels, to block up the River, and hinder the Canary, Bourdeaux, and Newcaſtle Fleets getting in; but they had happen'd to go up the River two Days before, and had given up Fifteen hundred Men to the Navy Royal. De Ruyter hearing this, returned to Schonevelt, where he was joined by Admiral Tromp with the Amſterdam Squadron; in the Command whereof he ſucceeded the Baron Van Ghent, kill'd in the laſt Summer's Engagement. By May 12. the Engliſh Fleet was ready; and Prince Rupert, as Admiral, went on Board the Royal-Charles at Dungeneſs; and on May 16. the French Squadron, commanded by the Count D'Eſtree, came up and joined our Navy off of Rye. The King and the Duke went down to ſee the Fleet, and left them on May 19. ready to ſail with the firſt fair Wind: Before his coming away, his Majeſty made the Earl of Oſſory Rear-Admiral of the Blue Squadron. The firſt Engagement began near Schonevelt on May 28. Prince Rupert commanded our main Body, Sir Edward Spragge the Blue Squadron, and the Count D'Eſtree the White. The French were mingled with the Engliſh, to prevent their running away, as they were ſaid to have done in the Fight at Solebay the laſt Year. The Engliſh and French made about a hundred and ten Sail; the Dutch near a hundred. When De Ruyter ſaw the Confederates appear, he weigh'd Anchor to meet them. Tromp and Sir Edward Spragge began the Fight, which on every ſide was continued with great Fury till the dark Night divided them. The Dutch loſt Vice-Admiral Schram, and Rear-Admiral Ulugh; our Captain Legg took one Dutch Man of War, but Captain Backer who loſt it did bravely retake it: The Deventer, another Dutch Ship of ſixty Guns, was diſabled; and ſtriking on the Sand in her return home, all the Men were drown'd except thirty. Sea Fight. The Dutch affirm they loſt only this Ship, and that not by the Enemy; whereas the Confederates loſt twelve, ſunk or burnt, of which the moſt were French, the Fripon, the Thunderer, and ſeveral of their Fireſhips, which they knew not how to uſe. It is certain that both Sides were well beaten, and therefore both Sides claim'd the Victory. De Ruyter, in his Letter to the Prince of Orange of June 8. ſays, We judge abſolutely, that thus far the Victory (God be praiſed) is on the ſide of this State and your Highneſs. And Prince Rupert writes thus to the Lord Arlington, I thought it beſt for us to ceaſe the purſuit, and drop Anchor where I now am. On the Engliſh ſide were kill'd Capt. Fowls, Capt. Werden, and Capt. Finch; Colonel Hamilton had his Leg ſhot off: The Captains Legg, Holmes, Wetwang, and Story, ſignaliz'd themſelves in this Battel, which drove back the Engliſh to their Coaſts, and the Dutch to Schonevelt. The greateſt Argument of the Victory inclining to the Dutch, was their ſetting out early again, and ſailing to the Engliſh Coaſts, where they challenged and attacked the Engliſh and French Fleet. On June 4. Tromp and Spragge were the firſt again that engaged: The Fight laſted ſix hours without much loſs on either ſide; ſo that both again pretended to the Victory, and both indeed deſerved it. Another Sea Fight. De Ruyter wrote to the States thus; The next Day we ſaw the Enemies were gone, and doubt not but they made to the Thames; we ſatisfied our ſelves with purſuing them half-way, and then return'd to our former Station. And Prince Rupert thus to my Lord Arlington: About Midnight the Dutch Fleet tacked——At two in the Morning we tacked alſo, and ſtood after them; at ſix ſeeing no likelihood of reaching them before they would get within their Sands, we thought it to no purpoſe to purſue them any farther: ſo we tacked again, and ſtood for our own Coaſt. [b] All we can ſay more of the Enemy is, That they went off in great diſorder, leaving us ignorant of what loſs they have ſuſtained. By the latter end of July the Engliſh and French having repaired their Ships, return'd to new Alliance with Holland. The Earl of Arlington in one Letter, dated, Whitehall, March 12. 1673.——The Hollanders had the laſt Week one great String more to their Bow, viz. an appearance of a great Miſunderſtanding betwixt his Majeſty and the Houſe of Commons; but his Majeſty having moſt prudently removed that, I ſuppoſe they will for the future value it little, and conſequently I perſuade myſelf we ſhall quickly hear from them.——Another of March 27. 1673.——I take no Comfort in telling you the Perplexities and Delays we found ourſelves in, upon paſſing the Bill for his Majeſty's Supply, which God be thanked is now over, &c. Letters of the Earl of Arlington. Vol. II. p. 408.

---

[a] See Letters of Lord Arlington, dated, Whitehall, Apr. 9. 1673.——The Hollanders reſolve to make one Tryal more by Sea, having armed themſelves as powerfully as they did the laſt Year, and made their Fleet ready to come out, as moſt of our Intelligence aſſures us, within a few Days; and we hope we ſhall not be long after, applying all the Diligence that is poſſible to repair the Delay occaſioned by the Difficulties we found this Seſſion of Parliament.——Another of Apr. 14. 1673.——His Highneſs Prince Rupert puts himſelf upon the Fleet for good and all upon Monday next, in hopes to meet quickly the French Squadron at Portſmouth.——

[b] See another Letter of the Lord Arlington to our Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Whitehall, July 3. 1673.—The Dutch Fleet finding ours ready to take the Sea again, have retired themſelves towards their own Coaſt, lying, as the Letters of this Day told us, three Leagues beyond the Goodwin Sands. Ours will go out in a few Days ſtronger than ever it was, and ſhew the People of the Hague, that we are not ſo beaten as their Prints and publick Thankſgivings would make the World believe, &c.

1673. 25 Car. II.

the Coaſts of Zeland; and De Ruyter left his Port of Schonevelt to meet the Enemy. A third Engagement began on Monday Aug. 11. Count D'Eſtree led the Confederates White Squadron, Prince Rupert the main Line, and Sir Edward Spragge the Blue Squadron. The French, as was uſual for them to do in this War, fled, and ſtay'd out of the reach of the Cannon. Tromp and Spragge fought with their wonted Bravery: Tromp forc'd Sir Edward Spragge twice out of his Ship, and Spragge compell'd Admiral Tromp once to change his. Bankert of the Zealand Squadron met with very little Reſiſtance from D'Eſtree in the White; ſo he join'd with De Ruyter, who was engag'd with Prince Rupert, and very much diſtreſs'd him. Vice-Admiral de Liefds and Sweers were kill'd of the Dutch; and Sir Edward Spragge drown'd, a Cannon ſtriking his Boat and ſinking it, as he was going out of his ſecond Ship into the third. De Ruyter writes, The Fight laſted till Night, and then the Enemy made away to their Coaſts, leaving us, God be thank'd, Maſters of the Place of Battle.

A third Engagement.

The Engliſh had ſhipp'd 6000 Men, commanded by Mareſchal de Schonbergh, for a Deſcent upon the Coaſts of Holland; but their not being able to attempt any thing at Land, was an Argument that they were not ſuperiour at Sea.

Tabago taken from the Dutch.

The Iſland of Tabago was, at the beginning of this Year, taken from the Dutch by the Engliſh, under the Command of Sir Tobias Bridges, with a Booty of 400 Priſoners, and as many Negroes.

And St. Helena loſt and regained.

The Dutch, in repriſal, had ſeized upon our Iſle of St. Helena, which would have proved a great Obſtruction to our Eaſt-India Trade, had it not been ſoon after regained by Capt. Mundy, with a more fatal loſs to the Dutch of three very conſiderable Eaſt-India Ships; for which acceptable Service, the Capt. at his return in Auguſt was Knighted by his Majeſty.

Honours and Preferments.

As to Civil Offices and Honours, the Lord Clifford, being a profeſs'd Papiſt, finding himſelf diſabled by the Teſt, reſign'd into his Majeſty's Hands his Staff as Lord High Treaſurer of England, on June 19. which his Majeſty, by the Recommendation of the Duke of Buckingham, was pleaſed to deliver the ſame Day to Sir Thomas Osborne Knight and Baronet, and lately created Lord Viſcount Osborne of Dunblaine in Scotland. Soon after, on the death of Sir Robert Long, Knight and Baronet, Auditor of his Majeſty's Exchequer, that profitable Place was given to Sir Robert Howard, who left his Office of Secretary to the Lord High Treaſurer of England to Charles Bertie Eſquire, Brother to the Earl of Lindſey. But the greateſt Change at Court was by the diſgrace of the Lord Chancellor Shaftsbury, who had lately ſet himſelf at the Head of the diſcontented Party, and earneſtly oppoſed all thoſe Meaſures which were thought to be tending to the growth of Popery, or to the exerciſe of Arbitrary Power. When Serjeant Thurland took his Oath before him, as one of the Barons of the Exchequer, he gave him this bold Advice: Let me recommend to you ſo to manage the King's Juſtice and the Revenues, as the King may have moſt Profit, and the Subject leaſt Vexation. Raking for old Debts, the Number of Informations, Projects upon Concealments, I could not find (in the eleven Years Experience I had in this Court) ever to advantage the Crown; but ſuch Proceedings have, for the moſt part, deliver'd up the King's good Subjects into the hands of the worſt of Men, Clerks of the Court, Cuſtom-houſe Officers, and Exciſe-men. For daring thus to limit the King's Revenue and his Power, and for taking other Liberties of ſpeaking freely againſt the Popiſh Intereſt at Court, he became very uneaſie to the Duke of York, who prevailed with his Brother to remove him. It was by this Procurement of his Royal Highneſs, that the King ſent for the Earl to Whitehall on Sunday Nov. 9. and demanded the Seals of him, which he reſign'd with great chearfulneſs, and putting on his Sword, he return'd home as unconcern'd as if he had brought the Mace back with him. The ſame Day he was viſited by Prince Rupert, and moſt of the Peers and Perſons of Quality about Town, who acknowledg'd that the Nation was oblig'd to him for the juſt Diſcharge of the Truſt that had been repoſed in him, and return'd him their Thanks. The Papiſts were ſo angry with him, that they began to proſecute him, not only into Diſgrace but into Ruin; for they examined the Court Rolls to meet with ſomething on which to ground an Accuſation in Law againſt him: And picking out ſome Pretenſions, they preſented a Paper to the King's Council, containing Matters for a Charge of Corruption and other Miſdemeanors; but, to their great Mortification, the Council reported, that nothing could be drawn out of that Paper for any legal Information. And indeed this Juſtice muſt be done to his Lordſhip's Memory, that he executed this great Office with ſingular Integrity and Honour.

The Great Seal was immediately given to Sir Heneage Finch, Knight and Baronet, his Majeſty's Attorney General, with the Title of Lord Keeper. He was Nephew to Sir John Finch, Lord Keeper in the Reign of K. Charles I. and had the Parts and Elocution of his Uncle.

Proceedings in Parliam.

As to Proceedings in Parliament, on Monday Oct. 20. the two Houſes met, according to their laſt Adjournment, and were Prorogu'd by Commiſſion to Monday the 27th inſtant. [a] The Commons ſeem'd very uneaſie in their Fears of Popery, and a Popiſh Faction at Court, and preſented to his Majeſty two bold Addreſſes againſt the Match which had been this Summer treated and concluded, by his Majeſty's conſent, between James Duke of York and Mary Princeſs of Modena [b]. But contrary to their Opinion and Importunity, the King told them it was too late to prevent it. And the Liberty they took of interpoſing in this Affair, was ſo unacceptable to the Court, that on Tueſday Nov. 4. his Majeſty was Addreſs againſt the Match of the D. of York.

[a] See an Eſſay upon the preſent Conjuncture of Affairs, written to the Duke of Ormond in October 1673, upon his Grace's deſiring me to give him my Opinion what was to be done in that Conjuncture. By Sir William Temple. Miſcellan. 8*vo.* 1680. p. 147.

[b] This was the third Popiſh Foreign Lady courted by the Duke of York ſince he was a Widower; and the Deſign of every ſuch Overture had appear'd to be for ſtrengthning the Intereſts of Popery, and preparing to change the Conſtitution of Church and State. What leſs can be underſtood by the Letter of my Lord Arlington to our Ambaſſador in Spain, dated, Whitehall, Apr. 21. 1673.—The Death of the Empreſs hath given our Court a particular Mortification, by the ſtrong Probabilities there are of his Royal Highneſs's loſing the Princeſs of Inſpruck thereby. I told you in my former, that Sir Bernard Gaſcoign had inſinuated to us a Likelihood of his Royal Highneſs's obtaining the Emperor's Siſter inſtead of her, and how the Overture was entertained here; which ſufficiently juſtifies your Prudence in anſwering Sir Bernard as you did. The Truth is, the Delays of the Court of Vienna uſed in that Negotiation, and their Affectation, and the Notion of giving the Duke a Wife, to change his Majeſty's greater Meaſures in his Affairs, hath extremely rebated us in ſetting on foot any Negotiation of that kind.

See the Inſtructions given by the King and by the Duke to Henry Earl of Peterborough, Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Court of Modena. July 30. 1673. and the whole Proceedings in that Negotiation, as put into the Appendix to the Life of King James II. 8*vo.*

A learned Writer has on this occaſion thus expreſſed himſelf, that the French King's Intereſt was cloſely intermingled, or rather knit with that of the Duke of York, appear'd in legible Characters. His Marriage with the Princeſs of Modena was the effect of that Friendſhip, and the Match was juſtly look'd upon by all Europe the Reſult of Jeſuitical Counſels, to bind up the preſumptive Heir of England to the French and Popiſh Intereſt, in which he never ſince fail'd them. The French King's propoſing and promoting this Marriage; his officiouſneſs in defraying the Charges of it, and the Princeſs's Journey to England; his paying the greateſt part, if not all of her Portion; his ſplendid Entertainment of her through France and in Paris, were Civilities beyond the ordinary State among Princes, and could only be interpreted the Product of ſome extraordinary Conjunction of Intereſts.

pleas'd

1673. 25 Car. II.

pleaſ'd to prorogue the Parliament till the 7th of January next. In the mean time, to make ſome ſhew of ſatisfying the Commons of England in ſuppreſſing the Fears of Popery, his Majeſty was pleaſed on Novemb. 14. to call before him in Council the Lords Chief Juſtices, and the Lord Chief Baron, and to command them to conſider of the moſt effectual means of putting the Laws in execution for preventing the growth of Popery, and ſpeedily to Report the ſame to his Majeſty: And at the ſame time his Majeſty was pleaſed to order, "That no "Perſon who is a Roman Catholick, or is reputed "to be of the Roman Catholick Religion, do preſume, after the 18th Day of this inſtant Novemb. "to come into his Majeſty's Royal Preſence, or to "his Palace, or to the Place where his Court ſhall "be. And accordingly, the Lord Steward and "Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, "were ordered to cauſe this his Majeſty's Pleaſure "to be effectually put in execution. And on Decemb. 10. was pleaſed farther to declare in Council, "That no Popiſh Recuſant, or reputed ſo to be, "ſhould preſume to come into St. James's Houſe, or "into the Park adjoining.

The King labours to quiet the Fears of Popery.

On Wedneſday Jan. 7. the two Houſes in purſuance to their late Prorogation, met at Weſtminſter; whither his Majeſty, attended by many of the Peers, went by Water; and being come into the Houſe of Lords, and there ſeated in due Solemnity, the Houſe of Commons was called up, and his Majeſty made a ſhort Speech to the two Houſes: After which the new Lord Keeper made a "large deduction of the Dutch averſeneſs to Peace, "their uncivil Demeanour to the King's Plenipotentiaries at Cologn, and how indirectly they dealt "with the King in all the Overtures of Peace; and "therefore a neceſſary Supply [a], proportionable to "the Greatneſs of the King's Affairs, was not only "demanded, but care to be taken for Payment of "the Bankers Debt, otherwiſe Multitudes of the "King's loyal Subjects would be undone.

Parliam. meets.

But both Houſes began to ſhew their Diſcontent at the Continuance of a War with Holland, and at a Progreſs of the French Arms, and at the Prevalence of Popiſh Counſels. First therefore the Lords preſented an Addreſs, beſeeching his Majeſty, "That he would "be graciouſly pleaſed to iſſue out his Royal Proclamation, requiring all Papiſts and reputed Papiſts, within five Miles of London, Weſtminſter, or "Southwark, not being Houſholders, nor attending "any Peer of this Realm, as a menial Servant, to "repair to their reſpective Dwellings, or to depart "ten Miles from the Cities and Borough aforeſaid, "and not to return during this Seſſion of Parliament: And likewiſe, That his Majeſty would be "pleaſed to give Order to the Quarter-Seſſions, that "they give in a faithful Account of what Houſholders are within the Cities or Borough aforeſaid, "and five Miles thereof, who are of that Profeſſion; and that the Quarter-Seſſions do adjourn "themſelves from time to time for that purpoſe.

Diſcontent of the two Houſes.

Their Addreſs againſt Popery.

1673. 25 Car. II.

And accordingly his Majeſty did by Proclamation, dated Jan. 14. declare, "That he had ſeriouſly conſider'd the Addreſs of his moſt dutiful and loyal "Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in "this preſent Parliament aſſembled, and did accept "it with much Contentment and Satisfaction: And "as he had always manifeſted his Zeal for the Preſervation of the true Religion eſtabliſhed in this "Kingdom, and to hinder the growth and increaſe "of the Popiſh Religion; ſo he was now ready, "upon this Occaſion, to prevent all Fears and "Dangers that might ariſe by the Concourſe of Perſons of that Profeſſion in or near his Cities of "London and Weſtminſter, &c.

The K.'s Anſwer.

The Commons on Oct. 31. had voted, That conſidering the preſent Condition of the Nation, they will not take into farther Conſideration any Aids or Charges upon the Subject, except it ſhall appear that the Obſtinacy of the Dutch ſhall render it neceſſary, nor before this Kingdom be effectually ſecured from Popery and Popiſh Counſels, and other Grievances be duly redreſſed. And they now joined with the Lords in another Addreſs to his Majeſty to expreſs themſelves paſſionately ſenſible of the calamitous Condition of this Kingdom, not only by reaſon of the War wherein it is at preſent involved, but many other inteſtine Differences and Diviſions amongſt us, which are chiefly occaſioned by the undermining Contrivances of Popiſh Recuſants, whoſe Numbers and Inſolencies are greatly of late increaſed, and whoſe reſtleſs Practices threaten a Subverſion both of Church and State.

Reſolutions of the Commons.

And indeed the Commons were now ſo weary of the War with Holland, and ſo apprehenſive of the Powers and Intrigues of France, and of the Delays in the Treaty now depending at Cologn, that they did in effect declare for a ſpeedy Peace, and encourage the States of Holland to a ſecret Correſpondence with them on that occaſion. And indeed it was this univerſal Inclination of the Parliament and People of England that induced the King to deſert the French, and to make the United Provinces once more his Friends and Allies. And therefore on Jan. 24. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and ſent for the Houſe of Commons, and communicated to both Houſes a Letter together with Propoſitions for Peace, which he had received from the States-General of the United Provinces, by the Hands of the Spaniſh Ambaſſador: [b] And on Jan 27. the Commons, upon peruſing the Propoſals made by the States-General of the United Provinces, which the King had laid before them, agreed, That his Majeſty be humbly deſired to proceed in a Treaty with the ſaid States, in order to a ſpeedy Peace.

They bring the K. into a Peace with Holland.

This Treaty was happily managed by Sir William Temple, and was concluded to the great Satisfaction of both Nations. It conſiſted of five Articles: By the firſt the States agreed to the Right of the Flag to be paid to all the King's Ships: The ſecond was for ſettling Trade in the Eaſt-Indies: [c] The third re-

Articles of it.

[a] Sir William Temple in his Eſſay upon the preſent Conjuncture of Affairs, written to the Duke of Ormond within this Year 1673. had ſhewn it to be the Intereſt and Honour of England to enter into Alliances with Spain and Holland, and not to depend on French Counſels or French Money; concluding thus: "Thus much is certain, that whatever Means "will reſtore or raiſe the Credit of his Majeſty's Government "at Home, will do it Abroad too. For a King of England at "the Head of his Parliament and People, and in their Hearts "and Intereſts, can never fail of making what Figure he pleaſes "in the World, nor of being ſafe and eaſy at Home; and "may deſpiſe all the Deſigns of factious Men, who can "only make themſelves conſidered by ſeeming to be in the "Intereſt of the Nation, when the Court ſeems to be out of "it. But in running on Counſels contrary to the general Humour and Spirit of the People, the King indeed may make "his Miniſters great Subjects, but they can never make him "a great Prince.

[b] The States General in their Letter to the King of England, dated, Decemb. 18. 1673. in anſwer to one from his Majeſty, make bold to charge his Miniſters with giving him ill Advice. Sir, whatever might be the Motion that hath induced your Majeſty to write us the Letter which the Trumpeter we had ſent to you deliver'd us from your Majeſty, bearing Date Nov. 27. we find ourſelves oblig'd to give your Majeſty Thanks for the Honour you have been pleaſed to do us; but withal, we cannot diſpenſe with ourſelves, without declaring to your Majeſty the Grief we conceive, by finding the ſame of an Importance ſo much to our Diſadvantage: and that the Miniſters, upon whom your Majeſty placeth moſt Confidence, have until this time exercis'd their Skill in bringing things to that Point as they have done, perſuading your Majeſty, that they could rake up together ſo many things, as they believ'd had been quite blotted out of your Majeſty's Memory, and which they in their Conſciences know to be far from the Truth. [With many other Reflections on his Miniſters and Counſellors very ſevere and juſt.]

[c] The Negotiations of this Peace were held in London between Sir William Temple and the Marquis del Freno, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador. The whole Treaty was concluded at three Meetings. The two Points of greateſt Difficulty were that of the Flag, and the recalling of Engliſh Troops from the French Service, &c. See Life of Sir William Temple, p. 200.

lated

1673. 25 Car. II.

lated to the Colony of Surinam: By the fourth, Both Sides were obliged to reſtore all Places taken from each other during this War: By the fifth, the States bound themſelves to pay our King Eight hundred thouſand Patacoons. Theſe Articles were ſign'd on Monday Feb. 9. at Whitehall by the Lords his Majeſty's Commiſſioners, and by the Marquiſs Del Freſno Extraordinary Ambaſſador of Spain, on the part of the States-General of the United Provinces, by vertue of the Power he had received from them. And on Wedneſday Morning Feb. 11. his Majeſty being come into the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons, was pleas'd to acquaint them, "That he had made an honourable and (as he hop'd) a laſting Peace with the States-General of the United Provinces; which was entertained with an univerſal Satisfaction in both Houſes. This great Work being happily accompliſhed, his Majeſty was pleaſed on Febr. 24. to prorogue the Parliament till the 10th of November next. And to make good the Royal Promiſe given to the two Houſes of ſuppreſſing Popery, his Majeſty gave Order in Council March 6. that the Lord Keeper do ſigniſie his Majeſty's Pleaſure to the Judges, that in their ſeveral Circuits they cauſe the Laws againſt Popiſh Recuſants to be put in execution; and that they accordingly give the ſaid Laws in charge for their ſpeedy Conviction.

King's Speech.

This Peace chiefly owing to the Pr. of Orange.

This Peace was chiefly owing to the victorious Progreſs of the Prince of Orange, who with an Army of 25000 Men had ſet down before Narden, and took it in ſight of the Duke of Luxenburgh's Army, and ſo put a ſudden ſtop to the French Career and Conqueſts in thoſe Parts: For, leaving his Poſts there well guarded, he march'd to the reſt of his Army, took Bonn, and open'd a Paſſage for the German Forces to come over the Rhine into Flanders; upon which the French abandon'd all their Conqueſts upon Holland in leſs time than they had made them, and began to wiſh the War at an end, tho' they made ſhew to the contrary. The Dutch were overjoy'd at this great and unexpected Turn of Affairs, and did juſtly impute it chiefly to the great Wiſdom and Conduct of the Prince of Orange; and therefore a greater Honour was done to him than to any of his illuſtrious Anceſtors: For now the States General not only confirm'd the Charge of Stadt-Holder of the Provinces of Holland and Weſt-Frieſland in the Perſon of his Highneſs during Life, but ſettled it likewiſe upon the Heirs Male of his Body born in lawful Wedlock, by a ſolemn Decree made Feb. 22. And on the ſame Day the States of Zealand conferr'd the ſame Dignity upon the Prince, and made him alſo chief hereditary Nobleman of that Province.

State of Religion.

As to the State of Religion, The Fears and Jealouſies of Popery expreſſed by the Parliament, and the Aſſurances given by his Majeſty for quieting thoſe Fears, have been already delivered. As to the Diſſenters, they themſelves report their Hopes of Accommodation in this manner. They ſay, that in the laſt Seſſion this Year, the Earl of Orrery deſir'd Mr. Baxter to draw up Terms of Union between the Conformiſts and the Nonconformiſts, in order to their joint vigorous oppoſing Popery: And he told him, that Sir Thomas Osborne the new Lord Treaſurer, Biſhop Morley of Wincheſter, and ſeveral other great Men, were mightily for it; upon which he ſent him Propoſals for that purpoſe, the chief of which were theſe.

Propoſals of Accommodation.

"That no Covenant, Promiſe or Oath, ſhould be requir'd to Ordination, Inſtitution or Induction, but the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy; the ſubſcribing to the Doctrine and Sacraments of the Church of England, as expreſſed in the 39 Articles, and a general Declaration againſt Rebellion and Sedition. That till the Nonconformiſts could be better provided for by Vacancies, they ſhould have Liberty to be Schoolmaſters, or Aſſiſtants to Incumbents, or to preach Lectures in their Churches, either ſuch Lectures as were already endow'd with Maintenance, or ſuch as the People ſhould be willing to maintain: And that in the mean time their Meeting Places that were convenient ſhould be continu'd in uſe as Chapels. That Liberty be allow'd for Neighbours joining together in praying to God and Praiſing him, and repeating Sermons, in their private Houſes without Moleſtation. That for the Liturgy, &c. none be oblig'd to read the Apocryphal Leſſons: That it be enough if an Incumbent once in a Quarter or half Year, read the greateſt part of the Service for that time; and that it be at other times done by his Curate or Aſſiſtant. That Lecturers be not oblig'd to read the Service, or at moſt that it be enough if once in half a Year, they read the greateſt part of what is appointed for that time. That Parents have liberty to dedicate their own Children to God in Baptiſm, without being oblig'd to find Godfathers and Godmothers. That the uſe of the Sign of the Croſs be left to the Miniſter's Inclination and Diſcretion. That Miniſters be not forc'd to baptize a Child whoſe Parents are deny'd the Communion of the Church, unleſs ſome ſerious Chriſtian undertake for its Education, according to the Chriſtian Covenant. That none be forc'd to receive the Sacrament, while unfit or averſe. That Miniſters be not forced to deliver the Sacrament to any unbaptiz'd Perſons, or to ſuch as won't own their Baptiſmal Covenant, and publickly profeſs their Adherence to it; or to ſuch as are guilty of ſcandalous Immoralities, till they have profeſſed Repentance. That Miniſters be not forced to publiſh an Excommunication or Abſolution againſt their Conſciences, upon the Decree of a Lay-Chancellor, &c. or harraſs'd by attending their Courts to bring Witneſſes againſt thoſe, to whom they have refuſed the Sacrament upon the aforeſaid Reaſons. That it be left to the diſcretion of Miniſters, whom they will abſolve in Sickneſs, and to whom they will give the Sacrament, and over whom they at their Interment will uſe theſe few Words, which import the Juſtification and Salvation of the deceaſed: And that the Sick and Dying have the liberty of chooſing what Miniſters they will to attend and aſſiſt them, without Reſtraint. That no Miniſters be forc'd to deny the Sacrament, to ſuch as think it unlawful to take it kneeling. That the uſe of the Surplice be left indifferent: And that People who live under an ignorant or ſcandalous Miniſter, have Liberty to join with thoſe with whom they can better profit, in any neighbouring Church of the ſame Dioceſe, paying the Incumbent his Dues. That no Ordain'd Miniſter be put upon renouncing their Ordination but upon proof of their fitneſs for the Miniſtry, receive by Word, or a written Inſtrument, a legal Authority to Exerciſe their Miniſtry in any Congregation in his Majeſty's Dominions, where they ſhall be lawfully called. That no Excommunicate Perſon as ſuch be impriſon'd or ruin'd. And that after all Chriſtian Lenity to be uſed to all conſcientious Diſſenters; and that the Tolerable be tolerated under Laws of Peace and Safety.

Upon the whole he added, "That if the Sacraments were but left free to be adminiſter'd and receiv'd by none but Volunteers: And Liberty granted to Miniſters to preach in thoſe Churches where the Common Prayer was read by others; and the Subſcriptions contain'd nothing that a Conſcientious Man might need to ſcruple; he thought it might take in all, even the Independents as well as Presbyterians. Mr. Baxter gave the Earl of Orrery theſe Propoſals, and he after ſome time return'd them with Biſhop Morley's Strictures or Animadverſions, which fully diſco-“ ver'd that all his Profeſſions for Abatement and Concord were deceitful, and that he intended no ſuch thing, for he would not make the leaſt Abatement in any thing of Moment.

1673. 25 Car. II.

“ A little after, ſome great Men of the Houſe of Commons drew up a Bill for Accommodation, to take off Oaths, Subſcriptions and Declarations, except the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and Subſcriptions to the Doctrine of the Church of England, according to the 13th of Elizabeth, but ſhewing it to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, he cauſed them to forbear, and broke the Deſign. And in the mean time, that it might not ſeem to be for nothing that he oft pretended to be of ſo peaceable a Diſpoſition, he further'd an Act only to take off Aſſent and Conſent, and the Renunciation of the Covenant. But when other Biſhops were againſt even this ſhew of Abatement, he told them openly in the Houſe; that had it been but to abate them a Ceremony, he would not have ſpoken in it. But he knew that they were bound to the ſame things ſtill, by other Clauſes or Obligations if theſe were repeal'd.

1674. The King was thought to have been ſo much offended with the Proceedings of the Parliament in their laſt Seſſion, that it was generally believ'd he had no mind to meet them again, tho' they had been ſo long endear'd to him, by ſo many agreeable Acts and continual Supplies. Hence the popular Rumour was, that his Majeſty intended to diſſolve the Parliament: But the King apprehending that a Report of this Nature might irritate ſome of the leading Members, and be otherwiſe prejudicial to his Affairs, he publiſh'd a Proclamation given at Whitehall May 2. declaring,

The King declares againſt the Report of diſſolving the Parl.

“ That whereas of late many Perſons ill-affected to the Government have aſſumed to themſelves a Liberty in their ordinary Diſcourſes, to cenſure and defame the Proceedings of State, whereby they endeavour to create and nouriſh in the Minds of his Majeſty's good Subjects, an evil Opinion of things they underſtand not, and further to promote their ſeditious Ends, they do daily invent falſe News, and ſpread the ſame abroad amongſt the People, to the great Scandal of his Majeſty's Government: Whereof his Majeſty taking notice, and in particular of that very falſe report of an Intention to diſſolve this preſent Parliament, which hath not been under deliberation, his Majeſty ſeeing no cauſe to change his Reſolutions taken touching their meeting. And therefore his Majeſty would look upon the ſpreaders of that Report as Perſons ſeditiouſly inclin'd and ill-affected to his Service, and was reſolved to ſuppreſs that unlawful and undutiful kind of Diſcourſe by a moſt ſtrict and exemplary Puniſhment of all ſuch Offenders as ſhall hereafter be diſcover'd. But however, his Majeſty might think fit to continue this Name of a long Parliament, he did not ſeem inclinable to ſuffer them this Year to ſit and Remonſtrate againſt Popery, and therefore on September 22. his Majeſty was pleaſed to cauſe a Proclamation to be publiſh'd for the farther Proroguing the Parliament, from Nov. 10. next to the 13th of April enſuing. Yet in the mean time to ſeem to anſwer the Addreſſes of their laſt meeting, his Majeſty was pleaſed to ſhew a publick Care for ſuppreſſing Popery, and convicting Romiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits, who were daily more numerous and more inſolent in the City and Country. Therefore on June 10. his Majeſty in Council at Hampton-Court, did order his Royal Proclamation to be publiſh'd to ſatisfie his People, that having been inform'd that many

And only prorogues it.

Proclamation againſt Popery.

“ Prieſts and Jeſuits, in contempt of former Orders, and Proclamations, did continue and harbour themſelves in the City of London and Suburbs thereof, and other Parts of the Kingdom, to the manifeſt Contempt of his Majeſty's Royal Authority and the Laws and Religion eſtabliſhed, and notwithſtanding his Majeſty's Commands to have the Laws againſt them given in Charge in all Counties, yet none of late had been apprehended or diſcover'd; his Majeſty thereupon, of his pious Care for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, and for the Prevention of the Endeavours of ſuch Prieſts and Jeſuits who ſeduce his Subjects from the ſame, hath reſolv'd that ſo many of the ſaid Prieſts as can be found ſhall be ſpeedily tranſported. And that ſuch Diſcoveries might be the better encouraged, his Majeſty had given Order to the Lord High Treaſurer of England to cauſe ſpeedy Payment to be made of the Sum of five Pounds for every Prieſt or Jeſuit ſo diſcover'd.

There was certainly great Reaſon for the popular Jealouſies of Popery: For the Plot that had been more or leſs carried on for ſeveral Years to ſupport, if not reſtore the Romiſh Religion in England, began now to ſhew it ſelf in a more open manner, as appears by ſeveral Letters written by Mr. Coleman, the Duke of York's [a] Secretary, to ſeveral Foreign Correſpondents [b]; the firſt that came to view was this, directed to the French King's Confeſſor, dated June 29. 1674.

Popiſh Plot.

“ I Am commanded to tell you, that his Royal Highneſs my Maſter is very ſenſible of the Friendſhip of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, which he will endeavour to cultivate very carefully, and to give him all poſſible Aſſurances of it, to take away all Jealouſies that his Enemies would raiſe to the contrary.

Coleman's Letters.

“ That his Royal Highneſs has done nothing in any manner whatſoever, nor in any place, againſt the Intereſt of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, but hath render'd him all the good Offices he hath been capable of.

“ That as for recalling the Parliament, and touching my Lord A...... his Highneſs is altogether of the Opinion of his Majeſty, that neither one nor other is uſeful, but quite contrary, very dangerous as well for England as France, and that his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty is in great danger of loſing the Neutrality of England at the next Seſſion (if the Parliament meet) as he loſt its Alliance by the Peace of Holland at the laſt; becauſe the Lower-Houſe and their Friends (as the furious Proteſtants, and the Malecontents in the Houſe of Lords) have a Deſign to leſſen his Royal Highneſs, and root out the Catholick Religi-

[a] Dr. Gilbert Burnet in his Converſation with the Duke of York found him under the greater Temptation of continuing a Papiſt, on a Preſumption that he might depend on the Paſſive Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance of the Church of England. When Biſhop of Sarum, he ſpoke it openly in the Houſe of Peers upon the Tryal of Dr. Sacheverell, on the Pretence of Non-Reſiſtance. I found the ill Effects that the carrying this Matter ſo far had on the Mind of that unfortunate Prince King James. For in the Year 1673, when he was pleaſed to admit me to much Freedom in Converſation with him; amongſt many other things, I told him it was impoſſible for him to reign in Quiet in this Nation, being of that Religion. He anſwer'd me quick: Does not the Church of England maintain the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance and Paſſive Obedience? I begg'd him not to depend on that; for there was a Diſtinction in that Matter, that would be found out when Men thought they needed it.

[b] Mr. Coleman to Sir William Throgmorton, the Duke of York's Agent at Paris, by Letter dated in February 1674. tells him: “ You know well, that when the Duke comes to be Maſter of our Affairs, the King of France will have Reaſon to promiſe himſelf all things he can deſire. For according to the Mind of the Duke, the Intereſt of the King of England and the King of France, and his own, are ſo cloſe bound up together, that it is impoſſible to ſeparate the one from the other, without Ruin to all three; but being join'd, they muſt, notwithſtanding all Oppoſition, become invincible.

“ on;

1673. 15 Car. II. “ on; and they think they cannot make uſe of any “ other fitter means to attain their End, than to raiſe “ the Dutch, and to perplex his moſt Chriſtian Ma-“ jeſty as much as lies in their Power.

“ That his Highneſs doubts not but it is abſo-“ lutely neceſſary for the Intereſt of his moſt Chri-“ ſtian Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs, to uſe all “ Endeavours to hinder the meeting of the Parli-“ ament, by perſuading his Britannick Majeſty, “ that his Greatneſs, his Honour and his Quiet, are “ no leſs concerned therein than theirs; ſo that if “ his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty would write freely his “ Thoughts thereupon to his Britannick Majeſty, “ to forewarn him of the Danger he apprehends “ from thence, and would withal think fit to make “ him the ſame generous Offers of his Purſe, to “ perſuade him to diſſolve the preſent Parliament, “ as he hath done to his Highneſs for the Election “ of another, perhaps he would ſucceed therein by “ the Aſſiſtance we would give him here.

“ As for another Parliament, it would be eaſy “ enough to get ſuch an one as we wiſh for, the “ Conſtitutions of our Parliaments being of ſuch “ a nature, that as there is nothing to be hop'd for “ by the King from an old one, ſo there is nothing “ to be feared from a new one, becauſe ſuch an one “ at their firſt meeting muſt needs aſſiſt his Maje-“ ſty ſo far, as to enable him to acknowledge his “ Obligations both to his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty “ and to all the World, &c.

And by this other Letter from Mr. Coleman to the French King's Confeſſor without Date, but noted by him to have been written by him in Anſwer to a Letter of Sept. 25. 1674.

“ HIS Royal Highneſs has received the Letter “ that you ſent him by Sir William Throckmorton, which he has anſwer'd to you himſelf; “ and beſides, he hath commanded me to teſtify “ to you the great Eſteem he hath for the Friend-“ ſhip of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, and for yours, “ and to aſſure you that he will not fail to culti-“ vate it with all his Power; and that preferring “ the ſincere Faith of a Chriſtian, and the Word “ of a Man of Honour, before all Subtilties and “ even all the Advantages of the World, he gives “ you them both as a Pledge of the ardent Deſire “ he has to continue always a ſtrict Alliance with “ his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, and to entertain alſo “ an intimate Correſpondence with you.

“ For the firſt Point of your Letter, his Royal “ Highneſs has commanded me to tell you, that he “ will govern himſelf according to your Advice, and “ treat of nothing concerning the Catholick Reli-“ gion with Monſieur Rouvigny, nor with any o-“ ther Perſon than yourſelf, but that he will com-“ municate to you all things he ſhall find neceſſary “ for the good of the Catholicks, and ſhall be very “ well pleaſed to receive Advices from you there-“ upon.

“ For the reſt, his Royal Highneſs does a little “ wonder that he hears nothing from Monſieur “ Rouvigny touching the ſecond Point of your Let-“ ter, ſince you have written ſo poſitively, that he “ had Order to confirm and procure Execution of “ what his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty propoſed to him “ the ſecond of June laſt by your Mediation, and “ you by that of Sir William Throckmorton's. He “ (his Royal Highneſs) has omitted, till this time, “ to acquaint you with the ſmall Succeſs that he “ has had, as expecting daily that Monſieur Rou-“ vigny would impart to him the Commiſſion of “ which you made mention to him in your Letter; “ but having heard nothing yet of that Matter, and “ being obliged to go out of Town for fifteen Days “ or three Weeks, he thinks fit to ſend you back “ Sir William Throckmorton, to acquaint you with “ the Progreſs of this Buſineſs, and to pray you “ to inform yourſelf of what has been able to hin-“ der it. 1673. 15 Car. II.

“ His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty made a very gene-“ rous Offer to his Royal Highneſs of the Aſſiſtance “ of his Purſe, to enable him to defend them both “ from the Evils that threatned them, and by good “ luck his Royal Highneſs has labour'd with ſo “ much Diligence and Succeſs, that the Dangers “ which they apprehended are a little put off; but “ one thing more is neceſſary for the perfect ſe-“ curing their Affairs; and without making one “ ſtep more, all that he has already done will ſignify “ nothing. For that the aſſiſtance of his moſt Chri-“ ſtian Majeſty is no leſs neceſſary at preſent than “ heretofore, to ſubdue intirely thoſe, who be-“ ing exaſperated againſt his moſt Chriſtian Ma-“ jeſty, as much as againſt his Royal Highneſs, on-“ ly becauſe he is ſo unalterably addicted to the In-“ tereſt of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, will exerciſe “ their Malice and their Rage with more Brutality “ than ever, if they find occaſion for it hereafter.

“ If you can therefore, by your Credit, obtain “ from his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty the Accompliſh-“ ment of the offer of his Purſe for raiſing the Re-“ putation of his Royal Highneſs in the Opinion of “ his Britannick Majeſty, and for putting him in “ condition to reſiſt the ſharpeſt Batteries of the “ Adverſaries of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty and “ Royal Highneſs; to wit, the poſſibility they pre-“ tend to get Money from the Parliament, and the “ impoſſibility of having any elſewhere, by which “ they often keep the Mind of his Britannick Ma-“ jeſty in ſuſpence, and wherein they place the “ Hope they have to conquer him at laſt.

“ There will nothing more remain to be feared “ by his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, or his Royal High-“ neſs, but his Royal Highneſs will be able to diſ-“ ſolve the Parliament with eaſe; and afterwards, “ in recompence of the ſaid Aſſiſtance, will perform “ on his part all that his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty “ ſhall aſk of him, and will proceed with Sincerity “ upon the Word of a Prince (that no Man can “ reproach him with the Violation of) for the In-“ tereſt of his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty.

In a third Letter of Mr. Coleman to the Pope's Internuncio, dated Septemb. 4. 1674, he tells him, “ That the Duke's principal Deſign is, to uſe the “ Pope's Interpoſition, and by that means to eſta-“ bliſh himſelf in the Poſſeſſion of his Eſtate, thro' “ the Aſſiſtance of France and Spain, and to turn “ all their Cares for the eaſe of the Pope's Friends, “ and particularly for the Catholicks of the Church “ againſt their great Enemies; and aſſures him he “ will find, that the Pope never had an Occaſion “ ſo favourable as at this hour, to enrich thoſe of “ his Family, and to augment the Number of his “ Friends; and if he lets it ſlip, he will never find “ the like: So that if ever they propoſe to make “ uſe of the Treaſure of the Church, it is now they “ ought to do it, for they can demand nothing that “ the Duke will not be capable to do for the Pope's “ Friends. And in another Letter of Octob. 23. 1674. Mr. Coleman to the Internuncio begins thus: “ You agree with me, that Money is the only “ means of bringing the King into the Duke's In-“ tereſt, and of diſingaging him from the Parlia-“ ment; and you muſt alſo agree with me, that “ nothing can more promote the Intereſt of the “ Catholick Party, which is the principal Object “ of the Duke's Care and Affection, and of the “ Hatred of the Parliament, and which muſt hope “ or fear, according as the one or the other of them “ increaſe in Power. [a] Theſe Letters alone, without any other concurring Evidence, are more than ſufficient

[a] A good Author writes thus: Had we the other Letters of Coleman and Father la Chaiſe, which that Sacrifice of State at his Examination ſtill declared were in Whitehall, it would have been eaſy to judge that Matters were ſtill carried on between ſufficient to prove,[a] that the Roman Catholicks in England were full of Hopes and Expectations under the Influence and Protection of the Duke of York, and under the Proſpect of his Succeſſion to the Crown; not to ſay, that they knew the King would fall into the ſame Meaſures ſo far as was conſiſtent with his preſent Peace and Quiet.

1674. 26 Car. II.

Honours and Preferments. As to the Offices and Honours conferr'd this Year; On April 23. in a Chapter of the moſt noble Order of the Garter, the Earl of Mulgrave was elected a Companion, [b] and was accordingly introduced and inveſted with the George and Garter amidſt the uſual Ceremonies, and was inſtall'd at Windſor on May 28. And on May 30. the Atchievements of Count Marcin, Knight of the Order, lately deceas'd, were offer'd up in the accuſtom'd manner. Robert Earl of Sunderland was, by his Majeſty's Favour, admitted into the Privy Council; and having taken the uſual Oaths, took his Place at the Board on May 27. And the Earl of Peterborough was ſworn into the ſame Honour of a Privy Councellor, at Hampton-Court, on July 10. The Duke of Buckingham, who had been a perſonal Favourite of the King, began now again to decline in the good Opinion of his Majeſty. He had by his own Intereſt made two Lord Treaſurers, but was not to be left able to make a third [c]. Being Chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge, his Majeſty, by his Letters to the Univerſity, declared that Place vacant; and on July 15. the Senate of the Univerſity, in a full Aſſembly, unanimouſly elected his Grace the Duke of Monmouth to ſucceed him, who was inſtalled at Worceſter-Houſe in London Sept. 3. the Vice-Chancellor Dr. Spencer making an eloquent Speech in Engliſh, and Dr. Paman the Univerſity Orator in Latin, upon that Occaſion; and when the Ceremony was over, the new Chancellor treated the whole Company, being near 300 Perſons, with extraordinary Magnificence. Sir Leoline Jenkins and Sir Joſeph Williamſon Knights, his Majeſty's Ambaſſadors Extraordinary and Plenipotentiaries for the Treaty at Cologne, arriv'd at Whitehall May 10. and were very graciouſly received by his Majeſty. And for a Reward of this Service, Sir Joſeph Williamſon, having been one of the Clerks of the Privy Council, was now made Principal Secretary of State, and Privy Counſellor, having the Oaths adminiſtred unto him on Sept. 11. by the Advancement of the Earl of Arlington, who, upon the Reſignation of the Earl of St. Albans, receiv'd the Staff of Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, with this publick Reaſon given, That it was in Recompence of his long and faithful Service, and particularly for his having performed the Office of Principal Secretary of State for the ſpace of twelve Years, to his Majeſty's great Satisfaction. The Place of one of the Clerks in Council being ſo vacated by the Preferment of Sir Joſeph Williamſon, his Majeſty was pleaſed to confer it Sept. 16. upon Philip Lloyd Eſq; The Earl of Strafford was ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council on Dec. 8. His Majeſty being nobly entertain'd at Guild-hall on Octob. 29. when Sir Robert Viner was ſworn Lord Mayor, did moſt graciouſly condeſcend to the acceptance of the Freedom of that City, in the Chamberlain's Office, from the Hands of Sir Thomas Player: Upon which the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common-Council unanimouſly agreed to teſtifie their deepeſt Senſe of ſo unparallell'd a Favour and Honour done to the City, beyond the Example of all his Progenitors. The King accepts a Freedom of the City. And accordingly the Lord Mayor, attended by his Brethren and the Commons, waited on his Majeſty Dec. 18. in the Banquetting-Houſe; where, on his Knees, he preſented the King with the Copy of the ſaid Freedom, curiouſly written on Vellum, and adorned with Gilding after the beſt manner, in a large ſquare Box of maſſy Gold: the Seal of the ſaid Freedom hanging at it, incloſed in another Box of Gold, ſet all over with large Diamonds to a conſiderable Value; which his Majeſty was pleaſed graciouſly to accept, with many Expreſſions of great Kindneſs to the City. At the beginning of Hilary Term, Sir Francis North, his Majeſty's Attorney General, being, in conſideration of his faithful Services, deſigned by his Majeſty to ſucceed Sir John Vaughan, late Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of Common-Pleas, appeared in the high Court of Chancery, and was ſworn Serjeant: After he had performed all the Formalities belonging to that Degree, the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal came into the Court of Common-Pleas, and declar'd the King's Pleaſure to him in an eloquent Speech: Sir Francis North ſtanding in the middle of the Bar of the ſaid Court, made his Acknowledgements of the King's great Favour, and return'd his humble Thanks to his Majeſty, and was immediately conducted from thence between the two ancienteſt Serjeants into the ſaid Court, where the Lord Keeper delivered unto him his Patent of the ſaid between the Duke of York and the French King in the ſame Strain. There are ſome that know what Choice was made of the Letters that were to be publiſh'd, and what were ſuppreſs'd or eclips'd by the Duke's Intereſt.

To this I can add, that I have often heard a ſubſtantial and very ſenſible Merchant, Mr. Thomas Bull, Father of Sir John Bull Knt. relate in the Preſence of Major-General Tatton, myſelf, and others, that once walking in the City of London, (I think near the Poſt-Houſe) he took up a large Packet that had been dropt in the Street; and carrying it home, he found it directed to Mr. Coleman; he gueſs'd that the Contents of the ſeveral Letters in it might be of Importance to the Government, and was conſidering what uſe to make of them. But then reflecting that Mr. Coleman was a great Man, and he might run himſelf into ſome needleſs Diſpleaſure, he went and delivered them to Mr. Coleman himſelf, who was extremely ſurpriz'd with Joy, and told him he was the moſt welcome Man in the World to him, and had done him the greateſt Service, and bid him come and ask any Favour of him. Mr. Bull needed no Favour, but ſeem'd afterwards to repent that he had not kept the Letters, or lodg'd them with a proper Magiſtrate, for the World to have known the Subject of them.

[a] See the honeſt Advice given by Sir William Temple to the King upon Audience in his Cloſet before he went for Holland in July 1674. He took occaſion to reflect upon the Conduct and Miniſtry of the late Cabal; how ill his Majeſty had been adviſ'd to break Meaſures and Treaties ſo ſolemnly taken and agreed; how ill he had been ſerv'd, and how ill ſucceeded by the violent Humour of the Nations breaking out againſt ſuch Proceedings, and by the Jealouſies of Arbitrary and Popiſh Counſels they had rais'd againſt the Crown.——He ſhew'd how difficult, if not impoſſible, it was to ſet up here the ſame Religion or Government that was in France: That the univerſal Bent of the Nation was againſt both; that many, who perhaps were indifferent enough in the matter of Religion, conſider'd it would not be chang'd here but by an Army, and that the ſame Force which made the King Maſter of their Religion, made him Maſter of their Liberties too, &c. Memoirs of Sir William Temple, P. II. p. 30, &c.

[b] See the Order of the Ceremonies uſed at the Celebration of St. George's Feaſt at Windſor, when the Sovereign of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter is preſent. Printed by his Majeſty's ſpecial Command. E. W. G[r]. London, for Sam. Mearne. 1674. 4to.

[c] The Duke of Buckingham ſeems to have loſt the King's Favour, by turning ſhort in the laſt Parliament, and declaring for Alliance with the Dutch. The Duke of Buckingham, to ingratiate himſelf with the Commons, (whoſe ill Humour began to appear againſt thoſe they eſteem'd the chief Authors of our War) deſir'd Leave of that Houſe to be heard there in his own Defence. In his Speech, among many Endeavours to throw the Odium of the War from himſelf on the Earl of Arlington, he deſir'd that Lord might be ask'd, Who was the Author of the Triple Alliance? The Lord Arlington coming afterwards upon the like Deſire into the ſame Houſe of Commons, and anſwering ſome Parts of the Duke's Speech; when he came to that Particular, he told them he could eaſily anſwer that Queſtion of the Duke's, by telling them that the Author of that Alliance was Sir William Temple. Life of Sir William Temple, p. 106.——This Change of Mind in the Miniſters, if ſincere, muſt be owing to the Force of Truth; that when they had been the prime Counſellors for the exalting of France at the Expence of Holland, they now confeſs'd their Miſtake, and fell in with the Sons of the Nation in favour of Holland and the Proteſtant Intereſt in Europe.

1674. 26 Car. II.

Office: And after he had taken the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and the Oath of Chief Juſtice of that Court, the Lord Keeper put on his ſquare Cap, and he took his Seat of Chief Juſtice, and afterwards entertained the Lord Keeper, and divers of the Nobility, and all the Judges and Serjeants, at Dinner at Serjeants-Inn in Chancery-Lane. On Feb. 10. his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed, in conſideration of the eminent Loyalty and good Services of ——Glaſcock Eſq; to cauſe him to be ſworn one of the Maſters of Requeſt, in the Room of Jervis Holles Eſq; deceaſed [a].

Affairs abroad.

Abroad the great Action was the Battle of Seneff, between the French under the Command of the Prince of Conde, and the Confederates led by the Prince of Orange.——The Confederate Army being on their march toward Binch, the French fell upon their Rear, which ſoon came to a furious Engagement. Sir William Temple, in his Memoirs, has thus deſcribed it: "As the Numbers on both "ſides were not much different when the Fight "began, ſo were thoſe eſteemed that fell in this "Battle, and to amount to about ſix or ſeven "thouſand on each ſide; but of the French many "more Officers and Gentlemen than were uſual in "proportion to the common Soldiers. When the "Night parted the Armies, the French retired back "to their former Quarters; and next Morning the "Confederates marched to that which they deſigned when they broke up the Day before. The "Allies claimed the Victory, becauſe they were laſt "upon the Field; and the French, upon the greater "Number of Priſoners and Standards they carried "away; but whoever had the Honour, they both "felt the Loſs. There was a Letter intercepted from the Prince of Conde to the French King; wherein he gave an Account, that upon a general Review of his Army, he found himſelf but in a ſorry condition, as having loſt the Flower of his Infantry, and the beſt part of his Horſe, and therefore did not think himſelf ſtrong enough to hazard a ſecond Engagement.

Character of the Pr. of Orange.

And as this generous Prince was very ingenious in the Acknowledgement of his Loſs, he was no leſs juſt to his great Adverſary the Prince of Orange, by giving him the Character, that "He had "acted like an old Captain in all, but only venturing himſelf too much like a young Man. But more full yet was that of General Zouch's Letter to the States; wherein, amongſt others, he uſed theſe Expreſſions: "I have endeavoured to diſcharge my Duty in attending his Highneſs the "Prince of Orange during the bloody and famous "Battle between the Confederate Army and that "of the moſt Chriſtian King, the happy iſſue of "which has proved ſo much to the Glory of the "Prince of Orange, who ſhewed upon that Occaſion the Prudence of an aged Captain, the Courage of a Cæſar, and the undaunted Bravery of a "Marius. All which, my Lords, I ſpeak without "Flattery, which is contrary to my Nature.

Agitations for Peace.

While the Peace betwen England and Holland was in Agitation, the Engliſh Ambaſſador Sir William Temple acquainted the Prince of Orange with the King's perſonal Kindneſs and Eſteem for him, and with his Majeſty's Reſolution to obſerve and cultivate a Friendſhip with the States, and his Deſires to ſee a general Peace reſtor'd to Chriſtendom, wherein his Majeſty intended to act wholly in concert with his Highneſs, whoſe Opinion, as to the Thing and Conditions moſt neceſſary, Sir William deſired to underſtand as ſoon and as fully as he could. The Prince anſwer'd the Ambaſſador with the Expreſſions of Duty and Kindneſs to his Majeſty, and deſires a new Union between the two Nations, which he thought alone could make his Majeſty happy at home and abroad: But as to a Peace, his Highneſs ſeem'd averſe to it, unleſs it could be made with good Advantage to the Spaniard, a firm Security to the States, and upon the laſting Balance of Europe. The Ambaſſador enter'd upon one thing more with him, which was upon occaſion of the many diſcontented Perſons in England, at the Courſe of the laſt Miniſtry and War, who were ſuſpected to have trinkled at leaſt with Holland, about the raiſing of Seditions, and perhaps Inſurrections in England, if the War had continued; and to that end told his Highneſs what the King ſuſpected of ſome of his Subjects, without naming any, and how much Service it would be to his Majeſty to know them more certainly, and how kind it would be to diſcover them: But the Prince was ſtanch, and ſaid, He was ſure the King would not preſs him upon a thing ſo much againſt all Honour, as to betray [b] Men that profeſſed to be his Friends.

Sir William having tranſmitted an Account to England of all this, had no Orders nor Returns upon it: But about the beginning of Decemb. the Earl of Arlington was ſent over into Holland with ſome Inſtructions to adjuſt all Matters with his Highneſs. His Lordſhip being arrived at the Hague, told Sir William Temple, that he was come over to ſet ſome Things right between the King and the Prince that he doubted were amiſs, and to ſettle a perfect Kindneſs and Confidence between them for the future. The Prince did not ſeem inclinable to the Overtures made by the Lord Arlington, and only ſaid, that the Fortune of the Parties might change in another Campaign, which none but his Majeſty could prevent by inducing France to comply with ſuch Terms as he thought juſt and ſafe for the reſt of Chriſtendom. And we are told, "That the Prince ſhew'd himſelf diſſatiſ"fied at the Arrogance and Inſolence wherewith "Arlington had enter'd upon all his Expoſtulations "with him; and that not only in the Subject of his "Diſcourſe, as if he pretended to deal with a Child "that he could by his Wit make to believe what "he pleaſed; but in the manner of it, as if he had "taken himſelf for the Prince of Orange, and him "for Lord Arlington; That all he ſaid was ſo Arti"ficial, and he gave ſuch falſe Colours to things, "every Body knew that he, who was a plain Man, "could not bear it; and was never ſo weary of any "Converſation in his Life: And, in ſhort, he did "not ſeem well ſatisfied with the King's Intentions "upon that Errand, tho' he ſaid he was ſure his "Majeſty never intended he ſhould act in the man"ner he had, if he remember'd he was his Nephew, "tho' nothing elſe.

State of Religion.

As to the nearer Concerns of Religion, the King, who had Apprehenſion and Judgment (when applied) equal to the greateſt of his Predeceſſors, did clearly perceive it to be the Senſe of his Council, and the Voice of his People, that he ſhould ſupport the Eſtabliſh'd Church, with a ſtrict Hand upon the Papiſts, and with a moderate reſtraint of the Diſſenters, chiefly becauſe their Diviſion gave Ad-

[a] On the 7th of Decemb. 1674. the Earl of Clarendon, who in the Courſe of his undeſerved Exile had ſojourned in ſeveral Parts of France, died near the City of Roan in Normandy; from whence his Body was convey'd into England, and buried on the North-ſide of the Capella Regum in Weſtminſter-Abby.

[b] It was believ'd, among many others, that the Lord Shaftſbury was one that had of late play'd this Game; who having been as deep as any Man in the Councils of the Cabal, and gone ſo far in the publick Applauſe of them, as in a Speech in Parliament to have applied the Delenda Carthago to our Intereſt in the Deſtruction of Holland; yet when he ſaw the Parliament and Nation ſullen upon it, and that the King could not purſue it with ſo much ill Humour in both, he turn'd ſhort upon the Court and the reſt of the Cabal, fell in with the popular Humour in the City as well as Parliament, decried the preſent Deſigns and Conduct, tho' with the Loſs of his Chancellor's Place, and was believ'd to manage a Practice in Holland for ſome Inſurrection here. Temple's Memoirs. P. II. p. 71.

vantage

1674. 26*Car.* II.

vantage to the other Enemy. On this Principle of Wiſdom his Majeſty commanded his own Inclination, and during the long receſs of Parliament, to quiet the Minds of his Subjects, he publiſhed this Declaration for enforcing a late Order made in Council.

Charles R.

“THE Adminiſtration of Juſtice, according to the ſettled and known Laws of our Kingdom, we take to be the moſt reaſonable and proper Method for attaining and preſerving the Peace and Safety both of Church and State. As therefore we find it neceſſary, that the Laws ſhould be put in execution with more Care and Diligence than of late they have been, ſo alſo we think it expedient, that the Orders we have already given for that purpoſe, ſhould be made publick in ſuch a manner that all Men may find themſelves oblig'd to take notice of the ſame, and to give a due Obedience thereunto. For which Reaſon we have thought fit to declare, and do hereby publiſh and declare our Royal Will and Pleaſure, that our Order made in Council on Wedneſday the third Day of this inſtant February, and ſince printed and publiſhed, be exactly obſerved by all and every Perſon and Perſons to whom it ſhall or may appertain: And more particularly we require and Command, that the Convictions of Popiſh Recuſants be every where encourag'd, quicken'd and made effectual; and that all Convictions as ſoon as they ſhall be perfected, be forthwith certified into the Exchequer, and that ſpeedy Proceſs do iſſue upon all ſuch Convictions as are or ſhall be certified; and that care be taken, that no Perſons of Quality who ſhall be ſuſpected to be Popiſh Recuſants, be omitted to be preſented; and that no delay be uſed, nor any practice ſuffered, which may hinder or obſtruct the compleating of ſuch Convictions as are now preparing. And we do ſtrictly Charge and Command, that no Maſs be ſaid in any part of this Kingdom, the Chapels of our deareſt Conſort the Queen, and the Chapels of Foreign Miniſters only excepted. And to prevent all extraordinary Reſort to thoſe Chapels, by ſuch who are not menial Servants to the Queen, or to Foreign Miniſters, we declare that every ſuch Offender ſhall incur the Forfeiture of one hundred Marks, provided by the Statute made in the twenty third Year of Queen Elizabeth, whereof one Third part ſhall be given to the Informer for his farther Reward and Encouragement. And we require all Officers and Miniſters of Juſtice, to cauſe diligent Search to be made in all other places where they ſhall hear or ſuſpect that Maſs is ſaid, and to cauſe all Offenders in this kind to be apprehended and proceeded with according to Law. And we forewarn all our Subjects, that they preſume not to ſend any Perſon to be Educated abroad in any Popiſh College or Seminary; and we command all Parents or Guardians of any Perſon or Perſons, now remaining in any ſuch College or Seminary, that they cauſe the ſame Perſon or Perſons ſpeedily to return home, as they will anſwer the contrary at their peril. “ Moreover, we require all Perſons born within any of our Dominions, and out of Priſon, who have taken Orders by any Authority derived from the Church or See of Rome (except Mr. John Huddleſton) to depart the Kingdom before the twenty fifth Day of March next, according to the Tenor of our late Proclamation; and alſo to depart the Court within the fourteen Days appointed by our late Order in Council. And we forbid all Papiſts, or reputed Papiſts, to come into our Palace at Whitehall or St. James's, or into any other place where our Court ſhall be, contrary to our late Prohibition upon pain of Impriſonment in the Tower, if he be a Peer of the Realm, or in ſome other Priſon, if he be of leſſer quality. And laſtly, we appoint, that care be taken for the ſuppreſſion of Conventicles, hereby declaring, that all our Licences were long ſince recalled, and that no Conventicle hath any Authority, Allowance or Encouragement from us. And our Pleaſure is, that theſe our Commands be publiſhed and proclaimed in the uſual manner.

Given at our Court at Whitehall this twelfth Day of February, in the twenty ſeventh Year of our Reign.

This Declaration referr'd to an Order in Council made on the third of February, wherein the King upon adviſing with ſeveral of his Biſhops, agreed upon ſix Orders and Reſolutions then [a] taken for the more effectual Conviction of Popiſh Recuſants and the Suppreſſion of Conventicles; of which laſt was this. And his Majeſty doth farther Order and Appoint, that effectual Care be taken for the ſuppreſſion of Conventicles: And whereas divers pretend Licences from his Majeſty, and would ſupport themſelves by that pretence, his Majeſty declares, that all his Licences were long ſince recalled; and that no Conventicle hath any Authority, Allowance or Encouragement from his Majeſty. The Nonconformiſts on this occaſion thus partially expreſſed themſelves. “ His Majeſty called the Biſhops up to London to give him Advice what was to be done for the ſecuring of Religion, &c. and they after divers Conſultations with the Miniſters of State, adviſed him to recal his Licences, and put the Laws againſt the Nonconformiſts in execution. And this was done by a Declaration and Proclamation, declaring the Licences long ſince void, and requiring the execution of the Laws againſt Papiſts and Conventicles. No ſooner was the Proclamation publiſh'd, but ſpecial Informers were ſet on work to promote the execution. A little before the Licences were recalled, Mr. Baxter openly declar'd in his Pulpit, that it was not in oppoſition to the publick Churches that he kept up a Meeting, but to help the People in their Neceſſity, who were many more than the Pariſh Churches could hold. Hereupon it was confidently reported that he was conforming. —— Another Seſſion of Parliament approaching, Biſhop Morley and Biſhop Ward were in appearance very ſenſible of the Danger of Popery, and therefore very forward for Abatements and taking in the Nonconformiſts, and mov'd it to many. At length Dr. Tillotſon and Dr. Stillingfleet deſired a meeting with Dr. Manton, Dr. Bates, Mr. Pool and Mr. Baxter, in order to conſider of an Accommodation, and ſaid they had the Encouragement of ſeveral Lords both Spiritual and Temporal. Mr. Baxter at firſt met the two Doctors alone: And they conſider'd and canvaſs'd various Draughts; and at length fix'd on one in which they agreed. This being communicated to the Nonconformiſts was agreeable; but when they communicated it to the Biſhops, there was an end of the Treaty, a great many things could Caſe of the Diſſenters as repreſented by themſelves.

[a] Wedneſday Feb. 3. Orders and Reſolutions taken by the King in Council. —— 1. That the Conviction of Popiſh Recuſants be encouraged, quickened, and made effectual. —— 2. That no Perſon do preſume to ſay Maſs, or repair to any Popiſh Chapel. —— 3. That all Perſons in Orders from the Church of Rome depart the Realm: —— 4. That none preſume to ſend any Perſon to be educated in any Popiſh College or Seminary. —— 5. That no Papiſt preſume to come into any of his Majeſty's Palaces. —— 6. That effectual Care be taken for the Suppreſſion of Conventicles.

1674. 26 Car. II.

" not be obtain'd; upon which Dr. Tillotſon wrote " Mr. Baxter word[a], That as Circumſtances ſtood, " ſuch an Act could not paſs in either Houſe without " the Concurrence of a conſiderable part of the Biſhops, " and his Majeſty's Countenance, which at the preſent " he ſaw little Reaſon to expect. The Terms agreed " on were much of the ſame nature with thoſe " abovemention'd, as propoſed to my Lord Orrery, " with very little Variation.

Eccleſiaſtical Preferments.

His Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to tranſlate Dr. Nathaniel Crew Biſhop of Oxford, and Clerk of the Cloſet, to the See of Durham, which had been too long kept vacant, and the Revenues of it had been too ill employ'd: And his Majeſty made choice of the Honourable Dr. Henry Compton, Brother to the Right Honourable the Earl of Northampton, to ſucceed in the Biſhoprick of Oxford. He was conſecrated on Sunday Dec. 6. in the Chapel of Lambeth, by his Grace the Archbiſhop of Cant. aſſiſted [b] by ſeveral other Biſhops, in the Preſence of many of the chiefeſt Nobility, and other Perſons of Quality, who were afterwards entertain'd at a noble Dinner.

1675.

Parliament meet.

On Tueſday April 13. the two Houſes of Parliament, purſuant to his Majeſty's late Prorogation, met at Weſtminſter. His Majeſty being come into the Houſe of Lords, and with the uſual Solemnity ſeated in his Throne, and attired in his Royal Robes with the Crown upon his Head, was pleaſed to ſend for the Houſe of Commons up, who accordingly attended his Majeſty at the Bar of the Lords Houſe, his Majeſty made a very gracious Speech to the two Houſes on the Subject of their Meeting. And the Lord Keeper having farther moſt eloquently and fully declar'd his Majeſty's Mind on that Occaſion, the Commons went back to their Houſe, and reſolv'd, that the humble and hearty Thanks of the Houſe ſhould be return'd to his Majeſty for his gracious Promiſes and Aſſurances expreſs'd in his Speech, &c. The Lords having likewiſe reſolv'd, that the humble Thanks of their Houſe ſhould be return'd to his Majeſty for his gracious Speech. And this Day accordingly his Majeſty receiv'd the Thanks of the two Houſes, of the Lords by a ſelect Committee of their Houſe, and of the Commons in the Banqueting-Houſe at Whitehall, where they this Afternoon attended his Majeſty in a Body.

Their Proceedings.

At the opening of this Seſſion, my Lord Keeper told the Houſes, No Influence of the Stars, no Configurations of the Heavens are to be fear'd, ſo long as theſe two Houſes ſtand in good Diſpoſition to each other, and both in an happy Conjunction with their Lord and Sovereign; but they ought not Quieta movere, nor res parvas magnis motibus agere. But ſeveral unhappy Occaſions offer'd of Difference, and a general Diſcontent: For firſt an Addreſs was preſented to the King againſt his great Miniſter the Duke of Lauderdale, who is charged to have declar'd his Inclinations to arbitrary Councils to the [c] Terror of his Majeſty's good Subjects; and therefore they deſired his Majeſty would be pleaſed to remove the ſaid Duke from all his Employments, and from his Majeſty's Preſence and Counſels for ever, as a Perſon obnoxious and dangerous to the Government. But the King excuſed it by ſending them notice, that the Words of which the Duke was accuſed in the Addreſs, if ſpoken at all, were ſpoken before the laſt Act of general Pardon.

1675. 27 Car. II.

Occaſions of Diſcontent.

The Houſe of Commons had been thought ſullen in their two laſt Seſſions, and had proceeded contrary to the Humour and Deſign of the Court; and therefore to purge them, or refine them, a Bill was brought into the Houſe of Lords, entituled, An Act to prevent the Danger that may ariſe from Perſons diſaffected to the Government: Wherein was to be impoſed an Oath or Teſt of Abhorrence by all who enjoy'd any Beneficial Offices Eccleſiaſtical, Civil or Military, and by all Privy Counſellors, Juſtices of Peace and Members of Parliament. It was at firſt propoſed to be in the ſame Form with that requir'd from the diſſenting Clergy, by the Oxford five Miles Act. And my Lord Keeper was pleaſed to ſay, That it was a moderate Security to the Church and Crown, which no honeſt Man could refuſe; and whoever did, would give great Suſpicion of dangerous and Antimonarchical Principles. It was carried on vehemently by the Court Party, and as vehemently oppoſed by the Earl of Shaftsbury[d], and thoſe Peers who were reputed to be more in the Intereſt of their Country, who look'd upon it as a Project to divide the Proteſtants, and to ſtrengthen the Popiſh Party. It was debated in Paragraphs for ſeventeen Days together, and ſhewn by the Country Lords to be in the ſeveral Parts of it either vain and ſuperfluous, or inconſiſtent with itſelf, or oppoſite to the preſent Conſtitution of this Kingdom. The Hiſtory of the Diſſenters makes bold to give this Account of it.

A Bill for a Teſt of Abhorrence.

" When the Parliament met, there was great heat " in the Houſe of Lords, upon the bringing in an " Act to impoſe ſuch an Oath on Lords, Commons " and Magiſtrates, as was impoſed by the Oxford " Act upon Miniſters. The Sum of it was, that " none commiſſion'd by the King may be by Arms re- " ſiſted, and that they would never endeavour any " alteration of the Government of Church or State. " The great Speakers for it were the Lord Treaſu- " rer and the Lord Keeper, with Biſhop Morley and " Biſhop Ward. The great Speakers againſt it " were the Earl of Shaftsbury, the Lord Holles, the Diſſenters Account of it.

---

[a] Dr. Tillotſon ſays in the ſame Letter. — I do moſt heartily deſire an Accommodation, and ſhall always endeavour it. See Mr. Baxter's Life. P. III. p. 157.

See the peaceable Deſign, being a modeſt Account of the Nonconformiſts Meetings with ſome of their Reaſons for Nonconformity, and the way of Accommodation in the Matter of Religion; humbly propoſed to publick Conſideration by ſome Miniſters of London againſt the Sitting of Parliament in the Year 1675. With a ſeaſonable Diſcourſe againſt Comprehenſion of the Papiſts and Diſſenters, as the Diſſenters have propos'd. London, 1676. 8*vo*.

[b] A Sermon was preach'd and printed by William Jane, B. D. 4*to*. 1675.

[c] Apr. 27. 1675. Mr. Speaker reported that he had Yeſterday attended his Majeſty, with the whole Houſe, with the Addreſs againſt the Duke of Lauderdale; to which his Majeſty had anſwer'd, that it was of long and great Importance; ſo that now he could not give them an immediate Anſwer, but he would conſider of it, and anſwer in a little time. MS.

[d] The Proceedings upon this Bill, and the Proteſtations againſt it, ſeem faithfully delivered in the Letter from a Perſon of Quality. 4*to*. 1675.

The Proteſtation.

We whoſe Names are underwritten, being Peers of this Realm, do according to our Rights and the ancient Uſage of Parliaments, declare, that the Queſtion having been put, Whether the Bill, entitled, An Act to prevent the Danger which may ariſe from Perſons diſaffected to the Government, doth ſo far intrench upon the Privileges of this Houſe, that it ought therefore to be caſt out. It being reſolved in the Negative, we do humbly conceive, that any Bill which impoſeth an Oath upon the Peers with a Penalty as this doth; that upon the Refuſal of that Oath they ſhall be made incapable of Sitting and Voting in this Houſe, as it is a thing unprecedented in former Times; ſo is it in our humble Opinion the higheſt Invaſion of the Liberties and Privileges of the Peerage that poſſibly may be, and moſt deſtructive of the Freedom which they ought to enjoy as Members of Parliament, becauſe the Privileges of Sitting and Voting in Parliament is an Honour they have by Birth, and a Right ſo inherent in them, as that Nothing can take away, but what by the Law of the Land muſt withal take away their Lives, and corrupt their Blood.

Buckingham	Berks
Bridgwater	Mohun
Wincheſter	Stanford
Saliſbury	Hallifax
Bedford	De la Mere
Dorſet	Evre
Ayleſbury	Shaftſbury
Briſtol	Clarendon
Denbigh	Grey
Pagitt	Say and Seal
Holles	Wharton.
Peter

" Lord

" Lord Hallifax, the Duke of Buckingham and the " Earl of Saliſbury; who jointly with the Marquis " of Wincheſter, and the Earls of Briſtol, Barkſhire " and Aylesbury, enter'd their Proteſtations againſt " it. They pleaded that this Oath would be de- " ſtructive to the Privileges of their Houſe, which " was to vote freely, and not to be pre-oblig'd by " an Oath to the Prelates. After a great many " Debates, tho' the Teſt was carried by a Majority, " yet it was ſo alter'd as made it incapable of ſerv- " ing the Purpoſes of thoſe who at firſt were moſt " zealous for it; it was not to their Guſt, for they " reduc'd it to theſe Words of a Declaration and " an Oath.

I A. B. do declare, that it is not lawful on any Pretence whatſoever to take Arms againſt the King, and I do abhor the Traiterous Poſition of taking Arms by his Authority againſt his Perſon, or againſt thoſe that are commiſſioned by him according to Law, in time of Rebellion and War, in acting in purſuance of ſuch Commiſſion. I A. B. do ſwear that I will not endeavour an Alteration of the Proteſtant Religion now eſtabliſhed by Law in the Church of England, nor will I endeavour any Alteration in the Government of Kingdom in Church or State, as it is by Law eſtabliſh'd.

Another occaſion of Difference between the two Houſes.

And when it was committed, the Lords got in this Proviſo, That it ſhould be no hindrance to their free Speaking and Voting in the Parliament.

It ſeems probable that theſe Debates would have proceeded to greater Heats and Animoſities, if they had not been interrupted by another Difference ariſing between the two Houſes, in a caſe of Judicature and Privileges, occaſion'd by Dr. Sherley's bringing an Appeal in the Houſe of Lords, from a Decree in Chancery, againſt Sir John Fagg, a Member of the Houſe of Commons; the Diſpute was carried to ſuch a height, that Serjeant Pemberton, Serjeant Peck, Sir John Churchill, and Mr. Porter, being concern'd as Council in this Cauſe, were taken up in Weſtminſter-Hall by the Speaker's Warrant, and committed to the Tower for Breach of Privilege. The Managements in this Affair growing ſtill more vehement, his Majeſty ſeem'd to be glad of this Occaſion for proroguing the Parliament; and therefore on Wedneſday, June 9. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and being attir'd in his Royal Robes with the Crown upon his Head, and ſeated in his Throne attended with the uſual Solemnity, was pleaſed to ſend for the Houſe of Commons up, who accordingly attended his Majeſty at the Bar of the Lords Houſe, his Majeſty was pleaſed to paſs ſeveral private Bills, and to make a moſt gracious Speech to the two Houſes on the Subject of their Prorogation; which done, the Lord Keeper by his Majeſty's Command prorogued the Parliament till October 13. next.

Parliament prorogued.

In the Interval of this Receſs, the Debates of the abhorring Oath were made publick; which ſo offended the Court, that an Order was given for the burning of them. And the King ſeem'd to be much diſpleas'd at thoſe who were called the Country-Party, becauſe their Judgment and Intention was to bring his Majeſty into a nearer Alliance with the States of Holland, and into an open War with France: Upon which his Majeſty is ſaid to have told Sir William Temple (newly commanded out of Holland) [a] That ſome warm Leaders in both Houſes had a mind to engage him in a War againſt France; which they ſhould not do, becauſe he was ſure they would make uſe of it to the Ruin of his Miniſters.

The King averſe to a War with France.

On October 13. the two Houſes of Parliament met again: His Majeſty being come into the Houſe of Lords, was pleaſed to ſend for the Houſe of Commons, and to make this gracious Speech to the two Houſes on the Subject of their Meeting.

King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" I Meet you now with a more than uſual Concern for the Event of this Seſſion; and I " know it is but what may reaſonably be expected " from that Care I owe to the Preſervation of the " Government. The Cauſes of the laſt Prorogation, as I for my part do not deſire to remember, " ſo I hope no Man elſe will, unleſs it be to learn " from thence how to avoid the like Occaſions for " the future. And I pray conſider how fatal the " Conſequences may be, and how little Benefit is " like to redound to the People by it. However, " if any thing of that kind ſhall ariſe, I deſire you " would defer thoſe Debates till you have brought " ſuch publick Bills to Perfection as may conduce " to the Good and Safety of the Kingdom: And " particularly, I recommend to you whatever may " tend to the Security of the Proteſtant Religion, " as it is now eſtabiſhed in the Church of England.

" I muſt likewiſe deſire your Aſſiſtance in ſome " Supplies, as well to take off the Anticipations " which are upon my Revenue, as for the building " of Ships: And tho' the War has been the great " Cauſe of theſe Anticipations, yet I find, by a late " Account I have taken of my Expences, that I " have not been altogether ſo good an Husband as " I might have been, and as I reſolve to be for the " future; altho' at the ſame time I have had the " Satisfaction to find, that I have been far from " ſuch an Extravagancy in my own Expence, as " ſome would have the World believe. I am not " ignorant that there are many who would prevent " the Kindneſs of my Parliament to me at this time; " but I as well know, that your Affections have " never failed me: And you may remember, it is " now above three Years ſince I have asked you " any thing for my own Uſe. The reſt I refer to " my Lord Keeper.

Then the Lord Keeper made a Speech; which, for the Importance of it, deſerves to be here given at large.

Lord Keeper's Speech.

My Lords, and you the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes of the Houſe of Commons,

" THE Cauſes of this preſent Aſſembly, and " the Reaſons which have mov'd his Majeſty to command your Attendance upon him at " this time, are of the higheſt Importance. The " King reſolves to enter into Terms of ſtricteſt Cor-

[a] The King had not only an Averſneſs to a War with France, but was in the moſt familiar Friendſhip with the French King, and inſtructed him in ſetting out a good Fleet, and ſent over Materials and Workmen for it. See what Dr. Wellwood writes:——As in all other things that might aggrandize France and level England, ſo in this Art of building Ships, K. Charles was willing to aſſiſt his intimate Ally Lewis XIV. to the utmoſt of his Power. In order thereto, he not only faithfully communicated to the French King from time to time all his own Obſervations and Experiments, but likewiſe thoſe of the moſt ſkillful Perſons about him in the Art. Nay ſuch was this King's Zeal for France, and his Care to acquaint the French with Sea Affairs, that I have lately ſeen the Doubles of ſeveral Letters from King Charles to the French King about Employments and new Diſcoveries in building Ships of War, and at the Foot of ſome of the Doubles of conſiderable Length, written by King Charles himſelf to this Purpoſe. The Original with my own Hand ſent him ſuch a day: ſtrange, that a Prince ſo much in love with Eaſe, and who writes ſo ill a Hand, could be brought to write near a Sheet of Paper at a time, merely to teach an inveterate Enemy of the Engliſh Nation a Way to contend with him the Dominion of the Seas, the brighteſt Jewel of his Crown. But this is not all—— there is yet to be ſeen a Double of a Letter from him to the French King, full of Inſtructions about this ſame Subject, dated at a time he was actually concurring with the other Princes of Europe to oblige the French to a general Peace at Nimeguen (i. e. in this Year or the next.)

1675. 27*Car.* II. “ reſpondence and Endearment with his Parliament; to take your Counſel in his moſt weighty Affairs; to impart all his Cares to you; to acquaint you with all his Wants and Neceſſities; “ to offer you all that can yet be wanting to make “ you enjoy your ſelves; to eſtabliſh a right underſtanding between himſelf and his three Eſtates, “ and between the Eſtates themſelves; to redreſs “ all your juſt Complaints, and to put all his Subjects at eaſe as far as in him lies, and can conſiſt with the Honour and the Safety of the Government.

“ And having made all theſe Advances towards “ you, he doubts not but you will behave yourſelves like thoſe that deſerve to be called the “ King's Friends, and that you will put him at eaſe “ too.

“ There is no Cauſe why any Fears of Religion “ or Liberty ſhould divert you.

“ For, his Majeſty hath ſo often recommended “ to you the Conſiderations of Religion, ſo very “ often deſir'd you to aſſiſt him in his Care and Protection of it, that the Defender of the Faith is “ become the Advocate for it too, and hath left all “ thoſe without Excuſe who ſtill remain under any “ kind of Doubts or Fears.

“ Again, the Care of your Civil Rights and Liberties hath been ſo much your Majeſty's, that “ the more you reflect upon theſe Concerns, the “ more you will find your ſelves obliged to acknowledge his Majeſty's Tenderneſs of you and Indulgence to you.

“ Search your own Annals, the Annals of thoſe “ Times you account moſt happy, you will ſcarce “ find one Year without an Example of ſomething “ more ſevere, and more extraordinary than a whole “ Reign hath yet produced.

“ Peruſe the Hiſtories of Foreign Nations, and “ you ſhall find, Statues and Altars to have been “ erected to the Memories of thoſe Princes whoſe “ beſt Virtues never arriv'd to half that Moderation which we live to ſee and to enjoy.

“ No King did ever meet a Parliament with juſter “ Cauſe of Confidence in their Affections.

“ And therefore his Majeſty will not ſuffer himſelf to doubt, but relies firmly upon it, that “ you will never forſake him when he is under any “ kind of Difficulties. He doth aſſure himſelf that “ you will now think fit to provide for his Honour “ and your own Safety, by helping him to pay ſome “ part of his Debts, and to make his Navy as great “ and as conſiderable as it ought to be.

“ For, the greatneſs of a King is the greatneſs “ and Safety of his People. The Springs and Rivers “ which pay Tribute to the Ocean, do not leſſen “ but preſerve themſelves by that Contribution.

“ It is impoſſible that thoſe Affections which “ Piety and Allegiance firſt planted, which Perſecution could not abate, which the gracious Influences of his Majeſty's happy Government have “ hitherto encreaſed, ſhould now appear to wither “ and decay.

“ But then the beſt Indication of the Heart “ is the Hand. And becauſe it is of infinite Moment to the King's Affairs that there ſhould be “ a chearful Concurrence to his Supply; therefore “ let Hand and Heart both join together in the Oblation, for that will make it a Sacrifice wellpleaſing indeed.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

“ The Happineſs of this preſent Age, and the “ Fate and Fortune of the next too, is very much “ in your Hands at this time: All that you would “ deſire to ſettle and improve, all that you would “ wiſh to ſecure and tranſmit to your Poſterities, “ may now be accompliſhed.

“ Would you raiſe the due Eſtimation and Reverence of the Church of England to its juſt height? Would you provide for the Safety and “ Eſtabliſhment of it? 1675. 27*Car.* II.

“ Do there want any Laws to ſecure the Peace “ and Quiet of the State?

“ Would you at once enrich and adorn this Kingdom, by providing for the Extent and Improvement of Trade, by introducing new and uſeful “ Manufactures, and by encouraging thoſe we have “ already?

“ Would you prevent all Frauds and Perjuries, “ all Delays and Abuſes in the Adminiſtration of Juſtice?

“ Would you preſerve a famous City from being “ depopulated by the Suburbs? Would you reſtrain “ the Exceſs of thoſe new Buildings which begin to “ ſwarm with Inhabitants unknown?

“ All your Petitions of this kind will be grateful “ to the King, and you may with eaſe effect all “ this and much more which your great Wiſdoms “ will ſuggeſt to you. A little Time will ſerve many excellent Laws, and to give you the Honour “ of being the Repairers of all our Breaches, ſo as “ that Time be wholly employ'd upon the Publick, and not taken up by ſuch Conſiderations as “ are leſs meritorious.

“ If therefore there be any without doors that “ labour to diſunite your Counſels, or to render “ them ineffectual; if they can hope that the Occaſions for this may ariſe from ſome Differences “ within yourſelves, or hope by thoſe Differences “ to diſguiſe their own Diſaffections to your good “ Proceedings. 'Tis in your Power to defeat thoſe “ Hopes, to pull off this Diſguiſe, and to ſecure a “ happy Concluſion of this Meeting, by ſtudying “ to preſerve a good Correſpondence, and by a “ careful avoiding of all ſuch Queſtions as are apt “ to engender Strife.

“ And if ever there were a time, when the Gravity and the Counſel, the Wiſdom and the good “ Temper of a Parliament were neceſſary to ſupport “ that Government which only can ſupport theſe “ Aſſemblies; certainly this is the Hour.

“ You ſee with what Zeal the King hath recommended to you a good Agreement between “ yourſelves, and that he doth it with all the Care “ and Compaſſion, all the Earneſtneſs and Importunity fit for ſo great a Prince to expreſs, who “ would be very ſorry that any ſuch Misfortune as “ your Diſagreement ſhould either deprive him of “ your Advice and Aſſiſtance, or his People of thoſe “ good Laws which he is ready to grant you.

“ There is no other way our Enemies can think “ of, by which 'tis poſſible for this Seſſions to miſcarry; for Fears and Jealouſies cannot enter here, “ Calumnies and Slanders will find no place amongſt “ wiſe and good Men.

“ They that uſe theſe Arts abroad will quickly “ be diſcredited, when the World ſhall ſee the generous Effects of your Confidence. Men will “ deſpair of attempting any Diſturbance in the “ State, when they ſee every Step that tends that “ way ſerves only to give you freſh Occaſions to “ teſtify your Loyalty and your Zeal.

“ You have all the Reaſon in the World to make “ Men ſee this; for you have the ſame Monarchy “ to aſſert, the ſame Church to defend, the ſame “ Intereſts of Nobility and Gentry to maintain, the “ ſame excellent King to contend for, and the “ ſame Enemies to contend againſt.

And now, my Lords and Gentlemen,

“ Since the whole Seſſion of Parliament is, in “ the Judgment and Conſtruction of our Law, but “ as one Day, let us all endeavour that the Morning of it, the firſt Entrance upon it, may be with “ ſuch fair and ſuch auſpicious Circumſtances, as “ may give the whole Kingdom an Aſſurance of “ a bright and chearful Day.

“ Let

" Let no ill Humours gather into Clouds to darken or obſcure it; for this Day is a critical Day, and more depends upon that Judgment of our Affairs which will be made by it, than can eaſily be imagin'd.

" It imports us therefore to take care, that no part of this time be loſt. Let every precious Minute of this Day be ſpent in receiving ſuch Acts of Grace and Goodneſs as are ready to flow from the King, and in making ſuch Retributions for them as may become the grateful Hearts of the beſt of Subjects to the beſt of Kings.

" So ſhall this Day become a Day of Diſappointment and Diſcomfort to our Enemies; but to us and all good Men a glorious Day, a Day of Triumph and Deliverance; a memorable and a joyful Day to this preſent and to all future Generations.

Proceedings of the Commons.

The Commons in this Seſſion, had many good Bills before them for the Security of Property and of Religion, viz. The Habeas Corpus Bill. A Bill againſt ſending Men Priſoners beyond Sea. Againſt raiſing Money without Conſent in Parliament. Againſt Papiſts ſitting in either Houſe. For more ſpeedy Convicting of Papiſts. And for Recalling his Majeſty's Subjects out of the French Service. But before they could come to any Reſolutions, the late Controverſie was reaſſumed concerning the Lords Juriſdiction in Appeals from Chancery: On which occaſion the Commons voted, that whoſoever ſhall ſollicit or proſecute any appeal againſt any Commoner of England from any Court of Equity before the Houſe of Lords, ſhall be deemed and taken a Betrayer of the Rights and Liberties of the Commons of England, and ſhall be proceeded againſt accordingly[a]. And in their other Debates, the Majority ſeem'd to be much diſpoſed to a War with France, and a nearer Union with Spain and Holland: Upon which the King took this Occaſion to prorogue them to another time. And therefore on Monday Nov. 22. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords; and being with the uſual Solemnity ſeated on his Throne, he was pleaſed to ſend for the Houſe of Commons, who attending at the Bar, his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to give his Royal Aſſent to three Acts: viz.

Bills paſs'd and Parl. prorogu'd.

1. An Act for the better and more eaſy rebuilding the Town of Northampton. 2. An Act for the better enabling Mary Counteſs Dowager of Warwick to perform the laſt Will and Teſtament of her deceaſed Husband Charles late Earl of Warwick. 3. An Act for veſting Lands of Alexander Davies Gent. deceaſed in Truſtees for the Payment of his Debts.

The King willing to be Neuter.

It muſt be obſerved, that tho' his Majeſty was not willing to engage in a War with France, yet he thought it juſt and honourable to ſatisfy the Dutch, that he would be at leaſt a Neuter, and not aſſiſt the French King againſt them. And therefore he did by Proclamation, dated May 19. ſtrictly command the immediate Return of all his Majeſty's Subjects who had gone into the Service of the French King as Soldiers ſince the late Treaty of Peace with the States General of the United Provinces, and prohibiting all other his Subjects whatſoever, for the time to come, from going beyond the Seas to ſerve as Soldiers under the ſaid French King, or in his Wars.

Prince of Newburgh viſits the Engliſh Court.

At the beginning of this Year his Highneſs the Prince of Newburgh was pleaſed to pay a Viſit to England; and coming over in one of his Majeſty's Yachts, appointed to tranſport him from Calais, he arriv'd at Greenwich on Thurſday May 13. and immediately came to Town incognito, with a Train of about fifty Perſons, among which were ſeveral Perſons of Quality; on the 15th he was introduced at Court to ſalute their Majeſties, and afterward their Royal Highneſſes, by whom he was received with very particular Demonſtrations of Kindneſs and Eſteem, for the ſake of the Duke his Father. On Tueſday June 1. his Highneſs came to Oxford, and being there received in a very reſpectful manner, was created Doctor of Laws, and was very much pleaſed with the Civilities and the Curioſities of that Place.

Honours and Preferments.

The Collation of Offices and Honours in this Year was not very conſiderable. On March 31. his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed, in conſideration of the good and faithful Services of Thomas Povey Eſq; to cauſe him to be ſworn one of the Maſters of Requeſts, in the room of Sir Thomas Beverley deceaſed. On June 23. his Majeſty was pleaſed, in conſideration of the eminent Loyalty and Sufferings of Giles Strangwayes Eſq; to cauſe him to be ſworn of his moſt Honourable Privy Council, and accordingly he took his Place at the Board. On October 15. his Grace the Duke of Albemarle was ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council. On December 19. his Majeſty, as a particular Mark of his Grace and Favour to the Right Honourable Heneage Lord Finch, Baron of Daventry, was pleaſed to change his Title of Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England into that of Lord High Chancellor of England. On Jan. 19. his Majeſty conſidering the very good Services of Richard Bulſtrode, Eſq; as his Agent with the Governour of the Spaniſh Netherlands, has been pleaſed to appoint him his Reſident in that Court; and as a farther Mark of his Favour, this Day to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon him. On Jan. 22. his Majeſty was pleaſed to cauſe the Right Reverend Father in God Henry Lord Biſhop of London to be ſworn one of the Lords of his Privy Council, and accordingly his Lordſhip took his Place at the Board.

Actions at Sea.

There was a good Action perform'd this Winter by Sir John Narborough, Admiral of his Majeſty's Fleet in the Mediterranean, who being ſent chiefly to ſcour thoſe Seas from publick Pirates, burnt in the Port of Tripoly four Men of War belonging to the Corſairs, as he himſelf gave this Account in a Letter dated Jan. 20. near Maltha, and is as follows.

" Theſe are to let you know, that on the 14th inſtant, in the Night, I burnt four of the Tripoline Ships of War of conſiderable Force, viz. The white crown'd Eagle with 50 Guns, the Looking-Glaſs with 36, the Sancta Claria with 24, and the French Petach with 20, as they lay under the Caſtle and Walls of Tripoly, being all that were in Port. It was done by a Surprize by our Boats, commanded in chief by my Lieutenant Cloudſley Shovel; he took the Enemies Guard Boat, and in it one Turk and one Moor, the reſt having been kill'd. I bleſs God I did not loſe one Man in the Action; I am now off of Maltha, and am ſtanding over again for Tripoly, and doubt not, but by the help of God to deſtroy more of thoſe Corſairs. I have with me the Henrietta, Portſmouth, and two Fireſhips, which I met with

[a] See 1. the Earl of Shaftſbury's Speech in the Houſe of Lords upon the Debate of appointing a Day for the hearing Dr. Shirley's Cauſe the 20th of Octob. 1675, anſwering the Queries propoſed by the Lord Biſhop of Sarum, and charging upon the Biſhops the new Doctrine of Monarchy being of Divine Right. Printed at Amſterdam 1675, 4*to*.

2. The Duke of Buckingham's Speech in the Houſe of Lords upon a Motion for Leave to bring in a Bill for Indulgence to Proteſtant Diſſenters: Together with the Proteſtation and Reaſons of ſeveral Lords for the Diſſolution of this Parliament. *Enter'd in the Lords Journal the Day the Parliament was prorogu'd, Nov. 22. 1675. ib.

3. Two ſeaſonable Diſcourſes concerning this preſent Parliament, beginning with the Debate and Arguments for diſſolving the preſent Parliament, and the calling frequent and new Parliaments, as they were deliver'd in the Houſe of Lords Novemb. 20. 1675. Oxford, printed in the Year 1675. 4*to*.

4. A Letter from a Parliament-man to his Friend concerning the Proceedings of the Houſe of Commons this laſt Seſſions, begun the 13th of Octob. 1675. Printed in the Year 1675. 4*to*.

1675. 27 Car. II. " here. This I write in haſte, but by the next " will give you an Account at large. The Succeſs of this Action was, that on the 5th of March following Sir John Narborough concluded a Peace with the Government of Tripoly, in 23 Articles, much to the Honour of his Majeſty, and to the Advantage of our Kingdom in Trade and Navigation.

Prince of Orange not eaſily brought into a general Peace.

The Prince of Orange was made ſenſible that the great Deſign of my Lord Arlington's Negotiation with him was firſt to draw him into ſuch Meaſures of Peace as France then ſo much deſir'd, and ſecondly into the Diſcovery of Perſons in England, who had made Advances to the Prince or States of raiſing Commotions there during the War. Thirdly, into ſecret Meaſures with King Charles of aſſiſting him againſt any Rebels at home or Enemies abroad. And laſtly, into the Hopes or Deſigns of a Match with the Duke of York's eldeſt Daughter. But it is ſaid the Prince would not at all enter upon the firſt, was obſtinate in the ſecond, and treated the third Point with a wonder of thinking, That the King of England could be ſo ill belov'd, or ſo imprudent, as to need ſuch Aſſiſtance. And upon mention made of the laſt by the Earl of Oſſory, he took no farther hold of it than by ſaying, his Fortunes were not in a Condition for him to think of a Wife.

However, by the Advice of the Penſionary and Count Waldeck, he drew up this Scheme of a general Peace, That a Match ſhould be made between the King of Spain and the Duke of Orleans's eldeſt Daughter; that France ſhould give her in Dowry the late conquer'd Places in Flanders. That King Charles the ſecond ſhould make this Match, and upon theſe Terms. That he ſhould have 200000 l. for his good Offices in it. By this means a Peace would be made with Safety to Spain and Holland, by ſecuring again the Frontiers of Flanders with Honour to France, who parted with the Conquer'd Towns only as a Dowry to a Daughter of France, without any Blemiſh to the Prince's Honour, Faith to his Alliances, and with Honour and Profit to the King of England.

Conference between the Prince and Engliſh Miniſters.

The Engliſh Ambaſſador wrote two Letters to the King upon this Subject, but had no hopes given him that a Peace could be effected on ſuch Terms; but a little before the meeting of the Parliament in April, the King in a Letter to Sir William Temple at the Hague, took notice of ſome Advices given him, that the Prince intended to go over for England againſt the approaching Seſſions, and commanded him to hinder it, as if the King believ'd that the Prince had form'd a popular Deſign by ſuch a Journey. The Ambaſſador inform'd the Prince of it, yet pretended not to have had it from his Majeſty, but only that ſuch a thing had been whiſper'd to him. The Prince anſwer'd, The Lord Arlington had indeed talk'd of a Journey after the Peace ſhould be concluded; in the mean time he hop'd the King would not ſuſpect him guilty of any diſreſpectful Thought; he was his Majeſty's Servant, and if he could do him no Service, he would at leaſt do him no Hurt: But if the King would be otherwiſe poſſeſs'd, he could not help it; he had deſired the Ambaſſador to aſſure him there had been no ground for ſuch a Report. And yet about the ſame time the Prince receiv'd a Letter from my Lord Arlington, of which his Highneſs complain'd in a great Heat to Sir William Temple, and ſaid, It was impertinent, and that he therein mention'd the foreſaid imaginary Reſolution of his going over for England as a thing certain, and intended by him for raiſing Heats in the Parliament and Commotions in the Kingdom, and added it was like to prove but ill Friendſhip between him and the King, if it was to be made with Blows. And the Earl putting him in mind, that there were ſome old Wounds among them that would ſtill bleed if there were not care taken of them: The Prince ſaid, he knew well enough what was meant by that Expreſſion, for Arlington had told Monſieur Read in England, when he went over upon the firſt Motions of the laſt Peace, that the King could make the Prince to be ſerved in the ſame manner as De Wit was, if he would ſet himſelf about it: Hereupon he fell into great Rage againſt Arlington, calling this Proceeding malicious and inſolent, and ſaid, he would write to him what he deſerved, but never have any thing more to do with any of the King's Miniſters, he would write to the King himſelf, and deſired the Ambaſſador to convey his Letters ſo that they might come to no other Hand.

Campaign abroad.

The French this Summer began their Campaign with the Siege of Limburgh, with one part of their Army, while the French King with the reſt lay incamped in a Poſt moſt convenient to oppoſe any Attempt of relieving it. The Prince of Orange was upon his march for that purpoſe; but the Place after a ſhort and weak Reſiſtance was taken before he could approach it. After this ſurrendry of Limburgh the French King encamp'd near Tillemont, and ravag'd all the Country near Louvain, Bruſſels and Malines, and he had a mighty deſire to make himſelf Maſter of the firſt of theſe Places; but the Prince and the Duke of Villa-Hermoſa watch'd him all along ſo narrowly that he durſt not undertake it, ſo that about the end of July growing weary of a dull Campaign, the King left the Command of the Army to the Prince of Conde and return'd to Verſailles. The French having now receiv'd a ſevere Blow by the death of the great Mareſchal Turenne upon the Rhine, the Prince of Conde was ſent thither to Command the Army, and the Duke of Luxemburgh took his Poſt in Flanders, but with Orders not to hazard a Battel, but only to obſerve the Prince of Orange's Motions, and to cover any Town that was like to be endanger'd, which he performed ſo well, that no farther Action paſſed this Summer beſides the Prince's taking and raſing Binch, and that his Highneſs had this farther Advantage of the Duke, that he hinder'd him from ravaging the Territories of Treves, and diſturbing the Confederates in the Siege of that Place, which was at laſt ſurrender'd to them. The Prince at this time being put in mind of the Apprehenſions the King and States might have of the greatneſs of the Houſe of Auſtria, if their Succeſs continued, he ſaid, There was no need of that till they ſhould go beyond the Peace of the Pyrenees, when ever that ſhould happen, he ſhould be as much a French-Man as he was now a Spaniard, but not before. Then he cloſed the Diſcourſe in deſiring, that whatever Plan his Majeſty thought fit to propoſe for a Peace, he would do it at the Congreſs at Nimeguen, the place appointed for the Treaty, for the number and variety of Pretenſions and Intereſts were grown ſo great, by all the Parties then engaged in the War, that it could not be in any other place; that he believed they would be reaſonable, and in caſe France would be ſo too the Peace might be made; if not, perhaps another Campaign might bring them to Reaſon.

Treaty at Nimeguen.

Upon this juncture his Majeſty ſent over the Lord John Berkley his Ambaſſador extraordinary to Paris, who arriving there December 6. after an Audience of the French King, was to begin his Journey for Nimeguen, the place appointed for the general Treaty, whither Sir William Temple, Ambaſſador at the Hague was to repair, together with Sir Leoline Jenkins Judge of his Majeſty's High Court of Admiralty, who took leave of his Majeſty in order to his departure December 13.

Popular Diſcontents.

The People of England were ſo impatient for a Peace, and ſo jealous of the growth of Popery and the French Power, that they took the liberty of reflecting on the King and his Miniſtry to ſuch a high Degree, that it was thought fit to put down all Coffee-Houſes by Proclamation, order'd in Council December 29. " Becauſe in ſuch Houſes, and by " occaſion of the meeting of diſaffected Perſons in " them, divers falſe, malicious and ſcandalous Re- " ports were deviſed and ſpread abroad, to the De- " famation of his Majeſty's Government, and to the

" diſturbance

1675. 27 Car. II.

"diſturbance of the Quiet and Peace of the Realm. And on Jan. 7. another Proclamation was publiſh'd for diſcovering and puniſhing "Malicious and Diſ-"affected Perſons who did daily deviſe and publiſh "as well by writing as printing ſundry falſe, infa-"mous and ſcandalous Libels, endeavouring there-"by not only to traduce and reproach the Eccleſi-"aſtical and Temporal Government of this King-"dom, and the publick Miniſters of the ſame, but "alſo to ſtir up and diſpoſe the Minds of his Maje-"ſty's Subjects to Sedition and Rebellion. But upon Petition of the Merchants and Retailers of Coffee and Tea, a permiſſion was granted to keep open their Coffee-Houſes to June 24. next, provided that every Keeper of ſuch Houſe ſhould uſe his utmoſt endeavour to prevent and hinder all ſcandalous Papers, Books or Libels, concerning the Government or the publick Miniſters thereof, from being brought into his Houſe, or to be there read, peruſ'd, or divulged; and to prevent and hinder all and every Perſon or Perſons from declaring, uttering, and divulging in his ſaid Houſe all manner of falſe or ſcandalous Reports of the Government, or any the Miniſters thereof.

1675. State of Religion.

As to Religion it is very manifeſt, that the Papiſts had a mighty Influence on publick Affairs, and were afraid of nothing but an Engliſh Parliament, and flatter'd themſelves that they had gained over Members enough to carry on the Intereſt and Deſigns of the Duke of York and that Party [a]. Mr. Coleman in a Letter to the Internuncio dated at Windſor Aug. 30. 1675. does applaud the "clear "and evident Mark of the Pope's Affection towards "the Catholicks of England, and then ſaith, "That "the Duke hath almoſt ſurmounted all the Diffi-"culties which have oppoſed his Eſtabliſhment. "The Face of his Affairs are well changed, for we "now paſſionately wiſh to ſee the coming on of the "Parliament which we ſo much feared before: "And while it was held doubtful whether it ought "to meet or no, we employ'd all our Power to "bring it on; which point we have gained but "within theſe few Days. And for my part, I no "ways doubt but that we ſhall receive as much "good by it as we apprehended ill, provided that "the Duke fail not in the execution of the good "Reſolutions which he hath taken. And by many other Papers and Letters dated this Year, it does abundantly appear that a vigorous Deſign was carried on to extirpate the Northern Hereſie. And even during the ſecond Seſſion of Parliament, the Papiſts in London were ſo inſolent that they ſet upon Monſieur Luzancy, a late Convert from Popery, and offer'd extream Indignity and Violence to him, with ſo great Scandal that on Nov. 10. his Majeſty in Council order'd a Proclamation to be publiſhed, for the Diſcovery and Apprehenſion of a French Jeſuit, ſtyling himſelf Monſieur St. Germain, and his Accomplices, in the late Violence offer'd to Monſieur Luzancy alias Chaſtelet, declaring, "That whereas it "had appeared to his Majeſty upon Oath, that the "ſaid Monſieur Luzancy being lately converted from "the Romiſh to the Proteſtant Religion eſtabliſh'd "in the Church of England; and having in a late "Sermon by him preach'd and publiſh'd expreſſed "the Cauſes and Reaſons of his Converſion, the "ſaid Monſieur St. Germain, with other Perſons "unknown, did in a moſt preſumptuous and inſo-"lent manner repair to the Lodging of the ſaid "Monſieur Luzancy, and did there by Threats and "Terrors of Aſſaſſinating the ſaid Monſieur Luzan-"cy, or of carrying him away by Force into Parts "beyond the Seas, induce and compel the ſaid "Monſieur Luzancy to tranſcribe and ſign a pre-"tended Retraction of what he had ſo preached "and publiſhed; his Majeſty being highly ſenſible "of this tranſcendent boldneſs, and to prevent the "like inſolent Attempts, and all other Violences "that may be offer'd to the ſaid Monſieur Luzancy, "upon account of his Converſion to the Proteſtant "Religion, and to encourage him to perſevere in "the ſame, hath taken him in a more eſpecial man-"ner into his Royal Protection, &c. But the Au-"thor of this Inſolence, Father St. Germain eſcap'd, "and took a proper Refuge in France, where he "wrote a Letter from Paris, dated December 11. "1675. to Mr. Coleman, and tells him a Friend had "given the King's Confeſſor to underſtand, that the "King of France ought not to do any thing with the King "of England but by the Duke of York, and he had pro-"miſed and engaged upon his Life to the King's Confeſſor "to make all ſucceed in caſe that way be made uſe of. And in another Letter directed to Coleman in January, it is ſaid, "Monſieur [b] St. Germain has obſerv'd "to the Confeſſor of the King of France, how "great the Power of the Duke of York is, by the "diſgrace of the two Perſons concerning which "Mr. Coleman had writ to Monſieur St. Germain, "and that the vigorous Counſels which were all "abſolutely neceſſary, whereby to ſucceed in the "Traffick of the Catholicks, came from the Duke "of York, by the inſpiration of Mr. Coleman, who "alſo alone was the moſt truly link'd to the Wel-"fare of the Commerce of the King of England, "the Duke of York and the Catholicks.

Coleman's Letter.

Inſolence of the Papiſts.

Under theſe juſt Apprehenſions of Popery, raiſed

[a] See 1. An Account of the Cardinal's Cap ſent to Father Philip Howard, then at Antwerp; of his Journey toward Rome, his Entry, and the Expectation of the Engliſh Catholicks upon it; his taking Mr. Leyburn, Preſident of Doway, to be his Secretary, &c. Wood Athen. Oxon. 1. Col. 238. Hiſt. of the Engl. Coll. at Doway, 1713. 8*vo.*

2. Several Letters written by Father Sheldon, directed to Mr. Coleman, to promote the Cauſe of the Catholicks in England, dated May 22. June 1. June 8, &c. 1675.

3. A Letter from the Pope's Internuncio to Mr. Coleman, ſhewing the Affection which his Holineſs doth bear unto the Concerns of England, dated June 3. 1675. Subſcribed Albany. Collect. of Letters, publiſh'd by Order of the Houſe of Commons, 1681. Fol.

4. A Reply to a Perſon of Honour's pretended Anſwer to the Vindication of the Proteſtant Religion in the Point of Obedience to Sovereigns, and to the Book of Papal Tyranny. By Peter du Moulin, D. D. London, 1675. 4*to.*

5. The Burnt Child dreads the Fire. Or an Examination of the Merits of the Papiſts, relating to England; in Juſtification of the late Act of Parliament for preventing Dangers which may happen from Popiſh Recuſants. By William Denton, M. D. London, 1675. 4*to.*

6. Two Recantation Sermons, preached at the French Church in the Savoy by two converted Romaniſts, Monſieur de la Motte, late Preacher of the Order of the Carmelites, and Monſieur de Luzancy, late Preacher in France, Licentiate in Divinity. London, 1675. 4*to.*

[b] See 1. A Letter from Mr. Coleman to Father le Chaiſe, dated Sept. 29. 1675. 2. Another from Mr. Coleman to the ſame Jeſuite, upon the ſame Subject of ſoliciting the Intereſts of Popery in England. 3. A Letter from Father le Chaiſe, acknowledging the Receipt of Mr. Coleman's long Letter. 4. A Letter from the Pope's Internuncio to Mr. Coleman, rejoicing for the good Condition in which the Affairs of the Duke and the Catholicks in England are at preſent, dated, Rome Octob. 19, 1675. 5. Several Letters written by Cardinal Norfolk, i. e. Howard to Mr. Coleman, to propagate the Catholick Cauſe and the Intereſts of the Duke of York in England, from Jan. 4. to March 14. 167$\frac{5}{6}$; and eſpecially one Letter of the Cardinal, dated March 1. 1676. delivering the Judgment of that Court about the State of Affairs in England, that the Diviſion of Catholicks will be the eaſieſt way for Proteſtants to deſtroy them; which Dr. Lloyd underſtood right to be meant in the Reverſe of making Diviſions among Proteſtants for the Catholicks to deſtroy them with greater Eaſe. Pref. to a Sermon before the Lords, 1680. 4*to.* and eſpecially a Letter of the Duke of York to Father la Chaiſe, which was known to be genuine, beginning, The ſecond of June laſt paſt his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty offered me moſt generouſly his Friendſhip, and the uſe of his Purſe, to aſſiſt againſt the Deſigns of my Enemies and his, and proteſted unto me that his Intereſt and mine were ſo clearly link'd together, that thoſe that oppoſed the one, ſhould be look'd upon as Enemies to the other; and told me, moreover, his Opinion of my Lord Arlington and the Parliament, which is, that he is of Opinion, that neither the one nor the other is in his Intereſt or mine: And thereupon he deſires me to make ſuch Propoſitions as I ſhould think fit in this Conjuncture, &c.

1676. 28 Car. II.

by the Countenance and Protection of the Duke of York, it was the greater Comfort and Joy to obſerve that his Royal Highneſs could have no Influence upon the young Princeſſes his Daughters. The Lady Mary and the Lady Anne were ſtrictly bred up in the Principles of the Church of England, and were on Jan. 23. ſolemnly confirmed in his Majeſty's Chapel at Whitehall by the Biſhop, who was Dean of the ſaid Chapel.

Eccleſiaſtical Preferments.

The Biſhoprick of Worceſter being void by the death of the late Reverend Father in God Dr. Blandford, and his Majeſty having been pleaſed to confer the ſame on the Reverend Dr. James Fleetwood Provoſt of King's College in Cambridge, on Sunday the 29th of Auguſt his Lordſhip Elect was conſecrated in St. Peter's Church in Broad-Street, London, by the Right Reverend Father in God John Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, his Grace of Canterbury's Commiſſioner for that purpoſe, being aſſiſted by the Biſhops of Ely, Chicheſter and Lincoln. And after the performance of the Solemnity, their Lordſhips, with many of the Nobility, and other Perſons of Quality, were entertain'd at a very noble Dinner at Draper's-Hall. His Majeſty was pleaſed upon the death of Dr. Henchman to tranſlate the Right Reverend Father in God Dr. Compton late Biſhop of Oxford, and Dean of his Majeſty's Chapel to the See of London, and to promote the Reverend Dr. Fell Dean of Chriſt-Church to the Biſhoprick of Oxon; who having been accordingly elected Biſhop of that See, was on Feb. 6. Conſecrated by the Right Reverend Father in God the Biſhop of Wincheſter, his Grace of Canterbury's Commiſſioner for that purpoſe, in his Lordſhip's Chapel at Chelſey, being aſſiſted by the Biſhops of London, Rocheſter, Ely, Chicheſter and Worceſter; and after the performance of the Solemnity, their Lordſhips, with many of the Nobility and other Perſons of Quality, were entertained at a noble Dinner.

Caſe of the Diſſenters.

The Diſſenters had now ſome Advantage of improving in popular Reputation, by being generally averſe to the Meaſures conducing to Popery and the Grandeur of France, and by falling in with thoſe Patriots in both Houſes who ſeem'd moſt zealous in the Love and Service of their Country. And yet their own Hiſtory has little to boaſt of but the Proſecution of ſome of their Teachers, and a Story of Judgments upon ſome of the Informers: To which they add, that about this time (meaning Summer 1675.) twelve or thirteen of the Biſhops dining with that eminent Citizen Sir Nathaniel Hern, then Sheriff of London, and diſcourſing with him about putting the Laws againſt the Diſſenters in execution; he told them, that they could not Trade with their Neighbours one Day, and ſend them to Goal the next. In the next Seſſion of Parliament the Duke of Buckingham made a notable Speech againſt Perſecution, and deſir'd the conſent of the Lords that he might bring in a Bill for the Eaſe of his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, in matters of Religion; but while he was preparing it, the Parliament was prorogu'd.

1676. The King labours to be Neuter between France and Holland.

The King having unwillingly made a Peace with Holland, and being in a Neutrality with other Princes, had nothing to do but to keep the Peace at home, and to ſecure a free Trade abroad. But the Dutch ſuſpected, that he ſecretly gave aſſiſtance to the French; and the French Court pretended that ſome Engliſh Ships were retained in the Service of Holland. Hence upon Complaints made to his Majeſty by the Miniſters of ſeveral Princes now in Amity with his Majeſty, that divers of his Subjects had lately taken Commiſſions from ſome Princes and States now in Amity with his Majeſty to ſerve at Sea againſt others, who are likewiſe his Majeſties Allies; his Majeſty for the Preſervation and Continuance of Friendſhip and Amity between him and his reſpective Allies, did by Royal Proclamation given at Whitehall 17 May, Strictly prohibit and forbid all his Subjects whatſoever to take any Commiſſion at Sea from any Foreign Prince or State, againſt any other Foreign Prince or State now in Amity with his Majeſty, or to ſerve as Mariners or Seamen in any Ship or Veſſel which ſhall be employed againſt any Prince or State now in Amity with his Majeſty during the War. And upon farther Complaints from Abroad, that Acts of Hoſtility at Sea were ſuffered to be committed under the Protection of Engliſh Coaſts and Ports; his Majeſty was pleaſed to cauſe another Royal Proclamation to be publiſh'd June 2. by which his Majeſty declared, That finding the Security of Navigation and Commerce to and from his Majeſty's Ports (in this time of War) hath been very much diſturbed, and that even the Reverence due to his Ports hath been violated, his Will and Pleaſure is, that theſe following Rules and Ordinances be obſerved.

I. That within his Majeſty's Ports, Havens and Crooks, and the Precincts thereof, no Hoſtilities ſhall be committed by any of the Parties whatſoever, but that all Ships during their being in the ſaid Ports, &c. ſhall be under his Majeſty's ſpecial Protection; that the Ships and Goods of all Aggreſſors or Offenders herein ſhall be ipſo facto Confiſcate, notwithſtanding any Commiſſion of War they may have.

II. That all his Majeſty's Officers and Subjects do as far as in them lies, prohibit the roving of Men of War ſo near his Majeſty's Ports or Coaſts, as may give apprehenſion to the Merchant-Men that their Paſſage is unſafe, or may hinder the Commerce of his Subjects. That all his Majeſty's Officers do ſuccour and reſcue all Merchant-Men and others, as ſhall be attack'd upon his Majeſty's Coaſts, and to apprehend and ſeize the Offenders, in order to bring them to condign Puniſhment.——With five other Rules and Orders to inforce the like general Intention of Neutrality and equal Protection.

Inſolence of the Fr. Privateers.

In the mean time while his Majeſty did ſo generouſly protect the French Shipping, our own Veſſels could not be protected from the Injuſtice and Inſolence of the French Privateers, who ſwarmed in the Chanel, and pick'd up many of our Merchant-Men, and (as if in open War) made Prizes of them. And upon Complaint of this Grievance in the French Court, the Method of Redreſs was a greater Oppreſſion only: For Sir Ellis Leighton Secretary to the Lord Berkley, Ambaſſador in the Court of France, being appointed to ſollicit in that Court the Reſtitution of Engliſh Ships and their Ladings, taken by French Privateers, did behave himſelf corruptly in that Negotiation, by [a] bare-fac'd contracting for, and receiving Bribes in the Proſecution of the Merchants Affairs, and ſometimes making corrupt Agreements with the French Privateers to deſiſt from and relinquiſh all farther Sollicitation of the Intereſts of his Majeſty's Subjects, and to the great detriment and loſs of the Merchants concerned; as was made appear to his Majeſty in Council; for which Offence he was committed to the Cuſtody of one of the Meſſengers of his Majeſty's Chamber, in order to be carried Priſoner to the Tower of London, that he might be proſecuted and brought to condign Puniſhment, but being conſcious of [a] There was a general Suſpicion that there was ſtill a private League between King Charles and the French King; and the true End of it was to ſettle Popery in England. This ſecret Alliance was known in the Court of Rome, where the Writer of a Preface to the Life of Cardinal Barberini, printed at Venice in 1677, boaſteth thus.——We have no reaſon to doubt but Almighty God is on his way to rebuild his Church in thoſe very Places where that Monſter Hereſy is rampant. What may we not hope for from the Zeal of the preſent Catholick Princes of Chriſtendom, and particularly from his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, whoſe great Soul is beſt capable to venture upon that Hydra? The ſtrict Friendſhip between him and his Britannick Majeſty, with that King's mild Inclinations and Conduct towards his Catholick Subjects, join'd to his Brother the Duke of York's fervent Zeal to Religion, gives us the pleaſant Proſpect of better Days, even in that once bleſſed Iſland.

his

1676. 28Car.II. his own Guilt, he made his eſcape from the Meſſenger, and fled from Juſtice.

Petition of the Committee for Trade.

Under theſe Indignities and Loſſes, the Lords of the Committee of Trade, by repeated Petitions from the Merchants and Seamen, found themſelves obliged to preſent unto his Majeſty in Council at Whitehall Aug. 4. a Report touching the Injuries which his Subjects did ſuſtain by the French Capers; with a Liſt of ſuch Engliſh Ships as had been ſeiz'd by the French Privateers ſince December 1673. to the number of fifty three; concluding thus, Wherefore conſidering that the Root of all this Diſorder ariſes from the Violence and Rapine of the French Capers, who ought to be looked on as Diſturbers of the publick Quiet, and Enemies to the good Friendſhip between the two Crowns; we are humbly of Opinion, that your Majeſty has juſt occaſion, from the Injuries paſt, and thoſe which are now depending, and which do every Day increaſe, to make a very ſerious Repreſentation of all unto his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty; and not only preſs for ſome better Method of repairing the Grievances mentioned, but earneſtly to inſiſt on the calling in of all Privateers: Or elſe your Majeſty muſt do Right, and give Defence to your Subjects, from all the Inſolencies which they ſo frequently meet. Signed Finch C. Angleſey, Bath, Bridgwater, Craven, H. Coventry, J. Ernle, G. Cartret, Robert Southwell.

To which this Anſwer in Council was given.

K.'s Anſwer.

"HIS Majeſty taking into his ſerious Conſi-"deration the daily Complaints of his Sub-"jects, and having a great Senſe and Reſentment "of their ill uſage, hath thought fit to approve "the ſaid Report, and is therefore graciouſly plea-"ſed to order, as it is hereby ordered accordingly; "That the Right Honourable Mr. Secretary Co-"ventry do immediately tranſmit to his Majeſty's "Ambaſſador at Paris a Copy thereof, that ſo the "evil and the unhappy ſtate of theſe things may be "made known in that Court, and the Remedies "preſſed for in his Majeſty's Name which are pro-"poſed by the ſaid Report. And Maſter Secreta-"ry is alſo to attend the French Ambaſſador here "with the ſame Repreſentation, and to expoſtulate "upon all theſe Hardſhips, and the little Remedy "given to his Majeſty's Subjects, either on the "Merits of their Cauſes, or the Recommendations "of them by his Majeſty; that ſo his Excellency "being made ſenſible of his Majeſty's Diſpleaſure "herein, and the reaſonable Diſcontent of his Sub-"jects, there may be by his Care ſuch lively Im-"preſſions hereof fixed with the King his Maſter, "and the Miniſters of France, as may redreſs the "Evils that are complained of, and obtain the juſt "Remedies which are propoſed.

The People long for a fitting Parliament.

Yet no other Satisfaction could be obtained than by doing Juſtice to ourſelves by a Repriſal on ſeveral of their Privateers; and this only Method did by no means repair the Loſſes of private Men; it ſeem'd only a ſort of Vindication of the publick Honour. Theſe Inſolencies of the French had however this good effect, that they made the People of England more and more impatient for a fitting Parliament, as hoping and believing that this inſufferable Grievance would be then effectually redreſs'd by a Reparation of their Damages, or at leaſt by an open War. And the long interval of Seſſions began ſo much to open the Eyes and the Mouths of the City and Country, that on Decemb. 23. 1676. his Majeſty thought fit to quiet his loving Subjects by the Proſpect of a fitting Parliament, and by Proclamation to declare, that having been pleaſed to continue this preſent Parliament by Prorogation until the 15th Day of February now next coming, he had a full Purpoſe and Reſolution that the Parliament ſhould be then holden; and he was deſirous, for divers weighty Conſiderations, to have then a full Aſſembly of the Members of both Houſes.

1676. 28Car.II.

The Meeting of it.

Accordingly, on Thurſday Feb. 15. 167$\frac{6}{7}$. the two Houſes of Parliament met at Weſtminſter; and his Majeſty being ſolemnly ſeated in his Throne, ſent for the Houſe of Commons; who attended his Majeſty at the Bar of the Lords Houſe: His Majeſty made a moſt gracious Speech to the two Houſes on the Subject of their Meeting; which done, the Lord Chancellor farther moſt eloquently declar'd his Majeſty's Mind to them on this Occaſion.

Proceedings of the two Houſes.

Upon which the Commons returned to their own Houſe, and enter'd upon the Debate of ſeveral Matters. The general Diſpoſition of the Houſe was to a War with France, or to ſtricter Alliances at leaſt for preventing the Progreſs of the French Conqueſts made in Flanders and on the Rhine. And therefore ſoon after their Meeting they addreſs'd the King, ſetting forth, "That his People were much diſ-"quieted with the manifeſt Danger ariſing to theſe "Kingdoms, by the Growth and Power of the "French King, by his Acquiſitions in the Spaniſh "Netherlands, in the Preſervation whereof, they "humbly conceive, the Intereſt of his Majeſty and "the Safety of his People are highly concern'd, and "therefore beſeech the King to take it into his "Care, and ſtrengthen himſelf with ſtricter Allian-"ces. To which the King anſwer'd, "That he "was of the ſame Opinion with both Houſes, and "that he will uſe all means for the Preſervation of "Flanders, that can conſiſt with the Peace and "Safety of the Kingdom.

Addreſs againſt the French.

A Queſtion in Parl. about their legal Being.

But that which moſt interrupted the Proceedings in both Houſes, was an important Queſtion, Whether they were any longer a legal Body? and, Whether their long Prorogation were not, in its true effect, a Diſſolution of them? [a] This Conteſt was higheſt in the Houſe of Lords, where the Duke of Buckingham ſtood up firſt, and argu'd with great appearance of Reaſon, and with greater Wit, That according to the Law and Conſtitution of Parliaments, an unprecedented Prorogation was null, and conſequently the Parliament was in truth Diſſolved; offering to maintain it to the Face of all the Judges, and deſiring (as is uſual in ſuch caſes) that they might give their Opinion in it: But this Motion reliſh'd ſo ill with the Lords that were in the Miniſtry, that one of them moved that the Duke, for that Speech, might be called to the Bar. The Earl of Shaftsbury oppoſed this Motion, as improper and extravagant; and did with Courage and ſharpneſs of Application, ſecond and enforce the Duke of Buckingham's Argument; and the Earl of Saliſbury and the Ld. Wharton fell in boldly on the ſame ſide: But the majority were ſo warm upon them, that they were all ſent Priſoners to the Tower for Contempt of the Authority and Being of the preſent Parliament, and were to remain there during his Majeſty's and the Houſe's Pleaſure.

Lords ſent to the Tower.

The ſame Matter was debated in the Houſe of Commons, and there too the majority [a] reſolved not to be diſſolved; yet they committed none of their Members for arguing the contrary. It was indeed no wonder that both Houſes ſhould agree in their own Preſervation and Continuance; for the great Lords in the Miniſtry could not bear to think of parting with a Parliament which they had been at a prodigious Expence to keep in a giving Humour; and they had indeed managed them ſo well, that they had given the King more Money than ever had been granted in a Parliamentary way

[a] See an Account of the Proceedings in this Seſſion of Parliament, Feb. 15, 167$\frac{6}{7}$. with the two Bills of Religion that paſs'd the Upper Houſe. 1. An Act for ſecuring the Proteſtant Religion, by educating the Children of the Royal Family, and providing for the Continuance of a Proteſtant Clergy. 2. An Act for the more effectual Conviction of Popiſh Recuſants. In Growth of Popery. 4to. p. 70.

1676. 28 Car. II.

to all the Kings of England from William the Norman to the Union of the two Kingdoms: And the major part of the Commons had as good reaſon to deſire to keep their Places in the Houſe, which by Offices or Penſions were ſo beneficial to them, and which indeed had coſt them a dear Purchaſe; for upon the death of any of the old Members, few or none had been choſen to ſucceed them without a prodigious Expence; which muſt have been as great a Folly in them as it was a Shame to the Nation, if they had not known how by their Votes and Engagements to reimburſe themſelves. The Duke of Buckingham, the Earl of Saliſbury and the Lord Wharton, Petition'd the King, and were diſcharg'd; but the Lord Shaftsbury was kept thirteen Months in Priſon; and for not complying with a formal Recantation of his Speech, all his Petitions were rejected; when finding it in vain to apply longer to his Majeſty, he had recourſe to the King's Bench, whither he was brought by a Habeas Corpus on the 27th of January next enſuing, where Mr. Williams, Mr. Wallop, and Mr. Smith, his Council, argued that the Court ought to relieve him; and the Earl ſpoke himſelf with great Reaſon and Eloquence for the Liberty of the Subject and his own Diſcharge; yet the Judges deny'd him Redreſs, one of them declaring before the Cauſe was heard, That the Court could not help him; and being abſent when it came to a Hearing, deputed Judge Jones to ſpeak for him, that the Bench might be unanimous. So the Earl was remanded to Priſon, and ſtaid there till another Seſſion of Parliament, when his Application to an inferior Court was voted a Breach of Privilege by the Lords, for which the Earl was to anſwer his Contempt at the Bar of the Houſe. On the 22d of February he was accordingly brought to the Bar, where he offer'd to acknowledge his aſſerting the Diſſolution of the Parliament to be an unadviſed Action, and to beg their Lordſhip's Pardon for his Offence in bringing his Habeas Corpus. The Lord Treaſurer produced a Paper which one Blaney had deliver'd him, pretending to give Information of ſome Words ſpoken by the Lord Shaftsbury in the Court of King's Bench; yet Blaney being call'd into the Houſe, could not affirm that what was written in that Paper was really ſpoken by the Earl: Upon which the Lord Treaſurer drop'd the Matter, and the Houſe proceeded to a Reſolution, That the Lord Shaftsbury ſhould make his Submiſſion and Acknowledgement in a Form preſcribed by that Houſe. And accordingly a Declaration was prepared much to the ſame effect with what the Earl himſelf had before offer'd. The Lord Chancellor read the Words to him, and the Lord Shaftsbury kneeling repeated them at the Bar, and then withdrew. So the Houſe order'd the Lords with white Staffs to acquaint his Majeſty, that they had receiv'd Satisfaction from the Earl of Shaftsbury in the matter of the Habeas Corpus, and the other Contempt, and prayed him to diſcharge the Earl from his Confinement; which was done.

Earl of Shaftsbury kept Priſoner in the Tower.

Submits, and is diſcharg'd.

Honours and Preferments.

In Places and Honours there was no conſiderable alteration. On April 26. the Lord Biſhop of Durham was ſworn one of the Lord's of his Majeſty's Privy Council. The Honour of Knighthood was conferr'd (as had been of late uſual) on the two Sheriffs of London and Middleſex, Sir John Peak and Sir Thomas Stamp. And on October 28 their Majeſties accompanied by their Royal Highneſſes, and the Lady Mary and the Lady Anne, and attended by many of the principal Nobility and other Perſons of Quality, were pleaſed to accept of an humble Invitation from the City, and to Honour the new Lord Mayor, Sir Thomas Davis, with their Preſence, firſt at the Show in Cheapſide, and afterwards in the Guild-Hall at Dinner, where the Entertainment was great and magnificent in all kinds, very much to the Satisfaction of their Majeſties and the whole Court. On February 21. Sir Thomas Doleman, Knight, was ſworn one of the Clerks of his Majeſty's moſt honourable Privy Council in the room of Sir Edward Walker.

Progreſs of the Treaty at Nimeguen.

The Treaty of Nimeguen went on very ſlowly; Sir William Temple and Sir Leoline Jenkins, the two Engliſh Mediators, arrived at the Place in July, but they found there only two of the Parties concern'd, viz. the French and Dutch Plenipotentiaries. The former of which were exceeding eager to ſet the Negotiation on foot, and betray'd their Deſign of procuring a ſeparate Peace if poſſible with Holland; for which they had made their Application both to the Prince of Orange and to Penſionary Fagel, tho' with little hopes of Succeſs[a]. The other Allies took as many occaſions as they could of delaying the Diſpatch of their Miniſters to the Congreſs, that they might ſee the Effect of this Campaign, that they might then be the better able to take their Meaſures for the Conditions of a general Peace. Hence, about the end of September, the French Ambaſſadors gave the Mediators notice that their Maſter having made ſo many Advances towards a Peace, but having been ſo ill ſeconded by the Proceedings of the Confederates, and obſerving their ſlowneſs in coming to the Treaty, he was reſolved to recal his Ambaſſadors, unleſs the Allies ſhould ſend their reſpective Miniſters to the place of Treaty within the ſpace of one Month; tho', after all, the Count Kinkski, the ſecond Perſon in the Imperial Embaſſy, whether through real Indiſpoſition, or under pretence thereof is uncertain, ſtaid at Cologne till the New-Year began, and neither of his Collegues came in many Months after, without one of which, to wit, the Biſhop of Gurck, the firſt in Commiſſion, Count Kinkski, had no Power to agree on any thing farther than Preliminaries.

Campaign abroad.

In the mean time the Campaign began with ſufficient Glory to the French, for before the middle of April the Mareſchal Crequi inveſted the Town of Conde with 16000 Men. This haſten'd the Prince of Orange's March from Roſendale to join the Spaniſh General, the Duke De Villa-Hermoſa, which he did at Cambron on April 26. but the French King, and his Brother the Duke of Orleans, with a Reinforcement of 10000 Men, came before Conde, and order'd the Town to be ſo furiouſly batter'd and ſtorm'd on every Side, that the Garriſon was forc'd to ſurrender at Diſcretion, tho' the Prince of Orange was march'd as far as Granville, in order to relieve them. After this the French ſat down before Bouchain, a ſmall ſtrong Town between Cambray and Valenciennes, and keeping the Communication between thoſe two Places, which in a ſhort time was likewiſe ſurrender'd to them; and then the French King, who had made a ſhew of commanding his Army in Perſon, in the beginning of June return'd to Paris, leaving the Command of his Army in the Netherlands to the famous Mareſchal Schomberg.

Siege of Maeſtricht.

The Prince of Orange having inveſted Maeſtricht, reſolved about the End of July to lay a formal Siege to it, it being the only Town of the Dutch Provinces remaining in the French Hands, and fortified by them with all the Advantages of Art and Expence, having a Gariſon of 8000 choſen Men under a daring Commander Monſieur Calvo: This Siege was carried on with great Bravery, and many deſperate Aſſaults. About the middle of Auguſt, as the Prince of Orange expoſing himſelf upon all occaſions, receiv'd a Muſket ſhot in his Arm, at which,

[a] Dr. Cary, a Commoner, was brought to the Bar of the Lords, and queſtion'd concerning a written Book, which he had carried to be printed, treating of the Illegality of the laſt Prorogation; and becauſe he ſatiſfied them not in ſome Interrogatories, they fin'd him one thouſand Pounds, and committed him to the Tower.

1676. 28 Car. II.

which, perceiving that thoſe who were about him were daunted, he immediately pull'd off his Hat with that Arm that was hurt, and waved it about his Head [a], to ſhew the Wound was but in the Fleſh, and the Bone ſafe; at which they all revived, and the Prince went on without Interruption in all the Paces of the Siege; but there were two principal Reaſons why the Prince could not maſter the Place; for firſt, the River was grown ſo ſhallow, that he was forc'd to ſtay ſome Days for his heavy Artillery from Ruremond for want of Water; then the Forces which he expected from the Biſhop of Munſter and Princes of Lunenburgh, never came to his Aſſiſtance; to which if we add, that a cruel Sickneſs fell into his Army, which weaken'd it more than all the Aſſaults they had made upon the Town; it's no wonder it could not be carried, for this not only gave Monſieur Schomberg an opportunity to beſiege and take Aire, but Encouragement to march even thro' the Heart of the Spaniſh Low-Countries, to the Relief of Maeſtricht: Upon whoſe Approach it was agreed in a Council of War, that the Siege ſhould be raiſed, with which the Campaign ended in the Dutch and Spaniſh Provinces.

The Prince of Orange againſt a ſeparate Peace.

The Campaign being over, all Parties began to turn their Thoughts towards the Motions of the Treaty of Peace, and the Prince of Orange not at all ſatisfied with the dilatory Conduct of the Emperor and German Princes, and the King of Spain, was by Penſionary Fagel adviſed of the Neceſſity of making a ſeparate Peace, if no other could be obtain'd. Sir William Temple had ſeveral Conferences with the Prince upon this Subject, and told him one Day, that Penſionary Fagel, in a Diſcourſe with him, was of opinion that nothing elſe could be done but to make a ſeparate Peace, and that he knew not a Man in Holland who was not of his Mind. [b] The Prince here interrupting him, ſaid, “Yes, I am ſure “I know one, and that is my ſelf, and I'll hinder “it as long as I can; but if any thing ſhould hap-“pen to me, I know it would be done in two “Days. Then the Ambaſſador ask'd him, whether he was of the Penſionary's Mind as to what he thought likely to happen the next Campaign? He ſaid, “The Appearances were ill, but that “Campaigns did not always end as they began, “that Accidents might happen which no Man “could foreſee, and that if they came to one fair “Battle, none could anſwer for the Event; that “the King of England might make the Peace, if “he pleaſed, before it began; but if we were ſo “indifferent as to let that Seaſon paſs, for his part, “he was obliged to go on and take his Fortune: “That he had that very Morning ſeen a poor old “Man tugging alone in a little Boat with his Oars “againſt the Eddy of a Stream upon a Canal, that “when with the laſt Efforts he was juſt got up to “the Place intended, the Force of the Eddy car-“ried him quite back again, and thus three or four “times while the Prince ſaw him; and concluded “that this old Man's Buſineſs and his were too like “one another, and that we ought however to do “juſt as the old Man did, without knowing what “would ſucceed, any more than what did in the “poor Man's Caſe.

State of Religion.

As to the Affairs of Religion, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, by direction from the Court, took care to be inform'd of the Strength and Number of Friends and Enemies of the Church of England, by ordering an Inquiry to be made in every Dioceſs of the Number of Church Communicants, Popiſh Recuſants and Proteſtant Diſſenters in every Pariſh. And Returns were generally made from every Dioceſe, by Account taken about the time of the Eaſter Viſitation.

Dangers of Popery.

The Dangers of Popery were indeed more viſible and more ſcandalous every Day; and tho' the Intermiſſions of a Sitting Parliament [c] gave Impunity and Connivance to the Prieſts and Jeſuits, yet Complaints were publickly made to the King and Council, who particularly in October were “inform-“ed of the bold and open repair made to ſeveral “Places, and eſpecially to her Majeſty's Chapel at “Somerſet-Houſe, and the Houſes of Foreign Am-“baſſadors, Agents, and other publick Miniſters, “for the hearing of Maſs, and other Worſhip and “Service of the Romiſh Church, and that the ſaid “Ambaſſadors, Agents and Miniſters, do permit “and ſuffer both daily Maſſes to be ſaid and other “Worſhip and Service to be performed in their “Houſes in a publick manner, by Engliſh, Scottiſh “and Iriſh Prieſts, and alſo Sermons in Engliſh, to “be preached in their ſaid Houſes and Chapels, “which the Laws and Statutes of this Kingdom “do expreſly forbid the King's Subjects to frequent “or do.

Complaints in Council.

Hence in Council held October 3. an Order was publiſhed, declaring, “That his Majeſty had “taken the ſaid Complaint into ſerious Conſidera-“tion; and being ſenſible thereof as a Matter high-“ly tending to the Violation of the Laws of the “Realm, and the Scandal of Religion and Govern-“ment, and Breach of good Order, and in his “Princely Wiſdom weighing the dangerous Con-“ſequence thereof, was reſolv'd to take ſtrict Or-“der for the ſtopping this Evil before it ſpread “any farther; his Majeſty therefore, by the Ad-“vice of his Council, forbids any of his ſaid Sub-“jects hereafter to offend in the like kind at their “utmoſt Perils, and likewiſe orders that his princi-“pal Secretaries of State ſhould repair to the Fo-“reign Miniſters, to make known unto them his “Majeſty's Pleaſure, and to expect their Compli-“ance that they would not permit Maſſes or other “Service to be ſaid by any of the ſaid Prieſts, or “Sermons to be preached in Engliſh in their Houſes “or Chapels, things never heard of or attempted “by any precedent Ambaſſadors or Agents here. “His Majeſty thinking fit that notice ſhould be “firſt given to the ſaid publick Miniſters (the ra-“ther to teſtify his Reſpects unto them) before the “ſtricter Courſe his Majeſty hath reſolv'd be taken “with his own Subjects, by a vigorous Proſecution

[a] This call'd to mind the Character that the Prince of Condé, the French General, had given of the young Prince of Orange, General of the Confederate Army, after the Battle of Seneffe; that he had done like an old Captain in all, but only in venturing himſelf too much like a young Man.

[b] See the noble Letter of Denzil Lord Holles, who had been Ambaſſador in France to Monſieur Van Benninghen, who had been the Dutch Ambaſſador in England, written within this Year 1676. upon the Argument of Love to our Country, and Hatred of a common Enemy; ſhewing, that an implacable Malice to the Proteſtant Intereſt hath had a principal Hand in the Effects Europe is now groaning under; that the Danger is equal to England and Holland from France the common Enemy; that the only hope is, the Parliament and People of England have ſtill a true Affection to the States of Holland, and will unite to maintain the Proteſtant Intereſt in Europe, &c. Printed in 4to. and re-publiſh'd in the Memoirs of the Family of Holles; the Writer whereof well obſerves, that this Letter ought to be ſet in Golden Characters, and preſerved to all Poſterity.

[c] See the ſeveral Letters of Monſ. S. Germain to Mr. Coleman for proſecuting the Cauſe and Intereſts, and growing Hopes of the Catholicks in England, dated April 3. 1676. Aug. 5. Aug. 16. &c. Collection of Letters, publiſh'd by Order. Vol. ii. p. 111, &c.

The Papiſts began to engage their Prieſts in publick Conferences with our Divines in and about the Court. See a Conference about Religion, held in London April 3. 1676. between Edward Stillingfleet, D. D. and Gilbert Burnet, with ſome Gentlemen of the Church of Rome, in a Letter to my Lady T. dated, London, April 15. 1676. 8*vo.*

They were as ſpiteful againſt Dr. Andrew Sall, a Convert from Popery in this Year, as they had been in the laſt againſt Meſſieurs Luzancy and de la Motte. See True Catholick and Apoſtolick Faith maintain'd in the Church of England by Andrew Sall, Doctor in Divinity, being a Reply to ſeveral Books, under the Names of J. E. N. N. and J. S. againſt his Declaration for the Church of England, and againſt his Motives for his Separation from the Roman Church. Licenc'd at Oxon, June 23. 1676. 4to.

1676. 28 Car. II.

" and Infliction of Penalties and Puniſhments for " the preventing and repreſſing the like hereafter.

Eccleſiaſtical Preferments.

His Majeſty was pleaſed to tranſlate Dr. Anthony Sparrow, Biſhop of Exeter, to the See of Norwich, and to make choice of the Reverend Dr. Thomas Lamplugh, Dean of Rocheſter, to ſucceed in the Biſhoprick of Exeter, who on Sunday November 12. was ſolemnly conſecrated in the Chapel of Lambeth by the Right Reverend Henry Lord Biſhop of London, his Grace's Commiſſioner for that purpoſe, aſſiſted by ſeveral other Biſhops, in the Preſence of many of the chiefeſt of the Nobility and other Perſons of Quality, who were afterwards entertained at a noble Dinner.

Caſe of the Diſſenters by their own Report.

The Diſſenters by favour of the Court had Indulgence and Kindneſs ſhewn to them, after ſome little Offers at a legal Proſecution of them; as their own Hiſtory thus relates. " Mr. Baxter having " been kept a whole Year from preaching in his " new Chapel, in Apr. 1676. began in another in " St. Martin's Pariſh; a little before the King im- " portunately commanded and urg'd the Judges and " London Juſtices to put the Laws againſt the Non- " conformiſts in Execution, and Sir Joſeph Sheldon " the Lord Mayor, the Archbiſhop's near Kinſ- " man, accordingly did ſo for ſome time, and many " Miniſters were clapt up in Goals; Mr. Baxter " was forcibly kept out of his new Meeting-Houſe " in Swallow-Street, by a Guard of Conſtables and " Officers, for many Lord's-Days together. But " Mr. Wadſworth dying, he preach'd to his Flock " in Southwark many Months in Peace, no Juſtice " being willing to diſturb them; and when Dr. " Lloyd ſucceeded Dr. Lamplugh in St. Martin's " Pariſh, he offer'd him his Chapel in Oxenden- " Street for publick Worſhip, and he accepted it. This latter part of the Relation, as to the Offer of a Chapel, is known to be very falſe.

1677.

Parliament inclin'd to a War with France.

The Parliament were now ſitting; and to encourage the King to a ſeaſonable Breach with France, they gave him an effectual Aid for the ſpeedy building of thirty Ships of War, and had before them many other Bills for the Honour and Safety of the Nation*. His Majeſty ſeem'd to be afraid of their ſitting too long, and making too bold with the great depending Affair of Peace and War, which his Majeſty at this Juncture above all other had Reaſon to reſerve to his own Will and Pleaſure. And therefore on Monday April 16. his Majeſty came ſuddenly in the Evening into the Houſe of Lords; and being ſeated in his Throne with uſual Solemnity, he ſent for the Houſe of Commons, and gave his Royal Aſſent to ſeveral Bills preſented to him. The publick Acts were as follow:

Acts paſſed.

1\. " An Act for raiſing the Sum of five hundred " eighty four thouſand nine hundred ſeventy eight " Pounds two Shillings and two Pence Half-penny, " for the ſpeedy building thirty Ships of War.

2\. " An Act for an Additional Exciſe upon Beer, " Ale, and other Liquors for three Years.

3\. " An Act for the better Obſervation of the " Lord's-Day, commonly called Sunday.

4\. " An Act for prevention of Frauds and Per- " juries.

5\. " An Act for taking of Affidavits in the " Country, and to be made uſe of in the Courts " of King's-Bench, Common-Pleas and Exchequer.

1677. 29 Car. II.

6\. " An Act for confirming and perpetuating " Augmentations made by Eccleſiaſtical Perſons to " ſmall Vicarages and Curacies.

7\. " An Act for taking away the Writ De Hæretico Comburendo.

8\. " An Act for Naturalizing of Children of his " Majeſty's Engliſh Subjects born in Foreign Coun- " tries during the late Troubles.

9\. " An Act for erecting a Judicature to deter- " mine Differences touching Houſes burnt and de- " moliſhed by the late dreadful Fire in Southwark.

10\. " An Act for the better Repairing and Main- " taining the Peer of Great Yarmouth.

After which, the Lord Chancellor, by his Majeſty's Command, acquainted the two Houſes, that his Majeſty gave them leave to adjourn till the 21st of May next: And accordingly the two Houſes adjourned till that time.

The Commons Addreſs for a War with France.

When they met again, the Commons were ſo alarm'd at the Progreſs of the French Arms in Flanders, that they preſented an Addreſs to his Majeſty on the 23d of May, humbly deſiring, that he would be pleaſed to enter into an Offenſive and Defenſive League with the States-General of the United Provinces, and make ſuch other Alliances with other Confederates, as his Majeſty ſhould think fit, againſt the Growth and Power of the French King, for the Preſervation of the Spaniſh Netherlands. Upon Delivery of this Addreſs, the King grew very angry, and ſignified his Pleaſure to the Commons, that they ſhould attend him on Monday Morning in the Banquetting-Houſe at Whitehall, where his Majeſty was pleaſed to ſhew his Reſentment in this following Speech:

Gentlemen,

The K. expreſſes his Anger.

" COuld I have been ſilent, I would rather have " choſen to be ſo, than to call to mind " things ſo unfit for you to meddle with as are " contained in ſome parts of your laſt Addreſs, " wherein you have intrenched upon ſo undoubted " a Right of the Crown, that I am confident it " will appear in no Age (when the Sword was not " drawn) that the Prerogative of making Peace " and War hath been ſo dangerouſly invaded.

" You do not content your ſelves with deſiring " me to enter into ſuch Leagues as may be for the " Safety of the Kingdom, but you tell me what " ſort of Leagues they muſt be, and with whom, " and (as your Addreſs is worded) it is more liable " to be underſtood to be by your Leave than at " your Requeſt, that I ſhould make ſuch other " Alliances as I pleaſe with other of the Confede- " rates.

" Should I ſuffer this fundamental Power of " making Peace and War to be ſo far invaded (tho' " but once) as to have the Manner and Circum- " ſtances of Leagues preſcribed to me by Parlia- " ment; it's plain that no Prince or State would " any longer believe that the Sovereignty of Eng- " land reſts in the Crown; nor could I think my " ſelf to ſignify any more to Foreign Princes than " the empty Sound of a King: Wherefore you

* See a Bill engroſſed, and ready for his Majeſty's Royal Aſſent, to grant full Liberties and Immunities to all ſuch Proteſtant Foreigners as ſhall reſide here and conform themſelves to the Church of England: Factum for the Proteſtants of the French Church in the Savoy. Fol.

See 1. Addreſs of the Houſe of Commons to the King on Monday March 26. 1677. renewing their Apprehenſions of Danger from the Growth of Popery and of Power in the French King. 2. His Majeſty's Anſwer to the late Addreſs of the Commons, deliver'd to them April 11. 1677. 3. Debates upon his Majeſty's Anſwer. 4. The humble Repreſentation of the Commons, on his Majeſty's Meſſage of April 13. 5. The King's Meſſage to the Commons April 16. and the Commons Anſwer to it, in Marvell's Growth of Popery. 4to. p. 108. who tells us, that after the Receſs, April 16. there landed immediately the Duke of Crequay, the Archbiſhop of Rheims, Monſieur Barillon, and a Train of three or four hundred Perſons of all Qualities: So that the Lords Spiritual and Temporal of France, with ſo many of their Commons, meeting the King at New-Market, it look'd like another Parliament, p. 120. And that toward the End of the Seſſion, Saturday May 26. upon carrying up the Bill for recalling his Majeſty's Subjects out of the French King's Service, Mr. Powle was to put the Lords in mind of a Bill for the better ſuppreſſing the Growth of Popery;—and the Members generally ſaid they would proceed on nothing but French and Popery. Ib. p. 147.

" may

2

1677. 29 Car. II.

"may reſt aſſured, that no Condition ſhall make "me depart from, or leſſen ſo eſſential a part of "the Monarchy: And I am willing to believe ſo "well of this Houſe of Commons, that I am con- "fident theſe ill Conſequences are not intended by "you.

"Theſe are, in ſhort, the Reaſons why I can "by no means approve of your Addreſs: And yet "tho' you have declined to grant me that Supply "which is ſo neceſſary to the Ends of it, I do a- "gain declare to you, That as I have done all that "lay in my Power ſince your laſt Meeting, ſo I "will ſtill apply myſelf, by all the means I can, to "let the World ſee my Care both for the Security "and Satiſfaction of my People, altho' it may not "be with thoſe Advantages to them which by your "Aſſiſtances I might have procured." And his Ma- jeſty was farther pleaſed to declare his Pleaſure to them, that the Houſe ſhould be adjourned till the 16th of July next; telling them, he would give them Notice by his Proclamation when his Majeſty intended they ſhould ſit again; which his Majeſty was pleaſed to ſay ſhould not be till the Winter, unleſs there were ſome extraordinary Occaſion of calling them ſooner. A late Hiſtorian has thus expreſs'd himſelf on this Occaſion, "The King, to "ſhew his farther [a] Indignation to the Commons, "and to take French Counſels for Reparation of "their dangerous Invaſion of his Prerogative, ſig- "nified to the Commons that they ſhould adjourn "till the 16th of July following; which was ſo "abſolutely obeyed by the Speaker, then Mr. but "now Sir E. S. that without the Conſent of the "Houſe, or ſo much as putting the Queſtion, he "adjourned them to the 16th of July, tho' Sir John "Finch was impeached, for the ſame thing, of "High Treaſon in Parliament in 1640. So that "if the Parliament were not diſſolved by the laſt "Prorogation, another Queſtion may now ariſe "whether it was not ſo by their Separation, with- "out either Prorogation or Adjournment.

The legal Being of the Parl. queſtion'd without Doors.

Among the Proceedings in this Seſſion, it ſhould be farther obſerved, that a Queſtion was made without Doors (as had been formerly within) whether the Parliament were not truly and legally diſſolved. But to reſtrain and terrify People from any ſuch Freedom of Diſcourſe, an Order was made in the Houſe of Lords [b], That the Serjeant at Arms attending that Houſe ſhould take into his Cuſtody Aaron Smith, and bring him to the Bar of the ſaid Houſe, there to anſwer for ſpeaking certain dangerous and ſeditious Words againſt the Being of this preſent Parliament. And Mr. Smith prudently abſconding, they preſented their humble Deſires to his Majeſty, That he would by his Royal Proclamation ſtrictly charge and command, that the utmoſt and moſt effectual Endeavours ſhould be uſed for apprehending the Perſon of the ſaid Aaron Smith, and bring him before the ſaid Houſe of Peers (if the Parliament ſhould be ſitting at the time of his Apprehenſion) or in caſe the Parliament ſhould not be then ſitting, before one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State, to the intent the ſaid Aaron Smith might be ſecured, in order to his appearance before the ſaid Houſe of Peers, to anſwer for his ſaid Offence. To which his Majeſty comply'd by a Proclamation given at Whitehall on June 1.

The K. commands the Houſes to adjourn.

On Monday July 16. the two Houſes of Parliament, purſuant to their laſt Adjournment, met at Weſtminſter, and, according to his Majeſty's Pleaſure ſignify'd to them, did immediately adjourn again till the 3d of December next. This Pleaſure of his Majeſty was ſignify'd in the Houſe of Commons by Mr. Secretary Coventry; and in great Submiſſion to it, Mr. Speaker is ſaid again to have pronounced the Adjournment by his own Authority. On Octob. 26. the King publiſh'd a Proclamation, That he had by Advice of his Privy Council, upon weighty Conſiderations, reſolved upon a farther Adjournment of his two Houſes of Parliament; and therefore declares his Royal Intention, that his Houſe of Peers may adjourn themſelves, and alſo his Houſe of Commons may adjourn themſelves, on the third Day of December (being the Day prefixed for their Aſſembling) until the fourth Day of April next enſuing. But however, at the time of Meeting, on Monday December the third, the two Houſes [c] received a Meſſage from his Majeſty, that his Majeſty having given notice by his Proclamation, that he intended the Houſes ſhould be adjourned till the fourth of April; had now, for weighty Conſiderations, thought fit to meet both Houſes ſooner: And therefore his Pleaſure was, That they ſhould be adjourned to the fifteenth of January next. And accordingly the two Houſes were ſo adjourn'd, Mr. Secretary Coventry delivering the Meſſage in the Houſe of Commons, and the Speaker again executing of it, in a profound Deference to his Majeſty's Pleaſure. Upon which, the forementioned Hiſtorian has left this Remark: "Thus did the Speaker make a threefold Invaſion "upon the Privilege of the Houſe, for the Houſe's "once preſuming to invade his Majeſty's Preroga- "tive of making War and Peace. After this laſt Receſs of the two Houſes, his Majeſty by Proclamation dated Dec. 7. declared himſelf deſirous, in reſpect of ſeveral important Matters intended to be debated and conſidered, to have on the ſaid fifteenth Day of January a full Aſſembly of the Members of both Houſes of Parliament; and therefore, with the Advice of his Privy Council, thinks fit to require and command the Lords and Commons to give their Attendance at Weſtminſter on the ſaid Day, in a ready Conformity to his Royal Will and Pleaſure.

Happy Match of the Prince of Orange with the Lady Mary.

In the mean time came on the happy Match between William Prince of Orange and the Lady Mary eldeſt Daughter of James Duke of York. The firſt

[a] Mr. Briſbane, our Agent in Paris, wrote word to the Lord Treaſurer, dated, Paris, June 25, 1673.——They think here the King almoſt at War with the Parliament, and I am ſure would not have them concur in any thing they think, or ſay at leaſt, that the Perſonal Friendſhip between our Princes is ſuch, that our Maſter has no where elſe ſo good a Security for the Support of his Prerogative.—— The Addreſs and Adjournment have been very gladly received here. I am ſure they wiſh that all Breaches of that kind may be much wider than I hope they will ever ſee them, if there be a grain of common Senſe left among us. Danby's Letter.

[b] See private Debates in the Houſe of Commons in the Year 1677, in relation to a War with France, and an Alliance with Holland. Alſo learned Arguments by ſeveral worthy Members thereupon. Together with Speeches by King Charles II. to the Lords and Commons, with a Diſcourſe, ſhewing the abſolute Neceſſity of a War with France on this critical Juncture, in order to procure a laſting Peace at Home. London, 1702. 8vo.

[c] Sir William Temple gives this Judgment of the Seſſion this Year: "The Lord Shafiſbury impatient at his Fall from ſo "great a Share of the Miniſtry, and hoping to retrieve a "Game he was forc'd to give over, had run deſperately in- "to the popular Humour, both in Parliament and City, of "cenſuring the Court, exclaiming againſt our Partiality to "France; but moſt of all againſt the Conduct of the preſent "Miniſtry. And Lord Arlington was ſo enrag'd at the Growth "of my Lord Treaſurer's Credit upon the Fall of his own, that "he fell in with the common Humour of the Parliament, in "fomenting thoſe Jealouſies and Practices in the Houſe of "Commons, which center'd in a Meaſure agreed among the "moſt conſiderable of them, not to conſent to give the King "any Money whilſt the preſent Lord Treaſurer continued. "Upon theſe Occaſions or Diſpoſitions they grew very high "in purſuing the Lord Lauderdale, the only Remainder of "the Cabal that had now any Credit left at Court; and they "preſſed the King very earneſtly to recall all the Engliſh "Troops in the French Service, tho' there was a greater "Number in the Dutch. But beſides, they fell into ſo great "Diſſenſions between the two Houſes, rais'd upon puncti- "lious Diſputes and Deductions of their ſeveral Privileges, "in oppoſition to one another, that about the End of June "the King prorogu'd them. Temple's Memoirs, II. p. 108.

1677. 29 Car. II. Motion of this Deſign was made by the Prince to Sir William Temple at the beginning of the Spring 1676; when being ready to take the Field, he told the Engliſh Ambaſſador that he had a mind to have ſome Diſcourſe with him in private, [a] and appointed him a Time to meet in his Garden at Hounſlair-dike, where the Prince told Sir William, “ That he might “ eaſily believe, being the only Son left of his Fa- “ mily, he was often preſſed by his Friends to think “ of Marrying, and had Perſons propoſed to him as “ their ſeveral Humours led them; that for his own “ part, he knew it was a thing to be done at one “ time or another, but that he hitherto excuſed “ the thoughts of it, otherwiſe than in general, till “ the War was ended; that beſides his own Friends, “ the Deputies of the States began to preſs him “ more earneſtly every Day, and the more as they “ ſaw the War like to continue; and perhaps they “ had more Reaſon to do it than any others: That “ he had at laſt promiſed them he would more ſe- “ riouſly and particularly think of it, and ſo he had, “ and reſolved he would Marry; but that the Choice “ of a Perſon he thought more difficult: That he “ found himſelf inclined to no Propoſals that had “ been made him from France or Germany, nor “ indeed to any thing that had been mentioned up- “ on that Occaſion by any of his Friends, but that “ of England: That before he concluded to make “ any Paces that way, he was reſolved to have the “ Ambaſſador's Opinion upon two Points; but yet “ would not aſk it, unleſs he promiſed to anſwer “ him as a Friend, or at leaſt an indifferent Perſon, “ and not as the King's Ambaſſador. When he told him he ſhould be obey'd, he proceeded, and ſaid, “ That he would confeſs to him, that during “ the late War, neither the States, nor himſelf in “ particular, were without Application made to “ them from ſeveral Perſons, and conſiderable ones “ too in England, who would fain have engaged them “ to Head the Diſcontents that were raiſed by the “ Conduct of the Court in that whole War, which “ he knew was begun and carried on quite contrary “ to the Humour of the Nation, and might per- “ haps have proved very dangerous to the Crown “ if it had not ended as it did: That all thoſe Per- “ ſons who pretended to be much his Friends were “ extremely againſt any thought of his Marrying in “ England; and their Reaſons were, That he would “ loſe by that, all the Eſteem and Intereſt he had “ there, and be believed to have run wholly into “ the Diſpoſitions and Deſigns of the Court, which “ were generally thought ſo different from thoſe “ of the Nation, eſpecially upon the Point of Reli- “ gion: That his Friends there did not believe “ the Government could be long without ſome great “ Diſturbance, unleſs they changed their Meaſures, “ which was not eſteem'd very likely to be done. “ In the next Place he muſt be ſatisfied with the “ Perſon and Diſpoſition of the young Lady; for “ though the World might perhaps imagine, that “ a Prince need not be concern'd in thoſe Particu- “ lars, yet ſo far as he knew himſelf, he muſt de- “ clare, That no Circumſtances of Fortune or Inte- “ reſt would engage him, without an agreeable Per- “ ſon of good Humour and Diſpoſition: That he “ might perhaps be a Man not very eaſy for a Wife “ to live with; he was ſure he could not be eaſy “ to ſuch Wives as were generally in the Courts of “ the preſent Age: That if he ſhould meet with “ One that would give him Trouble at home, it “ was what he ſhould not be able to bear, for he “ was likely to have enough abroad: He muſt have “ a Wife eaſy and agreeable, which he thought “ chiefly depended upon a natural Diſpoſition and “ good Education. And therefore if the Ambaſſa- “ dor knew any thing in particular of the Lady “ Mary, in thoſe Points, he deſir'd to tell him “ freely. 1677. 29 Car. II.

The Ambaſſador anſwer'd his Highneſs, That he was very glad to find he was reſolv'd to marry, as being what he owed his Family and his Friends; that he was much more pleaſed that his Inclinations led him to endeavour a Match in England, which would be much for his Intereſt and Honour: But as to the Character of the Lady Mary, he could ſay little to it, only he had often heard his Wife and Siſter ſpeak with all the Advantage imaginable, of what they could diſcern in a Princeſs ſo young, and more from what they had been told by the Governeſs, with whom they had a particular Friendſhip. The Reſult of this Diſcourſe was, that the Prince wrote both to the King and the Duke to beg their Favour to him in it, and their Leave that he might go over into England at the end of the Campaign. The Prince was long diverted from this Inclination by his Fatigues in the Camp, and by the perplexity of the Affairs of Europe, and eſpecially by the ſuſpence of the Treaty at Nimeguen. The French were early in the Field Campaign abroad. this Year, and took Valenciennes, and Cambray, and St. Omer. The Prince of Orange, about the end of July, made an Attempt upon Charleroy; but fail'd in his intended Surprize of that Place: And now at laſt perceiving that there could be no ſtop put to the Fury of the French Arms, but by calling in the Aſſiſtance of England, he re-aſſum'd his Thoughts of Marriage, and ſent over Monſieur Bentinck (now Earl of Portland) into England to ſollicit that Affair, and to make way for the Prince's Journey thither. And ſo good Encouragement was given for his kind Reception, that on Tueſday the ninth Day of October, about Ten in the Morning, his Highneſs arrived at Harwich, accompany'd by a great many Perſons The Pr. of Orange comes into England. of the chiefeſt Quality in Holland. Here his Majeſty's Coaches met him, and carry'd him immediately to New-market, where he arriv'd at about Seven in the Evening, and was receiv'd by his Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs with all the Marks of Affection and Eſteem. They invited His Reception. him often into Diſcourſes of Buſineſs, which they wonder'd to ſee him avoid, and induſtriouſly divert: So that the King commanded Temple to find the Reaſon of it; upon which the Prince frankly told him, He was reſolv'd to ſee the young Princeſs before he enter'd upon any other Affair of Peace or War. The King laughed at this piece of Nicety, but ſaid he would humour the Prince in it, and ſaid he would go ſome Days ſooner than he intended from New-market. And accordingly on October the 13th the King and whole Court return'd to Whitehall. The Prince, upon ſight of the Lady, was ſo well pleas'd with her Perſon and Temper, that he immediately made his Application to the King and Duke for their Conſent; by whom he was well received, and they allowed of it, but with this Condition, That the Terms of the Peace abroad might be firſt adjuſted between them. The Prince excuſed himſelf, and ſaid, He muſt end this firſt Buſineſs before he began the other. The King and the Duke were both poſitive in their Opinion, and the Prince as firm in his Reſolution, ſaying at laſt, that his Allies, who are like to have hard Terms of Peace as things then ſtood, would be apt to believe that he had made this Match at their Coſt; and that for his part, he never could ſell his Honour for a Wife. The Lord Treaſurer, and thoſe in the ſecret Miniſtry, did verily believe that the whole Buſineſs would break off upon this Punctilio: And Sir William Temple happening to go to 1677.

[a] See Memoirs of Sir William Temple. P. II. Chap. II. p. 150.

29 Car. II.

to his Highneſs after Supper, found him in the worſt Humour he had ever ſeen him, complaining, that he repented he had ever come into England, and reſolved he would ſtay but two Days longer, and then would be gone, if the King perſiſted in his Reſolution of treating about the Peace before the Marriage was conſummate: But that before he went, the King muſt chooſe how they ſhould live together from thenceforward: He was ſure it muſt be either as the greateſt Friends, or as the greateſt Enemies; deſiring Sir William to let his Majeſty know ſo much the next Morning, and give him an Account of what he ſhould ſay upon it. In purſuance of this, Sir William Temple, early in the Morning, acquainted the King with all that the Prince had ſaid the Night before, and the ill Conſequences of a Breach between them, conſidering the ill Humour of many of his Subjects upon our late Meaſures with France, and the Invitations made the Prince by ſeveral of them during the late War. The King gave great Attendance to what was ſaid, and anſwer'd, Well, I never was yet deceived in judging of a Man's Honeſty by his Looks (of which he gave ſome Examples;) and if I am not miſtaken in the Prince's Face, he is the honeſteſt Man in the World, and I will truſt him, and he ſhall have his Wife; and you ſhall go immediately and tell my Brother ſo, and that it's a thing I am reſolved on. Sir William having accordingly acquainted the Duke with it, he ſeemed at firſt a little ſurprized; but when the other had done, he ſaid, The King ſhall be obey'd; and I ſhould be glad all his Subjects learn'd of me to obey him: I do tell him my Opinion freely upon any thing; but when that is done, and I know his Pleaſure upon it, I obey him. From the Duke he went to the Prince, and told him the whole Tranſaction; which, at firſt, his Highneſs would hardly believe; but then embraced him, and ſaid, He had made him a very happy Man, and that very unexpectedly.

The King declares the intended Marriage

On October the 24th, in the Morning, his Majeſty was pleaſed to declare to the Lords of his Privy Council (who he had cauſed to meet extraordinarily for that purpoſe) that he had concluded a Marriage between her Highneſs the Lady Mary and his Highneſs the Prince of Orange. Upon which their Lordſhips, about Three in the Afternoon, went in a Body to make their Complements firſt to the Lady, and afterwards to the Prince. The News of which being ſpread in the Town, was followed at Night with Bonfires, Ringing of Bells, and all other Demonſtrations of Joy. On Sunday November the 4th, being the Birth-day of the Prince, the Marriage was privately celebrated at St. James's about Eleven at Night, by the Biſhop of London, in the Preſence of his Majeſty, (who gave the Bride) their Royal Highneſſes, and ſome of the chiefeſt Nobility.

Within a few Days after this auſpicious Wedding, the King, the Duke and the Prince, with none others admitted but the Lord Treaſurer and Sir William Temple, fell into Debates upon the Terms of a Peace, and after much diſputing did agree upon this Scheme, that all ſhould be reſtored by France to the Empire and Emperor, that had been taken in the War, the Dutchy of Lorrain to that Duke, and all on both ſides between France and Holland; and to Spain the Towns of Aeth, Charleroy, Oudenard, Courtray, Tournay, Conde, Valenciennes, St. Giſlain and Binch; that the Prince ſhould endeavour to procure the Conſent of Spain, and the King that of France; for which End he ſhould ſend ſome Perſon over immediately with the Propoſal, who ſhould be inſtructed to enter into no Reaſonings upon it, but demand a poſitive Anſwer in two Days, and after that Term immediately return. My Lord Duras [b], a Creature of the Duke's, was at laſt the Perſon pitch'd upon and ſent over: But he, after the delivery of his Meſſage, was prevailed with to ſtay longer than his time; and after all, came away without any poſitive Anſwer, and ſo the Buſineſs was left to be drawn out into many Meſſages from England, and prevaricating Returns from France, which at laſt dwindled into nothing. The Prince, after his Return to Holland [c], preſs'd the King by Letters not to recede from his late Engagements to him, of entering into the War with all the Confederates, in caſe of no direct and immediate Anſwer from France, upon the Terms of a Peace propoſed to that Court. But his Majeſty rather contented himſelf to ſend Mr. Thynne over into Holland with a Draught of an Alliance to be made with the Dutch, in order to force France and Spain into a Compliance with the Propoſitions agreed on; and to conſign the ſame into the Hands of Mr. Hyde, then at the Hague, which was done, and the Treaty ſign'd on the ſixteenth of January, tho' not without great Difficulties and much Diſſatisfaction on the part of the Prince of Orange, who was brought into it by the private Conſent of the Spaniſh Miniſter there, in behalf of his Maſter, ſo that the War could not break out but upon France, in caſe of their refuſal.

1677.
29 Car. II.

A Scheme for General Peace.

Meeting of the Parliam.

Under theſe new Meaſures the King was diſpoſed to meet his Parliament ſooner than he had before declared his Intention of doing. On January 15. the two Houſes met at Weſtminſter, purſuant to their laſt Adjournment, and received this Meſſage from his Majeſty, That his Majeſty had Matters of very great Importance to communicate to both Houſes, in order to the Satisfaction of their late Addreſſes for the Preſervation of Flanders. But it ſo happening, that Matters are not yet ſo ripe as within a few Days they will be; therefore his Majeſty's Pleaſure was, that they ſhould be immediately adjourn'd till Monday the

[a] In Eccleſiaſtical Matters there had been a notable Caſe depending in the Eccleſiaſtical Courts, whether a ſolemn Contract with one Perſon ſhould diſſolve a ſubſequent Marriage with another Perſon. The Caſe was ſtated thus: John Lord Decies, of the Age of eight Years, was married by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to Katharine Fitz-Gerald with the Conſent of her then Guardian, having compleated 12 Years and a half of her Age. She about 21 Months after the ſaid Marriage diſagreed to the ſame, and on Eaſter Eve laſt took to her pretended Huſband Edward Villiers Eſq; the ſaid Lord Decies being yet alive, notwithſtanding the Inhibitions of the Court of Arches. Quære, whether ſhe could avoid the firſt Marriage with the ſaid Lord Decies, or make Reclamation thereof? Sentence was given to this Effect; That the Promiſe or Contract between the Lady Fitz-Gerald and the Lord Decies being but a Contract de Futuro, and diſſolv'd by abſolute Contract of Marriage de Præſenti, conſummated with Edward Villiers Eſq;, the Rule of Factum Valet muſt hold good in this Caſe, and Priority of Promiſe muſt inevitably give place to Poſteriority of Contract, notwithſtanding the Statute 1 Eliz. ſtands unrepeal'd. See Sponſa nondum Uxor, or the Marriage between the Lady Katharine Fitz-Gerald and Edward Villiers Eſq;, aſſerted by Robert Thompſon, L. L. D. Apr. 21. 1677. Being an Anſwer to a Treatiſe publiſhed under the Name of Dudley Loftus, Dr. of Laws, and Judge of the Prerogative Court in Ireland. London, for B. Tooke, 1677. 4to.

[b] Lord Duras was on this occaſion made Earl of Feverſham. His Repulſe in France was good News in Spain. See a Letter of Sir William Godolphin to Mr. Secretary Coventry, dated, Madrid, Jan. 12. 167$\frac{7}{8}$. The rejecting in France of the Project for a Peace carried by the Earl of Feverſham, and our Maſter's retracting his Reſolution touching the Adjournment of the Parliament from April 4. to the 15th Inſtant, hath ſpread exceeding Conſolation among theſe People, &c.

[c] When the Prince and Princeſs embark'd for Holland, where Affairs preſſed his Return beyond the Hopes of my Lord Duras from France, the King aſſured the Prince he would never part from the leaſt Point of the Scheme ſent over, and would enter into the War againſt France, if they refus'd it. However, he went not away without a great Mortification, to ſee the Parliament prorogued to next Spring, which the French Ambaſſador had gain'd of the King to make up ſome good Mein with France after the Prince's Marriage, and before the Diſpatch of the Terms of a Peace to that Court. Temple's Memoirs II. p. 302.

1677. 29*Car.*II.

twenty eighth of this Inſtant January. On that Day his Majeſty came into the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons, made this moſt gracious Speech to them on the occaſion of their Meeting.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

"WHEN we parted laſt I told you, that "before we met again I would do that "which ſhould be to your Satisfaction; I have "accordingly made ſuch Alliances with Holland "as are for the Preſervation of Flanders, and which "cannot fail of that End, unleſs prevented either "by the want of due Aſſiſtances to ſupport thoſe "Alliances, or by the ſmall regard the Spaniards "themſelves muſt have to their own Preſerva-"tion.

"The firſt of theſe I cannot ſuſpect, by reaſon "of your repeated Engagements to maintain them, "and I know you are ſo wiſe as to conſider, "that a War, which muſt be the neceſſary Conſe-"quence of them, ought neither to be proſecuted "by halves, nor to want ſuch Aſſurances of Per-"ſeverance as may give me Encouragement to pur-"ſue it; beſides, it will not be leſs neceſſary, to "let our Enemies have ſuch a Proſpect of our Re-"ſolutions, as may let them ſee certainly that we "ſhall not be weary of our Arms, till Chriſten-"dom be reſtored to ſuch a Peace as ſhall not be "in the Power of any Prince alone to diſturb.

"I do acknowledge to you, that I have uſed all "the means poſſible, by a Mediation, to have pro-"cured an honourable and ſafe Peace for Chriſten-"dom; knowing how preferable ſuch a Peace "would have been to any War, and eſpecially to "this Kingdom, which muſt neceſſarily own the "vaſt Benefits it has received by Peace, whilſt its "Neighbours only have yet ſmarted by the War. "But finding it no longer to be hop'd for by fair "Means, it ſhall not be my Fault if that be not "obtain'd by Force, which cannot be had any "other ways.

"For this Reaſon I have recalled my Troops "from France, and have conſider'd, that altho' "the Dutch ſhall do their Parts, we cannot have "leſs on ours than ninety Sail of Capital Ships con-"ſtantly maintained, nor leſs than thirty or forty "thouſand Land-men (with their Dependencies) "to be employ'd upon our Fleets and elſewhere. "And becauſe there ſhall be no fear of miſ-em-"ploying what you ſhall give to theſe Uſes, I am "contented that ſuch Money be appropriated to "thoſe Ends as ſtrictly as you can deſire. I have "given Teſtimony enough of my Care in that "kind by the Progreſs I have made in building the "new Ships, wherein, for the making them more "uſeful, I have directed ſuch larger Dimenſions as "will coſt me above one hundred thouſand Pounds "more than the Act allows. I have gone as far as "I could in repairing the old Fleet, and buying of "neceſſary Stores for the Navy and Ordnance; and "in this and other Proviſions, for better ſecuring "both my Foreign Plantations and the Iſlands nearer "home, I have expended a great deal more than "the two hundred thouſand Pounds you enabled "me to borrow upon the Exciſe, altho' I have not "found ſuch a Credit as I expected upon that Se-"curity. I have born the Charge both of a Re-"bellion in Virginia, and a new War with Algiers: "I ſtand engaged to the Prince of Orange for my "Nieces Portion, and I ſhall not be able to main-"tain my conſtant neceſſary Eſtabliſhments, unleſs "the new Impoſts upon Wines, &c. be continued "to me, which would otherwiſe turn only to their "Profit to whom we leaſt intend it.

"I hope theſe things will need little Recom-"mendation to you, when you conſider your Pro-"miſes in ſome, and the neceſſity of the reſt; and "to let you ſee that I have not only employ'd my "Time and Treaſure for your Safety, but done all "I could to remove all ſorts of Jealouſies; I have "marry'd my Niece to the Prince of Orange, by "which I hope I have given full Aſſurances that "I ſhall never ſuffer his Intereſt to be ruin'd, if I "can be aſſiſted, as I ought to be, to preſerve them.

"Having done all this, I expect from you a plen-"tiful Supply ſuitable to ſuch great Occaſions, "whereon depends not only the Honour, but (for "ought I know) the Being of an Engliſh Nation, "which will not be ſaved by finding Faults after-"wards, but may be prevented by avoiding the "chief Fault of doing weakly and by halves, what "can only be hop'd from a vigorous and thorough "Proſecution of what we undertake.

"Theſe Conſiderations are of the greateſt Im-"portance that ever concern'd this Kingdom, and "therefore I would have you enter immediately "upon them, without ſuffering any other Buſineſs "whatſoever to divert you from bringing them to "good Reſolutions.

Proceeding of the two Houſes.

The Commons returned to their own Houſe, and on January 31. addreſs'd the King with Thanks for marrying his Niece to the Prince of Orange, and beſought him to make no Treaty of Peace with France, whereby the French King ſhould be left in Poſſeſſion of any greater Power or Dominion than was left him by the Pyrenean Treaty [a]. This again mightily offended the King, who look'd upon it as too bold an Invaſion of his Prerogative: But however, the Commons would give no Money without an expreſs Condition of applying it to a Maintenance of a War with France; and being exceedingly more alarmed by the Succeſs of the French in taking of Ghent and beſieging Ypres, they fell into a Reſolution of Addreſſing the King, that he would forthwith enter into an actual War with France. Upon which this Meſſage from his Majeſty was read in the Houſe by one of the Secretaries of State.

Addreſs for War with France.

Charles R.

The King offended.

"HIS Majeſty having been acquainted with "the Votes of the fourteenth Inſtant, is "very much ſurpriz'd both with the Matter and "Manner of them. But if his Majeſty had Ex-"ception to neither, yet his Majeſty having ask'd

[a] The Parliament meets in January by Anticipation of that Seſſion which ſeem'd to import ſomething of great Conſequence. The King acquaints them with the League he had made in Holland, and aſks them Money upon it for putting himſelf in a Poſture to carry on the War, if the Peace failed; which the Parliament gave him upon the Hopes of the War, and not of the Peace. The Conſtitution of this Parliament, that had ſat ſeventeen Years, was grown into two known Factions, which were called that of Court and Countrey: The Court Party were grown numerous by a Practice introduced by my Lord Clifford of downright buying off one Man after another, as they could make the Bargain. The Countrey Party was ſomething greater yet in Number, and kept in more Credit upon the Corruption of others, and their own Pretence of Steadineſs to the true Intereſt of the Nation, eſpecially in the Points of France and Popery: When theſe came in Queſtion, the Court Party voted with thoſe of the Countrey, who then carried all before them: But whenever the Court ſeem'd to fall in with the true Intereſts of the Nation, eſpecially in thoſe two Points, then many of the Country Party meaning fairly, fell in with the Court, and carried the Votes, as they now did upon the King's Pretence, to grow bold with France, and to reſolve upon the War, if the Peace were refuſed. Temple's Memoirs, II. p. 309.

[b] Before the Parliament proceeded to addreſs the King upon his Speech, they debated of the 30th of January the Anniverſary Faſt, and then voted ſeventy thouſand Pounds for a ſolemn Burial of his late Majeſty King Charles I. and to erect a Monument for the ſaid Prince of Glorious Memory; the ſaid Sum to be raiſed by a two Months Tax, to begin at the Expiration of the preſent Tax for Building Ships. The firſt Motion in the Houſe of Commons by the Lord O Brian, eldeſt Son to the Earl of Thomond, and whoſe Son had lately married my Lord Treaſurer's Daughter, ſeem'd very ſurprizing.

1677. 29Car.II.

" the Advice of both Houſes, doth not think fit to " give any Anſwer to any thing of that Nature, till " he hath the concurrent Advice of both Houſes.

However, his Majeſty, to ſecure the Money Bill, came into the Houſe of Lords on Wedneſday March 20. and being ſeated on his Throne, with the Commons attending, he was pleaſed to give his Royal Aſſent to the two Acts following, as alſo to ſeveral private Acts.

Acts paſſed.

1. " An Act for raiſing Money by a Poll and o-" therwiſe, to enable his Majeſty to enter into an " actual War againſt the French King, and for pro-" hibiting ſeveral French Commodities.

" An Act for continuance of two former Acts, " for preventing of Theft and Rapine upon the " Northern Borders of England.

Honours and Preferments.

As to the Honours and Preferments of this Year, his Grace Henry Duke of Newcaſtle, and the Right Honourable Thomas Earl of Danby, Lord High Treaſurer of England, were inſtall'd Knights of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter at Windſor, on Thurſday April 19. in the room of William Duke of Newcaſtle, and George Earl of Briſtol. At the beginning of Auguſt the Duke of Ormond was again conſtituted Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and began his Journey towards that Kingdom on Aug. 4. being attended with an Equipage agreeable to the Dignity of that Employment, and accompanied out of Town by moſt of the principal Nobility and Perſons of Quality, in a numerous Train of Coaches; and landing in Ireland on Auguſt 23. his Grace was the next Day conducted to the Council Chamber, where he was ſworn into that great Office, and received the Sword from the Earl of Eſſex, who ſoon after departed for England. On October 29. the King being invited to Guild-Hall upon the Solemnity of a new Lord Mayor, conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Mr. Edward Waldoe, at whoſe Houſe his Majeſty was placed in a Belcony, under a Canopy of State, and afterwards upon William Royſtern and Thomas Beckford, the preſent Sheriffs. On November 23. his Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the ſame Honour of Knighthood upon Robert Hackett Eſq; Inhabitant of the Barbadoes, being preſented to his Majeſty in his Bed-Chamber by his Royal Highneſs. On January 10. his Majeſty was pleaſed, in conſideration of the good and acceptable Services perform'd unto him and his Royal Father of bleſſed Memory by George Wharton Eſq; and of his Sufferings in the late Times of Uſurpation, to confer on him the Dignity of a Baronet of this Kingdom.

Birth and Death of the Duke of Cambridge.

Within five Days after the Marriage of the Prince of Orange, his future proſpect ſeem'd to be interrupted by the Delivery of the Dutcheſs of York, who on Wedneſday November 7. was brought to Bed of a Son, intituled Duke of Cambridge, who on Thurſday Afternoon [a] was Chriſten'd by the Biſhop of Durham, by the Name of Charles, his Majeſty and the Prince of Orange being Godfathers, and the Lady Iſabel, repreſented by the Lady Frances Villars her Governeſs, being Godmother; but on December 12. this young Prince died at St. James's, to the unſpeakable Grief of their Royal Highneſſes.

State of Religion.

As to the State of Religion, the Prophaneneſs of the Times was in ſome meaſure reform'd, by a wholſom and ſeaſonable Law for the better obſervation and keeping holy the Lord's-Day, commonly call'd Sunday; whereby it was Enacted, " That all the " Laws already in force, concerning the obſer-" vation of the Lord's-Day, and repairing to the " Church thereon, ſhould be carefully put in exe-" cution. And it was farther Enacted, " That no " Drover, Horſe-courſer, Waggoner, Butcher, " Higgler, their or either of their Servants, ſhall " Travel or come into their Inn or Lodging upon " the Lord's-Day, upon pain of forfeiting twenty " Shillings for every Offence: And that no Perſon " ſhall Uſe, Employ or Travel upon the Lord's-" Day with any Boat, Wherry, Lighter, or Barge, " except it be upon Extraordinary Occaſion, to be " allowed by ſome Juſtice of the Peace, under the " Penalty of Five Shillings for every Offence. It was likewiſe provided, " That if any Perſon Tra-" velling upon the Lord's-Day ſhall be then Robb'd, " no Hundred, or the Inhabitants thereof, ſhall be " charged with, or anſwerable for any Robbery ſo " committed; but the Perſon or Perſons ſo robbed, " ſhall be barred from bringing any Action for the " ſaid Robbery. And laſtly, That no Perſon, up-" upon the Lord's-Day ſhall ſerve or execute any " Writ, Proceſs, Warrant, Order, Judgment, or " Decree, (except in Caſes of Treaſon, Felony, or " breach of Peace) but that the Service of every " ſuch Writ, &c. ſhall be void to all Intents and " Purpoſes whatſoever; and the Perſon ſo ſerving " or executing of the ſame, ſhall be as liable to the " Suit of the Party grieved, and to anſwer Dama-" ges, as if he had done the ſame without any " Writ, &c.

Profaneneſs of the Times reform'd, by an Act for the better Obſervation of the Lord's-Day.

An Act for Relief of the poorer Clergy.

There was a good Benefit intended to the poorer Clergy, by an Act for confirming and perpetuating Augmentations made by Eccleſiaſtical Perſons to ſmall Vicarages and Curacies, referring to his Majeſty's Letters, bearing Date the firſt Day of June, in the twelfth Year of his Majeſty's Reign, requiring Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Deans and Chapters, and other Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, to take care for the Improvement of poor Vicarages and Curacies, where the Indowment thereof was found too ſmall to afford a competent Maintenance to thoſe who ſerve the Cure, upon their renewing of Leaſes of Rectories, or Tythes Impropriate, by making Reſervations beyond the antient Rent, to the intent the ſame might become payable to the ſame Vicars or Curates in Augmentation of their Endowments. But in regard that ſuch Reſervations were not made to the Vicars or Curates; or if they were, no convenient Remedy could be had by ſuch Vicars or Curates for the recovery thereof, and they were not at the time thereof capable of taking any Intereſt to their own uſe, whereby the ſaid Proviſions will depend upon the good pleaſure of the Succeſſors, and may in time be diſappointed, Therefore it was Enacted, That all Augmentations made ſince the firſt Day of June, or hereafter to be made for the Uſe or Benefit of any Vicar or Curate, by any Eccleſiaſtical Corporation or Perſon, by way of Reſervation out of any Rectory Impropriate, or Portion of Tythes, ſhall continue during the Eſtate upon which they are reſerved, and afterwards for ever. And that the ſaid Vicars and Curates ſhall have Remedy for the ſame either by Diſtreſs or Action of Debt, provided the Augmentation do not exceed one moiety of the clear Yearly Value of the Rectory Impropriate. And to the end the ſaid Vicars and Curates might the better make appear the Certainty of the ſaid Augmentations, it was Provided, That every Archbiſhop, Biſhop, Dean and Chapter, ſhould cauſe every Leaſe or Grant whereon any ſuch Augmentation was made, to be fairly entred in a Book of Parchment, to be kept by their reſpective Regiſter for that purpoſe, and a true Copy of the ſaid Entry examin'd and atteſted, ſhould

[a] See a Letter of Sir William Godolphin, Ambaſſador in Spain, to Mr. Secretary Coventry, from Madrid, Decemb. 15. 1677.——I have celebrated with unſpeakable Joy the good News of my Lady Mary's Marriage with the Prince of Orange, and the happy Birth of a young Prince to his Royal Highneſs, and to all our Hopes. Of this latter, many here have given me the Enora Buena; but I find them more perplexed than pleaſed at the Marriage, as too ſure a Bond of Union between the Royal Intereſts in England, and thoſe of the Prince in Holland, &c.

1677. 29 Car. II.

be taken for a Record and Evidence at Law. And if any Queſtion ſhould ariſe, there ſhould be ſuch favourable Conſtructions and ſuch farther Remedy, as in Caſe of Charitable Uſes. And any future Leaſe, without expreſs continuance of the ſaid Augmentation, ſhall be utterly void.

An Act for taking away the Writ de Hæretico Comburendo.

Under the Apprehenſions of Popery, it was thought to be ſome wiſdom of Prevention, to make an Act for taking away the Writ de Hæretico Comburendo, whereby it was Enacted, That the Writ commonly called Breve de Hæretico Comburendo, with all Proceſs and Proceedings thereupon, in order to the executing ſuch Writ, or following or depending thereupon, and all Puniſhment by Death, in purſuance of any Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, be from henceforth utterly taken away and aboliſhed.

Marvel's Account of the Growth of Popery.

The Dangers of Popery, and the Advances of the Popiſh Intereſt at Court, were freely repreſented by Mr. Andrew Marvel, in a Tract Intituled, [a] An Account of the growth of Popery, &c. This Book was ſo offenſive to the Miniſtry, that at the end of this Year his Majeſty cauſed an Order to be publiſh'd, in theſe Words, Whereas there have been lately printed and publiſh'd ſeveral ſeditious and ſcandalous Libels againſt the Proceedings of both Houſes of Parliament, and other his Majeſty's Courts of Juſtice, to the diſhonour of his Majeſty's Government, and the hazard of the publick Peace: Theſe are to give Notice, That what Perſon ſoever ſhall diſcover unto one of the Secretaries of State, the Printer, Publiſher, Author, or Hander to the Preſs of any of the ſaid Libels, ſo that full Evidence may be made thereof to a Jury, without mentioning the Informer, eſpecially one Libel intituled, An Account of the growth of Popery, &c. [b] And another call'd A Seaſonable Argument to all the Grand-Juries, &c. the Diſcoverer ſhall be rewarded as follows: He ſhall have have fifty Pounds for ſuch Diſcovery, as aforeſaid, of the Printer, or the Publiſher of it from the Preſs; and for the Hander of it to the Preſs, One Hundred Pounds, &c.

Eccleſiaſtical Preferments.

Dr. William Lucy, Lord Biſhop of St. David's, died on the 4th of October, and was buried in the Collegiate-Church of Brecknock, with a black Marble Monument, and a Latin Inſcription in Golden Letters; to whom ſucceeded Dr. William Thomas. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Dr. Gilbert Sheldon, had for ſome Years retir'd from the Court, and from a Concern in all State Affairs, and lived for the moſt part in a Retirement at Croydon, where he died on Friday, November 9th, and his Body was privately interr'd in the Parochial-Church, near to the Tomb of Archbiſhop Whitgift, according to his own ſpecial Direction. Soon after, a ſtately Monument was erected over his Grave, by his Nephew and Heir Sir Joſeph Sheldon, late Lord-Mayor of London, with a large and elegant Inſcription on it. The King was under ſome difficulty to find a proper Succeſſor; but at laſt, by the Recommendation of his Brother the Duke of York, he reſolved upon Dr. William Sancroft, Dean of St. Paul's, as a Perſon of great Prudence and Moderation, and gave his Conge d'Eſlire and Letter Miſſive for him, on January the 7th, who was accordingly Conſecrated in the Abbey-Church of St. Peter at Weſtminſter, on Sunday January the 27th; at which Ceremony were preſent, and afterward were very nobly Entertained, the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treaſurer, Lord Privy-Seal, Duke of Monmouth, and many other of the principal Nobility.

1677. 29 Car. II.

Convocation without Buſineſs.

The Convocation met occaſionally with this and every other Seſſion of Parliament: But ſince the reviſal of the Liturgy, and the Settlement of the Church by the Act of Uniformity, they had enter'd upon no manner of Buſineſs; nor had they thought it proper to attempt any thing by their own Authority, or to deſire any Royal Commiſſion for it; only thoſe Members who were near the Town, did, in purſuance of the Archbiſhop's Prorogation, aſſemble from time to time, upon Wedneſdays and Fridays, to ſay their Prayers, and then to entertain themſelves by ſome private Conferences with one another. However, to keep up the Dignity, and at leaſt the Being of a Convocation, whenever any Prolocutor died, or was promoted, the Lower Houſe, by the Archbiſhop's direction, choſe a Succeſſor: So now, Dr. Sancroft, Prolocutor, being confirmed in the See of Canterbury on January the 24th, Dr. Stillingfleet, who ſucceeded him in the Deanery of St. Paul's, was likewiſe choſen Prolocutor, and confirmed on the 14th of March.

Care for Re-building the Church of S. Paul, London.

The Rebuilding of the Cathedral of St. Paul in London went on but very ſlowly; and therefore, to excite and encourage Benefactors, A brief Account of all Receipts and Expences in the Work of St. Paul's Church, was in September printed and publiſhed, for the Satisfaction of ſuch Perſons as have contributed to the ſame, or ſhall hereafter promote ſo honourable a Building.

Profaneneſs puniſh'd.

On January the 3d, the Earl of Pembroke was committed by his Majeſty's Command, to the Tower for Blaſphemy, abuſe of the Celebration of the Sacrament of the Lord's-Supper, and other his Miſdemeanors (altogether unfit to be named) towards the Lord North's Chaplain, and others: But on the 30th of January he was releaſed from his Impriſonment, upon the Hearing of his Caſe in the Houſe of Lords, who upon the ſame declared and adjudged, That the ſingle Teſtimony (altho' upon Oath) of a Commoner, was not ſufficient Evidence againſt a Peer denying the Fact upon his Honour. His Lordſhip ſoon after fell under the Accuſation of Murder, for which he ſome time abſconded; but on Tueſday April the 2d, 1678. he ſurrender'd himſelf, at Turnham-Green, to Sir Edward Carteret Genteman-Uſher of the Black-Rod, who the ſame Evening convey'd him to the Tower of London, in order to his being brought to a Tryal before the Houſe of Peers, and on Thurſday following he was brought thither by Sir John Robinſon Lieutenant of the Tower, and after Eight Hours ſpent in the Formalities of the Tryal, his Lordſhip was by the Votes of the major-part of the Peers there preſent declared Not guilty of Murther, but guilty of Manſlaughter; and had the benefit of his Peerage allowed him for the ſame by the Lord High Chancellor (who was High-Steward pro hac Vice) purſuant to the Privilege granted to the Nobility in this behalf for their firſt Offence, made in the firſt Year of the Reign of King Edward VI.

1678.

Approaches to a War with France.

The King began this Year, 1678, with ſome Teſtimony of his being willing to gratifie his Parliament, and his People by putting a ſtop to the Victories and Violences of the French King, and therefore he cauſed his Proclamation to be publiſh'd, for recalling and prohibiting Seamen who were his Natural-born Subjects, from ſerving of Foreign Princes; it being made appear, that the French Ships were in great part Mann'd by Engliſh Mariners. And [a] An Account of the Growth of Popery and Arbitrary Government in England, more particularly from the long Prorogation of November 1675. ending the Feb. 15. 1676. till the laſt Meeting of the Parliament the 16th of July 1677. Amſterdam, printed in the Year 1677. 4to.

See a Liſt of the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots and Deans, appointed for the Church of England by a Bull of the Pope, bearing Date in Novemb. or Decemb. 1677. Oates Narrative. p. 50.

[b] At the ſame time a full Liberty was given to thoſe Books, which were written to divide the Proteſtants in England, and to break the Proteſtant Intereſt in Europe; of which kind were the Countermine, or a ſhort, but true Diſcovery of the dangerous Principles and ſecret Practices of the Diſſenting Party, eſpecially the Preſbyterians; ſhewing, that Religion is pretended, but Rebellion is intended; and in order thereto, the Foundation of Monarchy in the State, and Epiſcopacy in the Church, are undermined. By one who does paſſionately wiſh the Proſperity of the Church, his King and Country. [i. e. Dr. John Nalſon.] Imprimatur April 16. 1677. London. 8*vo.*

on

1678. 30 Car. II. on March 30th, as upon the Proſpect of a ſudden War, his Majeſty iſſued his Proclamation for a General Faſt to be obſerved on Wedneſday April the 10th, within London and Weſtminſter, and on Wedneſday April the 24th, throughout the reſt of the Kingdom, for the Imploring a Bleſſing from Almighty God upon his Majeſty, and all his Dominions, and for the averting of thoſe Judgments, which our manifold Sins and Provocations have moſt juſtly deſerved.

The Parliament more encliń'd than the King to ſuch a War. The Parliament were much more forward than the King to enter into a neceſſary War with France, for the Preſervation of the Spaniſh Netherlands, and for reſtoring the Ballance of Europe, and and ſhew'd their Zeal for it, in ſome Votes and Reſolutions that made the King uneaſie; and therefore on Monday May the 13th his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and after giving his Royal Aſſent to ſeveral private Acts, he was pleaſed to Command the [a] Lord Chancellor to prorogue the Parliament till Thurſday the 23d of this Month, and accordingly the Parliament was prorogued to that time; and then meeting again at Weſtminſter, his Majeſty came in his Robes, and the Commons attending, his Majeſty made a Gracious Speech to the two Houſes on the Subject of their meeting; which done, the Lord Chancellor more fully declared his Majeſty's Mind to them on this Occaſion. They met on Monday May 27th; the Commons being impatient of all farther delay in declaring War againſt France, came to this Reſolution, That the Army lately raiſed, and now in being, was a great Charge and Burden to the Nation: That if his Majeſty thought fit to enter into a War againſt the French King, this Houſe is always ready to aſſiſt him in it, but if otherwiſe, they will proceed to the Conſideration of providing for the ſpeedy disbanding of the Army. (Reſolutions of the Commons for a War.) Theſe Proceedings made the King more and more uneaſie; and at laſt, on Monday July 15th, his Majeſty brought this Seſſion to an end, after the giving his Royal Aſſent to the Publick Acts following, as well as to Twelve Private.

Acts paſſed.

1. "An Act for granting a Supply to his Majeſty, of ſix hundred nineteen thouſand three hundred eighty eight Pounds, eleven Shillings and nine Pence, for Disbanding the Army, and other Uſes therein mentioned.

2. "An Act for granting an additional Duty to his Majeſty, upon Wines, for three Years.

3. "An Act to enable Creditors to recover their Debt of the Executors and Adminiſtrators of Executors, in their own wrong.

4. "An Act for Burying in Woollen.

5. "An Act for Admeaſurement of Keels and Boats carrying Coals.

6. "An Act for reviving a former Act, entituled, An Act for avoiding unneceſſary Suits and Delays; and for continuance of one other Act, entituled, An Act for the better ſettling of Inteſtates Eſtates.

7. "An Act for the farther Relief and Diſcharge of poor diſtreſſed Priſoners for Debt.

8. "An Act for Repealing certain Words in a Clauſe in a former Act, entituled, An Act for Enlarging and repairing of common High-ways.

9. "An Act for Preſervation of Fiſhing, in the River of Severne.

After which, the Lord Chancellor, by his Majeſty's Command, acquainted the Two Houſes, That his Majeſty had thought fit, in the preſent Conjuncture of Affairs, to prorogue them to the firſt of Auguſt next, and ſo to keep them in Call by ſhort Prorogations, his Majeſty not knowing how ſoon he might have need of their farther Service and Aſſiſtance: But that his Majeſty's Intention was, they ſhould not meet till towards Winter, unleſs there were Occaſion for their Aſſembling ſooner, of which he would give them timely Notice by his Proclamation, and accordingly the Parliament was prorogued till the firſt Day of Auguſt next. (Parliament prorogu'd.)

On Thurſday the 1ſt of Auguſt the Two Houſes met at Weſtminſter, and were, by Commiſſion, farther Prorogued till the 29th Inſtant, with a Declaration, "That it was his Majeſty's Pleaſure, they ſhould at that time not only meet, but ſhould continue to ſit, for the Diſpatch of divers weighty Affairs. And accordingly a Proclamation was publiſh'd, to require the Attendance of the reſpective Members in a full Aſſembly, on the ſaid 29th of Auguſt. But for all this Aſſurance, his Majeſty publiſhed another Proclamation, declaring, That having now taken into Conſideration, That the State of Affairs Abroad was much changed ſince his laſt Proclamation, he had now therefore thought fit, with the Advice of his Privy-Council, to ſignify his Royal Pleaſure, That the Two Houſes of Parliament ſhall upon the ſaid 29th of Auguſt, be farther prorogued to the firſt Day of October next; And that they ſhall then continue to ſit for the Diſpatch of divers weighty Matters, which ſhall be then propoſed and debated. (Further Prorogation.)

Treaty of Nimeguen. In the mean time the Treaty of Nimeguen was managed with great Artifice by the French, and with too much Remiſſneſs and Negligence by moſt of the Confederates. The King of France about the beginning of April made a publick Declaration of the Terms upon which alone he was reſolved to make a General Peace: But it being diſhonourable and unſafe for the ſeveral Confederates to accept of them; and the Dutch finding the Councils of England to be uncertain, and being weary of a War that loſt their Trade, and drain'd their Treaſure, they re-aſſum'd their Inclinations to a Separate Peace. (Dutch inclin'd to a ſeparate Peace.) Under this Diſpoſition the King ſent over Sir William Temple once more to Holland, who conſulting

[a] Sir William Temple well underſtood the Diſpoſition of the Court and of our Affairs at this Meeting, and he thus repreſents them. "I adviś'd and ſaid, if his Majeſty reſolved to go that way, he muſt firſt take his Meaſures with the Parliament for the War, and then ſend them word in Holland he was ready to declare it, in caſe they would purſue it.—This the King was unwilling to do, but poſted Mr. Godolphin again into Holland about the beginning of April to know their final Reſolutions, and prorogued the Parliament for fourteen Days.——My Lord Treaſurer upon the twentieth came to me, and aſſured me of the King's Reſolution being at length fixed to go into the War, and deſired me to prepare what the King was to ſay to the Parliament upon this Occaſion, which I did. When I carried it to my Lord Treaſurer, I met there Letters from Mr. Hyde and Godolphin, that Holland abſolutely deſir'd the Peace even upon the Terms propoſed by France, and had reſolv'd to ſend Monſieur Van Lewen over hither to diſpoſe the King to be contented with them. He arriv'd, and the King ſent me immediately to know his Errand: He was the Chief of the Town of Leyden, and had join'd with Amſterdam, Harlem, Delf, and ſome others in promoting the Peace, even upon the French Conditions; but being a Man of great Honour and Worth, and having done it upon the Suſpicion that England was ſtill at bottom in with France, and that all the reſt was but Grimace, the Prince had procured him to be ſent over on purpoſe to ſatisfy himſelf (and thereby his Complices for the Peace) that the King's Intentions were determin'd to enter into the War, which his Highneſs thought the only Means to prevent the Peace.——He profeſſed to me in private, that if the King would immediately declare the War, he believed the States would ſtill go on with it, in purſuit of their Alliance and the Terms therein contained. I made this Report to the King, who ſeem'd poſitive to declare the War, in caſe the Parliament adviś'd him, and promiś'd to ſupport it; when an unluckly peeviſh Vote, mov'd by Sir T—C——, in ſpight to my Lord Treaſurer, paſſed the Houſe of Commons, that no Money ſhould be given till Satisfaction was received in Matters of Religion. This left all ſo looſe and ſo lame, that the King was in a Rage, reproach'd me with my popular Notions, and aſk'd me when, or how, I thought he could truſt the Houſe of Commons to carry him through the War, if he ſhould engage in it. Memoirs II. p. 319. From the Beginning of May the ill Humour of the Houſe of Commons began to break out by ſeveral Diſcourſes and Votes againſt the Miniſtry and their Conduct, which increaſed the ill Opinion his Majeſty had conceived of their Intentions in preſſing him to enter upon a War.——But May the 11th the Houſe of Commons paſſed another Negative upon the Debate of Money, which ſo offended the King, that he prorogued them for ten Days. Ib. p. 321.

with

1678. 30 Car. II.

with the Prince of Orange, and the Chief Burgo-Maſters concluded a Treaty in ſix Days, whereby France was obliged within fourteen Days after the Date of it, to declare, That they would evacuate the Spaniſh Towns, or in Caſe of their Refuſal, Holland was engag'd to go on with the War, and England immediately to declare againſt France, in Conjunction with Holland and the reſt of the Confederates.

Siege of Mons.

In the mean time the City of Mons, one of the beſt Frontiers remaining to Flanders, was ſtrongly blocked up by the French Army under Command of the Duke of Luxemburgh, who was ſo confident of the good Poſture he was in, that he ſent Word to the Mareſchal D'Eſtrades, one of the French Plenipotentiaries at Nimeguen, He was ſo poſted, That if he had but 10000, and the Prince of Orange 40000, yet he was ſure he could not be forced, much leſs while he took his Army to be much ſtronger than That of the Prince. But however the Prince reſolved to break through all Diſadvantages whatever, and on Sunday Auguſt 17. decamped from Soignes, marched towards Roches, and from thence reſolv'd to advance to the Enemy, whoſe Right Wing was poſted at the Abby of St. Dennis, and the Left at Mamoy St. Pierre, with ſuch Advantage of Situation, that they thought themſelves inacceſſible; for beſides the Woods there was only a Precipice led to them, and that by narrow Paths. About 12 the Cannon began to play upon St. Dennis, and ſoon after the Confederate Dragoons behav'd themſelves ſo gallantly that they drove the French from their faſtneſs, and made themſelves Maſters of the Cloyſter; while Adjutant General Collier advanc'd towards the Abby, and paſſing his Battalions in a Defile thro' the narrow Paſſages, and ſliding down the Precipices with an invincible Reſolution, and after a vigorous Reſiſtance, made the French retire within their Lines. The Duke of Monmouth arrived in the Confederate Camp about Noon, and din'd with the Prince in the open Field; they were both preſent at the deſperate Attack upon the Abby after Dinner, animating the Soldiers very much by their Preſence and Example. From hence they both wheel'd off to Chaſteau, which was attack'd by the Spaniards in the Right Wing under the Duke De Villa Hermoſa, aſſiſted by ſome Engliſh or Scotch Regiments, commanded by the brave Earl of Oſſory, who indeed did Wonders. Here the Prince of Orange advanced ſo far that he was in great Danger of being loſt, had not Monſieur Overkirk come in ſeaſonably to his Relief, and killed a French Captain that was juſt ready to let a Piſtol fly at him. At laſt, by favour of the Night, the Duke of Luxemburgh made his retreat without any Noiſe, withdrew towards Mons, and cover'd himſelf with a Wood on one ſide, and a River on the other, leaving to the Prince, as a Teſtimony of Victory, the Field where the Battle was fought, the greateſt part of the wounded, ſeveral Tents and ſome Baggage, with a great quantity of Powder and other Warlike Ammunition; one of the French Officers was heard to ſay after the Battle, That he eſteem'd this the only Heroick Action that had been done in the whole Courſe or Progreſs of the War. Next Morning the Prince received Advice from the States of the Separate Peace between them and the French ſigned at Nimeguen. The News whereof he immediately ſent to the Duke of Luxemburgh, who with a great Complement deſir'd an Interview with him, which being agreed to, they met in the Field at the Head of their Chief Officers, where all things paſs'd with great Civility and gallantry on both Sides, the French crowding about a young Prince that had made ſo much noiſe in the World, and but the Day before had given Conduct and Vigour to ſuch a deſperate Action.

Bravery of the Prince. of Orange to raiſe the Siege.

Great Danger of the Prince of Orange.

News of the Peace.

Reflections on the Perſonal Bravery of the Prince.

Yet many Reflections were made upon it by the Prince's Friends as well as Enemies; ſome ſaying, that he knew the Peace was ſigned before the Fight began; (but if this was really ſo, it ſignify'd nothing, ſince he was not obliged to take Notice of it till he had Advice from the States) and that it was too great a venture both to himſelf and the States, and too great a Sacrifice to his own Honour, ſince it could be to no other Advantage: Others laid the blame upon the Marquis of Grana, who, they ſay, had intercepted and concealed the States Packet to the Prince, which came into the Camp the Day before the Battle was fought, but after it was reſolved on; and that he had hopes by ſuch a Breach of the Peace even after it was ſigned, that the Progreſs of it would be defeated; whether this were real Fact or no, could never be made appear, but ſo much was true, that the Prince could not have ended the War with greater Glory nor with greater Spight, to ſee ſuch a mighty Occaſion wreſted out of his Hand, by the ſudden and unexpected ſigning of the Peace, which he had aſſured himſelf the States would not have conſented to without the Spaniards; yet upon the certain News of it, he drew back his Army, returned to the Hague, and left the States to purſue their own Paces in order to the finiſhing of the Treaty between France and Spain, wherein the Dutch Ambaſſadors at Nimeguen imployed themſelves with great Zeal and Diligence, and no longer like Parties and Confederates, but as Mediators, while the Engliſh Plenipotentiary who continued ſtill there in that Figure, declined the Function, as being a Matter wherein he found the Court of England would not take any Part, nor allow themſelves to have had any in the Peace between France and Holland.

Purſuance of the Treaty at Nimeguen.

Engliſh Court now inclin'd to a War.

And it ſeem'd indeed a Myſtery in the Politicks of the Engliſh Court, that having been hitherto averſe to a War with France, they were now as angry at the Proſpect of a Peace. They did this either to fall in with the general Inclination of the Parliament and People of England, who were forward to Quarrel with the French: Or elſe they did it in hopes that the Proſecution of ſuch a grateful War, would cover the Duke of York and his Friends from the Conſequence of the Popiſh Plot, that began now to be diſcover'd. But whatever the Reaſon was, 'tis certain that about the middle of Auguſt Mr. Hyde was ſuddenly diſpatch'd over from England to the Surprize even of all in Holland, and more eſpecially of our Ambaſſador there, who had not the leaſt Intimation of it. He preſented the States with a Memorial to this Effect, "That his Majeſty having underſtood that a ſeparate Treaty of Peace "had been concluded and ſigned between the moſt "Chriſtian King's Ambaſſadors and thoſe of the "States. He was extreamly ſurprized at that manner of Procedure, there being no Security given "for the evacuating the * Towns in Flanders, nor "for providing a ſufficient Barrier on this ſide of "the Empire, and therefore he had ſent over this "Ambaſſador in his Name and on his Part, to aſſure them, That if the Lords, the States, will Memorial to the States of Holland.

* The King of England was both ſurpriz'd and angry at this Proceeding of France, and next Morning ſent for me (ſaith Sir William Temple) to the Foreign Committee, and there declar'd his Reſolution of ſending me immediately into Holland with Commiſſion to ſign a Treaty with the States, by which they ſhould be obliged to carry on the War, and his Majeſty to enter into it, in caſe France ſhould not conſent within a certain Time limited to evacuate the Towns. The Duke fell into this Counſel with great Warmth, and ſaid at the Committee, that it was plain by this Pace, that France was not ſincere in the Buſineſs of the Peace; that they aim'd at the univerſal Monarchy, and that none but his Majeſty could hinder them from it in the Poſture that Chriſtendom ſtood. All the Lords of the Committee agreed with ſo general a Concurrence, that it was hard to imagine this ſhould not prove a ſteady Reſolution, how little ſoever we had been given to any ſuch. Memoirs II. p. 329.

"refuſe

1678. 30 Car. II.

" refuſe to ratify it which was ſigned by their " Ambaſſadors at Nimeguen; his Majeſty, three Days " after ſuch a Declaration ſhall be notified to him, " will declare actual War againſt France, and carry " it on in all Points according to the Articles and " Obligations of his late Treaty with the States.

Prince of Orange ſurpriz'd at the change of Meaſures in the Engliſh Court.

When the Prince of Orange was made acquainted with this Procedure of England, by Mr. Hyde, who went on Purpoſe to Hounſlerdyke to do it, he was no ſooner withdrawn, but the Prince lift up his Hands two or three Times, and ſaid to Sir William Temple, then preſent, Was ever any thing ſo hot and ſo cold as this Court of yours? Will the King that is ſo often at Sea ever learn the Word that I ſhall never forget, ſince my laſt Paſſage, when in a great Storm, the Captain was crying out to the Man at the Helm all Night, Steddy, Steddy, Steddy? If this Diſpatch had come Twenty Days ago, it would have changed the face of all things in Chriſtendom, and the War might have been carried on till France had yielded to the Treaty of the Pyrenees, and left the World in quiet for the reſt of their Lives; but it is my Opinion as it comes now, it will have no effect at all, at leaſt it's my Opinion, tho' I would not ſay ſo to Mr. Hyde: And indeed the Event proved anſwerable to the Prince's Judgment. For the French at Nimeguen managed their Affairs with ſo much Art and Application, That another Separate Peace with the Spaniards was firſt concluded and ratified, and before the end of January, another Peace with the Emperor, and Princes of the Empire, to the excluſion of none but the brave Duke of Lorrain. And all this without the Intervention of Sir William Temple and Sir Leoline Jenkins the Engliſh Mediators, becauſe the Imperial Plenipotentiaries would not allow them the Precedency of ſigning.

Other ſeparate Peaces.

Diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot.

We come now to a great Criſis in Politicks, the Diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot, firſt made by Titus Oats, who had been educated and admitted into Orders in the Church of England and employed upon a Cure in Kent, but aftewards (ſeemingly at leaſt) was reconciled to the Church of Rome, and going over to St. Omers, was enter'd into the Engliſh [a] College there; and being thence ſent into Spain, he ingratiated himſelf with the Jeſuits and Prieſts in thoſe Parts, and ſo by Degrees came to the Knowledge of what he now inform'd the King and Council, A Plot carried on by the Jeſuits and other Roman Catholicks againſt his Majeſty's Life, the Proteſtant Religion, and the Government of this Kingdom. It ſeem'd to make no great Impreſſion on the King; But the Privy Council ſat twice a Day, from Saturday the 28th of September for a Week and more, and ſeveral Perſons were examin'd and committed by them, viz. Sir George Wakeman, Mr. Coleman, Mr. Langhorne, Thomas Whitehead, John Gavan, Anthony Turner, William Ireland, William Marſhal, William Rumſey, James Corker, Thomas Pickering, of which Number the laſt eight were Jeſuits and Prieſts, with divers others. Mr. Oats for a Confirmation of his Teſtimony, referr'd himſelf to Letters and Papers, which he ſaid were in the Cuſtody of Mr. Coleman, then Secretary to the Dutcheſs of York, who before his Houſe was ſearch'd had time enough to convey away all the Papers of the two laſt Years, with his Book of Entries of them. However thoſe Letters which were found, and afterwards publiſhed, did enough convince the World of the dangerous and deſperate Intrigues of the Popiſh Party. An ingenious Writer has left this Remark upon it, " That there was at that time a Popiſh Plot, and " that there always had been one ſince the Reformation, to ſupport, if not reſtore the Romiſh Religion in England; ſcarce any body calls in queſtion. How far the near Proſpect of a Popiſh Succeſſor ripen'd the Hopes, and gave new Vigour " to the Deſigns of that Party, and what Methods " they were then upon, to bring thoſe Deſigns about, Coleman's Letters alone, without any other " concurring Evidence, are more than ſufficient to " put the Matter out of doubt. But what Superſtructures might have been afterwards built upon an " unqueſtionable Foundation, and how far ſome of " the Witneſſes of that Plot might come to darken " Truth by ſubſequent Additions of their own muſt " be deferr'd till the Great Account, to be made " before a Higher Tribunal: And till then, a great " Part of the Popiſh Plot, as it was then ſworn " to, will in all human Probability lie among the darkeſt Scenes of our Engliſh Hiſtory.

Narrative of Titus Oats.

Perſons Examin'd.

Coleman's Letters the greateſt Evidence.

Welwood's Memoirs.

Death of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey.

But the moſt unhappy Demonſtration of the Truth of this Conſpiracy, was given by the death of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey, a Juſtice of Peace for Middleſex, before whom the Depoſitions of Mr. Oats had been taken, and who had appear'd very zealous for the Diſcovery and Proſecution of the Plot. For which Reaſon he was extreamly hated by the Papiſts, and ſo much threatned with their Revenge upon him, that he himſelf was apprehenſive of his own Danger, as Mr. Mulys gave this Information to the Houſe of Commons, About five or ſix Days before Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey was miſſing from his Houſe, I met him in St. James's Park, and in Diſcourſe, told him that I underſtood he examined Mr. Oats about a Plot that was much diſcours'd of, and deſired to have ſuch an Account from him as might be fit to be communicated: Whereupon he gave me ſome ſhort Relation, agreeing for the moſt part with what was the common Diſcourſe of the Town.— But I muſt not talk much (ſaid he) for I lie under ill Circumſtances: Some great Men blame me for not having done my Duty, and I am threatned by others, and very great ones too, for having done too much. He then preſſed to leave me, and without ſaying much more we parted. And farther Mr. Robinſon gave this Account to the Houſe of Commons, " That he met Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey at the Seſſions at Weſtminſter " on Tueſday and Wedneſday before he was miſſing; " and that he asked him whether he had any hand " in taking the Informations touching the Plot; " and that he made him Anſwer, That he had taken them, though very unwillingly; and deſiring " of him that he might ſee them, he told him he " could not, for that he had left them with my " Lord Chief-Juſtice Scroggs: And that Dining " with him on Wedneſday, and diſcourſing concerning the Plot, and the Examinations touching " the ſame, Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey ſaid theſe " Words: I have taken them, and I know not what " will be the Conſequence of them; but I believe I " ſhall be the firſt Martyr. According to theſe Preſages, he was found miſſing from his Houſe on October the 14th, and ſome Days after his Dead Body was found in the Fields caſt into a Ditch, and as Suſpicions and Teſtimonies of this Murder.

[a] The Letter to a Member in the Houſe of Commons in Defence of the Earl of Danby, written in the Year 1679. (ſuppos'd to be written by the Earl himſelf) tells us; About the middle of Auguſt 1678. and the very Morning that the King went to Windſor that Year with the whole Court, his Majeſty left a Pacquet with a Perſon of Quality, which was ſealed up, and commanded him to carry it to the Earl of Danby, and to tell him that one Mr. Kirkby would bring a Gentleman to ſpeak with him about it. The Earl opening the ſaid Pacquet, and finding therein two or three Sheets of Paper, containing ſeveral Heads of Informations of Danger againſt his Majeſty, gave order immediately to the Porter at his Gate, that if one Kirkby did come to ſpeak with the Earl, he ſhould immediately be brought to him. Accordingly the ſaid Kirkby did come thither that Day, or the Day following, and did bring with him one Dr. Tongue, who told the Earl that he had delivered ſome Papers to the King of great Concernment, &c.

it

1678. 30 Car. II.

it appear'd by concurring Evidence, walking by Somerſet-Houſe he had been thruſt in at the [a] Water-Gate, thence hurried to a private Chamber, there barbarouſly Aſſaſſinated, and his Body afterwards expoſed in ſuch manner as that the World might imagine he had killed himſelf. The diſcovery of this Murder was firſt made by William Bedloe, and afterwards confirm'd by the Confeſſion of Mr. Miles Prance, and the Execution of the Actors in it, Green, Berry, and Hill, who yet at their Death deny'd it.

Meeting of the Parliament.

The Parliament met on October the 21ſt. when his Majeſty could not forbear mentioning this Matter, which had rais'd ſuch an univerſal Amazement and Abhorrence in the Nation, and therefore his Majeſty thus deliver'd himſelf to the two Houſes.

King's Speech.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

" I Have thought the Time very long ſince we " parted laſt, and would not have deferred " your meeting by ſo many Prorogations if I could " well have met you ſooner.

" The Part which I have had this Summer in " the Preſervation of our Neighbours, and the well-" ſecuring what was left of Flanders, is ſufficient-" ly known, and acknowledged by all that are a-" broad.

" And though for this Cauſe I have been obli-" ged to keep up my Troops, without which our " Neighbours had abſolutely deſpaired, yet both " the Honour and the Intereſt of the Nation have " been ſo far improved by it, that I am confident " no Man here would repine at it, or think the " Money raiſed for their diſbanding to have been ill " employed in their Continuance; and I do aſſure " you, I am ſo much more out of Purſe for that " Service, that I expect you ſhould ſupply it. " How far it may be neceſſary (conſidering the " preſent State of Chriſtendom) to reduce the Land " and Sea-Forces, or to what degree, is worthy of " all our Serious Conſiderations.

" I now intend to acquaint you (as I ſhall al-" ways do with any thing that concerns me) That " I have been informed of a Deſign againſt my " Perſon by the Jeſuites, of which I ſhall forbear " any Opinion, [b] leſt I may ſeem to ſay too much " or too little; but I will leave the Matter to the " Law, and in the mean time will take as much " Care as I can to prevent all manner of Practices " by that ſort of Men, and of others too, who have " been tampering in a high Degree by Foreigners, " and contriving how to introduce Popery amongſt " us.

" I ſhall conclude with recommending to you my " other Concerns.

" I have been under great Diſappointments by " the defect of the Poll-Bill.

" My Revenue is under great Anticipations, and " at beſt, was never equal to the conſtant and ne-" ceſſary Expence of the Government whereof I " intend to have the whole State laid before you, " and require you to look into it, and conſider of " it with that Duty and Affection which I am ſure " I ſhall ever find from you.

" The reſt I leave to the Lord-Chancellor.

Addreſs on occaſion of the Popiſh Plot.

The firſt Buſineſs of the two Houſes was to agree in an Addreſs to his Majeſty, " That Information had been given of an horrible Deſign againſt " his Sacred Life, and being very ſenſible of the " fatal Conſequence of ſuch an Attempt, and of the " Dangers of the Subverſion of the Proteſtant Re-" ligion and Government of this Realm, they hum-" bly beſeech his Majeſty, That a ſolemn Day of " Faſting and Humiliation may be appointed to im-" plore the Mercy and Protection of Almighty God " to his Majeſty's Royal Perſon, and in him to all his " Loyal Subjects, and to pray that God will bring to " light more and more all ſecret Machinations a-" gainſt his Majeſty and the whole Kingdom. Which was accordingly done by Proclamation, dated 25th of October, requiring that Wedneſday the 13th of November ſhould be kept for a General Faſt. Soon after, both Houſes again agreed in another Addreſs, " That having taken into their ſerious " Conſideration the bloody and traiterous Deſigns of " Popiſh Recuſants againſt his Majeſty's ſacred Per-" ſon and Government, and the Proteſtant Religi-" on, they do for prevention thereof moſt humbly " beſeech his Majeſty to iſſue forth his Royal Pro-" clamation, commanding all Perſons being Popiſh " Recuſants, or ſo reputed, to depart from the Ci-" ties of London and Weſtminſter, and all other " Places within ten Miles of the ſame, on or before " the 7th Day of November next enſuing, under " pain of his Majeſty's higheſt Diſpleaſure, and of " the ſevereſt Execution of the Laws againſt them. To which his Majeſty comply'd, and gave out a Proclamation to that effect, dated October 30.

Another Addreſs on the ſame occaſion.

And becauſe this Plot was by ſome Perſons artificially ſuppreſt, and even by ſome others inſolently ridicul'd. Therefore on Thurſday October 31ſt. The Commons Reſolved Nemine Contradicente, " That " upon the Evidence that has already appeared to " this Houſe, this Houſe is of Opinion, that there " is and hath been a damnable and helliſh Plot, con-" trived and carried on by Popiſh Recuſants, for " aſſaſſinating and murthering the King, for ſub-" verting the Government, and rooting out and " deſtroying the Proteſtant Religion.

Reſolution of the Commons declaring the Truth of a Popiſh Plot.

Ordered, " That this Vote be communicated to " the Lords at a Conference, and that the Lords be " deſired to join with this Houſe in providing Re-" medies for Preſervation of his Majeſty's Perſon " and Government, and the Proteſtant Religion": And in a Conference between the two Houſes on this Subject, November the 1ſt. this Report was made, " The Lords have conſidered the Vote of " the Houſe of Commons communicated to them " at the Conference, and have moſt readily and " unanimouſly concurred with them in it Nemi-" ne Contradicente; and their Lordſhips are very " glad to ſee that Zeal which the Commons have " ſhewed upon this Occaſion, and do fully concur " with them, That the moſt ſpeedy and ſerious " Conſiderations of both Houſes are neceſſary for " prevention of the imminent Dangers; in order " whereunto, their Lordſhips have reſolved to ſit " de Die in Diem, Forenoon and Afternoon, and " deſire that the Houſe of Commons would do ſo, " &c.

Concurrence of the Lords.

One great Danger was the Number of Papiſts, and even of new Converts to Popery, retained in his Majeſty's Guards, and therefore to take away this Apprehenſion of the Parliament, on November the 2d. his Majeſty was pleaſed to declare in Council, " That " whoſoever ſhall make diſcovery of any Officer or " Soldier of his Majeſty's Horſe or Foot-Guards, " who, having formerly taken the Oaths of Allegi-" ance and Supremacy, and the Teſt, enjoined by

The King willing to remove their Fears.

[a] See the ſtout and prudent Sermon of Dr. William Lloyd, (who died near 40 Years after Biſhop of Worceſter) preached at the Funeral of Sir Edmunbury Godfrey on Thurſday the laſt of October 1678. 4to.——The Funeral was very ſolemn as for a Confeſſor or Martyr, a mournful Pomp proceeding from Bridewell to St. Martin's in the Fields, 72 London Miniſters marching two and two before the Body, and above one thouſand Perſons in the ſame Order following after.

[b] The King was afraid to intimate any more of his Diſbelief of the Popiſh Plot, and the Lord Chancellor was to be as much on the Reſerve; for he only ſaid, tho' his Majeſty doth in no ſort prejudge the Perſons accuſed, yet the ſtrict Enquiry into this Matter hath been a means to diſcover ſo many other unwarrantable Practices of theirs, that his Majeſty hath Reaſon to look to them.

1678. 29 Car. II.

"a late Act of Parliament, For preventing Dangers which may happen from Popiſh Recuſants, hath "ſince been perverted to the Romiſh Religion, or "hear Maſs; ſuch Diſcoverer, upon Information "thereof given to his Grace the Duke of Monmouth, Lord General of his Majeſty's Forces, ſhall "have a Reward of twenty Pounds for every Officer or Soldier ſo diſcovered as aforeſaid. And to "the End his Majeſty's Pleaſure herein may be fully "known, his Majeſty doth Command that this "Order be forthwith Printed and Publiſhed.

Bill againſt Popiſh Peers.

A ſecond Danger was from the Intereſt of Popiſh Members of Parliament, but eſpecially in the Houſe of Peers, and therefore the Commons prepared a Bill, which with ſome Difficulty was agreed to by the Lords, and with ſome Reluctancy paſſed by his Majeſty into an Act, For the more effectual preſerving the King's Perſon and Government, by diſabling Papiſts from ſitting in either Houſe of Parliament.

Bill of Excluſion.

But that which moſt threatned the Security of the Proteſtant Religion, was the Proſpect of a Popiſh Succeſſor, and therefore the leading Members in both Houſes began to form the Deſign of a Bill of Excluſion, as the only Means to extinguiſh the Hopes and Expectation of the Popiſh Faction. The Commons began gently on this Occaſion, and on November the 4th let a Debate ariſe in their Houſe, for an Addreſs to be preſented to his Majeſty, That his Royal Highneſs may withdraw himſelf from his Majeſty's Perſon and Councils. But then they adjourned this Debate till Friday November the 8th, and then again adjourned it over till Tueſday following.

Which offends the King.

The King underſtood their meaning, and being extremely Tender of his Brother, on Saturday November 9th he came to the Houſe of Lords, and made this Gracious Speech:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The K.'s Speech in favour of the Duke.

"I Am ſo very ſenſible of the great and extraor"dinary Care you have already taken, and "ſtill continue to ſhew for the Safety and Preſer"vation of my Perſon, in theſe Times of Danger, "that I could not ſatisfy my ſelf, without coming "hither on purpoſe, to give you All my moſt hearty Thanks for it.

"Nor do I think it enough to give you my "Thanks only, but I hold my ſelf obliged to let "you ſee withal, that I do as much ſtudy your "Preſervation too, as I can poſſibly; and that I am "as ready to join with you in all the Ways and "Means that may eſtabliſh a firm Security of the "Proteſtant Religion, as your own Hearts can "wiſh.

"And this not only during my Time, (of which, "I am ſure, you have no fear) but in future Ages, "even to the end of the World.

"And therefore I am come to aſſure you, That "whatſoever reaſonable Bills you ſhall preſent to be "paſſed into Laws, to make you ſafe in the Reign "of any Succeſſor, (ſo as they tend not to Impeach "the Right of Succeſſion, nor the Deſcent of the "Crown in the true Line, and ſo as they reſtrain "not my Power, nor the juſt Rights of any Pro"teſtant Succeſſor) ſhall find from me a ready Con"currence.

"And I deſire you withal, to think of ſome more "effectual means for the Conviction of Popiſh Re"cuſants, and to expedite your Counſels as faſt as "you can, that the World may ſee our Unanimi"ty, and that I may have the opportunity of ſhew"ing you how ready I am to do any thing that "may give Comfort and Satisfaction to ſuch dutiful "and loyal Subjects.

The Houſe of Commons went after Dinner to the Banquetting-Houſe at Whitehall, and by their Speaker return'd his Majeſty their humble and hearty Thanks, for his moſt Gracious Speech this Day made to both Houſes of Parliament. To which his Majeſty was pleaſed to give this Anſwer.

Gentlemen, It ſhall always be my ſtudy to preſerve the Proteſtant Religion, and to advance and ſupport the Intereſt of my People.

The Commons diſſatisfied.

But ſtill the Commons were hearty and zealous in the proſecution of the Plot, and would not be diverted by any fine Words; and therefore, on November the 12th, they Reſolved, "That there being "an Accuſation of High-Treaſon againſt Sir William "Godolphin, his Majeſty's Ambaſſador in Spain, "That an humble Addreſs be preſented to his Ma"jeſty, to deſire his Majeſty to call home Sir Wil"liam Godolphin to anſwer the Accuſation.

Make ſeveral Addreſſes.

To which his Majeſty was pleaſed to Anſwer, That he had already order'd his Letters of Revocation; and that he had a Perſon in his Eye, who he deſigned ſhould ſucceed him in that Service. And on the ſame Day the Commons preſented another Addreſs to his Majeſty, deſiring, "That a ſpecial Commiſſion may "be iſſued forth, for tendring the Oaths of Alle"giance and Supremacy to all the Servants of his "Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs, and to all other "Perſons (except her Majeſty's Portugal Servants) "reſiding within his Majeſty's Houſes of Whitehall, "St. James's, and Somerſet-Houſe, and all other his "Majeſty's Houſes; and that there may likewiſe "Special Commiſſions be iſſued forth, for tendring "the ſaid Oaths to all Perſons reſiding within the "two Serjeants-Inns, all the Inns of Court, and "Inns of Chancery.

King's Anſwer.

To which his Majeſty return'd an Anſwer in Writing, That as to all his Majeſty's own Servants, all the Servants of his Royal Highneſs, all other Perſons reſiding in Whitehall, St. James's, Somerſet-Houſe, or in any other of his Majeſty's Palaces or Houſes, except the Menial Servants of the Queen and Dutcheſs; as alſo all Perſons within either of the Serjeants-Inns, or any of the Inns of Court, or Chancery, his Majeſty willingly grants it: But as to the Queen's Menial Servants, who are ſo very inconſiderable in their Number, and within the Articles of Marriage, his Majeſty does not think it fit. And his Majeſty cannot but take notice, That in a late Addreſs from the Houſe of Peers, the Menial Servants of the Queen and Dutcheſs are excepted; and his Majeſty hopes this Houſe will proceed with the ſame Moderation as to that particular. Given at the Court at Whitehall, the 14th Day of November, 1678.

Commons inſiſt on their Deſires.

But the Commons in another Addreſs, did humbly adviſe his Majeſty, and did renew their Deſires, That the Perſons excepted in his Majeſty's Meſſage, may be comprehended in the ſame Commiſſion: For which they do in all Duty lay before his Majeſty the Reaſons following: "1. For the Quieting the "Minds of your Majeſty's good Proteſtant Subjects, "who have a more than ordinary Care and Solici"tude for the Safety of your Majeſty's Perſon, by "reaſon of the notorious Conſpiracy of the Popiſh "Party at this time, even againſt the Life of your "Sacred Majeſty. 2. By your Majeſty's Procla"mation, ſet forth upon the Addreſs of both Houſes, "for baniſhing Popiſh Recuſants ten Miles from "London, there is no ſuch Reſtriction. 3. The "Diſcouragement it would be to this Kingdom, "to ſee ſo great a neglect; and the Occaſions that "Papiſts would take to ſay from thence, That all "our Fears are groundleſs. 4. It is too great a "Countenance to the dangerous Factions, which "are already come to that height, that it renders "all manner of Diſcouragement on that ſide neceſ"ſary. 5. It is againſt the Laws and Statutes of "the Realm; which, as they are preſerved and "maintain'd by your Majeſty's Authority, ſo we "aſſure our ſelves, you will not ſuffer them to be "thus violated in your own Family and Royal Pre"ſence, and upon the Account of Popiſh Recu"ſants.

On Novemb. 18th, the Houſe being informed that there were ſeveral Commiſſions granted to Popiſh Recuſants,

1678. 29*Car.*II.

Recuſants, and Warrants alſo that they ſhould be Muſtered, notwithſtanding they have not taken the Oaths, [a] and ſubſcribed the Declaration, according to the Act of Parliament, and that they were ſigned by Mr. Secretary Williamſon; they immediately ſent him to the Tower. This much offended the King, who next Day ſent for the Houſe of Commons to attend him in the Banquetting-Houſe, and told them, Tho' they committed his Servant, without acquainting him; yet he intends to deal more freely with them, and acquaint them with his Intention to releaſe his Secretary. Upon which immediately, the ſame Day, the Commons drew up an Addreſs to his Majeſty, to preſent to him theſe Reaſons of their Proceedings in the Commitment of Sir Joſeph Williamſon as a Member of their Houſe: " 1. That divers Commiſſions " were granted to Popiſh Officers, and Counter- " ſigned by the ſaid Sir Joſeph Williamſon, and de- " livered out in October laſt, ſince the meeting of " this Houſe, and the Diſcovery of the preſent Po- " piſh Conſpiracy. 2. Diverſe Warrants have alſo " been produced before us, of Diſpenſations con- " trary to Law, for Popiſh Officers to continue in " their Commands, and to be paſſed in Muſter, not- " withſtanding they have not taken the Oaths of " Allegiance and Supremacy, and received the " bleſſed Sacrament of the Lord's-Supper, accor- " ding to the late Act of Parliament in that behalf: " All which ſaid Warrants were likewiſe Counter- " ſigned by the ſaid Sir Joſeph Williamſon. Which " being complained of to us, and confeſſed by the " ſaid Sir Joſeph Williamſon; we your Majeſty's " moſt dutiful Subjects having the immediate Con- " ſideration before us, of the imminent Danger of " your Majeſty's Perſon, the Safety whereof is a- " bove all things moſt dear, and likewiſe the Dan- " gers from Popiſh Plots ſo nearly threatning the " Peace and Safety of your Majeſty's Government, " and the Proteſtant Religion, were humbly of O- " pinion, we could not diſcharge our Duty to your " Majeſty and the whole Kingdom, without the " committing the ſaid Sir Joſeph Williamſon, and " therefore moſt humbly deſire that he may not be " diſcharged by your Majeſty.

Secretary Williamſon ſent to the Tower.

This offends the King.

Commons give their Reaſons.

" And we do further moſt humbly deſire your " Majeſty, to recall all Commiſſions granted to all " Papiſts within the Kingdom of England and Ireland, or any other your Majeſty's Dominions and " Territories.

To this his Majeſty return'd Anſwer in Writing, deliver'd to the Houſe by Mr. Secretary Coventry, Nov. 23[d].

Charles Rex.

King's Anſwer.

His Majeſty having received an Addreſs the 19*th Inſtant from this Houſe, is pleaſed to return this Anſwer:*

That he releaſed Mr. Secretary Williamſon before your Addreſs came, as he told you in the Banquetting-Houſe he would do.

As to the Reaſons of granting thoſe Commiſſions, his Majeſty acquainted you at large with them, in his Speech, when you laſt attended him.

But in Anſwer to your preſent Addreſs, his Majeſty promiſes to recal all his Commiſſions whatſoever, given to Papiſts, or reputed Papiſts, either in England or Ireland, immediately; and for his remoter Dominions, they ſhall likewiſe be recalled with all the expedition the Safety of thoſe Places will permit.

The King betray'd himſelf to be very weary of theſe Proceedings, and was in haſte to get a Bill for Money, and ſo to diſmiſs the too buſie Houſes: And therefore on Monday Novemb. 25th, his Majeſty was pleaſed to make this Speech to both Houſes.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech.

I Told you in the beginning of this Seſſion, how much I had been obliged to keep up my Forces in Flanders: That without it, our Neighbours had abſolutely deſpaired; and by this means, whatever has been ſaved of Flanders is acknowledged to be wholly due to my Interpoſition: And I ſhewed you withal, that I had been forced to employ that Money which had been raiſed for Disbanding thoſe Troops, in the Continuance of them together; and not only ſo, but that I had been much more out of Purſe for that Service; a Service by which the Honour and Intereſt of the Nation hath been ſo far improv'd, that as I am confident no Man would repine at it, ſo I did not doubt but you would all be willing to ſupply it.

I have now undergone the Expence ſo long, that I find it abſolutely impoſſible to ſupport the Charge any longer, and did therefore think of putting an end to that Charge, by recalling my Troops with all poſſible ſpeed, who are already expoſed to the utmoſt extremity of Want and Miſery, being without any proſpect of farther Pay or Subſiſtance.

But whilſt I was about to do this, I have been importun'd by the Spaniſh Miniſters to continue them a little longer; until the Ratifications of the Peace be exchanged; without which all that hath been hitherto ſaved in Flanders, will inevitably fall into the hands of their Enemies.

And now, between their Importunity to keep up thoſe Troops; and my own inability to pay them any longer, I find my ſelf in great Difficulties what to reſolve. If you do not think that the publick Safety may require the Continuance, I do wiſh as heartily as any Man, that, for the publick Eaſe, they may be ſpeedily Disbanded, and paid off.

I have thought fit thus to lay the Matter before you; and having acquitted my ſelf to all the World, by asking your Advice and Aſſiſtance; I deſire it may be ſpeedy, and without any manner of delay.

The Houſe of Commons had before them a Bill for raiſing the Militia; which, with Amendments, was Ingroſſed immediately after the King's Speech: Which paſſing the Lords was rejected by the King, for this Reaſon, ſent in a Meſſage to the Commons by Mr. Secretary Coventry Decemb. 4.

The King rejects the Bill for the Militia.

Charles Rex.

A Meſſage to the Commons.

His Majeſty to prevent all Miſunderſtandings that may ariſe, from his not paſſing the late Bill of the Militia, is pleaſed to declare, That he will readily Aſſent to any Bill of that kind, which ſhall be tendred to him, for the publick Security of the Kingdom by the Militia, ſo as the whole Power of calling, continuing, or not continuing of them together during the Time limited, be left to his Majeſty, to do therein as he ſhall find moſt expedient for the publick Safety.

The Commons apprehended another Danger from the Engliſh Army in Flanders, which, upon the late Juncture of a Separate Peace, had nothing to do, but to be ready to be employed in ſome ill Service; and therefore on Wedneſday Nov. 27. it was Reſolved, Nemine Contradicente, " That it is neceſſary, " for the Safety of his Majeſty's Perſon, and pre- " ſerving the Peace of the Government, that all " the Forces which have been raiſed ſince the 29th " of Septemb. 1677. and all others that ſince that " time have been brought over from beyond Seas " from Foreign Service, be forthwith Disbanded: " And Reſolved it to be the humble Opinion and De-

Commons inſiſt on Disbanding the Army.

[a] Now began the diſpenſing Power in favour of the Papiſts to be put into Places, with a Non-obſtante to the Oaths and Teſt Act. King Charles had the wiſe Goodneſs to recede from this diſpenſing Power; but King James reſum'd it, and in defiance of a like Addreſs in Parliament ſtood and fell by it.

ſire

" fire of this Houſe, That the Forces which are now " in Flanders may be immediately called over, in or- " der to their Disbanding. And they preſented an Addreſs for this Purpoſe to his Majeſty, and made an Entry of his Majeſty's Anſwer, as a refuſal to comply with their Deſire. But his Majeſty ſoon after was pleaſed to declare, That he never gave any Order for ſuch Anſwer; but that his Intention was only in relation to the Forces that were in Flanders, and the Circumſtances as to thoſe Forces were altered ſince that time; and that his Majeſty had already given Orders for calling them over, in order to their Disbanding. And ſo his Majeſty fell eaſily into this Deſign, becauſe it depended on a Bill for granting a Supply to his Majeſty, by a Land Tax, for Disbanding the ſaid Forces.

The King complies.

Intrigues of France.

The Intrigues of the Miniſtry with the Court of France, was another Danger which raiſed the Jealouſie of the Commons: This appeared more eſpecially by a Meſſage from the King on December 19, delivered to the Houſe of Commons, That his Majeſty having received Information, That his late Ambaſſador in France, Mr. Mountague, a Member of that Houſe [a] had held ſeveral private Conferences with the Pope's Nuncio there, without any Directions or Inſtructions from his Majeſty, his Majeſty to the End that he might know the Truth of that Matter, had given Orders for the ſeizing Mr. Mountague's Papers. Upon which Mr. Mountague in his own Defence acquainted the Houſe, " That he had in his " Cuſtody ſeveral Papers which he conceived might " tend very much to the Safety of his Majeſty's " Perſon and the Preſervation of the Kingdom. And accordingly a Box of Writings was ſent for and opened in the Houſe, and two Letters were produced and read in the Houſe, ſubſcribed Danby, in the firſt of which, dated London, 17 January 1677. were theſe Expreſſions. My Lord, Yeſterday Monſieur Rouigny came to me with Monſieur Barillon (having given me his Father's Letters the Day before) and diſcourſed much upon the Confidence his King hath of the firmneſs of ours to him, of the good Opinion his Maſter hath of me, and of his King's Reſolution to condeſcend to any thing that is not infamous to him, for the Satisfaction of our King, how certainly our King may depend upon all ſorts of Aſſiſtances and Supplies from his Maſter, in caſe the Friendſhip be preſerved.——The main of their Drift was to engage me to prevail with the King to prevail with the Prince of Orange.——The King muſt come to ſome Declaration of his Mind to the Parliament when it meets: That which makes the Hopes of Peace yet leſs probable is, that the Duke grows every Day leſs inclin'd to it, and has created a greater Indifferency in the King than I could have imagined; which being added to the French King's Reſolution not to part with Tournay, do, I confeſs, make me deſpair of any Accommodation: Nevertheleſs, I am aſſured, that one principal Cauſe of the Adjournment for thirteen Days, has been to ſee if any Expedient for the Peace could have been found in that Time, and the Effect of the Adjournment hath hitherto been, that no body will now believe other than that the Peace is already concluded betwixt Us and France.

Complained of by the King.

Diſcovered by Mr. Mountague.

Letters of the Lord Danby.

In another Letter, ſubſcribed Danby, and dated, London, March 25, 1678. is among other Things what follows: In caſe the Conditions of the Peace ſhall be accepted, the King expects to have ſix Millions of Livres Yearly for Three Years from the Time that this Agreement ſhall be ſigned betwixt his Majeſty and the King of France, becauſe it will be two or three Years before he can hope to find his Parliament in an Humour to give him Supplies after the having made any Peace with France, and the Ambaſſador here has agreed to that Sum, but not for ſo long a Time; if you find the Peace will not be accepted, you are not to mention the Money at all; and all poſſible Care muſt be taken to have this whole Negotiation as private as is poſſible, for fear of giving Offence at home, where for the moſt part we hear it ten Days after any thing that is communicated to the French Miniſters: Upon reading theſe Letters, it was immediately reſolved, That there was ſufficient Matter of Impeachment againſt Thomas Earl of Danby, Lord High Treaſurer of England, and Articles of Impeachment were drawn up, and agreed to on December 21. " Firſt, " That he hath traiterouſly incroached to himſelf " Regal Power, by Treating in Matters of Peace " and War with Foreign Princes and Ambaſſadors, " and giving Inſtructions to his Majeſty's Ambaſſadors abroad, without communicating the ſame to " the Secretaries of State, and the reſt of his Majeſty's Council, &c. Secondly, That he hath traiterouſly endeavoured to ſubvert the ancient and " well eſtabliſhed Form of Government, and inſtead thereof, to introduce an Arbitrary and Tyrannical Way of Government. And the better " to effect this his Purpoſe, he did deſign the raiſing " of an Army under Pretence of a War againſt the " French King, and then to continue the ſame, as " a Standing Army within this Kingdom, &c. " Thirdly, That he traiterouſly intending to alienate the Hearts and Affections of his Majeſty's " good Subjects from his Royal Perſon and Government, and to hinder the Meeting of Parliaments, " and to deprive his Majeſty of their ſafe and wholſome Counſels, &c. Fourthly, That he is Popiſhly affected, and hath traiterouſly concealed, " after he had Notice of the late horrid Plot or " Conſpiracy contrived by the Papiſts againſt his " Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and hath ſuppreſt the Evidence, and reproachfully diſcountenanc'd the King's Witneſſes in the diſcovery of it " in Favour of Popery, &c. Fifthly, That he hath " waſted the King's Treaſure by iſſuing out of his " Majeſty's Exchequer, and ſeveral Branches of his " Revenue, divers great Sums of Money for unneceſſary Penſions and ſecret Services, to the Value " of 231602*l.* within two Years, &c. Sixthly, " That he hath by indirect Means procured from " his Majeſty for himſelf divers conſiderable Gifts " and Grants of Inheritance of the ancient Revenue " of the Crown even contrary to Acts of Parliaments. Theſe Articles were carried up to the Lords, with a Deſire, That the ſaid Thomas Earl of Danby, might be Sequeſtred from Parliament, and forthwith committed to ſafe Cuſtody. There had Commons impeach the Earl of Danby.

[a] See a Letter of the Lord Treaſurer Danby to Sir William Temple, dated, London, Nov. 19. 1678.——The ill Practices of Mr. Mountague to debauch them [the Members] ſince his coming to the Houſe. I have heard more of his ill Practices of other kinds, and ſome of them particularly againſt yourſelf, which I am hunting as well as I can to find out: And I hear that Mr. Olivecrans can tell us ſome things if he pleaſes of Mr. Mountagu that would both ſpoil his Plots and his Seat in Parliament, and which you would do well to inform yourſelf of, if you meet with a fit Occaſion.——In another of Novemb. 22. 1678. I ſhew'd yours of the 5th Inſtant immediately to his Majeſty, who is thereby made very deſirous of getting all the Information he can poſſibly of what is yet but darkly hinted by Mr. Olivecrans. You ſay he read to you a Liſt of ſeveral Perſons deſign'd for great Offices, &c. But 'tis not plain whether that was a Liſt he had lately from England, or ſome other Liſt he knows of, &c. As to what concerns Mr. Mountagu, I perceive his Majeſty knows nothing of his Conferences with the Pope's Nuncio. And for what Mr. Olivecrans ſuppoſes might have been the Occaſion of thoſe Conferences, viz. A Treaty of Marriage betwixt the King of Spain and the Duke of Orleans's Daughter; his Majeſty ſays he never entred into ſuch Treaty, nor ever gave Mr. Mountagu any Inſtructions about it——Letters of the Earl of Danby, 8vo. 1700. p. 264. the Gentleman's Narrative concerning Mr. Mountagu, publiſh'd by the Earl of Danby himſelf, now Duke of Leeds, in 1710. mentions the Heats that were in the Houſe about ſeizing Mr. Mountagu's Papers at his Houſe. My Lady Harvy firſt told me her Brother was very much afraid of being ſent to the Tower. I told her I thought not, the Parliament ſitting. She replied, My Lord Danby would cauſe a Diſſolution, or Prorogation, and he would then be ſnapp'd. Ib. p. 117.

 been

1678. 30 Car. II. been before an Impeachment carried up of Treaſon and other high Crimes and Miſdemeanors againſt Henry Lord Arundel of Wardor; William Earl of Powis, John Lord Bellaſis; William Lord Petres, and William Viſcount Stafford, who had been all committed to the Tower.

Popiſh Lords impeach'd, and committed to the Tower.

The King offended, prorogues the Parliament.

The King was ſo much diſturb'd with theſe Proceedings, that on Monday December 30. he came to the Houſe of Lords, and declared in a Speech, That it was with great unwillingneſs that he was come to tell them that he intended to prorogue them, That all of them were Witneſſes, he had not been well uſed, the Particulars of which he would acquaint them at a more ſeaſonable Time, in the mean time he would immediately enter upon the disbanding of the Army, and do what he could for the Kingdom, and Safety of Religion, and that he would proſecute the diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot, to find out the Inſtruments of it, and take all the Care that is in his Power to ſecure the Proteſtant Religion as it is now Eſtabliſhed. And accordingly his Majeſty was pleaſed to prorogue the Parliament till the 4th of February next.

The Papiſts encourag'd.

This Prorogation ſo Incouraged the Papiſts, that they flock'd to London and Weſtminſter in great Numbers, and began to talk with ſo great Inſolence, that the King, by the Advice of his Council, was forced to publiſh a Proclamation, dated January 3d. declaring, That whereas ſeveral Popiſh Recuſants, and Perſons reputed to be ſuch, had, ſince the late Prorogation of the Parliament, taken the boldneſs to reſort to the ſaid Cities, his Majeſty was moſt highly offended with their Preſumption, and did Order, That a diligent and ſpeedy ſearch and inquiry ſhould be made after them, and they ſhould be proceeded againſt with the utmoſt Severity. And on January 11. his Majeſty publiſhed another Proclamation, Commanding the immediate return of all his Majeſty's Subjects who were in any Foreign Seminaries, and forbidding Relief to be ſent to them, according to a Statute made 27. Eliz.

Check'd by a Proclamation.

The Parliament diſſolved.

But his Majeſty having no hopes of Eaſe and Satisfaction from the preſent Parliament, was now at laſt inclined to diſſolve them, and therefore by Proclamation dated 24 January, his Majeſty declared, "That he had taken into his ſerious Conſideration "the many Inconveniences ariſing by the over-long "continuance of one and the ſame Parliament, "wherefore he publiſhes and declares his Royal "Will and Pleaſure to diſſolve this preſent Parlia- "ment.——But to the Intent his Majeſty's Loyal "Subjects may perceive the Confidence his Maje- "ſty hath in their good Affections, and how wil- "ling and deſirous his Majeſty is to meet his Peo- "ple, and have their Advice, by their Repreſenta- "tives in Parliament, he will cauſe Writs in due "Form of Law to be iſſued for the calling of a "new Parliament, which ſhall begin and be holden "at Weſtminſter, on Thurſday the ſixth Day of "March next; when his Majeſty doth expect ſuch "Laws will be Enacted, and ſuch Order taken, by "the Conſent and Advice of his Parliament, as will "tend to the ſecuring the true Proteſtant Religion, "and the peaceable and happy Government of this "his Kingdom.

End of this Long Parliament, and Reflexions on it.

Thus ended, with Honour to themſelves, the Long Parliament; which being firſt called, and begun on the 8th of May, 1661. had been continued by ſeveral Prorogations and Adjournments for ſeventeen Years, eight Months, and ſeventeen Days. Many Reflections were made on the prime Reaſon of their Diſſolution: Some reſolv'd it into the King's Anger at the Commitment of, and Impeachment of his firſt Miniſter, the Lord Treaſurer: But Sir William Temple is poſitive, "That the Treaſurer "was before fallen into the King's Diſpleaſure, for "bringing the Popiſh Plot into Parliament, againſt "the King's abſolute Command." Others think it was rather done upon account of protecting the Popiſh Lords in the Tower, and diverting, if poſſible, the Noiſe of the Popiſh Plot: For it is certain the King did all along frown upon the Evidence, tho' Thomas Killigrew is ſaid to have told him, Your Majeſty knows more of the Plot than any body elſe; and your Diſcovery of it would quickly ſatisfy your People. But undoubtedly, the greateſt Reaſon of all, was to cover the Duke of York from the Reſentment of the Commons[a], and the general Indignation of the People: And therefore, to prevent any Queſtion of him in the next Seſſion, his Majeſty thought fit to ſend him out of the Way, that his Abſence, if poſſible, might drop the Diſputes about him: So on Feb. 28. he ſent him this Letter.

King's Letter to his Brother to withdraw.

I Have already given you my Reſolves at large, why I think it fit that you abſent your ſelf for ſome time beyond the Seas: As I am truly ſorry for the Occaſion, ſo may you be ſure I ſhall never deſire it longer than it ſhall be abſolutely neceſſary for your Good, and my Service. In the mean time I think it proper to give it you under my Hand, That I expect this Compliance from you, and deſire it may be as ſoon as conveniently you can. You may eaſily perceive with what Trouble I write this to you; there being Nothing I am more ſenſible of, than the conſtant Kindneſs you have ever had for me. I hope you are as Juſt to me, to be aſſur'd, That no Abſence, nor any thing elſe, can ever change me from being truly and kindly,

Yours, C. R.

Duke goes away to Flanders.

In purſuance to this Command, the Duke, with his Dutcheſs and Family, left St. James's, took Shipping, and for a while retired to the Hague, and from thence to Bruſſels.

Honours and Preferments.

As to Honours and Preferments conferred this Year: On July 17. the Right Honourable George Lord Berkeley, of Berkeley-Caſtle, was ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council: On Oct. 18. the Earl of Ailesbury was admitted to the ſame Board; as was James Earl of Saliſbury on Jan. 3. and the Earl of Clarendon on Jan. 8. The Right Honourable James Earl of Arran, Son to his Grace the Duke of Hamilton, was on Jan. 14. ſworn one of the Gentlemen of his Majeſty's Bed-Chamber in Ordinary; which Mark of his ſpecial Favour his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to confer upon him, in conſideration of the great and loyal Services of that ancient and noble Family. Mr. Secretary Williamſon having fell into an high Diſpleaſure of the Houſe of Commons, not only for the reaſon of his Commitment, but, as they thought, of his irregular Diſcharge, thought fit to reſign his Place; and on Feb. 9. his Majeſty was pleaſed to conſtitute the Right Honourable Robert Earl of Sunderland one of his principal Secretaries of State, in the room of Sir Joſeph Williamſon, who did then reſign the Seals into his Majeſty's Hands; and reſolving to retire and enjoy the Country, he did on the 14th of January marry the Relict of the Lord O Bryan, (who deceaſed on the firſt of December 1678.) Siſter and Co-heir of Charles late Duke of Richmond and Lenox, who died at Elſeneur in Denmark on the 2d of December, 1672. being then his Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary to that Crown. Sir William Temple was call'd over from Holland by his Majeſty, in order to take upon him this Office; who acquainted the Prince of Orange and the States with [a] To oblige the Duke, and prevent his fear of being diſinherited as a Papiſt, the King made a Declaration in Writing, and had it printed by his ſpecial Command, ſolemnly denying the falſe and malicious Report of his having been married to the Mother of the Duke of Monmouth, dated, Whitehall, Jan. 6. 167$\frac{7}{8}$. And again another Declaration made and entred in Council, Whitehall, March 3. 167$\frac{8}{9}$, that he never gave or made any Contract of Marriage.

his

1678. 30 Car. II.

his Journey, and the Deſign of it; who made him Complements upon that Occaſion, and would have had him believe, that the Secretaryſhip was to make Amends for the Loſs of his Ambaſſage. But Sir William told the Prince, "That though he muſt "go, yet if he found the Scene to be what it ap-"pear'd at that Diſtance, he would not charge "himſelf with that Employment, upon any Terms "that could be offer'd." Whether Sir William did refuſe it, or whether it was never in earneſt offer'd to him [a], this is certain, that it was diſpos'd of before Sir William's Return to England: And it was not long a Secret, that the Earl of Sunderland paid Sir Joſeph Williamſon ſix thouſand Pounds, and five hundred Guineas, in conſideration of his Surrender of the ſaid Place. The Earl of Danby lying in the Tower under a like Diſpleaſure of the Commons, his Majeſty thought fit to diſmiſs him from the Office of Lord High Treaſurer of England; and the Lord Latimer, his Son, having deliver'd the White Staff into his Majeſty's Hands, his Majeſty was pleaſed to appoint the Right Honourable the Earl of Eſſex, Laurence Hyde Eſq; Sir John Ernle, Sir Edward Deering, and Sidney Godolphin Eſq; to be Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Treaſury.

Executions of Popiſh Plotters.

In Proſecution of the Popiſh Plot, Mr. William Staley being convicted of treaſonable Words againſt his Majeſty's Life, was Drawn, Hang'd, and Quarter'd at Tyburn on the 26th of November. Edward Coleman Eſq; found guilty of High Treaſon, in conſpiring the Death of the King, and ſubverting his Government, and extirpating of the True Proteſtant Religion, was executed upon the like Sentence on the 3d of December, having depended on a Promiſe of Pardon with ſo much Aſſurance, that ſome of his laſt Words were ſaid to be [b], There is no Faith in Man. On the 24th of January, William Ireland, a Jeſuit, and John Grove, having been on the 14th of December convicted at the Old-Bailey of having conſpired the Deſtruction of the King's Royal Perſon, the Subverſion of his Government, and the Extirpation of the Proteſtant Religion, were accordingly executed at Tyburn; but their Heads and Quarters were deliver'd to their Friends to be buried through his Majeſty's extraordinary Grace and Mercy. Green, Hill, and Berry, who were indicted at the King's-Bench-Bar on the 10th of February for the Murther of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey, and upon a full Evidence found guilty, were ſoon after executed: But Mr. Samuel Atkins being likewiſe indicted as an Acceſſory to the ſaid Murther, was, after a full Hearing of the Evidence againſt him, acquitted, and thereupon diſcharged. And at the latter-end of January, Roger Earl of Caſtlemain, Mr. Daniel Arthur of London, Merchant, and Eſq; Sheldon, were, upon their Habeas Corpus, brought reſpectively into the Court of King's-Bench, and diſcharg'd of their Impriſonment, giving ſufficient Bail for their Appearance when thereunto required.

A ſtrange Darkneſs.

It ſeems fit to be remember'd as an extraordinary Event, that on Sunday Jan. 12. 167 8/9. for above a Quarter of an Hour, between ten and eleven in the Morning, was ſo great and ſudden a Darkneſs in and about the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, that People within the Churches could not ſee to read in their Bibles, and were not able in the Streets to diſtinguiſh one Perſon from another. It was, for the time, a deeper Blackneſs than that of an Eclipſe, (which did not now happen) and was thought to equal, if not exceed the great Solar Eclipſe, which in the late Times left the Name of Black-Monday.

The Year concluded in great Strife and Diviſion, about electing Members for the New Parliament; thoſe Gentlemen were generally moſt popular, who were moſt averſe to Popery, and leaſt inclined to the Court: The City of London ſet an Example, by chuſing for their Repreſentatives Sir Robert Clayton, Kt. and Alderman; Sir Thomas Player, Kt. and Chamberlain of the City; William Love, Eſq; late Alderman; and Thomas Pilkinton, Eſq; a Turkey Merchant.

State of Religion.

The State of Religion, in reference to the Deſigns and horrid Attempts of Popery, has been already repreſented. It may be further obſerv'd, That upon meeting of the Parliament Octob. 21. when a Day of Faſting and Humiliation was appointed, and a Form of Prayer was drawing up for that Occaſion, the Commons addreſs'd the King with a Deſire, "That there might be a particular Prayer "or Prayers compoſed for the Cities of London and "Weſtminſter, relating to the Plot and Conſpiracy "contriv'd and carry'd on by the Papiſts againſt "his Majeſty's Perſon and Government." To which his Majeſty anſwer'd, That it ſhould be ſo done. But on the 10th of Nov. they reſolve to repreſent unto his Majeſty, "That thoſe his Majeſty's Commands "have not as yet been obey'd, there being no men-"tion in the Prayers to be uſed on Wedneſday next "of the Papiſts, who are the Contrivers of this "damnable and helliſh Plot: And therefore they "humbly deſire his Majeſty to give effectual Or-"ders that his Commands may be obey'd." On Tueſday Nov. 12. the Day before the Faſt, Mr. Secretary Williamſon acquainted the Houſe, "That "he had attended his Majeſty with their ſecond "Addreſs, touching a particular Prayer to be uſed "on Wedneſday next; and that his Majeſty was "pleaſed to give Orders that the Prayers ſhould be "alter'd.

Commons deſire a particular Prayer relating to the Popiſh Plot.

Bill to exclude Papiſts from either Houſe of Parliament.

The Commons were ſo zealous in their Bill for the more effectual Preſerving the King's Perſon and Government, by diſabling Papiſts to ſit in either Houſe of Parliament, that they voted it to be a Bill upon which the Safety of the King and Kingdom, and the Proteſtant Religion, do entirely depend. And when the Bill was likely to ſtick in the Houſe of Lords, they ſent up this Meſſage to them; "The Com-"mons in Parliament aſſembled reflecting on the "imminent Dangers wherein the Kingdom is in-"volved, by the reſtleſs Conſpiracies of Popiſh Re-"cuſants againſt his Majeſty's Perſon, and the Re-"ligion and Government eſtabliſh'd; do find them-"ſelves neceſſitated to remind your Lordſhips, for "a ſpeedy Proceeding on the Bill before you, en-"titul'd, An Act for the more effectual Preſerving "the King's Perſon and Government, by diſabling "Papiſts from ſitting in either Houſe of Parliament; "without which, they think themſelves unable to "prepare any effectual Remedies to prevent the "Evils that hang over us.

After the Riſing of the Parliament, there ſeemed to be a Diſpoſition in the Court to relax the many Orders that had been lately given for putting all the Laws in Execution againſt the Roman Catholicks; and it ſeems to have been upon this View, that the Juſtices of the Peace for Middleſex preſented to his Majeſty, in Council, theſe ſix Quæries:

[a] Sir William Temple underſtands that he was not to ſucceed in the place of Sir Joſeph Williamſon, as here intimated, but in the other Secretary's Office about the ſame time with my Lord Sunderland, who was brought into Sir Joſeph Williamſon's Place. Memoirs II. p. 3[illegible].
Upon his coming over, he ſays, we knew very well in Holland that both Houſes of Parliament believed the Plot; that the Clergy, the City, the Countrey in general did ſo too, or at leaſt purſu'd it, as if they all believ'd it. We knew the King and ſome of the Court believ'd nothing of it, and yet thought not fit to own that Opinion. And the Prince told me, He had reaſon to be confident that the King was in his Heart a Roman Catholick, tho' he durſt not profeſs it.

[b] There was only ſome little Reſpect paid him after he was dead. His Quarters were allow'd to be buried, and his Eſtate given to his Wife and Children.

1. "Whether

1678. 30 Car. II.

Quæries of the Juſtices of Peace, in relation to putting the Laws in Execution againſt the Papiſts.

1. " Whether Foreigners (Popiſh Recuſants) " that are and have long been here ſettled Houſe-" keepers, and are Tradeſmen, viz. Chirurgeons, " Taylors, Perriwig-makers, or Ordinary Shop-" keepers following Employments for their own " Advantage, but not otherwiſe Merchants, but " are certified to be Merchant-Strangers, ſhall be " excuſed from taking the Oaths, or finding Sure-" ties, or either of them?

2. " Whether ſuch Foreigners, being certified " by Ambaſſadors, or other Foreign Miniſters, " to be their Servants at this time, ſhall be ex-" cuſed?

3. " Whether Foreigners (Popiſh Recuſants) " ſettled here Houſe-keepers, but neither are Trades-" men, Travellers, or Foreign Miniſters Servants, " ſhall be excuſed?

4. " Whether Native Subjects of our Sovereign " Lord, that are menial Servants of Foreign Mi-" niſters, ſhall be excuſed?

5. " Whether Married Women, being Popiſh " Recuſants, but their Husbands Proteſtants, ſhall " be excuſed?

6. " Whether Popiſh Recuſants that have taken " the Oaths, found Sureties, have appeared, and " are convict, ſhall find new Sureties, or be con-" tinued over?

And his Majeſty had from the Judges, to whom the ſame were referred, received Anſwer in Writing in the Words following:

May it pleaſe your Majeſty,

Anſwer of the Judges.

" WE have met and conſider'd of the Queſti-" ons propoſed to us, and do hereby " humbly return our Opinions.

" To the Firſt, We are of Opinion,

1. " That Foreigners (being Popiſh Recuſants) " and exerciſing Ordinary Trades (but not Mer-" chants) are not excuſed from taking the Oaths, " or finding Securities.

2. " To the Second; That Foreigners, though " certified by Ambaſſadors to be their Servants, " except they are their Menial Servants, are not " excuſed.

3. " To the Third; That Foreigners, though " ſettled Houſe-keepers, being no Travellers, or " Foreign Miniſters Servants, are not excuſed.

4. " To the Fourth; That the King's Native " Subjects are not excuſed from taking the Oaths " by being Menial Servants to Foreign Maſters.

5. " To the Fifth; We find no Law that ex-" cuſes a Feme-Covert, being a Papiſt, from taking " the Oaths, though her Husband be a Proteſtant.

6. " To the Sixth; That a Popiſh Recuſant ha-" ving taken the Oaths, is not bound to find new " Sureties, unleſs upon a new Tender of the Oaths " he ſhall refuſe to take them.

" All which, with great Humility, we ſub-" mit to your Majeſty's Judgment.

William Scroggs,	Robert Atkyns,
Francis North,	V. Bertie,
W. Mountague,	Fr. Bramſton,
W. Wylde,	Tho. Jones,
Tim. Littleton,	W. Dolben.
Hugh Wyndham.

1668. 30 Car. II.

" His Majeſty is graciouſly pleaſed to approve the " ſaid Report and Opinion of his Judges, and did " this Day (Jan. 31.) order, as it is hereby order-" ed accordingly, That the Juſtices of the Peace in " their reſpective Precincts, do, in Execution of " their Duties touching the Particulars there men-" tioned, take Notice of the ſame, and conform " themſelves thereunto. And this Order is to be " ſent to the Cuſtos Rotulorum of each County, that " he may give Information of the ſame.

The Juſtices being too Remiſs, are complain'd of in Council.

There ſeem'd to be a like Remiſſneſs in ſome Parts of the Country, as well as nearer Court; for Complaint was made to the King in Council, That ſeveral Juſtices of the Peace, of ſeveral Counties, Cities, and Liberties within this Kingdom, notwithſtanding the many Proclamations which his Majeſty had been pleaſed lately to publiſh for the better Security of his Majeſty's Perſon and Government [a], and of the True Proteſtant Religion, did refuſe or neglect to put the ſame in Execution. Whereupon his Majeſty, on Jan. 31. was pleaſed in Council to order, " That all his Majeſty's Ju-" ſtices of the Peace ſhould with all Care and Di-" ligence purſue the ſaid Commands in Execution " of the Laws; and upon due Complaint made of " their Neglect or Refuſal, ſhould be put out of " Commiſſion, as Perſons diſaffected to his Maje-" ſty's Government, and the True Proteſtant Re-" ligion, and in their Places other Perſons ſhould be " put, who were likely to act with more Vigour " and good Affection." And at the beginning of this ſame Month, his Majeſty, by Advice of his Privy-Council, iſſued out his Royal Proclamation, dated Jan. 8. commanding the immediate Return of all his Majeſty's Subjects who are in any Foreign Seminaries, and forbidding Relief to be ſent to them.

The King forc'd to quicken 'em.

The Diſſenters Behaviour upon the Popiſh Plot.

The Diſſenters knew how to make ſome Advantage of the Popiſh Plot, and generally falling into the Wiſhes and Endeavours of a zealous Proſecution of it, became thereby the more popular; and thoſe Members in each Houſe who were thought to be in their Intereſt, had now an Opportunity of being eſteem'd the greater Patriots, and the better Friends of the Proteſtant Religion; while many of thoſe who were more profeſſedly for the Eſtabliſhed Church of England were drawn into the Meaſures of the Court, and into the Perſonal Intereſt of the Duke of York, and thereby fell under the Character of being Popiſhly affected, and the Promoters of Arbitrary Power. The Diſſolution of the Long Parliament was a ſpiteful Satisfaction to many of the Old Nonconformiſts, becauſe of their Suffering by ſome Laws that had been made by them. And upon the Choice of a New Parliament, this ſame Party were very induſtrious to recommend thoſe Gentlemen who had been moſt their Friends and Abettors, making the World at this Juncture believe, that they were the chief Aſſertors of Engliſh Liberty and the Reformed Religion. Their own Hiſtory be-Abridgment of Mr. Baxter's Life.

[a] See 1. The Romiſh Prieſt turn'd Proteſtant, with the Reaſons of his Converſion; wherein the true Church is expoſed to the view of Chriſtians, and derived out of the Holy Scriptures, ſound Reaſon, and the ancient Fathers; humbly preſented to both Houſes of Parliament by James Salgado, a Spaniard, formerly a Prieſt of the Order of Dominicans, Decemb. 26. 1678. Lond. 1679. 4*to.*——2. The Memoirs of Mr. James Wadeſworth, a Jeſuit that recanted; with the Reaſons why he turn'd Proteſtant, diſcovering a dreadful Proſpect of Impiety in the blaſphemous Doctrines of the Jeſuits, &c. London, 4*to.* 1679.——3. An exact Diſcovery of the Myſtery of Iniquity as it is now in Practice among the Jeſuits, and other their Emiſſaries; with a particular Account of their Antichriſtian and Deviliſh Policy. Compoſed in the Italian Tongue by one of the Romiſh Religion, and now newly publiſh'd by Titus Oates, D. D. Licens'd Febr. 4. 167$\frac{8}{9}$. London, 1679. 4*to.*——4. The Cabinet of the Jeſuits Secrets opened, in which there are many things relating to the Church and Clergy of England; from a French Copy, printed at Colen 1678. Made Engliſh by a Perſon of Quality. Licens'd Febr. 14. 167$\frac{8}{9}$. 4*to.*——5. A ſhort Narrative of the Diſcovery of a College of Jeſuits at a Place called the Come, in the County of Hereford, as ſent up to the Lords in Parliament at the End of the laſt Seſſions by the Right Reverend Father in God Herbert Lord Biſhop of Hereford, according to an Order ſent unto him by the ſaid Lords; to which is added a true Relation of the Knavery of Father Lewis, the pretended Biſhop of Landaſſe, now a Priſoner in Monmouth Goal. Licens'd Febr. 2[illegible]. 167$\frac{8}{9}$. 4*to.*

1678. 30 Car. II.

trays this Truth: "At length, on the 14th of January, 1678. this Parliament, which ſo long "comply'd with the Court in all their Deſires, "which, to gratify the Clergy, caſt ſo many worthy Miniſters out of the Church by the Act of "Uniformity, and afterwards laid ſuch heavy Burdens on the Poor Nonconformiſts, which improv'd "by Sitting, and grew more and more concern'd "for the Publick Welfare, as they were awakened "by a Senſe of the common Danger, was ſuddenly "diſſolved. This Diſſolution occaſion'd a general "Ferment in all Parts of the Country; it was generally eſteemed the common Concern in the "next Election to chuſe firm Proteſtants, who "ſhould heartily apply themſelves to make Proviſion for the common Security.

On March 9. Dr. Joſeph Henſhaw, Biſhop of Peterborough (who ſucceeded Dr. Benjamin Laney, tranſlated to Lincoln in 1663) died ſuddenly, at his return Home from the Evening Service at the Abbey-Church in Weſtminſter; whoſe Succeſſor in that See was Dr. William Lloyd, tranſlated thither from Llandaff.

There is little more of Eccleſiaſtical Matter in this Year, excepting the excellent Directions from the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to his reſpective Suffragans, concerning Letters Teſtimonial to be granted unto Candidates for Holy Orders in theſe Letters dated from Lambeth, Aug. 23. 1678.

Salutem in Chriſto.

My Lord,

Directions of the Archbp. of Canterbury for giving Teſtimonials for Holy Orders.

"Whereas the eaſy and promiſcuous granting "of Letters Teſtimonial, (which is in itſelf a ſacred Thing, and, in the firſt Intention, "of great and very weighty Importance) is, by "the Lapſe of Time, and the Corruption which "by inſenſible Degrees is crept into the beſt Inſtitutions, come to be both in the Univerſities, and "elſewhere in the Dioceſes, a matter of mere Formality, a piece of common Civility, ſcarce deny'd to any that aſk it, and many times, upon the "Credit of the firſt Subſcriber, atteſted by the "reſt, who have otherwiſe no Knowledge of the "Perſon ſo adorn'd; or elſe, where more Conſcience is made of bearing Falſe-witneſs, even for a "Neighbour, is done ſo perfunctorily, and in ſo "low and dilate Terms, as ought to ſignify nothing "at all to the great End which 'tis deſigned to ſerve, "and yet is ſometimes with a like Eaſineſs and Remiſſneſs received and proceeded upon, whereby "great Miſchiefs in the Church and Scandals daily "enſue; Perſons altogether undeſerving, or at leaſt "not duly qualified, being too often, upon the "Credit of ſuch Papers, admitted into Holy Orders; and in Conſequence thereupon, thruſting "themſelves into Employments of high Truſt and "Dignity and Advantage in the Church, and by "their numerous Intruſions preventing and excluding others of greater Modeſty and Merit: concerning all which, your Lordſhip cannot but "remember how many and how great Complaints "we met with both from our Brethren the Biſhops "and others, during the late Seſſion of Parliament, "and what Expedients for Remedy thereof were "then under Debate and Conſideration amongſt us. "Now, as the reſult of thoſe Counſels, and for the "effectual redreſſing of thoſe Inconveniences, and "preventing the like for the future, tho' it would "be abundantly ſufficient, to call all Perſons concerned on both Sides to the ſerious peruſal of, "and exact Compliance with thoſe excellent Conſtitutions and Canons Eccleſiaſtical made in the "Year 1603. which have moſt wiſely and fully "provided to obviate all thoſe Evils, yet (becauſe "in the modern Practice they ſeem not duly to be "attended to) it is thought fit and neceſſary again "to limit and regulate the Grant, the Matter and "the Form of Teſtimonials, as followeth, viz.

1. "That no Letters Teſtimonial be granted only "upon the Credit of others, or out of a Judgment "of Charity, which believes all things, and hopes all things, but from immediate and perſonal Knowledge, and that own'd and expreſſed in the Letters themſelves.

2. "That (as to the Form of theſe Letters) every ſuch Teſtimonial have the Date both as to "Time and Place expreſſly mentioned in the Body "of it, before it be ſubſcribed by any, and paſs alſo (as the Canon requires) under Hand and Seal; "Thoſe, namely, from the Univerſities, under the "common Seal of their reſpective Colleges, atteſted by the Subſcription of the Maſter, Head, or "Principal Perſon there; And thoſe from other "Places, under the Hands and Seals of three Prieſts "at the leaſt, of known Integrity, Gravity and Prudence, who are of the Vicinage where the Perſon teſtified of reſides, or have otherwiſe known "his Life and Behaviour by the ſpace of three "Years next before the Date of the ſaid Letters.

3. "And as to the Matter of them, That they "particularly expreſs the preſent Condition of the "Perſon in whoſe behalf the Teſtimony is given; "his Standing and Degree in the Univerſity, his "Place of preſent Abode, and Courſe of Life; his "End and Deſign for which he would make uſe of "the ſaid Teſtimonial, whether for obtaining the "Order of Deacon or Prieſt, or the Employment "of a Parſon, Vicar, Curate, or School-Maſter, "and that the Subſcribers know him to be worthy "and in regard of Learning, Prudence, and holy "Life, duly qualified for the ſame reſpectively: "And if he deſire holy Orders, his Age too, if the "Subſcribers know it, or elſe that they admoniſh "him to bring it otherwiſe credibly and ſufficiently "Atteſted.

Laſtly, "If ſuch Teſtimonial be to be made uſe of "in another Dioceſe than that where it is given, that "it be by no means received, without the Letters "Dimiſſory of the Biſhop, or other Ordinary of "the Place, atteſting in Writing the Ability, Honeſty, and good Converſation of the Perſon commended, in the Place from whence he came.

"My Lord, This is (I think) the Summ of what "was diſcourſed and reſolved between us, when "we were laſt together: I therefore deſire you, "with all convenient ſpeed, to cauſe Copies hereof "to be tranſcribed, and tranſmitted to the ſeveral "Biſhops of this Province, and Vice-Chancellors of "the Univerſities reſpectively, and to be by them "communicated (as ſoon as may well be) to as many as are herein concerned, that they may not be "diſappointed, by coming furniſhed with ſuch Teſtimonials only, as will not (nor ought to) be received to ſuch great Purpoſes, for which they are "ſo often made uſe of. Commending your Lordſhip and your great Affairs to the Bleſſing of God "Almighty, I remain, My Lord,

Your Lordſhip's Aſſured Loving Brother,

W. CANT.

Mr. Robert Foulkes, Miniſter of Stanton Lacy in in the County of Salop, having been Convicted and Sentenced at the Seſſions in the Old-Bailey, Lond. on the 16th of January, for the Murther of a Baſtard Child [a] begotten by him, was on Jan. 31. ex-

[a] See the Confeſſion, Prayers, Letters, and laſt Words of Robert Foulkes, late Miniſter of Stanton Lacy, Com. Salop, executed on January 31. 1678. written with his own Hand, and ſent by him at his Death to Dr. Lloyd, Dean of Bangor. London, 1679. 4to.

ecuted

1678. 30 Car. II.

ecuted at Tyburn, leaving behind him a very ſerious Declaration of Repentance, which was ſhortly after publiſh'd; and by the Strains of Devotion in it, did, in great meaſure, wipe away the Scandal he had given to holy Orders.

1679.

Meeting of the New Parliament.

The K.'s Speech.

On Thurſday March 6. the new Parliament met; At which time the King acquainted them what had "been done in Proſecution of the Plot; as, the "Excluſion of the Popiſh Lords from their Seats "in Parliament, and the Execution of ſeveral Perſons, as well for the horrid Conſpiracy againſt his "own Royal Perſon and Government, as for the "Murther of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey: And that "he had commanded his Brother to depart the "Kingdom, becauſe he would nor leave malicious "Men room to ſay, That he had not removed all "Cauſes which could be pretended to influence him "towards Popiſh Counſels: That as he had not "been ſlack in putting the preſent Laws in Execution againſt Papiſts, ſo he was ready to join in "making ſuch further Laws as might be neceſſary "for ſecuring the Kingdom againſt Popery. He "then demanded a Supply, and concluded with his "earneſt Deſires to have this a healing Parliament, "aſſuring them, he would defend the Proteſtant "Religion with his Life, and expects to be defended by them from the Calumny as well as Danger of theſe worſt of Men, who endeavour to "render both him and his Government odious to "the People." The Chancellor enlarged on all the Heads; and in reference to the Plot, reminded the two Houſes, "not to Over-doe their Buſineſs, and "by being too far tranſported with the Fears of "Popery, neglect the Opportunity of making "ſober and laſting Proviſions againſt it; which "(ſays he) are the only Hopes of Papiſts, thus to "ſee our Zeal out-run our Diſcretion, and that we "our ſelves[a] ſhould become the unhappy Occaſion "of making our own Councils abortive.

The Lord Chancellor proceeds.

Edw. Seymour Eſq; choſen Speaker.

The Commons returning to their Houſe, at the Motion of Colonel Birch, choſe for their Speaker Edward Seymour Eſq; Knight of the Shire for the County of Devon, Treaſurer of his Majeſty's Navy, one of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council, and Speaker of the former Parliament. But the King taking this to be an ill Preſage, that this Parliament would begin where the laſt did end, would not approve their Choice, commanding the Houſe to return, and to proceed to the Election of a new Speaker, and to preſent him at Eleven a Clock on Saturday March 8. At which time the Houſe being in ſome Surprize, at the rejecting their Speaker Elect, made an humble Application to his Majeſty, "That he would be pleaſed to grant them ſome "further Time to take that Matter into their Con- "ſideration." To which his Majeſty ſent this Anſwer in Writing; Gentlemen, I have conſider'd of your Meſſage, and do conſent to a further Time, which I appoint to be on Tueſday next, unleſs you ſhall find ſome Expedient in the mean time; for as I would not have my Prerogative intrench'd upon, ſo I would not do any thing againſt the Privileges of this Houſe.

Rejected by the King.

Commons offended, make ſeveral Addreſſes.

1679. 31 Car. II.

And the King gives them ſeveral Anſwers.

On Tueſday March 11. the Commons delivered an humble Repreſentation to his Majeſty, "To deſire "him to reſt ſatisfied with their Proceedings, and "not to deprive them of ſo neceſſary a Member as "their Speaker elected and preſented according to "Cuſtom," &c. To which his Majeſty gave this ſhort Anſwer; Gentlemen, All this is but loſs of Time, and therefore I deſire you to go back again, and do as I have directed you. The Commons not yet ſatisfied, reſolved upon another Addreſs, preſented on Wedneſday March 12. "humbly to deſire his Majeſty "to take the Repreſentation Yeſterday made to "him into further Conſideration." To this Addreſs his Majeſty gave this quick and ſharp Return; Gentlemen, I will ſend you an Anſwer to-Morrow. On that Morrow, being Thurſday March 13. his Majeſty was pleaſed to prorogue the Parliament till Saturday following, to convince them that he would have a new Speaker. On that Day, March 15. his Majeſty came into the Houſe of Lords in his Royal Robes, and the Houſe of Commons attending, his Majeſty was pleaſed to put both Houſes in mind of what he had ſaid to them at the Opening of the Parliament: And then the Lord Chancellor, by his Majeſty's Command, directed the Commons to return to their Houſe, and to proceed to the Choice of a Speaker; which they accordingly did, and, by the Recommendation of the Lord Ruſſell, did immediately elect William Gregory, Serjeant at Law; who, the next Morning, was preſented by the Commons to his Majeſty, and approved by him.

The Parliament Prorogued.

Serj. Gregory choſen Speaker.

The Houſe reſolved to purſue the Methods taken in the former Parliament, and therefore Reſolved, on Wedneſday March 19. "That a Committee be appointed to inſpect the Journals of the laſt Seſſion "of the laſt Parliament, and to prepare and draw "up a State of the Matters then depending and "undetermin'd, and the Progreſs that was made "therein." And on March 20. they Reſolved, "That a Committee of Secrecy be appointed to "take Informations, and prepare Evidence, and "draw up Articles againſt the Lords that are impeached, and that are now in the Tower; and to "take ſuch further Informations as ſhall be given, "relating to the Plot and Conſpiracy againſt his "Majeſty, and the Government, and the Murder "of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey:" And immediately after Reſolved, "That a Meſſage be ſent to the "Lords, to put them in mind of the Impeachment "of High Treaſon exhibited againſt Thomas Earl

The Commons begin where the former Parliament ended.

[a] Sir William Temple judg'd well of this Juncture in his Memoirs. P. II. p. 389. A new Parliament was called; and to make way for a calmer Seſſion, the Reſolution had been taken at Court for the Duke's going over into Holland. The Elections of the enſuing Parliament were ſo eagerly purſu'd, that all were in a manner engag'd before I came over; and by the Diſpoſitions that appear'd in both Electors and Elected, it was eaſy to preſage in what Temper the Houſes were like to meet. My Lord Shaftſbury, my Lord Eſſex, and my Lord Hallifax, had ſtruck up with the Duke of Monmouth, reſolving to make uſe of his Credit with the King, and to ſupport it by theirs in the Parliament.—— Sir William Coventry had the moſt Credit of any Man in the Houſe of Commons, and I think the moſt deſervedly, not only for his great Abilities, but for having been turn'd out of the Council and Treaſury, to make way for my Lord Clifford's Greatneſs, and the Deſigns of the Cabal. He had been ever ſince oppoſite to the French Alliances, and bent upon engaging England in a War with that Crown and Aſſiſtance of the Confederates, and was now extremely diſſatisfy'd with the Concluſion of the Peace, and with the Miniſtry, that he thought either aſſiſted, or at leaſt might have prevented it: And in theſe Diſpoſitions he was like to be follow'd by the beſt and ſobereſt part of the Houſe of Commons.

For my Lord Treaſurer and Lord Chamberlain (Danby and Arlington) I found them two moſt admirable Emblems of the true and ſo much admir'd Felicity of Miniſters of State. The laſt, notwithſtanding the greateſt Skill of Court, and the beſt turns of Wit in particular Converſation that I have known there, and the great Figure he made in the firſt Part of theſe Memoirs, was now grown out of all Credit and Confidence with the King, the Duke, and Prince of Orange, and thereby forc'd to ſupport himſelf by Intrigues with the Perſons moſt diſcontented againſt my Lord Treaſurer's Miniſtry, whoſe Greatneſs he ſo much envied, and who was yet at this time in much worſe Condition than himſelf, tho' not ſo ſenſible of it: For he had been very ill with the late Parliament upon account of Tranſactions from France, which tho' he had not approv'd, yet he durſt not defend himſelf from the Imputation, for fear of expoſing his Maſter. He was hated by the French Ambaſſador for endeavouring (as he thought) to engage the King in a War with France: He was in danger of being purſued by his Enemies next Parliament, for having (as they pretended) made the Peace, and endeavour'd to ſtifle the Plot; and yet I found within a Fortnight after I arrived, that he ſate very looſe with the King his Maſter, who told me ſeveral Reaſons of that Change, whereof one was his having brought the Buſineſs of the Plot into the Parliament againſt his abſolute Command. And to compleat the happy and envied State of this chief Miniſter, the Dutcheſs of Portſmouth and Earl of Sunderland were joined with the Duke of Monmouth and Earl of Shaftſbury in the deſign of his Ruin.

"of

1679. 31 Car. II.

" of Danby, in the Names of the Commons of " England, and to deſire that he may be commit- " ted to ſafe Cuſtody: Reſolving again, That it be " referred to the Committee of Secrecy to draw " up further Articles againſt him.

Addreſs for a Faſt.

On Friday March 21. the Lords and Commons agreed in an Addreſs to be preſented to his Majeſty for appointing a ſolemn Day of Humiliation, being deeply ſenſible of the ſad and calamitous Condition of this Kingdom, occaſioned chiefly by the impious and malicious Conſpiracies of a Popiſh Party, who have not only plotted and intended the Deſtruction of his Majeſty's Royal Perſon, but the total Subverſion of the Government, and True Religion eſtabliſhed among us. And accordingly his Majeſty commanded a General and Publick Faſt, to be kept throughout the Kingdom, on Friday April 11.

The King ſpeaks in favour of the Earl of Danby.

On Saturday March 22. the Commons ordered a Bill to be brought in, to ſecure the King and Kingdom againſt the Danger and Growth of Popery. And being commanded to attend his Majeſty in the Houſe of Peers, the King ſpoke to them in favour of the Earl of Danby; But returning to their Houſe, they Reſolved, " That a Meſſage be immediately ſent to " the Lords, to remind their Lordſhips of the laſt " Meſſage ſent them from this Houſe, relating to " Thomas Earl of Danby, and to demand that he " might be forthwith ſequeſtred from Parliament, " and committed to ſafe Cuſtody." Upon which the Lords deſired a preſent Conference with the Commons, where the Duke of Monmouth ſpake thus; I am commanded by the Lords to acquaint you, That their Lordſhips having taken into Conſideration Matters relating to the Earl of Danby, together with what his Majeſty was pleaſed to ſay upon that Subject; have ordered that a Bill be brought in, by which Thomas Earl of Danby may be made for ever incapable of coming to his Majeſty's Preſence, and of all Offices and Employments, and of receiving any Grants or Gifts from the Crown, and of ſitting in the Houſe of Peers. In the mean time, the Commons hearing that the King had ſigned a Pardon for the Earl, they appointed a Committee to repair to the Lord Chancellor, to enquire into the manner of Suing forth that Pardon. The Lord Chancellor did inform the Committee, " That the Pardon was paſſed with all " Privacy, the King commanding him to bring the " Seal to Whitehall; and being there, he laid it up- " on the Table; whereupon his Majeſty command- " ed the Seal to be taken out of the Bag, which " his Lordſhip was obliged to ſubmit unto, it not " being in his Power to hinder it; and the King " writ his Name upon the top of the Parchment, " and then directed to have it ſealed; whereupon " the Perſon that uſually carried the Purſe affixed the " Seal to it." Upon this Report from his Lordſhip, the Commons Reſolved, " That an humble " Addreſs be made to his Majeſty, to repreſent the " Irregularity and Illegality of the Pardon mention'd " by his Majeſty to be granted to the Earl of Danby, and the dangerous Conſequence of granting " Pardons to any Perſons that lie under an Impeach- " ment of the Commons of England.

But the Commons reſolve to proceed againſt him.

King's Pardon to the Earl of Danby.

Commons Addreſs againſt it.

The Earl then withdraws.

On Tueſday March 25. the Lords ſent a [a] Meſſage to acquaint the Houſe of Commons, That they had ſent to apprehend Thomas Earl of Danby, both to his Houſe here in Town, and to his Houſe at Wimbleton; and that the Gentleman-Uſher of the Black-Rod had returned their Lordſhips Anſwer, That he could not be found. Whereupon the Commons ordered, " That " a Bill be brought in to ſummon Thomas Earl of " Danby to render himſelf to Juſtice by a certain " Day to be therein limited, or in default thereof, " to attaint him. On Thurſday March 27. the Lords ſent down a Bill, entituled, An Act for baniſhing and diſabling Thomas Earl of Danby, &c. But the Commons immediately Reſolved, That the Bill be rejected; and on April 1. paſſed a Bill for the Attainder of Thomas Earl of Danby of High-Treaſon; which they ſent up to the Lords by Sir Robert Peyton.

Attainted by the Commons.

On April 3. the [b] Commons agreed upon the Articles of Impeachment of High-Treaſon, and other high Crimes and Offences againſt William Earl of Powys, William Viſcount Stafford, Henry Lord Arundell of Wardour, William Lord Petre, and John Lord Bellaſis, now Priſoners in the Tower of London. The next Day there was a Conference between the two Houſes, in the Painted Chamber, concerning the Bill ſent up againſt Thomas Earl of Danby, where the Lord Privy-Seal managed the Conference for their Lordſhips, and deliver'd himſelf to this effect, " That the Lords choſe to deliver back by Confe- " rence, rather than Meſſage, to preſerve a good " Underſtanding, and to prevent Debate or Contro- " verſy between them: The Lords obſerve, That " the great Affairs of this Nation are at a ſtand, at " a time of greateſt Danger and Difficulty that this " Kingdom ever laboured under: That the King " hath always in his Reign enclined to Mercy and " Clemency to all his Subjects: Therefore to a King " ſo merciful and compaſſionate, the firſt Inter- " ruption of his Clemency they did deſire ſhould " not proceed from the two Houſes, preſſing the " King to an Act of the greateſt Severity; there- " fore have paſſed the Bill, with ſome Amendments, " which he deliver'd." The Commons diſagreed to the Amendments made by the Lords, and drew up Reaſons to be offered in another Conference, implying, That their Lordſhips Amendments had wholly alter'd the Nature of their Bill, and from a Bill of Attainder, had converted it into a Bill of Baniſhment: And at the ſame time drew up an Addreſs to be preſented to his Majeſty, to deſire him to iſſue out his Royal Proclamation for apprehending the ſaid Earl; and had the ſame Day another Conference with the Lords, upon the Earl of Danby's Caſe, where the Lord Huntington managed the Conference, and what he delivered was to this Effect; " The Lords have deſired this Conference with the " Commons, not ſo much to argue and diſpute, as " to mitigate and reconcile: They have already ob- " ſerved, that the Debate of this Bill hath given ſo " long and ſo great an Obſtruction to publick Buſi- " neſs, and therefore they deſire you to believe, that " that is the Reaſon which hath chiefly prevailed " with their Lordſhips in a Matter of this Nature, " and upon this Ground it is, that if a way may be " found to ſatisfy and ſecure the publick Fears, by " growing leſs than the Bill you have propoſed, the " Lords do not think it adviſable to inſiſt upon the " utmoſt and moſt rigorous Satisfaction, to prevent " Juſtice, which might be denied. To induce you " to this Compliance, the Lords do acknowledge, " that Baniſhment is ſo far from being the legal " Judgment in Caſe of High Treaſon, that it is not Impeachment of the Popiſh Lords.

A Conference upon the Caſe of the Earl of Danby.

Another Conference on the ſame Subject-Matter.

[a] See a Speech of the Earl of Shaftſbury's in the Houſe of Peers, deliver'd March 25. 1679. for putting away evil Counſellors and Popiſh Councils, privately printed under the Title of A Speech of a noble Peer, and afterwards ordered to be burnt. Put into the Appendix to the Lives of the Chancellors. 8*vo.* 1712.

[b] Die Jovis, April 3. Report that the Lords with the White Staves have attended his Majeſty with the humble Deſire of this Houſe, that all ſuch Perſons who breed, or ſuffer their Children to be bred in the Popiſh Religion, may by his Majeſty's Order be put out of all publick Employments, —— and that no Perſon ſhall be put into, or continue in any publick Employment, who ſhall knowingly marry a Papiſt; which his Majeſty is pleaſed to grant.

Friday Apr. 4. In the Houſe of Commons an Act for the better Diſcovery and more ſpeedy Conviction of Popiſh Recuſants ſent down from the Lords, was read a ſecond time, and committed to a Committee, who were to bring in a Clauſe to prevent any of the Royal Family from matching with Popiſh Recuſants.

1679. 31 Car. II.

“the legal Judgment in any Caſe whatſoever, ſince it can never be inflicted but by the Legiſlative Authority: But they ſee no reaſon why the Legiſlative Authority ſhould always be found to act to the utmoſt extent of its Power; for there may be a prudential neceſſity ſometimes of making Abatements, and it might be of fatal Conſequence if it ſhould not be ſo. And the Lords, to remove all Jealouſies of the Precedents of this kind, do declare, That nothing which hath been done in the Earl of Danby's Caſe, ſhall be ever drawn into Example for the time to come, and will ſo enter it upon their Journal. And thereupon their Lordſhips inſiſt upon their Amendments ſo far, as to exclude all Attainders; and do promiſe themſelves the Commons will in this Point comply with their Lordſhips, who do again aſſure them, That their Reſolutions are grounded only upon their Tenderneſs and Conſideration of the Publick.”

The third Conference.

There was another Conference on this Subject-Matter April 12. upon which the Commons again reſolved to adhere to their Bill, and to diſagree to the Amendments made by the Lords: Upon which the Bill of Attainder did at laſt paſs both Houſes. Upon which Sir Edward Carteret, Uſher of the Black-Rod, on April 16. gave the Houſe of Lords an Account, that the Earl of Danby had the laſt Night render'd himſelf to him, and was in his Cuſtody. “Their Lordſhips ordered him to be brought to their Bar, where kneeling, and then ſtanding up, the Lord Chancellor let him know, that he ſtands impeached by the Commons; and that, upon his withdrawing himſelf, a Bill of Attainder had paſſed the two Houſes; by which, however, he had Time given him to come in, and make his Defence.——The Earl of Danby excuſed his not appearing ſooner, declared his Innocency, and made ſeveral Petitions to the Houſe, and then was ordered to withdraw. And being called in, and brought to the Bar again, the Lord Chancellor acquainted him, that their Lordſhips will allow him Time to give in his Anſwer to the Articles of his Impeachment, till the firſt Day of the Sitting of the Houſe after Eaſter; That if any further Charge be put in againſt him, he ſhall have further time to Anſwer; That he ſhall have Council aſſigned him, and ſhall have liberty to make uſe of Records, and that his Witneſſes ſhall be ſummoned.—Upon which he withdrew, and by Order of the Houſe was committed to the Tower.

Bill of Attainder paſſed the two Houſes.

Then the Earl ſurrendred himſelf.

And made his Excuſes at the Bar.

Is committed to the Tower.

On April 25. the Earl was brought from the Tower to the Bar of the Lords Houſe, where he delivered in Writing his Plea and Anſwer to the Articles of his Impeachment: Which being read, he withdrew. In the mean time, his Majeſty made a Delaration on April 20. for diſſolving the [a] Privy-Council, telling them, “He hath reſolved to lay aſide the Uſe he may have hitherto made of any ſingle Miniſtry, or private Advices, or Foreign Committee for the general Direction of his Affairs; and to conſtitute ſuch a Privy-Council as may not only by its Number be fit for the Conſultation and Digeſtion of all Buſineſs both Domeſtick and Foreign, but alſo, by the choice of them out of the ſeveral Parts this State is compoſed of, may be the beſt informed in the true Conſtitutions of it, and thereby the moſt able to counſel him in all the Affairs and Intereſts of this Crown and Nation: And by the conſtant Advice of ſuch a Council, his Majeſty reſolved hereafter to govern his Kingdoms, together with the frequent Uſe of his great Council of Parliament, which he takes to be the true ancient Conſtitution of this State and Government. And for the greater Dignity of this Council, their conſtant Number ſhall be limited to that of Thirty: And for their greater Authority, there ſhall be fifteen of his chief Officers who ſhall be Privy-Counſellors by their Places; and for the other fifteen, he will chuſe ten out of the ſeveral Ranks of the Nobility, and five Commoners of the Realm, whoſe known Abilities, Intereſt and Eſteem in the Nation, ſhall render them without all Suſpicion of either miſtaking or betraying the true Intereſt of the Kingdom, and conſequently of adviſing him ill.

The King makes a new Privy Council.

The Names of this New Privy Council were as follow:

List of the New Council.

His Highneſs Prince Rupert; William Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury; Heneage Lord Finch, Lord Chancellor of England; Anthony Earl of Shaftsbury, Lord Preſident of the Council; Arthur Earl of Angleſey, Lord Privy Seal; Chriſtopher Duke of Albemarle; James Duke of Monmouth, Maſter of the Horſe; Henry Duke of Newcaſtle; John Duke of Lauderdale, Secretary of State for Scotland; James Duke of Ormond, Lord Steward of the Houſhold; Charles Lord Marqueſs of Wincheſter; Henry Lord Marqueſs of Worceſter; Henry Earl of Arlington, Lord Chamberlain of the Houſhold; James Earl of Salisbury; John Earl of Bridgwater; Robert Earl of Sunderland, one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State; Arthur Earl of Eſſex, firſt Lord Commiſſioner of the Treaſury; John Earl of Bathe, Groom of the Stole; Thomas Lord Viſcount Falconberg; George Lord Viſcount Hallifax; Henry Lord Biſhop of London; John Lord Roberts; Denzil Lord Hollis; William Lord Ruſſel; William Lord Cavendiſh; Henry Coventry Eſq; one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State; Sir Francis North, Kt. Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common Pleas; Sir Henry Capell, Knight of the Bath, firſt Commiſſioner of the Admiralty; Sir John Earnley, Kt. Chancellor of the Exchequer; Sir Thomas Chicheley, Kt. Maſter of the Ordnance; Sir William Temple, Bar. Edward Seymour, Eſq; and Henry Powle, Eſq;

His Majeſty had reaſon to value himſelf upon this Eſtabliſhment of a Council ſo generally grateful to the two Houſes, and to all his faithful Subjects; and therefore his Majeſty came the next day into the Houſe of Lords, and made this Speech on that Occaſion.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King's Speech on this Occaſion.

I Thought it requiſite to acquaint you with what I have done now this Day; which is, That I have eſtabliſh'd a new Privy Council, the conſtant Number of which ſhall never exceed Thirty.

I have made Choice of ſuch Perſons as are worthy, and able to adviſe me; and am reſolved, in all my weighty and important Affairs, next to the Advice of my Great Council in Parliament (which I ſhall very often conſult with) to be adviſed by this Privy Council.

I could not make ſo great a Change, without acquainting both Houſes of Parliament.

And I deſire you all to apply your ſelves heartily, as I ſhall do, to thoſe Things which are neceſſary for [a] Sir William Temple claims the Honour of propoſing this Change of Council, and ſays it was debated and digeſted about a Month between the King and him, till his Majeſty was fully ſatisfied in it; but Sir William deſir'd him not to take a Reſolution of that Importance without the Advice of three or four Perſons, on whoſe Judgment and Affection to his Service his Majeſty could moſt rely. Hereupon the King ordered him to communicate the whole Scheme to the Lord Chancellor Finch, the Earl of Sunderland, and the Earl of Eſſex; but one after another.——The Lord Chancellor ſaid, It look'd like a thing from Heaven fallen into his Majeſty's Breaſt; the Lord Eſſex, that it would leave the Parliament and Nation in the ſame Diſpoſitions to the King which he found at his coming in; and the Lord Sunderland approving it as much as any, &c.——When the thing was done, it was receiv'd with general Applauſe in the Country, with Bonfires in the City, and the ſame in Ireland. In Holland the Stocks of the Eaſt India Company roſe upon it immediately. France alone was unſatisfied with it.

the

1679. 31 Car. II.

the Good and Safety of the Kingdom, and that no time may be loſt in it.

Committee for Tryal of the Popiſh Lords.

On April 23. a Committee of Secrecy had been appointed to look into the Anſwers of the five Popiſh Lords in the Tower, and to enquire into the Method of Proceeding to Tryals upon Impeachments: Who declared their Opinion to be, “ That “ the Lord Bellaſis being impeached of High-Trea- “ ſon by the Commons, cannot make any anſwer “ but in Perſon: That the ſeveral Writings put in “ by the Lord Powys, Lord Stafford, and Lord Arun- “ del of Wardour, which they call their ſeveral Pleas “ and Anſwers, are not Pleas or Anſwers, but Ar- “ gumentative and Evaſive; to which the Com- “ mons neither can nor ought to Reply: That if “ the Anſwers of the Lord Powys, Lord Stafford, “ and Lord Arundel (as well as that of the Lord “ Petre) were ſufficient; yet there ought not to “ be any Proceedings againſt them, or any of them, “ until the Lord Bellaſis alſo put in a ſufficient An- “ ſwer in Perſon: That the Commons do demand “ of the Lords, That their Lordſhips would forth- “ with Order and Require the ſaid Lord Powys, “ Lord Stafford, Lord Arundel of Wardour, and Lord “ Bellaſis, to put in their perfect Anſwers; or, in “ default thereof, that the Commons may have “ Juſtice againſt them.

Ld. Danby's Plea, and Anſwers of the Popiſh Lords.

On April 25. a Meſſage was brought from the Lords, “ That Thomas Earl of Danby, and John “ Lord Bellaſis, had this Day appeared in Perſon at “ the Bar of the Houſe of Lords, and that Tho- “ mas Earl of Danby had put in his Plea, and the “ Lord Bellaſis his Anſwer; which the Lords have “ ſent down, deſiring they may be returned with “ all convenient ſpeed.” On April 26. the Lord Stafford, Arundel and Powys, appeared likewiſe at the Lords Bar, and retracted their former Pleas, and put in their Anſwers to the Impeachments exhibited againſt them.

Commons Vote againſt the Duke of York.

On April 27. the Commons Reſolved, “ That “ the Duke of York being a Papiſt, and the hopes “ of his coming ſuch to the Crown, has given the “ greateſt Countenance and Encouragement to the “ preſent Conſpiracies and Deſigns of the Papiſts “ againſt the King and the Proteſtant Religion:” And ſent up this Vote to the Lords by the Lord Ruſſel, deſiring their Lordſhip's Concurrence to it.

Their Addreſs for executing Sentences of the Law againſt Papiſts.

At the ſame time they agreed to an Addreſs, “ That “ his Majeſty would be pleaſed to Order the Exe- “ cution of one Pickering a Priſoner in Newgate, and “ of divers Prieſts and Jeſuits, who had been Con- “ demn'd by the Judges at the Old Bailey, and in “ the ſeveral Circuits, but did remain as yet unex- “ ecuted; to the great emboldening of ſuch Offen- “ ders, in caſe they ſhould eſcape without due Pu- “ niſhment.” To which his Majeſty in the Ban-

The K.'s Anſwer.

quetting-Houſe, returned this Anſwer; Gentlemen, I have always been tender in matters of Blood, which my Subjects have no reaſon to take Exception at: But this is a matter of great Weight, I ſhall therefore conſider of it, and return you an Anſwer.

April 28. the Committee appointed to examine and peruſe the nature of the Plea of Thomas Earl of Report of the Committee in the Caſe of the Earl of Danby.

Danby, made this Report; “ 1. We find no Prece- “ dent that ever any Pardon was granted to any “ Perſon Impeached by the Commons of High- “ Treaſon, or other High Crimes, the Impeach- “ ment depending. 2. As to the manner of the “ paſſing the Earl of Danby's Pardon, it hath been “ formerly reported to the Houſe, and the Com- “ mittee refer themſelves to that Report. 3. That “ by what means it was obtained, the time allow- “ ed the Committee hath been ſo ſhort, that we “ cannot as yet diſcover the Adviſers or Promoters “ thereof, any farther than what is mentioned in “ the ſaid Report relating to the Lord Chancellor. “ Reſolved, That a Meſſage be ſent to the Lords, “ to deſire their Lordſhips to demand of the Earl “ of Danby, Whether he will rely upon, and abide “ by the Plea of his Pardon? Accordingly the next Day the Earl was again brought to the Bar of the Lords Houſe, where kneeling, and then ſtanding up, the Lord Chancellor acquainted him, That the Commons had returned to their Lordſhips the Plea delivered by him at the Bar of their Houſe on the 25th Inſtant, with a deſire that their Lordſhips would ask him, Whether he will rely upon, and abide by his ſaid Plea? The Earl praying time to Anſwer, their Lordſhips allow'd him till Saturday next, and then he withdrew, [a] and was conducted back to the Tower.

On Wedneſday April 30. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons, ſpake thus:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The K.'s Speech.

THE Seaſon of the Year advancing ſo faſt, I thought it neceſſary to put you in mind of Three Particulars. 1. Proſecution of the Plot. 2. Diſbanding of the Army. 3. Providing a Fleet for our common Security. And to ſhew, that whilſt you are doing your Parts, my Thoughts have not been miſ-employed, but that it is my conſtant Care to do every thing that may preſerve your Religion, and ſecure it for the future in all Events.

I have commanded my Lord Chancellor to mention ſeveral particulars; which, I hope, will be an Evidence, that in all things that concern the publick Security, I ſhall not follow your Zeal, but lead it.

Then the Lord Chancellor added:

My Lords, and you the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of the Houſe of Commons,

Ld Chancellor's Speech.

“ That Royal Care which his Majeſty hath ta- “ ken for the general Quiet and Satiſfaction of all “ his Subjects, is now more evident, by theſe new “ and freſh Inſtances of it which I have in Com- “ mand to open to you.

“ His Majeſty hath conſidered with himſelf, that “ 'tis not enough that your Religion and Liberty is “ ſecure during his own Reign, but he thinks he “ owes it to his People to do all that in him lies, “ that theſe Bleſſings may be tranſmitted to your “ Poſterity, and ſo well ſecured to them, that no “ Succeſſion in after-ages may be able to work the “ leaſt Alteration.

Promiſing Limitations belonging to a Popiſh Succeſſor.

“ And therefore his Majeſty, who hath often ſaid “ in his Place, That he is ready to conſent to any “ Laws of this kind, ſo that the ſame extend not “ to alter the deſcent of the Crown in the Right “ Line, nor to defeat the Succeſſion, hath now “ commanded this to be farther explain'd.

“ And to the end it may never be in the Power of “ any Papiſt, if the Crown deſcend upon him, to “ make any Change either in [b] Church or State; “ I am commanded to tell you, That his Majeſty is

[a] His Lordſhip ſeem'd to inſiſt on his Pardon, as the quickeſt way to get rid of the Peril he was in. Wherefore the Commons reſolved, that it was the Opinion of the Houſe, that the Pardon pleaded by the Earl of Danby was illegal and void, and ought not to be allow'd in Bar of the Impeachment of the Commons of England. And Mr. Speaker with the Houſe went up to the Lords Bar, and demanded Judgment againſt the ſaid Earl. And underſtanding afterwards that the Lords would admit the Earl of Danby to have the Validity of his Pardon pleaded at their Bar, they reſolved, May 10, That no Commoner whatſoever preſume to maintain the Validity of the Pardon pleaded by the Earl of Danby, without the Leave of this Houſe firſt had; and that the Perſons ſo doing ſhould be accounted Betrayers of the Liberties of England. Thus his Lordſhip continued in the Tower till Hilary Term, 1683.

[b] Father Orleans, Hiſtorian of King James II. calls this the Marquis of Hallifax's Expedient to ſecure the Proteſtant Religion under a Popiſh ſucceſſor, recommended by the King to the two Houſes.

1679. 31 Car. II.

" willing that Proviſion may be made, firſt, to di- " ſtinguiſh a Papiſt, from a Proteſtant Succeſſor; " then ſo to limit and circumſcribe the Authority of " a Popiſh Succeſſor, in theſe Caſes following, that " he may be diſabled to do any harm:

" Firſt, in reference to the Church; his Majeſty " is content that Care be taken, that all Eccleſiaſti- " cal and Spiritual Benefices and Promotions in Gift " of the Crown, may be conferred in ſuch a man- " ner, that we may be ſure the Incumbents ſhall al- " ways be of the moſt pious and learned Proteſtants: " And that no Popiſh Succeſſor (while he conti- " nues ſo) may have any Power to controul ſuch " Preſentments.

" In reference to the State, and Civil part of the " Government; as it is already provided, That no " Papiſt can ſit in either Houſe of Parliament; ſo " the King is pleaſed that it be Provided too, That " there may never want a Parliament, when the " King ſhall happen to die, but that the Parlia- " ment then in being may continue Indiſſolvable for " a competent time; or if there be no Parliament " in being, then the laſt Parliament which was in " being before that time, may re-aſſemble and ſit a " competent time, without any new Summons, or " Elections.

" And as no Papiſt can by Law hold any Place " of Truſt, ſo the King is content that it may be " further Provided, That no Lords, or other of the " Privy Council, no Judges of the Common Law, " or in Chancery, ſhall at any time during the " Reign of any Popiſh Succeſſor, be put in, or diſ- " placed, but by the Authority of Parliament.

" And that Care alſo be taken, that none but " ſincere Proteſtants may be Juſtices of the Peace.

" In reference to the military Part, The King is " willing, that no Lord Lieutenant, or Deputy- " Lieutenant, nor no Officer in the Navy (during " the Reign of any Popiſh Succeſſor) be put out, " or removed, but either by Authority of Parlia- " ment, or of ſuch Perſons as the Parliament ſhall " intruſt with ſuch Authority.

" 'Tis hard to invent another Reſtraint to be put " upon a Popiſh Succeſſor, conſidering how much " the Revenue of the Succeſſor will depend upon " conſent of Parliament, and how impoſſible it is " to raiſe Money without ſuch conſent. But yet, " if any thing elſe can occur to the Wiſdom of the " Parliament, which may further ſecure Religion " and Liberty againſt a Popiſh Succeſſor, without " defeating the Right of Succeſſion it ſelf, his Ma- " jeſty will moſt readily conſent to it.

" Thus watchful is the King for all your Safety; " and if he could think of any thing elſe, that you " do either want or wiſh to make you happy, he " would make it his Buſineſs to effect it for you.

" God Almighty long continue this Bleſſed Uni- " on between the King, and his Parliament, and " People.

The Commons not ſatisfied. Theſe were good Words; but the Commons, on May 1. revived a Committee formerly appointed to conſider what part of the Money given for disbanding of the Army, is yet undiſpoſed of, and remaining in the Exchequer. And they fell at the ſame time upon the further Conſideration of ſecuring and preſerving the King, and the Proteſtant Religion, againſt the Attempts of the Papiſts, both in the Reign of his Majeſty and his Succeſſors: And read a ſecond time, A Bill for better prevention of illegal Exaction of Money from the Subject; and Ordered, " That leave be given to bring in a Bill, That when " any Member of this Houſe is preferred to any Of- " fice or Place of Profit, a new Writ ſhall imme- " diately iſſue out for electing a Member to ſerve " in his ſtead." On May 5. they Reſolved, " That " it was the Opinion of that Houſe, That the Par- " don pleaded by the Earl of Danby was illegal and " void, and ought not to be allowed in Bar of the " Impeachment of the Commons of England." And Mr. Speaker, with the Houſe, went up to the Lord's Bar, and demanded Judgment againſt the ſaid Earl.

The K.'s Meſſage to the Commons. On the ſame Day the Lord Ruſſel acquainted the Houſe, " That his Majeſty commanded him to let " the Houſe know, That his Majeſty is willing to " comply with the Requeſt made to him by the " Houſe, concerning Pickering, and that the Law " ſhall paſs upon him accordingly. As to the Con- " demned Prieſts, the Houſe of Peers have ſent for " them, in order (as his Majeſty conceives) to ſome " Examinations. And further to acquaint you, " That he repeateth his Inſtances to you, To think " of putting the Fleet in ſuch a Poſture, as may " quiet Mens Fears, and at leaſt ſecure us from any " ſudden Attempt; which his Majeſty doubts not " but you will do: And though the Streights and " Difficulties he lieth under are very great, he doth " not intend, during this Seſſion, to preſs for any " other Supply; being willing rather to ſuffer the " Burdens that are upon him ſome time longer, than " to interrupt you, whilſt you are employ'd about " the diſcovery of the Plot, the Tryal of the Lords, and the Bill for Securing our Religion.

Addreſs againſt the Earl of Lauderdale. On May 8. the Commons agreed upon an Addreſs to his Majeſty, To remove the Duke of Lauderdale from all Offices, Employments, and Places of Truſt, and from his Majeſty's Council in England and Scotland, and from his Preſence for ever; as being the Chief of thoſe, who by their arbitrary and deſtructive Counſels, tending to the Subverſion of the Rights, Liberties and Properties of his Majeſty's Subjects, and the Alteration of the Proteſtant Religion eſtabliſh'd, have endeavoured to alienate the Hearts of his loyal Subjects from his Perſon and his Government. To which the King only made this cold Return, That he would conſider of it, and return an Anſwer.

The King and both Houſes agreed in one Thing, the Neceſſity of a Tax: And therefore, on May 9th, after their Lordſhips had receded from their Amendments of the Money Bill, his Majeſty came to his Throne, and the Commons attending, their Speaker preſented the Bill, and his Majeſty gave his Royal Aſſent to it, For granting a Supply to his Majeſty of two hundred and ſix thouſand four hundred ſixty two Pounds, ſeventeen Shillings, and three Pence, for paying off and disbanding the Forces raiſed ſince the nine and twentieth of September, One thouſand ſix hundred ſeventy ſeven. (Money Bill paſſed by the King.) After this, the Commons underſtanding that the Lords would admit the Earl of Danby to have the Validity of his Pardon pleaded at their Bar, they Reſolved, " That no Commo- " ner whatſoever ſhould preſume to maintain the " Validity of the Pardon pleaded by the Earl of " Danby, without the Leave of this Houſe firſt had; " and that the Perſons ſo doing ſhould be account- " ed Betrayers of the Liberties of the Commons of " England.

Addreſs of both Houſes againſt Popiſh Prieſts. On May 10. the Lords and Commons, in an Addreſs to his Majeſty, taking notice of the great Reſort of the multitude of Jeſuits, Popiſh Prieſts, and other Popiſh Recuſants, to the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Parts adjacent, and their obſtinate Continuance there, in Contempt of his Majeſty's Laws, and Royal Proclamations, humbly beſeech his Majeſty, that the Militia of London, Weſtminſter, Southwark, the Tower-Hamlets, and the Counties of Middleſex and Surry, may immediately be raiſed, and put in a poſture of Defence. In the mean time, ſome Differences did ariſe about the manner of proceeding upon the Impeachments depending before the Lords; for which Purpoſe the Commons had propoſed, That a Committee of both Houſes might be nominated to conſider of the moſt proper Ways and Methods of proceeding upon Impeachments. (Committee for Impeachments.) The Lords refuſed to agree, for this Reaſon aſſign'd, That they did not find it conformable to the Rules and Orders of Proceedings of this Court. Upon this the Houſe of Commons deliver'd this Reſolution, in a Conference with their

1679. 31 Car. II.

their Lordſhips; That Things ſtanding thus, they cannot proceed in the Tryals of the Lords, before the Methods of Proceedings be adjuſted between the two Houſes. Upon which a Committee of both Houſes was accordingly appointed to conſider of Propoſitions and Circumſtances relating to the Tryals of the Lords in the Tower.

Under theſe Difficulties and Dangers both Houſes ſate on the Sunday May 11. and the Commons Reſolved, Nemine Contradicente, "That in Defence of "the King's Perſon, and the Proteſtant Religion, "this Houſe doth declare, that they will ſtand by "his Majeſty with their Lives and Fortunes; and "that if his Majeſty ſhould come by any violent "Death (which God forbid) that they will revenge "it to the utmoſt upon the Papiſts:——And or"dered, That the Vote ſhould be drawn in Form of an Addreſs, to be preſented to his Majeſty. To which his Majeſty returned this gracious Anſwer; Gentlemen, I thank you for your Zeal for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, and of my Perſon; and I aſſure you I ſhall do what in me lies to ſecure the Proteſtant Religion, and am willing to do all ſuch things as may tend to the Good and Benefit of my Subjects.

Reſolution of the Commons.

The K.'s Anſwer.

On Wedneſday May 14. Mr. Powle delivered a Meſſage from his Majeſty, as followeth:

Charles Rex.

King's Meſſage for ſetting out a Fleet.

"Though his Majeſty hath already, at the firſt "Meeting in Parliament, and ſince, by a "Word or two, mentioned the Neceſſity of having a Fleet at Sea this Summer: yet the Seaſon "for preparing it being far advanced, and our Neighbours before us in their Preparations, he cannot "hold himſelf diſcharged towards his People, if he "do not now with more Earneſtneſs again recommend the ſame to your preſent Care and Conſideration; and the rather, from the daily Expectation of the return of the Fleet from the Streights, "to which a great Arrear is due; and hereby he "muſt acquit himſelf of the evil Conſequences, "which the want of a Fleet in ſuch a Juncture may "produce: And he hath not done this without conſidering, that the entring on the Work preſently "can be no Hindrance to the other great Affairs "upon your Hands, but rather a Security in the "Diſpatch thereof." A Debate ariſing in the Houſe upon the Meſſage, they Reſolved, That the further Conſideration of it be adjourned till Monday Se'night next.

Queſtion of the Vote of the Biſhops in Capital Caſes?

In the propoſed Method for the Tryal of the Lords, a new Queſtion did ariſe, How far the Biſhops ought to vote, or to be preſent in capital Caſes? On which Occaſion, on Tueſday May 13. it was Reſolved, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, That the Lords Spiritual have a Right to ſtay in Court, in capital Caſes, till ſuch time as Judgment of Death comes to be pronounced. And on May 15. the Lords explained themſelves, That the Meaning of the Reſolution paſſed yeſterday concerning the Lords Spiritual, is, That the Lords Spiritual have a Right to ſtay, and ſit in Court, till the Court proceed to the Vote of, Guilty, or not Guilty? After this Preliminary, on May 16. it was Reſolved, by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, That Thurſday next be appointed to begin the Tryals of the Five Lords in the Tower, (viz.) the Earl of Powys, Lord Viſcount Stafford, Lord Petre, Lord Arundel of Wardour, and Lord Bellaſis. (But the Day of Tryal was afterwards adjourned till Tueſday May 27. On which very Day the Parliament was prorogued.) After which Reſolution paſſed, the Lords Spiritual asked the Leave of the Houſe, "That they might withdraw themſelves from the "Tryals of the ſaid Lords, with the Liberty of en"tring their uſual Proteſtations." But the Commons voted, and inſtructed their Committee to inſiſt upon it[a], That the Lords Spiritual ought not to have any Vote in any Proceedings againſt the Lords in the Tower.

Bill of Excluſion.

On Thurſday May 15. a Bill had been brought in to the Houſe of Commons, to diſable the Duke of York from inheriting the Imperial Crown of England: Which was read the ſecond time on May 21. and Reſolved, by a great Majority, that the Bill ſhould be committed to a Committee of the whole Houſe. This enclined his Majeſty to bring this Seſſion to a ſpeedy Period[b]: And therefore on May 27. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and the Commons attending, he gave his Royal Aſſent to, 1. A Bill for the better ſecuring the Liberty of the Subject, and for prevention of Impriſonments beyond the Seas. 2. A Bill for re-ingroſſing the Records of Fines, burnt in the late Fire in the Temple. 3. A Private Bill, concerning Charles Dale of Rutlandſhire, Eſq; Then his Majeſty intimated to the two Houſes his Reſolution to prorogue them; and the Lord Chancellor accordingly, by his Majeſty's Command, did prorogue the Parliament till the 14th of Auguſt next.

Bills paſſed.

Parliament prorogued.

And ſoon after diſſolv'd.

Soon after this Parliament was diſſolv'd[c], and another ſummon'd to meet at Weſtminſter on the 17th Day of October next: But before the Meeting, his Majeſty, by Proclamation the 24th, was pleaſed to declare, That the ſaid Parliament ſhould be prorogued till the 30th Day of the ſame Month: And afterward order'd a Commiſſion for proroguing the ſaid Parliament till the 26th of January next: At which time his Majeſty made a ſhort Speech to the two Houſes, and without allowing them to enter upon any Debates, commanded the Lord Chancellor to prorogue them till the 15th of April next.

About the End of Auguſt the King was much

---

[a] See the Reaſons and Narrative of Proceedings betwixt the two Houſes, which were deliver'd by the Houſe of Commons to the Lords at the Conference touching the Tryal of the Lords in the Tower on Monday May 26. 1679. particularly as to the Right of the Biſhops to appear at the Tryals. Printed Fol. 1673.

May 27. 1679. the Lords after reading the Narrative and Reaſons of the Commons, put the Queſtion, whether to inſiſt upon their Votes concerning the Lords Spiritual. Reſolved in the Affirmative. Diſſentient 28.

[b] The Earl of Eſſex told Sir William Temple, that the King had found out there were Remonſtrances ready prepar'd in the Houſe of Commons to inflame the City and Nation; and that the three Lords (Hallifax, Eſſex, and Sunderland) having thereupon conſulted with his Majeſty. He had reſolv'd to prorogue the Parliament that Morning; and that it could not be allow'd Time or Vent by a Debate in Council, which Sir William thought an ill Omiſſion, and that it ought to have the Authority of the King with the Advice of his Council. But it paſs'd otherwiſe, and with very great Reſentment of both Houſes, and ſuch Rage of the Earl of Shafiſbury, that he ſaid upon it aloud in the Houſe, that he would have the Heads of thoſe who were the Adviſers of this Prorogation.

[c] By the King a Proclamation for diſſolving the preſent Parliament, and declaring the ſpeedy calling of a new one, to be holden at Weſtminſter on the 17th of Octob. next. Dated July 12. Regni 31. 1679.

See, 1. A brief Account of the Tryal of Father Lewis, the pretended Biſhop of Landaff, at the laſt Aſſizes at Monmouth, March 25, 1679. for cheating a poor Woman of ſeveral Sums of Money, on pretence of praying her Father's Soul out of Purgatory, 1679. 4to. 2. The Tryal of Nathaniel Reading Eſq; for attempting to ſtifle the King's Evidence as to the horrid Plot on Wedneſday April 16, at Weſtminſter-Hall. Printed Fol. 1679.——3. An Account of the Behaviour of the fourteen late Popiſh Malefactors whilſt in Newgate, and their Diſcourſes with the Ordinary; with a particular Account of the five Jeſuits, executed on the 14th of June, 1679. By Sam. Smith, Ordinary of Newgate, 1679. Fol.——4. The Tryal of Charles Kerne, arraigned for being a Popiſh Prieſt, at the Aſſizes held at Hereford on Monday Aug. 4. 1679. Fol.——5. The Tryal, Conviction, and Condemnation, of Andrew Brommich and William Atkins, for being Romiſh Prieſts, at the Aſſizes held at Stafford Aug. 13. 1679. Fol.——6. The Tryal and Conviction of Thomas Knox and John Lane, for a Conſpiracy to defame and ſcandalize Dr. Oats and Mr. Bedloe, thereby to diſcredit their Evidence about the Popiſh Plot, before the Lord Chief Juſtice Screggs Novemb. 25. 1679.

1679. 31 Car. II.

indiſpoſed by two or three Fits of a Tertian Ague. The News of this, and of the Parliament's Diſſolution, coming to the Duke of York in Flanders, he reſolved upon an immediate return into England; and the Report of his ſudden Return was thus made, by Authority: " Windſor Sept. 2. This Morning " his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York arrived " here, contrary to Expectation, and told his Ma" jeſty, That hearing of his Indiſpoſition, he thought " he could do no leſs than come to wait upon him, " and ſee how he did: adding, that he was ready, " as ſoon as his Majeſty pleaſed, to return to Flan" ders, or any other part of the World his Majeſty " ſhould command him to." This Return of the Duke was very ſurprizing to the Court it ſelf, and very alarming to the greater part of the Nation, who had ſo much Reaſon to fear a Plot upon the King's Life, even for the ſake of a Popiſh Succeſſor. The King himſelf was ſenſible that he could not enjoy his Brother's Company, without an univerſal Diſcontent among his Subjects. But the Duke was very unwilling to croſs the Seas again; and therefore when he ſaw that he muſt leave the Court, he deſir'd rather to retire into Scotland, where his Figure might be greater than Abroad, and his Return, upon any Exigence, might be more quick and eaſy. This Compromiſe between the King and the Duke had this Notice given of it by Authority: New-Market Octob. 7. His Royal Highneſs having repreſented to his Majeſty, That he conceives it, for many Reſpects, more proper for him to be in his Majeſty's Dominions, rather than thoſe of another Prince, and made it his humble Requeſt to his Majeſty to have his Leave to go into Scotland: His Majeſty hath granted it; and it's preſumed his Royal Highneſs will in a ſhort time repair thither.

Duke of York returns to England.

A Surprize to the Court, and Offence to the Country.

The Duke retires into Scotland.

On Monday Octob. 27. their Royal Highneſſes, attended by many of the Nobility, and other Perſons of Quality, followed with a numerous Train of Coaches, began their Journey towards Scotland, and lodg'd the firſt Night at the Earl of Saliſbury's at Hatfield, and was received at Edinburgh with great Solemnity, where Decemb. 4. his Royal Highneſs took his Place in the Council, and ſpoke to them in a very affectionate manner; " expreſſing his great " Satisfaction at the Civilities he had met with ſince " his entring into the Kingdom, and declaring his " Readineſs to do every thing that lay in his power " to promote the Honour and Service of the King, " and the Intereſts of this Kingdom." It was ſome Advantage to the Intereſt and Deſigns of the Duke and his Friends, that the rigid Presbyterians, or Field-Conventiclers, had in the beginning of this Year moſt barbarouſly murdered the Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, and afterward took Arms[a], ſeized the City of Glaſcow, and encreas'd into a formidable Army, that was routed by the Duke of Monmouth at Bothwell-Bridge.

His Speech to the Council.

Duke of Monmouth grows popular.

The Duke of Monmouth improv'd every day in the Affections of the People of England, and by his Zeal in Proſecution of the Plot, and his joining heartily with thoſe Members of both Houſes who were thought the beſt Proteſtants, and the greateſt Patriots, that he began to be invited to caſt an Eye upon the Crown; and a Report was induſtriouſly given out, that the King had been lawfully married to his Mother. Upon which his Majeſty cauſed a Declaration to be entred in the Council Book,

The King declares he was never marry'd to the Duke's Mother.

THat to avoid any Diſpute which may happen in Time to come concerning the Succeſſion to the Crown, he declares in the Preſence of Almighty God, That he never gave nor made any Contract of Marriage, nor was married to any Woman whatſoever, but to his preſent Wife Queen *Catherine, now living.

Whitehall, March 3. 1679.

Charles Rex.

Another Proteſtation.

Three Months after his Majeſty thought fit to renew a Proteſtation, On the Word of a King, and the Faith of a Chriſtian, that he was never married to Mrs. Barlow, aliàs Walters, the Duke of Monmouth's Mother, nor to any other Woman whatſoever, beſides the now Queen[b]. Which Royal Proteſtation was recorded in the High Court of Chancery.

The Duke of York was ſo jealous of the Competition of Monmouth, that at the beginning of September he had prevailed with the King to take from him his Commiſſion of Captain-General, and to take from him all his other Places, and to command him to depart the Kingdom. Accordingly the Duke of Monmouth went over to Utrecht, and reſolved to reſide there, whilſt the Duke of York ſtay'd at Bruſſels: But hearing of the Duke's ſudden going back to England[c], he thought fit to follow him; and on the 27th of November he arrived at London about Midnight: and the Watch ſpreading the News of it, the Bells rang, and Bonfires were made through the City and Suburbs in a very diſtinguiſhing manner.

Petitions for Sitting of the Parliament.

Upon the ſeveral Prorogations of the Parliament, the Members were very uneaſy, and the People much grieved; ſo that very many Petitions were preſented to the King for the ſitting of the Parliament[d], as highly neceſſary for the Safety of his Majeſty's Perſon, and the Peace of his Kingdoms. But the King reſolving that there ſhould be no Seſſion, this manner of Petitioning was called Tumultuous and Unlawful: And the King in Council, Decemb. 10. ordered the Lord-Mayor of London to ſuppreſs them, and puniſh thoſe that went about collecting Hands to ſuch Petitions. The King alſo publiſh'd a Proclamation, dated Decemb. 12. wherein he call'd this Way of Petitioning, " A Method ſet on foot " by ill Men, to promote Diſcontents among the " People, and to raiſe Sedition and Rebellion:" And ſtrictly commanded all his loving Subjects, of what Rank or Degree ſoever, that they preſume not to promote any ſuch Subſcriptions, nor in any-wiſe join in any Petition of that manner to be preferred to his Majeſty, upon Peril of the utmoſt Rigour of the Law that may be inflicted for it. And yet this Buſineſs of Petitioning was zealouſly carried on, and Diſcountenanc'd by the King.

[a] Dr. John Sharp, Abp. of St. Andrews, aſſaulted and murder'd on the Road between Edinburgh and his own Houſe, on May 3. 1679.

[b] The Maſter of the Charter-Houſe, a Scots Gentleman, long in the Service of King Charles abroad, had the particular Care and Cuſtody of the Duke of Monmouth's Mother, and buried her at Paris. He was often Expreſs in this Matter, and ſaid poſitively, the King had never any Intention to marry her; and that indeed ſhe did not deſerve any ſuch good Intention toward her, being a very ill Woman.

[c] The Return of the Duke from Flanders was diſcover'd by Sir William Temple to be a Political Juggle of two chief Miniſters to ſave themſelves, by a way of ingratiating for having before too much offended. The Secret (ſays he) was this: Upon the King's Illneſs, the Lords Eſſex and Hallifax being about him, thought his Danger great, and their own ſo too; and that if any thing happen'd to the King's Life, the Duke of Monmouth would be at the Head of the Nation, in oppoſition to the Duke of York, upon pretence of Popery, and in conjunction with the Earl of Shaftſbury, who had threatned to have their Heads upon Prorogation of the laſt Parliament; which Threat was apply'd by the Lords Eſſex and Hallifax to themſelves; reckoning the Lord Sunderland ſafe by his Relation to the Earl of Shaftſbury, and the fair Terms that had always been between them. This Fright had ſo affected theſe two Lords, that not ſtaying to ſee what the King's ſecond Fitt would be, they propos'd to the King the ſending immediately for the Duke, &c.

[d] See A Petition of ten of the Peers, Earl of Shaftſbury, Earl of Huntingdon, Clare, Stamford, &c. to his Majeſty; humbly beſeeching him to conſider the Danger of his Royal Perſon, and of the Proteſtant Religion and the Government, and to permit the Parliament to ſit at the Time appointed.

many

1679. 31 Car. II. many were prepared, and ſome preſented: But the King received them very coldly, and often reprimanded thoſe that brought them, particularly when Sir Gilbert Gerrard, accompanied by many eminent Citizens, did on Jan. 13. preſent to his Majeſty ſuch a Petition for the Sitting of the Parliament; his Majeſty was pleaſed to anſwer, That he look'd upon himſelf to be the Head of the Government, and the only Judge of what was fit to be done in ſuch Caſes, and that he would do what he thought moſt for the Good of himſelf and his People: Adding to Sir Gilbert, That he did not expect to find one of his Name, and particularly him, in ſuch a Thing, and that he was very ſorry for it.

Duke of York weary of Scotland. During theſe Intervals of Parliaments, the Duke of York thought it ſafe and proper for him to return out of Scotland: And to break the Deſign with more ſoftneſs to the People, on Jan. 28. his Majeſty was pleaſed to declare in Counil, That he had ſent for his Royal Highneſs, not having found ſuch an Effect from his Abſence as ſhould encline him to keep him longer from him. That ſome Queſtions had been ſtarted of late, of ſuch a Nature, and of ſo great Concern to the Duke, as made it reaſonable to have him preſent at the next Seſſion of Parliament; and that though his Majeſty would take care to preſerve his Right, yet it might be for his Satisfaction to be here himſelf. That his Majeſty was ſo well aſſured of the Duke's Compliance, that he could anſwer, his Return ſhould have no ill Influence upon the Publick. So on Febr. 24. their Royal Higneſſes arrived at Deptford, and went up the River in a Barge, and were ſaluted by the Guns from the Ships, and from the Tower; and at their Landing at the Privy-Stairs, his Majeſty received them in a moſt affectionate manner, and led the Dutcheſs to the Queen's Apartment, and from thence to her own; whither many of the Nobility, and other Perſons of Quality immediately repaired, to compliment their Royal Highneſſes, and to kiſs their Hands: And two Days after they were attended by the Lord-Mayor, Court of Aldermen, Recorder, and Common-Council of London, where the Recorder made a Speech, and in all their Names congratulated the Duke's ſafe Arrival, and pray'd for his Health and Proſperity. So great Labour was employed to make the World (if poſſible) to believe, That the Duke of York was now the beſt Friend, and even a Favourite of the People.

Honours and Preferments. There were this Year many and great Advances and Changes in Honours and Preferments: On April 13. his Majeſty ſigned a Warrant for conſtituting Captain Thomas Cheek to be Lieutenant of the Tower of London, in the room of Sir John Robinſon. On April 25. Richard Coling Eſq; was ſworn Clerk Extraordinary of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council. The Duke of York, to decline the Compliment of the Commons, laid down his Admiralty; and his Majeſty appointed Sir Henry Capel, Knight of the Bath, Daniel Finch Eſq; Sir Thomas Lee, Sir Humphry Winch, Sir Thomas Meers, Bar^ts. Edward Vaughan and Edward Hales Eſqrs; Commiſſioners for the Execution of the Office of Lord High-Admiral of England. On April 23. Sir Gilbert Gerrard, Sir Thomas Player, and Colonel Birch and Colonel Whitley, were appointed Commiſſioners to disband the Army. On July 20. his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed, in Conſideration of the many and faithful Services performed unto him by the Right Honourable George Lord Viſcount Hallifax, John Lord Roberts, and Charles Lord Gerrard of Brandon, to confer upon them the Dignities of Earls of this Kingdom, creating the ſaid Lord Viſcount Hallifax Earl of Hallifax; the Lord Gerrard Earl of Newberry, Viſcount Brandon; and the Lord Roberts, Earl of Falmouth, Viſcount Bodmyn: But on July 26. his Majeſty was pleaſed to change the Title of Earl of Falmouth, which he had conferr'd on the Lord Roberts, and inſtead thereof to create him Earl of Radnor. And his Majeſty was then pleaſed, as a Mark of his Grace and Favour to the Lord Viſcount Yarmouth, to create him Earl of Yarmouth. And again, on Aug. 20. his Majeſty changed the Title of Earl of Newberry, which he had conferred on the Lord Gerrard of Brandon, and inſtead thereof created him Earl of Macclesfield. In the beginning of October the Earl of Shaftsbury was removed from the Place of Preſident of the Privy-Council: For he had been now an hearty Oppoſer of Popery, and of the Duke's Succeſſion: And tho' he had been once in the moſt Arbitrary Meaſures of the Court, yet now, either to make an Atonement, or to ſhew his Reſentment, he was the greateſt Patron of the Eſtabliſh'd Religion and Laws. He had at the Opening of this Seſſion made a famous Speech, wherein were theſe odd and notable Things: We have a little Siſter, and ſhe has no Breaſts: What ſhall we do for our Siſter in the Day when ſhe ſhall be ſpoken for? and we have ſeveral little Siſters without Breaſts: the French Proteſtant Churches, the two Kingdoms of Ireland and Scotland. The Protection of the Proteſtants Abroad is the greateſt Power and Security the Crown of England can attain, and which can help us to give a Check to the growing Greatneſs of France. Scotland and Ireland are two Doors, either to let in Good or Miſchief upon us. Popery and Slavery, like two Siſters, go Hand in Hand; ſometimes the one goes firſt, ſometimes the other: But where-ever the one enters, the other is always following cloſe at the Heels. In England Popery was to have brought in Slavery: In Scotland Slavery went before, and Popery was to follow, &c. Speech of the Earl of Shaftsbury. Upon this Removal of the Earl of Shaftsbury, his Majeſty was pleaſed to make the Earl of Radnor Preſident of the Council, who took his Place at the Board on October 25.

About the Middle of September, his Majeſty, in Conſideration of the conſtant Loyalty of the Family of George Lord Berkeley of Berkeley-Caſtle, and of his Lordſhip's conſiderable Services and good Affection to his Majeſty's Perſon, was graciouſly pleaſed, by his Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, to confer upon his Lordſhip the additional Honours of Viſcount Durſely, and Earl of Berkeley, in the County of Glouceſter. On Octob. 20. his Majeſty conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon Jonathan Raymond and Simon Lewis, Sheriffs, and William Ruſſel, one of the Common-Council of London, giving them the Character of Perſons of whom his Majeſty had received a very good Account as to their Principles and Affections to the Government, and to the Proteſtant Religion as now eſtabliſh'd in the Church of England.

In the Heats and Fatigues of proſecuting the Popiſh Plot, Sir William Jones, Attorney-General, humbly beſought his Majeſty, that he might reſign his Place, wherein he was unable longer to ſerve his Majeſty, becauſe of the Affliction lately befallen him in his Family, and the Diſtempers of Body which he had contracted by a Sedentary Life. The King was pleaſed to gratify him therein, and to permit him to quit that Employment, with an Aſſurance of his being very well ſatisfied with the good and faithful Services performed by him while he was in it; and his Majeſty was then pleaſed to make Choice of Sir Creſwel Levinz, one of his Majeſty's Counſel learn'd in the Law, to be his Attorney-General.

On November 19. his Majeſty was pleaſed to declare in Council, That he had given Leave to the Right Honourable the Earl of Eſſex to reſign his Place of firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury; but that his Majeſty intended his Lordſhip ſhould continue of his Privy-Council. And the Right Honourable Lawrence Hyde Eſq; being by his Lordſhip's ſaid Reſignation become the firſt in that Commiſſion, his Majeſty cauſed him to be ſworn a Privy-Counſellor, and accordingly he took his Place at the Board. And his Majeſty was pleaſed to make

Sir

1679. 31 Car. II.

Sir Stephen Fox, Kt. one of the Commiſſioners of the Treaſury.

On the Removal of the Duke of Monmouth, his Majeſty was pleaſed to make the Duke of Albemarle Captain of his Life-Guards of Horſe: And the Earl of Mulgrave Governor of Hull, and Lord-Lieutenant of the Eaſt-Riding of Yorkſhire. And about the ſame End of November his Majeſty created Edward Lord Viſcount Conway Earl of Conway, and granted to the Earl of Cheſterfield the Offices of Warden and Chief-Juſtice in Eyre of all his Majeſty's Forreſts, Parks, &c. on this ſide Trent. On December 5. his Majeſty was pleaſed in Council to declare, That deſigning to employ Sir Robert Southwell, Kt. in his Service abroad, he had given him Leave to reſign his Place of one of the Clerks of the Council to Francis Gwynne, Eſq; who being called in, was ſworn accordingly. On December 26. his Majeſty was pleaſed to grant the Office of Receiver and Pay-Maſter of his Forces to Nicholas Johnſon and William Fox, Eſqs. On Jan. 7. his Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Edward Deering, Eſq; Younger Son of Sir Edward Deering, Kt. and Bart. deceas'd, in Conſideration of ſeveral Services by him rendred both before and ſince his Majeſty's happy Reſtauration.

Humour of ridiculing the Popiſh Plot.

Nothing was become more acceptable to the Court, than the Humour of ſtifling and ridiculing the Popiſh Plot. For this Cauſe Articles of Complaint were preferred by Dr. Oates and Mr. Bedlowe againſt the Lord Chief-Juſtice Scroggs; which, with his Lordſhip's Anſwer, were openly heard and debated before his Majeſty in Council, on Wedneſday Jan. 21. where his Lordſhip was favoured and vindicated in all Particulars by the King and Council, who therefore diſmiſs'd the Matter from the Board, and left his Lordſhip to take ſuch Courſe at Law as he ſhould think fit. Theſe and other Proceedings in Council were thought to be ſo partial, that on Jan. 31. the Lord Ruſſel, the Lord Cavendiſh, Sir Henry Capell, and Mr. Powle, prayed his Majeſty to give them Leave to withdraw from the Council-Board. To which his Majeſty was pleaſed to anſwer, With all his Heart. And on Feb. 4. Daniel Finch, Eſq; firſt Commiſſioner of the Admiralty, and Sidney Godolphin, Eſq; one of the Commiſſioners for the Treaſury, were ſworn of his Majeſty's Privy-Council, and took their Places at the Board.

Privy-Counſellors withdraw.

Other Honours and Preferments.

At the Beginning of Hilary-Term, Mr. Baron Raymond was ſworn one of the Judges of the Common-Pleas, in the room of Sir Robert Atkyns, who the Day before received his Diſcharge, under the Great-Seal; and Sir Richard Weſton, one of his Majeſty's Serjeant's at Law, was ſworn one of the Barons of the Exchequer, in the Place of Mr. Juſtice Raymond. On Feb. 7. Charles Littleton was made Governor of Sheerneſs, in the room of Major Dorrell deceas'd. And about the ſame time his Majeſty thought fit to add the Lord Brownkard and Sir Thomas Littleton to the Commiſſion for executing the Office of Lord High-Admiral of England.

On Feb. 11. his Majeſty was pleaſed to declare in Council, "That Mr. Secretary Coventry had long "ſolicited him, on account of his Infirmneſs of "Body, for his Leave to reſign his Place of one of "his Principal Secretaries of State: That his Ma"jeſty had at laſt been prevailed upon to grant it, "though with ſome unwillingneſs, becauſe of the "great Satisfaction his Majeſty had always had in "his Services: That his Majeſty's Intention was "he ſhould however continue of his Privy-Coun"cil: And that his Majeſty had made Choice of "Sir Leoline Jenkins (Judge of the High Court of "Admiralty, and his late Ambaſſador Extraordina"ry and Plenipotentiary at the Treaty at Nimeguen) "to ſucceed him in that Station, which Mr. Se"cretary Coventry would quit, ſo ſoon as he had put "his Affairs in order: And in the mean time his "Majeſty was pleaſed to command Sir Leoline Jen"kins to be ſworn of his Privy-Council, who ac"cordingly took his Place at the Board.

Ambaſſadors and Envoys.

On Feb. 17. his Majeſty appointed Sir Robert Southwell Kt. to go his Envoy Extraordinary to the Elector of Brandenburgh: And Sir Francis Pemberton, one of the Juſtices of the King's-Bench, received his Diſcharge, under the Great-Seal. On Feb. 21. his Majeſty declar'd Sir Palmes Fairborne to be left Lieutenant-Governor of Tangier, in the room of Colonel Duncan: Upon whoſe Arrival the Earl of Inchiquin, the Governor, had obtained Leave to come for England, in whoſe Abſence the ſaid Sir Palmes was to command in Chief. The Lord Bodmyn went Envoy Extraordinary to the King of Denmark; and Sir Gabriel Silvius, in the ſame Quality, to the Dukes of Brunſwick and Lunenburgh. On March 6. his Majeſty going to Blackwall to ſee ſome Frigots there building, dined with Henry Johnſon, Eſq; and conferr'd upon him the Honour of Knighthood.

State of Religion.

The King profeſſes a Zeal to the Church of England.

Proclamations againſt Papiſts.

As to Religion: While the Nation and the Parliament were ſo juſtly apprehenſive of the Dangers of Popery[a], the King was pleaſed to keep them in ſome Amuſement, by ſeeming himſelf to ſhew a great Affection and Zeal for the Proteſtant Church Eſtabliſh'd. He fell in readily with all the Parliamentary Addreſſes for executing the Laws againſt the Papiſts, though nothing was more averſe to his own Inclination and Judgment. On May 4. he cauſed a Proclamation to be publiſh'd, commanding all Papiſts, or reputed Papiſts, forthwith to depart from the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and from within ten Miles of the ſame. And on the ſame Day he publiſh'd another Proclamation for the Diſcovery and Apprehending Maurice Gifford a Popiſh Prieſt, and ſeveral other Perſons of the Romiſh Religion, who had, (out of their deteſtable and barbarous Malice) conſpired and agreed together to ſet on fire the City of London, the Suburbs thereof, and the Places thereunto adjacent. On June 13. Thomas White, alias Whitebread, Provincial of the Jeſuits in England, William Harcourt, pretended Rector of London; John Fenwick, Procurator for the Jeſuits in England; John Gaven, alias Gawen, and Anthony Turner, all Jeſuits and Prieſts, were brought to their Tryal at the Old-Baily, by virtue of a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, being indicted of High-Treaſon, for conſpiring the Death of his Majeſty, and the Subverſion of the Government and Proteſtant Religion; and, upon full Evidence, were found Guilty. And the next Day Richard Langhorne, Counſellor at Law, who was indicted for the ſame Crimes, was, after a long Tryal, likewiſe found Tryal of Prieſts and Jeſuits.

[a] See the Popiſh Damnable Plot againſt our Religion and Liberties fairly laid open and diſcover'd in the Breviats of threeſcore and four Letters and Papers of Intelligence paſs'd betwixt the Pope, the Duke of York, Cardinal Norfolk, Cardinal Cibo, Cardinal Barberini, Nuncio and Internuncio for the Pope in Italy, France and Flanders, and the Lord Arundell, Mr. Coleman, Albany, Mr. Cook, Mr. Evans: As alſo the ſaid Mr. Coleman, Albany, St. Germain, Leyburn, Sheldon, Throgmorton, and ſeveral others. As they were drawn up by the Secret Committee of the Houſe of Commons for the Satiſfaction of the Houſe of Lords in the Bill againſt the Duke of York and expected Tryals of the Lords. Now publiſhed for the Vindication of the Houſe of Commons upon the ſaid Bill, and for Satisfaction of all the faithful Subjects of his Majeſty's Kingdoms; with ſeveral Animadverſions and Remarks made upon the ſaid Letters. London, for R. Janeway, 1680. Fol.

See the Trial of Nathaniel Reading Eſq; before the Lord Chief Juſtice North, for endeavouring to ſtifle the Evidence for the King againſt the Popiſh Lords, April 24. 1679. Committed and ſentenc'd to ſtand in the Pillory, one Year's Impriſonment, and a Fine of one thouſand Pounds.——This notable Perſon had been Secretary to Mas Annello in the Inſurrection at Naples above thirty Years before, and lived about thirty Years after this Tryal. Remarkable for the Strength of old Age and Wickedneſs.

Guilty.

1679. 31 Car. II.

Guilty. And then Sentence paſſed upon them all ſix, to be drawn, hang'd, and quarter'd. When they came to Execution, they all proteſted, upon their Salvation, at the very moment of death, That they were wholly Innocent of the Crimes objected againſt them, and for which they were about to ſuffer. Many People were ſurprized at theſe dying Aſſeverations, when the Evidence was ſo clear in all the Facts, and in every Circumſtance of them; ſome imputed their obſtinate denial, to an expectance of Pardon; others, to an extravagant Notion of Merit; and few believed them, but thoſe who had been proſelyted to them. On July 18, Sir George Wakeman the Queen's Phyſician, Mr. William Marſhal, Mr. William Rumſey, and Mr. James Corker, were Tryed upon a like Indictment of High-Treaſon, for conſpiring the death of the King, and ſubverting the Government, and the Proteſtant Religion. But the King's Witneſſes were now ſo far diſcountenanc'd, that the Jury brought the Priſoners in, Not Guilty. Yet his Majeſty ſuffered William Pleſſington a Popiſh Prieſt, being convicted of High-Treaſon, for exerciſing his Function here, contrary to the Law, to be executed at Cheſter, on Saturday the 19th of July; and connived at the like execution of John Evans, and William Floyd, two Popiſh Prieſts, at Cardiff, on the 23d of July. His Majeſty, by Proclamation dated September 8. Declares to the World, That it had appeared, at the Tryals and Arraignments of the Conſpirators, in the horrid and traiterous Conſpiracy now under Proſecution, That among the ſeveral Ways and Means contrived for the Murther of his Sacred Majeſty, four Ruffians were appointed to go to Windſor, and there to Aſſaſſinate his Royal Perſon; and that by Information upon Oath, there was juſt cauſe to ſuſpect that Lay-allyan, Karney, and Brahall, Iriſhmen, and Wilſon an Engliſhman, were the Perſons hired to commit that execrable Crime, and were ſince fled from Juſtice: And therefore his Majeſty propoſes the Reward of an hundred Pounds for the diſcovery of any one of thoſe Offenders. In another Proclamation Dated October 31, his Majeſty farther declared, That the late horrid Plot and Conſpiracy of divers Prieſts and Jeſuits, and other Papiſts, againſt his Majeſty's Sacred Perſon, and for the Subverſion of the Proteſtant Religion and Government eſtabliſhed, had been ſo far diſcovered, that the ſad Effects thereof had, by his Majeſty's Care, and the Bleſſing of Almighty God, been hitherto prevented, and the moſt notorious Offenders therein brought to condign Puniſhment. But his Majeſty conſidered, that nothing would more conduce to the laſting Safety of his Majeſty, his Kingdoms, and the Proteſtant Religion therein eſtabliſh'd, than that there might be a full and perfect diſcovery of the ſaid Conſpiracy, and therefore offers Pardon, and other Encouragement, to all that can make any farther diſcovery. Again by Proclamation dated November the 12th, his Majeſty propoſes a Reward of an hundred Pounds to any Perſon who ſhall diſcover and apprehend any Jeſuit; and fifty Pounds to any Perſon who ſhall diſcover any Eſtate Real or Perſonal belonging to any Jeſuit, or College or Seminary of Jeſuits; or to any Popiſh Prieſt, College, Seminary, Convent or Nunnery of Popiſh and Superſtitious Foundation, (except the ſame be iſſuing out, or Part of the Eſtate and Eſtates of Sir Thomas Preſton, Sir John Warner, 2500 l. Charge upon the Eſtate of Henry Nevil, Eſq; and 1500 l. in the Hands of Auguſtine Hungate, which are already diſcovered, and now under Examination before the Lords-Commiſſioners of the Treaſury.)

Some Papiſts acquitted.

The King apprehends his own Life in danger.

And encourages a further Diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot.

In December his Majeſty farther declared, "That "out of his continual Care of the Proteſtant Religion, he had appointed a Committee of the "Lords of his Privy-Council, to conſider of the "moſt effectual Means for putting the Laws in ex- "ecution againſt the Papiſts, and for the ſuppreſ- "ſion of Popery; who reporting their Opinions to "his Majeſty in Council, there was a Reward of "Ten Pounds to be paid to the diſcoverer of any "Papiſt, or ſuſpected Papiſt, who ſhall be harbour- "ed in any of his Majeſty's Houſes, and the Officer "who harbour'd them ſhould be turn'd out of his "Place. The Juſtices of Peace were likewiſe per- "mitted to ſearch Somerſet-Houſe, at any time in "the Queen's abſence, as alſo St. James's, for "Prieſts and Papiſts. And that no Popiſh Recu- "ſant might expect any Favour or Connivance for "their ſtaying in Town, his Majeſty declared his "Reſolution, not to grant them any Diſpenſations "or Licenſes to that effect. And for preventing "the Reſort of all Perſons to the Chapels of Am- "baſſadors and Foreign Miniſters of the Popiſh Re- "ligion, (except they be their menial Servants) the "Conſtables and Beadles were directed to ſeize all "Perſons who ſhould be found unduly reſorting "thither. And that no Encouragement might be "wanting, in order to the Conviction of Papiſts, "a Privy-Seal was paſſing, to enable all the Judges "to reward, according to their Diſcretions, all Per- "ſons that ſhould proſecute ſuch Popiſh Recuſants "before them, to be pay'd out of the Eſtates or "Forfeitures of thoſe who ſhould be convicted by "their Proſecutions. And for ſuch Perſons as were "already Impriſoned any where, upon Suſpicion of "being Popiſh Prieſts, it was farther Ordered, That "they be forthwith proſecuted to an Attainder. "And whereas Liſts of the Papiſts, and Reputed "Papiſts of England and Wales had been lodg'd in "the Houſe of Commons by the Knights of the "reſpective Shires, and Copies thereof laid before "the Lords of the Committee, the Lord Chancel- "lor was now directed to cauſe Commiſſions to be "prepared (in which the ſaid Liſts were to be in- "ſerted) impowering and requiring the Juſtices of "the Peace of each County to tender the Oaths of "Allegiance and Supremacy to the Perſons particu- "larly named therein; and upon their refuſal to "proceed againſt them according to Law, in or- "der to their ſpeedy Conviction." And after all theſe Opinions of the Committee, confirmed and enforced by the King in Council, a Proclamation was publiſh'd the ſame Day, declaring, That his Majeſty was ſenſible of the great encreaſe of Popery within this Kingdom of late Years, by reaſon of the neglect of putting in execution thoſe good Laws which were provided for ſuppreſſing the ſame, whereby Jeſuits and Prieſts had been emboldened to reſort hither from Parts beyond the Seas in great Numbers, and had openly practiſed and aſſerted the moſt pernicious and damnable Principles of that Religion, and to perſuade and withdraw divers of his Majeſty's good Subjects from their Obedience to his Majeſty, and to reconcile them to the Pope and See of Rome: Therefore his Majeſty apprehending that many of his good Subjects might be ignorant of the good Laws made againſt Popery, his Majeſty thinks fit to publiſh and make known the principal and moſt penal of the ſaid Laws; as well to prevent and hinder any of his loving Subjects from being miſled into any ſuch Offences, through Ignorance, as to guide and encourage all Perſons knowing of any ſuch Offences, to a legal Proſecution of the ſame.

Proclamation for putting the Laws in Execution againſt Papiſts.

On Jan. 17, at the Seſſions for Middleſex and London, Eight Perſons were Arraigned for High-Treaſon, upon the Statute of 27 Eliz. cap. 2. who being born Subjects of the King of England, and having taken the Order of Prieſthood, by Authority derived from the See of Rome, had come and remained in England, contrary to the Statute; and Six of them were Convicted. And yet after all theſe ſolemn Declarations, and formal Proceedings, the King was believed, by all who beſt knew him, to be a Papiſt in his Heart, and a profeſs'd encourager of ſuppreſſing and ridiculing the Popiſh Plot; which never ended in his Reign, nor with his Life[a].

The King is not throughly convinc'd of the Popiſh Plot.

Omiſſion in the Teſt Act, about Members of Convocation.

[a] The diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot, and the vigorous Proſecution of it had created ſuch Abhorrence, or at leaſt excited ſuch Caution in ſome of the Popiſh Peers, that they turn'd Proteſtants upon it, and continued ſo till death, particularly the Duke of Norfolk and the Earl of Shrewſbury.

1679. 31 Car. II.

There was little more of Eccleſiaſtical Concern; unleſs we take Notice, That the Houſe of Lords had obſerved an Omiſſion in the Teſt Act, and other Acts of Security, "That no Proviſion was made for "requiring the Members of Convocation to take "the Oaths and Declaration." Upon which a Bill was brought in, Intituled, An Act to diſable any Perſon from ſitting in any of the Houſes of Convocation, till he hath taken the Oaths, and made and ſubſcribed the Declaration therein contained. Which Bill being ſent from the Lords, was on Apr. 3[d] read the firſt time, and on Apr. 8. a ſecond time, and then committed, upon the Debate of the Houſe, to a Committee of Members expreſſly named; to which were to be added all the Members that ſerved for the Univerſities of Oxford and Cambridge. A Report from this Committee was made on Apr. 22. That they had taken the Bill into Conſideration, and agreed upon ſeveral Amendments and Clauſes: Which being read, the Bill was recommitted, and was afterwards dropt. The Foundation of this Bill was laid, in this Opinion of all People, That the Members of Convocation were not ſo called to Parliament by the Premunientes Writ, as to be intitled to the Privileges or Duties of Parliament-Men, by any Law or Statute, unleſs expreſſly named in it.

Unhappy Diſtinction of Whig and Tory.

The Nation was ſo divided into Party and Faction, under the unhappy Names of Whig and Tory, that at Elections for Parliament, and other publick Meetings, it occaſioned many Tumults and Riots, and other perſonal Challenges and Combats. Upon which his Majeſty, by his Proclamation dated March 9, was pleaſed to declare, "That it had "become too frequent, eſpecially with Perſons of "Quality, under a vain Pretence of Honour, to "take upon them to be the Revengers of their "private Quarrels, by Duels and ſingle Combat; "which ought not to be, upon any Pretence or "Provocation whatſoever: Therefore, his Majeſty "conſidering, that the ſin of Murther was deteſtable before God, and this way of proſecuting Satiſfaction was ſcandalous to Chriſtian Religion, "and was a manifeſt Violation of the Laws; out of "his pious Care to prevent unchriſtian and raſh effuſion of Blood, he ſtrictly charges and commands "all his loving Subjects, That they do not, either "by themſelves or others, challenge any Perſon, "nor accept of any Challenge, nor actually fight "any Duel; Declaring his Royal Pleaſure, That he "will not grant his Pardon to any Perſon that ſhall "be ſo concern'd in any Duel, but leave him to "the utmoſt rigour and Severities of the Laws.

Proclamation againſt Duelling.

Unhappy Diviſions among the Clergy.

The Diſſentions among the Clergy were as apparent as among the People. Thoſe Divines who were hearty in their Zeal againſt Popery, and were ſtedfaſt in aſſerting the legal Rights and Liberties of Church and State, were unhappily run down for Whigs, and even for Fanaticks, though Perſons of the greateſt Learning, Sobriety, and Affection to the Eſtabliſh'd Conſtitution: While other Clergymen, who were drawn in to declaim againſt the Fanaticks more than againſt the [a] Papiſts, and to pretend to be more afraid of a Republick than of a Popiſh Succeſſor, they valued themſelves for the diſtinguiſhing Name of Tories; and run into ſuch high Notions of Paſſive Obedience, and Unbounded Prerogative, that they really gave a great Advantage to the Papiſts, and help'd to make the Diſſenting Teachers the more acceptable not only to the common People, but even to many of the Nobility and Gentry, who were offended at thoſe new Marks of a High-Church. For, to uſe the Words of Sir John Hawles, late Solicitor-General, in his Remarks on Fitz-Harris's Tryal, Many of the Clergy of the Church of England had been prevailed with to cry up the Popiſh, as a Fanatick Plot: The Papiſts and the Church of England being in the late Times equally Sufferers, and Oppreſs'd by the Fanaticks, they naturally grew to have a Kindneſs for each other, and both join'd in hating the Fanaticks; and therefore pretended at leaſt, that they did not believe any thing of the Popiſh Plot, but that that Report was given out by the Fanaticks, whilſt they themſelves were deſigning ſomething againſt the Church of England.

The Parliament, by the laſt Prorogation, was to have met again on April the 15th. But on Monday April the 5th his Majeſty was pleaſed to declare in Council, "That he thought fit, for ſeveral weighty Conſiderations, to make a further Prorogation 1680.
"till the 17th of May next." At which time the two Houſes met at Weſtminſter, and were prorogued, by Commiſſion, till the firſt of July next: At which time it was further prorogued, by Commiſſion, till the 22[d] Day of the ſame Month. But in the mean time, his Majeſty declared in Council, on July 14, "That he thought fit to prorogue the "Parliament from the 22[d] inſtant till the 23[d] of Auguſt;" when it was again prorogued, by Commiſſion, till the 21st of October. On which Day his Majeſty by Proclamation declared, That the Parliament ſhould then meet, and ſit, and therefore required the Preſence and Attendance of all the Members.

The Parliament Prorogued from time to time.

In the mean time Inſtructions were given, and great Intereſt was made to obtain, at ſeveral Seſſions and Aſſizes, a Declaration of Abhorrence of Petitioning for the ſitting of a Parliament; and many of theſe Forms of Abhorrence were preſented to the King, who ſeem'd to be very fond of them. The City of Weſtminſter was the firſt, who, by Francis Wythins, Eſq; (Knighted for that Service) preſented ſuch an Addreſs of Abhorrence, made by the Grand-Jury, and ſubſcribed by the Juſtices. The Abhorrence of petitioning.

[a] 26 Martij, 1679. the Houſe of Commons being informed that Dr. John Nelſon, [a Clergyman] was the Author of a Pamphlet intituled, A Letter from a Jeſuit at Paris to his Correſpondent in London, ſhewing the moſt effectual way to ruin the Government and the Proteſtant Religion, Ordered he be ſent for in Cuſtody.

In the mean time the ſoberer Part of the Biſhops and Clergy were juſtly alarm'd at the Dangers of Popery, and joined heartily in Abhorrence of it. Particularly Dr. Compton Biſhop of London appointed the Clergy of his Dioceſe to meet in Conference againſt the Errors and Corruptions of the Church of Rome, and appointing the 20th of May, 1679. for ſuch a Conference at Dunmow upon the Queſtion of Half Communion; and a ſecond Conference on Prayers in an unknown Tongue; and a third on the Worſhip of Saints and Angels, with Sermons each Day on thoſe reſpective Subjects; the good Biſhop ſent a Circular Letter to his Clergy in thoſe Diſtricts, one of which to Dr. Thomas Fuller, Rector of Willingale-Doe in Eſſex I have now by me, thus honeſtly expreſſing himſelf.——"No "Man can be ignorant of the great Alarm the whole Nation "has been in from the wicked Deſigns of the Popiſh Party; "ſo that if ever one time was more favourable than another "to ſuppreſs that Faction, it is certainly now, when Hands "and Hearts are ready to join with me, &c. Dated May 2. 1679.

And thoſe few Biſhops that diſtinguiſhed themſelves of the Duke's Party, were ſo ſeverely reflected on by the common Speakers and Writers, that it occaſioned the publiſhing of the Speech of a Reverend Biſhop of the Church of England, in defence of themſelves and the Government, againſt the malicious Libels of theſe Times. Printed in the Year 1679. 4[to].

And yet thoſe Divines called Whigs did the Church of England moſt ſervice, nay and moſt hurt to the Cauſe of Non-conformity, as Dr. Lewis du Moulin in his laſt Tract before his death in 1680. An Appeal of the Non-Conformiſts, &c. confeſs'd in theſe Words, "That ſeveral Biſhops and Doctors of the "Church of England, as Dr. Lloyd, Dr. Tillotſon, Dr. Stillingfleet, Dr. Patrick, that are acknowledged by the Non-"Conformiſts to be Perſons of great Learning, Worth, and "Piety, but who are extreme admirers of the Epiſcopacy of "England, and all its Conſequences; and who have alſo preferred its Government to all other Eſtabliſhments in Europe, have by an unlucky Accident contributed more towards the Reputation of the Engliſh Hierarchy and its Practices, and towards the perpetuating the Feuds and Quarrels between the Conformiſts and Non-conformiſts, than it "has been poſſible for any other corrupted Party to do by "all their Irregularities, and Advances towards Rome.

like

1680. 32 Car. II.

like Addreſſes were brought up from the Counties of Surrey, Eſſex, Middleſex, and Norfolk; this laſt County particularly giving the King their humble Thanks for recalling the Duke of York from Flanders[a].

On Thurſday October 21. the Parliament met at Weſtminſter, and his Majeſty coming to the Houſe of Lords, with the Commons attending, was pleaſed to make this gracious Speech to both Houſes.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Meeting of the Parliament.

THE ſeveral Prorogations I made, have been very advantagious to our Neighbours, and very uſeful to me; for I have employed that time in making and perfecting an Alliance with the Crown of Spain, ſuitable to that which I had before with the States of the United Provinces, and they alſo had with Spain, conſiſting of mutual Obligations of Succour and Defence.

The K.'s Speech.

I have all the reaſon in the World to believe, That what was ſo much deſired by former Parliaments, muſt needs be very grateful to you now: For tho' ſome, perhaps, may wiſh theſe Meaſures had been taken ſooner, yet no Man can with Reaſon think that it is now too late; for they who deſire to make theſe Alliances, and they who deſire to break them, ſhew themſelves to be of another Opinion.

And as theſe are the beſt Meaſures that could be taken for the ſafety of England, and the repoſe of Chriſtendom; ſo they cannot fail to attain their end, and to ſpread and improve themſelves farther, if our Diviſions at home do not render our Friendſhip leſs conſiderable abroad.

To prevent thoſe as much as may be, I think fit to renew to you all the Aſſurances which can be deſired, that nothing ſhall be wanting on my part to give you the fulleſt Satisfaction your Hearts can wiſh, for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion, which I am fully reſolved to maintain againſt all the Conſpiracies of our Enemies, and to concur with you in any new Remedies which ſhall be propoſed, that may conſiſt with preſerving the Succeſſion of the Crown in its due and legal courſe of Deſcent.

And in order to this I do recommend it to you, to purſue the farther Examination of the Plot, with a ſtrict and an impartial Enquiry. I do not think my ſelf ſafe, nor you neither, till that Matter be gone through with; and therefore it will be neceſſary that the Lords in the Tower be brought to their ſpeedy Tryal, that Juſtice may be done.

I need not tell you what Danger the City of Tangier is in, nor of what Importance it is to us to preſerve it. I have with a mighty Charge and Expence, ſent a very conſiderable Relief thither; but conſtantly to maintain ſo great a Force as that War will require, and to make thoſe new Works and Fortifications, without which the Place will not be long Tenable, amounts to ſo vaſt a Sum, that without your Support it will be impoſſible for me to undergo it: Therefore I lay the Matter plainly before you, and do deſire your Advice and Aſſiſtance.

But that which I value above all the Treaſure in the World, and which I am ſure will give me greater Strength and Reputation both at home and abroad, than any Treaſure can do, is, a perfect Union among our ſelves.

Nothing but this can reſtore the Kingdom to that Strength and Vigour which it ſeems to have loſt, and raiſe us again to that Conſideration which England hath uſually had.

All Europe have their Eyes upon this Aſſembly, and think their own Happineſs or Miſery, as well as ours, will depend upon it.

If we ſhould be ſo unhappy as to fall into ſuch a miſunderſtanding amongſt our ſelves, as would render our Friendſhip unſafe to truſt to; it will not be to be wondred at, if our Neighbours ſhould begin to take new Reſolutions, and perhaps ſuch as may be fatal to us.

1680. 32 Car. II.

Let us therefore take care that we do not gratiſie our Enemies, and diſcourage our Friends by any unſeaſonable Diſputes.

If any ſuch do happen, the World will ſee it was no Fault of mine; for I have done all that was poſſible for me to do, to keep you in Peace while I live, and to leave you ſo when I die.

But from ſo great Prudence and ſo good Affection as yours, I can fear nothing of this kind; but do rely upon you all, that you will uſe your beſt Endeavours to bring this Parliament to a good and happy concluſion.

After this Speech the Lord Chancellor, by his Majeſty's Command, directed the Commons to return to their Houſe, and to proceed to the Choice of a Speaker: Which they accordingly did, and unanimouſly elected William Williams, Eſq; of Grays-Inn, Councellor at Law, and Recorder of Cheſter; who the next Day, was preſented to his Majeſty ſeated in his Throne in the Houſe of Lords, and approved by him. On Tueſday Octob. 26. they entred on their Debates; and becauſe the Senſe of the Houſe, and the State of the Nation, will beſt appear by what was then deliver'd, we ſhall here inſert the two leading Speeches. The Lord R. began thus:

W. Williams choſen Speaker.

Mr. Speaker;

SIR,

"SEeing, by God's Providence and his Majeſty's " Favour, we are here aſſembled to conſult " and adviſe about the greateſt Affairs of the Kingdom, I humbly conceive it will become us to " begin firſt with that which is of moſt Conſequence to our King and Country, and to take into Conſideration how to ſave the Main, before we ſpend any Time about Particulars.

Speeches in the Houſe of Commons.

" SIR, I am of Opinion, That the Life of our " King, the Safety of our Country and Proteſtant " Religion, are in great Danger from Popery; and " that either the Parliament muſt ſuppreſs the Power " and Growth of Popery, or elſe that Popery will " ſoon deſtroy not only Parliaments, but all that is " Near and Dear to us. And therefore I humbly " move, That we may reſolve to take into our " Conſideration, in the firſt place, How to ſuppreſs " Popery, and prevent a Popiſh Succeſſor; without " which, all our Endeavours about other Matters " will not ſignify any thing, and therefore this " juſtly challengeth the Precedency.

He was ſeconded by Sir H. C. in this notable manner.

Mr. Speaker,

SIR,

"I Stand up to ſecond that Motion, and to give " ſome Reaſons, with your Permiſſion, why " I agree in it, not doubting but other Perſons will " be of the ſame Opinion, if they have the ſame " Sentiments what Influence the Popiſh Party have " had in the Management of moſt of our Affairs " both at Home and Abroad, for many Years laſt " paſt; and how that Party hath encreaſed and been " encouraged.

" SIR, I remember, that after his Majeſty's " happy Reſtauration, it was thought convenient " that an Act of Uniformity ſhould paſs, as the beſt " Law that could be invented to ſecure the Church " from the Danger of Popery and Fanaticiſm; and " accordingly it did paſs in the Year 1662. But " in the Year 1663, ſome that then managed the " great Affairs of State, or at leaſt had great Intereſt with his Majeſty, were of another Opinion;

[a] The Arraignment and Tryal of Roger Earl of Caſtlemain, for intending to diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom, to kill the King, levy War, and alter the eſtabliſh'd Religion to the Superſtition of the Church of Rome, on Tueſday, June the 15th 1680. acquitted.

1680. “ for they had prevailed with him to grant a Tole-
32 Car. II. “ ration and Indulgence, and to make a Declaration
“ to that Purpoſe. The Parliament aſſembling
“ ſoon after, thought it very ſtrange, that in one
“ Year an Act of Uniformity ſhould be the beſt way
“ to preſerve the Church, and that in the next “ Year a Toleration and Indulgence; therefore, after “ a ſerious Debate about it in Feb. 1663, they “ made an Addreſs to his Majeſty, humbly repre-“ ſenting how it would reflect on the Wiſdom of “ that Parliament, to have ſuch an Alteration made “ ſo ſoon; and that ſuch Proceedings, for ought “ they could foreſee, would end in Popery. Upon “ which his Majeſty, out of his great Goodneſs, “ ſtopt the iſſuing out of the ſaid Toleration, heark-
“ ening rather to the Advice of his Parliament,
“ than to any private Counſellors.

“ SIR, I cannot inform you who it was that “ gave that Advice to his Majeſty, nor certainly “ affirm that they were Popiſhly affected; but if I “ may take the liberty to judge of a Tree by its “ Fruit, I have ſome Reaſon to think ſo; becauſe
“ I find by Coleman's Letters, and other Diſcove“ ries, that a Toleration and Indulgence ſhould be “ one of the great Engines they intended to uſe for
“ the eſtabliſhing of Popery in this Nation. But
“ the Project thus failing at this Time, they were “ forc'd to wait with Patience until they could have “ another Opportunity; employing in the mean
“ time their Diabolical Counſels in weakening the “ Proteſtant Intereſt, (in order to a general Deſtru“ ction of it) by engaging us in a War with Hol-
“ land: In which the French acted the ſame Part “ in the Behalf of the Dutch, as they did after“ wards in our Behalf againſt them in 1672, very “ fairly looking on both times, while we poor
“ Proteſtants with great Fury deſtroy'd one the o“ ther. But this was not ſo ſtrange, nor ſo plain,
“ as the dividing of our Fleet under the Command
“ of Prince Rupert and General Monk, and the De“ ſign of deſtroying them, as well as their Ships,
“ and the reſt of our Navy-Royal at Chatham. And
“ as they thus acted their Part at Sea, ſo they did
“ not forget to do their beſt a-Shore; in Apr. 1666,
“ ſome Perſons that were then hang'd, confeſs'd
“ they had been treated with, and had treated with “ others, to burn the City of London in September
“ following; of which Confeſſion we then took
“ as little Notice, as we have of other Diſcoveries
“ ſince: However, accordingly in September, Thir- “ teen Thouſand Houſes of the City of London were “ burnt: And thoſe that were taken in carrying on “ that Work, generouſly diſcharg'd without any “ Tryal; and one Papiſt, that confeſs'd that him“ ſelf and others did ſet the City on fire, was in “ great haſte hang'd; and ſo the Buſineſs was huſh'd
“ up, as compleatly as the laſt great Plot is like to “ be now, branding Hubert, that then made that “ Confeſſion, with Madneſs; as now theſe laſt Wit-“ neſſes, with Perjury, Sodomy, and what not.
“ However, theſe Buſineſſes were not ſo carried on,
“ but his Majeſty diſcerned ſome of the Intrigues
“ of them, which made him alter his Councils,
“ and, contrary to the Endeavours of that Party,
“ enter into new Alliances, by making up that ex“ cellent League, uſually call'd the Triple-League;
“ which put a ſtop to theſe Men's Deſigns as to “ Affairs Abroad, but not to their Deſigns here at “ Home. For having obtained the Oxford Act,
“ and ſome others againſt the Diſſenters, great En“ deavours were uſed to have them executed ſe-“ verely, in expectation that the Diſſenters would “ ſo be made weary of living quietly under them,
“ and in the end be glad of a Toleration: But the “ Diſſenters deceived them, and ſubmitted to the “ Laws, inſomuch that in 1670, till 1671, there
“ was hardly a Conventicle to be heard of in Eng- “ land; and might never have been more, if that “ Party had not been afraid of a great Diſap“ pointment thereby: Wherefore, to revive our 1680.
“ Diviſions, and to bring in (as they hoped) their 32 Car. II.
“ own Religion, they employed all their Force a“ gain to get a Toleration; I ſay, They did it, be“ cauſe it cannot be imagin'd it could be from any “ Proteſtant Intereſt, both Churchmen and Diſſen“ ters publickly declaring their Deteſtationn of it:
“ And in 1672 it was obtain'd, printed, and pub-
“ liſh'd; after we had, in order to the carrying it
“ on, broke that never-to-be-forgotten Triple-League, “ ſacrificed our Honour to the French, not only by “ making a ſtrong Alliance with them, but by ſeiz-
“ ing the Dutch Smyrna Fleet, and then afterwards “ proclaiming War with them: Which War was “ continu'd, in order to ruin us both; for the “ French proved but Lookers on at Sea, (as they had “ done when engaged with the Dutch in 1665.)
“ though great Conquerors at Land, eſpecially of “ the Proteſtants in Germany and Holland. And as “ this Toleration was accompanied with theſe great “ Alterations in Affairs Abroad, ſo it was back'd,
“ 1. With a great Miniſter of State at the Helm at “ Home, who was ſo confident of the re-fixing
“ Popery here, that he could not forbear to declare “ himſelf to be of that Religion, I mean my Lord-“ Treaſurer Clifford: As alſo, 2. With a great “ Army at Black-Heath ready upon all Occaſions:
“ And, 3. With the greateſt Violation on the Pro“ perty of the Subject that ever happen'd in this “ Nation, the Seizing of One Million and an half,
“ or thereabout, in the Exchequer. All which in“ deed made our Condition deſperate, and, as many “ thought, paſt Retrieve. But, Mr. Speaker, here
“ again the Goodneſs and Wiſdom of his Majeſty
“ ſaved us, refuſing to follow ſuch pernicious Coun-
“ ſels: Upon which Clifford not only loſt his Place,
“ but his Life too, breaking his Heart (as is by “ moſt believed) to ſee himſelf ſo diſappointed in “ this great Deſign. And here, as we can never “ too much deteſt my Lord Clifford, and ſuch others
“ who contrived our Ruin; ſo we can never ſuffi-
“ ciently admire his Majeſty's Royal Care in work“ ing out our Security, by refuſing to follow any “ Advice that tended to thoſe Ends. And there“ fore, to the great Diſappointment of that Party,
“ at the Requeſt of the Houſe of Commons at their “ next Meeting, he recalled the ſaid Toleration, diſ-
“ banded the Army, and, in convenient time, made
“ a Peace with Holland. But though this Party
“ were thus defeated of their Deſign, yet not ſo “ diſcouraged as to give it over. They changed
“ their Meaſures, but not their Principles; and al“ though they deſiſted from further aiming at a “ Toleration, yet they no ways neglected purſuing
“ a Reformation, but, in order thereto, proſecuted
“ a Correſpondence formerly begun for that Pur“ poſe with the French King, and by promiſing
“ him conſiderable Supplies to carry on the War
“ he was then engaged in, ſecured themſelves, as “ they thought, of his Aſſiſtance for ſettling of Po- “ pery here. Accordingly it is not unknown what “ a Party of Men, and what Quantities of Ammu“ nition, and other Neceſſaries for War, were ſent
“ to the French King, during the War he was then “ engaged in, and how it was done contrary to the “ Advice of the Parliament, and the Solicitations
“ of moſt of the Princes of Europe, and true Inte-
“ reſt of England, to the Aſtoniſhment of all good “ Men; eſpecially becauſe it was contrary to his “ Majeſty's own Proclamation, and when the French
“ had declared they made that War for Religion, en“ deavouring to force the Dutch to allow of Popiſh “ Churches. However, ſuch was the Strength of “ this Party, that this Aſſiſtance was continued un“ til the French King was willing to make a Peace;
“ and then, who more inſtrumental than our Mi-
“ niſters to effect it? Several Ambaſſadors, and Ple“ nipotentiaries too, being ſent as well to the “ Court of Spain, as Germany and Holland, for that

1680. 32 Car. II.

"Purpoſe. And at laſt, the Dutch being weary, and conſumed with the War, they were perſuaded to be willing for a Peace; and accordingly on Jan. 10, 1667. entred into a Treaty with us for a general Peace, to be accompliſhed by ſuch Ways and Means as are therein preſcribed: Which League was kept private for ſome time; and inſtead of any Diſcovery thereof, about the End of February following (the Parliament being then ſoon after to aſſemble) a great Noiſe was made of entring into a War againſt France; it being concluded, that nothing like that would incline the Parliament to give Money, nor the People freely to part with it, becauſe it was the only way to extinguiſh thoſe Fears they lay under, by reaſon of the growing Greatneſs of France. At the Meeting of the Parliament, the Project was ſet on foot with all the Art and Induſtry imaginable; and ſo far were the major-part of the Members perſuaded of the Reality thereof, that they were inclinable to give a great Sum of Money for the carrying on of the War: But while they were in Conſultation about it, the League formerly mention'd, agreed at the Hague, was unluckily made (in ſome meaſure) publick, and occaſion'd a great Jealouſy of the Reality of the Pretended War; and the greater, becauſe, upon Enquiry, they could not find there were any Alliances made to that Purpoſe. And yet notwithſtanding this, and the great Endeavours of ſome worthy Members of that Parliament, (now of this) an Army of thirty thouſand Men were raiſed, and a Tax of above one Million two hundred thouſand Pounds was given. And then, inſtead of a War, a General Peace, according to that Treaty agreed with Holland, was preſently made: By which that Party thought they had ſecured not only the Power of France, but the Men and Money here raiſed at Home, to be made ſerviceable for their Ends; there wanting nothing but a Popiſh King to perfect all theſe Deſigns: For which we have great Reaſon to believe they had made all neceſſary Preparations, as well by employing Men and Money to find out wicked Inſtruments to take away the King's Life, as by providing one Claypool to be a Sacrifice, to make an Atonement for the Act, and to caſt the Wickedneſs thereof on the Fanaticks. To which purpoſe the ſaid Claypool was really impriſon'd ſome time before in the Tower, upon the Evidence of two Witneſſes, that he ſhould ſay, That he, and two hundred more, had engaged to kill the King the next time he went to New-Market; for which, in all probability, he had as really been hang'd, if the breaking out of the Plot had not prevented their Deſigns. Then was Claypool, the next Term after, publickly cleared at the King's-Bench-Bar, the Witneſſes appearing no more againſt him. Thus were we again reduced to a miſerable Condition: But it pleaſed God, by the Diſcovery of the Plot by Dr. Oates, once more to ſave us; whoſe Evidence (he being but one Witneſs) they thought at firſt to have out-braved; but ſome of them being ſo infatuated as to kill Juſtice Godfrey, and Coleman ſo unfortunate as to leave ſome of his important Papers in his Houſe, notwithſtanding the Time he had to convey them away, it wrought ſo great a Fermentation in the People, as that there was no Remedy, but that the farther Purſuit of the Plot muſt be again laid aſide, and a fair Face put upon Things: And ſo accordingly there was for a few Months; but how, after Wakeman's Tryal, Things turn'd again, what Endeavours have been ſince uſed to ridicule the Plot, to diſparage the old Witneſſes, to diſcourage new ones, to ſet up Presbyterian Plots, and to increaſe our Diviſions, I ſuppoſe muſt be freſh in every Man's Memory here, and therefore I ſhall not offer to trouble you therewith.

"But, SIR, I cannot conclude, without begging your Patience, while I obſerve how Things have been carry'd on in Scotland and Ireland, anſwerable to what was done here.

"In Ireland, the Papiſts are at leaſt five to one in Number for the Proteſtants, and may probably derive from their Cradle an Inclination to maſſacre them again: At leaſt, the Proteſtants have no Security, but by having the Militia Arms, and the Command of Towns and Forts in their Hands. But about the ſame time, or a little before that the Toleration came out here in 1672, an Order went from hence, which, after a long Preamble of the Loyalty and Affection of the Papiſts to his Majeſty, required the Lord-Lieutenant and Council to diſpenſe with the Papiſts wearing of Arms, and living in Corporations, and a great many other things in their Favour; of which they have made ſuch uſe, as that the Plot there was in as good Readineſs as that here; but how carry'd on, and what Endeavours were there alſo uſed to ſtifle it, will appear, when your Leiſure may permit you to examine thoſe Witneſſes.

"In Scotland the Government is quite alter'd, the Uſe of Parliaments in a manner aboliſhed, and the Power of that Government lodged in a Commiſſioner and Council, a Standing Army of twenty two thouſand Men ſettled, all Endeavours uſed to divide the Proteſtant Intereſt, and to encourage the Papiſts. By which we may conclude, that the ſame Intereſt hath had a great hand in the Management of Affairs there alſo.

"And, SIR, may we not as well believe that the World was at firſt made of Atoms, or by Chance, without the help of an Omnipotent Hand, as that theſe Affairs in this our Little World have been thus carry'd on ſo many Years together, ſo contrary to our true Intereſt, without ſome great original Cauſe? By which the Popiſh Intereſt hath ſo far got the Aſcendant of the Proteſtant Intereſt, that notwithſtanding all his Majeſty's Endeavours, Things have been ſtrangely over-ruled in favour of that Party; how, and which way, his Majeſty's Declaration, made in April 1679, is to me a great Manifeſtation.

"SIR, I hope the Weight of the Matter I have diſcours'd on will plead my Pardon with the Houſe for having troubled you ſo long. I ſubmit what I have ſaid to your Judgment, humbly deſiring a favourable Conſtruction: And although I have ſaid ſome Things that are very ſtrange, and other Things grounded only on Conjectures; yet I believe that no Man will have juſt Reaſon to doubt the Probability of the Truth, if they will but conſider what a potent Friend the Papiſts have had of James Duke of York, and how emboldened by the Hopes of having him for King. And as it is not to be doubted but that they have had his Aſſiſtance, ſo they have had the French Ambaſſador's too, who, by his Frequency at the Palace, hath ſeemed rather one of the Family and King's Houſhold, than a Foreign Ambaſſador; and by his Egreſs and Regreſs to and from his Majeſty, rather a Prime Miniſter of State of this Kingdom, than a Counſellor to another Prince. And the Truth of all hath been ſo confirmed by Coleman's Letters, making the Duke's Intereſt, the French Intereſt, and the Papiſts Intereſt ſo much one, and by the many Witneſſes that have come in about the Plot, that I think we may rather be at a Loſs for our Remedy, than in doubt of our Diſeaſe. And therefore, though I know the Difficulties I may bring my ſelf under, by having thus laid open ſome Men's Deſigns; yet ſeeing my King and Country have call'd me to 1680. 32 Car. II. "this Service, I am reſolv'd, That as my Father loſt his Life for King Charles the Firſt, ſo I will "not be afraid to adventure mine for King Charles "the Second, and that makes me expoſe my ſelf in "his Service in this Place.

"this

"SIR, I think (ſeeing Things are thus) with-"out neglecting our Duty to our King and Country, "nay, to our God too, we cannot defer endeavour-"ing the ſecuring of the King's Perſon and Prote-"ſtant Religion by all lawful Means whatſoever: "And therefore I ſecond the Motion that was "made, that we may, in the firſt place, take into "our Conſideration how to ſuppreſs Popery, and "prevent a Popiſh Succeſſor; that ſo we may never "return again to Superſtition, Idolatry and Slavery, "but may always preſerve that pure Religion, to "be the Religion of this Nation, for which ſo ma-"ny of our Fore-fathers have ſuffer'd Martyrdom, "I mean the Proteſtant Religion, as long as the Sun "and Moon endure.

Reſolution againſt a Popiſh Succeſſor.

At the End of the Debates of this Day, the Houſe reſolved, That it is the Opinion of this Houſe, that they ought, in the firſt place, to proceed effectually to ſuppreſs Popery, and prevent a Popiſh Succeſſor.[a]

The Duke of York ſeem'd to expect a Vote of this nature, and therefore would not ſtay to bear the Affront of it, but the Day before the Seſſion departed for Scotland, he and his Dutcheſs and Retinue going down the River in their Barges, to embark on the Men of War appointed to attend them, his Majeſty being pleaſed to accompany them as far as Woolwich[b].

On Octob. 27. they firſt reſolved, That an Addreſs be made to his Majeſty, declaring the Reſolution of this Houſe to preſerve and ſupport the King's Perſon and Government, and the Proteſtant Religion at Home and Abroad. And then falling on the Debate of Diſſolving, and ſo often Proroguing the Parliaments, and the Diſcouraging of Petitions for the Sitting of them, they came to theſe Reſolutions:

Reſolution for the Right of Petitioning.

Reſolved, "That it is, and ever hath been the "undoubted Right of the Subjects of England, "to petition the King for the Calling and Sitting "of Parliaments, and Redreſſing of Grievances.

Reſolved, "That to traduce ſuch Petitioning "as a Violation of Duty, and to repreſent it to "his Majeſty as tumultuous or ſeditious, is to be-"tray the Liberty of the Subject, and contribute "to the Deſign of ſubverting the ancient Legal "Conſtitution of this Kingdom, and inducing Ar-"bitrary Power.

Reſolved, "That a Committee be appointed to "enquire after all ſuch Perſons that have offended "againſt the Right of the Subject.

1679. 32 Car. II.

Sir Francis Wythins expell'd the Houſe.

After theſe Votes, a Complaint was made againſt Sir Francis Wythins, a Member of the Houſe[c], who had preferred an Addreſs to the King againſt the Peoples Right of Petitioning: And he not being in the Houſe, an Order was made that he ſhould attend the next Day; where, after he was heard in his Place, he was ordered to withdraw, and this Sentence was paſs'd upon him, That he ſhould receive the Cenſure of the Houſe upon his Knees, and be forthwith expell'd the Houſe.

Proclamation for further Diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot.

His Majeſty, to ſtop the Torrent of the Houſe, and to ſeem to fall in with them in a like Zeal againſt Popery, did on Octob. 30. publiſh a Proclamation, declaring his Princely Care for ſecuring the true Proteſtant Religion, and for ſatisfying the Minds of his loving Subjects; and that therefore he thought fit to encourage the more effectual Diſcovery and Suppreſſion of the moſt horrid and execrable Popiſh Plot, by promiſing a free Pardon to any Perſons who ſhould come in, and give farther Information and Evidence concerning it:

Reſolutions againſt Popery.

The Commons were ſo little ſatisfy'd with[d] this Court-Promiſe of ſuppreſſing Popery, that on Novemb. 2. they fell into a Debate of the Popiſh Plot, and came to theſe Reſolutions: "1. That the "Duke of York's being a Papiſt, and the Hopes of "his coming ſuch to the Crown, hath given the "greateſt Countenance and Encouragement to the "preſent Deſigns and Conſpiracies againſt the King "and Proteſtant Religion. 2. That in Defence of "the King's Perſon and Government, and Prote-"ſtant Religion, this Houſe doth declare that they "will ſtand by his Majeſty with their Lives and "Fortunes; and that if his Majeſty ſhould come "to any violent Death, (which God forbid) they "will revenge it to the utmoſt on the Papiſts[e]."

Bill of Excluſion.

And after ſeveral Speeches, it was reſolved, That a Bill be brought in to diſable James Duke of York to inherit the Imperial Crowns of England and Ireland, and the Dominions thereto belonging. This Bill was read the firſt Time on Novemb. 4. when Sir Leoline Jenkins argued, That it was, 1ſt, contrary to natural Juſtice, to condemn a Man before the Conviction, or the Hearing of him. 2dly, That it was contrary to the Principles of our Religion to diſpoſeſs a Man of his Right, becauſe he differs in point of Faith. 3dly, It was againſt the Divine Right of Monarchy, and to give the Crown to the Diſpoſal of the People. 4thly, It was againſt the Oath of Allegiance, which did bind all Perſons to the King, his Heirs and Succeſſors; by which the Duke, as Preſumptive-Heir, muſt be underſtood.

Arguments againſt it.

Arguments for it.

Other Members argued not only for the Legality, but for the Expedience, and even the Neceſſity of ſuch a Bill, as the only Way of preſerving the King, the Government, and the Proteſtant Religion: And [a] See Reaſons for the Indictment of the Duke of York for not coming to Church, brought to the Grand Jury of Middleſex June 16, 1680. delivered by the Earl of Shaftſbury, ſubſcribed by him and the Earl of Huntingdon, the Lords Grey of Werk, Ruſſel, Cavendiſh, Brandon and Wharton, Sir William Cowper, Sir Gilbert Gerrard, Sir Edward Hungerford, Sir Scroop Howe, Thomas Thrynne Eſq; William Forreſter Eſq; John Trenchard Eſq; Tho. Wharton Eſq; With Account of the Jury ſent for up, and diſmiſs'd, before they could make the ſaid Preſentment, and their Foreman, Mr. Willmot, expos'd to great Sufferings.

[b] Father Orleans tells us, that the Duke of York prepared to maintain his Birthright in Parliament with freſh Vigour, when the Marquis of Hallifax and the Earl of Sunderland came to him from the King, to deſire he would abſent himſelf for a while, and return into Scotland, during the Seſſion. This Requeſt ſtartled the Duke, &c. Hiſt. Revolut. p. 259.

[c] Mr. Withens, of the Inner-Temple, as Steward of the Liberties of Weſtminſter, preſented an Act and Addreſs of the Grand Jury at their Seſſions after Eaſter, 1680. againſt ſigning or promoting Petitions, for which he was Knighted. About the ſame time, Sir Robert Carr, a Burgeſs for Briſtol, was expelled the Houſe, and committed to the Tower, for having ſaid there was no Plot but a Preſbyterian Plot. Soon after Sir George Jefferies, Recorder of London, was voted a Betrayer of the Rights of the Subject, which was a great Lift to him in Court-Favour and Preferment.

[d] See the Speeches of William Lord Ruſſel for a Bill of Excluſion; firſt on beginning the Debate Octob. 26. and again on Novemb. 2. After which he carried up the Bill to the Lords on Nov. 15.—Memoirs of the Ruſſel Family, 8*vo.* 1712. p. 247.

[e] See the two Speeches of Mr. Laurence Hyde, afterward Earl of Rocheſter, againſt the Bill of Excluſion. 1. When a certain Member had made a Speech reflecting on the Duke and Lord Clarendon for making up the Match for the King, as if they did it becauſe they foreſaw that the Queen would have no Children, and particularly on the Duke for the Loſs of my Lord Sandwich, for clearing of Perſons taken in the Fire of London, the Death of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey, &c. 2. On Novemb. 11. when, upon carrying and engroſſing the Bill, a certain Member replying to Sir R. M. that he had made large Encomiums on the Duke, extolling his Endowments and Services to the Nation: Whereas, for his part, &c. he was interrupted by Mr. Hyde, who made the following Speech: "Although it hath been ſaid that no good Proteſtant can "ſpeak againſt this Bill, yet, Sir, I cannot forbear to offer "ſome Objections againſt it. I do not know that any of "the King's Murderers were condemned without being heard: "And muſt we deal thus with the Brother of our King? &c. Memoirs of the Family of the Hydes, 1712. 8*vo.* p. 133.

1680. 32Car.II.

Proceeding in it.

ſo it was, by a very great Majority, Reſolved, "That "the Bill ſhould be read a ſecond time on Saturday "Morning, Nov. 6." At which time it was Reſolved, "That the Bill be committed to a Committee of the whole Houſe. That it be an Inſtruction to the ſaid Committee, that the Excluſion in the ſaid Bill do extend to the Perſon of "James Duke of York only. And that this Houſe "will reſolve it ſelf into a Committee of the whole "Houſe, on Monday Morning next at Ten of the "Clock, to proceed to the Conſideration of the "ſaid Bill." Accordingly, on Nov. 8. the Houſe reſolved it ſelf into a Committee, and reported their Reſolution, "That the ſaid Bill for diſabling James "Duke of York, &c. with the ſeveral Clauſes and "Amendments, be engroſſed.

The King offended.

The King was incens'd at this Proceeding of the Commons againſt his Brother; but to ſhew his Reſentment in the calmeſt manner, he ſent this Meſſage to the Houſe on Nov. 10. His Majeſty deſires this Houſe, as well for the Satisfaction of his People as of himſelf, to expedite ſuch Matters as are depending before them, relating to Popery, and the Plot; and would have them reſt aſſured, that all Remedies they can tender to his Majeſty conducing to thoſe Ends, ſhall be very acceptable to him, provided they be ſuch as may conſiſt with preſerving the Succeſſion of the Crown in its legal Courſe of Deſcent. After a Debate upon this Meſſage, and a general Diſſatisfaction in it, the Houſe came to theſe Reſolutions: 1. "That a Committee be appointed to draw up an humble Addreſs to his Majeſty, upon the Debate of the "Houſe, in Anſwer to his Majeſty's gracious Meſſage. 2. That this Houſe will proceed in the "Proſecution of the Lords in the Tower, and will "forthwith begin with William Viſcount Stafford.

On Novemb. 11. this Addreſs to his Majeſty was read, and agreed to be preſented:

May it pleaſe your moſt Excellent Majeſty,

Addreſs of the Commons.

"WE Your Majeſty's moſt loyal and obedient "Subjects, the Commons in this preſent "Parliament aſſembled, having taken into our moſt "ſerious Conſideration Your Majeſty's gracious "Meſſage, brought unto us on the 9th day of this "Inſtant November by Mr. Secretary Jenkins, do "with all Thankfulneſs acknowledge Your Majeſty's Care and Goodneſs, in inviting us to expedite ſuch Matters as are depending before us, relating to Popery and the Plot. And we do, in all "Humility, repreſent to Your Majeſty, that we "are fully convinced that it is highly incumbent "upon us, in diſcharge both of our Duty to Your "Majeſty, and of that great Truſt repoſed in us by "thoſe whom we repreſent, to endeavour, by the "moſt ſpeedy and effectual Ways, the Suppreſſion "of Popery within this Your Kingdom, and the "bringing to publick Juſtice all ſuch as ſhall be "found guilty of the horrid and damnable Popiſh "Plot. And tho' the Time of our Sitting (abating "what muſt neceſſarily be ſpent in the chuſing and "preſenting a Speaker, appointing Grand Committees, and in taking the Oaths and Teſts enjoined "by Act of Parliament) hath not much exceeded a "Fortnight; yet we have in this Time not only "made a conſiderable Progreſs in ſome Things which "to us ſeem, and (when preſented to Your Majeſty "in a Parliamentary way) will, we truſt, appear to "Your Majeſty to be abſolutely neceſſary, for the "ſafety of your Majeſty's Perſon, the effectual ſuppreſſion of Popery, and the ſecurity of the Religion, Lives and Eſtates of your Majeſty's Subjects; but even in relation to the Tryals of the "five Lords impeached in Parliament for the execrable Popiſh Plot, we have ſo far proceeded, as "we doubt not but in a ſhort time we ſhall be ready for the ſame. But we cannot, without being unfaithful to your Majeſty, and to our Country, (by whom we are intruſted) omit, upon this "Occaſion, humbly to inform your Majeſty, That "our Difficulties, even as to theſe Tryals, are much "encreaſed by the evil and deſtructive Counſels of "thoſe Perſons who adviſed your Majeſty, firſt to "the Prorogation, and then to the Diſſolution of "the laſt Parliament, at a time when the Commons "had taken great Pains about, and were prepared "for thoſe Tryals. And by the like pernicious Counſels of thoſe who adviſed the many and long Prorogations of the preſent Parliament, before the "ſame was permitted to ſit; whereby ſome of the "Evidence which was prepared in the laſt Parliament, may poſſibly (during ſo great an interval) "be forgotten or loſt; and ſome Perſons who might "probably have come in as Witneſſes, are either "dead, have been taken off, or may have been "diſcouraged from giving their Evidence. But "of one miſchievous Conſequence of thoſe dangerous and unhappy Counſels, we are certainly and "ſadly ſenſible, namely, That the Teſtimony of a "material Witneſs againſt every one of thoſe five "Lords, (and who could probably have diſcovered "and brought in much other Evidence about the "Plot in general, and thoſe [a] Lords in particular) "cannot now be given in Viva voce, foraſmuch as "that Witneſs is unfortunately dead, between the "calling and the ſitting of this Parliament. To "prevent the like, or greater Inconveniencies for "the future, we make it our moſt humble Requeſt to your moſt Excellent Majeſty, that, as "you tender the Safety of your Royal Perſon, the "Security of your Loyal Subjects, and the Preſervation of the true Proteſtant Religion, you will "not ſuffer your ſelf to be prevailed upon by the "like Counſels, to do any thing which may occaſion in Conſequence (though we are aſſured, never with your Majeſty's Intentions) either the "deferring of a full and perfect Diſcovery and Examination of this moſt wicked and moſt deteſtable "Plot, or the preventing the Conſpirators therein "from being brought to ſpeedy and exemplary Juſtice and Puniſhment. And we humbly beſeech "your Majeſty to reſt aſſured, (notwithſtanding "any Suggeſtions which may be made by Perſons, "who, for their own wicked Purpoſes, contrive to "create a diſtruſt in your Majeſty of your People,) "That nothing is more in the Deſires, and ſhall be "more in the Endeavours of us, your faithful and "loyal Commons, than the promoting and advancing of your Majeſty's true Happineſs and Greatneſs.

On the ſame Day was read the Ingroſſed Bill, Intituled, An Act for Securing the Proteſtant Religion, by diſabling James Duke of York to inherit the Imperial Crown of England and Ireland, and the Dominions and Territories thereunto belonging; and paſs'd the Houſe, by a very great Majority. In the Debates one of the Members ſpoke thus:

Mr. SPEAKER,

"THE Honourable Member that ſpoke before "made large Encomiums on the Duke, extolling his Endowments and Services to the Nation. For my part, I think, that the better qualify'd he is, the greater is our Danger. But as "to what he ſaid, of having fought our Battels, and "done great Things for the Nation, I think he hath "not done fairly by the Houſe; for he ſhould alſo "have told us, how the Tripple-League was broken,

[a] See A faithful Account of the Sickneſs, Death, and Burial, of Captain William Bedloe, who died Auguſt 20, and was buried Aug. 22, at Briſtol, after ſolemnly declaring the Truth of his Evidence given in the Popiſh Plot.

" and

1680. 32 Car. II.

“ and my Lord of Sandwich loſt his Life; how he “ chang'd his Religion, and hath ever ſince encouraged “ Popery, and aſſiſted that Intereſt; how the City of “ London was burnt, and the Actors diſcharg'd; “ how the diſcovery of the Popiſh Plot was prevented “ as much as it could be, and the Presbyterian one “ encourag'd; that ſo we might have all afore us—— He [a] was going on more ſeverely, but was interrupted.

Meſſage from the King about Tangier.

On Novemb. 12. his Majeſty ſent this Meſſage to the Houſe of Commons: His Majeſty did in his Speech, at the opening of this Seſſion, deſire the Advice and Aſſiſtance of his Parliament, in relation to Tangier: The Condition and Importance of the Place, obliges his Majeſty to put this Houſe in mind again, That he relies upon them for the Support of it; without which it cannot be much longer preſerved. His Majeſty doth therefore very earneſtly recommend Tangier again to the due and ſpeedy Care and Conſideration of this Houſe.

Upon this Meſſage a warm Debate aroſe; ſome objected, That it was a Duty incumbent on them to ſecure Things at Home, on which their All depended, before they entred into an Expence of Time about ſecuring Things Abroad: Tangier might be of great Importance to Trade, but not ſo managed as to be any Security to the Proteſtant Religion. The Portugueſes, when they deliver'd it up, did Covenant to have one Popiſh Church remain there, for the Conveniency of Prieſts and Fryars: And tho' it was then agreed, That their Mortality ſhould not be ſupply'd, but after the Deceaſe of thoſe Perſons the ſaid Popiſh Church might be demoliſh'd, or converted to a Proteſtant Uſe; yet Things had been otherwiſe managed, and the Papiſts there were now more than ever: That my Lord Bellaſis, now a Priſoner in the Tower for the Plot, had been Governor of Tangier, and even ſtill the Soldiers and Commanders were moſt of that Religion, ſo that the Place was but a kind of Nurſery for a Popiſh Army.——Others argued, That they were indeed afraid of Tangier, but more afraid of a Popiſh Succeſſor; and therefore till they were ſecured in the latter, they could not think themſelves concern'd in the former; and in the mean time they could not give Money, without endangering the Religion and Government of the Nation: For they remembred when one million one hundred thouſand Pounds was given for building of Ships, and not one Ship built; and above two millions given to ſupport the Tripple-League, and then it was preſently employ'd for the breaking of it; when one million two hundred thouſand Pounds was given for an actual War with France, when at the ſame time we were under all the Obligations for Peace, and ſo continu'd.——Others again pleaded, [b] That there was no need of raiſing new Forces for the Security of Tangier; ſince there were ſeveral Regiments, beſides the Guards, in pay at home, which might be Tranſported thither, with little Charge, and be Maintain'd there as cheap as here.——At laſt the Commons Reſolved, That a Committee be appointed to draw up an Addreſs to be preſented to his Majeſty, upon the Debate of the Houſe, humbly re- preſenting to his Majeſty the dangerous State and Condition of the Kingdom, in Anſwer to his Majeſty's Meſſage.

Severe Speeches.

Addreſs or Remonſtrance of the Commons.

This Addreſs was a Remonſtrance of Grievances, and Acts of Popery, and Arbitrary Power; “ That “ Tangier had been ſeveral times under the Com- “ mand of Popiſh Governours: That the Supplies “ ſent thither, had been in great part made up of “ Popiſh Officers and Soldiers, and that the Iriſh “ Papiſts had been the moſt countenanc'd and en- “ courag'd. That here at home the Endeavours “ and Attempts of the Popiſh Party had been ſo “ bold and ſucceſsful, that ſo it was matter of ad- “ miration to them, and which they could only aſ- “ cribe to an over-ruling Providence, That his Ma- “ jeſty's Reign was ſtill continued over them, and “ that they were yet aſſembled to conſult the “ Means of their Preſervation. That this bloody “ and reſtleſs Party had found Countenance and Pro- “ tection from the Laws made againſt them: That “ they had form'd means to diſgrace their Oppoſers; “ and if they were Judges, Juſtices of the Peace, “ or other Magiſtrates, to have them turn'd out of “ Commiſſion. That after ſome time they became “ able to influence Matters of State and Govern- “ ment, and thereby to deſtroy thoſe they could not “ corrupt. The continuance, or prorogation of “ Parliaments, had been accommodated to ſerve the “ Purpoſes of that Party. Money raiſed upon the “ People, to ſupply his Majeſty's Extraordinary “ Occaſions, had, by the prevalence of Popiſh “ Counſels, been employed to make War upon a “ Proteſtant State, and to advance and augment “ the dreadful Power of the French King. That “ great Numbers of his Majeſty's Subjects were ſent “ into, and continued in the Service of that King. “ That even the Miniſters of England were made “ Inſtruments to preſs upon the States of Holland “ the acceptance of one Demand (among others) “ from the French King, for procuring their Peace “ with him, That they ſhould admit the publick “ Exerciſe of the Roman Catholick Religion. That “ if ever any Command were given for the Laws “ to be put in execution againſt the Papiſts, even “ from thence they gain'd Advantage to their Par- “ ty, whilſt the edge of thoſe Laws was turn'd a- “ gainſt Proteſtant Diſſenters, and the Papiſts eſcap'd “ in a manner untouch'd. That the Teſt Act had “ little effect; for the Papiſts, either by Diſpenſa- “ tion obtained from Rome, ſubmitted to thoſe “ Teſts, and held their Offices themſelves; or thoſe “ put in their Places, were ſo favourable to the ſame “ Intereſts, that Popery it ſelf had rather gain'd than “ loſt ground ſince that Act. That a Popiſh Secre- “ tary (ſince executed for his Treaſons) had main- “ tain'd a Correſpondence at Rome, and in the “ Courts of other Foreign Princes, for the Subdu- “ ing (in their own Words) that Peſtilent Hereſie “ which had ſo long domineer'd over this Northern “ World. That out of thoſe Councils and Corre- “ ſpondencies was hatcht that damnable and helliſh “ Plot, by the good Providence of Almighty God “ brought to light about two Years ſince. That “ when this accurſed Conſpiracy was firſt diſcover'd,

[a] The Bill of Excluſion (ſays the Reverend Mr. Johnſon) was carry'd, Nemine Contradicente, ſeveral times in the Houſe of Commons; but when it came in the Weſtminſter Parliament to be carry'd up by my Lord Ruſſell to the Houſe of Lords, it was ſo ill received there, that the Biſhops were for throwing it out to-rights: However, after a Reading, and after a Debate, which laſted till about Midnight, it was thrown out. That learned Nobleman, the Great Earl of Eſſex, was pleaſed to tell me what Arguments he inſiſted upon in that Debate. The firſt was, That the Regality of England was an Office, concerning which the XVII Chapter of King Edward the Confeſſor's Laws is wholly ſpent; and it is ſo declar'd in many Acts of Parliament as low as Queen Mary's Time.——Hereupon he argued, that a Perſon unqualify'd, as all the World knew the Duke of York to be, could not be admitted to that Office, &c.——My Lord of Eſſex told me, that his Adverſaries in that Debate wav'd the Jargon of Divine Right and the Line of Succeſſion, and at that time betook themſelves chiefly to Reaſons of State. They were got at the old Scarecrow, venient Romani, the Foreign Catholick Princes would eſpouſe the Duke of York's Quarrel, the ancient Kingdom of Scotland would admit him for their King in oppoſition to our Act of Parliament, and this would entail a dangerous War upon the Nation. They were likewiſe doubtful of Ireland, &c.

[b] See the Speech of William Lord Ruſſel againſt a Supply for Tangier, while they were ſure it muſt go to the Hands of the Duke's Creatures; and falling into theſe Prophetical Words, that if ever there ſhould happen in this Nation any ſuch Change, as that he ſhould not have liberty to live a Proteſtant, he was reſolv'd to die one.

the

1680. 32 Car. II. "the Papiſts began to ſmother it, with the barbarous Murther of a Juſtice of the Peace, within one of his Majeſty's own Palaces. That amidſt theſe Diſtractions and Fears, Popiſh Officers for the Command of Forces were allow'd upon the Muſters by ſpecial Orders, Counter-ſign'd by a Secretary of State: And in like manner, above fifty new Commiſſions were granted about the ſame time to known Papiſts. That when, in the next Parliament, the Houſe of Commons were prepared to bring to a legal Tryal the principal Conſpirators in this Plot, that Parliament was firſt prorogu'd, and then diſſolv'd. And the Interval between the Calling and Sitting of this Parliament had been ſo long, that the Papiſts had gained Time and Advantages of covering their paſt Crimes, and practiſing them more effectually. That Witneſſes had been corrupted, not only by Promiſes of Reward, but of the Favour of his Majeſty's Brother. That divers of the moſt conſiderable of his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects had Crimes of the higheſt Nature forged againſt them, the Charge to be ſupported by Subornation and Perjury, that they might be deſtroyed by Forms of Law and Juſtice. That a Preſentment being prepared for a Grand-Jury of Middleſex againſt the Duke of York, the Grand-Jury were in an unprecedented and illegal manner diſcharged, and that with ſo much haſte and fear, leaſt they ſhould finiſh that Preſentment; That they were prevented from delivering many other Indictments by them at that time found againſt other Popiſh Recuſants. That becauſe a Pamphlet came forth Weekly, call'd, The Weekly Pacquet of Advice from Rome, expoſing Popery (as it well deſerv'd;) a New and Arbitrary Court was made in the King's-Bench (rather like a Star-Chamber than a Court of Law,) that the ſame ſhould not for the future be printed by any Perſon whatſoever. That notwithſtanding all the Proclamations for the baniſhing Papiſts from about this great City, and Reſidence of his Majeſty's Court, and the Parliament, yet great Numbers of them, and of the moſt dangerous ſort, did daily reſort hither, and abide here. Under theſe and other ſaid Effects and Evidences of the Prevalence of Popery, and its Adherents, they his Majeſty's faithful Commons found this his Majeſty's diſtreſſed Kingdom, and other Parts of his Dominions, labouring when they aſſembled; they therefore humbly deſire to be ſecured from the dreadful Deſign of introducing Popery; and that whilſt they ſhall give a Supply to Tangier, they may be aſſured they do not augment the Strength of their Popiſh Adverſaries, nor encreaſe their own Dangers: Which Deſires of his faithful Commons, if his Majeſty ſhall graciouſly vouchſafe to grant, they ſhall not only be ready to aſſiſt his Majeſty in Defence of Tangier, but do whatſoever elſe ſhall be in their Power to enable his Majeſty to protect the Proteſtant Religion and Intereſt at Home and Abroad, and to reſiſt and repel the Attempts of his Majeſty's and the Kingdom's Enemies [a]."

Reſolution againſt the diſcharging of Juries.

On Novemb. 13. ſeveral Perſons were examin'd at the Bar of the Houſe of Commons, about the diſmiſſing of a Grand-Jury in Middleſex: And after a Debate, the Houſe came to theſe Votes. 1. That the diſcharging of a Grand-Jury by any Judge, before the End of the Term, Aſſizes, or Seſſions, while Matters are under their Conſideration, and not preſented, is Arbitrary, Illegal, Deſtructive to publick Juſtice, a manifeſt Violation of his Oath, and is a Means to ſubvert the Fundamental Laws of this Kingdom. 2. That a Committee be appointed to examine the Proceedings of the Judges in Weſtminſter-Hall, and report the ſame, with their Opinion therein, to this Houſe.

On Novemb. 15. the Bill for ſecuring the Proteſtant Religion, by diſabling James Duke of York to inherit the Imperial Crown of England, and Ireland, &c. was carry'd up to the Houſe of Lords by William Lord Ruſſel, attended by almoſt the whole Houſe of Commons. At the firſt Reading in the Houſe of Lords, and its being put to the Vote, Whether it ſhould be read a ſecond time? It was carry'd in the Affirmative by two Votes only. On the ſecond Reading, it was debated till Eleven a-Clock at Night, the King being preſent all the while, to encourage an Oppoſition to it; and then it was thrown out of the Houſe by a Majority of thirty Voices, of which, ſome Men were pleaſed to obſerve that fourteen were Biſhops.

Bill of Excluſion thrown out of the Houſe of Lords.

On Nov. 25. the Commons were ſo much diſguſted againſt the late Speaker, Edw. Seymour Eſq; that they now impeached him upon four Articles; and a Motion was made for an Addreſs to be preſented, to remove him from his Majeſty's Council and Preſence for ever. Soon after they fell upon Sir George Jefferies, then Recorder of the City of London, and ordered, That an humble Addreſs be made to the King to remove him out of all publick Offices, and that the Members which ſerved for the City ſhould communicate this Vote to the Court of Aldermen. Upon the ſame Account, they order'd Sir Giles Philips and Mr. Coleman to be ſent for into Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms, for deteſting and abhorring the Petitioning for Sitting of the Parliament, and voted it a Breach of Privilege of Parliament: The like the Commons did by Capt. William Caſtle, Mr. John Hutchinſon, Mr. Henry Walrond, Mr. William Stavel, and Mr. Thomas Herbert; Sir Thomas Holt, Serjeant at Law, and Mr. Thomas Staples. And becauſe Sir Francis North (Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas) adviſed, and was aſſiſting in drawing up a Proclamation againſt Petitioning for the Sitting of the Parliament, the Commons voted, That it was a ſufficient Ground for the Houſe to proceed againſt him for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors. The like Vote paſſed againſt Sir Thomas Jones, one of the Judges of the King's-Bench; and Sir Richard Weſton, one of the Barons of the Exchequer [a]: And they reſolved actually to impeach Sir William Scroggs of High-Treaſon.

Edw. Seymour Eſq; impeached.

Sir George Jefferies obnoxious.

And other Abhorrers of Petitioning.

Judges voted Unjuſt.

On Tueſday, Nov. 30. William Viſcount Stafford one of the five Lords impeached by the Houſe of Commons for the horrid Popiſh Plot, was brought to his Tryal before the Lords in Weſtminſter-Hall, a Committee of the Commons managing the Impeachment againſt him. This Day was taken up in opening the Court, and in hearing the general Evidence to prove the ſaid Popiſh Plot. Next Day, the Witneſſes proving the particular Charge againſt the Lord Stafford, were heard and examin'd. The Tryal laſted a whole Week [b], when, on Decemb. 7. he was brought to the Court, to receive the Judgment of the Lords; of whom thirty one pronounced him Not Guilty, and fifty five Guilty: So that Sentence of Death was paſſed upon him as in Caſes of High-Treaſon. But his Execution was deferr'd till Wedneſday Decemb. 29. when he was beheaded Tryal of Ld. Stafford.

He is condemned. And executed.

[a] See the humble Addreſs of the Commons in Parliament aſſembled on Monday Nov. 29, 1680. Repreſenting the reſtleſs Endeavours and bold Attempts of the Popiſh Party, for many Years laſt paſt, to introduce the Romiſh, and utterly to extirpate the true Proteſtant Religion. Printed by Order of the Speaker.

[b] See the Speech of the Lord High Steward in Weſtminſter-Hall, at the time of his pronouncing the Judgment of the Houſe of Peers againſt the Lord Viſcount Stafford, Dec. 7. 1680. Printed by Order of the Lords.

1680. 32 Car. II. on a Scaffold for that Purpoſe erected on Tower-Hill, proteſting with his laſt Breath, That he was utterly innocent of the Crimes for which he ſtood condemned.

On Wedneſday Decemb. 15. his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and made this Speech to both Houſes:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

King's Speech. AT the Opening of this Parliament I did acquaint you with the Alliances I had made with Spain and Holland, as the beſt Meaſures that could be taken for the Safety of England, and the Repoſe of Chriſtendom.

But I told you withal, That if our Friendſhip became unſafe to truſt to, it would not be wonder'd at if our Neighbours ſhould begin to take new Reſolutions, and perhaps ſuch as might be fatal to us.

I muſt now tell you, That our Allies cannot but ſee how little has been done ſince this Meeting to encourage their Dependance upon us: And I find by them, that unleſs we can be ſo united at Home, as to make our Alliances valuable to them, it will not be poſſible to hinder them from ſeeking ſome other Refuge, and making ſuch new Friendſhips, as will not be conſiſtent with our Safety. Conſider, that a Neglect of this Opportunity is never to be repaired.

I did likewiſe lay the Matter plainly before you, touching the State and Condition of Tangier: I muſt now tell you again, that if that Place be thought worth the Keeping, you muſt take ſuch Conſideration of it, that it may be ſpeedily ſupply'd; it being impoſſible for me to preſerve it on an Expence ſo far above my Power.

I did promiſe you the fulleſt Satisfaction your Hearts could wiſh for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion, and to concur with you in any Remedies which might conſiſt with preſerving the Succeſſion of the Crown in its due and legal Courſe of Deſcent. I do again, with the ſame Reſervations, renew the ſame Promiſes to you.

And being thus ready, on my part, to do all that can reaſonably be expected from me, I ſhould be glad to know from you, as ſoon as may be, how far I ſhall be aſſiſted by you, and what it is you deſire from me.

The Commons returning to their Houſe, reſolved themſelves into a Grand Committee how to ſecure the Kingdom againſt Popery and Arbitrary Government: And after ſome Debate, they reſolved, That it is the Opinion of this Committee, that one Means to ſuppreſs Popery, is, that the Houſe be moved that a Bill be brought in immediately to baniſh all the Conſiderable Papiſts out of the Kingdom. And upon a further Debate on the Dangers of Popery, they reſolved, That it is the Opinion of this Committee, that as long as the Papiſts have any Hopes of the Duke of York's ſucceeding the King in the Kingdoms of England and Ireland, and Dominions thereunto belonging, the King's Perſon, the Proteſtant Religion, and the Lives, Liberties and Properties of all his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects are in apparent Danger of being deſtroy'd. And upon Reference made to an Act of Queen Eliz. for an Aſſociation, to revenge her Death upon the Papiſts, they came to a like Reſolution, That it is the Opinion of this Committee, that the Houſe be moved that a Bill be brought in for an Aſſociation of all his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, for the Safety of his Majeſty's Perſon, the Defence of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Preſervation of his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, againſt all Invaſions and Oppoſitions, and for preventing the Duke of York, or any other Papiſt, from ſucceeding to the Crown.

(Margin: Proceeding of the Commons. A Bill for Aſſociation.)

On Decemb. 17. the Houſe went on to conſider of Ways and Means to ſecure the Kingdom againſt Popery and Arbitrary Government; and after ſeveral Debates, they reſolved, 1. That it is the Opinion of this Houſe, that the Houſe be moved, that a Bill be brought in for the more effectual ſecuring of the Meetings and Sittings of frequent Parliaments. 2. That it is the Opinion of this Committee, that the Houſe be moved, that a Bill be brought in, that the Judges may hold their Places and Salaries, quam diu ſe bene geſſerint. 3. That it is the Opinion of this Committee, That one Means to prevent Arbitrary Power, is, that the Houſe be moved that a Bill be brought in againſt illegal Exaction of Money upon the People, to make it High-Treaſon.

(Margin: Remarkable Votes.)

His Majeſty's Speech[a], made Decemb. 15. to both Houſes, was now read and conſidered by the Commons; and after many ſevere Reflections upon the French Ambaſſador, and the French Women, and the Duke, and the Duke's Creatures, they reſolved, That a Committee be appointed to prepare an humble Addreſs to his Majeſty, upon the Debate of the Houſe, in Anſwer to his Majeſty's Speech. This Addreſs was agreed to on December 20. in which the Commons repreſent, "That this Proteſtant Kingdom can never be ſafe while there is any Hopes and Expectation of a Popiſh Succeſſor; and they beſeech his Majeſty, in great Wiſdom, to conſider whether, in caſe the Imperial Crown of this Proteſtant Kingdom ſhould deſcend to the Duke of York, the Oppoſition which may poſſibly be made to his poſſeſſing it, may not only endanger the farther Deſcent in the Royal Line, but even Monarchy it ſelf? They therefore become humble Petitioners to his ſacred Majeſty, that in tender Commiſeration of his poor Proteſtant People, his Majeſty would be graciouſly pleaſed to depart from the Reſervation in his ſaid Speech: And whenever a Bill ſhall be tender'd to his Majeſty, in a Parliamentary Way, to diſable the Duke of York from inheriting the Crown, his Majeſty will give his Royal Aſſent thereto: As alſo to another Act, whereby his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects may be enabled to aſſociate themſelves, for the Defence of his Majeſty's Perſon, the Proteſtant Religion, and the Security of his Kingdoms. And as ſome farther Means for the Preſervation both of their Religion and Property, they are humble Suitors to his Majeſty, that from henceforth ſuch Perſons only may be Judges as are Men of Ability, Integrity, and known Affection to the Proteſtant Religion, and that they may hold both their Offices and Salaries, quam diu ſe bene geſſerint. That no one may bear the Office of a Lord-Lieutenant, but who is a Perſon of Integrity, and known Affection to the Proteſtant Religion. That Deputy-Lieutenants and Juſtices of the Peace may be alſo ſo qualified, and may be moreover Men of Ability, of Eſtates and Intereſt in their Country. That none may be employed as Military Officers, or Officers in his Majeſty's Fleet, but Men of known Experience, Courage, and Affection to the Proteſtant Religion. And theſe their humble Requeſts being obtained, they ſhall, on their part, be ready to aſſiſt his Majeſty, for the Preſervation of Tangier, and for putting his Majeſty's Fleet into ſuch a Condition, as it may preſerve his Majeſty's Sovereignty of the Seas, and be for the Defence of the Nation.

(Margin: Addreſs of the Commons, in Anſwer to the King's Speech.)

[a] See the Speech of William Lord Ruſſel upon taking the King's Speech into Conſideration Decemb. 18. 1680. Mr. "Speaker, Being it is ſo apparent, that all our Fears of Popery ariſe from, and center in the Duke of York, and that it is impoſſible the Affairs of this Nation ſhould ever ſettle on a good Proteſtant Bottom as long as there is a Popiſh Succeſſor, which cannot be prevented but by the Succeſſion Bill. That there may be no ill Conſtruction made of our Deſires, I would humbly move you to offer to ſupply the King with what Money he may need for the Support of Tangier, and Alliances upon his granting of the Succeſſion Bill only, &c.

On

1680.
32 Car. II.

Queries of the Sheriffs.

On Decemb. 23. theſe Quæries relating to the execution of William Viſcount Stafford, were offered to the Houſe by the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex: 1. Whether the King, being neither Judge nor Party, can order the Execution? 2. Whether the Lords can award the Execution? 3. Whether the King can diſpenſe with any part of the Execution? 4. If the King can diſpenſe with ſome part of the Execution, why not with all? After ſome Debate upon theſe Matters, the wiſer Members came to apprehend, that ſuch a Diſpute might end in preventing the Execution of the ſaid Lord Stafford; and therefore it was reſolved, That this Houſe is content that the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex do execute William late Viſcount Stafford, by ſevering his Head from his Body only.

Self-denying Vote.

On Dec. 30, upon a Debate of the Freedom of Voting, and of the Corruption and Partiality occaſion'd by Offices and Penſions, they Reſolved, That no Member of this Houſe ſhall accept of any Office or Place of Profit from the Crown, without the leave of this Houſe; nor any promiſe of any ſuch Office or Place of Profit, during ſuch time as he ſhall continue a Member of this Houſe.

Impeachment of Sir William Scroggs.

On Jan. 5. Articles of Impeachment were brought in againſt Sir William Scroggs, Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench; and it being the Senſe of the Houſe, That the late Order made in the King's-Bench, their Warrants for ſeizing of Books, and their diſmiſſing of Grand-Juries, doth tend to the Subverſion of the Government, and hath been, and ever ought to be, in Judges, adjudg'd Treaſon; It was Reſolv'd, That the ſaid Sir William Scroggs be Impeached upon the ſaid Articles; And that the ſaid Articles be ingroſs'd, and carry'd up to the Lords by my Lord Cavendiſh.

Vote of the Lords for belief of the Popiſh Plot.

On Jan. 6. this Meſſage was brought from the Lords, and read in the Houſe of Commons; Reſolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, That they do declare, that they are fully ſatisfied that there now is, and for divers Years laſt paſt hath been a horrid and treaſonable Plot, contriv'd and carry'd on by thoſe of the Popiſh Religion in Ireland, for maſſacring the Engliſh, and ſubverting the Proteſtant Religion, and the ancient eſtabliſh'd Government of that Kingdom: To which their Lordſhips deſire the concurrence of this Houſe. The Commons ſoon Reſolv'd, That this Houſe doth agree with the Lords in the ſaid Vote, with the addition of theſe Words, "That the Duke of York's being a Papiſt, and the expectation of his coming to the Crown, hath given the greateſt Countenance and Encouragement thereto, as well as to the horrid Popiſh Plot in this Kingdom of England[a].

On Friday Jan 7. his Majeſty's Gracious Meſſage to the Commons in Parliament, January the 4th, 1680. ſent on Tueſday laſt, was read, as followeth:

Charles Rex.

The K.'s Meſſage.

"HIS Majeſty received the Addreſs of this "Houſe with all the Diſpoſition they could "wiſh, to comply with their reaſonable Deſires: "but upon peruſing it, he is ſorry to ſee their "Thoughts ſo wholly fix'd upon the Bill of Excluſion, as to determine, that all other Remedies "for the ſuppreſſing of Popery will be ineffectual: "His Majeſty is confirmed in an Opinion againſt "that Bill, by the Judgment of the Houſe of Lords, "who rejected it. He therefore thinks there remains nothing more for him to ſay, in Anſwer "to the Addreſs of this Houſe, but to recommend "to them, the Conſideration of all other Means "for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion; "in which they have no reaſon to doubt of his "concurrence, whenever they ſhall be preſented to "him in a Parliamentary way: And that they would "conſider the preſent State of the Kingdom, as "well as the Condition of Chriſtendom in ſuch a "manner as may enable him to preſerve Tangier, "and ſecure his Alliances abroad, and the Peace "and Settlement at home.

Upon a Debate on this Meſſage, the Houſe ſeem'd readily to come into theſe Opinions. Reſolved, That it is the Opinion of this Houſe, That there is no Security nor Safety for the Proteſtant Religion, the King's Life, or Government of this Nation, without paſſing a Bill for diſabling James Duke of York to inherit the Imperial Crown of this Realm, and the Dominions and Territories thereunto belonging; and to rely upon any other Means and Remedies, without ſuch a Bill is not only inſufficient, but dangerous.

A Popiſh Succeſſor inconſiſtent with the Safety of the Proteſtant Religion.

Reſolved, That his Majeſty, in his laſt Meſſage, having aſſured this Houſe of his readineſs to concur in all other Means for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion; this Houſe doth declare, That until a Bill be likewiſe paſs'd for excluding the Duke of York, this Houſe cannot give any Supply to his Majeſty, without danger to his Majeſty's Perſon, extreme hazard of the Proteſtant Religion, and unfaithfulneſs of thoſe by whom this Houſe is intruſted.

After this ſeveral Perſons being named for giving ill Advice to his Majeſty, and Motions ſeconded by Arguments, That Addreſſes might be made, grounded on common Fame, for their removal from the King's Perſon, and from all Places of Truſt and Power: The Reſult was, That they expreſſly named George Earl of Hallifax, Lawrence Hyde, Eſq; Henry Marqueſs of Worceſter, Henry Earl of Clarendon, and Lewis Earl of Feverſham; and voted an Addreſs to be preſented to his Majeſty, to remove them from all Offices of Honour and Profits, and from his Majeſty's Councils and Preſence for ever. Then the Houſe entred into a Debate of Parliamentary Aids, and againſt all other ways of ſupplying the King's Occaſions, as tending to the keeping off Parliaments, and exhauſting the publick Treaſure, and contracting Debts, and undermining the Government; and ſo came to theſe concluding Votes:

Miniſters of State to be remov'd.

Reſolved, That whoever ſhall hereafter lend, or cauſe to be lent, by way of advance, any Money upon the Branches of the King's Revenue, ariſing by Cuſtom, Exciſe, or Hearth-Money, ſhall be judged a hinderer of the ſitting of Parliaments, and be reſponſible for the ſame in Parliament.

Vote againſt lending the King Money.

Reſolved, That whoever ſhall accept or buy any Tally, or Anticipation, upon any part of the King's Revenue; or whoever ſhall pay ſuch Tally hereafter to be ſtruck, ſhall be adjudged to hinder the ſitting of Parliaments, and be reſponſible therefore in Parliament.

Things growing to this height, the King was extremely troubled, to find that he could not protect his Miniſters, his Brother, nor (as he thought) himſelf, and reſolved to put an end to their Seſſion on Jan. 10. Which the Commons having private Notice of, aſſembled early in the Morning, and before the Uſher of the Black-Rod came in, they Reſolved, That whoſoever adviſed his Majeſty to prorogue the Parliament, to any other purpoſe than in order to paſſing a Bill for the Excluſion of James Duke of York, is a betrayer of the King, the Proteſtant Religion, and of the Kingdom of England, a promoter of the French

Parting Votes.

[a] There was this happineſs in the Diſcovery and unconteſted Proofs of a Popiſh Plot, that it made the King at laſt ſenſible he could never bring in Popery. It calls to mind the Story that Mr. Sam. Johnſon tells in his Notes on the Paſtoral Letter.——Sir Ellis Leighton us'd to go over into France in the time of King Charles the ſecond's Government, only to curſe it out of hearing, and to give himſelf that vent abroad which was not ſafe at home. The burden of his Complaint was, that whereas the King had promiſed to ſet up the Catholick Religion, which he might do by the ſtrength of his Guards every Day, he would rather play a damn'd long Church Game, which would laſt longer than his Life.

Intereſt, and a penſioner of France. After which the Houſe of Commons were ſent for up to the Lords; where his Majeſty, ſeated on his Throne, was pleaſed to give his Royal Aſſent to, 1. An Act prohibiting the Importation of Cattle from Ireland. 2. An Act for ſupplying the late Act for Burying in Woollen: And, 3. To a private Act, concerning Sir Charles Houghton. And then his Majeſty was pleaſed to Command the Lord Chancellor to prorogue the Parliament till Thurſday the 20th of this inſtant January. But on January 18. his Majeſty, by Proclamation, thought fit to diſſolve the preſent Parliament; and was pleaſed to make known to all his loving Subjects, "That he had given Directions to the Lord-Chancellor of England, for the iſſuing out of Writs in due Form of Law, for the calling of a new Parliament, which ſhould begin and be holden at Oxford on the 21st of March next.

Acts paſſed.

Parliament prorogued.

Diſſolved.

A new Parliament is call'd.

His Majeſty diſpoſed his Honours and Preferments chiefly to thoſe Perſons who were in the Intereſt of the Duke, and had moſt oppoſed the late Proceedings of the Houſe of Commons: Though ſome few popular Men had the like titular Favours from his Majeſty, to ſweeten and reconcile them to the Court. On April 16. the Earl of Oſſory was ſworn of the Privy-Council, who died on July 30, after ſome Days ſickneſs of a violent Fever, leaving a Son and Heir, James now Duke of Ormond. On April 26. Sir Leoline Jenkins was ſworn one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, and received the Seals which Hen. Coventry, Eſq; then deliver'd up to his Majeſty. How far the being of a Party was a Recommendation to his Majeſty's Favour, was publickly ſhewn in the Caſe of the Lord Shandois, who having humbly acquainted the King, "That the Turkey-Company had made choice of him to be ſent as Ambaſſador to Conſtantinople, and praying his Majeſty's Approbation:" His Majeſty was pleaſed to reply, That his Lordſhip having countenanc'd and been engag'd in the Buſineſs of petitioning about the Parliament (which his Majeſty look'd upon as derogatory to his Prerogative, and tending to Sedition) his Majeſty could not think him ſo fit for his Favour. Whereupon his Lordſhip was forc'd, before the Committee of Foreign Intelligence, on April 26. humbly to acknowledge his fault unto his Majeſty, and to ſay, That in the matter of petitioning, he was drawn in, and miſled, by being given to underſtand, That that Proceeding was for his Majeſty's Service: But that being ſince better inform'd, he abhorr'd and diſown'd all ſuch Practices, and humbly begg'd his Majeſty's Pardon for what was paſs'd, promiſing to behave himſelf more dutifully for the future. Which humble Submiſſion of his Lordſhip the King accepted of, and then aſſur'd him of his Favour, and approv'd of him for his Ambaſſador to go for Turkey.

Honours and Preferments

Caſe of the Lord Shandois.

About the end of April his Majeſty thought fit to conſtitute Sir Job Charleton, Kt. one of the Judges of the Common-Pleas, (from whence Mr. Juſtice Raymond was called up to the King's-Bench:) By whoſe removal the Place of Chief-Juſtice, and one of his Majeſty's Council at Ludlow, for the Marches of Wales, being become void, the King conferred the ſame upon Sir George Jeffryes, Kt. Recorder of the City of London. For the moſt unhappy partiality in the diſpoſal of Royal Favours, was to find out thoſe Lawyers who were thought moſt inclinable to carry the Prerogative beyond the Law: And it ſeem'd to be upon this View, that Sir George Jeffryes, Sir John Keeling, Robert Hampſon, Edmund Weſt, Thomas Walcot, Eſq; Sir John Boynton, Edward Bigland, William Richardſon, William Bugby, Eſq; Sir Robert Wright, and Sir Francis Manly, received the King's Writs, commanding them to take upon them the State and Degree of Serjeants at Law, and appear'd for that purpoſe at the Court of Chancery on May 12.

New Judges.

Call of Serjeants.

On May 26. the Earl of Clarendon was ſworn of his Majeſty's Privy-Council. On June 2. his Majeſty was pleaſed, in conſideration of the great and eminent Services of the Earl of Rothes, Lord Chancellor of Scotland, to confer upon him the Honours and Dignities of a Duke and Marqueſs of that Kingdom, by the Title of Duke of Rothes, and Marqueſs of Brambreich, Earl of Leſlie, Viſcount of Lugtoun, Lord Acmutie and Coſcubery. His Majeſty, near the ſame time, made choice of the Earl of Middleton, to go his Envoy-Extraordinary to the Emperor; and the Earl of Mulgrave to Command the Forces going for Tangier. On Auguſt 5. his Majeſty, in conſideration of the great Abilities, and twenty Years faithful Service of Phines Pett, Eſq; in the Employment of Maſter Shipwright of his Yard at Chatham, was pleas'd to confer upon him the Honour of Knighthood, and to advance to him to the Place of one of the Principal Officers and Commiſſioners of his Navy, in the place of Sir Anthony Deane, whom his Majeſty (at his humble Suit) permitted to quit the ſame. On Auguſt 9. his Majeſty Knighted Jonas Moore, Eſq; Maſter-Surveyor of his Majeſty's Ordnance and Armories, giving him this Mark of Royal Favour, as well in Conſideration of his known Abilities, as of the faithful Services of his Father, Sir Jonas Moore, deceas'd. On Auguſt 31. at a Chapter of the Garter, held at Windſor, there were elected into the Vacancies of that Order, his Grace the Duke of Grafton, who was then at Sea, and the Right Honourable the Earl of Saliſbury; and on Sept. 15. the Prince Elector Palatine, who this Summer made a viſit to the Engliſh Court, was elected a Knight Companion of the ſame Order.

Other Advancements.

On Sept. 3. Henry Savill, Eſq; was ſworn Vice-Chamberlain to the King, which Place had been vacant ſince the death of Sir George Cartwright: And on Sept. 11. the Earl of Feverſham was declared Lord Chamberlain to the Queen, in the place of the Earl of Oſſory; and the Lord Viſcount Lumley was made Maſter of the Horſe to her Majeſty, in the room of the Earl of Feverſham. About the ſame time his Majeſty was pleaſed to create the Lady Dacres, Mother to the preſent Earl of Suſſex, Counteſs of Sheppey.

[a] It was remarkable that a Curate of Dr. Cartwright's at Barking had been a Romiſh Prieſt, and being ſtill ſo was prevail'd upon to be the chief Witneſs for invalidating the Teſtimony of Dr. Oats in the Tryal of the Earl of Caſtlemain in June 1680. even after the Biſhop of London had admoniſh'd the Doctor to diſcharge him from that Curacy. The Earl himſelf in his Manifeſto printed 1681. tells us, Mr. Berry, alias Hutchinſon appear'd at call, and I to ſhew the ſaid Berry's Familiarity and great Acquaintance with Mr. Oates, demanded, if he had not formerly reconcil'd him and made him a Papiſt? He anſwering Yes, the Chief Juſtice ſaid, I ought not to aſk ſuch Queſtions as might endanger his Life. And preſently the King's Council charg'd him with Treaſon. I reply'd that he had been a Popiſh Prieſt, but was now converted and had publickly acknowledged his Error. At laſt, after much ado, he was commanded to tell what he knew of Mr. Oats, and then he ſpoke thus.——Mr. Berry having given his Evidence, and Mr. Oats denying all that was urg'd, the ſaid Mr. Berry began to exhort him to ſpeak Truth, and to remember there was a God in Heaven; with more to that purpoſe. But the King's Council inſtead of applauding his Sermon, laid again Treaſon to his Charge, as having perſuaded a Subject to the Popiſh Religion, and having no Pardon.——I repeated that Mr. Berry's Converſion to the Proteſtant Religion had wiped away all Faults of that nature. Whilſt the Court and King's Council were arguing Mr. Berry ſlipt away, which being at laſt perceived, they commanded him to be recall'd. And then the Chief Juſtice aſk'd him, what Religion he was of? He anſwer'd, A Proteſtant. The King's Council notwithſtanding inſiſted ſtill to have his foreſaid Confeſſion recorded, which made the Chief Juſtice at laſt declare, that it ſhould be done in caſe any Body made Oath of it. But ſeveral being called and refuſing to do it, a grave and reverend Divine (who was Dean of Rippon, as I was told) roſe up and acquainted the Court, that this Berry was his Curate at Barking; that the Biſhop of London having heard ſomething againſt his Preaching, had ſent him (the ſaid Doctor) word, that he would provide him another; and that laſt Saturday at Dinner his Lordſhip told him, he was diſtracted. Mr. Oats preſently acknowledg'd, that he had known and look'd upon him to be ſuch a one, and ſo without more words he was diſmiſs'd.

1680. 32 Car. II.

Ambaſſadors, Envoys and Governors.

At the beginning of October Charles Fanſhaw, Eſq; was ſent over his Majeſty's Envoy-Extraordinary to the Prince Regent of Portugal; Mr. Parry, his Majeſty's late Envoy at that Court, having obtained leave to return home. On Octob. 15. Sir Robert Carr, Bar^t. Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, was ſworn of his Majeſty's Privy-Council. On Novemb. 20. his Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Captain John Wetwang. On Novemb. 17. the Earl of Plimouth died at Tangier of a Bloody-Flux; and the Governor, Sir Palmes Fairborn, was wounded by a Musket-ſhot on the 24th of October, of which he died three Days after, leaving the chief Command of that diſtreſſed Garriſon to Colonel Sackvile. About Chriſtmas his Majeſty appointed Sir Richard Dutton to ſucceed Sir Jonathan Atkyns in the Government of Barbadoes. On Jan. 22. his Majeſty conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon George Treby, Eſq; Recorder of the City of London, who in that Office ſucceeded the violent Sir George Jeffryes. On Jan. 26. the Earl of Oxford, the Earl of Cheſterfield, and the Earl of Ailesbury were ſworn of his Majeſty's Privy-Council, and took their Places at the Board. And ſoon after his Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute the Right Honourable Edward Earl of Conway, one of his Majeſties principal Secretaries of State, in the room of the Earl of Sunderland, and on Feb. 2. his Lordſhip in Council took the Oaths of Secretary of State and Privy-Councellor. On Feb. 14. Sir Robert Sawyer was ſworn his Majeſty's Attorney-General, in the room of Sir Creſwell Levinz, who was now made one of the Judges of the Common-Pleas, in the Place of Sir William Ellis, deceas'd. On March 9. the Earl of Craven was ſworn of his Majeſty's Privy-Council.

State of Religion.

As to Religion his Majeſty was under a popular neceſſity of declaring his Affection to the Church of England, and expreſſing a Zeal againſt Popery. At the beginning of April his Majeſty commanded the Judges, who were returned from their ſeveral Circuits, to give an Account of what they had done in purſuance of the Directions they had received from his Majeſty in Council, for the more effectual executing the Laws againſt Popiſh Recuſants; and accordingly all the Judges, on April 14. attended his Majeſty at the Committee of Popery, and made the following Report:

The King obliged to declare againſt Popery.

Report of the Judges.

That in ſome Counties they found moſt of theſe named in the Commiſſions, already Convicted, and their Convictions returned into the Exchequer; but that they had however cauſed them to be again proclaimed as ſuch. That in other Counties, many Popiſh and reputed Popiſh Recuſants had taken the Oaths, and came to Church; That others, to avoid the effect of the Law, ſhifted Counties; That in ſome Counties the Commiſſions were but newly come down; That however all poſſible Care was taken for the ſpeedy and effectual proceeding upon them: And laſtly, That in all their Circuits they had cauſed thoſe that were not already convicted, to be preſented; and had applied themſelves, with all poſſible zeal and vigour, for the punctual performance of the directions they had received in this matter.

Inſtructions to the Judges.

His Majeſty was pleaſed to approve of what they had done, and to require them to proceed as they had begun; letting them know, "That they ſhould "be ſupplied with all ſuch Orders and Directions as "ſhould be further neceſſary. And that for ſuch "Perſons as had abſented or withdrawn themſelves "from their reſpective Counties, effectual Care be "taken for their Proſecution at the next Aſſizes. "And that his Majeſty would direct the Lords-"Commiſſioners of the Treaſury to appoint ſeveral "fit and able Perſons to ſollicit and attend this Ser-"vice, as well at the Aſſizes, as wherever elſe "there ſhould be occaſion; his Majeſty's Intenti-"on being, That the ſaid Laws againſt Popiſh Re-"cuſants be duly and effectually executed." But indeed, all this was but a Feint in Politicks, and a Neceſſity upon the Court to be carry'd along with the ſtream of the Country.

The Papiſts now againſt the Diſſenters.

As it had been formerly the Intereſt of the Papiſts to promote Indulgence and Toleration to the Proteſtant Diſſenters, that under the Effects of ſuch a Liberty they might ſhelter themſelves, and weaken the Church of England; ſo now, upon a Turn of Affairs, they chang'd their Opinion, or at leaſt their Meaſures: For that Party now encourag'd the ſevere proſecution of the Proteſtant Diſſenters, thereby to take off the edge of the Laws from themſelves, and to divert the zeal of the Members of the Church of England againſt their Brethren in ſeparation from them, and ſo to irritate and alienate the Hearts of all Proteſtants from one another. The Bigottry of the Scotch Presbyterians help'd much to raiſe an Odium upon all of that Denomination: For when James Skeyn, Brother to the Laird of Skeyn, Archibald Steward, and John Spreull, were on November 13. examin'd before his Majeſty's Privy Council at Edinburgh, concerning the late Rebellion at Bothwell-Bridge, and Airdſmoſſe, the ſaid James Skeyn did own and declare, "That the Perſons who were "concern'd in either of the ſaid Rebellions were "not Rebels. That the burning the Acts of Par-"liament at Rutherglen, and the Proclamation "made againſt his Majeſty, were juſt: That the "Excommunication uſed againſt the King by one "Cargill, and the Reaſons of it, are juſt. That the "killing of the late Archbiſhop of St. Andrew's, "was no Murther; That the Actors were upon "their Duty. That he thinks there is a declared "War between thoſe that ſerve the Lord, and thoſe "that ſerve the King, againſt the Covenant. That it "is lawful to kill any of the King's Council and "Soldiers, in defence of the Goſpel. That he "thinks, the King being Excommunicated, and "there being now a lawful declared War againſt "him, on account of the Breach of the Covenant, "it is lawful to kill him, and all thoſe that are in "oppoſition to the Covenant.

Fury of the Field-Conventiclers in Scotland.

"Archibald Steward confeſs'd he was in the Re-"bellion of Airdſmoſſe, and preſent at the Excom-"munication of the King; and that the King was "juſtly Excommunicated. He declared, he diſ-"own'd the King's Authority, and thought him-"ſelf not oblig'd to obey him. And being ask'd, "Whether he thought it lawful to kill the King, be-"ing Excommunicated? He deſir'd time to conſider "of it before he anſwer'd, but ſaid it was lawful "to kill the late Archbiſhop of St. Andrew's, and "own'd the Proclamation againſt the King, and "the burning the Acts of Parliament.

Some of the Clergy too warm againſt the Diſſenters.

As the Diſſenters were made the more Odious by the violence of their Brethren in Scotland, ſo many of the Church-men, and eſpecially the Clergy, fell under a ſuſpicion of being Popiſhly affected, becauſe they warmly eſpouſed the Intereſt of the [a] Court, in abhorring of Petitions, and in oppoſing the Aſſociation, and the Excluſion Bill: For which one Richard Thomſon, Miniſter in Briſtol, did ſo hotly diſtinguiſh himſelf, that the Houſe of Commons cenſur'd him, [b] and ſent for him into Cuſtody; which turn'd

[a] It is ſaid in the Life of Archbiſhop Tillotſon, that about November 1680. upon throwing out the Bill of Excluſion in the Houſe of Peers, the Clergy in and about the City of London preſented an Addreſs of Congratulation to the King, which Dr. Tillotſon refus'd to ſign.

[b] The Reverend Mr. Thompſon was likewiſe accus'd of abetting and preaching up the Doctrines of the Church of Rome in the Points of Juſtification, Auricular Confeſſion, Penance, Extreme Unction, &c.

See the Report from a Committee of the Commons in Parliament, appointed to conſider the Petition of Richard Thompſon of Briſtol, Clerk, and to examine Complaints againſt him; and the Reſolution of the Commons upon this Report for his Impeachment upon High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, Friday December 24, 1680. Printed by the Order of the Speaker.

only

1680. 32 Car. II.

only to his Merit at Court, and Preferr'd him ſoon after to the Deanery of Briſtol. Under this Diſpoſition of the Clergy, many ſevere Reflections were made upon them in the Houſe of Commons; particularly one of the Members, J. B. upon a Debate of the Aſſociation, ſaid thus: "Mr. Speaker; Sir, I "retain a good Opinion of an Aſſociation Bill, notwithſtanding what hath been ſaid, as to the weakneſs it may receive from our unhappy Diviſions in "Points of Religion and Intereſt, too much promoted by ſome of our Clergy. For, Sir, when "I conſider how the Laudean Principles, as to "raiſing of Money without Parliaments, in the "late Times, infected moſt of our Clergy, ſo as "that they not only preach'd up the King's abſolute Authority over Mens Properties, but branded "with the Title of Rebels, and condemn'd to Hell "thoſe that offer'd to argue againſt it; I do conclude, That it is uſual for one or two Biſhops to "give meaſures or Directions to the reſt of the Biſhops, and they to the Clergy of their ſeveral "Dioceſſes; and that therefore the Clergy derive "the Politicks generally from one or two Biſhops "in ſome great Station——But People will diſcern "that the Clergy may be good Divines, but not ſo "good Politicians; and that there may be ſome difference, in Point of Intereſt, between them and "the Laity; becauſe Clergymen may be in a poſſibility of being advanc'd by Popery, if they "ſubmit; but the Laity, under a probability of "loſing all, notwithſtanding all Submiſſions. Sir, "I do not trouble you with this Diſcourſe, out of "a fear that our Clergy will not ſhew themſelves "good Proteſtants, for I have that Veneration for "them, and Opinion of them, as to believe, that "many of the Biſhops, and Clergy too, would as "ſoon Die for the Proteſtant Religion, as any "Perſons in the Nation: But I am jealous that "there is ſome over-ruling Power got in amongſt "them, ſomething anſwerable to that of a Popiſh "Succeſſor in the State." A further Advantage was taken, to bring the Biſhops under a Suſpicion, by their joining to throw out the Bill of Excluſion: Upon which occaſion one of the Commons ſpoke thus:——"If this be our Caſe, and there be nothing wanting but a Popiſh King to compleat "our Miſery, and the Art of Man cannot find out "any way to ſecure us againſt a Popiſh King, without the Excluſion Bill; Is it not ſtrange it ſhould "be rejected in the Houſe of Lords? I cannot believe that the Fathers of the Church ſhould join "in that which muſt infallibly give Opportunity "for the tearing out of the Bowels of their Mother, "and deſtroying her for ever: If ſo, well may we "lie down and cry, We have no body to help us, but "only thee, O God?

The beſt and wiſeſt of the Clergy for Peace and Union.

During theſe Heats and mutual Animoſities, ſome of the moſt learned and exemplary Clergy endeavour'd, both in private and publick, to bring the Diſſenters to a Senſe of the Neceſſity of Union among Proteſtants, hoping the apprehenſion of preſent Danger would have diſpos'd them to a better Inclination to the things which belong'd to the common Peace of the Reformation. With this proſpect the learned and judicious Dr. Stillingfleet being appointed to preach before the Lord-Mayor, on May 2. being the firſt Sunday in the Term, he thought fit to lay open the unreaſonableneſs and miſchief of the preſent Separation. Which Sermon he ſoon after publiſh'd, and proſecuted the Subject of it in an excellent Treatiſe, Intituled, The unreaſonableneſs of Separation; or, an impartial [a] Account of the Hiſtory, Nature, and Pleas of the preſent Separation from the Communion of the Church of England. To promote this return of the Diſſenters into the Communion of the Church of England, Henry Lord Biſhop of London had held in the Year preceding three ſeaſonable Conferences with his Clergy upon the two Sacraments, and upon Catechiſing Youth in the true Principles of Religion. And in this Year his Lordſhip purſued the good Deſign in three other Conferences; on, 1. The [b] Half Communion: 2. Prayers in an unknown Tongue: 3. Prayers to Saints. And the Subſtance of this Converſation his Lordſhip publiſh'd in a Letter to the Clergy of his Dioceſe, Dated July 6. 1680. His Lordſhip further hoped that it might tend to pacifie and reconcile the Diſſenters, by bringing in the Judgment of foreign Divines againſt their needleſs Separation: For this purpoſe his Lordſhip wrote to Monſieur le Moyne, Profeſſor in Divinity at Leyden; and Monſieur L'Angle, one of the Preachers of the Reformed Church at Charington near Paris [c]; and to Monſieur Claude, another Eminent French Divine; who, in their ſeveral Anſwers (that are all publiſh'd to the World) do agree in vindicating the Church of England from any Errors in the Doctrine, or any unlawful Impoſitions in the Service and Diſcipline of it; [d] and therefore do condemn a Separation from it, as needleſs and uncharitable.

Prudence of the Biſhop of London.

The Commons in Parliament were ſenſible that nothing did more encourage the Intereſt of Popery than theſe Diviſions at home fomented by the Papiſts: It was under this Opinion that they firſt agreed to bring in a Bill, For an Aſſociation of all his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, for the Safety of his Majeſty's Perſon, the Defence of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Preſervation of his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, againſt all Invaſions and Oppoſitions. And on Decemb. 21. they read and committed a Bill, For uniting his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects. Which though oppoſed by one Member, who thought it more convenient to have a Law for forcing the Diſſenters to yield to the Church, and not to force the Church to yield to them: Yet the Majority of the Houſe fell in heartily with this Bill of Comprehenſion, as the only Means of a firm Union among Proteſtants and an effectual Suppreſſion of the Dangers of Popery. And one of the Members ſpoke thus:

The Commons for Union, and a Bill of Comprehenſion.

[a] See an impartial Vindication of the Clergy of England in a Letter to a Friend. In which are intermix'd ſeveral Paſſages which may ſerve as a Reply to Dr. Owen's and Mr. Baxter's late Anſwer to Dr. Stillingfleet's Sermon, entitled, The Miſchief of Separation. By a Reverend Divine of the Church of England. Subſcribed S. R. (i. e. Sam. Rolls, D. D.) Dated July 25. 1680. London 1680. 8*vo*.

A ſhort Defence of the Church and Clergy of England, wherein ſome of the common Objections againſt both are anſwered, and the means of.

[b] And Dr. William Lloyd, Biſhop of St. Aſaph, making now a very diligent Viſitation of his Dioceſe, did invite the chief Leaders among the Diſſenters to friendly Conferences at Oſweſtry, Wrexam, &c. in order to reclaim them to Unity and Peace.

[c] See at the end of Dr. Stillingfleet's unreaſonableneſs of Separation, 1681. 4*to*. I. A Letter from Monſieur Le Moyne, Profeſſor of Divinity at Leyden, to my Lord Biſhop of London, concerning the nature of our preſent Differences, and the unlawfulneſs of Separation from the Church of England. Dated Sept. 3. 1680. ——— II. A Letter from Monſieur de L'Angle, one of the preſent Preachers of the Reformed Church-Meeting at Charenton near Paris, upon the ſame Subject. Dated Paris, Octob. 31. 1680.——— III. A Letter from Monſieur Claude, on the ſame Subject. Dated Paris 29. Novemb. 1680.

[d] Father Orleans makes it an Artifice of the Earl of Shaftſbury, that all Proteſtants might find it their Intereſt to deſtroy the Catholicks, and ſo the Duke of York's Excluſion from the Crown might be brought about; he projected an Union among all the Nonconformiſt Sectaries and the Church of England, and to bring it about he put the Houſe of Commons upon preſſing the King to repeal all the Laws made by Queen Elizabeth againſt them. His Majeſty perceived what they tended to, and making a true Judgment upon the Occaſion of that demand, firſt prorogued and afterwards diſſolved the Parliament.

May

1680. 32 Car. II.

Mr. Speaker,

"I Would not open my Mouth in favour of this "Bill, if I thought it would any ways pre- "judice the Church or Church Government; but I "believe it may have a quite contrary Effect, and "tend more for the Preſervation and Safety of the "Church and Church-Government, than any Bill "whatſoever that could be contriv'd——The Preſ- "byterians, Independants, and all other Diſſenters, "may be more in Number than the Papiſts, and "may be willing enough to have the Church-Go- "vernment alter'd, if not deſtroy'd; yet being "they cannot have any Succour from Abroad, nor "from the Government here at Home, I cannot "ſee any great Danger of them; for it is not pro- "bable that they ſhall ever have a King of their "Opinion, nor a Parliament, by the diſcovery they "made of their Strength in the laſt Elections; for "according to the beſt Calculation I can make, "they could not bring in above one in twenty: "And therefore, becauſe they have not ſuch bloody "deſperate Principles as the Papiſts, and becauſe "we agree in Points of Faith, and ſo no ſuch great "Danger from them as from the Papiſts; I think "we have reaſon to conclude, That the Church is "moſt in Danger from the Papiſts, and that there- "fore we ought to take care of them in the firſt "place; and we cannot do that by any way more "likely to prove effectual, than by ſome ſuch Bill "as this: Becauſe, if it ſhould have the Effect de- "ſign'd, of bringing in many of the Diſſenters in- "to the Church, it would diſappoint them of the "great Hopes they have grounded on our Diviſi- "ons, and make the Church ſtronger, not only to "oppoſe the Papiſts, but ſuch Fanaticks as may "not come in: And if we ſhould not have this "Succeſs, I do not underſtand it will any way "weaken the Church-Government.

The Act of 35 Eliz. for Payment of twenty Pounds a Month for every Perſon not reſorting to their Pariſh-Church [a], was apparently made againſt the Popiſh Recuſants, but had been lately executed upon the Proteſtant Diſſenters. Upon which the Commons reſolved, That it is the Opinion of this Houſe that the Proſecution of Proteſtant Diſſenters, upon the Penal Laws deſign'd againſt the Papiſts, is at this time grievous to the Subject, a weakening the Proteſtant Intereſt, an Encouragement to Popery, and dangerous to the Peace of the Kingdom. And therefore they prepared another Bill, For exempting his Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects diſſenting from the Church of England, from the Penalties impoſed upon the Papiſts, by repealing the ſaid Act of the 35 Eliz. This Bill paſſed the Commons, and was agreed to by the Lords, and lay ready for his Majeſty's Aſſent: But when his Majeſty came to the Throne to paſs this among other Bills, this was taken from the Lords Table, and never heard of after: Which no Man durſt have done without the King's Command, or at leaſt his Privity and Connivance at it: It was commonly ſaid to have been taken away by a Natural Son of the King's, who ſtanding at the Table to play with it, was inſtructed to run away with it. The Loſs of this Bill was complain'd of in the next Parliament at Oxford, but without Satisfaction or Redreſs.

The Commons againſt Proſecuting the Proteſtant Diſſenters.

A Bill for Relief of them, ſtoln away.

1681.

The King, at the Diſſolution of the laſt Parliament, had ſummoned another to meet on the 21ſt of March at Oxford. This Change of Place was very diſpleaſing, not only to the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, but generally to both Houſes, who apprehended ſome Arbitrary Deſigns in it. Whereupon ſeveral of the Nobility, after mature Conſideration of the Matter, reſolved to petition the King againſt it: Which Petition was delivered by the Earl of Eſſex, with this Speech to the King.

1681. 33 Car. II.

Oxford Parliament.

Petition againſt the Sitting of it.

May it pleaſe your Majesty,

"THE Lords here preſent, together with di- "vers others of the Peers of the Realm, "taking Notice, That by the late Proclamation, "your Majeſty has declared an Intention of Calling "a Parliament at Oxford; and obſerving from Hi- "ſtory and Records how unfortunate many Aſſem- "blies have been, when call'd at a Place remote "from the Capital City, as particularly the Con- "greſs in King Henry the IId's Time at Clarendon; "three ſeveral Parliaments at Oxford in Henry the "IIId's Time, and at Coventry in Henry the VIth's "Time; and divers others which have proved fatal to "thoſe Kings, and have been follow'd with great Miſ- "chief on the whole Kingdom: And conſidering the "preſent Poſture of Affairs, the many Jealouſies and "Diſcontents that are among the People, they have "great Cauſe to apprehend, that the Conſequences "of a Parliament now at Oxford may be as fatal to "your Majeſty and the Nation, as thoſe others "mention'd have been to the then Reigning Kings. "And therefore we do conceive, that we cannot "anſwer it to God, to your Majeſty, or to the Peo- "ple, if we, being Peers of the Realm, ſhould "not on ſo important an Occaſion humbly offer "our Advice to your Majeſty, That, if poſſible, "your Majeſty may be prevail'd with to alter this "(as we apprehend) unſeaſonable Reſolution. The "Grounds and Reaſons of our Opinions are con- "tain'd in this our Petition, which we humbly "preſent to your Majeſty.

Speech of the Earl of Eſſex.

This Petition was ſo remarkable, that it deſerves to be here inſerted.

To the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty:

The Humble PETITION and Advice of the Lords under-named, Peers of the Realm,

Humbly Sheweth,

"THAT whereas your Majeſty hath been "pleaſed, by divers Speeches and Paſſages "to your Houſes of Parliament, rightly to repre- "ſent to them the Dangers that threatned your "Majeſty's Perſon and the whole Kingdom from "the miſchievous and wicked Plots of the Papiſts, "and the ſudden Growth of a Power, unto which "no Stop or Remedy could be provided, unleſs it "were by Parliament, and an Union of your Ma- "jeſty's Proteſtant Subjects in one Mind and one "Intereſt.

The Petition it ſelf.

"And the Lord Chancellor, in purſuance of "your Majeſty's Commands, having more at large "demonſtrated the ſaid Dangers to be as great as we "in the midſt of our Fears could imagine them; "and ſo preſſing, that our Liberties, Religion, "Lives, and the whole Kingdom, would be cer- "tainly loſt, if a ſpeedy Proviſion were not made a- "gainſt them.

[a] It is certain that the wiſe and moderate Church of England Men were the more inclinable at this time to reconcile the Diſſenters to them, becauſe they ſaw that the Papiſts were widening the Breaches between them to enter in at thoſe Breaches. And yet ſome of the Diſſenters were ſo manag'd, as to believe the Churchmen were not in earneſt, but were only temporizing for fear of the prevailing Powers of Popery. For ſo Dr. Lewis du Moulin in his Appeal of the Nonconformiſts, publiſh'd juſt after his death, Octob. 23. 1680. did uncharitably declare that the zeal and fervour of the prevailing corrupt Church Party in England at this preſent Juncture of time, in writing ſo many Books againſt the Papiſts, and ſtanding up ſo ſtoutly againſt the horrid Attempt upon the King's moſt ſacred Life, and introducing of Popery, and hearkening to ſome Terms of Reconciliation with the Non-Conformiſts, to make the Oppoſition the ſtronger againſt Papiſts, does no way ſeem to be the effect of a Chriſtian Moderation, but a mere worldly Intereſt; and the goodneſs of a ſtubborn Boy, juſt ſo long as the Rod is over his Back.

"And

1681. 33 Car. II.

“ And your Majeſty, on the 21ſt of Apr. 1679, having call'd unto your Council many honourable and worthy Perſons, and declared to them and the whole Kingdom, that being ſenſible of the evil Effects of a ſingle Miniſtry, or private Advice, or Foreign Committee, for the general Direction of your Affairs, your Majeſty would, for the future, refer all Things unto the Council; and by the conſtant Advice of them, together with the frequent Uſe of your great Council the Parliament, your Majeſty had hereafter reſolved to govern the Kingdom, we began to hope we ſhould ſee an End of our Miſeries.

“ But, to our unſpeakable Grief and Sorrow, we ſoon found our Expectation fruſtrated; the Parliament then ſubſiſting, was prorogu'd and diſſolv'd, before it could perfect what was intended for our Relief and Security: And tho' another was thereupon call'd, yet, by the many Prorogations, it was put off till the 21ſt of October paſt; and notwithſtanding your Majeſty was then again pleas'd to acknowledge, that neither your Majeſty's Perſon nor the Kingdom could be ſafe, till the Matter of the Plot was gone through, it was unexpectedly prorogu'd on the 10th of this Month, before any ſufficient Order could be taken therein; all their juſt and pious Endeavours to ſave the Nation were overthrown; the good Bills they had been induſtriouſly preparing, to unite all your Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, brought to nought; the Diſcovery of the Iriſh Plot ſtifled; the Witneſſes that came in frequently more fully to declare that, both of England and Ireland, diſcourag'd; thoſe Foreign Kingdoms and States, who, by a happy Conjunction with us, might give a Check to the French Power, diſheartned even to ſuch a Deſpair of their own Security againſt the growing Greatneſs of that Monarch, as we fear may induce them to take new Reſolutions, and perhaps ſuch as may be fatal to us; the Strength of our Enemies, both at Home and Abroad, encreaſed, and our ſelves left in the utmoſt Danger of ſeeing our ſelves brought into utter Deſolation.

“ In theſe Extremities we had nothing, under God, to comfort us, but the Hopes that your Majeſty (being touch'd with the Groans of your periſhing People) would have ſuffer'd your Parliament to have met on the Day unto which it was prorogu'd, and that no farther Interruption ſhould have been given to their Proceedings, in order to the ſaving of the Nation; yet that failed us too. But when we heard that your Majeſty, by the private Suggeſtion of ſome wicked Perſons, Favourers of Popery, Promoters of French Deſigns, and Enemies to your Majeſty and the Kingdom, (without the Advice, and, as we have good Reaſon to believe, againſt the Opinion even of your Privy-Council) had been prevail'd with to diſſolve it, and to call another to meet at Oxford, where neither Lords nor Commons can be in Safety, but will be daily expos'd to the Swords of the Papiſts, and their Adherents, of whom too many are crept into your Majeſty's Guards: The Liberty of ſpeaking according to their Conſciences will be thereby deſtroy'd; and the Validity of all their Acts and Proceedings concerning it left diſputable. The Streightneſs of the Place no way admits of ſuch a Concourſe of Perſons as now follows every Parliament: The Witneſſes that are neceſſary to give Evidence againſt the Popiſh Lords, ſuch Judges, or others whom the Commons have impeach'd, or had reſolved to impeach, can neither bear the Charge of going thither, nor truſt themſelves under the Protection of a Parliament that is it ſelf evidently under the Power of Guards and Soldiers.

“ The Premiſſes conſider'd, we your Majeſty's Petitioners, out of juſt Abhorrence of ſuch a dangerous and pernicious Council (which the Authors have not dared to avow) and the direful Apprehenſions of the Calamities and Miſeries that may enſue thereupon, do make it our moſt humble Prayer and Advice, That the Parliament may not ſit at a Place where it cannot be able to act with that Freedom which is neceſſary, and eſpecially to give unto their Acts and Proceedings that Authority which they ought to have amongſt the People, and have ever had, unleſs impair'd by ſome Awe upon them (of which there wants not Precedents;) and that your Majeſty would be graciouſly pleas'd to order it to ſit at Weſtminſter (it being the uſual Place,) and where they may conſult and act with Safety and Freedom.

And your Petitioners ſhall ever pray, &c.

Monmouth,	Shaftsbury,
Kent,	Mordant,
Huntingdon,	Evers,
Bedford,	Paget,
Saliſbury,	Gray,
Clare,	Herbert,
Stamford,	Howard,
Eſſex,	Delamere.

The King frown'd upon the Deliverers of this Petition, and perſiſted in his Reſolution of holding the Parliament at Oxford [a]. To which Purpoſe he went from Windſor on March 14. and was receiv'd at the Confines of the County by the High-Sheriff, and at Wheatly by the Lord Norris, Lord-Lieutenant of the County, and conducted in great Pomp to Oxford, where he was receiv'd with great Expreſſions of Loyalty by the Univerſity and City; and publick Notice was given, That this Univerſity was no leſs renowned Abroad, as well as at Home, for its Loyalty and Duty to his Majeſty, than for its Learning, and ſound Religion: In a word, That his Majeſty had met in that Place with all the Demonſtrations poſſible of Duty and Joy, as his having honour'd them with his Royal Preſence.

The King offended.

Receiv'd at Oxford.

On Monday, March 21. the Parliament opened at Oxford; and his Majeſty coming into the Houſe of Lords (which was in the publick Schools) and being in his Robes ſeated on his Throne, and ſending for the Commons to attend him, he was pleas'd to make this gracious Speech:

Opening of the Parliament.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THE unwarrantable Proceedings of the laſt Houſe of Commons were the Occaſion of my parting with the laſt Parliament; for I, who will never uſe Arbitrary Government my ſelf, am reſolv'd not to ſuf-

The King's Speech.

[a] To help run down the Belief of a Popiſh Plot, Roger Earl of Caſtlemain having lately eſcap'd in a Tryal for High Treaſon, and thereupon for greater Safety retir'd into France, did there write an Account of his Proſecution, which was printed in England Anno 1681. as dated from Amiens, March 7. 168⁰⁄₁. under this Title; The Earl of Caſtlemain's Manifeſto: Wherein he blackens the King's Evidence, and did the King himſelf no Honour, by repreſenting his Majeſty in good Eſteem with the Popes of Rome. Says the Earl, p. 26. I have been ſo far from hearing of any Excommunication, or Declaration of Hereſy iſſued out againſt the King by his Holineſs, or any of that Church; that I am as much aſſur'd that it is falſe, as that he (i. e. Dr. Oats) never chriſten'd, or confirm'd his ſaid Majeſty: For I have been twice myſelf at Rome, and know, that the Popes have ſtill ſpoken of him with great Honour and Reſpect.

[b] See Vox Patriæ: Or a Collection of the Petitions and Addreſſes made from divers Counties, Cities, and Boroughs of this Realm, to their reſpective Repreſentatives, choſen to ſerve in the Parliament held at Oxford, March 21. 1680. Printed 1681. Folio.

fer

1681. 33 Car. II. fer it in others. I am unwilling to mention Particulars, becauſe I am deſirous to forget Faults; but whoſoever ſhall calmly conſider what Offers I have formerly made, and what Aſſurances I renew'd to the laſt Parliament; how I recommended nothing ſo much to them as the Alliances I had made for the Preſervation of the General Peace in Chriſtendom, and the farther Examination of the Popiſh Plot, and how I deſir'd their Advice and Aſſiſtance concerning the Preſervation of Tangier, and ſhall then reflect upon the ſtrange unſuitable Returns made to ſuch Propoſitions, by Men that were call'd together to conſult, perhaps may wonder more, that I had Patience ſo long, than that at laſt I grew weary of their Proceedings.

I have thought it neceſſary to ſay thus much to you, that I may not have any new Occaſion given me to remember more of the late Miſcarriages: It is much my Intereſt, and ſhall be as much my Care as yours, to preſerve the Liberty of the Subject; becauſe the Crown can never be ſafe, when that is in danger: And I would have you likewiſe be convinc'd, That neither your Liberties and Properties can ſubſiſt long, when the juſt Rights and Prerogatives of the Crown are invaded, or the Honour of the Government brought low, and into diſreputation.

I let you ſee, by my calling this Parliament ſo ſoon, that no Irregularities in Parliament ſhall make me out of Love with them; and by this means offer you another opportunity of providing for our Security here, by giving that countenance and protection to our Neighbours and Allies, which you cannot but know they expect from us, and extremely ſtand in need of at this inſtant; and at the ſame time give one Evidence more, that I have not neglected my Part, to give that general Satisfaction and Security, which, by the Bleſſing of God, may be attained, if you, on your Parts, bring ſuitable Diſpoſitions towards it; and that the juſt Care you ought to have of Religion, be not ſo manag'd and improv'd into unneceſſary Fears, as to be made a Pretence for changing the Foundation of the Government.

I hope the Example of the ill Succeſs of former Heats, will diſpoſe you to a better Temper; and not ſo much to inveigh againſt what is paſt, as to conſider what is beſt to be done in the preſent conjuncture. The further proſecution of the Plot; the Tryal of the Lords in the Tower; the providing a more ſpeedy conviction for Recuſants; and, if it be practicable, the ridding our ſelves quite of all of that Party, that have any conſiderable Authority and Intereſt amongſt them, are things, though of the higheſt Importance, that hardly need to be recommended to you, they are ſo obvious to every Man Conſideration, and ſo neceſſary for our Security: But I muſt needs deſire you, not to lay ſo much weight upon any one Expedient againſt Popery, as to determine that all other are ineffectual; and among all your Cares for Religion, remember, That without the Safety and Dignity of the Monarchy, neither Religion nor Property can be preſerved.

What I have formerly and ſo often declared touching the Succeſſion, I cannot depart from. But to remove all reaſonable Fears that may ariſe from the poſſibility of a Popiſh Succeſſor's coming to the Crown, if means can be found, that in ſuch a Caſe, the Adminiſtration of the Government may remain in Proteſtant Hands; I ſhall be ready to hearken to any ſuch Expedient, by which the Religion might be preſerv'd, and the Monarchy not deſtroy'd.

I muſt therefore earneſtly recommend to you, to provide for the Religion and the Government together, with regard to one another, becauſe they ſupport each other: And let us be United at Home, that we may recover the Eſteem and Conſideration we uſed to have Abroad.

I conclude with this one Advice to you, That the Rules and Meaſures of all your Votes, may be the known and eſtabliſh'd Laws of the Land; which neither can, nor ought to be departed from, nor chang'd, but by Act of Parliament: And I may the more reaſonably require that you make the Laws of the Land your Rule, becauſe I am reſolv'd they ſhall be mine.

After this Speech the Lord Chancellor, by his Majeſty's Command, directed the Commons to return to their Houſe, and to make choice of a Speaker. Which they accordingly did, unanimouſly electing William Williams of Grays-Inn, Eſq; Counſellor at Law, and Recorder of Cheſter, who had been Speaker in the former Parliament. When the Commons preſented him to his Majeſty, on Tueſday, March 22. he made this Speech: W. Williams is again choſen Speaker.

May it pleaſe Your Majesty;

"THE Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes in Parliament Aſſembled, with Duty and Loyalty agreeable to themſelves and the Perſons whom they repreſent, have, in Obedience to your Royal Pleaſure, for the diſpoſing of themſelves in that great Aſſembly for your Majeſty's Service, conſider'd of a Speaker; and, to manifeſt to your Majeſty, and the World, they are not inclinable to changes, have with one Voice elected me their Speaker, having had the Honour to ſerve your Majeſty and the Commons in that Truſt in the laſt Parliament, His Speech to the K.

"With all Humility, I preſume again, by their Commands, to ſtand before your Majeſty, to receive your Pleaſure, with a Head and Heart full of Loyalty to your ſacred Perſon; arm'd with a ſettled Reſolution never to depart from your well, ancient and eſtabliſh'd Government.

Then the Lord Chancellor, by his Majeſty's Command, ſaid to this purpoſe:

"Mr. Speaker, for ſo I am commanded to call you, his Majeſty hath well conſider'd the choice the Commons have made, and does very much approve of that Election, and doth accept and allow you for Speaker.

After which the Speaker made this further Speech:

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

"NAtural Allegiance commands Loyalty to your Majeſty from every Subject.

"Your ſingular Grace and Favour to me, in the laſt Parliament, continu'd by the Honour I have in this, add more than dutifulneſs and Obedience to my Loyalty.

"I am ſet in the firſt Station of your Commons, for Truſt and Quality; an high and ſlippery Place: It requires a ſteady Hand, and a well-pois'd Body in him that will ſtand firm there. Uprightneſs is the ſafe poſture, and beſt Policy, and ſhall be mine in this Place, guarded with this Opinion, That your Majeſty's Service, in this Truſt, is one and the ſame with the Service of your Commons, and that they are no more to be divided than your Crown and Sceptre.

"They truly ſerve the Crown and Country, (which ſhall be my Care and Induſtry) who make the Safety of your ſacred Perſon, the Defence and Security of the Proteſtant Religion, the Support of your Majeſty's Government, the Maintenance of the Laws, and Preſervation of the ancient Conſtitutions of Parliament, one and the ſame undivided Intereſt, one and the ſame Safety, one and the ſame inſeparable Security for your ſelf and People.

"Theſe are the Deſires of all good Men, but muſt be the effect of good Counſels, for the enabling of your Majeſty's great Council now in Parliament aſſembled. To compleat this bleſſed Eſtabliſhment, with all Humility, I Addreſs to "your

"your Majeſty, in the Name, and on the behalf "of the Commons in Parliament;

1. "That we and our Servants may be free in "our Perſons and Eſtates, from Arreſts, and other "Diſturbances.

2. "That in our Debates, Liberty and Freedom "of Speech be allow'd us.

"3. That, as Occaſion ſhall require, your Ma-"jeſty will vouchſafe us acceſs to your Royal Per-"ſon.

"I take leave to join this humble Petition for "my ſelf, that nothing by me, in weakneſs, or thro' "inadvertency, ſaid or done, may turn to the pre-"judice of the Commons; and that my Behaviour "and Proceedings may receive a benign and favou-"rable Interpretation with your gracious Majeſty.

Then the Lord Chancellor, by Command from his Majeſty, ſaid to this effect:

Mr. Speaker,

Anſwer of the Lord-Chancellor to the Speaker.

"All your Petitions are fully and freely granted "by his Majeſty, in as large and ample a manner "as ever any Houſe of Commons yet enjoy'd "them: The King is very ſure the Wiſdom of "this Houſe of Commons will make as prudent "an uſe of them, as any of your Anceſtors ever "did. Your own particular Petition is grateful to "the King too; becauſe he knows you will be "careful to avoid miſtakes, as his Majeſty is ready "to forgive them.

"And now, Mr. Speaker, theſe Preliminaries be-"ing thus over, the King deſires you wou'd haſten "to the reſt that are neceſſary to be diſpatch'd, be-"fore we can enter upon Buſineſs; that ſo we may "husband Time, which is now more neceſſary than "ever; and he hopes that this Parliament will come "to a very happy and proſperous Concluſion: And "that it may do ſo, God Almighty direct and proſ-"per all your Conſultations.

Printing of the Votes.

On Thurſday March 24. the Debates of the Commons began with a Motion for Printing the Votes: Which was oppoſ'd by Mr. Secretary Jenkins, as againſt the gravity of that Aſſembly; That no great Aſſembly in Chriſtendom did it; That again, it was againſt their Gravity, and a ſort of Appeal to the People. But the Members, on the other ſide argu'd, That Printing their Votes, was like true Engliſhmen, who are not aſham'd of what they do; and that the People who they repreſent, may have a true account of their Proceedings; and ſo the Reſolution paſs'd for Printing.

A Complaint of the loſs of a Bill in the laſt Parliament.

Another Motion was made, to enquire into the Miſcarriage of the Bill for Repeal of the Bill of 35 Eliz. &c. how it came to be ſlipt over in the laſt Parliament, and not preſented, for the Royal Aſſent? "Which (ſaid the mover) I look upon "as a Breach of the Conſtitution of the Govern-"ment." But the farther Debate of this Matter was adjourn'd to the next Day.

Bill of Excluſion.

While another Motion was made, "That, for the Preſervation of "the Proteſtant Religion, and the King's Perſon, "a Bill be brought in, to prevent a Popiſh Succeſ-"ſor, and in particular againſt James Duke of "York"; the ſame Bill which paſs'd the laſt Parliament.

Oppoſed by Sir Lionel Jenkins.

Mr. Secretary Jenkins ſtood up and ſaid, "I muſt give my negative to this Motion; and my "reaſon why I do ſo, is, becauſe the King hath de-"clared in his Speech, That as to the Point of altering the Succeſſion, he cannot depart from what he has ſo often declared." He farther argu'd, "That the "King's Speech gave them a Latitude for Expedi-"ents; and therefore he would not have the Bill "any more put to the hazard of Rejection, but "hoped they would conſider of ſome Expedients." Other Members declared, "That they could ſee no "Expedient to ſave Religion, and preſerve the "King's Perſon, but only the Bill to exclude the "Duke; however to pay the King all the Reſpect "in the World, they would ſet apart a time to "conſider Expedients, and appointed Saturday for "the Debate of them.

Enquiry into the loſs of the Bill.

On Friday, March 25. a Motion was made, for returning Thanks to thoſe Places who had freely and without Expence choſen their Members; and the Members ſo elected were order'd to ſend their Thanks to thoſe who choſe them. Then a Motion was made for reſuming the Debate upon the loſs of the Bill for repeal of the Bill of 35 Eliz. Sir W. J. argu'd thus; This Matter deſerves material Conſideration, whether in reſpect of the loſs of the Bill, or the ſhaking of the very Conſtitution of Parliament. The Bill that is loſt, is of great Moment, and of great Service to the Country, and perhaps to their Lives, in the time of a Popiſh Succeſſor. Thoſe Men that hindred the paſſing that Bill, had a Proſpect of that; and if it be ſent up again, we are like to meet with great oppoſition. But be the Bill what it will, the Precedent is of the higheſt Conſequence. The King has his negative to all Bills, but I never knew that the Clerk of the Parliament had a negative.—— If this way be found out, That Bills ſhould be thrown by; it may be hereafter ſaid, they were forgot, and laid by; and ſo we ſhall never know whether the King would paſs them or no. If this be ſuffer'd, it is in vain to ſpend time here, &c. The Matter was at laſt referr'd to a Conference with the Lords, concerning the Conſtitution of Parliaments, in Matters relating to paſſing of Bills.

Libel of Fitz-Harris.

Then was read the Account of Fitz-Harris, and the Libel wrote by him. For the underſtanding of which Matter, it muſt be obſerv'd, that this Fitz-Harris was the Son of Sir Edward Fitz-Harris, an Iriſh Papiſt, and conſequently a fit Tool to ridicule the Popiſh Plot; With this Deſign he became a Correſpondent with the Dutcheſs of Portſmouth, her Woman Mrs. Wall, and the French Ambaſſador's Confeſſor, from whom he had receiv'd ſeveral Sums of Money: And having been acquainted with one Everard beyond Sea, when they were both in the French King's Service, he did about the beginning of February, after the Parliament was diſſolv'd, renew his ſaid Acquaintance with Everard, and repreſented to him the Advantages he might have, by ingratiating himſelf into the French and Popiſh Intereſt; and that for this purpoſe, it would be proper to draw up a ſharp Libel upon the King, and his Adminiſtration, and then charge the ſaid Libel among the Non-conformiſts, as a Deſign of theirs to raiſe a Rebellion, and ſubvert the Government. The Inſtructions that Fitz-Harris gave to Everard for the Subject-matter of this Libel, were to this effect; "That the King and Royal Family ſhould be "traduc'd, as being Papiſts, and arbitrarily affected "from the beginning: That King Charles I. had "an Hand in the Iriſh Rebellion; and that Charles "II. did countenance the ſame, by preferring Fitz-"Gerald, Fitz-Patrick, and Mount-Garret, who "were engaged in the Iriſh Rebellion. That the "Act forbidding to call the King a Papiſt, was to "ſtop Mens Mouths, when he ſhould incline to fur-"ther Popery; which appear'd by his adhering ſo "cloſely to the Duke of York's Intereſts, and hin-"der'd him from being proceeded againſt by the "Parliament; and hindring the Officers put in by "the Duke of York, to be turn'd out; and for that "the Privy-Councellors and Juſtices of Peace, who "were for the Proteſtant Intereſt, were turn'd out "of all Places of Truſt: That it was as much in the "Power of the People to depoſe a Popiſh Poſſeſſor, "as a Popiſh Succeſſor; and ſeeing there was no "hopes the Parliament, when they met at Oxford, "could do any good, the People were bound to pro-"vide for themſelves." This was drawn up into a traiterous Paper, or Libel, to [illegible] call'd, The True Engliſhman ſpeaking plain Engl[illegible] In a Letter from a Friend to a Friend. It was [illegible]e fix'd upon the Proteſtant Diſſenters, and to b[illegible]pers'd by the Penny-Poſt to the proteſting Lor[illegible] and leading Men in the

1681. 33 Car. II.

the Houſe of Commons, who were immediately thereupon to be taken up and ſearch'd. Everard affirm'd the Court had an hand in it, and that the King had given Fitz-Harris Money, and wou'd give him more, if it had Succeſs. And this is ſo much the more to be credited, ſince the King himſelf told Sheriff Corniſh, That Fitz-Harris had, three Months before his apprehenſion, been with him, and acquainted him he was in purſuit of a Plot, which very much related to his Majeſty's Perſon, and the Government, &c. And that upon Sir William Waller's acquainting the King with the particulars he had taken, while he was conceal'd, as aforeſaid; tho' he thank'd him for it, and commanded Secretary Jenkins to iſſue out a Warrant for the apprehenſion of Fitz-Harris, and that Sir William ſhould take care of the execution of it; yet he was no ſooner gone, but Sir William ſaid, He was inform'd by two worthy Gentlemen, That the King was highly offended with him, ſaying, He had broken all his Meaſures; and that he wou'd, one way or other, have him taken off. Fitz-Harris, however, was ſoon after taken and committed to Newgate; where being examin'd by Sir Robert Clayton and Sheriff Corniſh, he diſcover'd a diſpoſition, and at length a willingneſs to diſcover the whole Deſign the next Day after. But to prevent it, in all appearance, he was that Day remov'd into the Tower. The Commons thought that all this look'd ſo much like a Trick, and a continuation of the Popiſh Plot, that they reſolv'd to impeach the ſaid Edward Fitz-Harris of High-Treaſon, and appointed Sir Leoline Jenkins to carry up the Impeachment to the Houſe of Lords; who at firſt refus'd it, and ſaid, The ſending him upon that Meſſage, reflected upon the King his Maſter, and let them do what they would to him, he would not go: But being threatned by the Houſe, and better adviſ'd by his Friends, he ſaid at laſt, He was ready to obey the Order of the Houſe, and was ſorry his Words had given Offence.

Impeachment of Fitz-Harris.

Expedients to prevent a Bill of Excluſion.

On Saturday, March 26. they fell upon debating of ſome Expedient to ſecure the Proteſtant Religion, and the King's Life, without the Bill for excluding the Duke. Sir J. E. propos'd a Regency for the next Heir, leaving him the Name of a King, but not the Power. This was ſpoke againſt as a dangerous and impracticable thing; and the Houſe came readily into a Reſolution "That there was no Re-"medy to ſave Religion, and the Government, but "excluding the Duke of York, and all other Popiſh "Succeſſors." In the Afternoon an Account was brought to the Houſe, That the Lords had thrown out the Impeachment of Fitz-Harris, and had directed that he ſhould be proſecuted at Common-Law. This incens'd the Commons to a high degree, and carry'd them into a Vote, "That this "refuſal of the Lords was a denial of Juſtice, a vio-"lation of the Conſtitutions of Parliaments, and an "obſtruction to the further diſcovery of the Popiſh "Plot." They further Reſolved, "That if any "Judge, Juſtice, or Jury, or any inferior Court, "ſhall proceed againſt Edward Fitz-Harris, or any "other Perſon impeach'd in Parliament for the ſame "Crimes for which he [a] or they ſtand impeach'd, "it is a high Breach of the Privilege of Parlia-"ment.

The Lords throw out the Impeachment of Fitz-Harris.

The Commons offended.

On Monday, March 28. the Bill for excluding the Duke of York, was read the firſt time, and order'd a ſecond Reading; and they were reſuming the Debate about Fitz-Harris, when on a ſudden the Uſher of the Black-Rod commanded their attendance in the Houſe of Lords; whither they immediately went: And the King being there in his Robes, told them, "He perceiv'd there were great "Heats between the Lords and the Commons; "and their beginnings had been ſuch, as he could "expect no good Succeſs of this [b] Parliament, and "therefore thought fit to diſſolve them:" And accordingly the Lord-Chancellor declared the Parliament diſſolved.

1681. 33 Car. II.

The Parliament diſſolv'd.

The King immediately took Coach, and drove in great haſte to Windſor, where he lay that Night, and the next Morning he poſted away to Whitehall, ſeeming there extremely pleas'd that he had made his Eſcape, as it were, from Oxford, and had got a deliverance from his Parliament. On April 3. Fitz-Harris was Arraign'd at the King's-Bench-Bar, where he three times refus'd to hold up his Hand, inſiſting upon his being impeach'd in Parliament, and therefore that he ought not to be Try'd by any inferior Court. The Court aſſign'd him for Councel Sir Francis Winnington, Mr. Williams, Mr. Pollixfen, and Mr. Wallop, to argue his Plea againſt the Judicature of the Court; and on Wedneſday the 4th of May the Priſoner was again brought to the Bar, and his Councel attended, where the King's Attorney-General, Sir Robert Sawyer, enter'd a Demurrer to the Priſoner's Plea, and inſiſted chiefly upon the manifeſt defect of Forms, becauſe the Plea runs, That the ſaid Fitz-Harris was impeach'd at the late Parliament in Oxford, de alta Proditione, but does not ſay of what ſort or manner of Treaſon; nor did it ſet forth the Impeachment at large, which a Plea ought to do, when it is againſt the Juriſdiction of the Court. The Priſoner's Councel mov'd for farther time; which was given them till Saturday Morning, when the Matter was largely and learnedly debated on both Sides: The King's Council, and alſo the Court, declaring, That they meddled not at all with the Privilege of the Houſe of Commons, or the Juriſdiction of the Lords in Parliament, which was not the Queſtion, but only as to the Form of the Plea. After the Debates were ended, the Court took time to conſider, before they would proceed to Judgment. The 11th of May the Court ſate again; the Plea was over-rul'd; the Priſoner pleaded Not Guilty; and alledging, that a material Witneſs for him was abſent in Holland, his Tryal was put off till the 9th of June. On June the 8th Dr. Oliver Plunket, titular Archbiſhop of Dublin, was Try'd at the King's-Bench-Bar, for High-Treaſon. The Evidence againſt him were all profeſs'd Papiſts, and came out of Ireland. The chief Matters ſworn againſt him were, That he was made [c] Primate of Ireland by the Pope, at the French King's Recommendation; had actually levy'd great Sums of Money among his Clergy, to introduce the French Dominion into that Kingdom, and to exterminate the Proteſtants; and upon Evidence of this was found Guilty. The next Day Fitz-Harris was Try'd at the ſame Bar: The chief Evidences againſt him were, Sir William Waller, and Everard, upon whoſe Teſtimonies he was found guilty of High-Treaſon, and on the firſt of July they were both executed at Tyburn. Preſently after his Tryal Mrs. Fitz-Harris, the Priſoner's Wife, accuſed the Lord Howard of Eſcrick, for contriving that Treaſonable Libel for which her Husband was condemn'd. Upon which that Lord was committed to the Tower; and ſo was Rouſe, Hains, White, and Colledge, commonly call'd the Proteſtant Joiner.

The King pleas'd that he had got ſafe from Oxford.

Arraignment of Fitz-Harris.

His Tryal.

Oliver Plunket Try'd and Condemn'd.

Plunket and Fitz-Harris executed.

The diſſolution of two Parliaments, eſpecially of the laſt, in ſo abrupt a manner, raiſed up a general Spirit of diſcontent and diſtruſt in the Body of [a] See the effect of [illegible]e Speech of Sir Robert Clayton, one of the Citizens of [illegible]don, moving for a Bill of Excluſion, March 27. ſeconde[illegible] William Lord Ruſſel, &c. Memoirs 1712. 8*vo*. p. 252.

[b] See the Debates [illegible] House of Commons aſſembled at Oxford March 21. 1680. to Monday March 28. 1681. Printed for R. Baldwin 1681. Fol.

[c] See the laſt Speech of Mr. Oliver Plunket, titular Primate of Ireland, who was executed at Tyburn on Friday 1. July, 1681. Written with his own Hand. Printed by N. Thompſon 1681.

1681. 33 Car. II.

the People of England. This made the King deſcend to an Apology for himſelf, in an Appeal to the World, by a Royal Declaration of the Cauſes and Reaſons that moved his Majeſty to diſſolve the two laſt Parliaments. And on April 8. 1681. it was Ordered by his Majeſty in Council, That the ſaid Declaration be forthwith printed and publiſh'd, and read in all Churches and Chapels throughout this Kingdom. The Clergy paid a chearful Compliance to the reading of it, [a] and thereby gave Offence to ſome of their Patrons, and to many of the People.

His Majeſty's Declaration to all his loving Subjects, touching the Cauſes and Reaſons that moved him to diſſolve the two laſt Parliaments.

Declaration of Reaſons for diſſolving the two laſt Parliaments.

"IT was with exceeding great Trouble, that we "were brought to the diſſolving of the two "laſt Parliaments, without more Benefit to our "People by the calling of them: But having done "our Part, in giving ſo many Opportunities of pro- "viding for their good, it cannot be juſtly imputed "to us, that the Succeſs hath not anſwer'd our Ex- "pectation.

"We cannot at this time but take Notice of the "particular Cauſes of our diſſatisfaction, which at "the beginning of the laſt Parliament we did re- "commend to their Care to avoid, and expected "we ſhould have had no new Cauſe to remember "them.

"We open'd the laſt Parliament, which was "held at Weſtminſter, with as gracious Expreſſions "of our readineſs to ſatiſfie the Deſires of our good "Subjects, and to ſecure them againſt all their juſt "Fears, as the weighty Conſideration, either of "preſerving the eſtabliſh'd Religion, and the Li- "berty and Property of our Subjects at home, or "of ſupporting our Neighbours and Allies abroad, "could fill our Hearts with, or poſſibly require "from us.

"And we do ſolemnly declare, That we did in- "tend, as far as would have conſiſted with the "very Being of the Government, to have comply'd "with any thing that could have been propos'd to "us, to accompliſh thoſe Ends.

"We ask'd of them the ſupporting the Alliances "we had made for the Preſervation of the general "Peace in Chriſtendom; we recommended to "them the further Examination of the Plot; we "deſir'd their Advice and Aſſiſtance concerning the "Preſervation of Tangier; we offer'd to concur in "any Remedies that could be propos'd for the Se- "curity of the Proteſtant Religion, that might con- "ſiſt with preſerving of the Succeſſion of the "Crown in its due and legal courſe of deſcent. To "all which we met with moſt unſuitable Returns "from the Houſe of Commons: Addreſſes, in the "nature of Remonſtrances, rather than of Anſwers; "Arbitrary Orders for taking our Subjects into Cu- "ſtody, for Matters that had no relation to Privi- "leges of Parliament; ſtrange illegal Votes, de- "claring divers eminent Perſons to be Enemies to "the King and Kingdom, without any Order or "Proceſs of Law, any hearing of their Defence, "or any Proof ſo much as offer'd againſt them.

"Beſides theſe Proceedings they Voted as follow- "eth, on the 7th of January laſt.

"Reſolved, That whoſoever ſhall lend, or cauſe to "be lent, by way of advance, any Money upon the "Branches of the King's Revenue, ariſing by Cuſtoms, "Exciſe, or Hearth-Money, ſhall be adjudged to hin- "der the ſitting of Parliaments, and ſhall be reſponſi- "ble for the ſame in Parliament.

"Reſolved, That whoſoever ſhall buy any Tally, "or Anticipation, upon any part of the King's Reve- "nue; or whoſoever ſhall pay any ſuch Tally hereafter "to be ſtruck, ſhall be adjudged to hinder the ſitting of "Parliaments, and ſhall be reſponſible for the ſame in "Parliament.

"Which Votes, inſtead of giving us Aſſiſt- "ance to ſupport our Allies, or enable us to pre- "ſerve Tangier, tended rather to diſable us from "contributing towards either, by our own Reve- "nue or Credit; not only expoſing us to all "Dangers that might happen either at home or "abroad, but endeavouring to deprive us of the "poſſibility of ſupporting the Government it ſelf, "and to reduce us to a more helpleſs Condition "than the meaneſt of our Subjects.

"And on the 10th of the ſame Month they paſs'd "another Vote, in theſe Words:

"Reſolved, That it is the Opinion of this Houſe, "That the proſecution of Proteſtant Diſſenters upon "the Penal Laws, is at this time grievous to the Sub- "ject, a weakening of the Proteſtant Intereſt, an en- "couragement to Popery, and dangerous to the Peace "of the Kingdom.

"By which Vote, without any regard to the "Laws eſtabliſh'd, they aſſum'd to themſelves a "Power of ſuſpending Acts of Parliament. Where- "as our Judges and Miniſters of Juſtice, neither can, "nor ought, in reverence to the Votes of either "or both the Houſes, break the Oaths they have "taken, for the due and impartial execution of "our Laws; which by Experience hath been "found to be the beſt Support, both of the Pro- "teſtant Intereſt, and of the Peace of the King- "dom.

"Theſe were ſome of the unwarrantable Pro- "ceedings of that Houſe of Commons, which were "the occaſion of our parting with that Parlia- "ment.

"Which we had no ſooner diſſolv'd, but we "caus'd another to be forthwith aſſembled at Ox- "ford; at the opening of which we thought it ne- "ceſſary to give them warning of the Errors of the "former, in hopes to have prevented the like Miſ- "carriages; and we requir'd of them to make the "Laws of the Land their Rule, as we did, and do "reſolve they ſhall be ours. We further added, That "what we had formerly and ſo often declared con- "cerning the Succeſſion, we would not depart "from; but to remove all reaſonable Fears that "might ariſe from the poſſibility of a Popiſh Suc- "ceſſor's coming to the Crown, if means could be "found, that in ſuch a Caſe, the Adminiſtration "of the Government might remain in Proteſtant "Hands, we were ready to hearken to any Expe- "dient, by which the Religion Eſtabliſh'd might "be preſerv'd, and the Monarchy not deſtroy'd.

"But, contrary to our Offers and Expectation, "we ſaw, that no Expedient would be entertain'd, "but that of a total Excluſion, which we had ſo "often declar'd, was a Point, that in our own "Royal Judgment, ſo nearly concern'd us, both "in Honour, Juſtice, and Conſcience, that we "could never conſent to it. In ſhort, we cannot, "after the ſad Experience we have had of the late "Civil Wars, that murder'd our Father (of Bleſ- "ſed Memory,) and ruin'd the Monarchy, conſent "to a Law, that ſhall eſtabliſh another moſt "unnatural War, or at leaſt make it neceſſary "to maintain a ſtanding Force, for the Preſer- "ving the Government, and the Peace of the "Kingdom.

[a] There was a Letter of the King to the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury. —— Our Will and Pleaſure is, that forthwith you give ſuch Directions as have been uſual in like Caſes, or as you ſhall judge moſt expedient and requiſite in this, for the reading of our ſaid Declaration in [illegible]nd every the Churches and Chapels, &c. Given this ele[illegible] of April, 1681. MS. Collect. Lambeth.

"And

1680. 32 Car. II.

"And we have reaſon to believe, by what paſs'd "in the laſt Parliament at Weſtminſter, that if we "could have been brought to give our Conſent to "a Bill of Excluſion; the Intent was not to reſt "there, but to paſs further, and to attempt ſome o-"ther great and important Changes, even in the "preſent.

"The Buſineſs of Fitz-Harris, who was im-"peach'd by the Houſe of Commons of High-"Treaſon, and by the Houſe of Lords referr'd to "the ordinary Courſe of Law, was on the ſudden "carry'd on to that Extremity, by the Votes which "the Commons paſs'd on the 26th of March laſt, "that there was no Poſſibility left of a Reconci-"liation.

"The Votes were theſe:

"Die Sabbati 26 Martii, poſt Meridiem.

"Reſolved, That it is the undoubted Right of the "Commons in Parliament aſſembled to impeach be-"fore the Lords in Parliament any Peer or Commo-"ner for Treaſon, or any other Crime or Miſdemea-"nor; and that the Refuſal of the Lords to proceed "in Parliament upon ſuch Impeachment, is a Denial "of Juſtice, and a Violation of the Conſtitution of "Parliaments.

"Reſolved, That in the Caſe of Edward Fitz-"Harris, who by the Commons hath been impeached "of High Treaſon before the Lords, with a Decla-"ration, That in convenient Time they would bring up "the Articles againſt him, for the Lords to reſolve, "That the ſaid Fitz-Harris ſhould be proceeded with "according to the Courſe of Common-Law, and not "by way of Impeachment at this time, is a Denial of "Juſtice, and a Violation of the Conſtitution of Par-"liaments, and an Obſtruction to the further Diſco-"very of the Popiſh Plot, and of great Danger to "his Majeſty's Perſon, and the Proteſtant Religion.

"Reſolved, That for any inferior Court to pro-"ceed againſt Edward Fitz-Harris, or any other "Perſon lying under an Impeachment in Parliament, "for the ſame Crimes for which he or they ſtand im-"peach'd, is a high Breach of the Privilege of Par-"liament.

"It was a Matter extremely ſenſible to us, to "find an Impeachment made uſe of to delay a Tryal "that we had directed againſt a profeſs'd Papiſt, "charg'd with Treaſons againſt us, of an extraor-"dinary Nature: And certainly the Houſe of Peers "did themſelves Right, in refuſing to give Coun-"tenance to ſuch a Proceeding.

"But when either of the Houſes are ſo far tranſ-"ported, as to vote the Proceedings of the other "to be a Denial of Juſtice, a Violation of the Con-"ſtitution of Parliaments, of Danger to our Perſon "and the Proteſtant Religion, without Conferences "firſt had to examine upon what Grounds ſuch "Proceedings were made, and how far they might "be juſtify'd. This puts the two Houſes out of "capacity of tranſacting Buſineſs together, and "conſequently is the greateſt Violation of the Con-"ſtitution of Parliaments.

"This was the Caſe; and every Day's Continu-"ance being like to produce new Inſtances of fur-"ther Heat and Anger between the two Houſes, to "the Diſappointment of all publick Ends for which "they were call'd, we found it neceſſary to put an "End to this Parliament likewiſe.

"But notwithſtanding all this, let not the reſt-"leſs Malice of ill Men, who are labouring to poi-"ſon our People, ſome out of Fondneſs of their "old beloved Commonwealth Principles, and ſome "out of Anger at their being diſappointed in the "particular Deſigns they had for the Accompliſh-"ment of their own Ambition and Greatneſs, per-"ſuade any of [illegible] good Subjects that we intend to "lay aſide the [illegible] of Parliaments: For we do ſtill

1681. 33 Car. II.

"declare, that no Irregularities in Parliaments ſhall "ever make us out of love with Parliaments, which "we look upon as the beſt Method for healing the "Diſtempers of the Kingdom, and the only Means "to preſerve the Monarchy in that due Credit and "Reſpect which it ought to have both at Home "and Abroad.

"And for this Cauſe we are reſolved, by the "Bleſſing of God, to have frequent Parliaments, "and both in and out of Parliament to uſe our ut-"moſt Endeavours to extirpate Popery, and to re-"dreſs all the Grievances of our good Subjects, and "in all things to govern according to the Laws of "the Kingdom.

"And we hope, that a little Time will ſo far "open the Eyes of all our good Subjects, that our "next Meeting in Parliament ſhall perfect all that "Settlement and Peace which ſhall be found want-"ing either in Church or State.

"To which, as we ſhall contribute our utmoſt "Endeavours, ſo we aſſure our ſelf, that we ſhall "be aſſiſted therein by the Loyalty and good Affe-"ctions of all thoſe who conſider the Riſe and Pro-"greſs of the late Troubles and Confuſions, and "deſire to preſerve their Country from a Relapſe.

"And who cannot but remember, that Religion, "Liberty and Property, were all loſt and gone, "when the Monarchy was ſhaken off, and could "never be reviv'd till that was reſtored.

This Declaration, however ſmooth and fair, was by no means popular. Some thought it nothing but a Torrent of Words: Others had a worſe Opi-nion of it, as a Stretch of Prerogative, and a pro-feſs'd Inſult upon the late Members of both Houſes. Many queſtion'd the Validity of it. Sir William Jones, in his juſt and modeſt Vindication of the two laſt Parliaments, plainly ſays, That though the King did not communicate this Paper to the Council till Friday the 8th of April; yet M. Barillon, the French Ambaſſador, read it over three Days before, and de-manded of a Gentleman there his Opinion of it: Which M. Barillon might the better remember, be-cauſe of the great Liberty the Gentleman took to ridicule it to his Face. Not acceptable to the People.

It is certain that his Majeſty had taken great Offence at the Oxford Parliament for the particular Zeal of the People in many of their Elections, and for the particular Reſpect paid the Members of the City of London, in a great Retinue waiting on them, &c. Of this number of Attendants was one Stephen Colledge, commonly known by the Name of the Proteſtant Joiner, a buſy Man, and a great Zealot againſt Popery, who went down to Oxford, and there ſpoke Words, and recited Rhimes, that were ſaid to reflect upon the King. This Mecha-nick was to be made an Example of meddling with Politicks; ſo an Indictment of High Treaſon was exhibited againſt him to the Grand Jury of Middle-ſex; but the Jury return'd an Ignoramus upon it. For which Mr. Wilmore (the Fore-man) was, out of all Courſe of Law, apprehended and examined before the Council Aug. 16. and ſent to the Tower, and was afterwards forc'd to fly beyond the Seas. When the Deſign had thus miſcarry'd in London, they laid a new Scene againſt this Offender at Ox-ford, where they hoped to find a more pliable Grand Jury: And to make ſure that the Bill might not a ſecond time miſcarry, the Witneſſes were ſent down Poſt to the Aſſizes, and by ſecret Management were privately ſhut up with the Jury till they had found the Bill; which was afterwards complain'd of as an intolerable Practice. As ſoon as the Bill was found againſt him, a Jailer and a Meſſenger were ſent a-way to hurry him down to his Tryal, who, by Or-der of the King's Council, took from him all his Inſtructions for his Defence, and carry'd them to the Council, for them only to make their Uſe and Advantage of 'em. This way of Procedure was thought Case of Mr. Stephen Colledge.

1680. thought to be very harſh and illegal; yet the poor
32 Car. II. Man, under theſe ſevere Circumſtances, was not wanting to himſelf, but ſtoutly made his Defence; and, as Sir John Hawles obſerves upon that Tryal, the beſt Defence, all Circumſtances conſider'd, that ever Man made for his Life [a]. But indeed it ſeem'd to be a Matter reſolv'd upon Above, He muſt die; and ſo he was, Aug. 18. found guilty of High Treaſon, and on the 31ſt of the ſame Month executed in the Caſtle-Yard.

Caſe of the Earl of Shaftſbury.

It was propoſed to make an Example of a Peer, as well as of a poor Commoner. My Lord Shaftſbury was a Perſon moſt odious to the Court, and the more ſo, becauſe his Lordſhip (with ſeveral other Peers) had entred a Proteſtation againſt the Lords rejecting the Impeachment of Fitz-Harris; and upon the Diſſolution of the Parliament, return'd immediately to London, as if he intended there to influence the City againſt the Court. Soon after his Return, one Bryan Hans came to him, and aſſur'd him, he could give great Light in the Matter of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfry's Murder [b], if he might have his Pardon. The Earl endeavoured to get one, but it could not be obtained. Hans being taken and carry'd before the Council, hoped to get Favour, by accuſing the Earl of attempting to ſuborn him to do it; and on the Information of this Iriſh Evidence, the Lord Shaftsbury was apprehended at his Houſe in Alderſgate-ſtreet, and on the 2d of July committed to the Tower for High Treaſon; and Capt. Wilkinſon, who had waited on the Earl to Oxford (among other Friends and Followers) was now tempted to charge this upon his Lordſhip, as a Deſign of Sedition and Treaſon: But Wilkinſon, tho' a Priſoner for Debt in the King's-Bench, reſiſted all their Temptations and Offers, and would not be drawn in to be an Evidence. The Earl, after his Commitment, preſented ſeveral Petitions for a Tryal, or Bail, according to the Habeas Corpus Act; but he could not be heard till November 24. and then a Bill of High Treaſon was preferred to the Grand-Jury at the Seſſions-Houſe in the Old-Bailey. Mr. Blaithwate and Mr. Guynne ſwore, that the Papers produced in Court were taken in the Lord Shaftſbury's Houſe: And Sir Leoline Jenkins depoſed, that one of them, which was a Project of an Aſſociation, was the ſame Paper, unalter'd, that Mr. Blaithwate gave him. But this Writing (ſaith Sir John Hawles) was no manner of Evidence of Treaſon, admitting what the Witneſſes ſwore, as to the finding of it, to be true; becauſe it was not proved that it was compos'd or proſecuted by the Earl of Shaftsbury, or by his Order. Two Macknamarra's and one Booth, ſwore that Capt. Wilkinſon was to have been Captain of a Troop of Horſe in the Army which the Lord Shaftsbury was to raiſe. One Turbervile ſwore, that the Lord Shaftsbury ſaid about February laſt, that there was little Good to be done to the King as long as his Guards were about him. One Smith gave Evidence, that the Earl ſhould ſay, If the King ſhould offer any Violence to the Parliament at Oxford, he would meet with a ſtrong Oppoſition. And one Haynes ſwore to theſe Words ſpoken by the Earl [c], The Duke of Buckingham has as much Right to the Crown as any Stewart in England. But the Jury (of whom Sir Samuel Bernardiſton was Fore-man) conſider'd of the Depoſitions of Capt. Wilkinſon, made before the King, giving a large Account of the Intrigue carry'd on by Booth, to engage him to be an Evidence againſt the Earl; and knew Booth to be a Fellow of infamous Character, who had been condemn'd for Clipping and Coining: Nor had they reaſon to believe any thing ſaid by Turbervile, Smith, or Haynes; and there was ſo much of their Falſhoods and of their Deſigns to perjure themſelves, prov'd againſt them in Colledge's Tryal, that they therefore brought in an Ignoramus. Upon which Sir John Hawles makes this Remark; The Grand-Jury (though ſome of them afterwards ſmarted for it, upon other Pretences) did like honeſt, underſtanding Gentlemen: And had they done otherwiſe, to avoid the Ignominy of being call'd (though in truth it was an Honour to be) an Ignoramus-Jury, they had juſtly deſerv'd the Reproach which ſince has lighted on other Juries, ſuch as Mr. Corniſh's, and the like. The People were generally ſo well ſatisfy'd, that the Spite of the Papiſts was grounded on the Lord Shaftsbury's apparent Zeal for the Religion and Liberties, that they publickly rejoyced in his Deliverance, and made Bonfires that Evening in ſeveral Parts of the City. Graham (who was the Solicitor againſt him, and had managed the Iriſh Evidence) had much a-doe to eſcape the Fury of the Multitude; and the Judges (as they themſelves confeſs'd in Graham's Tryal) were affronted as they ſate on the Bench. The Earl being clear'd by the Grand-Jury, mov'd to be diſcharg'd, but could not obtain it till the End of the next Term. When he was at Liberty, he proſecuted Graham and his Accuſers, as his Declaration ſets forth, for conſpiring to indict him of High Treaſon, for which they ſolicited Wilkinſon to give Falſe-Teſtimony againſt the ſaid Earl, &c. The Defendants mov'd that they might not be try'd in London, becauſe the Sheriffs, Mr. Pilkington and Mr. Shute, were the Lord Shaftſbury's Friends. The Judges allow'd their Plea; but the Earl would not try his Cauſe elſewhere.

In the mean time, by the Encouragement and

[a] See the Speech and Carriage of Stephen Colledge at Oxford, before the Caſtle, on Wedneſday Aug. 31, 1681. taken exactly from his own Mouth at the Place of Execution. London, 1681. Fol. —— I was ever a Proteſtant; I was born ſo; I have lived ſo, and ſo, by the Grace of God, I will die of the Church of England. —— I know of no Plot in the World but the Popiſh Plot, &c.

[b] There is a Printed Sheet, entitul'd A Brief Account of the Deſigns which the Papiſts have had againſt the Earl of Shaftſbury, occaſioned by his Commitment July 2, 1681. grievouſly complaining of the Court and Clergy. —— And conceiving the Eccleſiaſticks in a more implicite Obedience to them, and that they have leſs Honour to loſe than others, they muſter'd up as much as they could the whole Poſſe of the Clergy to reproach and defame him. And as if it had been of more Conſequence to ſink and eclipſe the Credit of this Peer, than to gain or convert Souls to God, the Pulpits, inſtead of commending Jeſus Chriſt to the Conſciences of Men, were employ'd thro' all Parts of the Nation in blaſting the Earl of Shaftſbury.

[c] The Reverend Mr. Sam. Johnſon writes thus in his Notes on the Paſtoral Letter. A noble Peer, who was very much out at Court, not for the Court Drudgery he had done, but becauſe he would do no more, tho' of Courſe he was very ungratefully loaded by themſelves for what he had done, was now accus'd by the ſuborn'd perjur'd Iriſh Court Witneſſes of an Oxford Plot. —— In ſhort, there never was more foul Play from the Beginning of the World, than was in the Proſecution of my Lord Shaftſbury for an Oxford Plot, and in the Practice of Subornation upon Capt. Wilkinſon, to put a Force upon him to ſwear againſt that Lord, and in the Conſequence of it againſt a vaſt number of the beſt Men in England. For the Captain was brought to a Dilemma, and was plac'd juſt in the midſt betwixt Chancellor Finch's two ſorts of Advancement, which with as much Wit as Honeſty he put the Captain in mind of at that Time: For he was either to accept of a great Sum of Money, or the Duke of York's five hundred Pounds a Year Land, to ſwear againſt my Lord Shaftſbury, or elſe to be hang'd himſelf before my Lord Shaftſbury, with which Chancellor Finch threatned him: But the brave old Soldier was Proof againſt both, for he abhorr'd the Wages of Unrighteouſneſs and the Price of Blood.

[c] The Reverend Mr. Samuel Johnſon wrote thus of him in his Notes on the Paſtoral Letter. "I have not forgot my "Preacher, who ſaid, that Judgment began at the Houſe of "God when the Biſhops were in the Tower: Whereas I know "that it began at the Houſe of God when Stephen Colledge was "murder'd, who ſuffered more for the Proteſtant Religion "and his Country, than all the Biſhops either in or out of the "Tower, and than the whole Clergy of England put toge"ther, and left a Dying-Speech, which outweighs their "Sermons. —— And yet when he was ſent down to the Oxford "Slaughter-Houſe to be deſtroyed, becauſe it could not be "done here at London, I remember ſeveral of the Clergy "play'd with his Death, and were very much pleas'd that "they had one Colledge more in their Univerſity.

Solicitations

1681. 33 Car. II.

Solicitations of the Court, a multitude of Addreſſes were brought up to the King, to thank him for his late Declaration, and for his maintaining the Succeſſion in the right Line; with ſome Complements and Flouriſhes, that gave no Reputation to this new way of Addreſſing, when it did not ſo much prove the Affections of the People, as it really betray'd the Inclinations of the Court.

The Duke of York was all this while in Scotland as his Majeſty's High-Commiſſioner, and found there an obſequious Parliament, who being firſt amuſed with An Act ratifying all former Laws for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion; fell readily into another Act, acknowledging and aſſerting the Right of Succeſſion to the Imperial Crown of Scotland, wherein they declare, That no difference in Religion, nor no Law, nor Act of Parliament made or to be made, can alter or divert the Right of Succeſſion and Lineal Deſcent of the Crown to the neareſt and lawful Heirs. After which, they made another Act for a Standing Army, under the Title of An Act for continuing the Supply for the maintaining his Majeſty's additional Standing Forces for five Years longer: And concluded with another Act for ſecuring the Proteſtant Religion againſt Popery and Fanaticiſm. The Earl of Argyle mov'd in Parliament for a Security againſt a Popiſh Succeſſor; for which he could not be forgiven. He was immediately committed, and ſoon after proſecuted, under a pretence of having put his own Senſe and Interpretation upon the Teſt when he took it; and he was upon this trivial Account found guilty of High Treaſon, and muſt have then ſuffer'd, if he had not made a ſhift to eſcape his Deſtiny at that time, by exchanging Cloaths with his Daughter, and ſo getting privately out of Edinburgh-Caſtle, and flying beyond the Seas, from whence he return'd too ſoon, and brought back his own Deſtruction with him.

Caſe of the Earl of Argyle.

Honours and Preferments.

As to Honours and Preferments: On April 7. Charles Duke of Richmond was elected a Knight-Companion of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, in a Chapter held at Whitehall, and was inſtalled with uſual Ceremonies on April 18. At the Beginning of Eaſter-Term his Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute Sir Francis Pemberton, Kt. Lord-Chief-Juſtice of the Court of King's-Bench; who having received his Commiſſion, and taken the Oaths, was on April 13. brought by the Lord-Chancellor to pay his Duty to his Majeſty, by whom he was moſt graciouſly receiv'd, ſuitable to the Opinion his Majeſty had of his great Integrity, Loyalty, and Knowledge of the Laws. On April 19. his Majeſty having appointed Thomas Dereham Eſq; to be his Reſident at the Court of the Great Duke of Tuſcany, was pleas'd to confer upon him the Honour of Knighthood. On April 27. his Majeſty was pleaſed, in conſideration of the faithful Services perform'd by the Right Honourable Lawrence Hyde Eſq; firſt Commiſſioner of his Majeſty's Treaſury, in that and other Employments of eminent Truſts, to create him Viſcount Hyde of Kennelworth, and Baron of Wooton-Baſſet. On May 14. his Majeſty was graciouſly pleas'd to confer upon the Right Honourable Heneage Lord Finch, Lord-Chancellor of England (as a Mark of the great Satisfaction his Majeſty had in the many faithful Services which his Lordſhip had rendred the Crown) the Honour and Dignity of an Earl of this Kingdom, by creating him Earl of Nottingham. In July his Majeſty being deſirous to place a laſting Mark of his Eſteem upon the Family of Sir George Carteret Kt. and Bart. late Vice-Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, as well for the long and loyal Services of the ſaid Sir George at Home and Abroad, as for the Merit of his Son Sir Philip Carteret, who loſt his Life in [illegible] Majeſty's Service at Sea, was graciouſly pleas'd [illegible] create Sir George Carteret Bart. (eldeſt Son to the [illegible] Sir Philip, and Grandſon and Heir of the afore[illegible] Sir George) a Baron of England, by the Name of Baron Carteret of Hawnes in the County of Bedford. On Aug 3. his Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Chriſtopher Buckle of Surrey Eſq;. Sir Samuel Morland had invented an Engine, which, with the Strength of eight Men, would force the Water in a continual Stream, at the rate of above ſixty Barrels an Hour, from the River Thames up to the Top of Windſor-Caſtle, and from thence into the Air above ſixty Foot high. This Experiment often repeated, gave ſo much Pleaſure and Admiration to the King, that on Auguſt 14. he ſent for Sir Samuel Morland, and in the Preſence of Prince Rupert, and many of the Nobility, declar'd, that he was highly ſatisfy'd with all the late Experiments and extraordinary Effects of Sir Samuel's New Water-Engine; and therefore, as an Earneſt of his particular Grace and Favour, gave him with his own Royal Hand, and commanded him to wear it on his Breaſt, as a Mark of Honour, during his Life, a fair Medal of Gold, faſten'd to a Green Ribbon; on the one Side of which Medal was his Majeſty's Effigies, ſet round with Diamonds of a conſiderable Value; and on the other Side the following Inſcription, CAROLO II°. Magnæ Britanniæ, Franciæ, & Hiberniæ, Regi, Samuel Morlandus Eques Auratus & Baronettus, Magiſter Mechanicorum, In rebus adverſis ſummo vitæ periculo, In proſperis fœlici Ingenio frequens adfuit. After which, the Lord-Chamberlain (by his Majeſty's Order) cauſed him to be ſworn Maſter of the Mechanicks, and the Inſcription on the Medal to be regiſter'd in the great Parchment Roll of the Office. On Septemb. 6. his Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on George Raynsford of Lincolns-Inn Eſq; Son to the late Lord-Chief-Juſtice Raynsford.

Election of Sheriffs for London and Middleſex.

Upon Occaſion of the Ignoramus-Juries, the Court-Party concern'd themſelves extremely much in the Election of new Sheriffs: But the Citizens, who thought their Liberties and Lives did depend upon it, choſe Mr. Pilkington and Mr. Shute, by a very great Majority. The King was reſolved to expreſs his Diſpleaſure at it; and therefore, when on Octob. 13. Sir George Treby Recorder, and theſe two Sheriffs, were ſent to invite his Majeſty, in the Name of the City, to do them the Honour of Dining at Guild-Hall on the 28th: His Majeſty gave them this Rebuke; Mr. Recorder, An Invitation from my Lord-Mayor and the City is very acceptable to Me; and to ſhew that it is ſo, notwithſtanding that it is brought by Meſſengers that are ſo unwelcome to me as theſe two Sheriffs are, yet I accept it. His Majeſty had before condeſcended to a meaner thing, by diſtinguiſhing the loyal Apprentices of London, and giving a Brace of Bucks for a Dinner at Sadlers-Hall on Auguſt 4. and ſending many of his principal Courtiers to Dine with them, and directing his Son, the Duke of Grafton, to be one of the Stewards for another Year: All which was thought no leſs than to encourage Servants to oppoſe their Maſters.

Honours and Preferments.

On November 6. his Majeſty Knighted Major George Vernon of Farnham in the County of Surrey, for the Loyalty and Affection with which he had on all Occaſions promoted the Service of his Majeſty. On Decemb. 30. his Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute his Grace the Duke of Grafton Colonel of his firſt Regiment of Foot-Guards, in the room of Colonel Ruſſel, who had, with his Majeſty's Leave, reſigned that Command. On March 3. George Legg Eſq; Maſter-General of the Ordnance, was ſworn of his Majeſty's Privy-Council. On March 16. his Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on John Knight Eſq; one of the Sheriffs of Briſtol, and was pleas'd to declare, that it was in conſideration of his known Loyalty, and conſtant Adherence to the Church of England, and Intereſt of the Crown.

Lady Anne goes to Scotland.

The Lady Anne, in a dutiful Reſpect to her Father,

1681. 33 Car. II.

ther, paid him a Viſit this Summer in Scotland, going by Sea, and attended by three of his Majeſty's Yachts, and arriv'd ſafe in Scotland on July 19. The Prince of Orange came over to make another Viſit to the Engliſh Court; and Landing at Margate, came Poſt to Whitehall on July 23. and having Din'd with Sir Stephen Fox, went that Night to Windſor; and after ſome Diverſions, went back to Harwich on Friday Aug. 5. to imbark there for Holland.

Duke of York returns.

The Duke of York return'd from Scotland in one of his Majeſty's Yachts, and Landed at Yarmouth on March 10, and went that Night to Norwich, where his Reception was contriv'd to be with great Demonſtrations of Joy. The Picture of his Royal Highneſs in Guildhall had been cut and defaced by ſome unknown Hand: The Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, to take off the Imputation from the City, by a ſolemn Order, dated Jan. 27. declared their Abhorrence of this Indignity, which, they ſay, cannot be underſtood otherwiſe than an effect of Malice againſt the Perſon of his Royal Highneſs; and therefore, out of a juſt and due Regard to the Honour of his Royal Highneſs, and their deep Reſentment of that inſolent and villainous Act, they offer a Reward of five hundred Pounds for finding out the Author of it.

Murther of Thomas Thynne Eſq;

On Sunday, Febr. 12. between ſeven and eight at Night, a barbarous Aſſaſſination was committed upon the Perſon of Thomas Thynne, Eſq; who paſſing the Pall-Mall in his Coach, was ſet upon by three Men on Horſe-back, one of which diſcharg'd a Muſquetoon into the Coach, and mortally wounded him, four Bullets entring his Body; and having perform'd this piece of Villany, made their eſcape. His Majeſty having been inform'd of what had happen'd, was pleas'd to give immediate Orders for the ſtopping all Perſons that could not give a good Account of themſelves in the ſeveral Ports; and for the making diligent ſearch here in Town, in order to the diſcovering the Aſſaſſines. The diligence of thoſe that made the Search, was ſo ſucceſsful, that upon ſome Information that was given them, they traced the Murtherers to their ſeveral Lodgings, and there apprehended them, and brought them on Monday Morning before the Council, (which was extraordinarily aſſembled for that purpoſe:) The chief of them being call'd in, readily confeſs'd the whole Fact, ſaid his Name was Vratz, that he was a German, and a Captain of Foot; that he had accompany'd Count Charles-John Coningſmark in his Travels, and came with him into England; that the Friendſhip and Acquaintance he had with him, and the Favours he had received from his Family, had made him take very much to Heart the Affronts which Mr. Thynne had put upon the Count, by his Diſcourſes and otherwiſe, and therefore reſolv'd to take Satisfaction of him; and being inform'd on Sunday, that Mr. Thynne was was gone abroad in his Coach, he took Horſe, with a Friend, and Servant of his own, who was provided with a Muſquetoon, being themſelves armed with Swords and Piſtols: That meeting Mr. Thynne's Coach in the Pall-Mall, he rode up to it, and bid the Coachman Stand, intending to fight Mr. Thynne; but that his Servant, who was a Polander, not rightly apprehending what he ſaid, diſcharg'd his Muſquetoon upon Mr. Thynne; whereupon they made their eſcape. Mr. Thynne died on Monday about ſix in the Morning. On Sunday, Feb. 19, about eight at Night, Count Charles-John Coningſmark was taken as he landed at Graveſend in a Diſguiſe, intending to imbark on a Veſſel that was going out: He was next Morning brought to Town and Examin'd before his Majeſty in Council, who referr'd the Matter to the Lord-Chief-Juſtice, and his Lordſhip committed him Priſoner to Newgate, in order to his Tryal, at which he was with great difficulty acquitted of the Murther; while the other Actors, Captain Vratz, John Sterne, and George Borotski, were, according to a Sentence paſs'd on them at the Old-Bailey, executed on March 10. in the Pall-Mall, where they committed that barbarous Fact; and the Body of George Borotski (whoſe Hand did the Murther) was by his Majeſty's Command to be hung up in Chains.

Count Coningſmark acquitted.

State of Religion.

In Matters of Religion, great Offence had been taken at a new Expoſition of the Lord's Prayer, the Creed, and the Ten Commandments, written and publiſh'd by Mr. Thomas Aſhenden, Rector of Dingley in the County of Northampton, who was thereupon conven'd, and cenſur'd by his Ordinary; and on Sunday, June 5. he did publickly in the Cathedral-Church of Peterborough make this Recantation, at the time of Divine-Service, being enjoin'd thereto by the Right Reverend William Lord Biſhop of Peterborough, who was preſent, together with the Reverend Dean Dr. Patrick, ſome of the Prebendaries, and ſeveral Perſons of Quality.

Recantation of Mr. Tho. Aſhenden.

I Thomas Aſhenden, being deeply ſenſible of the foul Diſhonour I have done to our moſt Holy Religion, and the great Scandal I have given, by a late prophane Abuſe of the Lord's-Prayer, the Creed, and the Ten Commandments, which I wrote, and cauſed to be publiſh'd; do here, in the Preſence of God, and of his Miniſters, and of this Congregation, moſt heartily bewail with unfeigned Sorrow both that notorious Offence, and alſo all my other Sins which betray'd me unto it; moſt humbly begging Forgiveneſs of God, and of his Church, whoſe heavieſt Cenſures I have juſtly deſerved. And as I earneſtly deſire that none of my Brethren (much leſs our Holy Function, or the Church) may be the worſe thought of by any, by reaſon of my Miſcarriages; ſo I do faithfully promiſe, by God's Grace, to endeavour to behave my ſelf hereafter ſo religiouſly in my Place and Calling, that I may not be any more a Diſcredit to them. In which Reſolution that I may perſiſt, I beg and implore the Aſſiſtance of all your Prayers; and deſire withal, that this my Retractation, and ſincere Profeſſion of Repentance, may be made as publick as my Crimes have been, that none may be tempted hereafter to do Evil by my Example.

Condition of the Diſſenters.

The Diſſenters were now odious to the Court, not as Separatiſts from the Church, but as Enemies to the State, and eſpecially to the Duke's Succeſſion[a]. And the Church-men were more acceptable to the King, not as Members of a true Communion, but as the Promoters of Royal Prerogative, and Supporters of the Intereſt of his Royal Highneſs. Under this unhappy Way of diſtinguiſhing Whigs and Tories, the former were ſo much ſuſpected by the Government, that it would not truſt them upon common Juries, becauſe of the late Returns of Ignoramus, which they thought chiefly owing to that Party. Upon this Account, a very ſtrange

[a] See a Declaration of the Juſtices of Peace at a Quarter-Seſſions for the County of Middleſex, held at Hicks's Hall on Friday Octob. 14. 33. Car. II. 1681. declaring, that all Licenſes ſhall be taken away from the Keepers of Publick Houſes, who ſhall not go to their Pariſh-Church and receive the Sacrament there; and that Church-Wardens, and Overſeers of the Poor ſhall diſpoſe of no Money to thoſe who go to Conventicles; and that fitting Perſons ſhall be appointed to proſecute all Offenders againſt the Statutes of 17. and 22. Car. II. againſt unlawful Conventicles. Printed Sheet.

Another Order of Seſſions for the County of Middleſex, held Dec. 22. 1681. for making a due Return of the Chriſtian and Surnames of Preachers in Conventicles, and the conſiderable Perſons who frequent the ſame. Printed Sheet.

A third Order of Seſſions for the County of Middleſex Jan. 13. 168½. for enforcing a former Order of Dec. 22. laſt paſt, and for deſiring the Biſhop of London that all ſuch Perſons may be excommunicated, who ſhall commit Crimes deſerving that Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure, &c. Printed Sheet.

1681. 33 Car. II.

Act of Partiality happened at the Seſſions at Hicks's-Hall on Aug. 26. as will appear by this Account, tho' given by Authority, to palliate that Matter:

Caſe of a Grand-Jury.

" Whereas a Pannel was return'd by the Sheriff, of " the Number of fifty four Perſons, to ſerve of the " Grand-Jury for this County, very few of which, " if any, were known to the Juſtices of Peace on " the Bench, or the High-Conſtables of the Hun-" dreds, which induced the Juſtices to enquire af-" ter the Perſons ſo returned, and moſt of them " were found to be Diſſenters, who frequented " Conventicles, and ſeldom or never came to " Church: Whereupon the Juſtices thought fit, " according to the Power given to them by the " Statute of 3 Hen. VIII. to command the Sheriff " there preſent to put out ſome of the Pannel, and " put in others in their ſtead; which the Sheriff " refuſing at three ſeveral Commands to do, the " Juſtices, that the Service of the County might " not be obſtructed, did take fifteen of thoſe re-" turn'd by the Sheriff, and ſwore them to ſerve " for the Grand-Jury: But to the Intent they " might make the beſt Diſcovery they could of " the ſaid Perſons ſo ſworn, the Court thought fit " to tender them the Oaths of Allegiance and Su-" premacy, which they all took.

Addreſſes of Abhorrence.

His Majeſty took all Occaſions to expreſs his Satiſfaction in the Loyalty of thoſe Church-men who came with their Addreſſes, abhorring the Aſſociation, and declaring for the unalterable Right of Succeſſion; as particularly Dr. Gower, Maſter of St. John's College, and Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, waited on his Majeſty at New-Market on Septemb. 18. and made a fine Speech in the Name of the Univerſity, of which this was the moſt pleaſing Part: " We will ſtill believe and maintain, " That our Kings derive not their Titles from the " People, but from God; that to him only they " are accountable; that it belongs not to Subjects " either to create or cenſure, but to honour and " obey their Sovereign, who comes to be ſo by a " Fundamental Hereditary Right of Succeſſion, " which no Religion, no Law, no Fault or For-" feiture can alter or diminiſh, &c." To which his Majeſty was pleas'd to anſwer; That he was fully ſatisfy'd of the Loyalty of the Univerſity, and that he did not at all doubt but they would always act according to what they there declared. His Majeſty likewiſe told them, that he would conſtantly own and defend the Church of England as eſtabliſh'd by Law. This he bid them be aſſured of, for he would be as good as his Word, whatever Repreſentation either had or ſhould be made of him to the contrary. Being farther pleas'd to add, that there was no other Church in the World that taught and practis'd Loyalty ſo conſcientiouſly as that did.

French Proteſtants reliev'd.

Upon the Perſecution of the Proteſtants in France, his Majeſty had a good Opportunity of pleaſing his own Proteſtant Subjects, by receiving and encouraging thoſe diſtreſſed Sufferers and Refugees [a]: And therefore on Aug. 28. his Majeſty was pleaſed in Council to declare, That he held himſelf obliged, in Honour and Conſcience, to comfort and ſupport all ſuch afflicted Proteſtants, who by reaſon of the Rigours and Severities uſed toward them, upon account of their Religion, ſhould be forced to quit their native Country, and ſhould deſire to ſhelter themſelves under his Majeſty's Royal Protection, for the Preſervation and free Exerciſe of their Religion. And in order hereunto, his Majeſty was pleas'd farther to declare, That he will grant unto every ſuch diſtreſſed Proteſtant who ſhall come hither for Refuge, and reſide here, his Letters of Denization, under the Great-Seal, without any Charge whatſoever, and will likewiſe recommend it to his Parliament, at their next Meeting, to paſs an Act for the general Naturalization of all ſuch Proteſtants as ſhall come over, as aforeſaid, &c. When a Suſpicion was raiſed, that many of theſe Exiles from France pretending to be Proteſtants, were really French Papiſts, and therefore dangerous Enemies in Diſguiſe: His Majeſty was pleas'd in Council to order, Octob. 19. that this following Advertiſement ſhould be publiſhed.

WHereas ſeveral ſcandalous Reports are daily ſpread abroad, that a great part of thoſe who call themſelves Proteſtants, and are lately come from France, for Protection, into this Kingdom, are Papiſts; whereby many well-diſpoſed People are diſcouraged from contributing to the Relief of thoſe poor Proteſtants who have forſaken their Livelihoods and Country to preſerve a good Conſcience: Theſe are to give Notice, that all Care imaginable is taken by the Miniſters of the French Congregations, both at the Savoy, and in London, that according to his Majeſty's gracious Declaration made in Council on July 28. 1681. none be admitted into either of their Congregations, or receive any Benefit of the ſaid Collections, but ſuch as bring very good and authentick Teſtimonials of their being of the Proteſtant Religion, and of their receiving of the Holy Sacrament. And if any Perſon can detect any of thoſe who pretend to be fled hither for Religion, to be really Papiſts [b]; it is deſired that he give Information thereof to the Lord Biſhop of London, or to the Miniſters of the ſaid French Congregations.

Proſecution of Diſſenters.

But while this Care was taken of Foreign Proteſtants, there was a vigorous Proſecution of the Proteſtant Diſſenters here at Home; which was generally thought a piece of Court-Artifice, to play the Church of England againſt the Diſſenters, and inrage the Diſſenters againſt the Church of England, that they might not unite and ſee their common Danger, but rather, by deſtroying one another, might make room for a third Party, that lay behind the Curtain and watch'd an Opportunity of the Duke's Succeſſion. The King, whoſe Principle and Practice (even againſt the Law) had been to indulge the Diſſenters, was now drawn in to be very ſolicitous for the rigorous Proſecution of them; the Juſtices of Middleſex were very forward to obey the Inſtructions of the Court, by putting the Laws in Execution againſt them, and contriv'd to have his Majeſty's expreſs Command for it: For at the Beginning of December they humbly repreſented to his Majeſty, " That an Intimation " of his Pleaſure was neceſſary at this time, as to " the putting the Laws in Execution againſt Con-" venticles, in regard that when it was lately given " them in Charge at the Council-Board, to put the " Laws in Execution againſt Popiſh Recuſants, " there was no mention made of ſuppreſſing Con-" venticles; and therefore it was pretended that " they were not to be diſturb'd or meddled with:" His Majeſty was pleas'd to take this Occaſion to command the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, and the ſaid Juſtices of the Peace, " To uſe their ut-

[a] There had been an Order of Council July 21, 1681. for referring a Memorial preſented to his Majeſty in behalf of the diſtreſſed Proteſtants [illegible]broad, to the Conſideration of the Lords Committee o[illegible]is Board for Trade and Plantations.

[b] See the King's [illegible]ers Patents for a charitable Collection toward Relief of t[illegible]treſſed Proteſtants of France, whom his Majeſty looks up[illegible] not only as diſtreſſed Strangers, but chiefly as perſecuted [illegible]teſtants; who, by the great Hardſhips and Perſecutions which are brought upon them for the Sake of their Religion, have in great Numbers betaken themſelves unto this our Kingdom, &c. Given at Weſtminſter the 10th of Sept. in the 33d Year of our Reign.

See the ſolemn Thanks of the Miniſters and Church-wardens of the French Congregation in the Savoy to his Majeſty, for his gracious Declaration in favour of the French Proteſtants, dated Octob. 19. 1681. inſerted in the Gazette.

1681. 33 Car. II.

"moſt Endeavours to ſuppreſs all Conventicles, "and unlawful Meetings, upon pretence of religious Worſhip: His Majeſty declaring, It is "his expreſs Pleaſure that the Laws be effectually "put in Execution againſt them, both in City and "Country.

Act of 35 Eliz. turn'd upon Proteſtant Diſſenters.

In theſe Proceedings it was thought the greater Hardſhip, that the Act of 35 Eliz. deſign'd againſt Popiſh Recuſants, which as ſoon as turn'd againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters, had a Bill of Repeal brought in the laſt Weſtminſter Parliament, was now rigorouſly executed [a] upon all manner of Nonconformiſts; which at this time gave a general Diſcontent, and occaſion'd ſome Reflections on the King that were very rude and violent, as particularly on Novemb. 16. Mr. Frederick Harvey was by Warrant of the Lords of his Majeſty's Privy-Council committed Priſoner to Newgate for High Treaſon, he having ſpoken divers treaſonable and dangerous Words againſt his Majeſty and the Government, viz. That his Majeſty's conſenting to the tyrannical Proceedings of convicting Diſſenters, he did not queſtion but would make him (meaning the King's Majeſty) the Head ſhorter; and that he did admire the City did not ſecure him the laſt Lord-Mayor's-Day, when they had him there.

Partiality to Papiſts.

That which made the Diſſenters the more pitied, was, that very great Partiality was ſhewn in protecting the Papiſts from thoſe Penal Laws, which had their Edge altogether turn'd upon the Proteſtant Diſſenters. This Partiality was ſo notorious, that at laſt a publick Complaint was made againſt the Deputy-Clerk of the Peace of the County of Wilts, for favouring certain Papiſts in that County, who were order'd to be proſecuted by the Seſſions, and yet were afterwards by him diſmiſs'd with Indemnity. Upon this formal Complaint, no leſs could be done than to bring up the ſaid Offender, by one of his Majeſty's Meſſengers, to the Council-Board, where (it is ſaid) he receiv'd a ſevere Reprimand; and that it was likewiſe recommended to the Juſtices of the Peace for that County, at their next Quarter-Seſſions, to proceed againſt him for ſuch Miſdemeanors as he ſhould be charged with.

Inſolence of the Papiſts.

This Countenance of the Court made the Papiſts not only ſafe, but extremely inſolent. On March 3. Information was given in Council, "That "on the 2[d] of February laſt the Officers of the "High Sheriff of Lancaſhire having diſtrain'd the "Cattle and other Goods of divers convicted Popiſh Recuſants, living at Altcarr, near Ormeſkerke, in that County, for their Forfeitures, were "in their return with the ſaid Goods riotouſly aſſaulted in the High-way by the ſaid Popiſh Recuſants, and their Abettors; and the Goods not "only reſcued from them, but they beaten and "wounded in ſuch a manner, that the Recovery "of ſome of them was much doubted." Thereupon his Majeſty was pleas'd to [b] order the Judges that go that Circuit, to cauſe ſuch of the ſaid Offenders as are already in Cuſtody to be proceeded againſt for the ſame, according to the utmoſt Severity of the Law, and to endeavour the apprehending of all others concern'd therein, by rewarding the Diſcoverers of them, that ſo they may receive an exemplary Puniſhment.

1682.

Character of the Duke of Monmouth.

The Duke of Monmouth was now to be publickly diſgrac'd, of whom this Character is given by a late Author: "This Gentleman ſtood poſſeſs'd "of all the Qualities requiſite to gain him the "Love of the People, and ſtir up the Jealouſie of "the Duke of York. King Charles had heap'd "Honours upon him, and nothing pleas'd him ſo "much as to ſee him Great. He had been ſent to "Scotland in the Year 1679, to ſuppreſs an Inſurrection which the Severity of Lauderdale's Adminiſtration had occaſion'd; where his Lenity "towards a People made by Oppreſſion mad, gain'd "him the Ill-will of a Predominant Party at Court. "The Zeal he ſhew'd ſome time after in the Proſecution of the Popiſh Plot, and his Friendſhips "with ſome that were profeſs'd Enemies to the "Duke, concurr'd to his Fall: Yet King Charles "ſtill continu'd under-hand the ſame Tenderneſs "for him, though he was declar'd in publick to "be in Diſgrace. The Duke's Faction at Home, "and a Foreign Intereſt Abroad, were too powerful for King Charles to grapple with, even tho' "the Fortune of a Favourite Son was at Stake. "The more he was depreſs'd by the Envy of his "Uncle, the higher he roſe in the Affections of "the People; till the breaking out of what was "call'd the Proteſtant Plot, overwhelm'd not only him, but a whole Party with him.

1682. 34 Car. II.

The firſt Mark of the King's new Anger to the Duke of Monmouth, was, to ſignify his Pleaſure to the Univerſity of Cambridge, that they ſhould chuſe another Chancellor in the Place of the Duke of Monmouth: With which Royal Will and Pleaſure the Univerſity comply'd, and made Choice of his Grace the Duke of Albemarle to be their Chancellor; and they afterwards put a greater Mark of Ignominy upon the Duke of Monmouth, by taking down his Picture that was hanging in their Publick Schools, and burning it in a very eager and ridiculous manner. This Humour of the Univerſity of Cambridge, in rejecting and affronting their Chancellor the Duke of Monmouth, was plainly owing as a Complement to the Duke of York, who being lately return'd from Scotland, Dr. Coga, the Vice-Chancellor, waited on him at New-Market, at the beginning of April, and in the Name of himſelf and the Univerſity made a ſhort Speech in Latin, "To congratulate his Royal Highneſs's Return "into England, and to acknowledge, that by his "Royal Highneſs's good Conduct, the Government of Scotland, both in Church and State, is "ſettled in Peace, and therefore they would by "no means doubt, but that, under his Majeſty, "his Royal Highneſs's Preſence would have a great "Influence in effecting the ſame here in England; "by which means all Great Britain being join'd in "one, the Church of England, and Rights of the "Crown, may for ever flouriſh." To which his Royal Highneſs was pleas'd to anſwer to this effect: That he gave the Univerſity his Thanks for their kind Expreſſions: That he was very glad of this, and all other Occaſions, to declare, That he would ever ſtand by the Church of England as now eſtabliſh'd, and countenance the Members of it, as having ſeen by Experience, that they are the beſt Supporters of the Crown; and that he would uſe his Endeavours and Intereſt for the Preſervation of the King's Perſon, and the Government in the State, and the Church of England, as now eſtabliſh'd by Law. The Duke, againſt his own Genius, was to purſue the Arts of Popularity; and therefore, on April 20, he was pleas'd to honour with his Preſence the Artillery

Duke of Monmouth in Diſgrace.

Burnt in Effigie at Cambridge.

In Complement to the Duke of York.

a See an Advertiſement in the Gazette April 21, 1681. to undeceive his Majeſty's loyal Subjects, who may be miſled into Error, by a Pamphlet, called, The Life and Death of the 35th of Elizabeth.

b Order of King and Council at Whitehall Octob. 5. 1681. that a Liſt of the Names of ſeveral Tradeſmen, who are Papiſts, reſiding in the Pariſhes of St. Martin's in the Fields, St. Giles's in the Fields, St. Paul's Covent-Garden, and Places adjacent, contrary to the Laws of this Kingdom, and his Majeſty's Proclamations for reinforcing the ſame, being this Day preſented at the Board, be forthwith [illegible] to his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace for the County of [illegible]dleſex, and the City and Liberties of Weſtminſter, wh[illegible] his preſent Seſſions of Peace are to proceed againſt the ſa[illegible] Popiſh Tradeſmen according to Law, and to give the Bo[illegible] an Account of what they ſhall do thereupon.

Company,

1682. 34*Car.* II.

Company, at their Annual Feaſt in Merchant-Taylors-Hall, where he retir'd after Dinner into another Room, and gave Acceſs to a great Number of Citizens, who were taught to croud in, for the Honour of kiſſing his Hand. He had ſoon after an Occaſion of going once more to Scotland, purpoſing to make but a very ſhort Stay. So on May 3. he departed from Windſor, and went down in one of his Majeſty's Yachts to embark on the Gloceſter, commanded by Sir John Berry, and attended by the Dartmouth, the Ruby, and the Happy Return. But on Friday May 5. the Gloceſter Frigat ran upon the Sand call'd the Lemon and Ore, about 16 Leagues from the Mouth of Humber, and there was loſt: His Royal Highneſs went off in a Boat, and took as many Perſons of Quality with him as the Boat could well bear. Other Boats were ſent to take out the Men from the ſinking Ship; but ſhe ſunk ſo faſt, that ſeveral of the Paſſengers and Sea-men periſhed with her; among whom were the Earl of Roxborough, the Lord O-Brian, the Laird Hopton, Sir Joſeph Douglas, and Mr. Hyde, Brother-in-Law to the Duke, with ſeveral of the Duke's Servants, and above an hundred and thirty Seamen were miſerably loſt, the Commander Sir John Berry hardly eſcaping by a Rope over the Stern [a] into Capt. Wyborne's Boat; who being afterwards examin'd before the Council, his Majeſty declared himſelf ſatisfy'd, that the ſaid Sir John was no way faulty in the Loſs of the Gloceſter, and therefore was pleas'd to give him the Command of the Henrietta, a Third Rate Frigat, and of the Squadron deſign'd for the Coaſt of Ireland, in the ſame manner as was at firſt intended. The Duke got ſafe to Scotland on May 7. and with great Expedition came back by Sea to London in twenty Days.

Duke of York goes again to Scotland.

Danger at Sea.

Contention for new Sheriffs.

The Court was very ſolicitous for the choice of new Sheriffs for London and Middleſex, and earneſtly recommended Mr. North and Mr. Box; but the Hearts of the Citizens were for Mr. Papilion and Mr. Dubois. This occaſion'd a very Riotous [b] Controverſie; the Lord-Mayor complying with the Court, and the old Sheriffs reſolving to aſſert the Rights of the City. Hence, on the Day of Election, June 24. a great Noiſe and Clamour was made in Guild-Hall, where the Whig Party (as they were call'd) being much the more Numerous, the Lord-Mayor adjourn'd the Common-Hall till Tueſday Morning: But the two Sheriffs thinking that Adjournment to be an Arbitrary Act for interrupting a regular Election, went on with the Poll. Upon which Mr. Pilkington and Mr. Shute, the two Sheriffs, were by Order of Privy-Council taken into Cuſtody by a Serjeant at Arms, and committed Priſoners to the Tower, by a Warrant ſign'd by twenty four Privy-Counſellors, who made a further Order, "That "Mr. Attorney-General ſhould forthwith exhibit "an Information in the King's-Bench againſt Thomas Pilkington and Samuel Shute, Eſqrs. Sheriffs "of London, and Henry Corniſh, Eſq; one of the "Aldermen, and ſuch others, as upon Examinati"on, ſhould be found to have been Promoters and "Encouragers of the late enormous Riot, and that "he do proceed againſt them according to the ut"moſt ſeverity of the Law.

On Friday, June 30. the impriſon'd Sheriffs were, upon a Writ of Habeas Corpus, brought by the Lieutenant of the Tower to the King's-Bench-Bar; where, after having pleaded not guilty, they were admitted to Bail. The Sheriffs being thus at liberty, met at a Common-Hall on July the firſt, when the Lord-Mayor being ſick, ſent Order by the Recorder to adjourn the Hall to the 11th following; but the Sheriffs again denying the validity of ſuch Adjournment, proceeded in the Election, and declared their choice of Papilion and Dubois. On Friday, July 7. the Mayor and his Party met again, and heard Lawyers argue the regularity of the late Adjournments: But coming to no concluſion, the Court was again adjourn'd to the 14th of July; on which Day an Order of Council was produc'd, whereby his Majeſty thought fit, for the better keeping of the Peace of the City, to direct and require the Lord-Mayor to maintain and preſerve intire the ancient Cuſtoms of the City; and for the better doing thereof, to take effectual Order, That at the Common-Council to be held on July 14. all Proceedings be begun anew, and carry'd on in the uſual manner, as they ought to have been on the 24th of June laſt. But the manner of Proceeding was thought to be by no means uſual: For Dudley North, Eſq; was only put up to be confirm'd, as being already duly elected by my Lord-Mayor; and while the Sheriffs were Polling in another Place, his Lordſhip came down to the Huſtings, and declared the Election, by Majority of Voices, to fall upon Mr. Box; but he wiſely paid his Fine, and Peter Rich, Eſq; was choſen in his Place, and he and Mr. North were ſworn before the Lord-Mayor in the Huſtings.

Court very angry at the City.

This great ſtruggle put the Court upon conſidering, and in a manner reſolving to take away the Election of Sheriffs out of the Power of the City; and no other Expedient could be found, but by taking away their Charter; which, if once effected, would not only give the Court the advantage of making a Common-Hall, but open a Gap to their making a Houſe of Commons too: For near five Parts in ſix of the Houſe of Commons were Burgeſſes, and Barons of the Cinque-Ports, who would not dare to conteſt their Charters, if the City of London could not hold her own by Law. So that in Hilary-Term this Year a Quo Warranto was brought againſt the City, for two heinous Crimes, no worſe than theſe two: "Firſt, That they had made an "Addreſs to the King, for the Parliament to ſit for "redreſs of Grievances. Secondly, That the City "had raiſed Money towards repairing Cheapſide-"Conduit, ruin'd by the Fire of London." The City pleaded their Right. The Attorney-General reply'd. Upon which there was a Demurrer; and here the Matter reſted for a time: The novelty of theſe Pretenſions cauſing a great Amuſement in the generality of the City and Nation, who well knew whereto this tended, but could hardly imagine how it would end. After a long ſuſpence, two Arguments only were permitted on either ſide; one in Hilary-Term, 1682. and the other in Eaſter-Term following: And ſo Judgment was given, in Trinity-Term next after againſt the City. This Judgment was obſerv'd to be very ſtrange and unwarrantable, for it was without any Reaſon given, and by two Judges only, whereof the one was Sir Francis Wythens, (who had heard but one Argument, and who afterwards, in the abſence of Sir Edward Herbert, deliver'd that for Sir Edward's Opinion, which Sir Edward himſelf, when preſent, diſown'd,) and the other was Sir Thomas Jones; however, to confirm their own Judgment with better Authority than their own, theſe two Judges declar'd upon the Bench, that their Brother Raymond was of the ſame Opinion with them, and that ſo was the Lord-Chief-Juſtice Sanders, though he indeed was paſt his Senſes, and had only Underſtanding enough left to expoſtulate with them, why they would trouble him, when he had loſt his Memory?

Quo Warranto.

Judgment againſt the City.

Many other Quo Warranto's.

While the City of London lay under this Awe and

[a] Capt. Ayres the Pilot was found guilty, and ſentenc'd to perpetual Impriſonment.

[b] See an Act of Common Council for regulating the Election of Sheriffs, and for repealing the treaſonable and diſloyal Acts, and Proceedings of that Court in the time of the late Rebellion. Dated June 6. 1683. Reprinted by Sam. Roycroft, 1699.

1682. 34 Car. II.

Menace of the Court, many other Quo Warranto's were iſſued out againſt other inferior Places; and ſeveral of them were ſo terrify'd, that they came and reſign'd their Charters, and accepted of new Patents, with Regulation at the pleaſure of the Court. Upon which way of Proceeding theſe Remarks of a late Writer are not improper: "The "Charters of the City of London, and other Corporations, ſtood in the way of an Abſolute Government; and it was reſolved to break through this "Barrier. In order to which, Quo Warranto's "were brought againſt them; and in proceſs of "time, they were either ſurrendred by the Corporations themſelvs, or vacated in Weſtminſter-hall "by a Sett of Judges pick'd out for that purpoſe. "And it was reſolv'd thereby to make one of the "Eſtates of Parliament depend intirely upon the "Will and Nomination of the Prince. While theſe "Quo Warranto's were going on, whole Peals of "Anathema's were rung out againſt thoſe Patriots "that ſtood up for the Liberties of their Country "in the preceding Parliaments: And it was look'd "upon as a Crime againſt the State, for any one to "regret the approaching Fate of his Country; even "the holy Scriptures themſelves were made a Stale "for Arbitrary Power; and the Laws which were "given to the Jews, as they were a Political State, "were now brought in, upon every occaſion, to "countenance the Deſigns of the Court: As if "thoſe Laws which were intended only to ſupport "the political Government of the Jews, were the "real Foundation of the Chriſtian Religion; or, "that the Conſtitution of England was founded up-"on the Jewiſh Doctrine. All which was not much "for the Honour of thoſe Gentlemen that broach'd "that Notion. This was a time never to be for-"got, when to wiſh well to our Countrey was a "Crime; and when Heaven itſelf was rank'd up-"on our Enemies ſide, by ſome that pretended to "expound its Will. In ſome Places, new kind of "Funeral Harangues came in Faſhion: Our Laws, "our Liberties, our Parliaments, our Native Rights, "were to be buried; but inſtead of dropping a Tear "at their Funeral, fulſom Panegyricks were made "upon their Murtherers, [a] and Curſes denounc'd "againſt thoſe that would have retriev'd them from "Deſtruction.

Reflect. on them.

Death of Great Men.

This Year was the more remarkable for the death of three very Great Men. The Duke of Lauderdale Died Auguſt 24. generally fear'd in Scotland, and as univerſally hated in England; a Man of Parts and Learning, not of Morals, nor reputed Integrity; of an impetuous Spirit, a great promoter of Arbitrary Power, and indeed the underminer of Epiſcopacy in Scotland, by laying it on a new Foundation, the Pleaſure of the King. His Highneſs Rupert Prince Palatine of the Rhine, Duke of Cumberland, &c. Died at his Houſe in Spring-Garden, November 29. in the ſixty-third Year of his Age, after ſome Days ſickneſs of a Pleuriſie and Fever; his Body on Decemb. 6. was privately interr'd among others of the Royal Family in a Vault on the South ſide of King Henry VIIth's Chapel: A Perſon of great forwardneſs and fire in his Youth, and afterwards of good temper and Sedateneſs: He had of late Years proved a faithful Councellor to the King, and a great Patriot to the Engliſh Liberty; and therefore was towards his latter end neglected by the Court to that degree, that nothing paſs'd between him and his great Relations, but bare Civilities in the common Forms. On Decemb. 18. in the Afternoon, the Right Honourable Heneage Earl of Nottingham, Lord Chancellor of England, died at his Houſe in [b] Queen-ſtreet, in the ſixty firſt Year of his Age, after having ſerv'd his Majeſty nine Years in that high Station with great Honour and Veracity.

Honours and Preferments.

There was a great diſpoſal of Honours and Preferments: In the beginning of April his Majeſty was pleas'd, upon the death of the Lord Fretchevil, to give the Government of the City and Garriſon of York to Sir John Beresby, Bar. And ſoon after, on the death of Nicholas Johnſon, Eſq; his Majeſty conferr'd the Office of Pay-maſter of his Forces upon Charles Fox, Eſq; On Aug. 22. his Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on Mr. Cornwal Bradſhaw, as being well ſatisfy'd of his Loyalty, and of his Care and Induſtry in the Management of his Revenue of Hearth-Money, of which he was one of the Managers.

The Earl of Hallifax had at firſt gone along with the Duke of Monmouth, the Earl of Shaftsbury, &c. but had been lately brought over to the Intereſt of the Duke of York; for which reaſon, about the middle of Auguſt, his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer upon him the Honour and Dignity of a Marqueſs of this Kingdom, by creating him Marqueſs of Hallifax, in conſideration of the eminent and faithful Services which he had render'd his Majeſty and the Crown; and ſoon after his Majeſty conferr'd upon him the Office of [c] Lord Privy-Seal. On Septemb. 20. the Earl of Sunderland was by his Majeſty's Command readmitted a Privy-Counſellor, and again took his Place at the Board. On Septemb. 25. the Duke of Hamilton was Elected a Knight-Companion of the Garter, in a Chapter held at Whitehall. Towards the end of November his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer upon Sir John Bennet, Knight of the Bath, the Dignity of a Baron of this Kingdom, under the Style and Title of John Lord Oſſulſton. And preſently after his Majeſty was pleas'd to create James Duke of Ormond in Ireland, a Duke of this Kingdom, by the ſame Name and Title: And the Lord Marqueſs of Worceſter, a Duke of this Kingdom, by the Name and Title of Duke of Beauford: And the Lord Norris, an Earl, by the Name and Title of Earl of Abingdon. And with a greater flood of diſtinguiſhing Favours, cheap and grateful, at the beginning of December his Majeſty was pleas'd to grant the Title and Dignity of an Earl of this Kingdom to Edward Viſcount Cambden, by the Name and Style of Earl of Gainsborough: And to Conyers Lord Darcy, by the Name and Style of Earl of Holderneſs: And to Thomas Lord Windſor, Governor of his Majeſty's Town and Garriſon of Kingſton upon Hull, by the Name and Style of Earl of Plymouth: As alſo the Title and Dignity of a Viſcount of this Kingdom to Horatio Lord Townſhend, by the Name and Style of Viſcount Townſhend of Raynham. The Titles and Dignities of a Baron and a Viſcount, to Sir Thomas Thynne,

[a] Sir Tho. Pilkington, Alderman and late Sheriff of London, was tried at the King's-Bench upon an Action of Scandalum Magnatum, brought by the Duke of York, for ſaying upon the Evidence of Sir William Hooker and Sir Henry Tulſe, Aldermen, that He the Duke fired the City, and is now come to cut our Throats. The Jury found for the Plaintiff, and gave one hundred thouſand Pounds for Damages. And Sir Patience Ward, Alderman, preſuming to give Evidence upon his Oath, in favour of Sir Thomas Pilkington was in Eaſter Term following tried and found guilty in a ſingular manner upon an Information of Perjury againſt him.

[b] There was in the mean time all poſſible Friendſhip betwixt the Engliſh and French Courts. The Hiſtory of the War of Holland, written originally in Italian by the Count de Maiole, and printed at Paris within this Year 1682. with the French King's Privilege was ſoon after ſuppreſs'd, almoſt all the Copies ſeiz'd and deſtroy'd, and the Author ſent to the Baſtile, upon the Complaint of the Engliſh Ambaſſadors then reſiding at Paris; becauſe of the Diſcoveries it made of all the private Tranſactions and Managements betwixt the Court of England and that of France, about entring into that War, and carrying it on. The Name of Count de Maiole was but a cover for the Abbot Primi, who was the Perſon thrown into the Baſtile upon complaint of my Lord Preſton; from whence, after a mock Impriſonment of nine or ten Days, he was let out again.

[c] In the room of the Earl of Angleſey, from whom the Seal was now taken, as from a diſaffected Peer.

Bar.

1682. 34 Car. II.

Bar. by the Name and Style of Baron Thynne of Warmiſter, and Viſcount Weymouth. The Title and Dignity of a Baron, to Colonel George Legg, of his Majeſty's Privy-Council, and Maſter-General of the Ordnance, by the Name and Style of the Baron of Dartmouth. The ſame Title and Dignity of a Baron, to William Lord Ailington, Conſtable of his Majeſty's Tower of London, by the Name and Style of Baron of Weymondley. His Majeſty at the ſame time created the Honourable Colonel Churchill, John Lord Churchil of Aymouth in Scotland. And his Majeſty obſerving the extraordinary Inclination with which his Grace the Duke of Grafton had apply'd himſelf to Sea Affairs, and the ſucceſsful Progreſs he had made therein, to encourage this diſpoſition in him, was graciouſly pleas'd to confer upon him the Office of Vice-Admiral of England, vacant by the death of his Highneſs Prince Rupert; whoſe Offices of Conſtable and Governor of the Caſtle and Foreſt of Windſor, and Lord-Lieutenant of the Counties of Berks and Surrey, his Majeſty conferr'd upon Henry Earl of Arundel, Son and Heir to his Grace the Duke of Norfolk, Earl-Marſhal of England. After the death of the Earl of Nottingham, his Majeſty was pleas'd, on Wedneſday December 20. to commit the Cuſtody of the Great Seal to the Right Honourable Sir Francis North, Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, with the Title of Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England; and on December 22. his Lordſhip was ſworn at the Council Board, and took his Place as Lord Keeper. On the ſame Day the Lord Chief-Juſtice Pemberton was ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council; and at the beginning of the next Term was remov'd from the King's-Bench to be Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas. Upon which his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Place of Lord Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench upon Sir Edmund Sanders. On Jan. 1. Humphry Mackworth and Thomas Montgomery, Eſqrs; Treaſurers of the Middle-Temple, with ſome others of that Society, waited on his Majeſty to Wiſh him a happy New Year, and in a very Loyal Speech declar'd their unanimous Reſolutions to adhere to their former Addreſſes: Which his Majeſty was pleas'd to accept very graciouſly. They then paid the like reſpect to the Duke, and were kindly receiv'd by his Royal Highneſs: For which Complements his Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Humphry Mackworth, Eſq; as a Mark of his Royal Favour to the Loyal Society of the Middle-Temple. On Jan. 28. the Earl of Conway (with whoſe Services his Majeſty was pleas'd to declare himſelf very well ſatisfy'd) reſign'd his Place of one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State: And his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the ſame upon the Right Honourable the Earl of Sunderland, who was ſworn in Council on the 31ſt of January. His Majeſty was pleas'd on Febr. 11. to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon the Honourable Dudley North, Eſq; one of the preſent Sheriffs for the City of London and County of Middleſex. On Febr. 28. the Right Honourable Theophilus Earl of Huntingdon, and Henry Earl of Peterborough, were ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council. About the middle of March his Majeſty was pleas'd, upon the death of Sir Edward Carteret, to confer the Place of Uſher of the Black Rod upon Thomas Duppa, Eſq; eldeſt Gentleman Uſher to his Majeſty. And Henry Bulſtrode, Eſq; [a] was ſworn into the vacant Place of one of his Majeſty's Gentlemen Uſhers daily Waiters.

State of Religion.

In Matters of Religion his Majeſty was pleas'd to aſſert his Supremacy in the Right of appointing Publick Faſts and Thankſgivings, upon this frivolous occaſion: The Party moſt zealous in oppoſing Popery and the Duke's Succeſſion, to ſhew their Strength, and to improve it, had appointed a publick Meeting, with a Sermon, and a Dinner, as uſual in many other Companies and Societies of Men; and they invited their Gueſts, upon a Ticket in this Form: It having pleaſed Almighty God, by his wonderful Providence, to deliver and protect his Majeſty's Perſon, the Proteſtant Religion, and Engliſh Liberties (hitherto) from the helliſh and frequent Attempts of their Enemies (the Papiſts;) In Teſtimony of Thankfulneſs herein, and for the preſerving and improving mutual Love and Charity, among ſuch as are ſenſible thereof, you are deſired to meet many of the Loyal Proteſtant Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and Citizens, on Friday the 21ſt Day of this inſtant April, 1682. at ten of the Clock at St. Michael's Church in Cornhil, there to hear a Sermon, and from thence to go to Haberdaſhers-Hall to Dinner; And to bring this Ticket with you. This voluntary Combination, tho' innocent enough in it ſelf, was repreſented to the Court as dangerous in the Conſequence of it: And therefore this Order was made in Council April 19.

Feaſt and Sermon.

Order of Council.

"WHereas the appointing of Publick Faſts and "Thankſgivings is matter of State, and "belongs only to his Majeſty, by his Prerogative; "and his Majeſty being inform'd, that in the City "of London Invitations have been made of great "and unuſual Numbers, by printed Tickets, one of "which is hereunto annex'd; his Majeſty looks "upon the ſame as an inſolent Attempt, in manifeſt Derogation of his Right, and of dangerous "Conſequence: The Matter of the ſaid Invitation "being of a publick Nature, and the manner of "carrying it on tending to Sedition, and raiſing "Diſtinctions and Confederacies amongſt his Subjects, againſt the known Laws and Peace of the "Kingdom: His Majeſty therefore, by the Advice "of his Council, hath thought fit, and doth hereby ſtrictly Charge and Command the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of London, as they will anſwer "the contrary at their Peril, to take immediate and "effectual care to prevent and hinder the ſaid Meeting as an unlawful Aſſembly: And all Sheriffs, "Conſtables, and other his Majeſty's Officers in "the ſaid City, are hereby commanded to be aiding "and aſſiſting therein.

While the [b] Duke of York was in Scotland, he found his greateſt Intereſt to be among the higheſt of the Epiſcopal Party: For which reaſon he confin'd his Favours to them, and encourag'd them to be very ſevere upon the Presbyterians. Upon his return into England, he thought proper to have Letters Teſtimonials from the Scotch Biſhops, directed to his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury; which were immediately ſent after him, and toward the end of April were thus publiſh'd by Authority.

[a] John Hampden, Eſq; in a Tract he publiſh'd in 1692. tells us, That diſcourſing ten Years before at Paris with the famous Hiſtorian Mezeray, about the difference of the Government in France and England, he broke out into theſe Expreſſions with tranſport, O fortunatos nimium bona ſi ſua norint, Angligenæ! We had once in France the ſame happineſs and the ſame privileges which you have. Our Laws were made by Repreſentatives of our own chuſing. Our Money was not taken from us but by our own conſent. Our Kings were ſubject to the Rules of Law and Reaſon. But now, alas, we are miſerable, and all is loſt, think nothing too dear to maintain theſe precious Advantages; and if ever there be occaſion, venture your Life, your Eſtate, and all you have, rather than ſubmit to the miſerable Condition to which you ſee us reduc'd.

[b] The wiſe and honeſt Men had in the mean time very melancholy Apprehenſions of this Popiſh Succeſſor. The Earl of Angleſey drew up a bold Paper of Advice to his Majeſty, thus inſcribed: The Account of Arthur Earl of Angleſey, Lord Privy Seal, to your moſt Excellent Majeſty, of the true State of your Majeſty's Government and Kingdoms. Apr. 27. 1682.— p. 16. The fatal Cauſe of all our Miſchiefs preſent or apprehended, and which if not by Wiſdom antidoted, may raiſe a Fire which may burn and conſume to the very Foundations, is the unhappy Perverſion of the Duke of York, the next Heir of the Crown, in point of Religion.

EDEN-

1682.
34 Car. II.

EDENBURGH, March 9. 1682.

May it pleaſe your Grace;

The Duke of York brings Teſtimonials from the Scotch Biſhops.

"HIS Royal Highneſs having parted from hence " on Monday laſt, being call'd by the King " to attend his Majeſty at New Market; we ſhould " prove very defective in Duty and Gratitude, if " if upon this occaſion we ſhould forget to acknow- " ledge to your Grace, how much this poor Church, " and our Order, do owe to his Princely Care and " Goodneſs, that his Majeſty, and the worthy Bi- " ſhops of England, may from you receive the juſt " Accounts thereof.

" Since his Royal Highneſs's coming to this " Kingdom, we find our Caſe much changed to " the better, and our Church and Order (which " through the Cunning and Power of their Adver- " ſaries were expoſed to extreme Hazard and Con- " tempt) ſenſibly reliev'd and reſcu'd; which, next " to the watchful Providence of God, (that mer- " cifully ſuperintends his Church) we can aſcribe " to nothing ſo much, as to his Royal Highneſs's " gracious Owning and vigilant Protection of us.

" Upon all Occaſions he gives freſh Inſtances of " his eminent Zeal againſt the moſt unreaſonable " Schiſm, which by Renting, threatens the Sub- " verſion of our Church and Religion, and con- " cerns himſelf as a Patron to us, in all our publick " and even perſonal Intereſts; ſo that all Men " take Notice of his ſignal Kindneſs to us, and ob- " ſerve, that he looks upon the Enemies of the " Church, as Adverſaries to the Monarchy it ſelf: " Nor did we ever propoſe or offer to his Royal " Highneſs any rational Expedient, which might " conduce for the Relief or Security of the Church, " which he did not readily Embrace and Effe- " ctuate.

" The Peace and Tranquillity of this Kingdom, " is the effect of his prudent and ſteady Conduct of " Affairs; and the Humours of our wicked Fana- " ticks are much reſtrained from dangerous Erup- " tions, upon their apprehenſions of his Vigilance " and Juſtice: For they dread nothing ſo much, " as to ſee him upon the Head of his Majeſty's " Councels and Forces againſt them.

" We hope your Grace will will make our duti- " ful Acknowledgment to his Royal Highneſs, for " all his Princely Favours to us, and give him the " moſt firm Aſſurance of our moſt ſincere Endea- " vours to ſerve him, and of our moſt fervent Pray- " ers for his temporal and eternal Happineſs, as the " bounden Duty of,

May it pleaſe your Grace,

Your Grace's moſt Humble

and Faithful Servants,

Alexand. St. And.	Ja. Gallovidiens,
Jo, Edinburgens,	George Brechin,
Andr. Drunkelden,	Jam. Dumblanon.
Arth. Glaſcuens,

Inſolence and Hypocriſie of Papiſts.

Under the Duke's Protection many of the Roman Catholicks were publickly encourag'd and preferr'd; and ſome others of them acted a more ſecret Part, in aſſuming the Name of Proteſtants, and under that Diſguiſe thruſting themſelves into Places and Employments: Among theſe, one at leaſt crept into a Cure of Souls, one John Duffey a Scotchman, who obtained the Rectory of Raile in Eſſex; and who, upon Information of his Character given to the Council Board, was ſent for into Cuſtody; but on on the 5th of December he made his eſcape from one of his Majeſty's Meſſengers. Upon which it was the next Day order'd by his Majeſty in Council, " That his Majeſty's Meſſengers ſhould make ſtrict " and diligent ſearch after him, and that all the Ports " ſhould be ſtopt, in order to his being apprehen- " ded; and publick Notice was given of him, to " the Intent, that any Perſon that could diſcover " him, might cauſe him to be ſecur'd, and car- " ry'd before the next Juſtice of the Peace, in or- " der to his being brought before the Board: He being deſcrib'd to be a tall Man, of a fair Complexion, full Eye, about fifty Years of Age, &c. He had been taken on the Sunday before, coming out of the Houſe of a foreign Ambaſſador at the time of Maſs, and being carry'd before a Magiſtrate, the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy were tendred him; which he refuſing, was committed to the Cuſtody of that Meſſenger from whom he made his eſcape, and was flying beyond Sea; but on Thurſday, December 7. he was retaken at Rocheſter, and brought the next Morning before the Council; where he again refuſing to take the Oaths, he was, by Order of the Board, ſent to the Lord Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench, to be proceeded againſt according to Law.

Zeal againſt Popery made Criminal.

Zeal againſt Popery was now look'd upon to be only a Faction; and thoſe who were eminent in it, were to be diſtinguiſh'd as ſeditious Men, and Enemies to the King, and his Government. Upon this Rule of the State, popular Rejoicings, on the Fifth of November, were to be prevented and ſuppreſs'd. But when it was impoſſible to reſtrain the Spirit of the People, the Court reſolv'd to puniſh it, for a Terror to others; and therefore at the Seſſions held in the beginning of December, at the Old-Bailey, ſeveral Apprentices and young Perſons were indicted for having committed a Riot within the City, on Monday the 6th of November at Night; of which being convicted, they were fined twenty Marks each, and order'd to ſtand on the Pillory [a] at ſeveral Places; which was executed on Saturday the 9th of December.

1683.

Citizens of London are condemn'd for a Riot.

On Tueſday the 8th of May ſeveral Perſons were Try'd at the Old-Bailey, before the Lord Chief-Juſtice Sanders, for a pretended Riot and Aſſault made on Sir John Moore, Kt. the late Lord Mayor, upon Midſummer-day laſt, being the Day for Election of Sheriffs; and after a long Tryal were found Guilty, and had theſe ſevere Fines impoſed upon them: Thomas Pilkington 500 Pounds; Samuel Shute 1000 Marks; Ford Lord Gray, and Henry Corniſh, Alderman, the like Sum; Sir Thomas Player 500 Marks; Slingsby Bethel, Eſq; 1000 Marks; Mr. Jenkes 300 Marks; Mr. Deagle 400 Marks; Mr. Freeman 300 Marks; Mr. Jekyl 200 Marks; Mr. Goodenough and Mr. Swinock 500 Marks; Mr. Keys and Mr. Wickham 100 Marks each. This Reckoning was inflam'd by a late Arreſt of the preſent Lord Mayor, the Sheriffs and ſeveral Aldermen, made at the Suits of Mr. Papilion and Mr. Dubois, who claim'd a Right of being legally elected Sheriffs the laſt Year. Which was thought to be ſuch an Inſult upon the Friends of the King and Court, that the City were forc'd to diſclaim the Action, by this Order in Common-Council, on the 22d of May:

The Lord Mayor Arreſted.

"WHereas Sir William Pritchard, Kt. Lord " Mayor of this City, was in a rude man- " ner lately Arreſted, at the Suit, or in the Name " of Mr. Papilion and Mr. Dubois; And whereas " it hath been alledg'd by the ſaid Mr. Papilion and [a] The Meetings of the Diſſenters were by Authority reſtrain'd. On the 20th of June the Lord Mayor of London iſſu'd out his Orders for ſuppreſſing of Conventicles, commanding all Conſtables to attend upon Sundays for that purpoſe in every Ward.

Mr.

1681. 33 Car. II.

"Mr. Dubois, That the Action upon which the ſaid Arreſt was, was proſecuted at the Inſtance of the Citizens of London: The Members of this Court, to deliver themſelves and the ſaid Citizens from this untrue Imputation, do declare, that they were not privy or conſenting to the ſaid Action and Arreſt, and do diſown and diſapprove the ſame.

Theſe Diſtractions of the City haſten'd the Loſs of their Charter and their Conſtitution: For on June 12. the Court of King's-Bench, in the Abſence of the Lord Chief-Juſtice, gave Judgment for the King upon the Quo Warranto, That the Franchiſes and Liberties of the City of London be ſeized into the King's Hands. But Judge Jones was pleas'd to ſay, "That by the King's ſpecial Command, Judgment ſhould not be entred till his Majeſty's Pleaſure were further known." This was generally look'd upon to make the Citizens reſign their own Liberties, inſtead of being condemned to a Deprivation of them. On Monday, June 18. a Petition of the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Commons, was preſented to his Majeſty in Council, confeſſing themſelves moſt heartily and unfeignedly ſorry for the Miſgovernment of the City of late Years, whereby the Citizens had fallen under his Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, and Judgment had been pronounc'd againſt them, acknowledging the great Favour of his Majeſty's not requiring Judgment to be immediately entred thereupon; and conſidering this their diſtreſſed Condition, they humbly caſt themſelves at his Royal Feet, imploring his Princely Compaſſion and Grace to be extended to this his ancient City, moſt humbly begging his Majeſty's Pardon for all their Offences, and promiſing to ſubmit themſelves to his Majeſty's good Pleaſure. After the reading this Petition, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Citizens, were commanded to withdraw: And being again call'd in, the Lord-Keeper, in a Speech, told them, That his Majeſty would ſtill ſhow the City all the Favour they could reaſonably deſire; and though he had obtained Judgment in a Quo Warranto, it was not his Intention to prejudice them in their Properties or Cuſtoms. That the City had not been well adviſ'd, to defer their Application to his Majeſty thus long, even till the Court had pronounc'd Judgment: It might have been done with much better Grace, if it had been more early. However, his Majeſty would not reject their Suit, if they agreed upon the Particulars the King did now require of them: For (ſays he) his Majeſty requires your Submiſſion to theſe Regulations:

Judgment given upon the Quo Warranto.

Terms of Submiſſion required from the City

1. "That no Lord-Mayor, Sheriff, Recorder, Common-Serjeant, Town-Clerk, or Coroner of the City of London, or Steward of the Borough of Southwark, ſhall be capable of, or admitted to the Exerciſe of their reſpective Offices, before his Majeſty ſhall have approved them under his Sign-Manual.

2. "That if his Majeſty ſhall diſapprove the Choice of any Perſon to be Lord-Mayor, and ſignify the ſame under his Sign-Manual to the Lord-Mayor, or, in default of a Lord-Mayor, to the Recorder, or Senior Alderman; the Citizens ſhall within one Week proceed to a new Choice: And if his Majeſty ſhall in like manner diſapprove the ſecond Choice, his Majeſty may, if he pleaſe, nominate a Perſon to be Lord-Mayor for the enſuing Year.

3. "If his Majeſty ſhall, in like manner, diſapprove the Perſons choſen to be Sheriffs, or either of them, his Majeſty may appoint Perſons to be Sheriffs for the enſuing Year, by his Commiſſion, if he ſo pleaſe.

The Lord-Keeper told them, That theſe Regulations being made, his Majeſty would not only pardon this Proſecution, but confirm their Charter in ſuch manner as may be conſiſtent with them; concluding thus: My Lord-Mayor, the Term draws toward an end, and Midſummer-Day is at hand, when ſome of the Officers uſe to be choſen, whereof his Majeſty will reſerve the Approbation: Therefore it is his Majeſty's Pleaſure that you return to the City, and conſult the Common-Council, that he may ſpeedily know your Reſolutions hereupon, and accordingly give his Directions. That you may ſee the King is in Earneſt, and the Matter is not capable of Delay, I am commanded to to let you know he hath given Order to his Attorney-General to enter up Judgment on Saturday next, unleſs you prevent it by your Compliance in all theſe Particulars. A Common-Council was held at their return, to conſider of theſe Propoſals: And the Queſtion being put, whether they ſhould aſſent and ſubmit to his Majeſty's Order of Regulations? It was carry'd in the Affirmative by a Majority of Eighteen Voices: And this Submiſſion was preſented to his Majeſty on the 21st of June.

1681. 33 Car. II.

A Submiſſion made.

Theſe evident Violations of Liberty and Property, improved by the nearer Proſpects of Popery, had provok'd many of the Nobility and Gentry to enter into ſome Meaſures of ſtopping the Torrent of the Court, and providing, if poſſible, for the Enjoyment of their eſtabliſh'd Laws and Religion. This was the true Riſe of what they call'd the Fanatick Plot, firſt diſcover'd by one Keeling, who gave a long and confuſed Narrative of it, only naming ſome mean Perſons, and charging three ſeveral Deſigns; one of ſurprizing the Guards; another of murdering the King and the Duke of York at the Rye-Houſe, as they were to paſs by from New-Market; and a third of an Inſurrection at Black-Heath, upon a Match at Foot-Ball there appointed. Upon this Diſcovery, a Proclamation was publiſh'd for the apprehending Colonel John Rumſey, Richard Rumbold, Malſter, Richard Neltborp, Eſq; Edward Wade, Gent. Richard Good-enough, Gent. Capt. Walcott, William Thompſon, James Burton, and William Hone, Joiner. Upon this Proclamation, Colonel John Rumſey, for a Pardon and Reward, ſurrender'd himſelf the next Day, and was examin'd by Mr. Secretary Jenkins, and made a large Confeſſion; which was ſoon confirm'd by the Information of Mr. Robert Weſt and Mr. Sheppard: So that on June 28. another Proclamation was iſſued for the apprehending of James Duke of Monmouth, Ford Lord Gray, Sir Thomas Armſtrong, Kt. and Robert Ferguſon, a Fanatick Teacher. The Duke of Monmouth had been the laſt Summer diverting himſelf in the Country, with Sir Thomas Armſtrong in his Company: In his Return toward London, he was taken into Cuſtody of a Serjeant at Arms at Stafford. The Duke receiv'd the Meſſage with great Preſence of Mind, and went along with the Serjeant to London, and offer'd himſelf to Mr. Secretary Jenkins to be examin'd, provided there were others of the Council preſent: But the Secretary refuſing to let any of the Lords attend, the Duke would not be queſtion'd by him; ſo the Secretary order'd a ſecond Warrant to be drawn for the Meſſenger's keeping him in Cuſtody longer, which he did from Saturday till Monday, and then the Duke was Bail'd before Judge Raymond: His Bail were the Earl of Clare, the Lord Gray, the Lord Ruſſel, William-Leviſon Gower, Eſq; and John Offley, Eſq;. The firſt Day of the Term he made his Appearance at the King's-Bench Bar, according to his Recognizance, and clear'd his Bail. He was now very unwilling to come into Cuſtody again, and therefore withdrew, as ſoon as the Proclamation came out for apprehending of him. As to Ferguſon, he had the Art of Eſcaping, in a manner thus related by a modern Writer: "Here I cannot omit acquainting the Reader, that Ferguſon was always look'd upon as the more dangerous Plotter, one that gave the Bloodieſt Counſels of all that were in the Confederacy; and yet when "this

Charge of a Fanatick Plot.

Character of Robert Ferguſon.

" this Warrant was deliver'd to Mr. Legat the " Meſſenger, to ſeize the reſt of the Offenders, " Mr. Secretary Jenkins gave Legat a ſtrict Command not to take Ferguſon, but to ſhun him " where-e'er he met him; and if he ſhould happen to find him in Company among the reſt, " he ſhould ſuffer him to eſcape: Which is ſuch " a Myſtery, that can never be unriddl'd, without " believing him to be a State-Intelligencer, to " betray the reſt of the Confederates. This Relation I had from ſeveral Gentlemen of known " Credit; but being unwilling to publiſh it upon " Hear-ſay, I ask'd Mr. Legat himſelf about it, " who is yet living, and a Meſſenger in this Reign, " and he aſſur'd me of the Truth of it, as it is " above related from his own Mouth, and who " will ſtill juſtify it to any Man, whoſe Curioſity " leads him to make farther Enquiry about it.

Lord Howard of Eſcrick.

The Lord Howard of Eſcrick had been formerly committed Cloſe-Priſoner to the Tower, upon Information given by Fitz-Harris's Wife, that he was concern'd in Writing that Libel for which her Husband was executed. This Noble Peer had join'd with the Whig-Party in the Houſe of Lords, and had heard them talk many things with a Liberty common to Diſcontented Men: Which gave him an Opportunity of being capable to be made an Evidence; and it was ſaid, That the Dutcheſs of Portſmouth did now reconcile him to the Court, upon Condition he ſhould go through the Drudgery of Swearing. And upon this Encouragement he ſoon became (as Sir John Hawles calls him) a Thorough-pac'd Evidence: And upon his Information, Warrants for High-Treaſon were iſſued out againſt the Earl of Eſſex, the Lord Ruſſel, and others. The Earl of Eſſex not offering to abſcond, was preſently confin'd Priſoner in the Tower; where ſoon after he was found with his Throat cut by a Razor. This rais'd a Suſpicion of his being murder'd; and theſe Circumſtances happen'd to confirm it. The King and the Duke of York were at that very time within the Tower, where they had not been for near fifteen Years before. Before the Jury was impannell'd to make an Inqueſt upon this Fact, the Earl's Body was taken out of the Cloſet where the Fact was committed, and ſtript of the Cloaths, which were carry'd away, and the Cloſet waſh'd; and when one of the Jury inſiſted to ſee my Lord's Cloaths in which he died, the Coroner was ſent for into another Room; and upon his Return, he told the Jury, it was the Body, and not the Cloaths, they were to Sit upon. After this, a Motion being made, that the Jury ſhould adjourn, and give Notice to my Lord's Relations, that if they had any thing material to diſcover, they ſhould do it within ſuch a time: It was anſwer'd, That the King had ſent for the Inquiſition, and would not riſe from the Council-Board till it was brought. There was another unlucky Circumſtance that gave a greater Looſe to the Tongues of People, which was, that it happen'd on the very ſame Morning when my Lord Ruſſel was upon his Tryal; and particular Care was taken to give immediate Notice of it to the Court at the Old-Bailey: And the King's Counſel made a direct Uſe of it to confirm the Plot, and to condemn the Lord Ruſſell, as the more apparently guilty of it. But notwithſtanding theſe Preſumptions, and the Offer of alledging many more; it was rather taken for granted, that the Earl of Eſſex, from a Greatneſs of Spirit, had laid violent Hands on himſelf; and it is ſaid, that his neareſt Relations were of that Opinion[a]. The King himſelf ſeem'd to be very much concern'd at the Misfortune, and ſaid thus, My Lord of Eſſex needed not to have deſpair'd of Mercy, for I ow'd him a Life.

Death of the Earl of Eſſex.

On Thurſday, July 12. Capt. Thomas Walcott was brought to his Tryal upon this Plot, and was found guilty of High-Treaſon, in conſpiring the Death of his Majeſty, and preparing Money and Arms, in order to an Inſurrection for the Subverſion of the Government[b]. The next Day, William Lord Ruſſell, William Hone, and John Rouſe, were indicted for the ſame Crimes, and found guilty. On July 20. Walcott, Rouſe and Hone, were drawn upon Sledges to Tyburn, and there Hang'd and Quarter'd: And on the next Day Sentence of Death was likewiſe executed upon William Lord Ruſſell, by ſevering his Head from his Body upon a Scaffold erected for that Purpoſe in Lincolns-Inn-Fields, where he deliver'd a Paper to one of the Sheriffs, with this ſhort Speech to him:

The Lord Ruſſel executed.

Mr. Sheriff,

His Lordſhip's Speech and Paper.

I Expected the Noiſe would be ſuch, that I could not be very well heard: I was never very fond of much ſpeaking, much leſs now; therefore I have ſet down in this Paper all that I think fit to leave behind me. God knows how far I was always from Deſigns againſt the King's Perſon, or of altering the Government; and I ſtill pray for the Preſervation of both, and of the Proteſtant Religion.

I am told that Capt. Walcott has ſaid ſomething concerning my Knowledge of the Plot: I know not whether the Report be true or no, but I hope it is not; for, to my Knowledge, I never ſaw him, to ſpeak with him, in my whole Life: And in the Words of a Dying Man, I know of no Plot, either againſt the King's Life, or the Government. But I have now done with this World, and am going to a better. I forgive all the World, and, I thank God, I die in Charity with all Men: And I wiſh all ſincere Proteſtants may love one another, and not make room for Popery by their Animoſities.

The PAPER deliver'd by the Lord Russell to the Sheriffs[c].

" I Thank God I find my ſelf ſo compoſed and " prepared for Death, and my Thoughts ſo " fix'd on another World, that I hope in God I " am quiet from ſetting my Heart on this; yet I cannot

[a] The Reverend Dr. Goodman had been Chaplain and Confident of the Earl of Eſſex; and when ſeriouſly aſk'd his Opinion of the Death of his Lordſhip in the Tower, he anſwer'd, He would give All he had in this World to believe that the Earl had not kill'd himſelf.

[b] —— That Great, but Innocent Victim, that was ſacrificed to the Rage of a Party; I mean the Lord Ruſſel, who was condemn'd for Treaſonable Words, though there was not one Witneſs that ſwore one Word againſt him, it being only depoſed that Treaſonable Words were ſaid in his hearing; to which, as was ſworn, he was conſenting, tho' no Words of his were expreſs'd that imported any ſuch Conſent. Biſhop of Sarum's Vindication, 8*vo*. p. 40.

[c] See two Sermons preach'd in Newgate before the Lord Ruſſel the Day before he ſuffer'd by Dr. Gilbert Burnet, publiſh'd by the Author in 1713. 8*vo*. who ſays in the Preface, p. 23. I had been with the Lord Ruſſel in Newgate four whole Afternoons before that; for he deſir'd to be alone till twelve of the Clock. He did all that while poſſeſs his Soul with ſo clear a Serenity, in ſuch a calm and chriſtian manner, that I ſtill reckon it a particular Happineſs, as well as an Honour, that I attended then upon him. Before I preach'd theſe Sermons, he received the Sacrament from Dr. Tillotſon's Hands; when the Office was ended, he ſhewed us the Paper he had prepared for his laſt Words. We had ſome Diſcourſe with him about the Lawfulneſs of Conſultations in order to Reſiſtance, in the State in which things were then. He thought the Violence uſed in the Matter of the Sheriffs of London ſhewed a Deſign to deſtroy ſuch Men as the Court thought ſtood in their way; of which he was among the firſt, he prayed God

1683. 35 Car. II.

“ cannot forbear now the ſetting down in Writing a farther Account of my Condition, to be left behind me, than I will venture to ſay at the Place of Execution, in the Noiſe and Clutter that is like to be there. I bleſs God heartily for thoſe many Bleſſings which he in his infinite Mercy hath beſtow'd upon me through the whole Courſe of my Life: That I was born of worthy good Parents, and had the Advantages of a religious Education, which are invaluable Bleſſings; for, even when I minded it leaſt, it ſtill hung about me, and gave me Checks; and has now, for many Years, ſo influenc'd and poſſeſs'd me, that I feel the happy Effects of it in this my Extremity, in which I have been ſo wonderfully (I thank God) ſupported, that neither my Impriſonment, nor Fear of Death, have been able to diſcompoſe me in any degree; but, on the contrary, I have found the Aſſurances of the Love and Mercy of God, in and through my bleſſed Redeemer, in whom only I truſt: And I do not queſtion but I am going to partake of that Fulneſs of Joy which is in his Preſence: The Hopes therefore do ſo wonderfully delight me, that I think this is the happieſt Time of my Life, tho' others may look upon it as the ſaddeſt.

“ I have lived, and now am of the Reformed Religion, a true and ſincere Proteſtant, and in the Communion of the Church of England; tho' I could never yet comply with, or riſe up to all the Heights of many People. I wiſh with all my Soul all our Differences were remov'd; and that all ſincere Proteſtants would ſo far conſider the Danger of Popery, as to lay aſide their Heats, and agree againſt the common Enemy; and that the Church-men would be leſs ſevere, and the Diſſenters leſs ſcrupulous; for I think Bitterneſs and Perſecution are at all times bad, but much more now.

“ For Popery, I look on it as an Idolatrous and Bloody Religion, and therefore thought my ſelf bound, in my Station, to do all I could againſt it: And by that I foreſaw I ſhould procure ſuch great Enemies to my ſelf, and ſo powerful ones, that I have been now, for ſome time, expecting the worſt; and bleſſed be God I fall by the Axe, and not by the Fiery Tryal: Yet, whatever Apprehenſions I had of Popery, and of my own ſevere and heavy Share I was like to have under it, when it ſhould prevail, I never had a thought of doing any thing againſt it baſely or inhumanly, but what would conſiſt with the Chriſtian Religion, and the Laws and Liberties of this Kingdom: And I thank God I have examin'd all my Actions in that Matter with ſo great Care, that I can appeal to God Almighty, who knows my Heart, that I went on ſincerely, without being mov'd either by Paſſion, Bye-Ends, or ill Deſigns. I have always lov'd my Country much more than my Life, and never had any Deſign of changing the Government, which I value, and look upon as one of the beſt Governments in the World, and would always have been ready to venture my Life for the preſerving it, and would ſuffer any Extremity, rather than have conſented to any Deſign of taking away the King's Life; neither had any Man the Impudence to propoſe ſo baſe and barbarous a thing to me: And I look upon it as a very unhappy and uneaſy part of my preſent Condition, that there ſhould be ſo much as mention made of ſo vile a Fact, though nothing in the leaſt was ſaid to prove any ſuch Matter; but the contrary, by my Lord Howard: Neither does any Body, I am confident, believe the leaſt of it: So that I need not, I think, ſay more.

1683. 35 Car. II.

“ For the King, I do ſincerely pray for him, and wiſh well to him and the Nation, that they may be happy in one another; that he may be indeed the Defender of the Faith; that the Proteſtant Religion, and the Peace and Safety of the Kingdom, may be preſerv'd and flouriſh under his Government, and that himſelf, in his Perſon, may be happy both here and hereafter.

“ As for the Share I had in the Proſecution of the Popiſh Plot, I take God to Witneſs, that I proceeded in it in the Sincerity of my Heart, being then really convinc'd (as I am ſtill) that there was a Conſpiracy againſt the King, the Nation, and the Proteſtant Religion: And I likewiſe profeſs, that I never knew any thing, directly or indirectly, of any Practice with the Witneſſes; which I look upon as ſo horrid a thing, that I never could have endured it: For, I thank God, Falſhood and Cruelty were never in my Nature, but always the fartheſt from it imaginable. I did believe, and do ſtill, that Popery is breaking in upon this Nation; and that thoſe that advance it, will ſtop at nothing to carry on their Deſign. I am heartily ſorry that ſo many Proteſtants give their helping Hand to it: But I hope God will preſerve the Proteſtant Religion, and this Nation; though I am afraid it will fall under very great Trials, and very ſharp Sufferings: And indeed, the Impiety and Prophaneneſs that abounds, and appears ſo ſcandalouſly bare-fac'd every where, gives too juſt Occaſion to fear the worſt thing that can befal a People. I pray God prevent it, and give thoſe who have ſhewed a Concern for the Publick Good, and have appear'd hearty for the true Intereſt of the Nation, and the Proteſtant Religion, Grace to live ſo, that they may not caſt a Reproach on that which they endeavour to advance; which (God knows) has often given me ſad Thoughts: And I hope ſuch of my Friends as may think they are touch'd by this, will not take what I ſay in ill Part, but will endeavour to amend their Ways, and live ſuitable to the Rules of the true Reformed Religion; which is the only Thing that can adminiſter true Comfort at the Latter-End, and relieve a Man when he comes to die.

“ As for my preſent Condition, I bleſs God I have no Repining in my Heart at it; I know, for my Sins, I have deſerved much worſe at the Hands of God; ſo that I chearfully ſubmit to ſo ſmall a Puniſhment, as the being taken off a few Years ſooner, and the being made a Spectacle to the World. I do freely forgive all the World, particularly thoſe concern'd in taking away my Life; and I deſire and conjure all my Friends to think of no Revenge, but to ſubmit

God he might be the laſt. We thought that was indeed an unjuſtifiable Account; but till a total Subverſion came, we ſtill thought it was unlawful to reſiſt. He ſaid, it would be then too late; he had all along had other Notions of the Engliſh Government, but he would then enter upon farther Debates upon theſe Matters. He ſpent the reſt of the Day, till towards Evening, in Devotion: Then his Children and Friends came to him. He ſpoke to his Children in a way ſuited to their Age, with a good meaſure of Chearfulneſs, and took Leave of his Friends in ſo calm a manner as ſurpriz'd them all. The Parting with his Lady was not ſo eaſy to him: She ſtay'd with him all Day, and till Eleven at Night; then they parted in a ſolemn grave Silence. Upon which, when ſhe was gone, he ſaid to me, The Bitterneſs of Death is now paſt.

See the Letter of Dr. John Tillotſon to my Lord Ruſſell concerning the Point of Reſiſtance, if our Religion and Rights ſhould be invaded, dated July 20. 1683. With the Doctor's Prayer with his Lordſhip upon the Scaffold.

1683. 35 Car. II.

" to the Holy Will of God, into whoſe Hands " I reſign my ſelf intirely.

" But to look back a little; I cannot but give " ſome Touch about the Bill of Excluſion, and " ſhew the Reaſons of my appearing in that Bu- " ſineſs; which, in ſhort, is this: That I thought " the Nation in ſuch Danger of Popery, and that " the Expectation of a Popiſh Succeſſor (as I have " ſaid in Parliament) put the King's Life likewiſe " in much Danger, that I ſaw no Way ſo effe- " ctual to ſecure both as ſuch a Bill. As to the " Limitations that were propoſed, if they were " ſincerely offer'd, and had paſſed into a Law, the " Duke then ſhould have been excluded from the " Power of a King, and the Government quite " altered, and little more than the Name of a " King left: So I could not ſee either Sin or Fault " in the one, when all People were willing to ad- " mit of the other; but thought it better to have " a King with his Prerogative, and the Nation " eaſy and ſafe under him, than a King without " it; which bred perpetual Jealouſies, and a con- " tinual Struggle. All this I ſay only to juſtify " my ſelf, and not to inflame others; though I " cannot but think my Earneſtneſs in that Matter " has had no ſmall Influence in my preſent Suffe- " rings. But I have now done with this World, " and am going to a Kingdom which cannot be " moved.

" And as to the Conſpiring to ſeize the Guards, " which is the Crime for which I am condemn'd, " and which is made a Conſtructive Treaſon for " taking away the King's Life, to bring it within " the Statute of Edward III. I ſhall give this " true and clear Account. I never was at Mr. " Sheppard's with that Company but once, and " there was no Undertaking then of ſecuring or " ſeizing the Guards, nor none appointed to view, " or examine them. Some Diſcourſe there was of " the Feaſibleneſs of it; and ſeveral times, by Ac- " cident in general Diſcourſe elſewhere, I have " heard it mention'd as a thing might eaſily be " done, but never conſented to, as a thing fit to " be done: And I remember particularly, at my " Lord Shaftsbury's, there being ſome general " Diſcourſe of this kind, I immediately flew out, " and exclaim'd againſt it, and ask'd, If the thing " ſucceeded, what muſt be done next, but Ma- " ſtering the Guards, and Killing them in Cold- " Blood? Which I look'd upon as a deteſtable " thing, and ſo like a Popiſh Practice, that I could " not but abhor it. And at the ſame time the " Duke of Monmouth took me by the Hand, and " told me very kindly, My Lord, I ſee you and I " are of a Temper; Did you ever hear ſo horrid a " thing? And I muſt needs do him Juſtice, to de- " clare, that I ever obſerv'd in him an Abhorrence " of all baſe things.

" As to my going to Mr. Sheppard's, I went " with an Intention to taſte Sherry; for he had " promis'd to reſerve for me the next very good " Piece he met with when I went out of Town; " and if he recollects himſelf, he may remember " I ask'd him about it, and he went and fetch'd a " Bottle; but when I taſted it, I ſaid it was hot " in the Mouth, and deſired, that whenever he " met with a choice Piece, he would keep it for " me; which he promiſed. I enlarge the more " upon this, becauſe Sir George Jeffreys inſinuated " to the Jury, as if I had made a Story, about " going thither: But I never ſaid that was the " only Reaſon, and I will now truly and plainly " add you the reſt.

" I was, the Day before this Meeting, come " to Town for two or three Days, as I had done " once or twice before, having a very near and " dear Relation lying in a languiſhing and deſpe- " rate Condition: And the Duke of Monmouth " came to me, and told me, He was extremely glad " I was come to Town; for my Lord Shaftsbury, " and ſome hot Men, would undoe us all. —— How " ſo, my Lord? (I ſaid.) —— Why (anſwer'd he) " they will certainly do ſome diſorderly thing or o- " ther, if great Care be not taken; and therefore, " for God's ſake, uſe your Endeavour with your " Friends to prevent any thing of this kind. He " told me there would be Company at Mr. Shep- " pard's that Night, and deſired me to be at home " in the Evening, and he would call me; which " he did. And when I came into the Room, I " ſaw Mr. Rumſey by the Chimney, though he " ſwears he came in afterward; and there were " Things ſaid by ſome, with much more Heat " than Judgment, which I did ſufficiently diſap- " prove; and yet for theſe Things I ſtand con- " demn'd: But, I thank God, my Part was ſin- " cere and well meant. It is, I know, inferred " from hence, and preſſed to me, that I was ac- " quainted with theſe Heats, and Ill Deſigns, and " did not diſcover them: But this could be but " Miſpriſion of Treaſon at moſt; ſo I die Innocent " of the Crime I ſtand condemn'd for. I hope, " no Body will imagine that ſo mean a Thought " ſhould enter into me, as to go about to ſave my " ſelf, by accuſing others: The Part that ſome " have acted lately of that kind has not been ſuch " as to invite me to love Life at ſuch a rate.

" As for the Sentence of Death paſſed upon me, " I cannot but think it a very hard one; for no- " thing was ſworn againſt me (whether true or " falſe, I will not now examine) but ſome Diſ- " courſes about making ſome Stirs. And this is " not Levying War againſt the King, which is " Treaſon by the Statute of Edw. III. and not " the conſulting and diſcourſing about it, which " was all that is witneſſed againſt me: But by a " ſtrange Fetch, the deſign of ſeizing the Guards " was conſtru'd a deſign of killing the King; and " ſo I was in that Caſt.

" And now I have truly and ſincerely told what " my Part was, in that which cannot be more " than a bare Miſpriſion; and yet I am condemn'd " as guilty of a Deſign of killing the King. I " pray God lay not this to the Charge, neither of " the King, Council, nor Judges, nor Sheriffs, " nor Jury: And for the Witneſſes, I pity them, " and wiſh them well. I ſhall not reckon up the " Particulars wherein they did me Wrong, I had " rather their own Conſciences would do that; " to which, and the Mercies of God, I leave " them: Only I ſhall averr, That what I ſaid of " my not hearing Col. Rumſey deliver any Meſ- " ſage from my Lord Shaftsbury, was true; for " I always deteſted Lying, though never ſo much " to my Advantage; and I hope none will be ſo " unjuſt and uncharitable, as to think I would " venture on it in theſe my laſt Words, for which " I am ſo ſoon to give an Account to the Great " God, the Searcher of Hearts, and Judge of all " Things.

" From the Time of chuſing Sheriffs, I con- " cluded the Heat in that Matter would produce " ſomething of this kind; and I am not much ſur- " priz'd to find it fall upon me: And I wiſh what " is done to me may put a Stop, and ſatiate ſome " People's Revenge, and that no more innocent " Blood be ſhed; for I muſt and do ſtill look up- " on mine to be ſuch, ſince I know I was guilty " of no Treaſon; and therefore I would not be- " tray my Innocency by Flight, (though much " preſs'd to it;) of which I do not, I thank God, " yet repent, how fatal ſoever it may have ſeemed " to have proved to me: For I look'd upon my " Death in this manner (I thank God) with other " Eyes than the World does. I know I ſaid but " little at the Tryal, and I ſuppoſe it looks more “ like Innocence than Guilt: I was alſo adviſed not to confeſs Matter of Fact plainly, ſince that certainly muſt have brought me within the Guilt of Miſpriſion: And being thus reſtrain'd from dealing frankly and openly, I choſe rather to ſay little, than to depart from that Ingenuity, that, by the Grace of God, I had carry'd along with me, in the former part of my Life; and ſo could eaſier be ſilent, and leave the whole Matter to the Conſciences of the Jury, than to make the beſt and ſolemneſt part of my Life ſo different from the Courſe of it, as the uſing little Tricks and Evaſions muſt have been. Nor did I ever pretend to any great Readineſs in Speaking. I wiſh thoſe Gentlemen of the Law, who have it, would make more Conſcience in the uſe of it, and not run Men down, and, by Strains and Fetches, impoſe on eaſy and willing Juries, to the Ruin of innocent Men: For to kill by Forms and Subtilties of the Law, is the worſt ſort of Murther: But I wiſh the Rage of hot Men, and the Partiality of Juries, may be ſtopp'd with my Blood; which I would offer up with ſo much the more Joy, if I thought I ſhould be the laſt that were to ſuffer in ſuch a way.

" like

1683. 35 Car. II.

“ Since my Sentence I have had but few Thoughts, but Preparatory one's for Death; yet the Importunity of my Friends, and particularly the beſt and deareſt Wife in the World, prevail'd with me to ſign Petitions, and make an Addreſs for my Life; to which I was ever averſe: For (I thank God) though in all reſpects I have liv'd the happieſt and contented'ſt Man of the World (for now very near fourteen Years,) yet I am ſo willing to leave all, that it was not without difficulty that I did any thing for the ſaving of my Life, that was begging; but I was willing to let my Friends ſee what Power they had over me, and that I was not obſtinate nor ſullen, but would do any thing that an honeſt Man could do, for their Satisfaction; which was the only Motive that ſway'd, or had any weight with me.

“ And now to Sum up all; as I had not any Deſign againſt the King's Life, or the Life of any Man whatſoever, ſo I never was in any Contrivance of altering the Government. What the Heats, Paſſions and Vanities of other Men have occaſion'd, I ought not to be reſponſible for; nor could I help them, though I now ſuffer for them. But the Will of the Lord be done, into whoſe Hands I commend my Spirit; —— And truſt that thou, O moſt merciful Father, haſt forgiven all my Tranſgreſſions, the Sins of my Youth, and all the Errors of my paſt Life; and that thou wilt not lay my ſecret Sins and Ignorances to my Charge, but wilt graciouſly ſupport me, during that ſmall time of Life now before me, and aſſiſt me in my laſt Moments, and not leave me then to be diſorder'd by Fear, or any other Temptations, but make the Light of thy Countenance to ſhine upon me: Thou art my Sun, and my Shield; and as thou ſupporteſt me by thy Grace, ſo I hope thou wilt hereafter Crown me with Glory, and receive [a] me into the Fellowſhip of Angels and Saints, in that bleſſed Inheritance purchaſed for me by my moſt merciful Redeemer, who is, I truſt, at thy Right Hand, preparing a place for me, and is ready to receive me; into whoſe Hands I commend my Spirit.

In the beginning of Auguſt, a Deſcription was given, and a Reward promiſed, for the diſcovery of theſe Conſpirators that fled; Richard and Francis Goodenough, Richard Nelthorp, Nathanael Wade, Joſeph Tyley, Stephen Lobb, Hugh Weſtlach, Edward Norton, John Row, John Ayloffe, and Robert Ferguſon, of whom this laſt was thus deſcrib'd, A tall lean Man, dark brown Hair, a great Roman Noſe, thin Jaw'd, heat in his Face, ſpeaks in the Scotch Tone, a ſharp piercing Eye, ſtoops a little in the Shoulders; he hath a ſhuffling Gate that differs from all Men, wears his Perriwig down almoſt over his Eyes, about 45 or 46 Years old.

Algernoon Sidney's hard Uſage.

Under a vigorous purſuit of this Plot, the Honourable Colonel Algernoon Sidney was taken up, not directly for a Plotter, but for a Republican and a Fanatick: He lay ſome time in the Tower, and was brought thence, by Habeas Corpus, on the 7th of November, to the King's-Bench-Bar, where he was arraign'd, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the King, and levying War againſt his Majeſty. To which he pleaded not Guilty, and deſired a Fortnight's time for his Tryal; which being granted, he came to his ſaid Tryal on the 21ſt of November, and was found guilty. He was known to be a Perſon of excellent Parts, and political Knowledge; and yet he was obſerv'd to ſay very little in his own Defence, as believing whatever he ſhould ſay would ſignifie nothing with that Judicature, who he thought had already prejudg'd him: And ſo it was really in effect. For as the learned Sir John Hawles has well remark'd, “He was merely talk'd to death, under the Notion of a Commonwealth's-man; and found Guilty, by a Jury who were not much more proper Judges in the Caſe, than they would have been, if what he had wrote had been done by him in Syriac or Arabick. It's obſervable, the Indictment againſt him was never Preſented to the Grand Jury before they came into the Hall, and yet they found it immediately. The greateſt part of the Evidence (as it was in my Lord Ruſſell's Caſe) was only hear-ſay; and Weſt, whoſe Evidence was once rejected, was now admitted to tell a long Story of what he had heard by common Fame, and in mix'd Converſation. My Lord Howard was Rhetorical even to Pedantry, upon the Matter, according to his vain Cuſtom. The two chief Articles againſt him, were, His ſending a Meſſenger into Scotland, to invite them into a Rebellion; And his writing a Treaſonable Libel, found in his Cloſet, upon the Original and Forms of Government.

As to the firſt Fact, the Priſoner abſolutely deny'd it. As to the other, he anſwer'd, That if the Papers were his, they might be written long ſince, in Anſwer to Sir Robert Filmer's Book, for his own Diverſion, and not for Publication. But one of the Council warmly urg'd this new Axiom in Law, Scribere eſt Agere, and cited this Paſſage out of the ſaid Writing; The King is ſubject to the Law of God, as he is a Man; and to the People that made him ſuch, as a King: And further argued, That the ſaid Author had maliciouſly produced ſeveral Examples, how ſome evil Princes had been ſometimes deſtroy'd by a popular Fury, and others had been depos'd. It was never ſo much as prov'd to be his Hand Writing: But whatever the writing of thoſe Papers was then thought to

[a] See a Paper entitled, The Opinion is this that Reſiſtance may be uſed in caſe our Religion and Rights ſhould be invaded. The Writer, Mr. Sam. Johnſon tells us it was written in Vindication of my Lord Ruſſell of ever bleſſed Memory, whoſe Opinion it was, and from whom it could not be wreſted at his Death. The wretched Author of all our Miſeries, and the everlaſting Enemy of our Country knows very well at what diſadvantage that great Lord was taken, when he was practis'd upon to retract that Opinion, and to bequeath a Legacy of Slavery to his Country. Collect. of Papers by Mr. Samuel Johnſon.

1683. 35 Car. II. be, the Printing of them has been ſince found to be ſafe and legal, and they are no more than an Eſſay upon Government, with a ſtrong Byaſs to a Commonwealth. The Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys ſhew'd himſelf an angry Party againſt him; for without any regard to the Noble Family of the Earls of Leiceſter, and to the Name of the Sidney's, he was pleas'd to tell the Jury, that the Priſoner was born a Traytor. After his Condemnation he is ſaid to have deſpiſed the way of Petitioning to his Majeſty about the diſpoſal of his Body; but by the application of his Friends, he had the Honour, on the 7th of December, to die upon a Scaffold erected on Tower-Hill, where he made this SPEECH:

Men, Brethren and Fathers; Friends, Countrymen and Strangers;

His dying Speech. “IT may be expected that I ſhould now ſay ſome great Matters unto you: But the rigour of the Seaſon, and the infirmities of my Age, encreaſed by a cloſe Impriſonment of above five Months, doth not permit me.

“Moreover, we live in an Age that maketh Truth paſs for Treaſon: I dare not ſay any thing contrary unto it; and the Ears of thoſe that are about me, will probably be found too tender to hear it. My Tryal and Condemnation doth ſufficiently evidence this.

“Weſt, Rumſey and Keyling, who were brought to prove the Plot, ſaid no more of me, than that they knew me not; and ſome others, equally unknown unto me, had uſed my Name, and that of ſome others, to give a little Reputation unto their Deſigns. The Lord Howard is too infamous by his Life, and the many Perjuries not to be denied, or rather ſworn by himſelf, to deſerve mention; and being a ſingle Witneſs, would be of no value, though he had been of an unblemiſh'd Credit, or had not ſeen and confeſs'd that the Crimes committed by him would be pardon'd, only for committing more; and even the Pardon promis'd, could not be obtain'd till the drudgery of Swearing was over.

“This being laid aſide, the whole Matter is reduc'd to the Papers ſaid to be found in my Cloſet by the King's Officers, without any other Proof of their being written by me, than what is taken from the Suppoſition upon the Similitude of an Hand, that is eaſily counterfeited, and which have been lately declar'd, in the Lady Car's Caſe, to be no lawful Evidence in Criminal Cauſes.

“But, if I had been ſeen to write them, the Matter would not be much altered; they plainly appear to relate unto a large Treatiſe written long ſince, in Anſwer to Filmer's Book, which, by all intelligent Men, is thought to be grounded upon wicked Principles, equally pernicious unto Magiſtrates and People.

“If he might publiſh unto the World his Opinion, That all Men are born, under a Neceſſity, deriv'd from the Laws of God and Nature, to ſubmit unto an abſolute Kingly Government, which could be reſtrain'd by no Law or Oath; and that he that hath the Power, whether he came unto it by Creation, Election, Inheritance, Uſurpation, or any other way, had the Right; none muſt oppoſe his Will, but the Perſons and Eſtates of his Subjects muſt be indiſpenſably ſubject unto it: —— I know not why I might not have publiſh'd my Opinion to the contrary, without the Breach of any Law I have yet known,

“I might, as freely as he, publickly have declared my Thoughts, and the Reaſons upon which they were grounded: And I am perſuaded to believe, that God had left Nations unto the liberty of ſetting up Governments as beſt pleaſed themſelves. 1683. 35 Car. II.

“That Magiſtrates were ſet up for the good of Nations, not Nations for the Honour or Glory of the Magiſtrates.

“That the Right and Power of Magiſtrates in every Country, was that which the Laws of that Country made it be.

“That thoſe Laws were to be obſerv'd; and the Oaths taken by them, having the Force of a Contract between Magiſtrate and People, could not be violated without danger of diſſolving the whole Fabrick.

“That Uſurpation could give no Right; and the moſt dangerous of all Enemies to Kings, were they, who raiſing their Power to an exorbitant height, allow'd unto Uſurpers all the Rights belonging unto it.

“That ſuch Uſurpations being ſeldom compaſs'd without the Slaughter of the reigning Perſon or Family, the worſt of all Villanies was thereby rewarded with the moſt glorious Privileges.

“That if ſuch Doctrines were receiv'd, they would ſtir up Men to the deſtruction of Princes, with more violence than all the Paſſions that have hitherto raged in the Hearts of the moſt unruly.

“That none could be ſafe, if ſuch a Reward were propoſed unto any that could deſtroy them.

“That few would be ſo gentle as to ſpare even the Beſt; if, by their deſtruction, one, of a wild uſurper, could become God's anointed; and by the moſt execrable Wickedneſs, inveſt himſelf with that divine Character. ——

“This is the ſcope of the whole Treatiſe; the Writer gives ſuch Reaſons, as at preſent did occur unto him, to prove it. This ſeems to agree with the Doctrines of the moſt reverenc'd Authors of all Times, Nations and Religions: The beſt and wiſeſt Kings have ever acknowledg'd it. The preſent King of France hath declared, That Kings have that happy want of Power, that they can do nothing contrary unto the Laws of their Country; and grounds his Quarrel with the King of Spain, Anno 1667. upon that Principle. King James, in his Speech to the Parliament, Anno 1603. doth in the higheſt degree aſſert it: The Scriptures ſeem to declare it. If nevertheleſs the Writer was miſtaken, he might have been refuted by Law, Reaſon and Scripture; and no Man, for ſuch Matters, was ever otherwiſe puniſh'd, than by being made to ſee his Error: And it hath not (as I think) been known, that they had been referr'd to the Judgment of a Jury, compoſed of Men utterly unable to comprehend them.

“But there was little of this in my Caſe; the Extravagance of my Perſecutors goes higher: The abovemention'd Treatiſe was never finiſh'd, nor could be in many Years, and moſt probably would never have been. So much as is of it, was written long ſince, never review'd nor ſhew'd unto any Man; and not the fiftieth part of it was produc'd, and not the tenth of that afforded to be read. That which was never known unto thoſe who are ſaid to have conſpir'd with me, was ſaid to be intended to ſtir up the People, in proſecution of the Deſigns of thoſe Conſpirators.

“When nothing of particular application unto Time, Place, or Perſon, could be found in it, (as hath ever been done by thoſe who endeavoured to raiſe Inſurrections,) all was ſupply'd by Innuendo's.

“Whatſoever is ſaid of the Expulſion of Tarquin, the Inſurrection againſt Nero, the Slaughter of Caligula or Domitian, the Tranſlation of

“the

1683. 35 Car. II

" the Crown of France from Merovius's Race unto Pepin, and from his Deſcendants, unto Hugh Capet, and the like, are applied, by Innuendo, unto the King.

" They have not conſider'd, that if ſuch Acts of State be not good, there is not a King in the World that has any Title to that Crown he wears; nor can have any, unleſs he could deduce his Pedigree from the eldeſt Son of Noah, and ſhew that the Succeſſion had ſtill continu'd in the eldeſt of the eldeſt Line, and been ſo deduced to him.

" Every one may ſee what Advantage this would be to all the Kings of the World; and whether that failing, it were not better for them to acknowledge they had receiv'd their Crown by the conſent of willing Nations; or to have no better Title unto them than Uſurpation and Violence, which by the ſame ways may be taken from them.

" But I was long ſince told, That I muſt die, or the Plot muſt die.

" Leſt the means of deſtroying the beſt Proteſtants in England ſhould fail, the Bench muſt be fill'd with ſuch as had been Blemiſhes to the Bar.

" None but ſuch as theſe would have adviſ'd with the King's Councel, of the means of bringing a Man to death; ſuffer a Jury to be pack'd by the King's Solicitors and the under Sheriff; admit of Jury-men who are not Freeholders; receive ſuch Evidence as is abovemention'd; refuſe a Copy of an Indictment, or ſuffer the Statute of 46 Edw. III. to be read, that doth expreſſly enact, It ſhould in no Caſe be denied unto any Man, upon any Occaſion whatſoever; over-rule the moſt important Points of Law, without hearing. And whereas the Statute of 25 Edw. III. upon which they ſaid I ſhould be Try'd, doth reſerve unto the Parliament all Conſtructions to be made in Points of Treaſon; they could aſſume themſelves not only a Power to make Conſtructions, but ſuch Conſtructions as neither agree with Law, Reaſon, or common Senſe.

" By theſe means I am brought to this Place: —— The Lord forgive theſe Practices, and avert the Evils that threaten the Nation for them. The Lord ſanctifie theſe my Sufferings unto me; and though I fall as a Sacrifice unto Idols, ſuffer not Idolatry to be eſtabliſh'd in this Land. Bleſs thy People, and ſave them; defend thine own Cauſe, and defend thoſe that defend it: Stir up ſuch as are faint; direct thoſe that are willing; confirm thoſe that waver; give Wiſdom and Integrity unto all: Order all things ſo, as may moſt redound to thine own Glory. Grant that I may die glorifying thee for all thy Mercies, and that at the laſt thou haſt permitted me to be ſingled out as a Witneſs of thy Truth, and even, by the Confeſſion of my Oppoſers, for that OLD CAUSE in which I was from my Youth engaged, and for which thou haſt often and wonderfully declar'd thy ſelf.

On the laſt Day of Michaelmas-Term, the Lord Brandon Gerard, Mr. Hambden, Jun. Mr. Booth, Mr. Trenchard, Mr. Charlton, and Major Wildman, who had been all accus'd as Conſpirators in the late Plot, were brought by Habeas Corpus from the Tower to the King's-Bench-Bar; and there being but one Witneſs againſt them, they were admitted to give Bail for their appearance the firſt Day of the next Term: Which appearance they made on the 23d of January, and their Recognizances were continu'd. Mr. Hambden had Notice, that his Tryal would be on the firſt Wedneſday in February; where dropping the Treaſon, he was found guilty of a high Miſdemeanor, and was fin'd forty thouſand Pounds to the King, to find Sureties for his good Behaviour during Life, and to be committed till it was perform'd: But the Lord Brandon, Mr. Booth, Major Wildman, Mr. Charlton, Mr. Trenchard, and ſome others that were Bailed the laſt Term, had now the Favour to be diſcharg'd.

Mr Hambden fined, and others diſcharg'd.

1683. 35 Car. II.

An Information had been exhibited the laſt Term againſt Mr. Lawrence Braddon, and Mr. Hugh Speak, ſetting forth, " That whereas the late Earl of Eſſex, committed to the Tower for High-Treaſon, had, on the 13th of July laſt, cut his own Throat, and was, by Inquiſition, taken before the Coroner of the Liberty of the Tower, found Felo de ſe; the ſaid Braddon and Speak, to defame the Government, had conſpired together, by writing and otherwiſe, to ſpread a falſe and ſcandalous Report, That the ſaid Earl was murder'd by ſome Perſons about him; and had endeavour'd to ſuborn Witneſſes to teſtifie the ſame." The Tryal was brought on, on the 7th of February, and having laſted till three in the Afternoon, the Court roſe, leaving the Jury to give in a private Verdict to one of the Judges, which they deliver'd next Morning, and it was, That the ſaid Braddon was guilty of the whole Matter charg'd in the Information; and that Speak was guilty of all the Matter except the Subornation.

Tryal of Braddon and Speak.

John Darby, a Printer, had been convicted upon an Information the laſt Term, for a Miſdemeanor, in Printing a Seditious Libel call'd, My Lord Ruſſell's Speech; and he was now, on Febr. 1. brought to the Court of King's-Bench, to receive his Judgment. He humbly ſubmitted himſelf to the Court, and begg'd Pardon, with a Promiſe never to commit the like Offence: And therefore the Court gave a milder Sentence, That he ſhould pay twenty Marks for a Fine to the King, and find Sureties for his good Behaviour for a Twelvemonth; and till this was paid and done, he ſhould be committed to the Priſon of the King's-Bench.

Conviction of John Darby a Printer.

Another Information had been exhibited againſt Sir Samuel Barnardiſton, for writing and publiſhing in four Letters, to ſeveral Perſons in the Country, moſt ſcandalous and ſeditious Reflections againſt the Government, and concerning the late horrid Conſpiracy: Of which, in a Tryal had at the Guildhall, before my Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, on Febr. 14. he was found guilty.

Information againſt Sir Sam. Barnardiſton.

Another Information had been preferr'd the laſt Term, againſt Mr. Johnſon, a Clergyman of good Parts and Character, for writing and publiſhing what they term'd a very ſcandalous and ſeditious Book, call'd, Julian the Apoſtate; wherein the Author had only confuted thoſe Notions of Paſſive Obedience and Non-reſiſtance which ſome Writers, and thoſe eſpecially of his own Order, had carry'd up to a Conſequence of Tyranny and Slavery. He was call'd to his Sentence on Febr. 11. when the Court of King's-Bench had judg'd, " That he ſhould pay five hundred Marks for a Fine to the King; That he find Sureties for his good Behaviour for a Year; that he ſhould be committed to the Priſon of the King's-Bench till this be paid and done, and that the Book be burnt by the Hands of the common Hangman.

Againſt Mr. Sam. Johnſon.

The Lords in the Tower, upon a Parliamentary Impeachment, had often mov'd for Bail, which could never be obtain'd: But the Earl of Danby made now another Motion in Hilary-Term, and had the Caſe argu'd by learned Councel; and on February 12. the Judges deliver'd their Opinions ſeverally, giving their Reaſons, and concluding all in one Judgment, That his Lordſhip ought to be Bail'd: And accordingly Bail was taken, his Lordſhip being bound in a Recognizance of twenty thouſand Pounds; and the Dukes of Somerſet and Albemarle, and the Earls of Oxford and Cheſterfield, his Sureties in five thouſand Pounds a-piece, upon condition,

The Earl of Danby Bail'd.

1683. 35 Car. II.

condition, That the Earl of Danby do appear in the Houſe of Lords the next Seſſion of Parliament, and not depart without leave of that Court. This was to be a Precedent for the Liberty of the Popiſh Lords; and therefore, on the ſame Day the Earl of Powys, the Lord Arundel of Wardour, and the Lord Bellaſis (the Lord Petre dying in the Tower, under Confinement,) were brought from the Tower, and the Earl of Tyrone from the Gate-houſe, to the Court of King's-Bench, upon Writs of Habeas Corpus, praying, by their Councel, to be admitted to Bail. Mr. Attorney-General declar'd, he had Order from his Majeſty to conſent to any thing that the Court ſhould think fit to be done: Upon which my Lord Chief-Juſtice and the other Judges did agree, That for the ſame Reaſons they had given in the Earl of Danby's Caſe, theſe Lords ought likewiſe to be Bail'd; and accordingly Recognizances and Sureties were accepted.

The Popiſh Lords Bail'd.

The Duke of Monmouth had abſconded (or ſeem'd to do ſo) ever ſince the Proclamation for apprehending the Conſpirators; but now, in confidence of the King's Affection, and a Satisfaction in his own dutiful Intentions to the King, he reſolv'd to diſcover himſelf: So he wrote a Letter to his Majeſty, with ſome acknowledgments of his Folly, and promiſing better Obedience for the future. The King, in Anſwer, requir'd him to ſurrender himſelf to the Secretary of State: Which he did not immediately care to venture. He wrote again to the King, and in this Letter he aggravates his ſorrow, and tortures of Mind, for his Failings againſt his Majeſty; confeſſing, that being fatally circumvented by the Inchantments of others, he was precipitated into thoſe Evils, the Conſequences whereof he had not expected. The King, at laſt, granted him an Interview, as appears by the Duke's own Journal taken in his Pocket after Sedgmore Fight: "His Majeſty, at their firſt meeting, aſſur'd the "Duke of his not believing he ever knew any "thing of the Rye-houſe Plot; but (ſays the King) "as things go, I muſt behave my ſelf as if I did be-"lieve it. The King ſaw him on the 13th of Octo-"ber, and there was another meeting to have been "on the 2d of November; but there being an ex-"traordinary Council, the King did not come." Theſe Interviews were held at one Major Long's Houſe in the City, who has often atteſted the Truth of it. "The 4th of November the King "came again, was very kind, and gave the Duke "Directions how to manage his Buſineſs, and what "to ſay, ordering a Perſon to come to him every "Night till Matters were ripe. On the 9th the "Duke was told his Buſineſs ſhould be done to "his Mind the next Week; That Intereſt was "made to the Duke of York for him by another "Perſon, which his Majeſty took kindly of that "Perſon. The Meſſenger ſaid at parting, there "ſhould be nothing requir'd of him but what "was ſafe and honourable; adding, ſomething "muſt be done to blind the Duke of York. No-"vemb. 15. the Lord who came between the King "and him, brought the Duke the Copy of the "Letter he was to write to pleaſe his Royal "Highneſs. The Duke was perſuaded to do this, "yet before he parted with the Letter he deſir'd "to know in whoſe Hands it was to be depoſited, "for he would truſt it with none but the King. "The Lord told him it ſhould be as he would "have it; though if his Royal Highneſs ask'd a "Copy it could not be refus'd. The Duke ſaid, "he muſt refer himſelf intirely to his Majeſty's "Pleaſure. In this Letter he was made to write, "That his Crimes appear'd to him with ſo terrible "an Aſpect, that he would rather Die than be tor-"mented with the Stings of them: He therefore im-"plor'd the King's Grace and Pardon, which he did "not deſire but by the Mediation of his Royal High-"neſs." The 24th of November the ſame Lord came to him, and acquainted him, "That his "Majeſty's Command was, to render himſelf the "next Day; caution'd him to play his Part, to "avoid Queſtions as much as poſſible, and to ſeem "abſolutely converted to his Unkle's Intereſt, bid-"ding him bear with ſome Words that might "ſeem harſh." The way being thus made for the Duke of Monmouth's appearance at Court, and for his formal Reconciliation to the King, a Relation of it was thus given to the Publick, to pleaſe the Duke of York, and to deceive the People.

Duke of Monmouth ſurrenders himſelf.

The Affection and Arts of the King.

Whitehall, November 25. His Majeſty having this Afternoon called an extraordinary Council, was pleas'd to acquaint them, That the Duke of Monmouth did laſt Night ſurrender himſelf to Mr. Secretary Jenkins, having before writ a very ſubmiſſive Letter to his Majeſty, intirely reſigning himſelf to his Majeſty's diſpoſal. That his Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs went down to Mr. Secretary's Office, where the Duke of Monmouth was, who ſhewed himſelf very ſenſible of his Crime in the late Conſpiracy, making a full Declaration of it: And that having ſhew'd an extraordinary Penitence for the ſame, and made a particular Submiſſion to his Royal Highneſs, for his Miſbehaviour towards him; his Majeſty and his Royal Highneſs receiv'd ſo much Satisfaction, that, upon his Royal Highneſs's deſire and intreaty, his Majeſty was pleas'd to pardon the ſaid Duke, and thereupon did Order Mr. Attorney-General to ſtop farther Proceedings againſt him: But Order'd he ſhould proceed, notwithſtanding, againſt all the reſt of the Conſpirators.

The Duke of Monmouth, in his own Journal, farther obſerves, "That his Majeſty ſeeing him "at Night, could not diſſemble his Satisfaction, "but preſs'd his Hand; which he had not done "ſince his Return from the French Service. The "King acted his Part very well, ſo did the Duke; "and his Royal Highneſs was not ill pleaſed. "The next Day his Majeſty took the Duke aſide, "and falling on the Buſineſs of the Lord Ruſſell, "ſaid, He enclin'd to have ſav'd him, but was "forc'd to conſent to his Death, otherwiſe he muſt "have broke with his Brother. And when the "Duke was going to remonſtrate how cruelly "that noble Lord had been dealt with, the King "bid him think no more of it. At Night, the "Lord, who was the King and the Duke's Con-"fident, told his Grace, He fear'd the Duke of "York began to ſmell out his Majeſty's Carriage; "for a Courtier had that Morning told his Royal "Highneſs, All that was done was but a Sham; "and his Royal Highneſs appearing to be the Inſtru-"ment of the Reconciliation, was a mere Trick." 'Tis certain the Duke of York did ſuſpect the Double-dealing; and was ſo far incens'd at it, that he would not be content, till the King demanded of the Duke of Monmouth the Publication of his two Letters; one of which he had written before his Surrendring, and the other after. In this latter he was brought to ſay, He was inform'd 'twas reported of him as if he had deſign'd to extenuate the late Conſpiracy, and traduce the Teſtimony againſt them that ſuffer'd. His Majeſty and the Duke knew how ingenuouſly he confeſs'd all things, and that he was not conſcious of the leaſt Evil againſt his Majeſty: It grieved him, however, that he had ſo greatly countenanc'd the ſaid Conſpiracy. He would publiſh this for his Vindication, beſeeching his Majeſty not to look back, but that he would pleaſe to forget thoſe Injuries which he had forgiven: It ſhould be his Care, for the future, to ſin no more, or ſuffer himſelf to be miſled from his Duty. He would ſpend his whole Life, to deſerve that Pardon which he had granted to,

Duke of York diſſatisfy'd.

His Moſt Dutiful MONMOUTH.

4 To

1683. 35 Car. II.

To this Motion of the King, the Duke humbly anſwer'd, "That the firſt Paper was ſign'd on "Aſſurance it ſhould never be made publick, and "therefore he muſt poſitively refuſe to conſent to "it; and that the laſt was got out of him by "Threats and Promiſes: So he earneſtly addreſs'd "himſelf to his Majeſty to have the firſt Letter "deliver'd back to him; and ſaid, he thought "the laſt was a Diminution of his Honour." The King uſed Arguments to perſuade him to conſent that all his Letters might be printed, as the only Means to continue him in his Favour, without offending his Royal Highneſs: But the Duke would by no means conſent, and therefore was to fall again under his Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, and muſt be baniſh'd from the Court. The Duke makes this Entry in his Journal, Novemb. 27. Several told me of the Storm that was brewing: Rumſey was with 39, (i. e. the Duke of York) and was ſeen to come out, crying, That he muſt accuſe a Man he lov'd. The King gave his ſecret Inſtructions to the Duke of Monmouth, that he ſhould, for his own Safety, go out of England: And yet his Majeſty wrote a Letter to him on Decemb. 19. bidding him ſtay till he heard farther from him. But it ſeems the King could not prevail with his Brother to forgive the Duke; and therefore he retir'd to Holland, and met with a noble Reception at the Hague. His Majeſty was well-pleas'd with the Entertainment he found in another Court; tho', for Reaſons of State, he was oblig'd to forbid him his own: He ſecretly ſupply'd him with Money, and ſometimes writ to him with his own Hand; and could never endure thoſe Courtiers, that (by miſtake) thought it a Complement to ſpeak ill of him, and to aggravate his Diſobedience to his Majeſty.

Duke of Monmouth again under the King's Diſpleaſure.

Marriage of the Lady Anne and George Prince of Denmark.

The moſt happy Action in this Year, was the Marriage of the Princeſs Anne to a Proteſtant Prince, George, Brother to the King of Denmark. 'Tis certain that the King, by his own Judgment, or by an over-ruling Providence, had taken Care that his two Nieces ſhould be ſtrictly bred up in the Religion of the Church of England, and both marry'd into Proteſtant Families, even againſt the Inclination, and the Deſign and Intereſt of their Father. The preſent Match had this Notice given of it by Authority:

Whitehall, July 28. "His Majeſty having been "pleaſed, upon Inſtance made unto him, in the "Name of the King of Denmark, to conſent, "that his Brother, Prince George, ſhould come "hither to make his Addreſſes to the Lady Anne, "his Majeſty's Niece, in order to Marriage: The "ſame was accordingly celebrated this Evening at "St. James's by the Biſhop of London, in the Preſence of their Majeſty's, their Royal Highneſſes, "and the Chiefeſt of the Nobility. And ſince "their Majeſties and their Royal Highneſſes, as "likewiſe the Prince and Princeſs, have upon this "Occaſion received the Complements and Con"gratulations of the Foreign Miniſters reſiding at "this Court.

An Order againſt Printing the Journals of the Houſe of Commons.

The King ſeem'd reſolv'd not to be troubled with another Houſe of Commons, and labour'd to ſuppreſs all Accounts of the late Proceedings in Parliament; as appears by this Order of Council, dated Novemb. 16. Whereas Mr. Jodrell, Clerk of the Houſe of Commons, hath this Day made Oath before his Majeſty in Council, that he is credibly inform'd, and well aſſured, that divers Bookſellers in London, and elſewhere, have ſurreptitiouſly obtained ſeveral Books, pretended to be Copies of all the Journals of the ſaid Houſe of Commons ever ſince his Majeſty's moſt happy Reſtauration, and do deſign to print the ſame, by which many Errors and Miſtakes will unavoidably happen therein. His Majeſty was this Day pleas'd to order in Council, that no Perſon whatever do preſume to print, or cauſe to be printed, the ſaid Journals, or any part thereof, without his Majeſty's Licenſe in that behalf firſt had and obtained. And it was farther ordered, that Notice of this his Majeſty's Pleaſure be publiſh'd in the next Gazette, to the end none may pretend Ignorance thereof.

Honours and Preferments.

As to Honours and Preferments: On Aug. 14. his Majeſty, as a Mark of his Royal Favour, Knighted William Halford of Welham, and Edward Wigley of Scraptoft in the County of Leiceſter, Eſq;. On Sept. 26. his Majeſty was pleas'd, as a Mark of the gracious Eſteem he had for the great and faithful Services which the Right Honourable Sir Francis North, Lord-Keeper of the Great Seal of England, had render'd the Crown, to create him a Baron of this Kingdom, by the Name and Style of Baron of Guilford, in the County of Surrey. About the ſame time, the Place of Lord-Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench being vacant by the Death of Sir Edmund Sanders, his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the ſame upon Sir George Jeffreys, Kt. and Bar. Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter; who, on Michaelmas-Day, was accordingly ſworn into that Office by the Lord-Keeper. His Majeſty was likewiſe pleas'd to conſtitute Sir Thomas Jones, one of the Judges of the King's-Bench, Lord-Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, in the room of Sir Francis Pemberton, who not being able to go into all the new Meaſures of the Court, had now obtain'd his Quietus. And Sir Richard Holloway, one of his Majeſty's Serjeants at Law, was ſworn one of the Judges of the King's-Bench, in the place of Mr. Juſtice Raymond, deceas'd. On Octob. 4. Mr. Attorney-General acquainted his Majeſty, that Judgment was entred upon the Quo-Warranto againſt the City of London, according to his Majeſty's Command: Whereupon the King commanded the late Lord-Mayor and Sheriffs of the City to attend him in Council: Who attended accordingly; and being call'd in, Sir William Pritchard was ſworn Lord-Mayor; and Peter Daniel, and Samuel Daſhwood, Eſq; took the uſual Oaths of Sheriffs; and his Majeſty then deliver'd to them their Commiſſions, under the Great Seal, to hold their reſpective Offices during his Pleaſure. His Majeſty was likewiſe pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Jenner of the Inner-Temple, Eſq; and to conſtitute him Recorder of the City of London: And on the ſame Day the Lord-Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys was ſworn of the Privy-Council. On New-Year's-Day Prince George of Denmark was elected a Knight-Companion of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, in a Chapter held at Whitehall, being firſt Knighted by the Sovereign, and then inveſted with the George and Garter: And on Jan. 10. the Dukes of Somerſet and Northumberland were elected Knights-Companions of the ſame Order. About the middle of January his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Style and Dignity of a Duke of this Kingdom upon Charles Earl of Burford, his Natural Son, by creating him Duke of St. Albans. On the firſt Day of Hilary-Term, Sir Thomas Jenner, Kt. John Wyndham, Eſq; Edwin Wyatt, Eſq; Edward Birch, Eſq; Henry Bedinfield, Eſq; Sir Edward Nevile, Kt. Sir Paul Barret, Kt. Anthony Farrington, Eſq; John Jeffreſon, Eſq; Edward Lutwiche, Eſq; Richard Heath, Eſq; Henry Selby, Eſq; John Millington, Eſq; Thomas Powell, Eſq; Owen Wynne, Eſq; and Sir George Pudſey, Kt. being called, by the King's Writ, to take upon them the State and Degree of Serjeants at Law, appear'd in the Court of Chancery, and took their Oaths, and perform'd the uſual Ceremonies of a Proceſſion to Weſtminſter-Hall

The Lord Mayor and Sheriffs made by the King's Commiſſion.

Call of Serjeants.

1683. 35 Car. II.

Hall on Jan. 31. when they preſented their Rings with this Servile Motto, A Deo Rex, à Rege Lex: Which ſome interpreted to be, a reſolving the Laws of England into the King's Will and Pleaſure.

Siege of Vienna.

This Year, abroad, was remarkable for the formidable Siege of Vienna by the Turks, and the raiſing of it by the King of Poland, and the Electors of Saxony and Bavaria: And likewiſe for the demoliſhing of Tangier, which the King of England could hold no longer, without an Expence of Men and Money, greater than he was willing to bear.

Demoliſhing of Tangier.

State of Religion.

In Matters of Religion the Diſſenters bore all the Odium of the late Conſpiracy, and were not only branded for expreſs Rebels and Villains[a], in multitude of Addreſſes preſented to the King, but were likewiſe ſeverely arraign'd by the King himſelf, in a ſolemn Form of Declaration to all his loving Subjects, concerning the Treaſonable Conſpiracy againſt his ſacred Perſon and Government, lately diſcover'd; appointed to be read in all Churches and Chappels within this Kingdom, as well on Sunday the 2d of September, as upon a Day of Publick Thankſgiving, (as followeth:)

Charles R.

The K.'s Declaration.

"IT hath been our Obſervation, That for ſeve-"ral Years laſt paſt, a malevolent Party "hath made it their Buſineſs to promote Sedition "by falſe News, Libellous Pamphlets, and other "wicked Arts, whereby they endeavour'd not only to render our Government odious, and our "moſt faithful Subjects ſuſpected to the People, "but even to incite them to a Diſlike and Hatred "of our Royal Perſon: Whereupon it was evi"dent to us, that the Heads of this Party could "have no other Aim but the Ruin of us and our "Government.

"And whilſt, by our utmoſt Care, we mani"feſted to all our Subjects our Zeal for the Main"tenance of the Proteſtant Religion, and our Re"ſolutions to govern according to Law; it was a "great Trouble to us, to find, that evil Perſons, "by miſrepreſenting our Actions to the People, "ſhould ſo far inſinuate themſelves into the Affe"ctions of the weaker Sort, as that they look'd "upon them as the only Patriots and Aſſertors of "their Religion and Liberties, and gave them"ſelves up intirely to their Conduct.

"As their Numbers encreaſed, ſo did their "Boldneſs, to that height, that by often ſhewing "themſelves in Tumults and Riots, and unlawful "and ſeditious Conventicles, they not only en"gaged, but proclaimed an Impunity to their "own Party, who thought themſelves already too "ſtrong for the Laws; and they ſeemed to be"lieve, that in a ſhort Time they ſhould gain up"on the People, ſo as to perſuade them to a total "Defection from the Government.

"But it pleaſed God, by theſe their violent "Ways, to open the Eyes of our good Subjects, "who eaſily foreſaw what Troubles theſe Me"thods would produce; and thereupon, with "great Courage, as well as Duty and Affection "towards us, upon all Occaſions, did manifeſt "their Reſolution and Readineſs in defence of "our Perſon, and Support of our Government, "and the Religion eſtabliſhed; and did likewiſe "convince the common People of the villainous "Deſigns of their factious Leaders, and the Mi"ſeries that would befall them, in purſuing ſuch "Courſes.

"By theſe Means the Factious Party loſt Ground "daily; and finding that it was impoſſible to keep "up the Spirits of their Followers againſt the "Religion eſtabliſh'd, and the Laws, whilſt we "were ſteady in the Maintenance and Execution "of them, became deſperate, and reſolved not to "truſt any longer to the ſlow Methods of Sedi"tion, but to betake themſelves to Arms; not "doubting, but that they remain'd ſtill ſtrong e"nough, by Force, to overturn the Government "which they could not undermine.

"It is hard to imagine, how Men of ſo many "different Intereſts and Opinions, could join in "any Enterprize; but it is certain they readily "concurr'd in the Reſolution of taking Arms to "deſtroy the Government, even before they had "agreed what to ſet up in the Place of it.

"To which Purpoſe they took ſeveral ways: "For whilſt ſome were contriving a general In"ſurrection in this Kingdom, and likewiſe in Scot"land; others were conſpiring to aſſaſſinate our "Royal Perſon, and our deareſt Brother, and to "maſſacre the Magiſtrates of our City of London, "and our Officers of State, that there might be "no appearance of Government, nor any means "for our Subjects to unite for their Defence.

"In caſe it had pleas'd God to permit theſe "wicked Deſigns to have taken effect, there could "have been nothing in proſpect but Confuſion: "For inſtead of the Reformation they pretended, "their Succeſs would have produc'd Diviſions "and Wars amongſt themſelves; until the pre"dominant Party would have enſlav'd the reſt, "and the whole Kingdom.

"But the divine Providence, which hath pre"ſerv'd us through the whole courſe of our Life, "hath at this time, in an extraordinary manner, "ſhew'd it ſelf, in the wonderful and gracious de"liverance of us, and our deareſt Brother, and all "our loyal Subjects, from this horrid and damna"ble Conſpiracy.

"As it is therefore our deſire, that all our lov"ing Subjects ſhould join with us, in giving "Thanks to Almighty God for this Mercy; ſo "we thought it neceſſary they ſhould be now, in "ſome meaſure, inform'd of the Fact, as it hath "been diſcover'd to us by undoubted Proof, and "the Confeſſion of divers of the Accomplices in "this Conſpiracy; whereof, though we have not "as yet perfectly traced all the particulars, the "principal and main Deſigns of it, nevertheleſs, "have appeared to be as followeth.

"About the Beginning of October laſt, when "the Heads of the Faction ſaw the Magiſtracy of "our City of London ſettled in Perſons of loyal "Principles, they became impatient, and fell im"mediately to conſult of riſing in Arms; for which "ſome thought their Party ſo well prepared, that "they could not fail of attaining their Ends when"ever they ſhould break out into open Force.

[a] Mr. Richard Baxter drew up the State of Engliſh Non-conformiſts, and wrote a Preface, dated Sept. 28. 1683. Wherein he complains —— the Goals are fill'd with Non-conformiſts: Nine Miniſters are now in Newgate, and many more in other Places, and almoſt all of them mulct and fined in far more than ever they were worth; their Goods and Books taken by Diſtreſs: They are fain to fly, or abſcond, that are not in Priſon; their Wives and Children in Diſtreſs and Want, &c. As I my ſelf was diſtreined of all my Goods and Books on five Convictions, before ever I heard of any Accuſation, or ſaw a Judge, &c.

A Narrative of the Sufferings of Thomas De Laune, for Writing, Printing, and Publiſhing, a late Book, called, A Plea for the Non-conformiſts; with ſome modeſt Reflections thereon. Directed to Dr. Calamy; in Obedience to whoſe Call that Work was undertaken. Written with his own Hand ſoon after his Sentence of Fine and Impriſonment in January 1683. London, 1706. 4*to.*

"Where-

1683. 35 Car. II.

" Whereupon there was a Meeting of ſome of " the principal Conſpirators, to agree about the " beſt Means to maſter our Guards, and to ſeize " our Perſon: But, upon Conſideration, they " found it neceſſary to prepare their Friends in " the ſeveral Counties, as alſo the diſaffected Party " in Scotland, to join with them; without which, " any Attempt in our ſaid City, or upon our " Guards, appeared too raſh to be undertaken: " ſo that they laid aſide the Thoughts of a preſent " Riſing, and diſpoſed themſelves to find, by a " Correſpondence with Scotland, and with ſeveral " Parts of this our Kingdom, how far they might " be aſſiſted by a general Inſurrection, ſo that " they might not, in human Probability, fail of " Succeſs.

" Whilſt this firſt Deſign was forming, ſome " Villains were likewiſe carrying on that horrid " and execrable Plot, of aſſaſſinating our Royal " Perſon, and our Deareſt Brother, in our com- " ing from New-Market, and Money was depo- " ſited for that Purpoſe: But by the Shortneſs of " the Time, (we being then immediately upon " our Return) and for want of neceſſary Prepara- " tions, they were forced to defer the Execution " of it till farther Opportunity.

" It was then propoſed among them, whether " they ſhould attempt the ſame at our next going " to New-Market in March laſt? But ſome ob- " jected, that our Guards which uſually remain " here for ſome time after our Departure, wou'd " be capable of making a great Oppoſition upon " the Arrival of the News: For which Reaſon, " and becauſe they were not then in a ſufficient " Readineſs, it was agreed to be done at our Re- " turn from New-Market.

" The Place appointed, was the Houſe of one " Richard Rumbold, a Malſter, call'd the Rye, " near Hoddeſdon in the County of Hertford: " And it was reſolved, That Forty Perſons in " Number, who were to be Actors in this Aſſaſſi- " nation, under the Command of the ſaid Richard " Rumbold, ſhould hide themſelves in or near the " ſaid Houſe, and when our Coach ſhould come " over againſt them, then three or four were to " ſhoot with Blunderbuſſes at the Poſtilion and " Horſes; and if they ſhould fail in killing the " Horſes, ſome were to be ready in the Way, " who, in the Habit of Labourers, ſhould turn " a Cart croſs the Paſſage, and ſo ſtop our Coach: " Others were appointed to ſhoot into the Coach " where our Royal Perſon and our Deareſt Bro- " ther were to be: Others to fire upon the " Guards that ſhould be then attending us. And " it was farther reſolved, That upon the ſame " Day many Lords, and other Perſons of Quality, " whom they ſuppoſed favourable to their Deſign, " ſhould be invited to dine in our City of London, " that they might be the more ready to appear " among the Citizens, upon Arrival of the News. " The Actors in the ſaid Aſſaſſination having con- " triv'd the manner of their Eſcape by a nearer " Paſſage than the uſual Road, by which Means " they hoped to get to London as ſoon as the News " could be brought thither.

" They thought it would be eaſy, upon their " perpetrating this horrid Fact, to poſſeſs them- " ſelves of the Government, preſuming upon the " Numbers of the Diſaffected.

" But leſt the Blackneſs of ſuch an Action might " deter others from joining with them, they pre- " pared to palliate it as far as they could, by ſome " Remonſtrance, or Declaration, which was rea- " dy to be printed and diſperſed in that Confu- " ſion to amuſe the People. And leſt our Officers " of State, and the Magiſtrates of our ſaid City, " with the Militia thereof, and other our loyal " Subjects, ſhould be able to put ſome Stop to their " Career, they reſolved to follow this Blow with " a Maſſacre; wherein they particularly deſign'd " for immediate Slaughter, our Officers of State, " the preſent Lord-Mayor and Sheriffs, and the " Magiſtracy of our City, and other our Subjects " that had been moſt eminent for their Loyalty.

1683. 35 Car. II.

" But it pleaſed Almighty God, by his won- " derful Providence, to defeat their Counſels, by " the ſudden Fire at New-Market, which neceſ- " ſitated our Return from thence before the Time " we had appointed.

" Yet theſe Villains were not thereby diſcou- " raged from purſuing the ſame bloody Deſign, " but reſolved to take the firſt Opportunity for " effecting the ſame; and propoſed to themſelves, " that it might be done either in our Paſſage from " Windſor to Hampton-Court, or in our Journey " to Wincheſter, or when we ſhould go by Water " in our Barge, or under Bedford-Garden-Wall, " as we ſhould paſs that Way, or at the Bull-Feaſt " which was to be in Red-Lion-Fields; they be- " ing inform'd, that we and our deareſt Brother " had Intentions of coming thither.

" And that they might be the better prepared, " when there ſhould be Occaſion, by having a cer- " tain Number of Arms lying always ready for " that Purpoſe, Arms for forty Men were beſpoke " in all haſte, (viz.) Thirty Carbines with Bells " and Swivels, Thirty Caſes of Piſtols, and Ten " Blunderbuſſes; which were accordingly made, " and paid for.

" And for the more eaſy drawing their Party " together againſt the Time of Execution, they " contrived to divide our Cities of London and " Weſtminſter, and the Suburbs, into Twenty " Parts; from each of which they expected Five " hundred Men to be ready at the firſt Onſet: " And ſome Agitators were to give an Accouut " of the Men to be furniſh'd in each Diviſion, and " to give out Orders to them as there ſhould be " Occaſion.

" And to the End the Forces they ſhould raiſe " might be the ſooner modell'd into the Form of " an Army, there were one hundred old Officers, " who had been engaged in the late Rebellion, " ready in Town to take the Command of them: " In the Purſuit of which Project they continued, " till they knew that a Diſcovery had been made " unto us.

" During all this Time, the principal Conſpi- " rators were managing their other Deſign for a " general Inſurrection in both Kingdoms.

" The late Earl of Shaftsbury, who had at firſt " preſſed them to a ſudden Riſing, which he " would have had before the 17th of November " laſt, or upon that Day at the fartheſt, ſent to " the Conſpirators, at a Meeting appointed by " them, to know their Reſolution; and finding " they would not adventure, without farther Pre- " paration, convey'd himſelf ſecretly into Holland, " to avoid the Danger he might be in by a Diſ- " covery.

" His withdrawing himſelf from their Counſels " did not diſcourage them from purſuing their " Deſign, only made them more cautious: Where- " upon a new Council was appointed of Six Per- " ſons that were to have the chief Management " of Affairs, in order to a general Inſurrection, " by a Correſpondency with their Party in Scot- " land, and ſeveral Counties of this our Kingdom. " And becauſe a Correſpondency by Letters was " thought dangerous, it was held neceſſary that " ſome Perſon ſhould be ſent into Scotland, to " invite the Heads of the Diſaffected Party in " that our Kingdom to come hither, under pre- " tence of purchaſing Lands in Carolina; but, in " truth, to concert with them the beſt Means " for carrying on the Deſign jointly in both King-

1683. 35 Car. II.

“doms: And a Treaty was thereupon had with Archibald Campbell, late Earl of Argyle, already attainted of Treaſon, who demanded thirty thouſand Pounds at firſt, but afterwards agreed to accept of ten thouſand Pounds for buying of Arms in Holland, and making other Proviſions neceſſary for a Rebellion within our Kingdom of Scotland.

“In the ſaid Council of Six, it was debated, Whether the Riſing in this Kingdom ſhould be firſt in our City of London, where, by reaſon of the vaſt Numbers that might readily unite, they thought they might eaſily maſter the Guards; or rather in ſome remote Parts, whereby we ſhould be under a neceſſity of ſending our Guards to ſuppreſs them, and thereby the Riſing in our ſaid City would become more ſecure and effectual? But at laſt it was reſolved, as moſt convenient, That it ſhould be in all Parts at the ſame Time, leſt our City might be defended by the Militia thereof, without the Help of our Guards, which we might ſend for the ſuppreſſing any Inſurrection in the Country; and they did all diſpoſe themſelves accordingly, for the compaſſing their Deſign, which was very near taking Effect.

“But ſuch was the abundant Mercy of Almighty God, while they were yet meditating their execrable Miſchiefs againſt our Royal Perſon, our Deareſt Brother, and the Government, a Diſcovery was made unto us by one of the Accomplices on the 12th of June laſt; ſince which time we have uſed the beſt Means we could for the Detecting and Prevention of ſo Helliſh a Conſpiracy.

“But ſo it has happen'd, that divers of the Conſpirators having Notice of Warrants iſſued out for their Apprehenſion, are fled from Juſtice, (viz.) James Duke of Monmouth, the Lord Melvin, Sir John Cochrane, Sir Thomas Armſtrong, Robert Ferguſon, who was the common Agitator intruſted by all Parties in the ſeveral Conſpiracies, Richard Goodenough, Francis Goodenough, Richard Rumbold the Malſter, William Rumbold his Brother, Richard Nelthorp, Nathanael Wade, William Thompſon, James Burton, Joſeph Elby, Samuel Gibbs, Francis Charleton, Joſeph Tyly, Caſteers, Lobb, both Nonconformiſt Preachers, Edward Norton, John Row, John Ayloffe, and John Atherton.

“Ford Lord Gray being apprehended, made his Eſcape out of the Hands of a Serjeant at Arms; and Arthur late Earl of Eſſex being committed to the Tower for High-Treaſon, kill'd himſelf.

“Others have been taken and committed to Cuſtody; ſome of whom, (viz.) the Lord William Ruſſell, Thomas Walcott, William Hone, and John Rouſe, have, upon their Tryals, been convicted, attainted, and executed, according to Law.

“This we thought fit to make known to our loving Subjects; that they being ſenſible (as we are) of the Mercy of God, in this great Deliverance, may chearfully and devoutly join with us in returning ſolemn Thanks to Almighty God for the ſame.

“For which End we do hereby appoint the Ninth Day of September next to be obſerved as a Day of Thankſgiving, in all Churches and Chapels within this our Kingdom of England, Dominion of Wales, and Town of Berwick upon Tweed, in ſuch Manner as ſhall be by us directed in a Form of Prayer, with Thankſgiving, which we have commanded to be prepared by our Biſhops, and publiſh'd for that Purpoſe.

“And it is our Pleaſure, That this Declaration be publickly read in all the ſaid Churches and Chapels, as well on Sunday the ſecond of September next as upon the Day of Thankſgiving aforeſaid.

Given at our Court at Whitehall the twenty eighth Day of July 1683, in the five and thirtieth Year of our Reign.

As the Diſſenters [a] were now mark'd out for Hatred and Proſecution, becauſe of their high Offences given to the Court; ſo the Church-men were in much the greater Reputation with the King and his Brother; not for the ſake of the Purity of their Faith and Worſhip, nor indeed for their legal Eſtabliſhment, but purely for the Diſtinction of Loyalty, i. e. of Adherence to the Intereſt of the Court, and the Cauſe of the Duke's Succeſſion. Under the Impulſe of this Zeal, they carry'd the Principles of Prerogative and Subjection to a much higher degree [b] than their Fore-fathers had ever thought of, or than they themſelves could ever practiſe. Sermons and Diſcourſes were full of thoſe flaming Notions; and eſpecially the Univerſity of Oxford made a warm Decree, drawn up in Latin by the Profeſſor of Divinity, and paſs'd in the Convocation on Saturday July 21, and preſented to his Majeſty in Engliſh on the 24th of July.

Principles of Loyalty carry'd higher than Law or Reaſon.

[a] It was about this Time began the High-Church in the Name of the Laudean Church. King James himſelf, while now Duke of York, finding his Intereſt ſupported by this Party of the warmer Church-men, he call'd them the Laudean Church of England Men; and which, that he might the more confirm to himſelf, he aſſur'd by Dr. Parker in this Year 1683, that as they had been always for him, he would be always for them. See Mr. Sam. Johnſon's Notes on the Paſt. Letter.

[b] The Word Fanatick, or at leaſt Trimmer, was now applied to every Church-man of any Moderation, and even the Churches themſelves were call'd Conventicles, if the Miniſters did not rigidly obſerve every Letter of the Rubrick. See Moderation a Virtue: Or, A Vindication of the Principles and Practices of the moderate Divines and Laity of the Church of England, repreſented in ſome late immoderate Diſcourſes under the Nick-names of Grindalizers and Trimmers. By a Lover of Moderation Reſident upon his Cure. With an Appendix, demonſtrating, that Pariſh-Churches are no Conventicles, particularly for reading the ſecond Service in the Deſk. In Anſwer to a late Pamphlet, entitul'd, Pariſh-Churches turned into Conventicles. London, 1683. 4*to.*

The Diſſenters have ſince complain'd, that the Perſecution was now hot againſt them, and that they were commonly accus'd of Treaſon as well as of Separation. See the Lives of Mr. Stretton, Mr. Roſwell, &c.

Many of the Diſſenters conform'd upon the Principles of their own Teachers, and they publiſh'd a Tract, entitul'd, The Lawfulneſs of hearing the Publick Miniſters of the Church of England, proved by Mr. Philip Nye and Mr. John Robinſon, two eminent Congregational Divines; together with the Judgment of Dr. Goodwin, Dr. Owen, and other Independents, as well ancient as modern, concerning Forms of Prayer, Pariſhes Churches, and Communion with them. Publiſhed as well to ſatisfy thoſe that yet ſcruple Communion with the Church, as to vindicate thoſe that have complied. London, 4*to.* 1683.

1683. 35 Car. II. The Judgment and Decree of the Univerſity of Oxford, paſs'd in their Convocation on July 21. 1683.[a] againſt certain pernicious Books, and damnable Doctrines, deſtructive to the ſacred Perſons of Princes, their State and Government, and of all humane Society.

Oxford Decree. " ALthough the barbarous Aſſaſſination, lately " enterpriz'd againſt the Perſon of his " Sacred Majeſty and his Royal Brother, engage " all our Thoughts to reflect with utmoſt Deteſtation and Abhorrence on that execrable Villainy " hateful to God and Man, and pay our due Acknowledgments to the Divine Providence, which " by extraordinary Methods brought it to paſs, " that the Breath of our Noſtrils, the Anointed " of the Lord, is not taken in the Pit which was " prepared for him, and that under his Shadow " we continue to live and enjoy the Bleſſings of " his Government; yet notwithſtanding we find " it to be a neceſſary Duty at this time to ſearch " into, and lay open thoſe impious Doctrines, " which having of late been ſtudiouſly diſſeminated, gave Riſe and Growth to theſe nefarious " Attempts, and paſs upon them our ſolemn publick Cenſure and Decree of Condemnation.

" Therefore, to the Honour of the Holy and " Undivided Trinity, the Preſervation of Catholick Truth in the Church; and that the King's " Majeſty may be ſecured both from the Attempts " of open bloody Enemies, and Machinations of " treacherous Hereticks and Schiſmaticks: We " the Vice-Chancellor, Doctors, Proctors, and " Maſters Regent and not Regent, met in Convocation, in the accuſtomed Manner, Time, and " Place, on Saturday the one and twentieth Day " of July, in the Year 1683. concerning certain " Propoſitions contained in diverſe Books and " Writings publiſh'd in the Engliſh, and alſo the " Latin Tongues, repugnant to the Holy Scriptures, Decrees of Councils, Writings of the " Fathers, the Faith and Profeſſion of the Primitive Church, and alſo deſtructive of the Kingly " Government, the Safety of his Majeſty's Perſon, " the Publick Peace, the Laws of Nature, and " Bonds of humane Society; by our unanimous " Aſſent and Conſent have decreed and determined " in Manner and Form following.

The Firſt Propoſition.

" All Civil Authority is derived originally from " the People.

The Second.

" There is a mutual Compact, Tacit or Expreſs, " between a Prince and his Subjects; and that if " he perform not his Duty, they are diſcharg'd " from theirs.

The Third

" That if Lawful Governors become Tyrants, " or govern otherwiſe than by the Laws of God 1683. 35 Car. II. " and Man they ought to do, they forfeit the " Right they had unto their Government." Lex Rex. Buchanan, de Jure Regni. Vindiciæ contra Tyrannos. Bellarm. de Conciliis, de Pontifice. Milton. Goodwin. Baxt. H. C.

The Fourth.

" The Sovereignty of England is in the three " Eſtates, viz. King, Lords, and Commons. The " King has but a Co-ordinate Power, and may be " over-ruled by the other two." Lex Rex. Hunton, Of a Limited and Mix'd Monarchy. Baxter's H. C. Polit. Catechiſ.

The Fifth.

" Birth-right, and Proximity of Blood, give no " Title to Rule or Government; and it is lawful " to preclude the next Heir from his Right and " Succeſſion to the Crown." Lex Rex. Hunt's Poſtſcript. Dolman's Hiſtory of Succeſſion. Julian the Apoſtate. Mene Tekel.

The Sixth.

" It is lawful for Subjects, without the Conſent, " and againſt the Command of the Supreme Magiſtrate, to enter into Leagues, Covenants, and " Aſſociations, for Defence of themſelves and " their Religion." Solemn League and Covenant. Late Aſſociation.

The Seventh.

" Self-Preſervation, is the fundamental Law of " Nature, and ſuperſedes the Obligation of all " others, whenſoever they ſtand in Competition " with it." Hobbs, de Civ. Leviathan.

The Eighth.

" The Doctrine of the Goſpel, concerning Patient ſuffering of Injuries, is not inconſiſtent " with violent reſiſting of the higher Powers, in " caſe of Perſecution for Religion." Lex Rex. Julian the Apoſtate. Apolog. Relat.

The Ninth.

" There lies no Obligation upon Chriſtians to " Paſſive[b] Obedience, when the Prince Commands any thing againſt the Laws of our Country; and the Primitive Chriſtians choſe rather " to die than reſiſt, becauſe Chriſtianity was not " ſettled by the Laws of the Empire." Julian the Apoſtate[c].

The Tenth.

" Poſſeſſion and Strength, give a Right to govern; and ſucceſs in a Cauſe or Enterprize, proclaims it to be lawful and juſt: To purſue it, is " to comply with the Will of God, becauſe it is " to follow the conduct of his Providence." Hobbs. Owen's Sermon before the Regicides, Jan. 31. 1648. Baxter. Jenkins's Petition, Octob. 1651.

[a] Copies of this Decree in Latin and Engliſh were ſent up to Court by the Hands of Dr. Robert Huntingdon, and by him read in the Preſence of the King, the Duke of York, and prime Miniſters; and the Act ſeem'd to be very grateful to them. Tho. Smith's Vita D. Rob. Huntingdoni, 1704. 8*vo.* p. xxviii.——Quod faventiſſima aure excepit Rex clementiſſimus monſtrando, hanc maximè opportunam profeſſionem fidei illibatæ Academiæ Oxonienſis (utpote conſtantiſſimæ & antiquæ, quam in afflictiſſimis ſereniſſimi Regis Patris ſui temporibus integram ſervaverat) ipſi quam maximè placuiſſe.

[b] There was within this ſame Year publiſh'd at Oxford the Lives of illuſtrious Men, written in Latin by Cornelius Nepos, and done into Engliſh by ſeveral Hands. Licens'd by the Vice-Chancellor Octob. 9. 1683. with an Epiſtle Dedicatory of the Honourable Mr. Leopold William Finch to the Right Honourable James Earl of Abingdon, wherein the Spirit of the Place and the Times is very eminent and high. He is bitter and witty upon the Word Fanatick, worſe than the Brute, moved by the giddy Impulſe of Enthuſiaſm, a Monſter, &c. He ridicules the Popiſh Plot by the Name of Dr. Titus's Plot, and ſeems to juſtify the Innocence of thoſe who dy'd for it, and rejoices that now it comes to the Fanaticks Turn to hang. He complains dreadfully of the Plague of Republican Principles. He glories in the Gownſmen's aſſerting one of the moſt ſacred Eſſentials of the Government, the Lineal Succeſſion, which could neither by the Diſpenſation of a Pope, or the Power of Parliament, be alter'd.

[c] This Cry againſt Julian the Apoſtate brought the Author upon Tryal ſoon after. See the Tryal and Conviction of the Reverend Mr. Samuel Johnſon, for writing and publiſhing a very ſcandalous and ſeditious Book, entitul'd, Julian the Apoſtate, Novemb. 20, 1683. inſerted in the Gazette.

1683. Car. II.

The Eleventh.

" In the State of Nature, there is no difference " between Good and Evil, Right and Wrong: " The State of Nature, is a State of War, " in which every Man hath a Right to all " things.

The Twelfth.

" The Foundation of Civil Authority, is this " natural Right; which is not given, but left to " the ſupreme Magiſtrate, upon Mens entring in- " to Societies: And not only a Foreign Invader, " but a Domeſtick Rebel, puts himſelf again into " a State of Nature, to be proceeded againſt, not " as a Subject, but an Enemy; and conſequently " acquires, by his Rebellion, the ſame Right over " the Life of his Prince, as the Prince, for the " moſt heinous Crimes, has over the Life of his " own Subjects.

The Thirteenth.

" Every Man, after his entring into a Society, " retains a right of Defending himſelf againſt " Force; and cannot transfer that right to the " Commonwealth, when he conſents to that Uni- " on whereby a Commonwealth is made: And in " caſe a great many Men together have already re- " ſiſted the Commonwealth, for which every one " of them expecteth death, they have liberty then " to join together to aſſiſt and defend one another: " Their bearing of Arms, ſubſequent to the firſt " breach of their Duty, though it be to maintain " what they have done, is no new unjuſt Act; " and if it be only to defend their Perſons, it is " not unjuſt at all.

The Fourteenth.

" An Oath ſuperadds no Obligation to Part, " and a Part obliges no farther than it is credited: " And conſequently, if a Prince gives any Indica- " tion, that he does not believe the Promiſes of " Fealty and Allegiance made by any of his Sub- " jects, they are thereby freed from their Subjecti- " on; and notwithſtanding their Parts and Oaths, " may lawfully rebel againſt, and deſtroy their So- " vereign. Hobbs, de Civ. Leviathan.

The Fifteenth.

" If a People, that by Oath and Duty are obli- " ged to a Sovereign, ſhall ſinfully diſpoſſeſs him, " and, contrary to their Covenants, chuſe and Co- " venant with another; they may be obliged by " their latter Covenants, notwithſtanding their " former." Baxter's H. C.

The Sixteenth.

" All Oaths are unlawful, and contrary to the " Word of God. Quakers.

The Seventeenth.

" An Oath obligeth not in the Senſe of the im- " poſers, but the takers." Sheriff's Caſe.

The Eighteenth.

" Dominion is founded in Grace.

The Nineteenth.

" The Powers of this World, are Uſurpations " upon the Prerogative of Jeſus Chriſt; and it is " the Duty of God's People to deſtroy them, in " order to the ſetting Chriſt upon his Throne." Fifth Monarchy-men.

The Twentieth.

" The Presbyterian Government is the Sceptre " of Chriſt's Kingdom, to which Kings, as well " as others, are bound to ſubmit: And the King's " Supremacy in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, aſſerted by " the Church of England, is injurious to Chriſt, " the ſole King and Head of his Church." Altare Damaſcenum. Apolog. Relat. Hiſt. Indulg. Cartwright. Traverſe.

1683. 35 Car. II.

The Twenty-firſt.

" It is not lawful for Superiors to impoſe any " thing in the Worſhip of God that is not ante- " cedently neceſſary.

The Twenty-ſecond.

" The Duty of not offending a weak Brother, is " inconſiſtent with all humane Authority of ma- " king Laws concerning indifferent Things." Proteſtant Reconciler.

The Twenty-third.

" Wicked Kings and Tyrants ought to be put " to death; and if the Judges and inferior Magi- " ſtrates will not do their Office, the Power of " the Sword devolves to the People: If the Ma- " jor part of the People refuſe to exerciſe this " Power, then the Miniſters may Excommunicate " ſuch a King: After which, it is lawful for any " of the Subjects to kill him, as the People did " Athaliah, and Jehu Jezabel." Buchanan. Knox. Goodman. Gilby. Jeſuits.

The Twenty-fourth.

" After the Sealing of the Scripture Canon, " the People of God, in all Ages, are to expect " new Revelations for a Rule of their Actions (a); " And it is lawful for a private Man, having an " inward motion from God, to kill a Tyrant (b)." (a) Quakers, and other Enthuſiaſts. (b) Goodman.

The Twenty-fifth.

" The Example of Phinehas, is, to us, inſtead " of a Command: For what God hath comman- " ded or approved in one Age, muſt needs oblige " in all." Goodman. Knox. Naphtali.

The Twenty-ſixth.

" King Charles I. was lawfully put to death; " and his Murtherers were the bleſſed Inſtruments " of God's Glory in their Generation." Milton. Goodwin. Owen.

The Twenty-ſeventh.

" King Charles I. made War upon his Parlia- " ment: And in ſuch a Caſe, the King may not " only be reſiſted, but he ceaſeth to be King." Baxter.

" We decree, judge and declare all and every " of theſe Propoſitions to be falſe, ſeditious, and " impious, and moſt of them to be alſo heretical " and blaſphemous, infamous to Chriſtian Religion, " and deſtructive of all Government in Church " and State.

" We further decree, That the Books which " contain the aforeſaid Propoſitions, and impious " Doctrines, are fitted to deprave good Manners, " corrupt the Minds of uneaſie Men, ſtir up Se- " ditions and Tumults, overthrow States and King- " doms, and lead to Rebellion, Murther of Prin- " ces, and Atheiſm it ſelf. And therefore we In- " terdict all Members of the Univerſity from the " reading of the ſaid Books, under the Penalties " in the Statutes expreſs'd. We alſo Order the " before-recited Books to be publickly burnt by " the Hand of our Marſhal, in the Court of our " Schools.

" Likewiſe we Order, That in perpetual Me- " mory hereof, theſe our Decrees ſhall be entred 1683. 35*Car*.II. " into the Regiſtry of our Convocation; And that " Copies of them being communicated to the ſeveral Colleges and Halls within this Univerſity, " they be there publickly affix'd in the Libraries " Refectories, or other fit Places where they may " be ſeen and read of all.

" into

Laſtly, " We Command, and ſtrictly enjoin all " and ſingular the Readers, Tutors, Catechiſts, " and others to whom the Care and Truſt of initiating of Youth is committed, That they diligently inſtruct and Ground their Scholars in " that moſt neceſſary Doctrine, which, in a manner, is the Badge and Character of the Church " of England, of Submitting to every Ordinance of " Man, for the Lord's ſake; whether it be to the " King, as Supreme; or unto Governors, as unto " them that are ſent by him, for the Puniſhment of " Evil-doers, and for the Praiſe of them that do " Well: Teaching, That this Submiſſion and Obedience, is to be clear, abſolute, and without " any exception of any State or Order of Men: " Alſo, That they, according to the Apoſtle's " Precept, Exhort, That firſt of all, Supplications, " Prayers, Interceſſions, and giving of Thanks, be " made for all Men, for the KING, and all that " are in Authority; that we may lead a quiet and " peaceable Life, in all Godlineſs and Honeſty, for " this is good and acceptable in the ſight of God our " Saviour: And in eſpecial manner, That they " preſs and oblige them humbly to offer their moſt " ardent and daily Prayers at the Throne of Grace, " for the Preſervation of our Sovereign Lord, " King CHARLES, from the attempts of open " Violence, and ſecret Machinations of perfidious " Traytors; That the Defender of the Faith, being ſafe under the Defence of the moſt High, " may continue his Reign on Earth, till he exchange it for that of a late and happy Immortality.

Upon whatever Order from a higher Place this Decree was drawn up by a ſingle Perſon, and impos'd upon a Convocation in Surprize; whatever excuſe might be given for the making and the paſſing of it: Yet there was this Juſtice due to it at the Revolution, that it ſhould then have been openly adher'd to, or as openly retracted and condemn'd. Whereas, the maker and chief Promoters of it did evidently contradict it, in their avow'd Principles, and apparent Practice, without any reverſal of it, or any other ſign of Confeſſion, but only a tacit Condemnation of it, by privately ordering the printed Copies of it to be taken away from the Halls and other publick Places, where they had before hung in Triumph. A way of Proceeding ſo offenſive to ſome of the younger Students, that it occaſion'd ſome Reflections and Pieces of Wit; among others, this Diſtich[a]:

Cum Fronti ſit nulla Fides, ut Carmina dicunt;
Cur Tibi Bifronti JANE ſit ulla Fides?

1684. Hard and Arbitrary Judgments. The ſevere Puniſhment of State-offenders went on; for on April 19. Sir Samuel Barnardiſton (who was convicted the laſt Term, of a high Miſdemeanor, for Writing and publiſhing, in Letters to ſeveral Perſons in the Country, moſt ſcandalous and ſeditious Reflections againſt the Government) was brought to the King's-Bench-Bar, to receive the Judgment of the Court; which was, That he ſhould pay a Fine of 10000 l. to the King, ſhould find Sureties for his good Behaviour during his Life, and ſhould be committed to the King's-Bench Priſon till the ſame was paid and done. Mr. William Wright, Alderman of Oxford, having defended the Privileges of the City, when the Majority of that Corporation, in an Addreſs, offer'd them up to the King's Pleaſure, was, on April 16. committed to the King's-Bench Priſon, for publiſhing ſcandalous Libels; and being brought by Rule, to the Court of King's-Bench, on April 19. Bail was accepted for him, himſelf being bound in a Recognizance of 10000 l. and four Sureties in 5000 l. a-piece, for his appearance and abiding his Tryal, upon the Information exhibited againſt him.

On April 21. James Holloway, (who upon diſcovery of the late Plot, had fled to Nevis in the Weſt-Indies, and being there ſeiz'd, had been ſent a Priſoner hither,) was brought from Newgate to the Kings-Bench-Bar; and being aſk'd, What he could ſay, why Execution ſhould not be awarded againſt him, he ſtanding Attainted, by Outlawry, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon? &c. He deſired to hear the Indictment read; which being done, Mr. Attorney-General acquainted the Court, That his Majeſty was graciouſly pleas'd, in Mercy to the Priſoner, to wave the Outlawry, and to allow him liberty to make his Defence, upon a Tryal, if he were able to make any: But he ſaying nothing for himſelf, and ſeeming to confeſs the Indictment, the Court made a Rule, That he ſhould be Executed at Tyburn, on Wedneſday ſevennight; which was accordingly done. On the ſame Day Mr. Lawrence Braddon, and Mr. Hugh Speak, who had been laſt Term found guilty of ſpreading a falſe Report, That the Earl of Eſſex was murthered in the Tower; were now Fined, the firſt 2000 l. the other 1000 l. to the King, and to find Sureties for their good Behaviour during their Lives. And poor Langley Curtis, who was convicted the laſt Term, for Printing a ſcandalous and ſeditious Pamphlet, call'd, The Lord Ruſſel's Ghoſt, or, The Night-walker of Bloomsbury; was Fined 500 l. and ordered to ſtand in the Pillory on Saturday next, in Bloomsbury-Market, and the ſaid Libel to be then burnt by the Hands of the common hangman.

On April 30. at the Niſi prius held for the County of Middleſex, before the Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, George Cawdron, Steward to the Earl of Clare, was Tryed upon an Information, for ſpeaking moſt ſcandalous and ſeditious Words againſt his Majeſty and the Government, and was found guilty; and was the next Term Fined 100 l. and to ſtand in the Pillory in two ſeveral Places, and to find Sureties for his good Behaviour during his Life. Tryal of George Cawdron.

In the Town of Nottingham, upon Michaelmas-Day, 1682. there had been a great Scuffle, upon the Election of a Mayor, and other Officers for that Corporation, ſome claiming the ancient Cuſtom, and others inſiſting on the new Charter; for which reaſon, thoſe who oppoſed the ſaid Charter, (viz.) William Sacheverell, George Gregory, and Charles Hutchinſon, Eſqrs. William Greeves, and ſeventeen others, had an Information exhibited againſt them, for a great Riot by them committed, to the great Terror of many of his Majeſty's Loyal Subjects; and at a Tryal at the King's-Bench-Bar, on May 2. they were all, except one Barker, found guilty of the ſaid Riot. Of the Nottingham Gentlemen.

His Royal Highneſs the Duke of York, in Michaelmas Term laſt, had brought his Action, upon The Duke of York brings an Action of Scandalum Magnatum againſt John Dutton Colt, Eſq;

[a] See an Account of Mr. Parkinſon's Expulſion from the Univerſity of Oxford, with the Act of Expulſion in the Name of Timothy Halton, S. T. P. pro Vice-Chancellor, dated, Oxon. Sept. 6. 1683. Publiſh'd by Mr. Parkinſon in a juſt Complaint of that Arbitrary Power in Oxford. 4*to.* 1689.

1684. 36 Car. II.

the Statute of Scandalum Magnatum, againſt John Dutton Colt, Eſq; ſometime Bailiff of Leominſter in the County of Hereford, and Burgeſs for that Borough in the three laſt Parliaments, for theſe Words following, which were, no doubt, aggravated beyond the real expreſſion of them; The Duke of York is a Papiſt, and before any ſuch Papiſt Dog ſhall be Succeſſor to the Crown of England, I will be hang'd at my own Door, and I will venture my Life and Fortune to prevent the ſame.—— If the King had no worſe Bailiffs nor Mayors in all his Corporations in England, and no worſe Parliament Men than my ſelf, we would ſoon rout the Duke of York, Lord Marqueſs of Worceſter, and Lord Peterborough, and all ſuch Popiſh Dogs, out of the Kingdom; for I am ſure they are damn'd ones.—— If any of the Members of Parliament come to any Accident, or untimely End, it ſhall preſently be laid on the Papiſts, and from that time, I will begin to cut the Throat of the firſt Papiſt I meet, if it be the Duke of York himſelf—If the King follows the Advice of that damn'd Popiſh Dog his Brother, Lord Marquiſs of Worceſter, and ſuch like evil Councellors, as I believe he does, in ſo often diſſolving the Parliament, it will in the end be worſe for him.— I will be hang'd at my own Door before ſuch a damn'd Popiſh Raſcal as the Duke of York ſhall ever inherit the Crown of England; and to prevent that, we will firſt take off that damn'd Rogue our Popiſh Lord-Lieutenant, Lord Peterborough, Lord Hallifax, Sir Lionel Jenkins, and ſeveral others, who, I am ſure, are the Imps and Promoters of the Intereſt of that damn'd Popiſh Dog, York.——— In a Tryal at the King's-Bench-Bar, on May 3. the Jury brought in their Verdict for his Royal Highneſs, and Aſſeſſed for Damages 100000 Pounds.

Tryal of Samuel Parker.

On May 12. Samuel Parker, Deputy to Richard Godenough, when he was under Sheriff of Middleſex, having been convicted laſt Term, for publiſhing a ſcandalous and ſeditious Libel, was now Fined 50 Marks, and ordered to ſtand in the Pillory at three ſeveral Places in Weſtminſter.

Of Francis Smith.

On June 11. another Tryal was had at the Guildhall, before my Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, upon an Information againſt Francis Smith, living at the Elephant and Caſtle in Cornhil, for Printing and Publiſhing a ſcandalous and ſeditious Libel, call'd, The Raree Show; of which he was found guilty, and condemn'd to pay a Fine of 500 l. and to ſtand thrice in the Pillory, with the ſaid Libel burnt by the hands of the common Hangman, and to find Sureties for his good Behaviour during Life, and to be committed till all was perform'd.

Sir Thomas Armſtrong executed.

Sir Thomas Armſtrong, who had been named in his Majeſty's Proclamation the 28th of June, 1683. was apprehended at Leyden in Holland, by order of the States; and being put on Board one of his Majeſty's Yachts at Rotterdam, he was brought to Greenwich on the 10th of June at Night, and the next Morning committed to Newgate, and was brought to the King's-Bench-Bar on the 14th of June; where being ask'd, What he could ſay for himſelf, why Execution ſhould not be awarded againſt him, he ſtanding Attainted, by Outlawry, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon? &c. He offer'd nothing in his own Defence which the Court thought material; and therefore a Rule was made, That he ſhould be Executed on Friday next at Tyburn, which was accordingly done.

Action of Scandalum Magnatum againſt Titus Oates.

Dr. Titus Oates, who had been long in diſgrace at Court, and had his Lodgings, his Guard, and a great part of his Penſion taken from him, was now, on May 10. publickly Arreſted at the Amſterdam Coffee-Houſe, in an Action of Scandalum Magnatum, at the Suit of the Duke of York, for ſaying, His Royall Highneſs was a Traytor; with ſeveral ſuch other Reflections charged to be malicious and ſcandalous: He was carry'd from thence to Woodſtreet-Compter, for the greater Ignominy, where he lay in Durance two Days, and then was remov'd by Habeas Corpus to the King's-Bench Priſon: The next Term he ſuffer'd Judgment to paſs, by default, and on June 18. the laſt Day of the Term, a Writ of Enquiry of Damages was exhibited at the King's-Bench-Bar; where the Jury, upon hearing the Evidence, gave 100000 Pounds Damages to the Duke.

He is Indicted of Perjury.

In the Michaelmas Term following, he was indicted in the King's-Bench for Perjury: To which he pleaded Not guilty, and had his Tryal deferr'd till the next Term. Soon after he was again indicted at the Old-Bailey for Perjury, upon another Matter of Fact, and had his Tryal appointed to be likewiſe the next Term, in the Court of King's-Bench.

On November 6. a Tryal was had at the Guildhall, before my Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, upon an Action brought by Sir William Pritchard, formerly Lord Mayor of London, againſt Mr. Papilion, and Mr. Dubois (the latter of which was lately dead) for maliciouſly cauſing him to be Arreſted, and falſely Impriſon'd during his Mayoralty: This Fact was repreſented by the Councel, as a very evil Deſign, and malicious Practice, contrived with ſeveral of the Traytors lately fled from Juſtice, as well againſt his Majeſty's Government, and the Magiſtracy of the City, as againſt the Perſon of the ſaid Sir William Pritchard. Upon which the Jury brought in their Verdict for Sir William, and gave him 10000 Pounds Damages.

Diſſenting Teacher convicted of Treaſon.

One Mr. Roſwell, a Diſſenting Teacher, had been arraign'd on the the 25th of October, at the King's-Bench-Bar, upon an [a] Indictment of High-Treaſon, for endeavouring to ſtir up his Majeſty's Subjects to Rebellion, by inciting them thereunto in a Sermon at a Conventicle in Rotherhith, with ſeditious and traiterous Words againſt his Majeſty's Royal Perſon and Government; and being brought to his Tryal on Novemb. 18. was found guilty of High-Treaſon.

Elias Beſt, who had ſometime ſince been convicted upon an Information, for ſpeaking ſcandalous and ſeditious Words againſt the Government, and fled thereupon; being lately apprehended, was on Novemb. 20. brought to the King's-Bench-Bar, to receive the Judgment of the Court; which was, That he ſhould pay a Fine of 1000 Pounds, ſhould ſtand thrice in the Pillory, and be bound with Sureties for his good Behaviour.

Oates's Servants convicted.

In the ſame Term Dalby and Nicholſon, two of Oates's Men, for a farther diſgrace to their Maſter, were convicted; the firſt at the Niſi prius for the County of Middleſex; the other at the Niſi prius held for the City of London, at Guild-hall, for ſpeaking moſt ſcandalous and ſeditious Words againſt his Majeſty, and the Government.

Mr. Butler of Northamptonſhire, having been convicted upon an Information for preſenting and reading to the Knights of that Shire (at the laſt Election of Parliament Men) a ſeditious Paper, being an Addreſs to them from ſome of the Freeholders, call'd Factious Perſons, was on Novem. 28.

[a] See the Arraignment and Tryal of the late Reverend Mr. Thomas Roſewell, for High-Treaſon, before the Lord Chief Juſtice Jeffreys, at the Court of King's-Bench, Weſtminſter, in the Year 1684. And the Arguments offer'd in Arreſt of Judgment by his learned Council, to which is prefix'd an Account of his Life and Death. Publiſh'd by Sam. Roſewell, A. M. 1718. 8vo.

brought

1684. 35 Car. II.

brought to the King's-Bench-Bar to receive the Judgment of the Court; which was, That he ſhould pay a Fine of 500 Marks, ſhould find Sureties for his Good Behaviour during Life, and to be committed till all be perform'd.

Delivery of Charters.

And indeed, the whole Hiſtory of this Year ſeems [a] to have little leſs but Proſecutions and Penalties; and what was the Effect of them, the Surrendry of Charters: For moſt of the Cities, Towns, and other Corporations, thinking their Liberties could not ſurvive thoſe of the Great Metropolis, and finding the Court reſolute in the Expectance and Demand of them, did generally agree to offer them up a Sacrifice to his Majeſty's Will and Pleaſure: And even many of the Courtiers were employ'd to make an Intereſt in thoſe Places where they were moſt concern'd, to obtain and extort the ſaid Surrendry; and the Lord-Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, in the Mid-land Circuit, made it his great Buſineſs to terrifie the People into this Compliance, and at his Return he waited on his Majeſty at Windſor, and deliver'd up to him the Charters of the City of Lincoln, and of ſeveral other Corporations within his Circuit, as an Oblation of his own Loyalty, and a Triumph over, the Peoples Liberties.

Duke of York Governs.

By theſe Meaſures, the Duke of York was known to govern all, and was now reſtored to his Offices of Profit and Honour, without any farther Scruple, that it was againſt the Law to hold them. So, on May 12. the King declared, That he had thought fit to Revoke and Determine the Commiſſion for executing the Office of Lord-High-Admiral of England, and to commit thoſe Affairs to the Care of his Royal Highneſs: And on May 28. his Majeſty was pleas'd to declare in Council, That he thought it fit, and for his Service, that his Royal Highneſs ſhould be preſent at the Meetings of the Council.

Sir Leoline Jenkins, one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, is ſaid to have long pray'd his Majeſty to permit him, by reaſon of his Indiſpoſition, to reſign that Place; and that his Majeſty was at laſt pleas'd to grant it, though with much unwillingneſs, becauſe of the great Satisfaction his Majeſty always had in his Services:

Sidney Godolphin, Eſq; made Secretary of State.

So on Apr. 14. at Windſor, he deliver'd up the Seals to his Majeſty; who was pleas'd to give them to the Honourable Sidney Godolphin, Eſq; one of the Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Treaſury, who was accordingly Sworn into the Secretary's Office on the 17th of April, in the Council held at Hampton-Court.

Other Honours and Preferments.

On July 11. the Earl of Murray, and the Earl of Middleton, his Majeſty's Secretaries of State for the Kingdom of Scotland, were, by his Majeſty's Command, ſworn of his moſt Honourable Privy-Council here in England, and took their Places at the Board in Hampton-Court. On July 15. his Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon Simon Taylor, and John Turner, Eſqrs; Aldermen of the Town of Lynn-Regis. On Aug. 24. his Majeſty was pleas'd to declare in Council, That having given the Earl of Radnor, Lord-Preſident of the Council, (with whoſe Services he was very well ſatisfy'd) leave to retire, in conſideration of his great Age; he had reſolved to make the Earl of Rocheſter Lord-Preſident, Mr. Secretary Godolphin firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, and the Earl of Middleton Secretary of State, and accordingly the Earl of Rocheſter took his Place at the Board, and the Earl of Middleton was ſworn one of his Majeſty's Principal-Secretaries of State: And ſoon after, his Majeſty was pleas'd to grant the Title and Dignity of a Baron of this Kingdom, unto the Right Honourable Sidney Godolphin, Eſq; by the Name and Style of Baron Godolphin of Rialton in the County of Cornwall. Toward the end of September, his Majeſty, by Commiſſion under the Great Seal, appointed Sir William Goſling, and Sir Peter Vandeputt, to be Sheriffs of London and Middleſex for the Year enſuing: And in October, Sir James Smyth was commiſſionated by his Majeſty to be Lord Mayor. About the ſame time, his Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon Doctor Thomas Weatherly, one of his Majeſty's Phyſicians in Ordinary, and Preſident of the College of Phyſicians. In this Michaelmas-Term, his Majeſty was pleas'd, upon the Death of Mr. Juſtice Wyndham, to remove Mr. Baron Street to the Common-Pleas, and to conſtitute in his Place Sir Robert Wright, his Majeſty's Serjeant at Law, one of the Barons of the Exchequer.

On Decemb. 1. his Majeſty taking Notice of the Loyalty and good Services of Capt. John Clark, Citizen of London, was pleas'd to conferr upon him the Honour of Knighthood: And on Dec. 15. his Majeſty did the like Honour to Edmund Warcup, of Northmoor in the County of Oxford, Eſq;. And on Jan. 1. the ſame Honour of Knighthood was conferr'd upon William Creagh, of New-Caſtle upon Tyne, being preſented by his Royal Highneſs to his Majeſty; who did him this Honour, as a Mark of his gracious Acceptance of the Loyal Zeal he had on ſeveral Occaſions expreſs'd for his Majeſty's Service. On Jan. 7. John Drumond, Eſq; one of his Majeſty's Secretaries of State for the Kingdom of Scotland, was ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council, and took his Place at the Board in Whitehall. On Jan. 16. William Bridgeman, and Philip Muſgrave, Eſqrs; were ſworn Clerks of the Privy-Council, in the room of Sir Thomas Dolman, and Francis Gwynn, Eſq; to whom his Majeſty had given Leave to reſign. The laſt Honour his Majeſty beſtow'd, was that of Knighthood, on Jan. 28. upon [b] Henry Brabant, of New-Caſtle, Eſq; for his many loyal Services.

Though

[a] The very Lords the Biſhops who did not go roundly in to the Court Meaſures had ſome advantage or other taken againſt them. Dr. Walter Pope, in his Life of Dr. Seth Ward, Biſhop of Sarum, writes thus, p. 93. It is notoriouſly known there were Intrigues carry'd on by a Party at Court to introduce the Popiſh Religion, and make the Power of the King unlimited and arbitrary, whereunto all Perſons were to obey without Reſerve, which Words were in one of the Proclamations ſent to Scotland. But the Biſhop of Salisbury not ſwimming with the Stream, he loſt at leaſt one of his great Friends, and with him his Favour at Court, the Effects thereof appeared not long after, the manner thus. The Revenue belonging to the Order of the Garter was uſually receiv'd by the Chancellor, and he paid the Officers and the poor Knights of Windſor; the Surplus the King had formerly granted to Sir Henry de Vic, and it was quietly poſſeſſed by him till he died; out of which he was to defray the Charges and Fees of Admiſſion of foreign Princes and Noblemen who were elected into that Order. For this alſo the Biſhop of Salisbury had the King's Hand, which Grant had been firm and irrevocable, had the Biſhop ſealed it with the Seal of his Order, which he kept in his Poſſeſſion, or caus'd it to paſs the uſual Offices which had been eaſie for him to have done then, being much in Favour at Court. But he made uſe of neither of theſe Corroborations, and afterwards ſmarted for it ſufficiently. In the laſt year of the Reign of King Charles II. and the firſt of the precipitous decay of the Biſhop of Salisbury's Intellectuals, ſome ſagacious Courtier found out a flaw in this Grant. Whereupon the Biſhop was ſent for up to London, and obliged to refund the uttermoſt Penny, which in ſo many Years amounted to a conſiderable Sum, all which his Majeſty took without any Scruple or Remorſe.

[b] In the State of Religion it might be obſerved, that the Court were taken up with the Proſecution of Diſſenters; and even the Biſhop of London employ'd his well deſigned Conferences and Letters to this End. He had ſent a fourth Letter to the Clergy of his Dioceſe concerning the Subject of their

1684. 36 Car. II.

The King enclined to recall the Duke of Monmouth.

Though the Duke of York had hitherto bore an abſolute Sway at Court; yet it is very certain, the King had now a mind once more to part with him, and to recall his more-beloved Duke of Monmouth from his Baniſhment in Holland. The Duke, in his Journal, has upon this Subject made two remarkable Entries: Jan. 5. I receiv'd a Letter from L. mark'd by 29. (i. e. the King) in the Margin, to truſt intirely in 10. and that in Febr. I ſhould certainly have Leave to return: That Matters were concerting towards it; and that 39. (i. e. the Duke of York) had no Suſpicion, notwithſtanding of my Reception here.———Febr. 3. A Letter from L. That my Buſineſs was almoſt aſwell as done; but muſt be ſo ſudden, as not to leave room for 39's Party to Counterplot: That it is probable, he would chuſe Scotland rather than Flanders or this Country; which is all one to 29. But the King was fatally prevented in theſe kind Intentions to his Son, and Reſolution of ſending away his Brother; for on Monday, Febr. 2. his Majeſty was taken very Ill; and the Report of it was ſo great an Alarm to the Nation, that the Privy-Council thought fit to quiet the Peoply by this Account:

But fatally prevented.

At the Council-Chamber, WHITEHALL, 4. Febr. 1684. at Five in the Afternoon.

Account of the King's Illneſs.

"THE Lords of his Majeſty's moſt Honour- " able Privy-Council, have thought fit, " for preventing falſe Reports, to make known, " That his Majeſty, upon Monday Morning laſt, " was ſeized with a violent Fit, that gave great " cauſe to fear the Iſſue of it; but after ſome " Hours, an Amendment appeared; which, with " the Bleſſing of God, being Improved by the Ap- " plication of proper and ſeaſonable Remedies, is " ſo now advanced, that the Phyſicians have this " Day, as well as Yeſterday, given this Account " to the Council, viz. That they conceive his Ma- " jeſty to be in a Condition of Safety, and that he " will in a few Days be freed from his Diſtemper," But notwithſtanding theſe Hopes, and flattering the World with them, there was this ſad Account given from Whitehall, Febr. 6. "On Monday laſt " in the Morning, our late Gracious Sovereign, " King Charles II. was ſeized with a violent Fit, " by which his Speech and Senſes were for ſome " time taken from him; but upon the immediate " Application of fitting Remedies, he returned " to ſuch a Condition as gave ſome Hopes of his " Recovery, till Wedneſday Night; at which " time the Diſeaſe returning upon him with " greater violence, he expired this Day about " Noon [a].

1684. 36 Car. II.

As to the Manner and Circumſtances of his Diſtemper, and his Death, it is beſt to deliver them in the very Words of a good Phyſician, and faithful Hiſtorian, who, in his Memoirs, writes thus: " It's confeſs'd, few Princes come to die a ſudden " Death, but the World is apt to attribute it to " foul Play; eſpecially if attended with unuſual " Circumſtances in the Time and Manner of it. " King Charles had a healthful Conſtitution be- " yond moſt Men, and took great Care to pre- " ſerve it, by Diet and Exerciſe, which naturally " promiſe a long Life: And it was more Extra- " ordinary to ſee ſuch a Man die before Three- " ſcore, than another in the Bloom of Youth. " Now, if he died a natural Death, it's agreed by " all, that it muſt have been an Apoplexy. This " Diſeaſe ſeizes all the vital Faculties at once; " and yet, for the moſt part, does not only give " ſome ſhort Warnings of its approach, by unu- " ſual Affections of the Head, but many times is " occaſion'd by ſome evident preceding Cauſe. " In King Charles's Caſe, there appeared no viſi- " ble Cauſe, either near or remote, to which, with " any certainty of Reaſon, his Diſeaſe could be " aſcribed; and the Fore-runners of it were ra- " ther to be found in the Stomach and Bowels, " than in the Head. For after he was a-Bed, he " was over-heard to Groan moſt part of the Night: " And both then, and next Morning, before he " fell into the Fit, he complain'd firſt of a heavy " Oppreſſion in his Stomach, and about his Heart, " and afterwards of a ſharp Pain in thoſe Parts; " all which Symptoms had but little relation to " an Apoplexy. That Morning there appear'd to " every-body about him a Ghaſtlineſs and Paleneſs " in his Looks: And when he ſat down to be " ſhav'd, juſt before the Fit took him, he could " not ſit ſtraight, as he us'd to do, but continu'd " in a ſtooping Poſture, with his Hand upon his " Stomach, till the Fit came. After he had been " brought out of it, by opening a Vein, he com- " plain'd of a racking Pain in his Stomach, and " of no Indiſpoſition any-where elſe: And during " the whole time of his Sickneſs, and even when " he ſeem'd moſt Inſenſible, he was obſerv'd to " lay his Hand, for the moſt part, upon his Sto- " mach, in a moaning Poſture, and continu'd ſo " till his Death: And ſo violent was the Pain, " that when all Hopes were gone, the Phyſicians " were deſired to uſe all their Art to procure " him an eaſie Death.

Account of the King's Sickneſs & Death.

their laſt Conference upon the LIV. Canon, the Licences of Preachers refuſing Conformity to be void, dated Fulham, April 6. 1683. A fifth Letter from the Right Reverend Henry Lord Biſhop of London, to the Clergy of his Dioceſe upon the Subject of the CXVIII. Canon, requiring an impartial Preſentment of all ſorts of Recuſants, dated Fulham, March 19. 1693-4.— I did not pitch upon this Canon for the Subject of our late Conference with an Intent to preſs the whole Obſervation of it, otherwiſe than to introduce the Conſideration of that Preſentment in particular which relates to the Holy Communion.———

In purſuance of this Deſign were publiſh'd. 1. A Diſcourſe on my Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury's and my Lord Biſhop of London's Letters to the Clergy, touching Catechiſing, and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, with what is required of Church-Wardens and Miniſters in reference to obſtinate Recuſants. Alſo a Defence of Excommunication as uſed by the Church of England againſt ſuch, by William Baſſet, Rector of St. Swithin's. London, 1685. 4*to.* 2. Advice concerning ſtrict Conformity and frequent Celebration of the Holy Communion, by Denis Greenhill, D. D. Archdeacon of Durham, dated Windſor, Aſcenſion-day, 1684. London, 4*to.* 3. The Caſe of compelling Men to the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper conſidered; and Authority vindicated in it by the Rules of the Goſpel from the common and Popular Objections againſt it. London, 1684. 4*to.*

[a] He is ſaid upon his Death-Bed to have delivered the Key of his ſtrong Box to his Brother, with this particular Advice, Not to think of introducing the Romiſh Religion into England, it being a thing both dangerous and impracticable.

One of his laſt Acts of good Intention was the attempting what King William and Queen Mary perform'd in the founding an Hoſpital for maimed Soldiers at Chelſea. His Majeſty ſent Letters to the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, obſerving with grear Grief, that many of his Loyal Subjects who formerly took up Arms for him and his Royal Father to reſiſt that torrent of Rebellion which at laſt overturned the Monarchy and Church, were by old Age or Wounds or other Accidents reduced to extreme Poverty——And therefore declaring his Royal Reſolution to found and erect at Chelſea a perpetual Hoſpital, in which more than four hundred aged and otherwiſe diſabled Soldiers may be lodged and ſupplied with the neceſſary Supports of Life.——And hereupon requiring the Archbiſhop to ſend forth his Circular Letters to all the Biſhops of his Province, earneſtly exciting them to deal effectually with all in their Dioceſes to contribute liberally to ſo good a Deſign ſo manifeſtly to the Glory of Almighty God, and the Service of their King and Countrey.—— Given at Whitehall, Nov. 14. 1684. MSS Lambeth.

" So

1684. 36 Car. II.

“ So much for the Diſtemper it ſelf. There remains ſome Things to be taken Notice of, that fell out before and after his Death.

“ A few Days before he was taken Ill, King Charles being in Company where the preſent Poſture of Affairs was diſcours'd of, there eſcap'd him ſome warm Expreſſions, about the uneaſie Circumſtances he was plung'd into, and the ill Meaſures had been given him: And how, in a certain particular Affair, he was pleas'd to mention, He had been abus'd; adding, in ſome Paſſion, That if he liv'd but a Month longer, he wou'd find a way to make himſelf eaſie, for the reſt of his Life. This Paſſage was whiſper'd abroad next Day; and the Rumour of recalling the Duke of Monmouth, and ſending away the Duke of York, came to take Air about the ſame time. Indeed, all things were making ready, to put the latter in Execution; and there is reaſon to believe the King had intimated as much to the Duke himſelf; for ſome of his richeſt Furniture was put up, and his chief Servants order'd to be in a readineſs to attend their Maſter upon an Hour's Warning; and Yatchts were waiting, to tranſport ſome Perſon of Quality, without mentioning who it was, and whither bound. The Romiſh Party that manag'd about Court, were obſerv'd to be more than ordinary diligent and buſie up and down Whitehall and St. James's, as if ſome very important Affair was in Agitation; and a new and unuſual Concern was to be ſeen on their Countenances. Nor was it any wonder; for in this ſuſpected Change, they were like to be the only Loſers, and all their teeming Hopes were in a fair way to be diſappointed. How far the Principles of ſome of that Party might leave them at liberty to puſh on their Revenge for this deſign'd Affront, as well as to prevent the Blow that threaten'd them, though without the Privacy, much leſs the Conſent of the Duke of York, is left to the Reader to judge.

“ There was a Foreign Miniſter, that ſome Days before the King fell Ill, order'd his Steward to buy a conſiderable Parcel of Black Cloth, which ſerv'd him and his Retinue afterwards for Mourning: And the late Ambaſſador, Don Pedro Ronquillo, made it no Secret, That he had a Letter from Flanders the Week before King Charles died, that took Notice of his Death, as the News there. But both theſe might fall out by mere Accident.

“ There remains two things more, that deſerve ſome Conſideration in this Matter. When his Body was open'd, there was not ſufficient time given for taking an exact Obſervation of his Stomach and Bowels; which, one would think, ought chiefly to have been done conſidering the violent Pains he had there: And when a certain Phyſician ſeem'd to be more Inquiſitive than ordinary about the Condition of thoſe Parts, he was taken aſide and reprov'd for his needleſs Curioſity. In the next place, his Body ſtunk ſo extremely within a few Hours after his Death, notwithſtanding the coldneſs of the Seaſon, that the People about him were very much offended with the Smell: Which is a thing very Extraordinary in one of his ſtrong and healthful Conſtitution; and is not a proper Conſequent of a mere Apoplectical Diſtemper.

“ There was ſome Weight laid upon an Accident that fell out at Windſor ſome Years before his Death: For the King drinking more liberally than uſual, after the Fatigue of Riding, he retir'd to the next Room, and wrapping himſelf up in his Cloak, fell aſleep upon a Couch. He was but a little time come back to the Company, when a Servant belonging to one of them lay down upon the ſame Couch, in the King's Cloak, and was found ſtabb'd dead with a Poniard. Nor was it ever known how it happen'd, but the Matter huſh'd up, and no Enquiry made about it.

“ To conclude: Dr. Short, who was a Man of great Probity and Learning, and a Roman Catholick, made no Scruple to declare his Opinion to ſome of his intimate Friends, That he believ'd King Charles had foul Play done him: And when he came to die himſelf, expreſs'd ſome Suſpicion, that he had met with the ſame Treatment, for opening his Mind too freely in that Point.

“ So much for the Circumſtances of King Charles's Death, that ſeem to have an ill Aſpect. There are others, that ſeem to deſtroy all Suſpicions of Treachery in the Matter.

“ As, Firſt, He had liv'd ſo faſt, as might enervate, in a great meaſure, the natural Force of his Conſtitution, and exhauſt his animal Spirits; and therefore he might be more ſubject to an Apoplexy, which is a Diſeaſe that weakens and locks up theſe Spirits from performing their uſual Functions: And though, in his later Years, he had given up himſelf more to the Pleaſures of Wine than of Women; that might be rather the Effect of Age than of Choice.

“ Next, It's known, he had been once or twice attack'd before, with Fits that much reſembled thoſe of which he afterwards died: And yet, as the manner of them is told, they look rather to have been a Convulſive Motion, than an Apoplexy; ſeeing they were attended with violent Contorſions of his Face, and Convulſions of the whole Body and Limbs. This is the more confirm'd, by a Paſſage that happened during the heat of the Popiſh Plot. King Charles had ſome ſecret Matters to manage at that time, by the means of a Popiſh Prieſt then beyond Sea, whom he order'd to be privately ſent for: And the Gentleman employ'd between the King and him (from whom I had the Story) was directed to bring him in a Diſguiſe to Whitehall. The King and the Prieſt were a conſiderable time together alone in the Cloſet, and the Gentleman attended in the next Room: At laſt the Prieſt came out, with all the Marks of Fright and Aſtoniſhment in his Face; and having recover'd himſelf a little, he told the Gentleman, That he had run the greateſt Riſque ever Man did; for while he was with the King, his Majeſty was ſuddenly ſurprized with a Fit, accompany'd with violent Convulſions of his Body, and Contorſions of his Face, which laſted for ſome Moments; and when he was going to call out for Help, the King held him by force till it was over, and then bid him not be afraid, for he had been troubled with the like before; the Prieſt adding, what a Condition he ſhould have been in, conſidering his Religion, in the preſent Juncture of Affairs, if the King had died of that Fit, and no body in the Room with him beſides himſelf.

“ But leaving this Story to the Credit of the Prieſt; there might be another natural Cauſe aſſign'd for King Charles's falling into ſuch a Fit as that of which he died, which is this: He had for ſome time an Iſſue in his Leg, which run much, and conſequently muſt have made a great Revulſion from his Head; upon which Account, it's probable, it was made. A few Weeks before his Death, he had let it be dry'd up; contrary to the Advice of his Phyſicians, who told him it wou'd prejudice his Health. Their Prognoſtick was partly true in this, that there came a painful Tumour upon the Place where the Iſſue had been, which prov'd very 1684. 36*Car*.II. " obſtinate, and was not thoroughly heal'd up when he died.

" In fine, It is agreed on all hands, that King Charles expreſs'd no Suſpicion of his being poiſon'd, during all the time of his Sickneſs: Though it muſt be alſo obſerv'd, that his Fits were ſo violent, that he could not ſpeak when they were upon him, and ſhew'd an Averſion to ſpeaking during the Intervals. And there was not any thing to be ſeen, upon opening his Body, that could reaſonably be attributed to the Force of Poiſon. Yet, to allow theſe Conſiderations no more Weight than they can well bear, this muſt be acknowledg'd, that there are Poiſons which affect originally the Animal Spirits, and are of ſo ſubtile a Nature, that they leave no concluding Marks upon the Bodies of thoſe they kill.

" Thus reign'd, and thus dy'd King Charles II. a Prince endowed with all the Qualities that might juſtly have rendred him the Delight of Mankind, and entitled him to the Character of one of the greateſt Genius's that ever ſate upon a Throne, if he had not ſully'd thoſe Excellent Parts with the ſoft Pleaſures of Eaſe; and had not entertain'd a fatal Friendſhip, that was incompatible with the Intereſt of England.[a] His Religion was that of Deiſm, or rather that which is call'd ſo: And if, in his Exile, or at his Death, he went into that of Rome; the firſt was imputed to a Complaiſance with the Company he was then oblig'd to keep; and the laſt, to a lazie Diffidence in all other Religions, upon a review of his paſt Life, and the near approach of an uncertain State. His Perſon was Tall and Well-made, his Conſtitution Vigorous and Healthy; and it's hard to determine, whether he took more pains to preſerve it by Diet and Exerciſe, or to impair it by Exceſs in his Pleaſures. In Health, he was a great Pretender to Phyſick, and Encourager of Quacks, by whom he was often cheated of conſiderable Sums of Money for their pretended Secrets: But whenever he was indiſpos'd, he conſulted his Phyſicians, and depended on their Skill only.

" His Face was compos'd of harſh Features, difficult to be trac'd with the Pencil; yet, in the main, it was agreeable; and he had a Noble Majeſtick Mein. In Contradiction to all the common receiv'd Rules of Phyſiognomy, he was Merciful, Good-natur'd; and, in the laſt twenty four Years of his Life, Fortunate, if to ſucceed in moſt of his Deſigns, may be call'd ſo. Never Prince lov'd Ceremony leſs, or deſpis'd the Pageantry of a Crown more; yet he was Maſter of ſomething in his Perſon and Aſpect, that commanded both Love and Veneration at once. 1684. 36*Car*.II.

" He was a great votary to Love; and yet the eaſieſt and moſt unconcern'd Rival. He was, for the moſt part, not very nice in the Choice of his Miſtreſſes, and ſeldom poſſeſs'd of their firſt Favours; yet would ſacrifice All to pleaſe them; and upon every Caprice of theirs, deny-ed himſelf the Uſe of his Reaſon, and acted contrary to his Intereſt. He was a reſpectful civil Husband; a fond Father, a kind Brother, an eaſy Enemy; but none of the firmeſt or moſt grateful Friends: Bountiful by Starts; one day laviſh to his Servants; the next leaving them to ſtarve: Glad to win a little Money at Play; and impatient to loſe but the thouſandth Part of what within an Hour after he would throw away in groſs. He ſeem'd to have had nothing of Jealouſy in his Nature, neither in Matters of Love nor Power: He bore patiently Rivals in the one, and Competitors in the other; otherwiſe he would not have contributed to a Foreign Greatneſs at Sea, nor given his Brother ſo uncontroul'd a Share in the Government.

" Though his Underſtanding was quick and lively, with a vaſt compaſs of Thought; yet he would ſubmit his Judgment, in greateſt Matters, to others of much inferior Parts: And as he had an extraordinary ſhare of Wit himſelf, ſo he lov'd it in others, even when pointed againſt his own Faults and Miſmanagements. He had read but little, yet he had a good taſte of Learning, and would reaſon nicely upon moſt Sciences. The Mechanicks were one of his peculiar Talents, eſpecially the Art of Building and Working of Ships; which no Body underſtood better, nor, if he had liv'd, would have carry'd it farther. He had a ſtrong Laconick way of Expreſſion, and a genteel, eaſy and polite way of Writing: And when he had a mind to lay aſide the King, which he often did in ſelect Companies of his own, there were a thouſand irreſiſtible Charms in his Converſation. He lov'd Money only to ſpend it; and would privately accept of a ſmall Sum paid to himſelf, in lieu of a far greater to be paid into the Exchequer.

" He lov'd not Buſineſs, and ſought every Occaſion to avoid it; which was one reaſon that he paſs'd ſo much of his Time with his Miſtreſſes: Yet when Neceſſity call'd him, none of his Council could Reaſon more cloſely upon Matters of State; and he would often, by fits, out-do his Miniſters in Application and Diligence. No Age produced a greater Maſter in the Art of Diſſimulation; and yet no Man

[a] In the laſt Sickneſs of King Charles, Biſhop Kenn well knowing how much had been put off to that laſt Point, and fearing the ſtrength of his Diſtemper would give him but little time, gave a cloſe attendance by the Royal Bed without any Intermiſſion at leaſt for three whole Days and Nights, watching at proper Intervals to ſuggeſt pious and proper Thoughts and Ejaculations on ſo ſerious an Occaſion. In which time the Dutcheſs of Portſmouth coming into the Room, the Biſhop prevail'd with his Majeſty to have her remov'd, and took that Occaſion of repreſenting the Injury and Injuſtice done to his Queen ſo effectually, that his Majeſty was induced to ſend for the Queen, and asking Pardon had the Satisfaction of her Forgiveneſs before he died. The Biſhop having honeſtly urg'd the neceſſity of a full, and prevail'd (as is hop'd) for a ſincere Repentance, ſeveral times propos'd the Adminiſtration of the Holy Sacrament: But altho' it was not abſolutely rejected, it was delay'd from time to time; till (I know not by what Authority) the Biſhop and all others preſent were put out from the Preſence for about the ſpace of half an Hour, during which time it has been ſuggeſted, that Father Huddleſton was admitted to give Extreme Uection. And the Interval between this and Death was ſo ſhort, that nothing concerning the Biſhop's Behaviour happen'd worthy of Notice. Life of Biſhop Ken, 8*vo*. 1713. p. 12.

I heard a great Peer relate, that King Charles was in a manner paſt his Senſes, when the Duke ſaid, Brother, will you have the Prieſt come in? And without any ſenſible Anſwer given by the King, Father Huddleſtone who was ſet to wait at the Chamber-door was call'd in, and did what he pleas'd in his way, without the King's Choice, or any open ſign of Aſſent to it.

Yet the Papiſts publiſh'd a very different Account in the name of Father Huddleſtone himſelf, and call'd it a true Relation of the late King's Death, to which are added Copies of two Papers written by the late King Charles II. of Bleſſed Memory found in the ſtrong Box. Huddleſton's ſhort and plain way, &c. London, 1688. Reprinted in the Phœnix, 8vo. 1707. p. 566.

Many have reported, that Mr. William Chaffinch, Keeper of the King's Cloſet, and privy to all his ſecret Affairs, ſoon after the King's Death, did ſhew to ſome choice Friends a ſmall and moſt private Chapel in Whitehall, annex'd to the Cloſet, to which as he declar'd that King in his latter Years was wont to go regularly, tho' ſecretly, to Maſs. See Eachard's Hiſt. of Engl. vol. 3. p. 732.

was

1684. 36 Car. II.

" was leſs upon his Guard, or ſooner deceiv'd in " the Sincerity of Others. If he had any one " fix'd Maxim of Government, it was to Play " one Party againſt another, to be thereby the " more Maſter of both: And no Prince under- " ſtood better how to ſhift Hands upon every " Change of the Scene.

" To ſum up his Character: He was dexterous " in all the Arts of Inſinuation; and had acqui- " red ſo great an Aſcendant over the Affections " of his People, in ſpite of all the unhappy Mea- " ſures he had taken, that it may in ſome ſenſe " be ſaid, he died opportunely for England; ſince " if he had liv'd, it's probable we might, in com- " pliance with him, have complemented our ſelves " out of all the Remains of Liberty, if he had " had but a mind to be Maſter of them: Which " it's but Charity to believe he had not, at leaſt " immediately before his Death.

" There is one thing more, that may help to " make the Character of this Prince; That in the " Lines and Shape of his Face (all but the Teeth) " he had a great Reſemblance of the ancient " Buſto's and Statues we have of the Emperor " Tiberius: Inſomuch that one of the moſt learn- " ed Men of this Age told me, That walking in " the Farneſian Gardens at Rome, with a Noble " Italian that had been at the Court of England, " he took notice of this Reſemblance in an An- " tique Statue of Tiberius; and asking the Italian " if he remember'd any Prince he had ſeen that " reſembled it? The other immediately nam'd " King Charles. As there was a great Likeneſs " betwixt theſe two Princes in their Faces, there " was likewiſe ſome in their Maxims of Govern- " ment; the time of their Age in which they came " to govern; the length of their Reigns; and the " Suſpicions about the manner of their Death. And " indeed, excepting Tiberius's Temper, his Cru- " elty, Jealouſy, and unnatural Luſts, any one " that's acquainted with both their Stories, will " eaſily find ſomething of a Parallel betwixt them. " Nor is this any Reflection upon the Memory " of King Charles; for, except in what I named, " Tiberius may be reckon'd among the wiſeſt and " the braveſt of thoſe that wore the Imperial " Purple.

Dryden's Converſion. See Hiſt. Tracts, p. 178, 201.

THE LIFE and REIGN OF King JAMES the Second.

1684. 1 Jac. II.

AFTER the Death of King CHARLES, the Privy-Council immediately aſſembled; and the new King, JAMES the Second, appearing in Perſon among them, was graciouſly pleas'd to expreſs himſelf in this Manner:

My Lords,

K. James his Speech in Council.

Before I enter upon any other Buſineſs, I think fit to ſay ſomething to you. Since it hath pleas'd Almighty God to place me in this Station, and I am now to ſucceed ſo Good and Gracious a King, as well as ſo very Kind a Brother, I think it fit to declare to you, That I will endeavour to follow his Example, and moſt eſpecially in that of his great Clemency and Tenderneſs to his People. I have been reported to be a Man for Arbitrary Power; but that is not the only Story that has been made of Me: And I ſhall make it my Endeavour to preſerve this Government, both in Church and State, as it is now by Law Eſtabliſh'd. I know the Principles of the Church of England are for Monarchy, and the Members of it have ſhewn themſelves Good and Loyal Subjects; therefore, I ſhall always take Care to defend and ſupport it. I know too, that the Laws of England are ſufficient to make the King as great a Monarch as I can wiſh: And as I ſhall never depart from the juſt Rights and Prerogative of the Crown, ſo I ſhall never invade any Man's Property. I have often heretofore ventur'd my Life in Defence of this Nation [a]; and I ſhall ſtill go as far as any Man in preſerving it in all its juſt Rights and Liberties.

Whereupon the Lords of the Council were humble Suitors to his Majeſty, that theſe his gracious Expreſſions might be made Publick; which his Majeſty did order accordingly. Then a Proclamation was drawn up, ſignifying his Majeſty's Pleaſure, "That all Men being in Office of Government at the Deceaſe of the late King, ſhould ſo continue till his Majeſty's farther Direction." And in the Afternoon the King was proclaimed before Whitehall-Gate, at Temple-Bar, and the Royal-Exchange, with the uſual Solemnity: But the Signs of popular Grief exceeded thoſe of Joy. On Feb. 9. the King publiſh'd a Proclamation for continuing the Collection of the Cuſtoms and Subſidies of Tonnage and Poundage; declaring, "That he had thought fit to call a Parliament ſpeedily to be aſſembled, in which he made no doubt but Care would be taken for ſettling a ſufficient Revenue on the Crown for the Support of the Government; the Neceſſities of which, in the mean time, requir'd that the Cuſtoms and Subſidies, and other Duties upon Merchandizes, ſhould be continu'd to be collected, as in the Time of his deareſt Brother lately deceas'd." Though this was no extraordinary Stretch of Power, yet it was ſuſpected by ſome wiſe Perſons to be an Eagerneſs of breaking through the Laws of the Land, and the Liberties of the Subject: And it fell under the greater Suſpicion, when the Addreſs of the Barriſters and Students of the Middle-Temple came to be preſented by Sir Humphry Mackworth, with this Expreſſion in it: We cannot but with the deepeſt Senſe of Gratitude acknowledge your Majeſty's great Goodneſs and Condeſcenſion in your late Declaration; and in particular, that your Majeſty hath been graciouſly pleas'd, in purſuance of the ſame, to extend your Royal Care of the Government to the Preſervation of the Cuſtoms; the Inter-

1684. Proceedings in the New Reign.

[a] The Author of an Anſwer to King James's Declaration 1689, ſaid of this firſt Speech to the Privy-Council. He that can reconcile this Speech with King James's after Actings, is the fitteſt Perſon I know to explain the Popiſh Notion of our Saviour's Body being in a thouſand diſtinct Places at once.

I took it from the Mouth of Archbiſhop Tenniſon on Monday Decemb. 8. 1712. That he was then in waiting as Chaplain when King Charles died; and that the Sunday after his Death there was great Expectation whether King James would come to the Chapel or not: Upon which, for Satiſfaction, he waited on the Lord Chamberlain Arlington; and being admitted in the Morning at his Bed ſide, he aſk'd his Lordſhip whether the King would be at Chapel? No, ſaid my Lord, he will not be there; but however, the Cuſhion, and Bible, and Prayer-Book, ſhall be laid in the Cloſet, as if he were to come. For indeed (ſays my Lord) he ought to be there. This good Humour of the Lord Arlington not agreeing ſo well with the Report of his dying a Papiſt, I aſk'd his Grace whether there was no Truth in that Report? To which his Grace readily anſwered, that he could not believe the Lord Arlington liv'd or dy'd a Papiſt, tho' a complete Courtier; that on the very laſt Sunday his Lordſhip was abroad, he was brought (ſays he) in a Chair to receive the Sacrament in my Church; but when ſoon after he lay a dying, and was in a manner ſenſleſs, then ſome about him turn'd out his Proteſtant Servants, and brought a Roman Prieſt to him, as had been practis'd upon his late Maſter.—— The Archbiſhop was pleas'd at the ſame time to tell us, that his Brother Chaplain, a Dean of the Church, (not mentioning his Name or Title) was much troubled at the Apprehenſions of Popery upon the Throne, but us'd to comfort himſelf much with the Sunday Collect, which happen'd to be that on the Fifth Sunday after Epiphany. —— O Lord we beſeech thee to keep thy Church and Houſhold in thy true Religion, that they who do lean only upon the Hope of thy Heavenly Grace, may evermore be defended by thy mighty Power, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. Amen.

1684. Jac. II.

miſſion whereof would not only have diſabled your Majeſty to maintain the Navy in Defence of the Realm, but, by taking away the Balance of Trade, have ruin'd Thouſands of your Majeſty's Subjects that paid Cuſtom in the Life of our late Sovereign; and by an exceſſive Exportation and Importation Cuſtom-free, have rendred that Branch of the Revenue unprofitable for ſome Years to come, notwithſtanding all the Care and Loyalty of the ſucceeding Parliament, &c.

There was another Offence taken at the obſcure and parſimonious Funeral of the late King; which was look'd upon to be either a want of Spirit, or a want of Affection in his Royal Succeſſor. This Account was given of it by Authority.

Funeral of King Charles II.

Whitehall, Feb. 14. "This Evening was privately ſolemnized the Funeral of his late Majeſty "King Charles II. from the Painted-Chamber in "the Palace at Weſtminſter to the Abby-Church "there. The Body was carry'd under a Velvet-"Canopy, borne by Gentlemen of the Privy-"Chamber, ſix Earls ſupporting the Pall. The "Proceeding began with Servants to the Nobi-"lity, their Royal Highneſs's, their preſent Ma-"jeſty's, the Queen Dowager's, and the late King's "Servants, &c. After whom follow'd Barons, "Biſhops, and others of the Nobility, according "to their reſpective Degrees, tog-ther with the "great Officers, and the Lord Archbiſhop of "Canterbury. His Royal Highneſs the Prince of "Denmark was Chief-Mourner, (his Train borne "by the Lord Cornbury:) The Supporters to the "Chief-Mourner were the Dukes of Somerſet and "Beaufort, wearing their Collars of the Order, (as "the other Knights of the Garter, then preſent, "did.) The Aſſiſtants to the Chief-Mourner "were ſixteen Earls. One of the Kings of Arms "carry'd the Crown and Cuſhion; the reſt of the "Officers of Arms attending and directing the "Ceremony; which was cloſed with his Majeſty's "Band of Gentlemen-Penſioners, and the Yeo-"men of the Guard. At the Entrance into the "Church, the Dean and Prebendaries of Weſtmin-"ſter, attended with the Choir, met the Body, "and proceeded to King Henry VIIth's Chapel, "where it was interred in a Vault under the Eaſt-"End of the South-Ile. Service being ended, "and the Officers of his Majeſty's Houſhold hav-"ing broken their Staffs, the Royal Style was pro-"claim'd by another of the Kings of Arms, ac-"cording to Cuſtom.

Honours and Preferments.

On Feb. 9. his Royal Highneſs Prince George, Hereditary Prince of Denmark, was, by his Majeſty's Command, call'd into the Council-Chamber, and took his Place at the Board. Within few Days after, his Majeſty was graciouſly pleas'd to make his Grace the Duke of Ormond Lord-Steward; the Earl of Arlington Lord-Chamberlain; the Lord Newport Lord-Treaſurer; the Lord Maynard Comptroller; and Henry Savil Eſq; Vice-Chamberlain of his Houſhold; in which Offices they had ſerved the late King. And ſoon after his Majeſty appointed Henry Bulkley Eſq; to be Maſter of his Houſhold; Sir Stephen Fox eldeſt Clerk of the Green-Cloth; Sir William Boreman ſecond Clerk of the ſame; Sir William Churchill eldeſt Clerk-Comptroller; and Sir Richard Maſon youngeſt Clerk-Comptroller; in which Places they had likewiſe ſerved his late Majeſty. Laurence Earl of Rocheſter, Lord-Preſident of the Council, was now conſtituted Lord High-Treaſurer of England; and on Monday Morning, Feb. 16. his Majeſty gave the White-Staff to his Lordſhip. On Wedneſday following, in the Afternoon, his Majeſty was pleas'd in Council to declare the Right Honourable the Marquis of Hallifax Lord-Preſident of his Privy-Council; the Earl of Clarendon Lord Privy-Seal; the Duke of Beaufort Lord Preſident of Wales; and the Lord Godolphin Lord Chamberlain to the Queen. On March 8. his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Vernon, of London, Eſq; as a Mark of his Royal Favour for his ſtedfaſt Loyalty: And near the ſame time he did the ſame Honour to William Haman Eſq; Mayor of the City of Briſtol. And on March 22. his Majeſty conferr'd the like Honour on Marmaduke Dayrel, Eſq; Son of Sir Thomas Dayrel, late of Comps-Caſtle in the County of Cambridge, Kt.

1684. 1 Jac. II.

Account of Religion.

Diſſenters complain of their Sufferings.

In Matters of Religion the Diſſenters complain of great Perſecutions, and give this Tragical Account of their Sufferings: "About this time one "Mr. Robert Mayot, of Oxon, a pious Conformiſt, "who had devoted his Eſtate to charitable Uſes, "gave, by his laſt Will, 600 Pounds, to be di-"ſtributed by Mr. Baxter to ſixty poor ejected Mi-"niſters; adding, That he did it not becauſe they "were Noncontormiſts, but becauſe many ſuch were "Poor and Pious [a]. But the King's Attorney, "Sir Robert Sawyer, ſued for it in the Chancery; "and the Lord-Keeper North gave it all to the "King. It was paid into the Chancery by Order, "and, as Providence order'd it, there kept ſafe "till King William ſo happily aſcended the "Throne, when the Commiſſioners of the Great-"Seal reſtor'd it to the Uſe for which it was in-"tended by the Deceaſed; and Mr. Baxter diſ-"pos'd of it accordingly. This Year, while "Mr. Baxter lay in Pain and Languiſhing, the "Juſtices of the Seſſions ſent Warrants to appre-

[a] See the Judgment of the late Lord Chief Juſtice Sir Matthew Hale of the Nature of true Religion, the Cauſes of its Corruption, and the Churches Calamity, by Men's Additions and Violences; with the deſired Cure. In three Diſcourſes, written by himſelf at ſeveral times. Humbly dedicated to the honourable Judges and learned Lawyers, who knew and honoured the Author, becauſe in their true Sentiments of Religion, and its Depravations, and the Cure, the Welfare of England under his Majeſty is eminently concern'd, by the faithful Publiſher RICHARD BAXTER. To which is annex'd the Judgment of Sir Francis Bacon, Lord Verulam, Saint Albans, and Chancellor of England. And ſomewhat of Dr. Iſaac Barrow's on the ſame Subject. —— A Preface with ſome Notes on theſe Diſcourſes by the Publiſher Mr. Baxter, relating, that in his laſt Letter to Judge Hales he had told him how much Good the Lord Bacon's Book, call'd Conſiderations of Matters Eccleſiaſtical, had done, and had deſir'd him to write his own Judgment briefly and freely of the Cauſe and Cure of our Diviſions: That after the Judges Death theſe Papers were found in a Bag of MSS. directed for Mr. Baxter, which he conjectures to have been long before written by him at ſeveral times to the ſame Purpoſe.— London, 1684. 4*to*.

See the two Steps of a Nonconformiſt Miniſter, made by him in order to the obtaining his Liberty of Preaching in Publick. Together with an Appendix about coming to Church, in reſpect to the People. Publiſhed for a Teſtimony in his Generation by a Lover of Sincerity and Peace; with a Poſtſcript, or Addition, from the Author. Subſcribed John Humfrey. London, for Tho. Parkhurſt, 1684 4*to*.

As a Proſecution of the Diſſenters had made ſome of the Leaders more moderate; ſo the Zeal of the Court for the Church had made ſome of our Divines more high and rigid. Some would have thrown out the Singing Pſalms, as not authorized by Canon: And ſome would have made it neceſſary for all People to reſort only to their own Pariſh-Churches, and unlawful to communicate, or even to hear Prayers and Sermons in any Neighbouring Church or Chapel. See, 1. A Letter of Dr. Richard Watſon, giving an Hiſtorical Account of what he ſuffer'd by not permitting the Singing Pſalms to be uſed in his Church; and his Arguments for excluding of them. London, 1684.—2. A Letter from a Country Miniſter to ſome Neighbouring Clergy concerning the uſual Reſort of his Pariſhioners to other Churches in Contempt of their own, dated March 27, 1684. London, for Walter Kettleby.

"hend

1683. 1 Jac. II

" hend him, he being one in a Catalogue which " was ſaid to contain the Names of a Thouſand " Perſons, who were all to be bound to their " good Behaviour. Knowing that their Warrant " was not to break open Doors, he refuſed to o- " pen to them, though they were got into his " Houſe. Whereupon they ſet ſix Officers at his " Study-Door, who kept him from his Bed and " Food, by Watching all Night: And the next " Day he yielded. They carry'd him to the Seſ- " ſions when he was ſcarce able to ſtand, and " bound him in a Bond of 400 Pounds to his good " Behaviour. He deſired to know his Crimes, " and Accuſers; but was told, 'twas only to ſe- " cure the Government againſt ſuſpected Perſons. " He was ſome time after carry'd again to the Seſ- " ſions-Houſe in great Pain, and forc'd to continue " Bound. He refuſ'd to ſtand Bound, not know- " ing what they might interpret a Breach of the " Peace: But his Sureties would be Bound, leſt he " ſhould die in Jail. He was carry'd thither a " third time, and ſtill bound, tho', for the moſt " part, he kept his Bed.

" Sept. 23. Mr. Thomas Roſwell, who was Mi- " niſter of a Diſſenting Congregation in Rother- " hith, was impriſon'd in the Gate-houſe in Weſt- " minſter, by a Warrant from Sir George Jeffreys " for High-Treaſon. A Bill was found againſt him " at the Quarter-Seſſions at Kingſton in Surrey: " Upon which he was arraign'd on Octob. 25. and " try'd on Novemb. 18. following at the King's- " Bench-Bar by a Surrey Jury before the Lord " Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, and three other Judges " of that Court, Wythins, Holloway and Walcot. " The High-Treaſon, as laid in the Indictment, " and ſworn by the Witneſſes, was, That in a " Sermon which he preach'd on Sept. 14. he ſaid " theſe Words; That the People (meaning the " Subjects of our Sovereign Lord the King) make " a flocking to the (ſaid Sovereign Lord the) King, " upon pretence of Healing the King's-Evil; which " he (meaning our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King) " could not do: But that we (meaning himſelf, and " other traiterous Perſons, Subjects of our ſaid " Lord the King) are they to whom they (meaning " the Subjects of our ſaid Lord the King) ought " to flock; becauſe we (meaning himſelf, and the " ſaid other traiterous Perſons) are Prieſts and Pro- " phets, that by our Prayers can heal the Dolours " and Griefs of the People. We (meaning the " Subjects of our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King) " have had two wicked Kings, (meaning the moſt " Serene Charles I. late King of England, and our " ſaid Sovereign Lord the King that now is) whom " we can reſemble to no other Perſon, but to the moſt " wicked Jeroboam: And that if they (mean- " ing the ſaid Evil-diſpos'd Perſons then and " there ſo, as aforeſaid, with him unlawfully aſ- " ſembled and gather'd together) would ſtand to " their Principles, he (meaning himſelf) did not " fear but they (meaning himſelf and the ſaid Evil- " diſpos'd Perſons) would overcome their Enemies, " (meaning our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King, and " his Subjects) as in former Times, with Rams- " horns, broken Platters, and a Stone in a Sling. " The Witneſſes were three Women: They " ſwore to the Words as they ſtand without the " Innuendo's. The Tryal laſted about ſeven Hours. " Mr. Roſwell made a moſt full and clear Defence " of himſelf; very modeſtly, and yet ſtrenuouſly " vindicating his Innocence, to the ſatisfaction of " thoſe that were preſent, and ſo as to gain the " applauſe of many Gentlemen of the long Robe. " The Jury however, after they had been out a- " bout half an Hour, brought him in guilty. " The Women who were the Witneſſes were In- " famous Perſons, laden with the guilt of many " Perjuries; which had eaſily been prov'd upon " them all, before the Tryals, could Juſtice have " been had: But they were ſkreen'd by the " Recorder, who was the Perſon that laid the " whole Scheme of the Buſineſs, and patcht up " the Indictment in Terms ſuited to his known A- " bilities. But ſuch of them as could be met with, " were afterwards convicted of Perjury, and Smith " the chief Witneſs was Pillory'd before the Ex- " change. Sir John Talbot, who was preſent, re- " preſented to King Charles the State of the Caſe, " as it appear'd at the Tryal; and he order'd Jef- " freys to find an Evaſion. Whereupon he aſ- " ſign'd him Council afterwards to plead to the " Inſufficiency of the Indictment in Arreſt of Judg- " ment; and the King gave him his Pardon: Up- " on which he was diſcharg'd. Jan. 19. Mr. Jen- " kyns died in Newgate, as did alſo Mr. Bampfield " and Mr. Ralphſon, and ſeveral others in other " Priſons. And quickly after died King Charles " himſelf, viz. on Feb. 6. 168$\frac{4}{5}$. Though he con- " tinu'd the Proſecution of the poor Diſſenters, " yet they held on their Meetings, heartily pray- " ing for his Peace and Proſperity: And at laſt " they were as much concern'd at his Death as any " People in the Kingdom.

1684. 1 Jac. II.

Death of many Biſhops.

King Charles's death was preceded, if not prog-noſticated by the death of ſeveral Biſhops: Dr. Edward Rainbow, who had been conſecrated Bi-ſhop of Carliſle on January 10. 1664. and had now liv'd to the Age of 76 Years, died in his Palace of Roſe-Caſtle on March 26. And on the firſt of April following his Body was interr'd in the Church-Yard of Dalſton, under the Chancel Wall; with a Funeral Sermon preach'd by Mr. Thomas Tulley, one of his Lordſhip's Chaplains, and Chancellor of the Dioceſe of Carliſle, which was afterwards publiſh'd; with the Life of the Biſhop, written by Jonathan Bankes, School-maſter of Appleby. He was ſucceeded by Dr. Thomas Smith, ſome-time Fellow of Queen's-College in Oxford. Doctor Peter Gunning, Tranſlated from the See of Chi-cheſter to that of Ely, on March 4. 1674. Died now on Sunday, July 6. and his Body was ſoon after buried with due ſolemnity in the Cathedral Church of Ely, and had his great Character and good Works remembred in a Diſcourſe deliver'd in two Sermons preach'd in the Cathedral of Ely, in Sept. 1684. by Humphry Gower, D. D. Maſter of St. John's College in Cambridge, and one of the Prebendaries of Ely. Upon his death, Dr. Francis Turner, Biſhop of Rocheſter, in great favour with the new King, was tranſlated to the good Biſhop-rick of Ely,: And on Sunday Nov. 2. Dr. Thomas Spratt, Dean of Weſtminſter, another great Favou-rite, was conſecrated Biſhop of Rocheſter, by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, aſſiſted by ſeveral other Biſhops, in the Chapel at Lambeth. Dr. George Morley Biſhop of Wincheſter, a very learned and exemplary Prelate, after a good old Age of 87 Years, died in Farnham-Caſtle, on October 29. Whereupon his Body was conveyed to Wincheſter, and buried in a little Vault at the foot of the Steps aſcending to the Choir on the North ſide. Soon after an Altar-Tomb was erected over his Grave, and a Latin Inſcription put upon it, which the Bi-ſhop himſelf had compos'd in the 80th Year of his Age. Dr. Peter Mew, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, was tranſlated to this rich See of Wincheſter, and did Homage to his Majeſty on Novemb. 24. And Dr. Thomas Kenn, Fellow of Wincheſter-College, a Man eminent for a devotional and auſtere Life, was on Sunday January 25. conſecrated Biſhop of Bath and Wells, by the Lord Archbiſhop of Can-terbury, aſſiſted by ſeveral other Biſhops at his Cha-pel at Lambeth.

K. Charles ſuppoſed to die a Papiſt.

King Charles had liv'd in a profeſt Communion with the Church of England, but had indulg'd himſelf himſelf and his Court in ſo many Liberties of Life, and ſuch a Prophaneneſs of Humour, that he was generally thought to be a Prince of little or no Religion: And indeed for that Reaſon he was the fitter to die in the Communion of the Church of Rome, if he could make himſelf believe that he might in the Boſom of that Church (and of that alone) obtain Salvation, without Repentance. The pious Biſhop Kenn, of whom his Majeſty was thought to have the higheſt Opinion, was appointed to attend him, in his laſt Sickneſs; but he was allow'd no Opportunity to talk ſeriouſly with him, being frequently diſmiſs'd, and again induſtriouſly interrupted in the Duties which he offer'd to perform: While Father Huddleſton was carefully brought into the Bed-Chamber, and was allow'd to perform all the laſt Duties to his dying Majeſty; but whether ſo much at the King's own Deſire, or at the officious Importunity of others, is not ſo eaſy to determine. But this is certain, that King James, who had better have conceal'd this Matter, was very zealous to divulge it: For he publiſh'd two Papers, written by the late King, and left in his ſtrong Box; where his Royal Brother, King James, affirm'd that he found them, and they are as follow:

The Firſt PAPER.

Papers in the Strong Box.

T*HE Diſcourſe we had the other Day, I hope, ſatisfy'd you in the main,* That Chriſt can have but one Church here on Earth; and I believe, that it is as viſible, as that the Scripture is in print, that none can be that Church, but that which is call'd the Rom. Cath. Ch. I think you need not trouble your ſelf with entring into that Ocean of particular Diſputes, when the main (and in truth, the only) Queſtion is, Where that Church is, which we do profeſs to Believe, in the two Creeds? We declare there, to believe one Catholick and Apoſtolick Church: And it is not left to every fantaſtical Man's Head to believe as he pleaſes, but to the Church, to whom Chriſt left the Power upon Earth, to govern us in Matters of Faith, who made the Creeds for our Directions. It were a very irrational thing to make Laws for a Country, and leave it to the Inhabitants to be the Interpreters and Judges of theſe Laws. For when every Man will be his own Judge, and by Conſequence no ſuch thing as either Right or Wrong; can we therefore ſuppoſe, that Almighty God would leave us at thoſe Uncertainties, as to give us a Rule to go by, and leave every Man to be his own Judge? I do ask any Ingenuous Man, Whether it be not the ſame thing, to follow our own Fancy, or to interpret the Scripture by it? I would have any Man ſhew me, where the Power of deciding of Matters of Faith is given to every particular Man. Chriſt left his Power to the Church, even to forgive Sins in Heaven; and left his Spirit with them, which they exercis'd after his Reſurrection: Firſt, by his Apoſtles, in theſe Creeds; and many Years after, by the Council at Nice, where that Creed was made that is call'd by that Name: And by the Power which they had received from Chriſt, they were the Judges, even of the Scripture it ſelf, many Years after the Apoſtles, which Books were Canonical, and which were not. And if they had this Power then, I deſire to know how they came to loſe it; and by what Authority Men ſeparate themſelves from that Church? The only Pretence I ever heard of, was, Becauſe the Church hath fail'd, in wreſting and interpreting the Scripture, contrary to the true Senſe and Meaning of it; and that they have impos'd Articles of Faith upon us, which are not to be warranted by God's Word. I do deſire to know, who is to be Judge of that; whether the whole Church, (the Succeſſion whereof has continu'd to this Day, without Interruption,) or particular Men, who have raiſed Schiſms for their own advantage?

This is a true COPY of a PAPER I found in the late King my Brother's Strong Box, written by his own Hand.

J. R.

The Second PAPER.

I*T is a ſad thing to conſider what a world of* Hereſies are crept into this Nation, every Man thinks himſelf as competent a Judge of the Scriptures, as the very Apoſtles themſelves: And 'tis no wonder that it ſhould be ſo; ſince that Part of the Nation who looks moſt like a Church, dares not bring the true Arguments againſt the other Sects, for fear they ſhould be turned againſt themſelves, and confuted by their own Arguments. The Church of England as ('tis call'd) wou'd fain have it thought they are the Judges in Matters Spiritual, and yet dare not ſay poſitively there is no Appeal from them; for either they muſt ſay, that they are Infallible, (which they cannot pretend to;) or confeſs, that what they decide in Matters of Conſcience, is no farther to be follow'd, than it agrees with every Man's private Judgment. If Chriſt did leave a Church here upon Earth, and we were all once of that Church; how, and by what Authority, did we ſeparate from that Church? If the Power of interpreting Scripture, be in every Man's Brain, what need have we of a Church, or Church-men? To what purpoſe then did our Saviour, after he had given his Apoſtles Power to bind and looſe in Heaven and Earth, add to it, That he would be with them to the end of the World? Theſe Words were not ſpoken parabolically, or by way of Figure: Chriſt was then aſcending into his Glory, and left his Power with his Church, even to the end of the World? We have had, theſe hundred Years paſt, the ſad Effects, of denying to the Church that Power in Matters Spiritual, without an Appeal. What Country can ſubſiſt in Peace or Quiet, where there is not a Supreme Judge, from whence there can be no Appeal? Can there be any Juſtice done, where the Offenders are their own Judges, and equal Interpreters of the Law, with thoſe, who are appointed to adminiſter Juſtice? This is our Caſe here in England, in Matters Spiritual: For the Proteſtants are not of the Church of England, as 'tis the true Church from whence there can be no Appeal, but becauſe the Diſcipline of that Church is conformable, at that preſent, to their Fancies; which as ſoon as it ſhall contradict or vary from, they are ready to embrace or join with the next Congregation of People, whoſe Diſcipline or Worſhip agrees with their own Opinion at that time: So that, according to this Doctrine, there is no other Church, nor Interpreter of Scripture, but that which lies in every Man's giddy Brain. I deſire to know therefore of every ſerious Conſiderer of theſe things, Whether the great Work of our Salvation ought to depend upon ſuch a ſandy Foundation as this? Did Chriſt ever ſay to the Civil Magiſtrates, (much leſs to the People) That he would be with them unto the end of the World? Or did he give them the Power to forgive Sins? St. Paul tells the Corinthians, Ye are God's Husbandry; ye are God's Buildings; we are Labourers with God. This ſhews who are the Labourers, and who are the Husbandry and Building. And in this whole Chapter, and in the preceding one, St. Paul takes great Pains to ſet forth, That they (the Clergy) have the Spirit of God; without which, no Man ſearches the deep Things of God: And he concludes the Chapter, with this Verſe; For who hath kn 1685. 1 Jac. II. Mind of the Lord, that he may inſtruct him? But we have the Mind of Chriſt. Now, if we but conſider, in humane Probability and Reaſon, the Powers Chriſt leaves to his Church in this Goſpel, and St. Paul explains ſo diſtinctly afterwards, we cannot think that our Saviour ſaid all theſe things to no purpoſe. And pray conſider, on the other ſide, That thoſe who reſiſt the Truth, and will not ſubmit to his Church, draw their Arguments from Implications, and far-fetch'd Interpretations, at the ſame time that they deny plain and poſitive Words: Which is ſo great a Diſingenuity, as 'tis not almoſt to be thought that they can believe themſelves. Is there any other Foundation of the Proteſtant Church, but that if the Civil Magiſtrate pleaſe, he may call ſuch of the Clergy as he thinks fit for his Turn at that time, and turn the Church either to Presbytery, Independency, or indeed what he pleaſes? This was the way of our pretended Reformation here in England; and, by the ſame Rule and Authority, it may be altered into as many more Shapes and Forms, as there are Fancies in Mens Heads.

This is a True COPY.

1685. Coronation of the King & Queen. The Feſtival of St. George, Apr. 23. had been appointed for the Coronation of the King and Queen, which was perform'd in this manner: Their Majeſties being come from Whitehall to the Palace at Weſtminſter, (where the Nobility and others who were to go in Proceſſion were aſſembled) came in State from the Houſe of Lords into Weſtminſter-Hall about Eleven in the Morning, and being ſeated on the Throne there, the Sword of State, the Sword Curtana, and the two pointed Swords, together with the golden Spurs, were preſented to his Majeſty, and laid on a Table before him. Then the Dean and Prebends of Weſtminſter, having before brought the Crowns and other Regalia in ſolemn Proceſſion from the Collegiate-Church there, came up the Hall, and preſented them ſeverally to His Majeſty; which being likewiſe laid on the Table, were (together with the four Swords and Spurs) delivered to the Lords appointed to carry them in the Proceſſion, (which then began.) Theſe Noblemen bore the King's Regalia: The Earl of Ailesbury St. Edward's Staff; the Lord De Gray the Spurs; the Earl of Peterborough the Sceptre with the Croſs; the Earl of Pembroke the third Sword: the Earl of Derby the ſecond Sword; and between them the Earl of Shrewsbury bearing the Curtana, or pointleſs Sword; the Earl of Oxford the Sword of State; the Duke of Ormond St. Edward's Crown; the Duke of Somerſet the Orb, and the Duke of Albemarle the Sceptre with the Dove.

Three other Noblemen carry'd the Queen's Regalia: The Earl of Dorſet the Ivory Rod; the Earl of Rutland the Sceptre; and the Duke of Beaufort the Crown. The Queen's Majeſty was aſſiſted by the Biſhops of London and Wincheſter, under a rich Canopy ſupported by ſixteen Barons of the Cinque-Ports, with her Train born up by the young Dutcheſs of Norfolk. The King's Majeſty was aſſiſted by the Biſhops of Durham and Bath, under a rich Canopy born likewiſe by ſixteen Barons of the Cinque-Ports, and his Train born up by four Earls eldeſt Sons. 1685. 1 Jac. II.

Their Majeſties being enter'd the Collegiate-Church, and the Nobility and others being all duly placed, they aſcended the Theatre raiſed in the Choir, and repaired to their private Devotions on the Eaſt-part thereof, and then ſeated themſelves in their Chairs of State. Then folllow'd the Recognition, and after an Anthem, [a] the King and Queen came to the Altar, and made their firſt Oblation; and the Lords who carry'd the Regalia preſented them at the Altar, to be there depoſited. Then the Litany was ſung by two Biſhops: Which ended, the Biſhop of Ely began the Sermon.

After Sermon, the King took the accuſtomed Oath: And Veni Creator being ſung, and the King diſrobed of his Mantle and Surcoat, he was anointed, and veſted with all the ſacred Habits, in King Edward's Chair; and the Crown being put on by the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, juſt at three in the Afternoon, all the People ſhouted, &c. Then followed the Coronation of the Queen; at which likewiſe the Ladies put on their Coronets, (as the Lords had done before at the King's:) And her Majeſty having receiv'd into her Hands the Sceptre and Ivory Rod, was conducted to her Royal Seat upon the Throne. Then their Majeſties being enthronized, and after an Anthem was ſung, the Arch-Biſhop ended with the Benediction. Their Majeſties and the great Retinue returning to Weſtminſter-Hall in the ſame order they came, to a noble Dinner.

The 19th Day of May had been appointed for opening of the new Parliament: At which time his Majeſty went from Whitehall, by Water, to the Houſe of Peers, and being there ſeated on his Throne, ſent for the Houſe of Commons; and then my Lord-Keeper ſpoke thus: Opening of the New Parliament.

My Lords, and You the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of the Houſe of Commons;

"I Am commanded by his Majeſty to acquaint "you, that there are divers Preliminaries "for you to do, and ſeveral Oaths required by "Act of Parliament for us all to take, before you "can proceed to Buſineſs. It is therefore his "Majeſty's Pleaſure, that you, Gentlemen of the "Houſe of Commons, do go back to your Houſe, "and make Choice of a Speaker, and come and "Preſent him to his Majeſty at four of the Clock: "And when you have done that, and taken the "uſual Oaths, his Majeſty will then acquaint "you with the Reaſons why he call'd you together. Lord's Keeper's Speech.

The Commons being return'd to their own Houſe, my Lord Middleton named Sir John Trevor as a fit Perſon for their Speaker, and one that would be acceptable to his Majeſty. Whereupon the Commons unanimouſly made Choice of him, and at four in the Afternoon preſented him to his Majeſty: When the Lord-Keeper, by his Majeſty's

[a] There was an Omiſſion of the Sacrament becauſe the King would not receive, th[illegible] miſſion not to be avoided was charged [illegible] the Archbiſho[illegible] as a wilful departing from the ancien[illegible] [illegible] Form and Cuſtom. But why ſhould he offer what he [illegible] Omiſſio[illegible] knew would be contemptuouſly rejected? This of Arch[illegible] is however ſaid to have lain heavy on the Spirits called [illegible] ſhop Sancroft, who was afterward afraid of being th[illegible] into Queſtion for it. It was chiefly to this Default S[illegible] the Lord Chief-Baron Atkins alluded in his Speech to [illegible] William Aſhburſt, when he was ſworn Lord-Mayor of [illegible] in 1602, when reflecting on the ill Deſign of ſtriking out a part of the ancient Coronation Oath for King Charles the Firſt; he added, I could tell you ſomething more of that kind done ſince, at the time of the Coronation of the late King James, when there was much more ſtruck out of the Coronation Oath, which might be well worth enquiring how it came about——this Matter was fully open'd to his Majeſty King GEORGE upon adjuſting the Ceremonies of his happy Coronation; and that Omiſſion of the Sacrament was ſuggeſted by a certain Perſon, if his Majeſty thought fit, as a Precedent. But the King was pleas'd to reſolve to communicate, and did ſo in the moſt humble manner.

Command,

1685. 1 Jac. II.

Command, ratify'd and confirm'd him Speaker, adding, "That his Majeſty was well ſatisfy'd of "his Experience and Ability, and that he was "every way fitted and qualify'd for that Employ-"ment.

Rebellion of the Duke of Monmouth, and the Earl of Argyle.

The great Buſineſs of this Parliament, was to ſuppreſs the Rebellions of the Duke of Monmouth, and the Earl of Argyle, who were both in Holland, with many other diſcontented Perſons, and had agreed the one to invade England, and the other Scotland, at the ſame time. The Earl of Argyle was firſt ready, and ſail'd from the Ulye, on the 2[d] of May, with three Ships: On the 13th he landed in Lorn, and garriſon'd the Caſtle of Dunſtaſvar, and began to March through the Counties of Argyle and Lorn, to encreaſe his Numbers among his own Clan. The News of this Invaſion was brought to the King on Friday Morning, May 22[d]. The King went that Day to the Houſe of Peers, and ſending for the Commons, he made this SPEECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen;

The K's Speech.

"AFTER it pleas'd Almighty God, to take "to his Mercy the late King my deareſt "Brother, and to bring me to the peaceable Poſ-"ſeſſion of the Throne of my Anceſtors; I im-"mediately reſolved to call a Parliament, as the "beſt Means to ſettle every thing upon thoſe "Foundations, as may make my Reign both eaſy "and happy to you: Towards which, I am "diſpoſed to contribute all that is fit for me "to do.

"What I ſaid to my Privy-Council, at my "firſt coming there, I am deſirous to renew to "you; wherein I fully declare my Opinion con-"cerning the Principles of the Church of Eng-"land, whoſe Members have ſhew'd themſelves "ſo eminently Loyal in the worſt of Times, in "Defence of my Father, and Support of my Bro-"ther, (of Bleſſed Memory) that I will always "take Care to defend and ſupport it. I will make "it my Endeavour to preſerve this Government, "both in Church and State, as it is by Law "eſtabliſh'd: And as I will never depart from "the juſt Rights and Prerogatives of the Crown, "ſo I will never invade any Man's Property; "and you may be ſure, that having heretofore "ventur'd my Life in the Defence of this Nation, "I will ſtill go as far as any Man in preſerving it "in all its juſt Rights and Liberties. And having "given this Aſſurance concerning the Care I will "have of your Religion and Property, which I "have choſe to do, in the ſame Words which I "us'd at my firſt coming to the Crown, the "better to evidence to you, that I ſpoke them "not by Chance, and conſequently, that you "may firmly rely upon a Promiſe ſo ſolemnly "made.

"I cannot doubt that I ſhall fail of ſuitable "Returns from you, with all imaginable Duty "and Kindneſs on your Part, and particularly to "what relates to the Settling of my Revenue, and "continuing it, during my Life, as it was in the "Life-time of my Brother. I might uſe many "Arguments to enforce this Demand, for the "Benefit of Trade, the Support of the Navy, the "Neceſſity of the Crown, and the Well-being "of the Government itſelf; which I muſt not "ſuffer to be Precarious: But I am confident, "your own Conſideration of what is Juſt and "Reaſonable, will ſuggeſt to you whatſoever might "be enlarged upon this Occaſion.

"There is one popular Argument, which, I "foreſee, may be uſed againſt what I aſk of you, "from the Inclination Men have for frequent Par-"liaments; which ſome may think would be the "beſt Security, by feeding me, from time to time, "by ſuch Proportions as they ſhall think conve-"nient: And this Argument, it being the firſt "time I ſpeak to you from the Throne, I will "Anſwer once for all, That this would be a very "improper Method to take with me; and that "the beſt way to engage me to meet you often, "is always to Uſe me well.

"I expect therefore, that you will comply with "me in what I have deſired, and that you will do "it ſpeedily; that this may be a ſhort Seſſion, "and that we may meet again to all our Satiſ-"factions.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

"I muſt acquaint you, that I have had News "this Morning from Scotland, that Argyle is land-"ed in the Weſt Highlands, with the Men he "brought with him from Holland. That there "are two Declarations publiſh'd; one in the Name "of all thoſe in Arms, the other in his own: It "would be too long for me to repeat the Sub-"ſtance of them; it is ſufficient to tell you, I "am charged with Uſurpation and Tyranny. The "ſhorter of them I have directed to be forthwith "communicated to you.

"I will take the beſt Care I can, that this "Declaration of their own Faction and Rebellion "may meet with the Reward it deſerves: And I "will not doubt but you will be the more zealous "to Support the Government, and give me my "Revenue as I have deſired it, without delay.

Proceedings of the Lords and Commons.

Both Houſes immediately reſolved to return their moſt humble and hearty Thanks to his Majeſty, for his moſt gracious Speech and Declaration: The Lords coming to this Reſolution; "His Majeſty having graciouſly imparted to this "Houſe, That he is inform'd that the late Earl "of Argyle, attainted of Treaſon, with divers o-"ther Rebels, are landed in Scotland, and are in "actual Rebellion; It is ordered, by the Lords "Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, "That this Houſe do wait upon his Majeſty at "five a Clock this Afternoon, in the Banqueting-"Houſe at Whitehall, to give his Majeſty their "humble Thanks, for having imparted the ſame "to this Houſe; and do humbly offer to aſſiſt "his Majeſty with their Lives and Fortunes, a-"gainſt the ſaid Rebels, and all other his Ene-"mies whatſoever.

The Commons came to a like Reſolution; "That this Houſe will ſtand by and aſſiſt his "Majeſty, with their Lives and Fortunes, againſt "Archibald Campbell the pretended Earl of Ar-"gyle, and his Aherents, and all Rebels and Tray-"tors, and all others whatſoever that ſhall aſſiſt "him, or any of them: And that this Houſe "will in a Body attend his Majeſty with this "Vote.

Declaration of the Earl of Argyle.

The Firſt Declaration, to which the King, in his Speech, refers, was thus Entituled, The Declaration and Apology of the Proteſtant People, that is, of the Noblemen, Barons, Gentlemen, Burgeſſes, and Commons of all ſorts, now in Arms within the Kingdom of Scotland; with the Concurrence of the true and faithful Paſtors, and of ſeveral Gentlemen of the Engliſh Nation, joined with them in the ſame Cauſe, &c. Herein they complain'd, That having admitted King Charles II. to Reign over them, upon certain Terms and Conditions; he had broken thoſe Terms, and made his Government to be Ungrate, Illegal, Arbitrary and Tyrannical. That, by reſcinding of the Solemn League and Covenant, all 1685. 1 Jac. II. all the Oaths ſince impos'd, were horrid Perjury; and the publick Exerciſe of Religion, as eſtabliſhed by the late Laws, was a continued Apoſtaſy. They accuſed the Parliament, for reſcinding many wholſom Laws, and for making others on purpoſe to Perſecute and ſhed the Blood of Proteſtants. They charged the Government with the deſolating the Kirk, conniving at Papiſts, and keeping up of ſtanding Forces, which they call the Bane of Civil Government; and ſay, all the late Adminiſtration has been Tyranny and Popery twiſted together. They therefore declare againſt James Duke of York his Aſcenſion to the Throne, as being excluded from it by the Commons of England; and likewiſe declare againſt the preſent Parliaments in both Kingdoms, as pack'd and cabal'd, and return'd by Fraud and Injuſtice. For which Reaſon, they throw off all Bonds of Subjection, and take up Arms againſt James Duke of York, and all his Accomplices, for obtaining theſe Ends. 1. The Reſtoring and Settling the Proteſtant Religion. 2. The Suppreſſion and perpetual Excluſion of Popery and Prelacy. 3. The Reſtoring of all who have been Sufferers for their Adherence to their Religion and Liberties: Concluding with an earneſt Invitation to their Brethren to join with them, and vigorouſly aſſiſt them againſt a perſecuting Tyrant, and an Apoſtate Party.

The other Declaration, which the King communicated to the two Houſes, runs thus:

The DECLARATION of Archibald Earl of Argyle, Lord Kintyre, Cowall, Campbell, and Lorn, Heritable Sheriff and Lieutenant of the Shires of Argyle and Turbett, and Heritable Juſtice-General of the ſaid Shires, and of the Weſt-Iſles and others; with his Orders to his Vaſſals and others in the ſaid Shires, and under his Juriſdiction, to concur for Defence of their Religion, Lives, and Liberties.

Second Declaration of the Earl of Argyle. “I Shall not mention my CASE, publiſh'd in Print in Latin and Dutch, and more largely in Engliſh; nor mean I to repeat the printed DECLARATION emitted by ſeveral Noblemen, Gentlemen and others of both Nations now in Arms: But becauſe the Sufferings of me and my Family are therein mentioned, I have thought it fit for me to declare for my ſelf; That as I go to Arms, with thoſe who have appointed me to conduct them, for no private nor perſonal End, and only for thoſe contained in the ſaid Declaration, which I have concerted with them, and approve of; ſo I do claim no Intereſt, but what I had before the pretended Forfeiture of my Family, and have ſufficient Right to.

“And that I do freely (and as a Chriſtian) forgive all perſonal Injuries againſt my Perſon or Family, to all that ſhall not oppoſe, but join and concurr with us in our preſent Undertaking, for the Ends mention'd in the ſaid Declaration; and hereby I oblige me, never to purſue them in Judgment, nor out of Judgment. And I do farther declare; That, obtaining the peaceable and quiet Poſſeſſion of what belong'd to my Father, and myſelf, before our pretended Forfeitures, I ſhall ſatisfy all Debts due by my Father, and myſelf, as any Heir or Debtor can be obliged.

“And as my Faithfulneſs to his late Majeſty, and his Government, hath ſufficiently appeared to all unbyas'd Perſons, void of Malice; ſo I do with Grief acknowledge my former too much complying with, and conniving at the Methods that have been taken to bring us to the ſad Condition we are now in, though, God knows, never concurring in the Deſign.

“I have now, with God's Strength, ſuffered patiently my unjuſt Sentence and Baniſhment, three Years and an half, and have never offer'd to make any Uproar, or Defence by Arms, to Diſturb the Peace, upon my private Concern: But the King being now dead, and the Duke of York having taken off his Mask, and having abandon'd and invaded our Religion and Liberties, reſolving to enter into the Government, and exerciſe it, contrary to Law; I think it not only juſt, but my duty to God and my Country, to uſe my utmoſt Endeavours to oppoſe and repreſs his Uſurpations and Tyranny.

“And therefore being aſſiſted and furniſh'd very nobly by ſeveral good Proteſtants, and invited and accompany'd by ſeveral of both Nations to lead them; I reſolve, as God ſhall enable me, to uſe their Aſſiſtance of all kinds, towards the Ends expreſs'd in the ſaid Declaration.

“And I do hereby earneſtly Invite and Obteſt all honeſt Proteſtants, and particularly all my Friends and Blood-Relations, to concurr with us in the ſaid Declaration. And as I have written ſeveral Letters, ſo having no other way fully to intimate my Mind otherwiſe, I do hereby require all my Vaſſals any where, and all within my ſeveral Juriſdictions, with their fencible Men within their Command, to go to Arms, and to join and concurr with us, according to the ſaid Declaration, as they will be anſwerable at their Peril; and that they obey the particular Orders they ſhall receive from me, from time to time.

The Scotch Presbyterians were very numerous, and had Provocation enough to join with the Earl of Argyle: For beſides the late extreme Severities againſt them, there had been two rigorous Acts paſſed in the Parliament now ſitting at Edinburgh; the one declaring, That whereas the Obſtinacy of the Fanatical Party, notwithſtanding all the Laws formerly made againſt them, do perſevere to keep their Houſe and Field-Conventicles, which are the Nurſeries and Rendeſvouzes of Rebellion; therefore, his Majeſty, with conſent of his Eſtates in Parliament, doth Statute and Ordain, That all ſuch as ſhall hereafter Preach at ſuch Fanatical Houſe, or Field-Conventicles, as alſo ſuch as ſhall be preſent as Hearers at Field-Conventicles, ſhall be puniſh'd by Death, and Confiſcation of their Goods.——The other declaring, That the giving or taking of the National Covenant, as explained in the Year 1638. or of the League and Covenant, ſo commonly called, or writing in Defence thereof, or owning of them as Lawful or Obligatory on themſelves or others, ſhall infer the Crime and Pains of Treaſon. Diſcontents and Provocations in Scotland.

And indeed, the Epiſcopal Party had no great reaſon to be fond of the preſent Adminiſtration; for they were under the Burden of great Taxes, and the Terrors of a Standing Army: Nay, and Epiſcopacy it ſelf was made but a ſort of Civil Office, and held, as it were, by Commiſſion, during the Pleaſure of the King, or his Council. But the Scots ſeem'd to be of this Diſpoſition, to be moſt quiet under hard Uſage: And therefore very few went in to the Aſſiſtance of Argyle, who being purſued by the King's Army, under the Command of the Earl of Dunbarton, he was deſerted by many of his Followers, and (as it was then generally believ'd) was betray'd by Sir John Cochran, who came over with him: So, on June 17. he was forc'd to paſs the River Clyde, and to provide Guides to carry him and his remaining Forces ſafe into Galloway: But they miſtaking the Way, led them into a Bogg, where they loſt their Horſes and Defeat of the Earl of Argyle.

1685. 1 Jac. II.

and Baggage, and the Foot were diſpers'd into very ſmall Parties. The Earl of Argyle return'd towards Clyde, and was fallen upon by two of Greinock's Servants, but would not yield, firing at them when they call'd to him. He receiv'd a Wound in his Head; upon which, not truſting to his Horſe, he alighted, and ran into the Water. The Noiſe brought out a Countryman, who ran into the Water after him: The Earl being almoſt up to the Neck, preſented his Piſtol to the Country Fellow, but it miſ-ſerv'd: Upon which the Fellow gave him a Wound in the Head, which ſtunn'd him ſo, that he ſank down, and, in the ſinking, cry'd out, Unfortunate Argyle! Before he recover'd himſelf, they took him, and carry'd him to their Commander, who ſent him to Glaſcow, and thence to Edinburgh, where he was Beheaded, on the 30th of June. There were taken with him, among the Priſoners, Colonel [a] Ayloffe, who ſoon after ript up his own Belly with a Penknife; and Mr. Rumbold the Maltſter, who was executed, with many others.

He is beheaded.

When the Commons had waited on his Majeſty, with an offer of their Lives and Fortunes, in Defence of his Royal Perſon, againſt the Earl of Argyle, &c. His Majeſty made them this Anſwer: Gentlemen, I could expect no leſs from a Houſe of Commons ſo compos'd as (God be thanked) you are: I rely on the Aſſurances you have given me, which are the natural Effects of Monarchical Church of England-men. I ſhall ſtand by all ſuch; and ſo ſupported, have no reaſon to fear any Rebels, or Enemies I now have, or may have.

King's Anſwer to the Commons.

The Commons, in great Loyalty, paſſed A Bill for ſettling the Revenue of Tonnage and Poundage on his Majeſty for his Life, as had been ſettled on his late Majeſty for his Life. Which being eaſily agreed to by the Lords, the King gave his Royal Aſſent, on Saturday May 30. when Mr. Speaker preſented his Majeſty with the ſaid Money-Bill, in theſe Words:

May it pleaſe your ſacred Majeſty;

Speaker's Speech upon the Money-Bill.

" THE Commons of England have here preſented your Majeſty with the Bill of Tonnage and Poundage, with all readineſs and cheerfulneſs, and that without any Security for their Religion, though it be dearer to them than their Lives, relying wholly on your Royal Word for the Security of it; and humbly beſeech your Majeſty to accept this their Offer; and pray, that God would bleſs you with a long Life and proſperous Reign over them.

Then his Majeſty paſſed the Act, and made the following SPEECH to both Houſes:

My Lords and Gentlemen;

The K's Speech.

" I Thank you very heartily for the Bill you have preſented me this Day; and I aſſure you, the readineſs and cheerfulneſs that has attended the Diſpatch of it, is as acceptable to me as the Bill itſelf. After ſo happy a Beginning, you may believe I would not call upon you unneceſſarily for an extraordinary Supply: But when I tell you, That the Stores of the Navy and Ordnance are extremely exhauſted; that the Anticipations upon ſeveral Branches of the Revenue are great and burthenſom; that the Debts of the King my Brother, to his Servants and Family, are ſuch as deſerve Compaſſion; that the Rebellion in Scotland, without putting more Weight upon it than it really deſerves, muſt oblige me to a conſiderable Expence extraordinary: I am ſure, ſuch Conſiderations will move you to give me an Aid to provide for thoſe things, wherein the Security, the Eaſe and the Happineſs of my Government are ſo much concern'd. But above all, I muſt recommend to you the Care of the Navy, the Strength and Glory of this Nation; that you will put it into ſuch a Condition, as may make us conſider'd and reſpected abroad. I cannot expreſs my Concern, upon this Occaſion, more ſuitable to my own Thoughts of it, than by aſſuring you, I have a true Engliſh [b] Heart, as jealous of the Honour of the Nation as you can be; and I pleaſe my ſelf with the Hopes, that, by God's Bleſſing, and your Aſſiſtance, I may carry the Reputation of it yet higher in the World, than ever it has been in the time of any of my Anceſtors: And as I will not call upon you for Supplies, but when they are of Publick Uſe and Advantage; ſo I promiſe you, that what you give me upon ſuch Occaſions, ſhall be managed with Good-husbandry; and I will take Care, it ſhall be employ'd to the Uſes for which I ask them.

The forwardneſs of the Commons, in preparing and preſenting this Bill, made ſome People recollect, that it was needleſs at leaſt for the King to levy that Revenue which had legally expired at his Brother's Death; ſince a Parliament was to meet within a few Days, and then the ſame Cuſtoms granted in a Parliamentary-way would have been much more to the King's Service and Honour, than while they were foreſtall'd by a Seizure of them at the King's Command only. The Commons were now liberally diſpos'd; for immediately after taking this laſt Speech of his Majeſty into Conſideration, they Reſolved, "That a Supply be given to his Majeſty, for repair of the Navy, Ordnance and Stores, and in Defence of the ſame, and for all other Occaſions mention'd in his Majeſty's Speech." And when they came to the Ways and Means, they "Agreed upon an Additional Duty of Exciſe upon Wines and Vinegar, and a farther Impoſition upon Sugars and Tobacco." And on June 10. received this Meſſage from his Majeſty, by Sir John Ernſley, "That his Majeſty did heartily thank the Houſe, for their readineſs in his Supplies; that he deſired no more this Seſſion, than what they were about: That he would make tryal of the Impoſitions on Sugars and Tobacco; but if he ſhould find them injurious to Commons ready to give Supplies.

The K's Meſſage.

[a] Colonel Ayloffe being taken, did in a deſperate fury rip up his own Belly with a Penknife, but recover'd, and was brought into England, and hang'd.

[b] This Phraſe of a true Engliſh Heart in King James II. paſt into that of a Heart intirely Engliſh in a part of the Reign of Queen Anne. The King ſoon after explain'd himſelf in a Saying much applauded by the Author of a Diſcourſe for taking off the Penal Laws, 1687. 4*to*. The King (ſays he) has deliver'd this Saying, That Perſon cannot be a true Engliſhman in his Heart, who is not for Liberty of Conſcience, i. e. For letting in Popery by a diſpenſing Power, or corrupt Legiſlature.

And yet King James was already entring into Meaſures with France to introduce if poſſible a foreign Religion and Government. It was afterward told to the Prince of Orange in the Memorial of the Engliſh Proteſtants, 1688. The French King ſeems not unwilling to have it known, that the Popiſh Deſign in general againſt all Profeſſion of the Proteſtant Religion, eſpecially in England. He hath allowed the Biſhop of Coſnae's Speech to him at Verſailles in 1685. to be publiſh'd; he magnifies the King for ſuppreſſing the Proteſtants of that Kingdom, and asks what they may not farther expect? England (ſays he) is juſt offering to your Majeſty one of the moſt glorious Occaſions you can deſire: The King of England by the Need which he will have of Succour, and of the Support of your Arms to maintain him in the Catholick Faith, will make you quickly find Occaſion to give a Protection worthy of your ſelf.

1685. 1 Jac. II. “ his Plantations, he would not make Uſe of them, “ but hop'd they would ſupply him ſome other “ Way.

We muſt look back on the Duke of Monmouth in Holland, who was very averſe to that deſperate Enterprize which his Friends had put him upon; as appears by an original Letter of his own, in anſwer to the Solicitations of ſome one importunate Confident who had been driving upon him that attempt; ſays he, Judge what we are to expect, in caſe we ſhould venture upon any ſuch Attempt at this time. It's to me a vain Argument, That our Enemies are ſcarce yet well ſettled: When you conſider, That Fear in ſome, and Ambition in others, have brought them to comply; and that the Parliament being made up, for the moſt part, of Members that formerly run our Enemies down, they will be ready to make their Peace as ſoon as they can, rather than hazard themſelves upon an uncertain Bottom. I give you but Hints of what, if I had time, I would write you at more length: But that I might not ſeem obſtinate in my own Judgment, or neglect the Advice of my Friends, I will meet you at the Time and Place appointed. But, for God's ſake, think in the mean time of the Improbabilities that lie naturally in our way; and let us not, by ſtruggling with our Chains, make them ſtreighter and heavier. For my part, I'll run the hazard of being thought any thing, rather than a raſh inconſiderate Man. And to tell you my Thoughts without diſguiſe, I am now ſo much in love with a retir'd Life, that I am never like to be fond of making a Buſtle in the World again.

Duke of Monmouth not enclin'd to an Invaſion.

Puſh'd on by others.

But after all this reluctancy his Friends about him, who were weary of their Exile, prevail'd with him to attempt a return into England. King James was very apprehenſive of this Deſign of the Duke of Monmouth; and in order to prevent it he us'd his utmoſt Endeavours, by his Envoy Mr. Skelton, to get him ſecur'd by the States, and ſent a Priſoner into England.

Duty and Reſpect of the Pr. of Orange to the King.

The Prince of Orange, as became a Nephew and Son-in-Law, ſhew'd a ſincere Friendſhip and reſpect to the King; and offer'd to concert ſuch Meaſures with him as might have preſerv'd the Peace of England, and the common Safety of all Europe: But he found the King to be rather jealous of his Counſels, and fond of his own ways. And therefore when the Prince ſaw the Vigilance of Skelton in hunting after the Duke of Monmouth, he not only gave the Duke Notice of the Plot againſt him, by Monſieur Bentinck his Favourite, but ſupply'd him with Money to go privately to Bruſſels; with a further Aſſurance, that if he would go to the Campaign in Hungary he ſhould be maintain'd honourably, with an Equipage ſuitable to his Quality.

The Duke had not been long at Bruſſels before the Marquiſs de Grana, Governor of the Netherlands, receiv'd a Letter from King James, charging the Duke with [a] High-Treaſon. Upon which, to comply with the King's Requeſt, he gave him Notice forthwith to depart the Spaniſh Dominions. 1685. 1 Jac. II.

Duke of Monmouth prepares for an Invaſion.

Under this neceſſity of flying, the Duke liſten'd to his Friends, who had ſolicited his return to Amſterdam, and there he comply'd with their urgent Entreaties to head them in an Expedition to England. He hired a Man of War of 32 Guns at Amſterdam and 3 other ſmall Veſſels, on which he loaded Arms for 5000 Men. Skelton had ſome Notice of theſe Preparations, and uſed his utmoſt Endeavours to ſtop the Veſſels in the River: But all he could effect was to detain one ſmall Frigot, and to extort an Order from the States to Arreſt the Duke of Monmouth; who therefore went the ſooner aboard, accompany'd by Ford Lord Grey, a German Count, Mr. Joſeph Tyley, Colonel Holmes, Colonel Matthews, Major Perrot, Captain Aneſley, Captain Hewling, Mr Wade, Dr. Temple, Mr. Ferguſon; in all about 82 Officers and Gentlemen who had been forc'd to fly to Holland for Refuge from Puniſhment or Perſecution, and were deſperately diſpos'd to take any Opportunity of returning to their Native Country.

His Attendants in this Expedition.

Lands at Lyme.

On May 24. the Duke ſail'd out of the Texel with his Man of War and two Tenders; and met with ſuch bad Weather in his Voyage, that he was 19 Days at Sea, and yet was never diſcover'd by the Engliſh Ships who lay in the Chanel to intercept him. On Thurſday the 11th of June he appeared off of Lyme in Dorſetſhire, and went a-ſhore about eight in the Evening. As ſoon as his Men were landed he commanded Silence, and falling on his Knees he implored the protection of Heaven, in a ſhort Prayer: Then drawing his Sword he led his Men a back way into the Town, and ſet up his Standard in the Market-place, without any oppoſition. Then he muſter'd his little Company, who were all well Arm'd, and in good Equipage. Being ask'd, Whom they were for? They declar'd, For the Proteſtant Religion; inviting all Perſons to come and join with them. Captain Lark and ſeveral of the Townſmen immediately join'd them.

His Reception.

His formal Declaration.

After this a printed DECLARATION was read at the Market-Croſs, Intituled, The Declaration of James Duke of Monmouth, and the Noblemen, Gentlemen and others now in Arms for the[b] Defence and Vindication of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Laws, Rights and Privileges of England. Of which the Preface was to this effect; That “ Government was originally inſtituted by God, and “ this or that Form of it choſen and ſubmitted to “ by Men, for the Peace, Happineſs and Security “ of the governed, and not for the private Intereſt and perſonal Greatneſs of thoſe that Rule. “ That the Government of England was, above all “ others, happy in its Primitive Form; whereby “ the Prerogatives of the Crown, and the Privileges of the Subject were ſo far from juſtling one “ another, that the Rights reſerv'd unto the People tended to render the King Honourable and “ Great; and the Prerogatives ſettled on the “ Prince were in order to the Subjects Protection

[a] Mr. Echard recites many remarkable Paſſages out of a Manuſcript written by Mr. Ferguſon himſelf, but never yet publiſh'd; among others —— of this precipitous Adventure the Duke of Monmouth was very ſenſible, but ſuffer'd himſelf to be over-rul'd contrary to both the dictates of his Judgment, and the Biaſs of his Inclination; for could he have been allow'd to have purſu'd his own Sentiments and Reſolutions, he intended to have ſpent that Summer in the Court of Swedeland —— but from this he was diverted by the importunity of the Earl of Argyle, and prevail'd upon by the Advice and Intreaty of my Lord Gray and Mr. Wade, contrary to the deſires of Mr. Fletcher and Captain Matthews, to haſten into England. To which I can ſay, that I had the leaſt Acceſſion of any who were there about him.—— Nor would the Earl, after his own ominous haſte, ſet ſail for Scotland, till he forc'd a Promiſe from the Duke of embarking for England within ſo many Days after; which the Duke, rather than ſuffer his Honour to be ſtain'd, comply'd with, as far as the Weather would permit; tho' he found the obſerving his Word to interfere with his Intereſt, as well as all the Principles of Prudence and Diſcretion.

[b] This Declaration was ſecretly printed in a private Houſe hir'd for that purpoſe at Lambeth by Mr. W. C. Stationer in Pater-noſter-row; the Paper had been imported by him, and was diſcover'd by the Mark of it, and Entry in his Name. His aſſiſtant at the Preſs was apprehended and ſuffer'd; he himſelf was forc'd to fly into Holland, and abſcond in Germany till he came over with the Prince of Orange, and was made his Stationer when King, a Man of good Senſe and Spirit.

“ and

1685. 1 Jac. II. "and Safety: But the Boundaries of the Engliſh Government had of late been broken, and nothing left unattempted for turning the limited Monarchy into an abſolute Tyranny."——Then it proceeds to charge upon the Duke of York in his Brother's Reign, "his contriving the burning of London, his inſtigating a Confederacy with France, and a War with Holland; his fomenting the Popiſh Plot, and encouraging the Murder of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey; his charging Treaſon againſt Proteſtants, and ſuborning Witneſſes to ſwear the Patriots of our Religion and Liberties out of their Lives; his hiring execrable Villains to Aſſaſſinate the late Earl of Eſſex, and cauſing others to be clandeſtinely cut off, in hopes to conceal it; his adviſing and procuring the Prorogation and Diſſolution of the Parliaments, in order to prevent their looking into his Crimes, and that he might eſcape the Juſtice of the Nation."——It goes on, to the "Tyrannies which he had exercis'd ſince he ſnatch'd the Crown from his Brother's Head: For, in defiance of all the Laws and Statutes of the Realm, made for the Security of the Reform'd Proteſtant Religion, he not only began his Reign with a bare-fac'd avowing himſelf of the Romiſh Religion, but call'd in multitudes of Prieſts and Jeſuits, for whom the Law makes it Treaſon to come into this Kingdom, and hath impower'd them to exerciſe Idolatries: And beſides his being daily preſent at the worſhip of the Maſs, he hath publickly aſſiſted at the greateſt Fopperies of their Superſtition. Neither hath he been more tender in trampling upon the Laws which concern our Properties; ſeeing in two Proclamations, whereof the one requires the Collecting of the Cuſtoms, and the other the continuing that part of the Exciſe which was to expire at the late King's death; he hath violently, and againſt all the Laws of the Land, broken in upon our Eſtates. Neither is it any Extenuation of his Tyranny, that he is countenanc'd in it, by an Extra-judicial Opinion of ſeven or eight ſuborn'd and forſworn Judges, but rather declaring the greatneſs and extent of the Conſpiracy againſt our Rights; and that there is no Means left for our Relief, but by Force of Arms: For advancing thoſe to the Bench that were the ſcandal of the Bar; and conſtituting thoſe very Men to declare the Laws, who were accuſed and branded in Parliament for perverting of them; we are precluded all hopes of Juſtice in Weſtminſter-Hall: And by packing Juries together, by falſe Returns, new illegal Charters, and other corrupt Means, he doth at once deprive us of all expectations of Succour where our Anceſtors were wont to find it: And hopes to render that which ought to be the People's Fence againſt Tyranny, and the Conſervator of their Liberties, the Means of ſubverting all our Laws, and of eſtabliſhing his Arbitrarineſs, and confirming our Thraldom."——Then it lays down the Ways and Means of redreſſing all Grievances, and promiſes to purſue thoſe Ends in a fair and effectual manner: Concluding thus; We make our appeal unto God, and all Proteſtant Kings, Princes, States and People, concerning the Juſtice of our Cauſe, and the neceſſity we are reduc'd unto, of having our recourſe to Arms. And as we do beſeech, require, and adjure all ſincere Proteſtants and true Engliſhmen to be aſſiſting to us, againſt the Enemies of the Goſpel, Rights of the Nation, and Liberties of Mankind; ſo we are confident of obtaining the utmoſt Aid and Succour which they can yield us with their Prayers, Perſons and Eſtates, for dethroning the ſaid Tyrant, &c. Nor do we doubt being juſtify'd, countenanc'd, and aſſiſted by all Proteſtant Kings, Princes and Commonwealths who either regard the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, or their own Intereſt. And, above all, our truſt and dependance is upon the [a] Lord of Hoſts, in whoſe Name we go forth, and to whom we commit our Cauſe, and refer the deciſion betwixt us and our Enemies in the Day of Battle. Now let us play the Men, for our People, and for the Cities of our God; and the Lord do that which ſeemeth good unto him.

On Saturday June 13. his Majeſty received an Account of the Duke's Landing, by an Expreſs from the Mayor of Lyme; and immediately ſent a Meſſage to the Commons by the Earl of Middleton, That the Duke of Monmouth, and ſeveral of his Adherents, were landed at Lyme in Dorſetſhire, and there ſet up his Standard. When this Meſſage was deliver'd, Mr. Thorold and Mr. Daſſel, the one Mayor of Lyme, the other an Officer belonging to the Cuſtoms, being in the Lobby of the Houſe, were call'd in, and gave this following account, "That on Thurſday Night about ſix or ſeven of the Clock they diſcern'd two Veſſels and a Doggar at Sea, hovering near their Shore. That they ſent a Meſſenger in a Boat to know their meaning, and ſee who they were; but they took the Meſſenger on Board and bound him. That about half an Hour after they ſent another Meſſenger in a Boat, and they kept him likewiſe. That about Nine a Clock at Night they ſail'd into the Cobb, and the Duke of Monmouth came on Shore, with divers Men all well Arm'd and genteel in their Habit. That the Duke led them on to the Market-Place or Croſs of the ſaid Town, and there ſet up his Standard, being a blue Flag, and exercis'd the Men himſelf, who were as theſe Informants gueſs, near an hundred and fifty, or thereabouts. That the ſaid Duke of Monmouth and his Men being ask'd what they came for? ſaid, To ſettle the Proteſtant Religion, and to deſtroy Popery; inviting all Perſons that would to come and join with them. Being told There were no Roman Catholicks there, but Proteſtants, and there was no need for them to come there. That theſe Informants came away from Lyme about ten a Clock that Night, and that they met many People on the Road, who ſaid they were going to join them.

Conduct of the King upon this News.

After this Relation the Houſe Reſolved, "to wait on his Majeſty, and give their Thanks in an humble Addreſs, for his favour in imparting the ſaid Intelligence to this Houſe: And do humbly offer to aſſiſt and ſtand by his Majeſty with their Lives and Fortunes, againſt James Duke of Monmouth, and all Rebels and Traitors, and all other his Majeſty's Enemies whatſoever." This Addreſs was preſented in the Banquetting-Houſe that Evening; with another of like import, from the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, to whom his Majeſty had communicated the ſame Intelligence.

Addreſſes of the two Houſes.

It is obſervable, That the Houſe of Commons were moſt eminently Loyal; and not only call'd the Duke of Monmouth, in their Addreſs, That Ingrateful Rebel; but on the ſame Day, Reſolved, "That a Bill be brought in for the Attainder of James Duke of Monmouth of High-Treaſon; Praying his Majeſty to iſſue out his Royal Proclamation, promiſing a Reward of five thouſand Pounds to any that ſhall bring in the Body of

Bill of Attainder.

[a] The whole Air and Style of this Declaration, and eſpecially the concluding Part of it, was a Proof that it was penn'd by Robert Ferguſon, who was as effectually pardon'd as if he had been employ'd by King James.

"the

1685. 1 Jac. II. "the Duke of Monmouth dead or alive." This Bill of Attainder was in two Days diſpatcht by the Commons, and as ſoon by the Lords, who ſent it back without any alteration on Tueſday June 16. And the ſame Day his Majeſty came to the Throne, and gave his Royal aſſent to, (1.) An Act for granting to his Majeſty an Impoſition upon all Wines and Vinegar imported between the 24th Day of June, 1685. and the 24th of June, 1693. (2.) An Act for granting to his Majeſty an Impoſition upon all Tobacco and Sugar imported between the 24th Day of June, 1685. and the 24th of June, 1693. (3.) An Act to attaint James Duke of Monmouth of High-Treaſon. And to two private Acts; one to enable the Earl of Oſſory to make a Jointure; the other for Naturalization of ſeveral Perſons.

Proclamations. On the Day before the King had publiſh'd A Proclamation againſt ſpreading a traiterous Declaration publiſh'd by James Duke of Monmouth. And this Day, after paſſing the Act of Attainder, the the King publiſh'd another Proclamation, Promiſing a Reward of five thouſand Pounds to ſuch Perſon or [a] Perſons who ſhall bring in the Perſon of James Duke of Monmouth alive or dead.

The K.'s Meſſage to the Commons. On Thurſday the 18th of June the Earl of Middleton brought this Meſſage from his Majeſty to the Houſe of Commons; "That he judges it neceſſary for the Members (on whoſe Loyalty he depends) to be preſent in their reſpective Counties, and therefore deſigns there ſhall be a receſs in a very few Days. But becauſe the Rebellion in the Weſt will occaſion an Extraordinary Expence, his Majeſty deſires there may be a good Fund for a preſent Sum of Money, to anſwer the immediate Charge his Majeſty muſt be at: And to the end the Bills now depending may not be prejudiced, his Majeſty is pleas'd, this Separation ſhall be an Adjournment, and for for ſome ſhort time only.

After the delivery of which Meſſage the Commons immediately Reſolved, That a Supply not exceeding four hundred thouſand Pounds be given to his Majeſty, for his preſent Extraordinary Occaſions. And the two Houſes were ſo diſpatchful, that on Saturday the 27th of June his Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and gave his Royal aſſent to,
Acts paſſed. (1.) An Act for granting an Aid to his Majeſty, by an Impoſition on all French Linens, and all Eaſt-India Linens, and ſeveral other Manufactures of India, and on all French wrought Silks and Stuffs, and all other wrought Silks, and on all Brandies imported after the firſt Day of July, 1685. (2.) An Act for reviving and continuing two former Acts for Encouragement of Coinage. (3.) An Act for the providing neceſſary Carriages for his Majeſty, in his Royal Progreſs and Removals. (4.) An Act for reviving an Act for providing of Carriages by Land and by Water, for the Uſe of his Majeſty's Navy and Ordnance. (5.) An Act for conſolidating the Eſtates Taile, and Reverſion in Fee, which his Majeſty hath in the Poſt-Office, and twenty four thouſand Pounds per Annum of the Hereditary Exciſe. (6.) An Act to enable his Majeſty to make Grants, Leaſes, and Copies of Offices, Lands, and Hereditaments, parcel of his Highneſs's Dutchy of Cornwall, or annexed to the ſame, and for Confirmation of Leaſes and Grants already made. (7.) An Act againſt the importation of Gun-powder, Arms, and other Ammunition and Utenſils of War. (8.) An Act for repealing certain Clauſes in an Act of Parliament made in the 29th and 30th Years of the Reign of his late Majeſty, for prohibiting French Commodities. (9.) An Act for reviving a former Act for exporting Leather. (10.) An Act for continuance of three former Acts for preventing of Theft and Rapine upon the Northern Borders of England. (11.) An Act for clearing, preſerving, maintaining and repairing the Haven and Peers of Great Yarmouth. (12.) An Act for rebuilding, finiſhing and adorning the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, London. [b] And to ſeven private Acts.

The Houſes proceeded with great Unanimity, till on Thurſday the 2d of July his Majeſty came again to the Houſe of Peers; and the Commons being ſent for to attend, he gave his Royal aſſent to theſe other Bills: (1.) An Act for reviving and continuance of ſeveral Acts of Parliament therein mentioned. Other Bills enacted. (2.) An Act to encourage the Building of Ships in England. (3.) An additional Act for the Improvement of Tillage. (4.) An Act for erecting a new Church, to be call'd the Pariſh of St. James, within the Liberty of Weſtminſter. (5.) An Act for the repair of the Cathedral Church of Bangor, and for the maintenance of the Choir there, and for the augmentation of the Revenue of the Biſhoprick of Bangor; and alſo, for an augmentation of ſeveral Vicarages within the Corporations of Laudinum in the Dioceſe of Bangor aforeſaid. And then my Lord-Keeper ſpoke thus:

My Lords and Gentlemen;

"I Am commanded to let you know, That it is his Majeſty's Pleaſure, that both Houſes adjourn forthwith till Tueſday the 4th of Auguſt next. The Lord Keeper's Speech. Not that his Majeſty intends that then there ſhall be a Seſſion, but that the Members that are about Town ſhall then meet and adjourn themſelves from time to time, as there ſhall be occaſion, till Winter: And when his Majeſty would have a full Houſe, he will give Notice of it by Proclamation.

So both Houſes adjourn'd till the 4th of Auguſt On which Day the Earl of Rocheſter being Commiſſion'd to ſupply the Place of the Lord-Keeper (then indiſpos'd) as Speaker in the Houſe of Lords, expreſs'd his Majeſty's Pleaſure, That they ſhould farther adjourn till the 9th Day of November next.

The Duke of Monmouth, by the concourſe of the Country People, had ſoon the appearance of an Army, and march'd from Lyme to Taunton, a populous Town in Somerſetſhire, where he was received by Men and Maids with unuſual demonſtrations of Joy; and at the Solicitations of his Friends, he there ſuffered himſelf to be Proclaimed King; which loſt him ſome Intereſt in the true [c] old Republicans, and was ſaid to be a Breach of the Progreſs of the D. of Monmouth in the Weſt.

the

[a] In a Book of Accounts for the poor Knights of Windſor there is this Entry; On the 19th of June, 1685. the Duke of Monmouth's Atchievements were thrown down into the midſt of the Quire, and kick'd out of the Weſt door by the Heralds in their Formalities into the Caſtle Ditch, he being before proclaim'd traiterous at the Reading Deſk by Garter King at Arms.

[b] In the Houſe of Peers the moſt diſtinguiſhing Debates were upon the Bill for reverſing the Attainder of the late late Viſcount Stafford, and when it paſs'd the Lord Angleſey enter'd his diſſent with Reaſons. I. Becauſe the aſſertions in the Bill of its being now manifeſt that the late Lord Viſcount Stafford died innocent, and that the Teſtimony was falſe, are deſtitute of all Proof.—— II. The Record of the King's-Bench read at the Committee concerning the conviction of one of the Witneſſes for the Perjury, is no ground to invalidate the Teſtimony, &c. III. That Judgment in the King's-Bench, and the whole Proceeding thereupon was unprecedented and illegal; and that the Popiſh Plot ſo condemn'd, purſued and puniſh'd by his late Majeſty and four Parliaments —— was eluded to the Arraignment and Scandal of the Government. ——To which ſubſcrib'd Stamford, Clare, R. Evre.

[c] The Earl of Argyle is ſaid to have declar'd, that the Duke of Monmouth gave him his Word to pretend to no more than to act as General of the Forces that ſhould join him. Rumbold, when he was executed at Edinburgh, dez clar'd,

1685. 1 Jac. II.

the Promiſe he had made in Holland. He began his Mock-Reign with three Proclamations; the one ſetting a Sum of Money on King James's Head: The ſecond declaring the Parliament of England a Seditious Aſſembly: And the third, commanding the Duke of Albemarle to lay down his Arms, under the Penalty of ſuffering as a Traytor. He march'd from Taunton in good Order to Bridgwater, ſtill encreaſing his Numbers; from thence to Bath, where he was denied Entrance, and would not ſtay to force it; the Train-Bands ſtill flying two Days March before him, by Order (as was ſaid) from the Court, to give Pretence to the King to raiſe more Forces. At Philips-Norton, by a Surprize, he cut off the beſt part of a Troop of Horſe of the King's Army, the Duke of Grafton narrowly eſcaping with his Life. Encouraged by this Succeſs, he march'd within two Miles of Briſtol; where a Conſult being held, he was adviſed not to enter that City, but to retreat back to Bridgwater: Which Falſe-Step began to diſhearten his Party, and to hinder his Recruits: Whereas, if he had entred Briſtol, there being no Force to oppoſe him but the Train-Bands, (and the generality of thoſe for him, not only in their Hearts, but in open Diſcourſes, and publick Healths) he might have furniſh'd himſelf with Men, Arms and Money, and thence marched into Gloceſterſhire among the Clothiers, where great Numbers, even of the beſt Eſtates and Degrees, waited to join him.

His Falſe-Step.

Prince of Orange offers his Service to K. James.

When the Prince of Orange heard of the Duke's Landing, and that he began to gather Strength, and was proclaim'd King, he thought himſelf ſo far concern'd, that he not only diſpatch'd over the ſix Engliſh Regiments recalled from the Service of the States, but he likewiſe ſent over Monſ. Bentinck to the King, with Orders to acquaint him, That though he look'd upon the Duke of Monmouth to be a Man of no great Parts, yet that he had a Warlike Genius, and was better ſkill'd in the Military Art, than any the King was to employ againſt him; and therefore, if his Majeſty pleas'd, he would not only lend him his Troops, but come in Perſon to Head his Army. The ſame Offer had been before communicated to Skelton at the Hague; who was either ſo jealous of the Prince, or ſo malicious to him, that he gave the King Notice of it, with a wrong Turn of Suſpicion and Fear: So that the King put off Monſ. Bentinck, with telling him, He ſhould acquaint his Maſter that their common Intereſt did require the Prince's ſtaying in Holland: And farther, open'd his Mind to him in ſuch Terms as ſufficiently diſcover'd, he did not take his Highneſs's Zeal for his Service to be at that time ſeaſonable.

The King declines the Acceptance of it.

1685. 1 Jac. II.

The K.'s Forces.

The firſt Forces which his Majeſty ſent down againſt Monmouth, were ſome of the Earl of Oxford's Regiment, under the Command of my Lord Churchill, who attended the Motions of the Duke with great Conduct. The Duke of Albemarle Headed the Militia of Devonſhire: The Duke of Somerſet the Militia of that County, at Bath: The Duke of Beaufort the Militia of Glouceſterſhire, at Briſtol: The Earl of Pembroke the Militia of Wiltſhire, at Chippenham. And the Militia of other Counties were on their March towards the Weſt; tho' the King did not care to confide in them: And therefore the King ſent away all his regular Troops and Guards, to form an Army under the Command of the Earl of Feverſham, who in the Beginning of July encamp'd at Sedgmore.

The Duke of Monmouth being at Bridgwater near adjoining, thought himſelf beſieged, and ſaw his Men daily deſert in great Numbers, and therefore reſolved to make one deſperate Puſh for all; and ſo, in a Council of War, agreed to attack the Earl of Feverſham on the very firſt Night of his Encampment. Sunday July 5. the Country People had given the Duke Intelligence that the King's Forces were very remiſs, the Troopers in Bed, and the Foot revelling in their Camp: So that the Duke ſaid, They ſhould have no more to do than to lock up the Stable Doors, and ſeize the Troopers in their Beds. The Duke began his March about Eleven at Night, without Drum beating, or Trumpet ſounding, and all were forbid to fire a Piece till they entred the Camp. The Guide that promis'd to lead them thither a Bye-Way, conducted them round by Chedſey to that Part of Sedgmore where Dunbarton's Regiment was poſted; the moſt old and experienc'd Soldiers, who had agreed that an hundred of them ſhould keep Guard, and lie upon their Arms all Night. And yet they had been caught, with all their Caution, had not the Duke's Guide happen'd to lead his Men above the Ford; and they not having Patience to wait his Motions, ran diſorderly, as faſt as they could, over the Ditch, to come at the Enemy; by which means they loſt their Guide; and a Piſtol accidentally going off, alarm'd thoſe of Dunbarton's Regiment, who immediately put themſelves in Order, and received their Enemy, as if they had not been ſurprized. The Duke's Men began the Engagement with a Volley of Shots and Shouts, and forced the Rear of the King's Foot to retreat into Weſton. The Duke ſeeing theſe early Hopes of Succeſs [a], ordered the Lord Grey to bring up his Horſe, which were ordinary Marſh-Mares and Colts, that would not ſtand the Noiſe of Drums and Guns. Two of his beſt Troops, commanded clar'd, it was contrary to all their expectations; adding, it was not for a new King they took Arms. A late Writer was aſſur'd by Perſons who were with the Duke, and in his Confidence, that he never thought of aſſuming the Title of King till after he landed, and was put upon it by Ferguſon; whoſe treaſonable Practices ſince may very well make us ſuſpect he was a Spy on him, and a ſecret Agent for King James. To which may be added, that one Mr. Hook, a Diſſenting Teacher, had actually join'd and aſſiſted the Duke of Monmouth, and being afterwards apprehended in London, was not only pardon'd by King James, but admitted to great Familiarity with him, and afterwards attended him into France, and came over again into England to do him ſecret Service; and I think at laſt turn'd Papiſt for him, much to the grief of his Brother Mr. Serjeant Hook: Yet Mr. Ferguſon, in a Manuſcript quoted by Mr. Echard, ſays he was againſt it.——The Duke had not only Meſſages from ſome Gentlemen, but was told by ſeveral Nonconforming Miniſters that came into the Camp, that unleſs he took the Style of King, none who had Eſtates to loſe would venture themſelves in his Quarrel. This I heard often ſaid by many, and particularly in a Meeting where ſeveral were aſſembled from different Parts of the Country, to adviſe and perſuade him to aſſume the Kingſhip; and where, as Mr. Hook the Duke's Chaplain can witneſs, I diſputed againſt the Conveniency of it at that Juncture with all the ſtrength and vigour of Mind that I could.

Battle of Sedgmore.

[a] Robert Ferguſon, in his Manuſcript Relation of theſe Matters, tranſcribed by Mr. Echard, is very bitter upon my Lord Grey for his Ignorance and Cowardice.——The Experience we had before of my Lord Grey was enough to have diſcourag'd the Duke from putting him at the Head of all the Troops; and it made Colonel Matthews adviſe him to divide his Cavalry, that ſo the Charge and Conduct of one Part might be devolved upon ſome Perſon of Courage, anſwerable to the Criticalneſs of the Seaſon and Importance of the Action. But the Duke by a ſtrange Fatality declin'd following this Advice, ſaying, That he would not affront my Lord, and that what he had given him in Charge was eaſy to be effected. So that Grey having all the Horſe committed to him, the firſt thing he did, after we were drawn up, and in view of the Enemies Fires, was his diſmiſſing the Guide, who was to have directed him in the Ground where to march.——I ſpake with great Warmth to my Lord Grey, and conjur'd him to charge, and not to ſuffer the Victory, which our Foot had in a manner taken hold of, to be raviſh'd from us; but as an unworthy Man, and cowardly Poultrone, he not only deſerted that part of the Field, and forſook his Command, but rode with the utmoſt Speed to the Duke, telling him, that all was loſt, and that it was more than time to ſhift for himſelf.

by 1685. 36 Car. II. by Captain Hewling, were the Day before detach'd to bring off ſome Cannon from Minhead, and did not return till after the Defeat, to which their Abſence very much contributed.

Lord Grey ſuſpected. The Lord Grey could never get his Horſe into a right Poſture of Charging[a]; ſo that upon the Advance of Colonel Oglethorpe and Sir Francis Compton with two Parties of the King's Horſe, his Lordſhip retir'd, and quitted the Field, not without great Suſpicion of Treachery.

The Duke had another Misfortune; that he was not only deſerted by his Horſe, but his Foot wanted Ammunition; becauſe the Baggage, by ſome Default, was not yet brought into the Moor; ſo that the Duke's Foot, in vain crying out for more Powder and Shot, after a brave Reſiſtance, gave Ground, and about four a Clock on Monday Morn-

The Duke entirely routed. ing were entirely routed, 300 kill'd on the Spot, 1000 in the Purſuit, and as many taken Priſoners: Thoſe of Note were Colonel Holmes and Major Perrot, both dangerouſly wounded; Captain Madders, the Conſtable of Crookhorn, and one Williams, a menial Servant of the Duke's, who had his Maſter's Cloak and 200 Guineas.

The Duke's Army were 5000 Horſe and Foot; and the King's did not much exceed in Number, though it did in Strength and Reſolution. This deciſive Battle was a Day or two too ſoon; for immediately after, Capt. Hewling return'd with two of the braveſt Troops of Horſe; and the very next Day Mr. Vaughan of Somerſetſhire would have join'd the Duke with 1000 Men; and Colonel Danvers and Sir Robert Peyton were juſt ready for a Riſing in Eſſex, which would have given Opportunity for Multitudes in and about London to have joined with them.

Duke's Flight. The Duke of Monmouth had much-ado to preſerve 50 Horſe to ſecure his Retreat, and they were ſoon diſpers'd. The Duke was adviſ'd to make down to Uphill, a ſmall Creek on the Severn Sea, and from thence to get over into Wales; but he himſelf was for going toward Limington in Hampſhire. The Lord Feverſham ſent out ſeveral Parties to purſue him; and on Tueſday Morning,

Ld. Grey taken. July 7. the Lord Grey was taken in a Diſguiſe at Holthridge in Dorſetſhire by the Lord Lumley's Men, who enquiring of the Cottagers, were inform'd, that two Men went over a Hedge into an Encloſure over-grown with Fern. So Guards were ſet on the Avenues, and about five in the Morning next Day the German Count was taken, who confeſs'd he parted with the Duke of Monmouth about four Hours before. Hence a more diligent Search was made, and at laſt one Perkin diſcover'd him hid in a Ditch cover'd over with Fern, and having ſome Peaſe in his Pocket. The Duke at firſt offer'd to make Reſiſtance; but the Fellow crying out for Help, and ſome Soldiers running in to his Aſſiſtance, the Duke was taken, and ſecured by the Lord Lumley, who, under a ſtrong Guard, conveyed him, the Lord Grey, and the German Count, by eaſy Journeys, to London. 1685. 1 Jac. II.

Duke of Monmouth taken.

He writes to the King. The Duke wrote to the King from Ringwood on July 8. the ſame Day he was taken, to make his Submiſſion to offer ſome Diſcovery, and to deſire earneſtly to ſpeak with the King; concluding thus: I hope, Sir, God Almighty will ſtrike your Heart with Mercy and Compaſſion for me, as he has done mine with the Abhorrence of what I have done: Wherefore, I hope, Sir, I may live to ſhew you how zealous I ſhall ever be for your Service; and could I ſay but one Word in this Letter, you would be convinced of it; but it is of that Conſequence, that I dare not do it. Therefore, Sir, I do beg of you once more to let me ſpeak to you; for then you will be convinc'd how much I ſhall ever be,

Your Majeſty's Moſt Humble and Dutiful

MONMOUTH.

Brought to the King. This unhappy Captive was brought to London on the 13th of July, and, by the Interceſſion of the Queen-Dowager, was brought to the King's Preſence, and fell preſently at his Feet, and confeſs'd he deſerv'd to die; but conjur'd him, with Tears in his Eyes, not to uſe him with the Severity of Juſtice, and to grant him a Life, which he would be ever ready to ſacrifice for his Service.

---

[a] A brave Captain in the Horſe-Guards now living (1718) was in this Action at Sedgmore, and gave me this Account of it: That on Sunday Morning, July 5. a young Woman came from Monmouth's Quarters to give notice of his Deſign to ſurprize the King's Army that Night; but this young Woman being carried to a chief Officer in a Neighbouring Village, ſhe was led up Stairs, and debauch'd by him; and coming down in a great Fright and Diſorder (as he himſelf ſaw her) ſhe went back, and her Meſſage was not told. So that on Sunday Night moſt of the Officers were drunk, and had no manner of Apprehenſion of the Enemy, till, about one a Clock in the Morning, the Horſe of the Lord Grey came upon the Out-guard, who, in great Confuſion, aſk'd, Who is there? Who are you for? One anſwer'd, For King Monmouth. Upon which Sir Francis Compton bid fire; and upon that firſt Firing, the Horſe under Lord Grey fled, and never rallied. Monmouth had ſent his Horſe under the Lord Grey to wheel about the Edge of the Moor to get into the Village where the King's Horſe were quarter'd, and to ſet it on fire, and then to fall on the back of the King's Foot, while the Duke of Monmouth charg'd them in the Front. And had theſe Orders been executed, the King's Forces not exceeding four Thouſand, muſt have been cut in pieces. Monmouth accordingly march'd up very near to the King's Foot; but waiting for the expected Signal of Firing the Village, he loſt Time, and gave Leiſure to the King's Forces to put themſelves in order. When the Fight began, Monmouth's Foot, unexperienc'd Men, diſcharg'd their Muſkets too high, and did no Execution; and then Monmouth, as if he had been at the Head of regular Forces, kept them in too good Order; for had he ſuffer'd them, after the firſt empty Diſcharge, to fall on with their other Weapons, they would have knock'd all their Enemies on Head, or have puſh'd them into the utmoſt Confuſion: But the Duke oblig'd them to keep their Ranks till the Biſhop of Bath and Wells brought down the Artillery upon them; and then they run away, and creeping into Hedges and Corn-Fields, were ſtarted, and ſhot, like Game, by the King's Soldiers.—— The next Day the Earl of Feverſham march'd away from Sedgmore with many poor Priſoners, tied together like Slaves; and making an Halt at the firſt great Sign-Poſt that ſtood croſs the Road, he commanded four or five of the poor Wretches to be hang'd upon it, and would have gone on in that way of Arbitrary Execution, if the Biſhop of Bath and Wells (as the better Soldier and the better Lawyer too,) had not come up and expoſtulated with him; My Lord, you don't know what you do: This is Murder in the Law, and your Lordſhip may be call'd to Account for it. Theſe poor Rogues, now the Battel is over, muſt be tried before they can be put to Death.

The ſame Perſon kept a ſhort Diary of the March of the King's Forces to the Weſt.——June 20, 1685. we were ſent againſt the Duke of Monmouth, and laid the firſt Night at Maidenhead; the 21ſt to Newbury; 22d to Chipnam; 23d to Briſtol; 24th to Bath; 25th to Briſtol: Again, 26th, to Bath; 27th to Philipſnorton, where we fell in upon his Rear about ten in the Morning. The Buſineſs laſted two Hours, in which we had the worſt. We retir'd about a Muſket-ſhot from the Cane, and both Sides play'd their great Guns till about ſix in the Evening, and then we retir'd to Bradford; the 29th to Weſtbury; 30th to Frome; July 2d to Shipton Mallet; 3d to Somerſetown; 5th to Weſton Sihon, where we incamp'd in Brimſel Moor; 6th about one of the Clock in the Morning, being Full Moon, yet ſo dark, by reaſon of the Miſt, that we could not ſee one another, the Duke of Monmouth attack'd us in our Camp. The Buſineſs laſted till broad Day, and then it was a general Rout.

Again the ſame worthy Perſon told me, that there was no Grounds for Suſpicion of Treachery in the Lord Grey; nor was it ſo much as ſuſpected, till that Lord had his Life and Pardon, which was really in Favour of the Earl of Rocheſter, who found the Eſtate in Entail, and could only enjoy a good part of it during the others Life.

5. He

1685. 1 Jac. II.

He mention'd to him the Example of ſeveral great Princes, who had yielded to the Impreſſions of Clemency on the like Occaſions, and who had never afterwards repented of thoſe Acts of Generoſity and Mercy; concluding, in a moſt pathetical manner, Remember, Sir, I am your Brother's Son, and if you take my Life, it is your own Blood that you will ſhed. The King ask'd him ſeveral Queſtions, and made him ſign a Declaration, That his Father told him he was never marry'd to his Mother: And then ſaid he was ſorry indeed for his Misfortunes; but his Crime was of too great a Conſequence to be left unpuniſh'd, and he muſt of neceſſity ſuffer for it. The Queen is ſaid to have inſulted him in a very arrogant and unmerciful Manner. So that when the Duke ſaw there was nothing deſigned by this Interview but to ſatisfy the Queen's Revenge, he roſe up from his Majeſty's Feet with a new Air of Bravery, and was carry'd back to the Tower; from whence, without any farther Hearing, on Wedneſday July 15. he was deliver'd to the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex, on a Warrant for his Execution, about Ten in the Morning: He was conducted by them to a Scaffold on Tower-Hill, where two eminent Divines exhorted him to repent of his Treaſon and Rebellion. He deſir'd them not to trouble him with any unſeaſonable Diſcourſes: He ſaid, he repented of all his Sins in general, of the Blood ſpilt on his Account, and fear'd the ill Conſequence of his Enterprize. That he dy'd in the Faith of this, That God would work a Deliverance for his People, and then will be diſcover'd the great, horrid, and ſcarcely to be parallell'd Villanies our Enemies have been guilty of: Adding, You ſee my Caſe is deſperate; yet know I die a MARTYR for the People. He hop'd King James would ſhew himſelf of his Brother's Blood, and extend his Mercy to his Children, even as he was wont to his greateſt Enemies[a]; they being not capable to act, and therefore not conſcious of any Offence againſt the Government. To one of the Divines he expreſs'd himſelf with ſome Indignation againſt the Lord Shaftsbury, complaining, he was a Tricking Man; and more eſpecially againſt Ferguſon, who (ſays he) is a Bloody Villain. He ſtay'd on the Scaffold half an Hour, then laid himſelf down to the Block[b]. The Executioner, after the Sign given him, ſtruck him firſt on the Shoulder: He rais'd himſelf a little, and lying down again, his Head was, at two Blows, ſever'd from his Body, which was put in a Black Velvet Coffin, and carry'd in a Velvet Hearſe to the Tower, where 'twas bury'd in the Chapel.

Begs his Life in vain.

Inſulted by the Queen.

The Duke of Monmouth beheaded.

The Lord Grey obtain'd a Pardon from the King, which confirm'd the World very much in their Opinion of his betraying the Duke.

The Lord Grey pardoned.

The Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys, with four other Judges his Aſſiſtants, and a Body of Troops commanded by Colonel Kirk, was ſent into the Weſt of England, with a ſpecial Commiſſion, to try the poor Wretches that had been in the Rebellion. At Wincheſter, Mrs. Alicia Lyle, the Relict of John Lyle, one of King Charles the Firſt's Judges, a Woman of extreme Age, was try'd for concealing Mr. Hickes, a Nonconformiſt Teacher, and Richard Nelthorpe, (the latter being a Stranger, and the former in no Proclamation) and tho' the Jury brought her in three times Not Guilty, yet Jeffreys Threats ſo far prevail'd, that ſhe was at laſt found Guilty of High-Treaſon, and beheaded for it. A cruel Judgment, that was afterwards reverſ'd by the Convention called by the Prince of Orange.

1685. 1 Jac. II.

Inquiſition in the Weſt.

Mrs. Lyle beheaded.

The Judges went to Dorcheſter, where Jeffreys finding 30 Perſons return'd by the Grand-Inqueſt, as Aſſiſtants to the late Duke of Monmouth, he contriv'd this Stratagem of taking the ſhorteſt Way with them: When they came upon their Tryals, he told them, that whoſoever pleaded Not Guilty, and was found ſo, ſhould have little Time to live; but if any expected Favour, they muſt plead Guilty. But the Priſoners would not truſt him, tho' they might have depended as well on his Mercy as his Juſtice, and a Confeſſion or Denial had been all one: For of thirty pleading Not Guilty, twenty nine were found Guilty, and ſoon after executed, as were fourſcore more out of two hundred thirty three, who were deluded to plead Guilty to their Indictments, by a Promiſe of Pardon. The ſame was done at Exeter to near as many, who were alike deluded; as alſo at Taunton, and Wells, where the Lord Jeffreys finiſh'd his Bloody Aſſizes: In theſe two laſt Places he condemn'd above five hundred Perſons, whereof two hundred thirty nine were executed, and had their Quarters ſet up in the principal Places and Roads of thoſe Countries, to the Terror of Paſſengers, and the great Annoyance of thoſe Parts.

Cruelty of the Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys.

And yet the Cruelty of the Chief-Juſtice often yielded to the Avarice of the Man, who was not more haſty to hang up thoſe who had no Money, than he was forward to procure Pardons for thoſe that could pay the Purchaſe of them. He had the Conſcience to take above fourteen thouſand Pounds from one Gentleman, to ſave him; with which he bought an Eſtate, that might juſtly be call'd, The Field of Blood; and ſeem'd to have a Curſe entail'd upon it of not being enjoy'd by a third Heir. Thoſe poor Wretches who could not purchaſe Pardons at my Lord's Rates, were ſold for Slaves into the American Plantations. And when, after this ſatiating of Juſtice, there came

[a] On Monday Octob. 14. 1713. Dr. Teniſon, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, ſuffer'd me to take this Relation from his own Mouth. I being Vicar of St. Martin's, was ſent for to the Duke of Monmouth in the Tower on the Day of his Execution; the Duke knowing me better than the two Prelates, Biſhop Ken and Biſhop Turner, He took me aſide to the Window, and held a long Converſation with me too much upon his own Follies. When among other things I mention'd a Report of his Grace's Preaching in the Army: No, ſaid the Duke, I never preach'd; no body preach'd but Ferguſon, and he very fooliſhly many times, that Man, ſays he, is a bloody Villain. When I minded him of being better reconciled to hisDucheſs, he own'd his Heart had been turn'd from her, and he pretended the Cauſe of it to be, that in his Affliction ſhe had gone to Plays, and into Publick Companies; by which, ſaid he, I knew ſhe did not love me. When I charg'd him with his Converſation with Mrs. Wentworth, he freely own'd it, and ſaid, he had no Children by her; but he had heard it was lawful to have one Wife in the Eye of the Law, and another before God. I then took a Bible, and labour'd to convince him of the Falſhood and the ill Conſequences of ſuch a Principle. Well, ſays he, but if a Man be bred up in a falſe Notion, what ſhall he do when he has but two Hours to live. The Duke pull'd out a Gold Watch, and preſs'd me to carry it in his Name to Mrs. Wentworth, which I poſitively refuſed, and ſaid, I could not be concern'd in any ſuch Meſſage or Token to her. The Duke did not ſeem at all Profane or Atheiſtical, but had rather a Caſt of Enthuſiaſm in him; for he had a ſilly Charm in a bit of Paper under the Stone of his Ring, which was pull'd out after his Death, and was ſaid to have been given him by ſome German, reputed a Conjurer, which Charm was to ſave him in a Day of Battle, or other imminent Danger.

[b] Mr. Echard relates, from a Manuſcript written by Dr. Lloyd, Biſhop of St. Aſaph, ſeveral Particulars, —— concluding, then undreſſing, and preparing for the Block, the Divines in the mean time us'd theſe and the like Ejaculations; God accept your Repentance! God accept your imperfect Repentance! God accept your general Repentance! Having laid himſelf down a ſecond time, and the Sign given, the Executioner gave a light Stroke; at which he look'd him in the Face, and then he laid him down again, when the Executioner gave him two Strokes more, and then threw down his Axe, crying, He could not finiſh his Work, till being threatned by the Sheriff and others there preſent, he took up the Axe again, and at two Strokes more cut off his Head.

1685. 1 Jac. II.

out a Genaral Pardon; it was clogg'd with ſo many Exceptions, that it was call'd Ridiculouſly Cruel: For not only thoſe were excepted who had made their Eſcape, but all the Taunton Maidens who had made Colours and preſented them to the Duke of Monmouth, ſome of them but Girls of eight or nine Years old, were all excepted by Name; and no Pardon could be purchas'd for this Piece of Treaſon, till their Parents had paid more for it[a], than would have provided a Marriage-Portion for them. 'Tis ſaid, that after this barbarous Expedition, the Lord Jeffreys, a Man of a ſarcaſtick and abuſive Wit, was heard to boaſt with ſome Pleaſure, That he had hang'd more Men, than all the Judges of England ſince William the Conqueror.

The King ſaid to be diſpleas'd at theſe Proceedings.

Some of the Foreign Popiſh Hiſtorians have affirm'd, That King James was no ſooner inform'd of the Cruelties of Jeffreys, but he ſhew'd his Indignation at his Unwarrantable Proceedings. But this is hardly to be reconcil'd with the Approbation and Reward which the King gave to him: For it is certain, that his Majeſty writ him a Letter, in his Circuit, and bid him Diſpatch the Buſineſs before him, and come and take the Seals, for he was forc'd in the mean time to be Chancellor himſelf. And when with greater Haſte and Fury he did expedite his Buſineſs, and return'd to be made Lord Chancellor; it was expreſſly ſaid to be in Conſideration of the many eminent and faithful Services he had rendred the Crown, as well in the late King's time, as ſince his Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne.

Jeffreys made Ld. Chancellor.

Nor was Judge Jeffreys the only Perſon who was thought to execute the King's Orders; but Colonel Kirk, a Soldier of Fortune, a Man of Boldneſs and Looſeneſs, did alſo act a conſiderable Part in theſe unhappy Tragedies: After the Duke's Defeat, he cauſed Ninety wounded Men to be hang'd at Taunton, not only without permitting their Relations to ſpeak with them, but with Pipes playing, Drums beating, Trumpets ſounding, and all other Military Pomp and Joy. At another Town he invited his Officers to Dinner, near the Place where ſome of the condemn'd Rebels were to be executed, and order'd ten of them to be turn'd off with a Health to the King, ten in a Health to the Queen, and ten more in a Health to the Lord Jeffreys. Theſe Cruelties he afterwards endeavour'd to palliate, by pretending, that he did nothing but by Expreſs Order from the King, and his General. But he was charg'd with one Action that could proceed only from his own brutal Inclination to Luſt and Blood, and that was, the drawing in a poor Maiden to Proſtitute her ſelf to him, with the Promiſe of ſaving her Brother's Life, and neverthelеſs cauſing him to be hang'd on the Sign-poſt of the ſame Houſe, and out of the Window preſenting the credulous abuſed Damſel with that barbarous Spectacle of Treachery and Cruelty.

Barbarities committed by Colonel Kirk.

Suppreſſing of this Rebellion turn'd to ill Uſes.

The ſuppreſſing of this Rebellion, was ſo great an Advantage to the Strength and Intereſt of the King, and to the Peace and Quiet of the Nation, that King James, with any Moderation, might have been the happieſt Prince that ever ſway'd the Engliſh Sceptre. But his Misfortune was, that inſtead of ſecuring his juſt Prerogative, and encouraging his Loyal Subjects, he fell upon the Reſolution of a Standing Army, for the Support of Popery and Arbitrary Power. He had a Houſe of Commons very pliable to his Deſires in the laſt Seſſion, and very Obſequious in all the Steps of reducing and executing the Duke of Monmouth, and as forward in Supplies of Men and Money. The King was willing to miſtake their Zeal in going ſo far, for an Aſſurance of going as much farther as he pleaſed to call them: As if he and his Miniſters were not rightly ſenſible what a Tenderneſs and Affection Engliſh Men have for their Laws and Liberties; and how hard a Matter it is for any Prince to make a Houſe of Commons acceſſary to the enſlaving of a Nation. This appear'd in the next Seſſion at Weſtminſter, on Monday the 9th of Nov. when his Majeſty being come to the Houſe of Peers, and ſeated on his Throne, he ſent for the Commons, and made this SPEECH to both Houſes:

Parliament meet.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The King's Speech.

" AFter the Storm that ſeem'd to be coming
" upon us when we parted laſt, I am glad
" to meet you in ſo great Peace and Quietneſs;
" God Almighty be praiſed, by whoſe Bleſſing
" that Rebellion was ſuppreſs'd. But when I re" flect what an inconſiderable Number of Men
" began it, and how long they carry'd it on with" out any Oppoſition, I hope every body will be " convinc'd, that the Militia which have hitherto " been ſo much depended on, is not ſufficient for
" ſuch Occaſions; and that there is nothing but " a good Force of well diſciplin'd Troops in con-
" ſtant Pay that can defend us from ſuch as ei" ther at Home or Abroad are diſpos'd to diſturb
" us. And in truth, my Concern for the Peace
" and Quiet of my Subjects, as well as for the " Safety of the Government, made me think it
" neceſſary to encreaſe the Number to the Pro" portion I have done, that I owed as well to the " Honour as the Security of the Nation, whoſe
" Reputation was ſo infinitely expos'd to all our " Neighbours, by having lain open to this late
" wretched Attempt, that it is not to be repair'd
" without keeping ſuch a Body of Men on foot,
" that none may ever have a Thought of finding " us again ſo miſerably unprovided. It is for the " Support of this great Charge, which is now
" more than double to what it was, that I aſk
" your Aſſiſtance, in giving me a Supply anſwer-
" able to the Expences it brings along with it:
" And I cannot doubt, but that what I have begun
" ſo much to the Honour and Defence of the Go-
" vernment, will be continued by you with all
" Chearfulneſs and Readineſs that is requiſite for a
" Work of ſo great Importance.

" Let no Man take Exception, that there are
" ſome Officers in the Army not qualify'd, accord-
" ing to the late Teſts[b], for their Employment:
" The Gentlemen, I muſt tell you, are moſt of

[a] Mr. Ferguſon in the Manuſcript quoted by Mr. Echard, tells us,---Mr. Hucker, one of Monmouth's Captains of Horſe, came no ſooner within View of the Camp of the King's, than that he treacherouſly and villainouſly fir'd a Piſtol to give them notice of our Approach, and therefore forſook his Charge and rode off with all the ſpeed he could to take the Benefit of a Proclamation emitted by the King, offering Pardon to all ſuch as ſhould abandon us, and return home within ſuch a time. And this I have been told he pleaded at his Tryal in order to ſave his Life, but was anſwer'd by Jeffreys, that He above above all other Men deſerv'd to be hang'd, and that for his Treachery to Monmouth, as well as his Treaſon againſt the King.

[b] This Violation of the Teſt-Act is thus repreſented by Biſhop Burnet in a Preface to ſome Sermons, publiſh'd 1713. 8vo. p. v. King James upon the Duke of Monmouth's Invaſion gave Commiſſions to many Papiſts to ſerve in the Army, which in ſuch a Juncture was gently cenſur'd. But when that Rebellion was ſoon diſſipated, and the time come limited by Law for their qualifying themſelves, they continued to execute their Commiſſions without any Regard to the Law. Nor had the juſt Senſe that the Houſe of Commons expreſſed upon this open Breach of Law any other effect, than to get the Seſſion diſmiſs'd with a Prorogation. A mock Suit was ſoon after that carried on in the Kings-Bench againſt one that had thus neglected to qualify himſelf; and after much Practice on that Court, and many Removes made in it, they came to a Deciſion, that all the Laws were the King's Laws, and that the Execution of the Law was only in the King, who was not accountable to any Perſon for that.

" them

1685. 1 Jac. II.

"them well known to me; and having formerly "ſerved with me on ſeveral Occaſions, and always "approv'd the Loyalty of their Principles by their "Practices, I think them now fit to be employ'd "under me; and will deal plainly with you, That "after having had the Benefit of their Services in "ſuch Time of Need and Danger, I will neither "expoſe them to Diſgrace, nor my ſelf to the "want of them, if there ſhould be another Re-"bellion, to make them neceſſary to me.

"I am afraid ſome Men may be ſo wicked, to "hope and expect that a Difference may happen "between you and me upon this Occaſion: But "when you conſider what Advantages have riſen "to us in a few Months, by the good Underſtand-"ing we have hitherto had; what wonderful Ef-"fects it hath already produced in the Change of "the whole Scene of Affairs Abroad, ſo much "more to the Honour of the Nation, and the "Figure it ought to make in the World; and that "nothing can hinder a further Progreſs in this "Way, to all our Satisfactions, but Fears and Jea-"louſies amongſt our ſelves. I will not appre-"hend that ſuch a Misfortune can befal us, as a "Diviſion, or but a Coldneſs between you and "us; nor that any thing can ſhake you in your "Steadineſs and Loyalty to me, who, by God's "Bleſſing, will ever make you all Returns of Kind-"neſs and Protection, with a Reſolution to ven-"ture even my own Life in Defence of the true "Intereſt of this Kingdom.

The Speech was very Offen-ſive.

This Speech was immediately underſtood to be the declaring for a Standing Army, to be command-ed by Popiſh Officers. And therefore, though the Earl of Middleton moved, That the [a] Houſe would immediately return their Thanks to his Majeſty for his moſt gracious Speech, and alſo proceed to the Conſideration of anſwering the Ends therein men-tioned; the Houſe could not but ſhew their Jea-louſies and Fears, and adjourn the Debate till Thurſ-day next; on which Day Novem. 12. the Houſe reſolved it ſelf into a Committee of the Whole, to take into Conſideration His Majeſty's Speech. Thoſe on the Court-Side moved to Vote the Militia Inſuf-ficient; and that the new Levies made by the King were juſt, reaſonable and neceſſary; and that a Sup-ply ought to be given for the keeping up of thoſe ſtanding Forces. Thoſe call'd the Country-Party were for vindicating the Militia, and making them more uſeful; were againſt a Standing Army, and eſpecially againſt diſpenſing with Popiſh Officers in it; and Sir T. C. ſpoke boldly thus: —— "His "Majeſty on his firſt Entrance on the Throne, "told us, He had been miſrepreſented, and that he "would preſerve the Government in Church and State, "now eſtabliſh'd by Law, and maintain us in all "our juſt Rights and Privileges. Over-joy'd at this, "we run haſtily in to him; we gave four Milli-"ons (reckoning what we added to him for Life "was worth) at once. The preſent Revenue is "one Million nine hundred thouſand Pounds, or "two Millions yearly; the Charge of the Govern-"ment (admitting this Army kept up) is but one "Million three hundred thouſand Pounds yearly. "And pray let us not forget that there was a Bill "of Excluſion debated in this Houſe; I was here, "and ſhew'd my ſelf againſt it: The Arguments "for it, were, That we ſhould, in caſe of a Popiſh "Succeſſor, have a Popiſh Army. You ſee the "Act of the Teſt already broken: But pray remem-"ber what the late Lord Chancellor told you, "when the late King (of bleſſed Memory) paſſed "that Act, (the Words were to this Effect) By "this Act, you are provided againſt Popery, that no "Papiſt can poſſibly creep into any Employment. I "am afflicted greatly at this Breach on our Liber-"ties; and ſeeing ſo great Difference betwixt this "Speech and thoſe heretofore made, cannot but "believe this was by ſome others Advice. This "ſtruck at here, is our All: And I wonder there "have been any Men ſo deſperate, as to take any "Employment, not qualify'd for it, and would "have therefore the Queſtion, that a Standing Ar-"my is deſtructive to the Country.

Speeches againſt a Standing Army.

The Reſult of this Debate, was the appointing a Committee to draw up an Addreſs to his Majeſty; which, on Monday Nov. 16. was read and agreed to in this Form:

Moſt gracious Sovereign,

Addreſs of the Com-mons.

"WE your Majeſty's moſt Loyal and Faith-"ful Subjects, the Commons in Parliament "aſſembled, do, in the firſt place, (as in Duty "bound) return your Majeſty our moſt humble "and hearty Thanks, for your great Care and "Conduct in ſuppreſſing the late Rebellion, which "threatned the Overthrow of this Government, "both in Church and State, to the Extirpation of "our Religion as by Law eſtabliſh'd, which is "moſt dear unto us, and which your Majeſty has "been pleas'd to give us repeated Aſſurances, you "will always defend and maintain: Which, with "all grateful Hearts, we ſhall ever acknowledge.

"We further crave leave to acquaint your Ma-"jeſty, That we have with all Duty and Readi-"neſs taken into our Conſideration your Majeſty's "gracious Speech to us. And as to that Part of it, "relating to the Officers in the Armies not quali-"fy'd for their Employments, according to an Act "of Parliament made in the 25th Year of the "Reign of your Royal Brother, Intituled, An Act "for preventing Dangers which may happen from "Popiſh Recuſants.

"We do, out of our bounden Duty, humbly "repreſent unto your Majeſty,

"That theſe Officers cannot, by Law, be ca-"pable of their Employments; and that the In-"capacities they bring upon themſelves that way, "can no way be taken off but by an Act of Par-"liament:

"Therefore, out of that great Reverence and "Duty we owe unto your Majeſty, who have "been graciouſly pleas'd to take Notice of their "Services to your Majeſty, we are preparing a Bill "to paſs both Houſes, for your Royal Aſſent, to "indemnifie them from the Penalties they have "now incurred. And becauſe the continuing of "them in their Employments, may be taken to "be a diſpenſing with that Law, without an Act "of Parliament, the Conſequence of which is of "the greateſt Concern to the Rights of all your "Majeſty's Subjects, and to all the Laws made for "the Security of their Religion;

"We therefore, the Knights, Citizens and Bur-"geſſes of your Majeſty's Houſe of Commons, do "do moſt humbly beſeech your Majeſty, That "you would be moſt graciouſly pleas'd to give "ſuch Directions therein, that no Apprehenſions

[a] The Subject of the King's Speech had been as little ap-prov'd in Council as it was in Parliament. The Earl of Sunderland in his Letter publiſh'd March 23, 1689, ſays, the Diſpenſing Power I never heard ſpoken of till the time of Monmouth's Rebellion, that the King told ſome of the Coun-cil, of which I was one, that he was reſolved to give Em-ployments to Roman Catholicks, it being fit that all Perſons ſhould ſerve who could be uſeful, and on whom he might depend. I think every Body adviſ'd him againſt it; but with little effect, as was ſoon ſeen. That Party was ſo well pleaſed with what the King had done, that they perſuaded him to mention it in his Speech, at the next meeting of the Parliament, which he did, after many Debates, whether it was proper or not, in all which I oppos'd it.

"or

1685. 1 Jac. II.

“ or Jealouſies may remain in the Hearts of your “ Majeſty's moſt Loyal Subjects.

This Addreſs was preſented by the Speaker, attended by the Houſe, to his Majeſty, in the Banquetting Houſe at Whitehall, on Tueſday Nov. 17. When his Majeſty, with ſome Reſentment, gave them this Anſwer:

GENTLEMEN,

King's Anſwer,

I Did not expect ſuch an Addreſs from the Houſe of Commons. For having ſo lately recommended to your Conſideration the great Advantages a good Underſtanding between us had produced in a very ſhort time, and given you Warning of Fears and Jealouſies amongſt our ſelves; I had reaſon to hope, that the Reputation God had bleſſed me with in the World, would have ſeal'd and confirm'd a good Confidence in you of me, and of all that I ſay to you.

But however you proceed on your Part, I will be ſteady in all my Promiſes I have made to you; and be juſt to my Word in this, and all my other Speeches.

Not pleaſing.

When this Anſwer was read, there was a profound Silence in the Houſe for ſome time after it: At laſt a Member moved, That a Day might be appointed to conſider of his Majeſty's Anſwer to their late Addreſs; and named Friday next. Mr. C. ſtood up and ſeconded that Motion, and ſaid, I hope we are all Engliſh-men, and are not to be frighted out of our Duty by a few high Words. Exception was immediately taken at thoſe Words, as reflecting on the King, and they were writ down by the Clerk, and Mr. C. was call'd upon to explain them: And after much debate, it was ordered that Mr. C. for his indecent Speech, ſhould be ſent to the Tower.

Mr. Coke.

Supply Granted.

In the mean time, the Commons had made their Reſolutions, to give the King as much Money as could poſſibly ſerve his juſt Occaſions, and be conſiſtent with their own Liberties and Rights. When the Queſtion was put, That a Supply be given to his Majeſty; it was carry'd in the Affirmative: But theſe Words, Towards the Support of the Additional Forces (which one of the Members moved might be added) were rejected, and inſtead of them, it paſſed, That the Houſe be moved to bring in a Bill to make the Militia Uſeful. The Sum demanded by the King's Agents, was one million two hundred thouſand Pounds. Which others thinking Exorbitant, ſaid, That the Meaſure of their Supply was their Security: That the Uſe was to direct the Quantum. That four hundred thouſand Pounds was enough to maintain the Additional Forces two Years, till the Militia be made ſerviceable. That they muſt not give all at once, but leave the Door open for coming thither another time. Others proceeded to ſay, That they had that Seſſion already given Cuſtoms and Exciſes for his Majeſty's Life, which amounted to ſix Millions. That they ought to give little now, to have Opportunity of giving more another time: For if they gave ſo much at one ſitting, they ſhould have nothing left to give: Nay, and if things proceeded thus, what they had wou'd be taken from them. But nevertheleſs, after a long Debate, the Queſtion was put for ſeven hundred thouſand Pounds, and no more, to be given to his Majeſty; which paſs'd in the Affirmative; and the Houſe were entred upon Ways and Means for the raiſing of it. And to make the King eaſie in his Roman Catholick Officers in the Army, they not only offer'd a Bill to indemnifie them from the Penalties they had already incurr'd, but they were willing to capacitate, by Act of Parliament, ſuch a Number of thoſe Officers as his Majeſty ſhould give a Liſt of. But the King would accept of nothing under a profound Submiſſion and Obedience to all his Demands; and therefore he not only gave the Commons his Marks of Diſpleaſure, in his Anſwer to their Addreſs, Nov. 18. but when they had appointed Nov. 20. to conſider of that Anſwer, he would not ſuffer them to enter upon any ſuch Debate, but on that very Morning Prorogued the Parliament.

Compliance of the Commons,

Not accepted by the King

The King not pleaſed with the Houſe of Lords.

The King was not much better pleas'd with the Houſe of Lords; for when it was there debated, whether they ſhould give the King Thanks for his Speech, or not? ſome of the Peers were for it, while others warmly oppos'd it; and the Marquis of Hallifax, a Man of ſharp Wit, ſaid by way of Irony, They had now more reaſon than ever to give Thanks to his Majeſty, ſince he had dealt ſo plainly with them, and had diſcover'd what he before intended. What he meant for a Jeſt was eagerly laid hold on, by the Courtiers for earneſt; ſo an Addreſs of Thanks was preſented: And his Majeſty made Anſwer, That he was very well ſatisfy'd that their Lordſhips were well pleas'd with what he ſaid; And that he would never offer any thing to their Houſe, that he ſhould not be convinc'd was for the good and and true Intereſt of the Kingdom. But the Lords gave greater Offence, by taking Notice of the violent and arbitrary Proſecution of the Lord Delamere and the Earl of Stamford, wherein they thought the Privileges of Peerage were intrench'd upon. The ſame Day the King made his Speech, the Lord Delamere, in an humble Petition repreſented to their Lordſhips, “ That his Majeſty, by his “ Proclamation dated the 19th of July laſt, did re“ quire the Petitioner to appear before him in “ Council within ten Days, not for any manner “ of Treaſon, but for other leſs Matters therein “ contain'd. That accordingly, within ſeven Days, “ he did render himſelf to my Lord Sunderland: “ And that after being brought before his Majeſty “ then ſitting in Council, he was neither Con“ fronted by any Perſon that accuſed him, nor o“ therwiſe charg'd with any manner of Treaſon, “ but only ask'd ſome Queſtions relating to Mat“ ters of a leſſer Nature: And had he been guilty “ of them, yet by Law, he might and ought to “ be bail'd. That yet the Lord Sunderland, by “ Warrant bearing Date the 26th of July laſt, “ did commit the Petitioner to the Tower of Lon“ don, (for High-Treaſon, in levying War againſt “ the King) where he had remained ever ſince, “ under a very cloſe Reſtraint. And as he avow“ ed himſelf to be altogether innocent of any evil “ Practice againſt the King or the Government, “ and had in all things behaved himſelf as became “ a good Subject: So he humbly pray'd their Lord“ ſhips to take his Caſe into their ſerious Conſi“ deration, and to do therein what ſhould ſeem “ meet to their Lordſhips.” After ſome Debate, the Queſtion was put, whether the Lords with white Staffs ſhould wait on his Majeſty to know the reaſon why the Lord Delamere, a Member of their Houſe, was abſent from his Attendance there? Which being carry'd in the Affirmative, the Earl of Rocheſter Lord High Treaſurer, reported the next Day, that he, with the other Lords, having waited on his Majeſty with their Meſſage; his Majeſty was pleas'd to anſwer, That the Lord Delamere ſtood

[a] Nevertheleſs, (ſaith Mr. Echard) the Biſhop of London couragiouſly mov'd, in the Name of himſelf and all his Brethren, that the Houſe would particularly debate the King's Speech, and the 23d of this Month was accordingly appointed; which as it was extraordinary and unuſual in the Houſe, ſo it was no leſs ſurprizing to the King and Court, which ſhew'd a Jealouſie of theſe Proceedings.

committed

1685.
1 Jac. II.

committed for High Treaſon, teſtified upon Oath; and that his Majeſty had already given Directions that he ſhould be proceeded againſt according to Law. The Lords reſumed this Debate on Nov. 16. when the Lord Chancellor Jeffreys, by his Majeſty's Command, gave this Account to their Lordſhips of the Proceedings had and intended to be had againſt the Lord Delamere; ſays he, To ſhew your Lordſhips, that the King has given Orders for a ſpeedy Proſecution of him, the Treaſon whereof he is accuſed was committed in Cheſhire, and that being a County Palatine, the Proſecution muſt be there, and not in the Court of King's-Bench, as it might be, if the Treaſon had been committed in any other County: And therefore his Majeſty had given Orders for a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, in order to the finding an Indictment againſt him. Which Commiſſion is already paſs'd; and if the Indictment be not found before the end of the Term, the Lord Delamere's Prayer being entred in the King's-Bench, he may be bailed. This Noble Lord was afterwards try'd by his Peers, the Chancellor Jeffreys ſitting as High-Steward, and was honourably acquitted; it manifeſtly appearing that Thomas Saxon the Principal Evidence againſt his Lordſhip, was guilty of Perjury; for which he ſuffer'd Condign Puniſhment.

Ld. Delamere acquitted.

Petition of the E. of Stamford to the Lords.

On the 11th of November the Earl of Stamford did likewiſe put up a Petition to the Lords, importing, "That in July laſt he was taken in Cu-"ſtody at his own Houſe in Leiceſterſhire; and be-"ing brought to London, was, by the Earl of "Sunderland's Warrant committed to the Tower, "(for High-Treaſon, in conſpiring the Death of "the late King) where he remained ever ſince, "and was now a Cloſe Priſoner, and had not had "the Uſe of Pen, Ink or Paper, except to ſign "Petitions, in the Gentleman Porter's or Warden's "Preſence: That he muſt take the liberty to affirm, "that he was innocent of the Crime laid to his "Charge, and had endeavour'd to behave himſelf "with all Duty and Loyalty to the King, and his "Royal Brother of glorious Memory: That ne-"vertheleſs he heard there was an Indictment of "High-Treaſon, found againſt him; but where, "when, or how, or upon what Evidence, or up-"on what Matter, he knew not. Wherefore he "humbly prayed, that their Lordſhips, according "to the ancient Courſe of Proceedings of this "moſt honourable Houſe, would be pleas'd to order "him to be brought before them in their Houſe of "Parliament, there to hear the Matter charg'd a-"gainſt him; and that thereupon ſuch farther "Proceedings might be had, as are agreeable to "Juſtice, and the uſual Courſe of Parliamenta-"ry Proceedings in Caſes of the like Nature." Thereupon their Lordſhips order'd the Lord Mayor, and the reſt of the Juſtices for the City of London, forthwith to return into that Houſe, by Virtue of his Majeſty's Writ of Certiorari, the Indictment found before them againſt the Earl of Stamford. On Nov. 17. the ſaid Earl, purſuant to their Lordſhips Order, was brought to their Bar, and the Indictment found againſt him. And his Petition being read, the Lord Chancellor ask'd him, What he had to ſay to the Houſe? The Earl anſwered, he deſired to hear his Charge. And being ask'd again, If he had any thing more to ſay? His Lordſhip reply'd, That he had been ſtraightly confined by ſixteen Weeks Impriſonment, and not allow'd the Liberty of Pen, Ink and Paper, or of Friends to come to him; and therefore he could ſay no more till he knew his Charge. Whereupon the Houſe order'd, that the Earl of Stamford's Tryal ſhould be in Weſtminſter Hall, on the firſt Day of December next: That in the mean time, he ſhould be allow'd the Liberty of Pen, Ink and Paper, and Friends to come to him, in order for his Tryal; and that the Lords with white Staffs ſhould attend the King, to deſire his Majeſty on behalf of this Houſe, that a Place may be appointed in Weſtminſter Hall, and that his Majeſty would give Order for a Commiſſion to appoint a Lord High-Steward, in order to the ſaid Tryal. On November 18. the Lords were made acquainted, that the King had comply'd with their Deſire: But becauſe the next Day their Lordſhips appointed the 23d of that Month for the reading and conſidering his Majeſty's Speech, in a full Houſe; the King apprehending the Reſult of their Debates, and fearing the Jealouſies which the Commons had expreſs'd, he came to the Houſe of Peers on Nov. 20. and the Commons attending he commanded the Lord Chancellor to let both Houſes know, "That it was his Majeſty's Plea-"ſure, for many weighty Reaſons, that this Par-"liament be prorogued till the 10th Day of Fe-"bruary next." Soon after the Earl of Stamford, upon bringing his Habeas Corpus, was admitted to "Bail; and in the beginning of next Year, his Lordſhip, though innocent, was obliged to accept of a Pardon, whereby his Bail was diſcharg'd.

His Lordſhip's Tryal.

1685.
1 Jac. II.

Parliament Prorogu'd.

Earl of Stamford accepts a Pardon.

And indeed, beſides the Buſineſs in the Weſt, this Year was fill'd with Proſecutions and Penalties, for Crimes and Offences againſt the State. On May the 8th and 9th, [a] Titus Oates was tryed at the King's-Bench-Bar, upon two ſeveral Indictments of Perjury, ſaid to be formerly preferr'd againſt him by the Command and Direction of the late King (of ever bleſſed Memory;) which ſhould have been tryed the laſt Term, had not his Majeſty's Death prevented it. He was now convicted of Perjury, on both the ſaid Indictments; and being brought to the King's-Bench-Bar on the 16th of May, the Court awarded Judgment againſt him, as follows; "That he ſhall be diveſted of his Canonical Habit "for ever: That on Monday next he be carry'd "round Weſtminſter-Hall with a Paper on his "Head declaring his Offence, in theſe Words, "TITUS OATES, convicted upon full Evidence "for two horrid Perjuries: And that afterwards he "ſtand in the Pillory before Weſtminſter-Hall-"Gate, and on Tueſday before the Royal Exchange; "That on Wedneſday he be Whipt from Aldgate "to Newgate by the common Hang-man, and on "Friday following from Newgate to Tyburn; "That he ſtand in the Pillory on every 24th of "April, during his Life, before Tyburn, on every "9th of Auguſt in the Palace-Yard at Weſtminſter, "on every 10th of Auguſt at Charing Croſs, on every "11th of Auguſt at Temple-Bar, and on every ſe-"cond of September before the Royal-Exchange, "unleſs any of theſe Days happen to be Sunday, "and then on the Day following; that he pay a "Fine of a thouſand Marks for each Perjury, and "that he ſuffer Impriſonment during his Life." There was no Remiſſion of any part of this Sentence: That of Whipping was executed with the utmoſt Severity, by ſpecial Order from the Court, and with Rewards given before-hand to the Executioner by ſeveral Papiſts. The Stripes of the firſt Whipping were ſo ſore and green upon the ſecond, that it was grievous to the Spectators, and much more to the Sufferer; who had perhaps Titus Oates Convicted of Perjury.

Severe Sentence.

[a] Mr. Oates in his Tryal call'd for ſeveral Perſons of Quality to ſpeak to his former Succeſs and Credit; as the Earl of Devonſhire, the Earl of Clare, the Earl of Huntingdon, the Biſhop of London, Sir William Dolben, Sir George Treby, the Lord Chief Baron, Mr. Baron Gregory, Mr. Williams, and ſeveral others. But as to the ill Teſtimony given by the Earl of Huntingdon, it was rather in Judgment againſt himſelf, than againſt Mr. Oates, or againſt the Popiſh-Plot. Even the printed Trial is not ſo much a Demonſtration of Perjury, or other wilful Miſtakes of Mr. Oates, as it is of the furious Reſolution to condemn him; and of the Paſſion and Inſults of the very Judges upon him.

committed

1685. 1 Jac. II. committed ſome Miſtakes in the Circumſtances of time and place, but the Subſtance of his Evidence was undoubtedly true; for the main of his Depoſitions was demonſtrated by the Papers of Colcman, and by a Concurrence of many other Acts and Deeds. And it is much to be fear'd, that the truth of his Evidence had given more Offence to the Court than any Miſtakes in it. However, his Puniſhment look'd much the worſe for being inflicted in a Popiſh Reign: And many imputed to his Majeſty the Love of Revenge, as if the King of England could not forget the Injuries done to the Duke of York.

Tryal of Dangerfield. On May 30. Thomas Dangerfield was try'd at the King's-Bench-Bar, upon an Information for Writing and Publiſhing a moſt villainous and ſcandalous Libel, call'd his Narrative; wherein according to his Depoſitions before the Parliament in 1680. he did reveal, "That he was employ'd by the Popiſh "Party, and chiefly by the Lords in the Tower, "and the Counteſs of Powys, to invent a Meal-Tub Plot, which was to have thrown the Popiſh "Plot upon the Presbyterians." This Narrative was order'd to be printed by the Houſe of Commons, on Nov. 10. 1680. But notwithſtanding that Order, their Speaker Mr. Williams was afterwards Fin'd ten thouſand Pounds, for licenſing it to be printed, and could not get off without paying the greateſt part of it. And Mr. Dangerfield being now found Guilty, receiv'd Judgment at the King's-Bench-Bar, "That he ſhould ſtand twice "in the Pillory; that he ſhould be Whipt from "Aldgate to Newgate, and from Newgate to Tyburn, and ſhould Pay a Fine of Five hundred "Pounds." In his return from Tyburn towards Newgate, after his Whipping, being in a Coach, he had reproachful Words given him by one [a] Robert Francis, a virulent Papiſt, and was run by him into the Eye with a Tuck at the end of a Cane; of which, together with the Pain of his Whipping, he died ſoon after, and Francis was juſtly Executed for it.

His Narrative.

He is killed by Robert Francis.

It was indeed made the Faſhion of the Court, to diſbelieve and ridicule the whole Popiſh Plot, and to talk of nothing but the Plot of the Presbyterians; of which a late Writer ſpeaks thus, "This "was call'd the Presbyterian or Proteſtant Plot; "which moſt People look'd upon as the Contrivance of the Jeſuits, in order to baffle the Popiſh "Plot, and to Cruſh the Ringleaders of that Party, who for ſeveral Years had ſo warmly endeavour'd to prevent King James's Acceſſion to the "Throne. Many of theſe Conſpirators had already been executed in King Charles's Reign; "and the Court being now reſolv'd to proſecute "the reſt, the Eloquent Pen of Dr. Sp—t (not "long before made B——p of R——ter) was induſtriouſly ſet to work to varniſh over and palliate the Flaws of Keeling, and the other Witneſſes Depoſitions. Accordingly in the beginning of June he publiſh'd, An Account of the "horrid Conſpiracy againſt the late King, his preſent Majeſty, and the Government; adorn'd with "all thoſe Flouriſhes of Oratory, which are ſo far "from perſuading, that they rather give Truth an "Air of Fiction: but however, as Affairs were "then manag'd, a [b] Romance was as fit to ſerve the "Court as a True Hiſtory.

Presbyterian Plot.

1685. 1 Jac. II. Tryal of Mr. Richard Baxter. Upon the ſame Day with Mr. Dangerfield's Tryal at Weſtminſter, in the Afternoon, at the Niſi prius held at the Guild-Hall, Mr. Richard Baxter the eminent Writer and Teacher was Convicted, upon an Information, for Writing and Publiſhing ſcandalous and ſeditious Notes upon the New Teſtament, (of which a larger Account ſhall be given in the State of Religion for this Year.)

On June 25. William Diſney Eſq; was try'd by a Special Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer for the County of Surrey, before the Lord Chief Juſtice of England, and other his Majeſty's Juſtices, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon, "For Printing "and Publiſhing a moſt Vile and Traiterous Paper againſt his Majeſty and his Government, Intitled, The Declaration of James Duke of Monmouth, &c." Of which being found Guilty, he had Sentence paſs'd upon him, to be Drawn, Hang'd and Quarter'd on Monday next.

Tryal of Mr. Corniſh. On Octob. 19. Henry Corniſh Eſq; late Sheriff, now Alderman of London, was brought to his Tryal at the Old-Bailey, (having been a Week before committed Cloſe Priſoner to Newgate) and was indicted of High-Treaſon, for conſpiring with other falſe Traitors to raiſe a Rebellion within this Kingdom, and the late King (of ever bleſſed Memory) to Death and final Deſtruction to bring, and the ancient Government of this Kingdom to alter and ſubvert. The only Witneſs againſt him was Colonel Rumſey, a looſe and wicked Evidence; there was another indeed call'd, one Goodenough, but what he depoſed could not affect the Priſoner: However Mr. Corniſh was found Guilty, Condemn'd and Executed in Cheapſide, much lamented by his Fellow Citizens, as a Man unjuſtly ſacrific'd; for they look'd upon the true Reaſon of this Proceeding againſt him to be, That Mr. Corniſh when Sheriff of London, had been very active againſt the Popiſh Conſpirators, ſo that now his Blood muſt expiate his Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion.

Unjuſtly Condemned and Executed.

On the ſame Day were likewiſe tryed William King, "For harbouring and concealing Joſeph "Kelloway and Henry Lawrence, who were in the "late Rebellion in the Weſt: John Fernely, for "harbouring and concealing James Burton, a Perſon outlawed for High-Treaſon: And Elizabeth "Gaunt, for ſuccouring and aſſiſting the ſaid Burton with Money, and helping him to a Paſſage "beyond the Seas." And were all three found Guilty of High-Treaſon, and had Sentence of Death paſs'd upon them.

On Octob. 27. Richard Nelthorp and John Ayloffe were brought from Newgate to the King's-Bench-Bar, where being ask'd what they had to ſay, why Execution ſhould not be awarded againſt them, they ſtanding attainted by Outlawry of High-Treaſon, for conſpiring the Death of the late King, of ever-bleſſed Memory? &c. They not being able to ſay any thing that could avail them, the Court made a Rule, That they ſhould be executed on Friday; and accordingly they were then hang'd, Mr. Nelthorp before Grays-Inn, and Mr. Ayloffe before the Temple-Gate.

Execution of Nelthorp and Ayloffe.

Tryal of Lord Brandon. On Thurſday Nov. 26. the Lord Brandon, by the Name of Charles Gerrard, Eſq; was brought to his Trial at the King's-Bench-Bar, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon, For conſpiring to raiſe a Rebellion, and depoſe the late King: Of which he

[a] He is ſaid not to have been a Papiſt, or to have been inſtructed to dye in the Profeſſion of being of the Church of England, as by Law Eſtabliſh'd; a Barriſter of Grays-Inn.

[b] A true Account and Declaration of the horrid Conſpiracy againſt the late King, his preſent Majeſty, and the Government, as it was order'd to be publiſh'd by his late Majeſty. In the Savoy by Thomas Newcomb, fol. With the King's Will and Pleaſure that no other Perſon preſume to print the ſame, with Letters Patents declaring that it was compos'd and ready for the Preſs, when it pleas'd Almighty God to take that excellent Prince [Ch. II.] to his Mercy. And whereas it is but too evident that the ſame Helliſh Plot is not entirely extinguiſh'd, but that divers of the wicked Actors in it are ſtill carrying on new Contrivances againſt the happy Peace of our Dominions: We cannot but judge it ſeaſonable in this Juncture of Times to have our Subjects re-minded of the Riſe, Progreſs, and miſchievous Deſigns of that deſperate Confederacy, &c. Given 21. May 1685.

was found Guilty; and being then remanded to the Tower, he was on Nov. 28. brought again to the King's-Bench-Bar, where Sentence of Death paſs'd upon him, as in Caſes of High-Treaſon; but he afterwards found means to procure his Pardon.

Tryal of Mr. Bateman.

On Wedneſday Decemb. 9. Charles Bateman was brought to his Tryal at the Old-Bayley, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon; of which he was found Guilty, and received Sentence of Death, which was executed upon him at Tyburn on December 18.

Tryal of Mr. Hambden.

On Decemb. 30. John Hambden Eſq; was arraign'd at the Old-Bailey, upon an Indictment of High-Treaſon, for conſpiring to raiſe a Rebellion againſt the late King, &c. He expecting no Favour from the Court or Jury, pleaded Guilty, and caſt himſelf upon the King's Mercy. After which, he was immediately ſentenc'd to die, but did obtain a Pardon [a].

On Febr. 10. Mr. Philibert Vernatti, who, being attainted by Outlawry, for the Murther of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey, had, in the beginning of this Term, brought a Writ of Error, and reverſed the ſaid Outlawry, was now tryed upon the Indictment, and acquitted of the ſame. And the ſame Day, the Reverend [b] Dr. Edes of Chicheſter was tryed, upon an Information of High Miſdemeanor, only for ſome Words which he had innocently and freely ſpoken; of which he was found Guilty, and thereupon committed to the King's-Bench Priſon.

Honours and Preferments.

As to Honours and Preferments: On March 27. William Duke of Queenborough, Lord Treaſurer (now his Majeſty's High-Commiſſioner,) and James Earl of Perth, Lord Chancellor of the Kingdom of Scotland, were ſworn of his Majeſty's Privy-Council in England, and accordingly took their Places at the Board. On Apr. 1. Richard Verney Eſq; who preſented an Addreſs of the County of Warwick, receiv'd the Honour of Knighthood from his Majeſty. His Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute the Earl of Peterborough Groom of his Stole, and did on Sunday Apr. 19. give the golden Key to his Lordſhip, who on Tueſday following was ſworn into that Office. About the ſame time, his Majeſty apointed Sir Tho. Dereham (who preſented to his Majeſty an Addreſs from the Merchants of the Engliſh Factory at Leghorn) to be his Envoy to the great Duke of Tuſcany. On Apr. 30. His Majeſty was pleas'd, in his Bed-Chamber, to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon Roger L'Eſtrange Eſq; in Conſideration of his eminent and unſhaken Loyalty to the Crown in all Extremities, and as a Mark of the ſingular Satisfaction his Majeſty has in his preſent as well as paſt Services, with repeated Declarations of his Royal Grace and Bounty towards him. On May 6. the Duke of Norfolk was elected Knight-Companion of the moſt noble Order of the Garter, and was inveſted with the Enſigns of that Honour, having been firſt Knighted by the Sovereign. On May 15. His Majeſty being deſirous to beſtow a Mark of his Royal Favour upon Henry Jermyn of Cheveley in the County of Cambridge, Eſq; for the conſtant Loyalty of himſelf and his Family, was pleas'd to grant him the Title and Dignity of Baron of Dover in the County of Kent. His Majeſty was likewiſe pleas'd, in Conſideration of the faithful Services of the Right Honourable John Lord Churchill of Eymouth in Scotland, Gentleman of his Majeſty's Bed-Chamber, to grant him the Title and Dignity of a Baron of this Kingdom, by the Name and Style of Baron Churchill of Sandridge in the County of Hertford. And his Majeſty graciouſly conſidering the great Services which the Right Honourable Sir George Jeffreys Kt. and Bar. Lord Chief-Juſtice of England, had rendred the Crown, and his firm and unſhaken Duty and Fidelity to the late King and his Majeſty, in the time of the greateſt Difficulty, was pleas'd to conferr upon him the Title and Dignity of a Baron, by the Name and Style of Baron Jeffreys of Wem in the County of Salop.

At the beginning of June, the Lord Landſdown was ſent his Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of Spain. On June 18. the Earl of Peterborough was elected Knight-Companion of the moſt noble Order of the Garter, in a Chapter held at Whitehall. And on June 29. the Earl of Rocheſter, Lord High-Treaſurer of England, being Knighted by the Sovereign, was inveſted with the George and Garter.

In the beginning of July, his Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon John Cotton of Botreaux-Caſtle in the County of Cornwall, Eſq; for the conſtant and unſhaken Loyalty of himſelf and Family. And on Jul. 20. His Majeſty conferr'd the ſame Honour of Knighthood upon Henry Shere Eſq; as a Mark of the great Satisfaction his Majeſty had in his remarkable Behaviour and Services againſt the Rebels, having had the Poſt of Comptroller-General and Commander in Chief of the Artillery. On July 24. the Earl of Mulgrave was ſworn of his Majeſty's Privy-Council, and took his Place at the Board. And on the laſt of this Month the Earl of Feverſham, Lieutenant-General of his Majeſty's Forces, was elected Knight-Companion of the moſt noble Order of the Garter, and Knighted by the Sovereign. And on the ſame Day, George Earl of Berkeley was ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council. [c] On Tueſday July 28. in the Morning, died the Right Honourable Henry Earl of Arlington, Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, at Arlington-Houſe, in the 67th Year of his Age: Upon which his Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute the Earl of Ailesbury Lord Chamberlain, and gave the White-Staff to his Lordſhip on Jul. 30.

Aug. 29. His Majeſty being well ſatisfy'd with the good and faithful Services of Sir Richard Bulſtrode, late his Reſident at Bruſſels, was pleas'd, as a particular Mark of his Favour, to ſend him back with the Character of his Envoy to that Court. The Right Honourable Francis Lord Guilford, Lord-Keeper of the Great-Seal of England, died on Saturday Night, Sept. 5. in his Houſe at Rox- Death of the Lord-Keeper.

[a] Many honeſt People objected it as an Infirmity of Mr. Hambden to plead Guilty, or as a neceſſity to bargain for his Life, which he knew would be otherwiſe taken from him. The Tryal is lately publiſh'd.

[b] Several others of the better ſort of the Clergy who had been guilty of any kind of Moderation, were forc'd to write Apologies for their Behaviour and Writings — See 1. An Epiſtle of Dr. Edward Stillingfleet to the Right Reverend Henry Lord Biſhop of London, in Vindication of himſelf and his Writings from the Aſperſions lately caſt upon them by the Vicar of Coſmus-Blene, dated 1 June, 1685.— 2. A Letter to the Lord Biſhop of London, prefix'd to a Sermon preached by John Williams, D. D. publiſh'd in Vindication of that and the Author, from an induſtrious Report, that on the Day of Thankſgiving he only entertained his Auditors with a general Diſcourſe that was not to the Purpoſe of the Day, and Occaſion of it. London, 1685. 4*to*.— 3. A Vindication of the Preaching of Dr. Edward Fowler, Vicar of St. Giles's Cripplegate, &c. 1685. Prefix'd to his Sermon preached Novemb. 15. 1685. 4*to*.—— 4. The Defence of Mr. Smithies Curate of Cripplegate, from the Reflections caſt on him by Sir Roger L'Eſtrange, and by William Newberry, and William Edmunds, Fol.

[c] July 17th 1685. about One after Noon the Earl of Radnor departed this Life.

1685. 1 Jac. II.

ton in Oxfordſhire: Upon which his Majeſty taking into his Royal Conſideration the many eminent and faithful Services which the Right Honourable George Lord Jeffreys of Wem, Lord Chief-Juſtice of England, had rendred the Crown, as well in the Reign of the late King, as ſince his Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne, was pleas'd, on Monday Sept. 28. to commit to him the Cuſtody of the Great-Seal of England, with the Title of Lord Chancellor. And, upon his Advancement, his Majeſty was pleas'd to make Choice of Sir Edward Herbert, Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter, to be Lord Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench, who was ſworn a Privy-Counſellor on Oct. 16. And of Sir Edward Luitwich, one of his Majeſty's Serjeants at Law, to ſucceed him in the Place of Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter. His Majeſty was likewiſe pleas'd to remove Sir Robert Wright, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, to the Court of King's-Bench, in the Place of Sir Thomas Walcot, deceas'd; and to name Sir Edward Nevill one of his Majeſty's Serjeant's at Law, to be Baron of the Exchequer. And Roger North and Oliver Mountague, Eſqrs; both of his Majeſty's Counſel at Law, were made, the firſt Attorney, and the other Solicitor-General to the Queen.

Other Honours and Preferments.

On Oct. 23. his Majeſty was pleas'd to give the White-Staff to the Earl of Mulgrave, whom his Majeſty had made Lord Chamberlain of his Houſhold, upon the Death of the Earl of Ailesbury, who died on Tueſday laſt in his Houſe at Ampthill in Bedfordſhire. Two Days before, the Lord Viſcount Preſton was ſworn of his Majeſty's Privy-Council: And ſome few Days after, the Earl of Plymouth was ſworn, and took his Place at the ſame Honourable Board. About the ſame time, his Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Paul Rycaut, Eſq; formerly his Majeſty's Conſul at Smyrna, and now Chief-Secretary to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.

On Decemb. 4. His Majeſty was pleas'd in Council to declare the Earl of Sunderland (his Principal Secretary of State) to be Lord Preſident of his Council, and his Lordſhip took his Place at the Board accordingly. About the ſame time, his Majeſty appointed the Earl of Clarendon to be Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, who began his Journey toward Cheſter on Dec. 16. And his Majeſty appointed the Lord Viſcount Tiviot, Colonel Robert Philips, and John Evelyn of Deptford, Eſq; to execute the Office of Lord Privy-Seal, during the abſence of his Excellency the Earl of Clarendon. On Dec. 20. his Majeſty, of his Royal Grace and Favour, was pleas'd to conſtitute Theophilus Earl of Huntingdon Lord Chief-Juſtice and Juſtice in Eyre of all his Foreſts, Chaſes, Parks and Warrens on the South-ſide of Trent, which Office became vacant by the ſurrendry of the Earl of Cheſterfield.

On Tueſday Febr. 2. His Majeſty being in his Bed-Chamber, was graciouſly pleas'd, as a Mark of his Royal Favour, to conferr the Honour of Knighthood upon Dr. Edmund King, Phyſician in Ordinary to the late King. On Febr. 13. the King was pleas'd to conſtitute Sir Thomas Jenner (one of his Majeſty's Serjeants at Law, and late Recorder of London, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, in the Place of Sir William Gregory: And Sir Henry Bedingfield (his Majeſty's Serjeant at Law) one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas, in the Place of Sir Creſwel Levinz: And that eminent Pleader John Holt of Grays-Inn, Eſq; (upon whom his Majeſty had been pleas'd to conferr the Honour of Knighthood) was made Recorder of London. On Febr. 23. His Majeſty Knighted John Bucknall of Oxlie in Hertfordſhire, Eſq;. And on Saturday March 20. His Majeſty was pleas'd to conferr the ſame Honour on Major Martin Beckman (his Majeſty's chief Engineer) in Conſideration of his long and good Services. And on the laſt Day of this Year, March 24th, was perform'd, at the College of Arms, the Ceremony of the Creation of Sir Thomas St. George, Kt. Garter Principal King of Arms, Sir John Dugdale, Kt. Norroy King of Arms, Henry Ball, Eſq; Windſor Herald, and Charles Mawſon, Gent. Rougecroix Purſivant, after the accuſtomed manner, purſuant to his Majeſty's Warrant to the Earl-Marſhal for that purpoſe.

State of Religion.

Though it was a great Surprize to the People of England to ſee the King ſo ſuddenly and ſo openly declare himſelf a Roman Catholick, when he had never before publickly profeſs'd that Faith, but had proſecuted thoſe who had call'd him a Papiſt, and had obtained exorbitant Fines, for giving him a Name in which he could now Glory: Yet, after all, the King might have enjoy'd his own Religion, if he could have confin'd that Liberty to himſelf and his own Court, without obtruding it upon the reſt of the Nation. Whether it was his own Zeal, or the Importunity of others, that carry'd him to the Arbitrary Meaſures of promoting Popery, is not ſo eaſy to determine; becauſe there ſeems to be a Complexion of both; a natural Bigottry in himſelf, and a perpetual Sollicitation of the Queen and the Jeſuits. It is well atteſted, that his Royal Brother had often, and particularly a little before his Death, advis'd him, Not to think of introducing Popery into England, it being a thing that was both dangerous and impracticable. And a very eminent Politician, Don Pedro Ronquillo the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, at his firſt Audience after the Death of King Charles, is ſaid to have ask'd Leave to ſpeak his Thoughts freely to his Majeſty, and then made bold to tell him, That he ſaw ſeveral Prieſts about him, who he knew would importune him to alter the eſtabliſh'd Religion in England; but he greatly fear'd, that if any ſuch Attempt were made, his Majeſty wou'd have reaſon to repent it. 'Tis reported, that King James took this Liberty of the Spaniſh Ambaſſador very ill, and ask'd him in a Paſſion. Whether in Spain the Kings did not adviſe with their Confeſſors? Yes, Sir, (reply'd the Ambaſſador) they do, and that's the reaſon our Affairs are ſo badly managed. Nay, Pope Innocent XI. wrote a Letter to King James, upon his Acceſſion to the Crown, to this effect, That he was highly pleas'd with his Majeſty's Zeal for the Catholick Religion, but he was afraid his Majeſty might puſh it too far; and then, inſtead of contributing to his own Greatneſs, and the Advancement of the Catholick Church, he might come to do the greateſt Prejudice to the Cauſe, and himſelf, by attempting that, which his Holineſs was well aſſur'd, by long Experience, could have no Succeſs. Theſe things, together with the Dangers ariſing from Monmouth and Argyle, prevail'd a while with King James to contain his immoderate Zeal for the Romiſh Religion; and yet there was an early Meaning betray'd of drawing-in the Church-men to ſacrifice their diſſenting Brethren, and ſo to unite and advance the Strength of Popery. [a] It was un-

Surprize, to ſee the King a profeſs'd Papiſt.

More eſpecially to ſee him fond of Introducing Popery.

Contrary to the Advice of his beſt Friends.

The King contain'd himſelf for ſome time.

[a] Some of the Church Divines were ſo warm on this Occaſion, that they gave great Offence to their ſober Brethren, and help'd only to betray the Court into greater Confidence, and more arbitrary Popiſh Meaſures. They publiſh'd. 1. A Sermon preach'd upon the firſt Sunday after the Proclamation of the High and Mighty Prince JAMES II. &c. which was made at Leiceſter February 10. 1684. by Benjamin Camfield, Rector of Aileſton near Leiceſter. Text 2 Chron. xiii. 5.——. Diſcourſing, I. Of the abſolute Supremacy of the King II. The divine Right of that Supremacy. III. The right Claim of Hereditary Succeſſion; and IV. The Unalterableneſs of that Claim. London, printed for Ch. Brome, 1685. 4*to*.

4 der

1685. 1 Jac. II.

Votes of the Commons, for Religion.

der this Management, that on May 27. the Committee for Religion, in the Houſe of Commons, had drawn up two Votes: 1. "That it is the "Opinion of the Committee, That this Houſe "will ſtand by his Majeſty, with their Lives and "Fortunes, according to their bounden Duty "and Allegiance, in Defence of the reformed Re- "ligion of the Church of England, as it is now "by Law eſtabliſh'd. 2. That an humble Ad- "dreſs be preſented to his Majeſty, to deſire him "to Iſſue forth his Royal Proclamation, to cauſe "the Penal Laws to be put in Execution againſt "all Diſſenters from the Church of England what- "ſoever." Had the Houſe fell in with this latter Vote, the King would have preferr'd the Perſecution of Diſſenters before his following Indulgence of them: But the previous Queſtion being, Whether the Queſtion ſhould be then put, for the Houſe to agree with the Committee? It was carry'd in the Negative; and the Houſe, with greater Wiſdom, Reſolved, Nemine Contradicente, "That this Houſe doth Acquieſce and intirely "rely and reſt wholly ſatisfy'd on his Majeſty's "gracious Word, and repeated Declaration to "ſupport and defend the Religion of the Church "of England, as it is now by Law eſtabliſh'd, "which is dearer to us than our Lives.

Attempts toward Popery.

The King made another early Attempt in favour of Popery, in the Houſe of Lords, where, within three Days after the King's Speech, a Bill was brought in, For reverſing the Attainder of the Lord Viſcount Stafford. The Lords, in a Grand Committee, made ſome alteration in the Title, a conſiderable amendment in the Preamble, and a ſmall amendment in the enacting Clauſe, and then the Bill was Ingroſs'd: And the Reaſon of the Reverſal was in theſe Words; Whereas it is now manifeſt, That the ſaid William late Viſcount Stafford was Innocent of the Treaſon laid to his Charge, and the Teſtimony whereupon he was found Guilty was Falſe; Be it Enacted, &c. It is remarkable, That before the Queſtion was put, for Ingroſſing the Bill, the Earls of Angleſey and Radnor, and ſome other Lords, deſired Leave to enter their Diſſents: (1.) "Becauſe "the Aſſertion in the Bill, of its being now ma- "nifeſt, that the Lord Viſcount Stafford died Inno- "cent, and that the Teſtimony by which he was con- "victed was Falſe, which were the ſole Grounds "and Reaſons given to ſupport the Bill, were "deſtitute of all Proof, Warrant, or Teſtimony "of Witneſs, or Matter of Record before them. "(2.) That the Record of the King's-Bench, read "at the Committee, concerning the Conviction, "laſt Term; of one of the Witneſſes for Perjury, "in collateral Points of the Proof of no affinity "to the Lord Stafford's Tryal, and given ſeveral "Years before, could be no Ground to Invalidate "the Teſtimony upon which the ſaid Viſcount "was convicted; which could never legally be by "one Witneſs, and was in Fact by the Judgment "of his Peers, on the Evidence of at leaſt three. "(3.) Becauſe the ſaid Judgment in the King's- "Bench, and the whole Proceeding, was unprecedented, Illegal and unwarranted, highly De- "rogatory to the Honour, Judicature and Autho- "rity of this Court, who have Power to queſti- "on and puniſh Perjuries of Witneſſes before "them, and ought not to be impos'd upon by the "Judgment of inferior Courts, or this Attainder "of a Peer invalidiated by Implication: And the "Popiſh Plot, ſo confirm'd and puniſh'd by his "late Majeſty and four Parliaments, after publick "ſolemn Devotion through the whole Kingdom, "by the Authority of the Church and State, to "be eluded, to the Arraignment and Scandal of "the Government; and only for the reſtoring "the Family of one Popiſh Lord, and all this be-

Reverſing the Attainder of the Ld Stafford.

2. A Sermon preached at St. Margaret's Weſtminſter, May 29, 1685. before the Honourable Houſe of Commons, by William Sherlock. D. D. Maſter of the Temple, and Chaplain in Ordinary to his Majeſty. Text Eccleſ. x. 17. Bleſſed art thou, O Land, when thy King is the Son of Nobles—treating, I. Of the divine Right of kingly Government. II. Of the noble Deſcent and Extraction of our King. III. The Advantages and Right of an Hereditary Monarchy.—— in his Concluſion thus.——Next to having our King of the Communion of the Church of England, we can deſire no more than to have a King who will defend it.——Far be it from me and from all loyal Subjects to diſtruſt theſe ſolemn and repeated Aſſurances which our King hath given us of this Matter.—— A Prince whoſe Mind is as great and noble as his Birth, who hates all mean Arts and equivocal Reſerves; and ſcorns either to diſſemble what he believes himſelf, or to ſpeak what he does not think.— III. A Sermon preach'd in the Cathedral Church of Briſtol, June 21. 1685. by Richard Thompſon, D. D. Dean of Briſtol, and Chaplain in Ordinary to his late Majeſty. Preached before and dedicated to the Duke of Beaufort, applauding his Grace's Loyalty for aſſerting his Majeſty's Intereſts; in defiance of the Excluding Bill and all the traiterous Votes and Deſigns of the aſſociated Commoners who promoted it.— Text Titus iii. 1. treating the Duty of Subjection, I. In active Obedience. II. In ſuffering patiently under Oppreſſion.—This Obedience not to be limited, neither 1. by a Caſe of Scandal; nor 2. by a ſcrupulous Conſcience; nor 3. by any antecedent or ſubſequent Vow.—— A Defence of his Majeſty's undoubted Right of Blood.——And yet if he had not been born a King worthy to be choſen. For if ever we had a Prince who came to the Throne in the full Ripeneſs and Maturity as well of Royal Virtues as Years, it is our preſent moſt gracious Sovereign King JAMES, a Prince whoſe Wiſdom, Juſtice, and Mercy (if Men will be but ſo merciful to themſelves as to do any thing that may deſerve it) a Prince, whoſe Munificence and Magnanimity, whoſe Sobriety and Temperance, whoſe Courage to dare bravely in the greateſt Dangers, equal to his Fortitude in bearing the worſt of Evils from the Hands of a ſort of Men, Devils amongſt us. A Prince whoſe firm Fidelity to his Friends, and whoſe Zeal for the Honour of the Engliſh Name and Nation are ſo notoriouſly known both at home and abroad, that even baſe Envy and Detraction have but rendred them the more acknowledged and induſtriouſly conſpicuous. But there is one Qualification which will gild and adorn his Crown, and add a Luſtre to his great Name in Chronicle, and that is his VERACITY; and King JAMES II. ſhall be known in the Ages to come by this appellative of KING JAMES THE JUST, the PRINCE OF HIS WORD, &c. the Application was for the People to make it their only Conteſt within the three Kingdoms, who ſhould be the forwardeſt in Duty to vow their Lives and Eſtates a Sacrifice in Defence of his IMPERIAL HIGHNESS and the PREROGATIVE.—— 4. A Sermon preach'd at Weſtminſter Abbey on the 26th Day of July 1685. being the Thankſgiving-day, &c. by Edward Pelling, Chaplain to his Grace the Duke of Somerſet. Text. Pſ. cxxiv. 6.— It hath been generally believed that a Prince who is in the Communion of another Church, muſt needs endeavour the Alteration of the eſtabliſh'd Religion, if it be different from his own. Men are ready to think it muſt neceſſarily be thus, and that it cannot poſſibly be otherwiſe. But this is a very great Miſtake, and to prove that it is ſo, I appeal, &c. —Our Prince has given us ſo many ſolemn Aſſurances— He never yet deceived any part of Mankind, and I am perſuaded never will.— 5. A Sermon preached in his Majeſty's Chapel-Royal upon the 26th Day of July 1685. by Henry Heſketh, Chaplain in Ordinary to his Majeſty. Printed by Command, London 1685. 4to.— In the Application, conſider of what a Church ye call your ſelves Sons. A Church that inſtructs you truly in your Duty to God and Cæſar too, and never knew how to diſpenſe with one under the Pretence of the other. A Church that teacheth Subjection and Loyalty WITHOUT ANY RESERVE, &c. 6. A Sermon preached on the Anniverſary Solemnity of the happy Inauguration of our dread Sovereign Lord King James II. in the Collegiate Church of Rippon, Febr. 6. 1685. by Thomas Cartwright, D. D. Dean of Rippon, and Chaplain in Ordinary to his Majeſty. London, 4to. 1685. [The whole Deſign of it is to make the Prince Irreſiſtible, and the Exerciſe of his Power unqueſtionable] who queſtioned Saul for ſlaying the Prieſts, and revolting to Idolatry? Who queſtioned Joram a Parricide, and Murderer of his Nobles? Or Joaſh for his Idolatry and ſlaying the High-Prieſt?——The King may make uſe of his PREROGATIVE, as God does of his OMNIPOTENCE upon ſome extraordinary Occaſion, &c. [Theſe Doctrines would have undone the People if they had believ'd them; but they only undid the King becauſe in a few Years he alone believed them.]

ing

1685. 1 Jac. II.

“ ing without any Matter judicially appearing be-“ fore their Lordſhips to introduce the ſame; and “ the Records of that Tryal not ſuffered to be read, “ for the Information of the Truth, before the “ paſſing of that Bill. (Laſtly,) For many other “ weighty Reaſons offer'd and given by divers “ Peers, in the the two Days Debates of this Bill “ both in the Committees and in the Houſe.

The next Day the Bill was read the third time, and paſs'd; but the foremention'd Lords repeated their Proteſtations againſt it, and were ſeconded by the Earls of Stamford and Clare, and the Lord Evre, “ Becauſe the Preamble of it was not amen-“ ded, and no defect in Point of Law alledged as a “ Reaſon for the reverſal of the Attainder.” A late Author ſays, That the Court fearing a ſtronger oppoſition to the Bill in the Lower Houſe, did not think fit it ſhould be ſent thither: But it was certainly ſent down, and on Friday, June 5. was read a firſt time, and order'd a ſecond reading; and was accordingly the next Day read a ſecond time, and committed to a Committee of the whole Houſe, where it dropt, and was heard of no more: To the immortal Honour of the Commons, who, tho' very forward to aſſiſt the King in all his Civil Intereſts, yet would by no means comply with the two firſt Projects of the Court; which were, the Perſecution of the Diſſenters, and extinguiſhing the belief of the Popiſh Plot.

The King begins to favour Popery with leſs reſerve.

Before the next meeting of the Parliament, the King was elevated with his late Victories, and preſum'd he could now bring the Commons more to his own Will and Pleaſure, and therefore he began to caſt off the Maſk, and to act without diſguiſe, what, till then, he had in ſome meaſure endeavour'd to diſſemble: And therefore, in his Speech, he told the Lords and Commons, “ That “ he would diſpenſe with the Teſt Act, which “ was the greateſt legal Barrier againſt Popery; “ That he would keep up a Standing Army, to “ be commanded by Popiſh Officers, whom he ex-“ preſſly recommended, in approving the Loyalty of “ their Principles by their Practices.

But the Commons were ſenſible, that theſe Methods were the Counſels of Popery, and were deſign'd to weaken, and, by degrees, alter the eſtabliſh'd Religion; and therefore the majority would by no means comply, and boldly argu'd, “ That to “ employ Officers not taking the Teſt, was, in ef-“ fect, a diſpenſing with all the Laws at once; “ That if thoſe Men were Loyal or Good, it muſt “ proceed from their Generoſity more than their “ Principles; That they ought to remember, It “ was Treaſon for any Man to be reconciled to the “ Church of Rome; and that the Pope, by Law, “ was declared an Enemy to this Kingdom, &c.

Courage of the Commons.

Biſhops moſt obſequious to the King.

The Prelates that were moſt in favour with the King, becauſe he thought them moſt obſequious to his Will, were the Biſhops of Durham, Ely, and Rocheſter; and yet hardly one of them would go in to all the following Meaſures of the Court: However, encourag'd and diſtinguiſh'd by the Favours of his Majeſty, on December 29. the Lord Biſhop of Durham was ſworn Dean of his Majeſty's Chapel-Royal, and within few Days after was admitted into the Privy-Council; and at the ſame time, the Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter was ſworn Clerk of the [a] Cloſet to his Majeſty.

1685. 1 Jac. II.

Caſe of the Diſſenters.

The Diſſenters thus repreſent their own Caſe; “ That the rigorous Uſage of the Diſſenters in the “ foregoing Reign, was owing to Popiſh Counſels “ they themſelves never doubted. —— They little “ expected better Treatment in this Reign, when “ barefac'd Popery lifted up its Head among us. “ But (ſay they) Wiſe is that Providence which “ Governs the World, which ſerves its own Ends, “ even by thoſe very Things whereby poor Mor-“ tals are moſt diſappointed. It is indeed enough “ to amaze any one, to obſerve the Meaſures of “ this Reign, with their Conſequences, whereby “ all Mankind were diſappointed. The Church “ Party not only expected to have the Diſſenters “ wholly under their Feet, but depended ſo much “ upon their Merits in their adherence to the “ Duke in his diſtreſs, and his poſitive Aſſuran-“ ces, that they were very ſecure, and thought “ the Day their own: But, on a ſudden, found “ their All in ſuch Danger, that without new “ Methods, their Religion and Liberty was “ gone. The Diſſenters expected not only grea-“ ter Rigours and Severities than before; but con-“ cluded they ſhould, if it were poſſible, be ex-“ tirpated: Whenas, to their aſtoniſhment, they “ found themſelves eas'd of their foregoing Hard-“ ſhips, and courted and careſs'd by thoſe who “ they knew would rejoice in their Ruin, and had “ left no Method unattempted in order to it. The “ Papiſts thought, by raiſing thoſe who had been “ ſo long depreſs'd, to have inflam'd them with “ Revenge againſt their Brethren; to have wi-“ den'd the Animoſities among Proteſtants, that “ they might All be thereby rendred the more ſure “ and ſpeedy Sacrifice to their Malice and Cruel-“ ty: And hereby they did but drive the conten-“ ding Parties the nearer to each other, and make “ them at laſt the more vigorous in their united “ Effort, to avert that common Ruin which hung “ over their Heads. So that all Parties were ſur-“ priz'd, and found themſelves miſtaken; but an “ infinitely wiſe GOD over-rul'd All for good.

Some diſingenuity in the Diſſenters.

There is ſome diſingenuity in this way of the Diſſenters repreſenting their own Caſe; for they ought to have acknowledged, that the firſt Deſign of Popery was to have ſet the Church upon a vigorous Suppreſſion of all Conventicles, and a fierce execution of all the Penal Laws. And had the Members of the Church of England in the Houſe of Commons fell in with this Advice of the Court, confirm'd by a Report from the Committee of Religion, the Diſſenters had not only been grievouſly oppreſs'd, but intirely deſtroy'd; when the Rebellion of Monmouth had generally made them more odious, and the King's Victory had made them more obnoxious to the Court. And even the Diſſenters, in the ſame Hiſtory, confeſs the diſpleaſure of the Court againſt them, and a diſpoſition to perſecute them, in this Account of the Proceedings againſt their great Leader, Mr. Baxter, (as follows:)

[a] The Biſhop of Rocheſter was pleas'd afterward to give an Account of the Service he was do do upon this Turn. He had lately been employ'd by Command of K. Charles II. to draw up a Hiſtory of the Conſpiracy, &c. or what they call'd the Fanatical Plot. And this Work (ſays his Lordſhip) ſtood in Preparation for the Preſs when the deplorable Death of that King happen'd. And ſhortly after, King James II. calling for the Papers, and having read them, and alter'd divers Paſſages, caus'd them to be printed by his own Authority, as is to be ſeen before the Book. I ſhall aſſure you of my having refus'd to write A Continuation of the ſame Hiſtory. For, my Lord, it was ſome time after the Duke of Monmouth's Overthrow and Execution that King James II. required one to undertake ſuch another Task, and preſently to ſet about a Second Part. To that Purpoſe his Majeſty gave me a Sight of Multitudes of original Papers, together with the Confeſſions of ſeveral Perſons then taken in England and Scotland. But finding the Innocence of divers Perſons of Worth and Honour touch'd in thoſe Papers, and by that time beginning vehemently to ſuſpect things were running apace towards the endangering our Laws and Religion, I muſt ſay I never could be induc'd by all his Majeſty's reiterated Commands to go on in that Work.

“ In 1685.

1 Jac. II.

Proceedings againſt Mr. Baxter.

“In the Reign of King James II. the ſame Methods were continu'd as had been uſed in his Brother's time. On February 28. Mr. Baxter was committed to the King's-Bench Priſon, by my Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys's Warrant, for his Paraphraſe on the New Teſtament, printed a little before; which was call'd a ſcandalous and ſeditious Book againſt the Government. On the ſixth of May, which was the firſt Day of the Term, he appear'd in Weſtminſter-Hall, and an Information was order'd to be drawn up againſt him. May 14. he pleaded Not Guilty to the Information. May 18. he being much indiſpos'd, mov'd, That he might have farther time given him for his Tryal; but it was deny'd him. He mov'd for it by his Councel: But Jeffreys cry'd out in a Paſſion, I will not give him a Minute's time more to ſave his Life. We have had (ſays he) to do with other ſort of Perſons, but now we have a Saint to deal with; and I know how to deal with Saints as well as Sinners. Yonder (ſays he) ſtands Oates in the Pillory, (as he actually did at that very time in the new Palace-Yard) and he ſays he ſuffers for the Truth; and ſo ſays Baxter: But if Baxter did but ſtand on the other ſide of the Pillory with him, I would ſay, two of the greateſt Rogues and Raſcals in the Kingdom ſtood there. On May 30. in the Afternoon he was brought to his Tryal, before the Lord Chief-Juſtice Jeffreys at Guildhall. Sir Henry Aſhhurſt, who could not forſake his own and his Father's Friend, ſtood by him all the while. Mr. Baxter came firſt into Court, and with all the Marks of ſerenity and compoſure, waited for the coming of the Lord Chief-Juſtice, who appear'd quickly after with great Indignation in his Face. He no ſooner ſate down than a ſhort Cauſe was call'd, and try'd: After which the Clerk began to read the Title of another Cauſe. You Blockhead you (ſays Jeffreys) the next Cauſe is between Richard Baxter and the King. Upon which Mr. Baxter's Cauſe was call'd. The Paſſages mention'd in the Information, were his Paraphraſe on Matth. v. 19. Mark iii. 6. Mark ix. 39. Mark xi. 31. Mark 12. 38, 39, 40. Luke x. 2. John xi. 57. and Acts xv. 2. Theſe Paſſages were pick'd out by Sir Roger L'Eſtrange, and ſome of his Companions: And a certain noted Clergyman (who ſhall be nameleſs) put into the Hands of his Enemies ſome Accuſations out of Rom. xiii, &c. as againſt the King, to touch his Life, but no uſe was made of them. The great Charge was, That in theſe ſeveral Paſſages, he reflected on the Prelates of the Church of England, and ſo was guilty of Sedition, &c. The King's Councel open'd the Information at large, with its Aggravations. Mr. Wallop, Mr. Williams, Mr. Rotheram, Mr. Attwood and Mr. Phipps were Mr. Baxter's Councel, and had been Fee'd by Sir Henry Aſhhurſt. Mr. Wallop ſaid, That he conceiv'd, the the Matter depending being a Point of Doctrine, it ought to be referr'd to the Biſhop his Ordinary: But if not, he humbly conceiv'd the Doctrine was innocent and juſtifiable, ſetting aſide the Innuendo's, for which there was no Colour, there being no Antecedent to refer them to, (i. e. no Biſhop or Clergy of the Church of England nam'd.) He ſaid, The Book accuſed, i. e. The Comment on the New Teſtament, contain'd many eternal Truths; but they who drew the Information were the Libellers, in applying to the Prelates of the Church of England, thoſe ſevere things which were written concerning ſome Prelates who deſerv'd the Character which he gave. My Lord (ſays he) I humbly conceive, the Biſhops Mr. Baxter ſpeaks of, as your Lordſhip, if you have read Church-Hiſtory, muſt confeſs, were the Plagues of the Church, of the World.——Mr. Wallop, (ſays the Lord Chief-Juſtice) I obſerve, you are in all theſe dirty Cauſes; and were it not for you Gentlemen of the Long Robe, who ſhould have more Wit and Honeſty, than to ſupport and hold up theſe Factious Knaves by the Chin, we ſhould not be at the Paſs we are.——My Lord, (ſays Mr. Wallop) I humbly conceive, that the Paſſages accus'd, are natural deductions from the Text.——You humbly conceive! (ſays Jeffreys) and I humbly conceive: Swear him, Swear him.——My Lord, (ſays he) under Favour, I am Councel for the Defendant; and if I underſtand either Latin or Engliſh, the Information now brought againſt Mr. Baxter upon ſo ſlight a Ground, is a greater Reflection upon the Church of England, than any thing contain'd in the Book he's accus'd for.——Says Jeffreys to him, Sometimes you humbly conceive! and ſometimes you are very poſitive! You talk of your Skill in Church-Hiſtory, and of your Underſtanding Latin and Engliſh: I think I underſtand ſomething of them as well as you; but, in ſhort, muſt tell you, That if you don't underſtand your Duty better, I ſhall teach it you.——Upon which Mr. Wallop ſate down.

“Mr. Rotheram urg'd, That if Mr. Baxter's Book had ſharp Reflections upon the Church of Rome by Name, but ſpake well of the Prelates of the Church of England, it was to be preſum'd that the ſharp Reflections were intended only againſt the Prelates of the Church of Rome.——The Lord Chief-Juſtice ſaid, Baxter was an Enemy to the Name and Thing, the Office and Perſons of Biſhops.——Rotheram added, That Mr. Baxter frequently attended divine Service, went to the Sacrament, and perſuaded others to do ſo too, as was certainly and publickly known; and had, in the very Book ſo charg'd, ſpoken very moderately and honourably of the Biſhops of the Church of England.——Mr. Baxter added, My Lord, I have been ſo moderate with reſpect to the Church of England, that I have incurr'd the Cenſure of many of the Diſſenters upon that account.——Baxter for Biſhops! (ſays Jeffreys) That's a merry Conceit indeed! Turn to it, turn to it.——Upon this Rotheram turn'd to a Place where 'tis ſaid, That great Reſpect is due to thoſe truly call'd to be Biſhops among us; or to that Purpoſe.——Ay, (ſaith Jeffreys) this is your Presbyterian Cant, Truly call'd to be Biſhops; that is, himſelf and ſuch Raſcals, call'd to be Biſhops of Kidderminſter, and other ſuch Places; Biſhops ſet apart by ſuch factious, ſnivelling Presbyterians as himſelf; a Kidderminſter Biſhop he means: According to the Saying of a late learned Author, [And every Pariſh ſhall maintain a Tythe-Pig Metropolitan.]——Mr. Baxter beginning to ſpeak again; ſays Jeffreys to him, Richard, Richard, Do'ſt thou think we'll hear thee Poiſon the Court? &c. Richard, thou'rt an old Fellow, an old Knave; thou'ſt written Books enough to load a Cart, every one as full of Sedition (I might ſay Treaſon) as an Egg is full of Meat: Hadſt thou been whipt out of thy writing Trade forty Years ago it had been happy. Thou pretendeſt to be a preacher of the Goſpel of Peace, and thou haſt one foot in the Grave; 'tis time for thee to begin to think what Account thou intendeſt to give. But leave thee to thy ſelf, and I ſee thou'lt go on as thou haſt begun; but, by the Grace of God, I'll look after thee. I know thou haſt a mighty Party, and I ſee a great many of the Brotherhood in corners, waiting to ſee what will become of their mighty Don; and a Doctor of the Party (looking 1685. 1 Jac. II. " to Dr. Bates) at your Elbow; but, by the Grace " of Almighty God, I'll cruſh you all.

". Mr. Rotheram ſitting down, Mr. Attwood " began to ſhew, That not one of the Paſſages " mention'd in the Information, ought to be " ſtrain'd to that Senſe which was put upon them " by the Innuendo's; they being more natural, " when taken in a milder Senſe: Nor could any " one of them be apply'd to the Prelates of the " Church of England, without a very forc'd Con- " ſtruction: To Evidence this, he would have " read ſome of the Text; but Jeffrsys cry'd out, " You ſhan't draw me into a Conventicle with your " Annotations, nor your ſnivelling Parſon neither. " ——— My Lord, (ſays Mr. Attwood) I con- " ceive this to be expreſſly within Roſwel's Caſe, " lately before your Lordſhip.———You conceive! " (ſays Jeffreys) you conceive amiſs; It is not. " ——My Lord (ſays Mr. Attwood) that I may " uſe the beſt Authority, permit me to repeat your " Lordſhip's own Words in that Caſe. ———No, " you ſhan't, (ſays he,) You need not ſpeak, " for you are an Author already, tho' you ſpeak " and write impertinently.———Says Attwood, I " can't help that, my Lord, if my Talent be no " better; but it is my Duty to do my beſt for my " Client. ———Jeffreys thereupon went on, in- " veighing againſt what Attwood had publiſh'd: " And Attwood juſtify'd it to be in defence of the " Engliſh Conſtitution; declaring, that he never " diſown'd any thing he had written. Jeffreys ſe- " veral times order'd him to ſit down, but he ſtill " went on: My Lord (ſays he) I have Matters " of Law to offer for my Client; and he proceed- " ed to cite ſeveral Caſes wherein it had been ad- " judged, that Words ought to be taken in the " milder Senſe, and not in the ſtrained, by Innu- " endo's. Well (ſays Jeffreys, when he had done) " You have had your ſay.———

" Mr. Williams and Mr. Phipps ſaid nothing, " for they ſaw it was to no purpoſe. At length " ſays Mr. Baxter himſelf, My Lord, I think I " can clearly Anſwer all that is laid to my Charge, " and I ſhall do it briefly: The Sum is contain'd " in theſe few Papers, to which I ſhall add a lit- " tle by Teſtimony.——But he wou'd not hear a " Word. At length the Chief-Juſtice ſumm'd up " the Matter in a long and fulſom Harangue; 'Tis " notoriouſly known, (ſays he) there has been a De- " ſign to ruin the King and Nation: The old Game " has been renew'd, and This has been the main In- " cendiary: He's as Modeſt now as can be; but time " was, when no Man was ſo ready at, Bind " your Kings in Chains, and your Nobles " in Fetters of Iron, and, To your Tents, " O Iſrael! Gentlemen, for God's ſake, don't let " us be gull'd twice in an Age, &c. And when " he concluded, he told the Jury, That if they " in their Conſcience believ'd he meant the Bi- " ſhops and Clergy of the Church of England, in " the Paſſages which the Information referr'd to, " they muſt find him guilty; and he could mean

" no Men elſe: If not, they muſt find him Not 1686. " guilty.——When he had done, ſays Mr. Baxter 2 Jac. II " to him, Do's your Lordſhip think any Jury will " pretend to paſs a Verdict upon me, upon ſuch a " Tryal?——I'll warrant you, Mr. Baxter, (ſays " he) don't you trouble your ſelf about that.——— " The Jury immediately laid their Heads together " at the Bar, and found him guilty.

" He had Subpœna'd ſeveral Clergymen, who " appear'd in Court, but were of no uſe to him, " through the Violence of the [a] Chief-Juſtice.

" The Tryal being over, Sir Henry Aſhhurſt led " Mr. Baxter through the Crowd, (I mention it " to his Honour) and convey'd him away in his " Coach. On June 29. following he had Judg- " ment given againſt him: He was Fined 500 " Marks, to lie in Priſon till he paid it; and be 1686. " bound to his good Behaviour for ſeven Years.

The King was now deep in the Meaſures of Popery and Arbitrary Power; but he carry'd them on much faſter in Scotland and Ireland, than he could yet do in England. He had laid a good Foundation in Scotland while he was Commiſſioner there for his Brother, and had ſettled the Miniſtry to his own Mind; and therefore immediately after his Acceſſion to the Throne he call'd a Parliament at Edinburgh on April 23. 1685. when the Lord High-Chancellor branded the Presbyterians with this Character: We have a new Sect among us, ſprung up from the Dunghil, the very Dregs of the People, who kill by pretended Inſpiration; and inſtead of, The Temple of the Lord, the Temple of the Lord, have nothing in their Mouths but the Word of God; wreſting that bleſſed Conveyance of his holy Will to us, to juſtifie a Practice ſuggeſted to them by him who was a Murderer from the beginning; who having modell'd themſelves into a Commonwealth, (whoſe Idol is that accurſed Paper the Covenant, and whoſe only Rule is to have none at all) have proceeded to declare themſelves no longer his Majeſty's Subjects, to forfeit all of us who have the Honour to ſerve him in any conſiderable Station, and will be ſure e'er long to do ſo by this great and Honourable Court. It is how to rid our ſelves of theſe Men, and of all who incline to their Principles, that we are to offer to his Majeſty our Advice, Concurrence, and utmoſt Aſſiſtance. Theſe Monſters being a publick Reproach upon the Nation, they render us unquiet and unſecure at home; they bring reproach upon our Religion, and are our great Plague, &c. Under this Fervour, the firſt Act paſſed was for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion; by which they meant an Extirpation of the Presbyterians; enforcing it by another Act concerning Witneſſes, wherein they Ordain, That ſuch as being cited to be Witneſſes, in the Caſes of Treaſon, Field, or Houſe Conventicles, or Church Irregularities, do refuſe to depone, they ſhall be liable to be puniſh'd as guilty of theſe Crimes reſpectively in which they refuſe to be Witneſſes. And in another Act, containing a tender of Duty, and offer of the Exciſe to his Majeſty, they do in the Preamble declare, Parliament in Scotland.

Character of the Presbyterians.

Severe Acts made againſt them.

[a] The learned and ſober Part of the Church Clergy were early apprehenſive of the Danger of the Church and of the Proteſtant Religion, and therefore publiſh'd many excellent Tracts againſt the Idolatry and particular Errors of the Church of Rome. Moſt of them by the Clergy of London with admirable Strength and Temper. And becauſe ſome might be affected more with Intereſt than for Conſcience ſake; there was publiſh'd a Letter written to Dr. Burnet, giving an Account of Cardinal Pool's ſecret Powers, from which it appears, that it was never intended to confirm the Alienation that was made of the Abbey Lands, ſubſcribed W. C. To which are added two Breves that Cardinal Pool brought over, and ſome other of his Letters that were never before printed. Proving that this whole Tranſaction of pretending to confirm the Title of Abbey Lands to the new Owners was a publick Cheat put on the Nation, or at leaſt on the Poſſeſſors of thoſe Lands. London, 1685. 4*to*. This put the Court upon employing a Hand to draw up the Aſſurance of Abbey, and other Church Lands in England to the Poſſeſſors cleared from the Doubts and Arguments raiſed about the Danger of Reſumption, in Anſwer to a Letter of a Perſon of Quality. By Nathaniel Johnſton, Dr. of Phyſick. Publiſh'd by his Majeſty's Command. Printed by Henry Hills, 1686. 8*vo*. Of which Dr. Gee in his Notes on the Memorial of Father Parſon, writes thus: I could heartily have wiſhed, that thoſe that furniſhed Dr. Johnſton with his Materials for writing his little Book about the Aſſurance of Abbey Lands to the Poſſeſſors here in England, had accommodated him alſo, as they might have done, with Father Parſon's Memorial. I am confident it would have ſav'd the Doctor ſomething elſe beſides his pains. How ridiculous his Attempts were then was ſhewed by an ingenious Hand in a ſingle Sheet of Paper, intitled, Abbey and other Church Lands not yet aſſured to ſuch Poſſeſſors as are Roman Catholicks. Father Parſons has knock'd their great Argument from the Pope's Confirmation in Queen Mary's Days on the head, when he declares, &c. p. 58.

" That

1686. 2 Jac. II. " That they owe all their Bleſſings to the ſacred " Race of their glorious Kings, and to the ſolid " abſolute Authority wherewith they were inveſt- " ed by the firſt and fundamental Law of their " Monarchy:——And therefore they again de- " clare to the World, That they abhor and deteſt, " not only the Authors and Actors of all preceding " Rebellions againſt the Sovereign, but alſo all " Principles and Poſitions which are contrary or " derogatory to the King's ſacred, ſupreme, Sove- " reign, abſolute Power and Authority, which " none, whether Perſons or collective Bodies, can " participate of any manner of way, or upon any " pretext, but in dependence of him, and by com- " miſſion from him," &c. —— The ſame Parlia- ment paſs'd two other Acts: The firſt, " To for- " bid the reſorting to Conventicles, and the Preach- " ing in them, under Pain of Death, and Con- " fiſcation of Goods:"——The other, " Making " it High-Treaſon to give or take the National " Covenant, as explained in 1638. or to write in " defence of it.——And the more effectually to introduce a deſpotick Power, they paſſed another Act, " To confirm and approve whatever had been " done by his Majeſty's Privy-Council, Juſtice- " Court, and thoſe Commiſſionated by them, in " Baniſhing, Impriſoning, or Fining ſuch as refu- " ſed to take and ſwear the Oath of Allegiance; " and to aſſert the Royal Prerogative in the utmoſt " extent of them.

The King attempts to repeal the Teſt and Penal Laws in Scotland.

The King preſuming from theſe Advances, that the Scots would eaſily comply with him in all things; it was amongſt them that he firſt attempted to re- peal the Penal Laws and Teſt made againſt Papiſts: And therefore having ſummon'd the Parliament of that Kingdom to re-aſſemble on the 29th of April, 1686. he wrote a Letter to them, wherein he re- commends to their ſpecial Care his innocent Roman Catholick Subjects, who had been always aſſiſtant to the Crown, in the worſt of Rebellions and Uſurpati- ons, though they lay under diſcouragements hardly to be named: Theſe he muſt heartily recommend to them, to the End, that as they had given good Experience of their true Loyalty, and peaceable Behaviour; ſo, by their Aſſiſtance, they might have the Protection of his Laws, not ſuffering them to lie under Obligations which their Religion could not admit of; by doing of which they would give a demonſtration of the Duty and Affection they had to him, and do him moſt ac- ceptable Service. And this Love he expected they would ſhew to their Brethren, as they ſaw him an indulgent Father to his People.

Ld Commiſſioner's Speech.

To engage the Parliament to comply with this Deſire of the King, the Earl of Murray, who was appointed Lord High-Commiſſioner upon this oc- caſion, made them a Speech, with the fineſt Words and Promiſes; " That his Majeſty would open a " free intercourſe of Trade with his Kingdom of " England; and had fully inſtructed his Envoy at the " Court of France, to recover the Poſſeſſion of the " ſeveral Privileges of the Scots Merchants Trading " with that Kingdom. And that his Majeſty would " redreſs the Trouble which the Scotch Merchants " met with in the matter of the Staple and Trade " with the Netherlands; and that he would remove " the Prejudice which that Kingdom ſuffer'd, by " the Importation of Iriſh Horſes, Cattle and Vi- " ctuals. And that the King was willing to grant " them an open Mint; the want of which was a " ſenſible Prejudice to the Traffick of the King- " dom: And that he would not at this time de- " mand any more Supplies or Impoſitions of any " kind: And that he would give his Royal Con- " ſent to all ſuch Laws and Regulations as might " ſecure exact Payment to the Country from all his " Officers and Soldiers in their Quarters. And, " laſtly, that he would graciouſly paſs his full and " ample Indempnity, with ſome few needful and " neceſſary Exceptions, for all paſt Crimes and " Miſdemeanors whatſoever." —— Concluding thus;——" And now, my Lords and Gentlemen, af- " ter ſo great and excellent Deſigns for promoting the " Honour, the Eaſe and Wealth of this Kingdom; " after his Reſolution to pardon ſo many Enemies, " and to free ſo many of the guilty from farther ſe- " vere, but juſt Proſecutions; his Majeſty believeth " that none will wonder, if he deſire, by the Advice " and Conſent of his great Council, to give Eaſe and " Security to ſome of his good Subjects of the Ro- " man Catholick Religion, who have been in all " times firm to the Monarchy, and ready to ſacrifice " their Lives and Fortunes for the Service and Se- " curity of the Crown. So that his Majeſty, who " ſo perfectly underſtands the Loyal and dutiful Tem- " per and Genius of Scotland, reſts fully perſuaded " of your ready and chearful Compliance with his " Royal Deſire and Inclination, tending ſo much to " your own Security, and his Satisfaction; and " that you will ſend me back to my Great and Royal " Maſter, with the good tydings of the continued and " dutiful Loyalty of this his ancient Kingdom: By " which you will ſhew your ſelves the beſt and moſt " affectionate Subjects, to the beſt, the incomparable " and moſt heroick Prince in the World.

As ſoon as the High-Commiſſioner had ended this Speech, the Creatures of the Court were for paſſing an Act in favour of the Papiſts, without looking farther than his Majeſty's deſire. But the wiſer part prevailed to have a Committee appoin- ted to inſpect the Statutes provided againſt the Ro- man Catholicks. After a full Examination of thoſe Laws, the Commiteee drew up a Bill, whereby " Papiſts were to be allow'd the exerciſe of their " Religion in private, without repealing thoſe for- " mer Acts which made them liable to Penalties " for publickly aſſembling together." The King would have been contented with this Step, for the preſent, hoping to have gain'd more by degrees. But however, this Bill being preſented to the Par- liament for their Approbation, they divided upon it, and many warm Speeches were made againſt it. The King being inform'd of theſe Debates, and ap- prehending the Miſcarriage of his Hopes, he diſ- patch'd an Expreſs to the Earl of Murray, with Orders to diſſolve, or at leaſt to prorogue the Par- liament.

Scots Parliament would not comply with the King's Deſire.

The King reſolves to do it by his own Power in an Arbitrary manner.

In February following the King was reſolved to accompliſh, by his ſole Power and Authority, what he could not effect with a National Conſent: And And therefore he ſent a Letter, dated February 12. to his Privy-Council of Scotland:

W*Hereas by our* Letter of the 21ſt of Auguſt laſt paſt, we were graciouſly pleas'd to inform you of our Deſigns, in order to the Eaſe of our Ro- man Catholick Subjects, (unto which we had your dutiful Anſwer in ſome Days thereafter;) we have now thought fit to publiſh theſe our Royal Intentions, and to give an additional Eaſe to thoſe of tender Con- ſciences: So to convince the World of our Inclinations to Moderation; and to evidence, that thoſe of the Clergy, who have been regular, are our moſt parti- cular Care. And though we have given ſome Eaſe to thoſe whoſe Principles we can with any ſafety truſt; we have at the ſame time expreſſed our higheſt In- dignation againſt thoſe Enemies of Chriſtianity, as well as Government and humane Society, the Field- Conventiclers, whom we recommend to you to root out with all the Severity of our Laws, and with the moſt vigorous Proſecution of our Forces; it being equally our and our Peoples Concern to be rid of them, &c.

With this Letter there was ſent a Proclamation for Liberty of Conſcience, and Suſpenſion of the Laws againſt Papiſts, of the ſame Date, running thus: ——" We have thought fit to grant, and by our

" Sovereign

1686. 2 Jac. II. "Sovereign Authority, Prerogative Royal, and "Abſolute Power, which all our Subjects are to "obſerve, without reſerve, do hereby give and "grant our Royal Toleration to the ſeveral Profeſ-"ſors of the Chriſtian Religion after-named, with "and under the ſeveral Conditions, Reſtrictions, "and Limitations after-mentioned. In the firſt "place we allow and tolerate the moderate Pres-"byterians to meet in their private Houſes, and "there to hear all ſuch Miniſters as either have or "are willing to accept of our Indulgence alla-"nerly, and none other.—— It is our Royal Will "and Pleaſure, That Field-Conventicles, and ſuch "as Preach or Exerciſe at them, or ſhall any wiſe "aſſiſt and connive at them, ſhall be Proſecuted "according to the utmoſt Severity of our Laws. "——In like manner, we do hereby tolerate Qua-"kers to Meet and Exerciſe in their Form, in any "Place or Places appointed for their Worſhip. "——And conſidering the ſevere and cruel Laws "made againſt Roman Catholicks (therein call'd "Papiſts) in minority of our Royal Grandfather "(of glorious Memory) without his conſent, and "contrary to the Duty of good Subjects, by his "Regents and other Enemies to their lawful Sove-"reign our Royal Great-Grand-Mother Queen "Mary (of bleſſed and pious Memory) wherein, "under pretence of Religion, they cloath'd the "worſt of Treaſons, Factions, and Uſurpations; "and made theſe Laws, not as againſt the Ene-"mies of God but their own: Which Laws have "been ſtill continued of courſe, without deſign of "executing them, or any of them, ad Terrorem, "only on Suppoſition, That the Papiſts relying "on an external Power, were incapable of Duty "and true Allegiance to their natural Sovereigns, "and rightful Monarchs:——We, of our certain "Knowledge, and long Experience, knowing, "That the Catholicks, as it is their Principles to "be good Chriſtians, ſo it is to be dutiful Sub-"jects; and that they had likewiſe, on all Occa-"ſions, ſhewn themſelves good and faithful Sub-"jects to us and our Royal Predeceſſors, by ha-"zarding, and many of them actually loſing their "Lives and Fortunes in their Defence (though of "another Religion) and the Maintenance of their "Authority, againſt the Violences and Treaſons of "the moſt violent Abettors of thoſe Laws; do "therefore, with Advice and conſent of our Privy-"Council, by our Sovereign Authority, Preroga-"tive Royal, and Abſolute Power aforeſaid, ſuſ-"pend, ſtop and diſable all Laws or Acts of Parli-"ament, Cuſtoms or Conſtitutions, made or exe-"cuted againſt any of our Roman Catholick Sub-"jects in any time paſt, to all intents and purpoſes "making void all Prohibitions therein mentioned, "Pains or Penalties therein ordained to be inflicted: "So that they ſhall in all things be as free in all re-"ſpects, as any of our Proteſtants Subjects whatſo-"ever, not only to exerciſe their Religion, but to "enjoy [a] all Offices, Benefices and others which "we ſhall think fit to beſtow upon them in all "time coming, &c.

Moſt Perſons who ſaw this Proclamation, could not but obſerve, that this Toleration of Proteſtant Diſſenters was purely for the ſake of the Popiſh Recuſants; and that the moderate Presbyterians had not ſo great a Liberty allow'd them as the Quakers had; becauſe this laſt Sect bore a nearer Affinity to the Papiſts, and were found to be more diſpos'd to the Will of a Popiſh Prince: And laſtly, that the much greater Indulgence granted to the Roman Catholicks, was not only in tenderneſs to them, but with the higheſt Commendation of them; and the wholſom Laws made againſt them, not only ſuſpended, but cenſur'd and arraign'd as Barbarous and Cruel. And yet the Lords of the Council in Scotland were inclin'd to anſwer, "That his Ma-"jeſty's Commands were exactly obey'd; and his "Royal Proclamation Printed and Publiſh'd, by "which his Majeſty had given a further Evidence "of his Favour and Goodneſs to all his Subjects. ——Concluding thus—We are very willing that your Majeſty's Subjects who are Peaceable and Loyal, may be at Eaſe and Security, notwithſtanding of their Profeſſion and private Worſhip; and do conceive, that ſuch of them as are or ſhall be employ'd by your Majeſty in Offices of Truſt, Civil or Military, are ſufficiently ſecured by your Majeſty's Authority and Commiſſion for their exerciſing the ſame. We return your Majeſty our moſt humble Thanks, for giving us your Royal Word, for maintaining the Church and our Religion as it is now eſtabliſh'd by Law; and reſt ſatisfy'd, believing your Majeſty's Promiſe to be the beſt and greateſt Security we can have.

The King is more eſpecially intent in promoting Popery in Ireland.

But it was principally in Ireland, where the King's Deſigns of eſtabliſhing Popery and Arbitrary Power appear'd without Diſguiſe, from the very beginning of his Reign. The Duke of Ormond was Lord-Lieutenant of that Kingdom, a Perſon of unſhaken Honour, and true Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion, and the Engliſh Intereſt; and therefore he was thought unfit to ſerve the preſent Government: So, about the end of March 1685. he receiv'd an Order from the Court, to deliver the Sword of State to the Lord Primate of Ireland and to the Earl of Granard, appointed by the King to be Lords-Juſtices. But before his Departure, the Duke labour'd with a generous Diligence to ſettle things on ſuch a Foundation, as that it might not be eaſie for the Papiſts to make a preſent Change, without a manifeſt Violation of the Laws and Conſtitutions of the Kingdom. There is a remarkable Paſſage that ſhews the great Spirit of that excellent Patriot; he appointed a Dinner at the New Hoſpital (a ſtately Fabrick by him erected near Dublin for poor Soldiers) and invited the Officers of the Army then in and about that City: After Dinner, he took a large Glaſs in his Hand, bid them fill it to the Brim with Wine, then ſtood up and call'd thus to the Company; Look here, Gentlemen; They ſay at Court, I am become an old doating Fool: You ſee my Hand does not ſhake; nor does my Heart fail; Nor do I doubt that I ſhall make ſome of my Enemies ſee their Miſtake: —— And ſo drank the King's Health.

The Duke, at his Arrival at the Engliſh Court, found himſelf in Diſpleaſure with the King; and had ſuch diſmal Apprehenſions of the Poſture of Affairs in Ireland, that it is thought to have broke his Heart, for he died ſoon after, of a great Age indeed; and yet till this very Turn, he had enjoy'd

Death of the Duke of Ormond.

[a] See ſome Reflections on his Majeſties Proclamation of the 12th of February, 1686. for a Toleration in Scotland, together with the ſaid Proclamation, wherein the King challenges an abſolute Power which all our Subjects are to obey without reſerve. 1686. 4*to*.

This Profeſſion of Indulgence and Toleration had come with ſome Grace, and ſome hopes of Sincerity from any Party of Men but the Papiſts, who were well known merely to pretend to it, in order to get the Power of Perſecution in their Hands. Some have thought that the Papiſts were never for Toleration before this Juncture; but indeed they were always ſo when they could ſerve the ſame Deſigns of their own by it. The Papiſts were for it in 1662, and in 1672; and even in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, while under Penal Laws, they ſet up Outcries for a general Toleration, and even complain'd of the Severities of Queen Mary; as among many other Teſtimonies appears in the Letter of Mr. A. C. Anthony Champneys. See Prieſt againſt the Jeſuites. 1602. 4*to*.

1686. 2 Jac. II. ſuch Health of Body, and Chearfulneſs of Mind, that in the Courſe of Nature he might have liv'd much longer.

Before his Grace left the Government, an Order came for Regulating the Council; which he left for the Juſtices to do: So upon his Departure the Privy-Council was immediately diſſolv'd, and moſt of the Engliſh that were active in the Proteſtant Cauſe were turn'd out; and though no Papiſts were immediately put in, yet it was not long before they made up the Major-part; and thoſe few Proteſtants that were left, ſeldom appear'd at the Board, as being unable to bear up againſt the ſtrongeſt Side.

The Iriſh [a] began now to appear in a National Body againſt the Engliſh, and daily charg'd them with Evil Deſigns againſt the King and Government. They were countenanc'd by the Privy-Council, who preſs'd the Lords Juſtices for Orders to impower Iriſh Papiſts, and other Creatures of theirs, to commit, without Bail, any Perſon accuſed. Theſe Proceedings made the Lords-Juſtices ſoon weary of their Government, and the Lord Granard wrote to England to be diſmiſs'd: But the Papiſts repreſented him as a Man fit to be kept in his Majeſty's Intereſt, being very prevalent in the North among the Scots Presbyterians, of which Perſuaſion his Lady was. So that King James wrote him a Letter with his own Hand, giving him Aſſurance, that nothing ſhould be acted prejudicial to the Proteſtant Intereſt, for which his Lordſhip was at that time reputed to be very zealous.

Monmouth's Rebellion gave a plauſible Opportunity to the Iriſh, more than ever, to contrive Plots, and to faſten them upon the Proteſtants; and to make the King ſo jealous of the Proteſtant Intereſt in that Kingdom, that he reſolv'd now to keep a Standing Army of Iriſh Papiſts. This could not be well done, without calling in all the Arms from the Hands of Proteſtants. To carry on this Deſign, the King and Council wrote over to the Lords-Juſtices, That there was Reaſon to believe that the Rebellion of Monmouth had been of that ſpreading Contagion, as to infect many, and delude more: It was not therefore ſafe for the Kingdom to have the Arms of the Militia diſpers'd abroad; but they would be in a greater Readineſs, for the Uſe of the Militia, and the Defence of the Country, to have them depoſited in the ſeveral Stores of each County.

Letter to the Lords Juſtices.

Upon theſe Inſtructions a Proclamation was iſſued out; and the Lord-Primate prevailing with the City of Dublin to bring in their Arms, that Precedent was ſoon follow'd by all the Country. The Proteſtants being thus diſarm'd, the next Deſign was to new-model the Army, which at that time conſiſted of about 7000 Men, all Proteſtants, zealous and faithful in the King's Service. For this Purpoſe they made uſe of Colonel Richard Talbot, a Man of all others moſt odious to the Engliſh Proteſtants, and one who had been named by Oates in his Narrative ſome Years before, as deſign'd for this ill Service: So that many before who believed little of the Popiſh Plot, did now give the greater Credit to it, and ſaid, That if Oates was an ill Evidence, he was certainly a good Prophet.

Riſe of Colonel Talbot.

—Talbot began with great Inſolence to purſue a Method, which was ſaid to have been deſign'd immediately before the Death of King Charles II. which was to diſplace all Officers that had been in the Parliament or Oliver's Army, and the very Sons of all ſuch. This the Duke of Ormond had Directions to proceed in; but he made no Progreſs in it, under pretence of gaining Time to find them out, but in reality, becauſe he foreſaw it was to make room for the Papiſts. Talbot having caſhier'd a great part of the Officers, came over into England, and brought with him one Neagle, a cunning Iriſh Lawyer, and inveterate Papiſt, who was conſtantly with Father Petre, and the reſt of the High Cabal. The Queen was altogether for their furious Counſels, but the King was not ſo violently inclin'd, being every Day adviſ'd by all his Popiſh Peers, not to proceed too faſt in the Revolution of Ireland, leſt thereby he ſhould ruin the general Intereſt of the Catholicks. However, Talbot was made Earl of Tyrconnel, with a Deſign of his immediate Return to Ireland in Quality of Lord-Lieutenant: To which Office [b] he had been recommended by Biſhop Tyrrell, though with ſome Reſerve, as being a Perſon confeſs'd to be odious to the Engliſh, and therefore not proper to be brought upon the Stage till Matters were come to a greater Maturity. The Lord Bellaſis was propoſed; but he was Infirm, and excus'd himſelf from what he thought would be a hard Work. At laſt, in Decemb. 1685. it was reſolved, that Tyrconnel ſhould return Lieutenant-General of the Army, and the Earl of Clarendon Lord-Lieutenant of that Kingdom.

Talbot is made Ld Tyrconnel.

Earl of Clarendon Ld Lieutenant of Ireland.

Tyrconnel executed his Commiſſion with great Fury, not only diſplacing more Officers of the Army, but alſo turning out the private Soldiers. His Will was his Law, and that purely Martial: He brought over Blank Commiſſions, ſign'd by the King, for any Names that he pleas'd to inſert; he did this in an inſulting barbarous Manner, turning off ſome Soldiers ſtript of their very Shirts, ſeizing the Horſes of ſome Officers and Troopers, and giving them Notes and Bills for not above Half their Pay, and commonly loading them with hard Words, and vile Reproaches. The moſt noted Officers that were turn'd out, were the Lord Shannon, Capt. Robert Fitz-Gerald, Capt. Richard Coot, and Sir George St. George, &c. In whoſe Places were put one Kernay, that would have murder'd King Charles II. Anderſon an obſcure Fellow, Sheldon a virulent Bigot, Graham, and others of the ſame Stamp. In ſhort, two or three hundred Engliſh Gentlemen, who had laid out their Fortunes in purchaſing their Military Poſts, were now Arbitrarily disbanded, and five or ſix thouſand private Soldiers ſent on Begging.

Tyrconnel in a manner Superior to him.

His Arbitrary and Cruel Proceedings.

However, theſe Diſcouragements of the Engliſh were in ſome meaſure alleviated by the Integrity of the Lord-Lieutenant, who was very faithful to the Proteſtants, and endeavour'd to revive their Spirits, by telling them of the great Aſſurances the King had given him of protecting their Religion. But indeed that Noble Earl ſoon found himſelf

The Proteſtants are encourag'd by the Ld Lieutenant.

[a] This Proſpect of Popery in Ireland put ſome worthy Perſons upon giving a Tranſlation of the whole Bible into the Iriſh Tongue, as the beſt Preſervative from the Deluſions of the Prieſts and Jeſuits. A Verſion of the Old Teſtament, to be added to the New which had been formerly publiſh'd, was now undertaken by the Care of Biſhop Marſh and Dr. Huntingdon, and printed at the ſole Charge of Robert Boyle Eſq; with an Engliſh Preface, by Dr. Doppin, Biſhop of Meath, at the Beginning of the Year 1686.

[b] See the Copy of a Letter of the Catholick Clergy of Ireland to King James II. in Favour and Commendation of the Earl of Tyrconnel, found among Biſhop Tyrrel's Papers in London; dated in July 1685, inſerted in the Appendix to the State of Ireland, by Dr. King, now Archbiſhop of Dublin.

While People were murmuring at the Breaches of the King's Promiſe, the Pulpits (ſaith Mr. Echard) tho' now more ſparing than ever, were not exempt from Time-Servers; particularly that of Rippon, where Dr. Cartwright, the Dean, a Man Puritanically educated, took the Liberty to give a right Notion of King James's Promiſes, and in effect tells the World, That the King's Promiſes were free Donatives, and ought not to be too ſtrictly examin'd, or urg'd; and that they muſt leave his Majeſty to explain his own Meaning in them. This Gloſs, as Dr. King tells us, ſo pleaſed his Majeſty, that he ſoon after rewarded the Author with the Biſhoprick of Cheſter, tho' very unfit for that Character.

1686. 2 Jac. II. himſelf not half a Governor, for Tyrconnel aſſum'd more than a Share in the Adminiſtration of all Affairs. This Paſſage is remarkable: Upon a Sunday Morning his Lordſhip going to Church, perceiv'd an Iriſh Officer he never ſaw before commanding his Guard of Battle-Axes, which very much ſurpriz'd him; whereupon he made a ſtop, demanding who he was, and who put him there?— The Iriſh-man, as much frighted as the Lord-Lieutenant was diſturb'd, in broken Expreſſions told his Excellency, he was a Captain put in by the Lord Tyrconnel.——His Excellency demanding of him, when?—He reply'd, That Morning.— His Excellency bid 'em call the former Captain, and diſmiſs this of Tyrconnel's. The next Day the Lord-Lieutenant queſtion'd Tyrconnel for this Action:——Who reply'd, He did nothing but by the King's Orders.——To which the Earl of Clarendon return'd, That whilſt his Majeſty entruſted him with the Government, he would not be diſpos'd by his Lieutenant-General.——Complaints on both Sides were made to the King, and the mutual Diſcontents grew every Day greater; the Lord-Lieutenant thinking himſelf Supreme, and the Lieutenant-General daring to be Superior, who therefore went over into England, and conſulted with his Party how to obtain the ſole Government of Ireland. The Queen, Father Petre, and the Earl of S——d very much importun'd the King in his Favour; but the Popiſh Lords were ſtill againſt it, and thought his Furiouſneſs would ruin all, and yet they were extremely deſirous to have Ireland in the Abſolute Power of the Papiſts: For when ſome of the moſt conſiderable of them, upon an Apprehenſion of bringing a Storm upon themſelves in England, were for addreſſing the King to have liberty to ſell their Eſtates, and that his Majeſty would intercede with the King of France to provide for them in his Dominions;—The King took Occaſion to tell them, That before their Deſires came to him, he had often thought of them, and had provided a ſure Sanctuary and Retreat for them in Ireland, if all thoſe Endeavours ſhould be blaſted in England, which he had made for their Security, and of the Succeſs whereof he had not yet reaſon to deſpair.

Oppreſs'd by Tyrconnel.

Deſigns of removing the Earl of Clarendon.

The Earl of Rocheſter having been by Accident inform'd of what was then in Agitation, he immediately acquainted the King with it, who abſolutely deny'd that there was any Intention of removing his Brother from the Government of Ireland; but, on the contrary, aſſur'd him he was very well ſatisfy'd with his Conduct there. Within ſome few Days the Lord-Treaſurer receiv'd from his Brother the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland the ſame Intimations about his Removal. Upon which he again apply'd to his Majeſty, who as poſitively deny'd the whole Matter as he had done before; and to remove the Jealouſies of the Lord-Lieutenant, wrote a Letter to him, as was ſaid, with his own Hand, aſſuring him, He had yet no Thoughts, and he believ'd never ſhould have, whilſt both of them liv'd, to call him away from the Government of Ireland. However, about Chriſtmas, it was by the King in Council reſolved, That the Earl of Tyrconnel ſhould be made Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland: And it was ſaid that the Lord-Preſident carry'd it for him againſt a great Oppoſition of the Board.

Reſolved to make Tyrconnel Lieutenant.

The Confirmation of this diſmal News ſtruck the Proteſtants in Ireland with great Damp and Terror: Many of them that had Patentee-Employments, obtain'd Licenſe, under the Broad-Seal, to come away; and many of the Merchants call'd in their Effects, and left the Kingdom. His Excellency the Earl of Clarendon did all he could to aſſiſt the poor Proteſtants in covering them from the impending Storm; and it was interpreted by many as a ſignal Act of Providence, that after Tyrconnel was come to Holyhead, he was there detain'd full ſixteen Days by contrary Winds: But he at laſt arriv'd at Dublin on Feb. 6. And though his Appearance was with a ſad Conſternation to the Proteſtants, yet Care was taken to publiſh, by Authority, That there never was ſeen ſo great a Concourſe of People at any Chief-Governor's Landing as at his, expreſſing their general Satisfaction by loud Acclamations as he paſs'd through the Streets, by Ringing of Bells, and by Bonfires at Night throughout the City, together with all other publick Demonſtrations of Joy. 1686. 2 Jac. II.

A great Damp to the Proteſtants.

On Feb. 12. the Earl of Clarendon cauſed the Privy-Council to meet at the Palace of the Lord Archbiſhop of Dublin, and did there deliver up the Sword of State to the Earl of Tyrconnel, with a memorable Speech; wherein he told him, "That "the Miſunderſtandings and Feuds of that King-"dom were Things much to be lamented, and he "could wiſh the Occaſion of them were remov'd, "which was this; viz. That the Engliſh of that "Kingdom had been repreſented as a Company "of Diſſaffected and Fanatical People.—That this "was a hard Charge, if it were true: But from "what he had learn'd, both by his own Obſer-"vation, and the Information of others, he be-"liev'd them to be as loyal Subjects, and gene-"rally as true Sons of the Church of England, as "any it has. That it is a Church that can make "it her Brags, That in all the Conſpiracies, Plots "and Rebellions, that ever have been againſt the "King, not one Orthodox Member of her Com-"munion has been any way in 'em: That he pro-"feſs'd himſelf to be of that Church, and count-"ed it his greateſt Happineſs that he was ſo. That "as for the Proteſtants of that Kingdom in parti-"cular, he could ſay in their favour, That when "the Reſtoration of the King was oppos'd in "England, they were the Men that us'd their in-"defatigable Induſtry to effect it. That he de-"ſign'd to tell this to the King, and hop'd, by "his Lordſhip's Prudence, theſe Calumnies and "Aſperſions that had lain upon them would be "removed; and that as they and the Roman Ca-"tholicks were the Subjects of one Prince, ſo they "would unanimouſly agree in their Love of one "another, and in promoting his Honour and Hap-"pineſs. He clos'd his Speech, with telling him, "That as he received the Sword in Peace, ſo he de-"liver'd it up in Peace.——

Earl of Clarendon delivers up the Government of Ireland.

Tyrconnel's Anſwer was to this Effect: "That "it was the King's Deſign, and conſequently his "Command to him, to govern that Kingdom ac-"cording to the Laws of it, without any Partia-"lity; and therefore he declar'd that all Men "ſhould enjoy the Exerciſe of their Religion and "Properties according to Law. That he knew "there were great Fears in the Kingdom; ſome "removing their Goods, others calling in their "Money: What the Reaſon of it was, he could "not imagine; but, for his own part, he would "not have any diſtruſt the King's Protection. That "the Lord Clarendon had hinted, that he would "have no Diſtinction of Names, or any thing elſe "that might breed Jealouſies among the People.— "Which he would make it his whole Buſineſs to "prevent; for this was the Command of the King, "who was both the Greateſt and Juſteſt Prince "that rul'd theſe Kingdoms, &c."——And further, to ſuppreſs, if poſſible, the general Diſcontent of the Engliſh Proteſtants, the New Lord-Deputy publiſh'd a Proclamation on Feb. 21.

"WHereas we are inform'd, that ſeveral diſ-"affected Perſons within this his Ma-"jeſty's Kingdom, have been of late very induſtri-"ous, by falſe Reports and malicious Inſinuations, "to ſuggeſt to many of his Majeſty's Loyal Sub-

Tyrconnel Publiſhes a Proclamation.

S "jects,

1686. 2 Jac. II.

" jects, as if we his Majeſty's chief Governor intended to govern, under his Majeſty, here, otherwiſe " than by the known Laws of this Land of Ireland; and as if ſome of his Majeſty's Loyal " Subjects ſhould ſtand in hazard of being diſturb'd and diſquieted in their juſt Liberties, " Properties, and other Rights due to them by " Law: Which Calumnies have been heighten'd " and encourag'd by ſome few Fiery Spirits in the " Pulpits, by taking upon them to treat of Matters that do not lie within their Province, &c. " We therefore publiſh and declare, That we " will, by the Grace of God, apply all our Care " and Induſtry to yield and exact a perfect Obedience to his Majeſty's Commands, and to take " diligent Care that all his Majeſty's Subjects " within this Kingdom, of what Perſuaſion in " Religion ſoever they be, ſhall be protected in " their juſt Rights and Properties due to them by " Law, and in the free Exerciſe of their Religion, provided they perſevere in their Duty and " Allegiance to his Majeſty, without giving any " Occaſion of Diſturbance to the Peace of the " Kingdom, &c.——But as this fair Pretenſion of Tyrconnel was not at all believ'd, ſo it was immediately confuted by his own Practice.

Attempts of Arbitrary Power and Popery in England.

While Things were thus prepar'd and diſpos'd in Scotland and Ireland, the like Meaſures were concerted for reducing England to an Arbitrary Government. The King was reſolv'd to have no other Sitting Parliament, till he could form this or a new one to his own Mind and Pleaſure. And therefore, as on Nov. 20. the Parliament, under the King's Diſpleaſure, had been prorogued to Feb. 10. following; ſo it was on that Day, by Commiſſion, farther prorogued to the 10th Day of May 1686. and even then again prorogued to the 22d of Nov. next; and from that time farther prorogued to Feb. 15. and then prorogued till April 28. 1687. In the mean time the King reſolv'd to have Weſtminſter-Hall entirely at his own Command, and fill'd only with thoſe Judges who ſhould aſſert his diſpenſing Power, i. e. ſhould execute, or break, the Laws, when and how his Majeſty pleas'd. To this End, his Majeſty Cloſeted the old Judges; and before he would make any new ones, he entred into a profeſs'd Bargain with them, that they ſhould maintain his Prerogative of Diſpenſing with the Penal [a] Laws and Teſt. The firſt Man the King attempted to perſuade, was Sir Thomas Jones, Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, who ſhew'd a great Averſeneſs, and at laſt told the King plainly, He could not do it.—The King anſwer'd, He would have twelve Judges of his own Opinion.—To which Sir Thomas reply'd, That poſſibly he might find twelve Judges of his Opinion, but he would ſcarce find twelve Lawyers to be ſo.——Upon this Reluctancy of the Judges, on Apr. 21. Sir Thomas Jones, Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, William Mountague Eſq; Lord Chief-Baron of the Exchequer, Sir Job Charlton, one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas, and Sir Edward Nevill, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, had all their Quietus: And in their Places, Sir Henry Bedingfield (one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas) was ſworn Lord Chief-Juſtice of the ſame Court, Sir Edward Atkyns (one of the Barons of the Exchequer) was ſworn Lord Chief-Baron, Sir Edward Lutwich (Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter) was ſworn one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas, and Richard Heath Eſq; (Serjeant at Law) was made one of the Barons of the Exchequer. Yet, upon the humble Petition of Sir Job Charlton, ſo diſplac'd, his Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute him Chief-Juſtice of Cheſter.

The Old Judges are Cloſeted.

The beſt of them turn'd out.

Call of New Serjeants.

Two Days after, there was a Call of Serjeants at Law: Sir John Holt Recorder of London, Sir Ambroſe Philips, Chriſtopher Milton Eſq; John Powell Eſq; John Tate Eſq; William Rawlinſon Eſq; William Killingworth Eſq; Hugh Hodges Eſq; Thomas Geers Eſq; and George Hutchins Eſq; who gave Rings with this Motto, Deus, Rex, Lex: And to give the Reputation of Law to the Court, Sir John Holt and Sir Ambroſe Phillips were made the King's Serjeants. But within few Days, Chriſtopher Milton, a profeſs'd Papiſt, was knighted, and made one of the Juſtices of the Exchequer; Sir John Powell one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas, and Sir Thomas Powys Sollicitor-General, in the Place of Heneage Finch Eſq; on Octob. 22. His Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon another Popiſh Lawyer, Richard Allibone of Grays-Inn Eſq; and to make him one of his Counſel at Law, and ſoon after a Judge.

The Privy Council New modell'd.

His Majeſty was pleas'd to model the Privy-Council, in much the ſame manner as he had the Benches in Weſtminſter Hall: For at Hampton-Court, on July 17. the Earl of Powys, the Lord Arundel of Wardour, the Lord Bellaſis, and the Lord Dover, all known and zealous Papiſts, were ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council, and accordingly took their Places at the Board, and on Octob. 8. the New Earl of Tyrconnel was admitted to the ſame Honour.

Severities on ſome Witneſſes of the Popiſh Plot.

Though the King for Popularity and Protection of the Papiſts, had reſolv'd upon indulgence to the Diſſenters, and intended to make all Parties quiet, that the Popiſh Party might the more eaſily prevail; yet ſome Severities were exercis'd to create a continual Fear, of not offending the Government. On May 14. Miles Prance was brought to the King's Bench, upon an Information exhibited againſt him, for willful and malicious Perjury, in the Evidence he gave at the Tryals of Green, Berry and Hill, relating to the Murther of Sir Edmund-Bury Godfrey. He was perſuaded to plead Guilty: And being brought again to the King's-Bench on June 15. he was prevail'd on to declare his hearty Sorrow and Repentance for his heinous Offence, and then receiv'd this Judgment; " That he pay a Fine of " an hundred Pounds; That he be brought on " Monday next to all the Courts of Weſtminſter " with a Paper on his Head declaring his Offence; " and that he ſtand the ſame Day in the Pillory " before Weſtminſter-Hall Gate, and on the Wedneſday following at the Royal Exchange, and on " Monday following at Charing-Croſs; and that he " be Whipt from Newgate to Tyburn; and committed in Execution until he had paid the Fine.

Mr. Edward Whitaker had been Convicted in Eaſter-term, 1682. for juſtifying the Rebellion of [a] The great Scandal upon the Benches in Weſtminſter-Hall, was the delivering of Judgment by one or two of the Judges, who pretended to a like Opinion of their abſent Brethren, who afterward denied their Concurrence in it. Sir John Hawles obſerv'd in his Remarks on Mr. Wilmer's Tryal, when the Judgment againſt the City was given, it was done by two Judges only, and no Reaſon of that Judgment rendred; whereof Wythens, who was one, I think heard but one Argument in the Caſe. It is true, they ſaid Raymond, when alive, was of the ſame Opinion; and ſaid, Saunders, who was then paſt his Senſes, was of the ſame Opinion; tho' I was told by one, who was preſent when the two Juſtices came to aſk his Opinion in the Matter, he had only Senſe enough to reproach them for troubling him about the Matter, when they were ſenſible he had loſt his Memory. And to ſay Truth, the delivering the Senſe of an abſent Judge, tho' it hath been ſometimes practis'd, is not allowable; for ſometimes they deliver another Opinion than what the abſent Judge is of. Judge Wythens did ſo in ſeveral Caſes, when he deliver'd the Opinion of Sir Edward Herbert, which Sir Edward Herbert himſelf afterwards in open Court diſown'd. Judge Holloway ſerv'd Judge Powell the ſame Trick, if the laſt ſaid true.

1686. 1 Jac. II.

Forty One, and the Murther of King Charles I. and flying for the ſame, had abſconded ever ſince. Mr. Attorney-General in Michaelmas-term, moved for Judgment againſt him; and the Court adjudged "him, "To pay a Fine of a Thouſand Marks, "and remain in Priſon (when taken) till the ſame "be paid.

Soon after, Mr. Attorney-General moved the Court of King's-Bench for Judgment againſt George Speake Eſq; Convicted for a Riot, and for reſcuing John Trenchard Eſq; from his Majeſty's Meſſengers, who had a Warrant to apprehend him for High Treaſon. And the Court adjudged him, "To pay "a Fine of two Thouſand Marks.

But it ſeems, the Man who moſt provok'd the Government was Mr. Samuel Johnſon, a Miniſter of the Church of England, who had been Author of a very Rational Treatiſe againſt Paſſive Obedience, under the Title of [Julian the Apoſtate.[a]] He had now the Courage to write An Addreſs to the Engliſh Proteſtants in King James's Army, (as follows:)

Gentlemen,

Mr. Samuel Johnſon's Addreſs to the Engliſh Soldiers.

Next to the Duty we owe to God, which ought to be the principal Care of Men of your Profeſſion, who carry your Lives in your Hands, and often look Death in the Face, in the Service of your native Country, wherein you drew your firſt Breaths, and breathe a free Engliſh Air: Now I deſire you to conſider, how you will comply with theſe two main Points, by engaging in the preſent Service. Is it, in the Name of God, for his Service, that you have join'd your ſelves with Papiſts? Who indeed muſt fight for the Maſs-Book, but will burn the Bible; and who ſeek to extirpate the Proteſtant Religion with your Swords, becauſe they cannot do it with their own. And will you be aiding and aſſiſting to ſet up Maſs-Houſes, to erect that Kingdom of Darkneſs and Deſolation amongſt us, and to train up all our Children in Popery! How can you do theſe things, and call your ſelves Proteſtants!

What Service can you do your Country, by being under the Command of French and Iriſh Papiſts, and by bringing the Nation under a foreign Yoke? Will you help them to make forcible Entry into the Houſes of your Country-men, under the name of Quartering; contrary to Magna Charta, and Petition of Right? Will you be aiding and aſſiſting to all the Murther and Outrages which they ſhall commit by their void Commiſſions, which were declared Illegal, and ſufficiently blaſted by both Houſes of Parliament, if there had been any need of it? For it was very well known before, that a Papiſt cannot have a Commiſſion, but by Law is utterly diſabled and diſarm'd. Will you exchange your Birthright of Engliſh Laws and Liberties, for Martial and Club-Law; and help to deſtroy all others, only at laſt to be eaten up your ſelves? If I know you well, as you are Engliſh-men, you hate and ſcorn theſe things. Therefore be not unequally yok'd with idolatrous and bloody Papiſts: Be valiant for the Truth, and ſhew your ſelves Men[b].

The ſame Conſiderations are humbly offer'd to all Engliſh Seamen, who have been the Bulwark of this Nation, againſt Popery and Slavery, ever ſince 1588.

Upon this, in Trinity-Term, an Information of High-Miſdemeanor was brought againſt him in the King's-Bench, for Writing and Publiſhing two moſt ſcandalous and ſeditious Libels, to ſtir up his Majeſty's Subjects to Rebellion. Of which he was convicted: And in the next Term the Court awarded this Judgment againſt him, "That he ſtand in "the Pillory on Monday next at Weſtminſter, on "Wedneſday following at Charing-Croſs, and the "Monday after at the Royal-Exchange; that he "pay a Fine of five hundred Marks; and that he "be whipt from Newgate to Tyburn. Before his Suffering, for a pretence of Reſpect to the Gown, he was to be degraded; and accordingly, on Nov. 20. he was brought before the Lords the Biſhops of Durham, Rocheſter, and Peterborough, Commiſſioners appointed by his Majeſty to exerciſe all manner of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction within the Dioceſe of London, during the Suſpenſion of the Lord Biſhop of London, who were met, with ſeveral of the [c] City Divines, in the Chapter-Houſe of St. Paul's; where the ſaid Mr. Johnſon is ſaid, According to the Eccleſiaſtical Laws, in a full Court, to have receiv'd Sentence of Degradation, and to have been degraded and diveſted accordingly; and deliver'd over, as a mere Lay-Perſon, into the Hands

Severe Sentence on Mr. Samuel Johnſon.

[a] See ſome Memorials of the Reverend Mr. Samuel Johnſon, prefix'd to a Collection of his Works, Lond. 1710. fol. He had been Domeſtick Chaplain to the Noble Lord Ruſſel, and it was profeſſly to promote the Bill of Excluſion, that he wrote his Julian the Apoſtate, with a ſhort Account of his Life; and a Parallel betwixt Popery and Paganiſm, 8vo. wherein he expos'd the Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience, and diſcover'd the want of Sincerity in the Advocates of it, ſhewing the great Difference betwixt the Caſe of the Primitive Chriſtians who had the Laws againſt them, and ours who had the Laws on our Side. Dr. Hickes wrote his Jovian in Anſwer to it, and Mr. Johnſon reply'd in a Book intitled, Julian's Arts to undermine and extirpate Chriſtianity; printed in 1683, yet was not publiſh'd. He was examin'd for writing and ſuppreſſing of it; illegally committed Aug. 23. 1683. Proſecuted for another Cauſe, the writing his former Book of Julian, condemn'd in a Fine of 500 Marks, and to be committed Priſoner till he pay it. During his Confinement, he publiſh'd ſeveral Pieces, which after the Revolution he collected into a Volume, and call'd it, A Second five Years Struggle againſt Popery and Tyranny.

[b] Mr. Johnſon himſelf gives this Account: When we had a formidable Army in the Bowels of the Kingdom, and no Occaſion for them, I was perſuaded it was neceſſary to make ſome Application to the Proteſtant Soldiers to prevent, if poſſible, any miſchievous Attempt. For this Purpoſe, as they were marching to their firſt Company at Hounſlow Heath I drew up a ſhort Memorandum of their Duty to their Religion and Country, call'd An humble and hearty Addreſs to all the Engliſh Proteſtants in the preſent Army. And after about a Thouſand of them were diſpers'd, both the Impreſſion, as well as my ſelf, fell into their arbitrary and tyrannous Hands, where the Barbarities and intolerable Indignities to an Engliſh Freeman, which I then ſuffer'd, are ſufficiently known.

Mr. Hugh Speke in a Secret Hiſtory of the happy Revolution, 1715. 8vo. ſays that Mr. Johnſon was in the ſame Priſon with himſelf, and it was by his Advice that Mr. Johnſon penn'd ſeveral Pieces, and particularly upon his ſuggeſtion, this Advice to the Army, of which Paper when printed, Mr. Speke caus'd twenty thouſand to be diſperſed in one Night amongſt King James's Troops at Hounſlow; and as many more all over the Kingdom the very ſame Night.---And that Mr. Johnſon was betrayed by one Bellamy, then a Hoſier in the Borough of Southwark.

[c] In the Memorials of Mr. Johnſon it is ſaid, that at the Degradation in the Chapter-Houſe of St. Pauls, Dr. Sherlock and other Clergy-men attended, but Dr. Stillingfleet then Dean of St. Paul's, refuſed to have any hand in it.---He told thoſe Divines in the moſt pathetick manner, It could not but grieve him to think, that ſince all he had writ was deſigned to keep their Gowns on their Backs, they ſhould be made the unhappy Inſtruments to pull off his. And begg'd them to conſider, whether they were not making Rods for themſelves. When they came to the Formality of putting a Bible in his hand, and taking it from him again, he was much affected, and parted with it with Difficulty, kiſſing it and ſaying with Tears, that they could not however deprive him of the Uſe and Benefit of that Sacred Depoſitum. It happen'd they were guilty of an Omiſſion in not ſtripping him of his Caſſock, which as ſlight a Particular as it might ſeem, render'd his Degradation imperfect, and afterwards ſav'd him his Benefice.

of

of the ſecular Officer, to undergo the Puniſhments adjudged to him.

The King did not only Cloſet his Judges and Officers, upon the Queſtion of the Penal Laws and Teſt, but he ſollicited his Prime-Miniſters to be reconcil'd to the Church of Rome. His Majeſty firſt undertook to manage the Earl of Sun——d, who is ſaid to have been very obſequious to the King's Deſire, and to have bowed low at the Popiſh Altar, though he did not care to be formally reconciled (as the Term was) to the Church of Rome. What the Tenor of that Diſcourſe was which the King had with him, was never known; but however, Father Petre is ſaid to have extremely magnfy'd the Earl's Obedience, at a Meeting with the Jeſuits; adding, That it was neceſſary for him as yet to appear a Proteſtant, for weighty Reaſons of State [a].

The King endeavours to reconcile his Prime Miniſters to his own Religion.

The King's next Sollicitation was to the Earl of Rocheſter, for whom the King had a particular Affection and Eſteem, not only as his Brother-in-Law, but as his faithful Servant, on whom he had therefore beſtow'd the Place of Lord High-Treaſurer of England, upon his firſt advancement to the Throne: Yet it ſeems, nothing could maintain the Earl in this Poſt, without changing his Religion, and embracing the King's, which, by this time, was become almoſt the only Means of gaining or keeping Preferment. His Lordſhip being preſt and fatigu'd by the King's Intreaties, told his Majeſty, "That to let him ſee it was not "through any Prejudice of Education, or Obſtinacy, that he perſevered in his Religion, he "would freely conſent to hear ſome Proteſtant "Divines diſpute with ſome Popiſh Prieſts, and "promis'd to ſide with the Conquerors." Thereupon the King appointed a Conference to be held at Whitehall, at which his Majeſty and ſeveral Perſons of Honour were preſent with the Earl of Rocheſter. The Proteſtant Champions were, Dr. Simon Patrick (now Lord Biſhop of Ely;) and Dr. William Jane, Profeſſor of Divinity in Oxford. Thoſe on the Popiſh Side, were one Gifford, a Doctor of the Sorbonne; and Mr. Tilden, who having turn'd Roman Catholick at Lisbon, went under the Name of Dr. Godden: And the Subject of their Diſpute was, The Rule of Faith, and, The proper Judge in Controverſies. This Conference was very long; and at laſt the Romiſh Doctors were preſs'd with ſo much Strength of Reaſon and Authority againſt them, that they were really put to Silence. Whereupon the Earl of Rocheſter openly declared, "That the Victory the Proteſtant Di-"vines had gain'd, made no Alteration in his "Mind, being before-hand convinc'd of the Truth "of his Religion, and firmly reſolv'd never to "forſake it.——His Majeſty going off abruptly, was heard to ſay, He never ſaw a bad Cauſe ſo well, nor a good one ſo ill maintain'd.——And the Jeſuits were ſo exaſperated againſt the Lord Treaſurer for refuſing to be a Convert, that one of them ſaid, That that Lord muſt be anathematiz'd; and that the King would never proſper while ſuch a Heretick was near him.——Within few Days after, the King ſent to the Earl for his Commiſſion of High-Treaſurer; which he preſently reſign'd: And in the beginning of January his Majeſty was pleas'd to Conſtitute John Lord Bellaſis, Sidney Lord Godolphin, Henry Lord Dover, Sir John Ernle (Chancelor of the Exchequer,) and Sir Stephen Fox, Commiſſioners for executing the Office of Lord High-Treaſurer of England. But to alleviate the Loſs of the Treaſury, His Majeſty aſſign'd to the Earl of Rocheſter an Annuity of five thouſand Pounds per Ann. upon the Poſt-Office. Which ſo engag'd his Lordſhip, that he afterwards went over to Holland to take Care of the King's Intereſt there, and to do him the beſt Service he could. There was leſs Care taken of his Elder Brother the Earl of Clarendon, who not only loſt his Government in Ireland, but his Privy-Seal in England; for on March 11. (at the end of this Year) His Majeſty was pleaſed to Conſtitute Henry Lord Arundel of Wardour Keeper of the Privy-Seal, and he was that Day Sworn in Council.

A Conference, for ſatisfying the Earl of Rocheſter.

His Lordſhip's Declaration for the Proteſtant Religion:

And ſo turn'd out of the Treaſury.

New Commiſſioners appointed.

Lord Clarendon loſes the Privy-Seal.

As to other Honours and Preferments, they were moſt of them conferr'd with a like View upon the Roman Intereſt and Religion. On May 13. his Majeſty was pleas'd, in Conſideration of the good and faithful Services of John Lytcott Eſq; to confer upon him the Honour of Knighthood. And on May 28. his Majeſty being in his Camp on Hounſlow-Heath, after having declared his great Satisfaction with the Earl of Bath's Regiment of Corniſh Men, was pleas'd to confer at the Head of the Regiment the Honour of Knighthood upon Captain Beville Granvil, his Lordſhip's Nephew, and Grandſon to Sir Beville, who was ſlain in the Battle of Landſdown. On July 11. his Majeſty in his Bed-Chamher Knighted Thomas Jeffreys Eſq; his Conſul at Alicant. On Aug. 8. his Majeſty conferr'd the ſame Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Rawlinſon Eſq; one of the Aldermen of the City of London. Upon the Death of Sir William Stapleton (Governor and Captain-General of his Majeſty's Leeward Iſlands in America) the King was pleas'd in Auguſt to confer that Government upon Sir Nathanael Johnſon, in Conſideration of his many faithful Services and approved Loyalty. On Aug. 22. at Windſor, his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Montgomery of the Middle-Temple Eſq;. On Sept. 26. his Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Fowle Eſq; one of the Aldermen of the City of London; and then appointed him and Sir Thomas Rawlinſon to be Sheriffs of London and Middleſex for the Year enſuing.

Other Honours and Preferments.

[a] It would be of good Service to the Engliſh World to ſupply a defect in it, by giving a full and perfect Liſt of the Proſelytes to the Church of Rome, under the influence of King James and his Court; with a true Relation of their Circumſtances and Characters, Services, Rewards, &c. by which it would appear, that the Men of no Religion were eaſily made to profeſs the Roman Catholick Religion, when their Neceſſities and their Vices drew them to it. The very Poets were converted by them, and of them the Chief upon the Stage, Mr. Dryden and Mr. Wycherley. The former after expoſing Popery to the laſt degree, come meanly over to the worſhipping of it, and ſacrific'd his two Sons with himſelf; tho' in his Funeral Pindarique upon K. Charles II. he had not a touch of it, nor betray'd any Inclination to go over; though writing to the Height of a Court Paraſite, and commending the Living more than the Dead. However in the Concluſion of that Poem, he was no Prophet, for he ſung thus,

——————With a diſtant View I ſee
Th' amended Vows of Engliſh Loyalty,
And all beyond that Object there appears
The long Retinue of a proſperous Reign
A Series of Succeſsful Years,
In orderly Array, a Martial manly Train.

Mr. Wycherley found his way out of Priſon by the like way of Worſhip; the late Writer of his Life tells us, that he lay in the Fleet and continued there ſeven Years in a cloſe Impriſonment, almoſt forgot by his old Friends, till in the Reign of King James II. Some of them by ſpeaking the Plain Dealer, got the King to the Play, who declaring his Approbation of the Poet's Performance, they improv'd his liking ſo far as to get him to deliver him from his long Confinement. But here the Modeſty of the Man did him a conſiderable prejudice, for inſtead of giving in a full Liſt of his Debts, he only mention'd thoſe, the Diſcharge of which would ſet him at Liberty, which was done with this additional Bounty, that the ſame King allow'd him two hundred Pounds a Year as long as he reign'd; and this was the Reaſon that made Mr. Wycherley always a Jacobite——and he departed this Life in the Roman Catholick Perſuaſion, in January 1715-6.

1686. 2 Jac. II.

On Oct. 22. William Bridgman Eſq; was ſworn one of the Clerks of his Majeſty's Privy-Council, in the Place of Sir Philip Floyd, deceas'd. And at the ſame time William Blaithwaite Eſq; was ſworn one of the Clerks of the ſaid Council in Ordinary. On Decemb. 1. his Majeſty, in his Bed-Chamber, conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon Edmund Gardiner Eſq; Deputy-Recorder of the Town of Bedford. And near the ſame time his Majeſty did the like Honour to Richard Neale Eſq; High-Sheriff of the County of Northumberland for the Year enſuing. Decemb. 18. his Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute Dr. Richard Raines (Judge of the Prerogative-Court) Judge of his Majeſty's High-Court of Admiralty, and at the ſame time to confer upon him the Honour of Knighthood. Toward the End of the ſame Month, Sir Charles Cotterell having humbly petition'd the King for Leave (by reaſon of his Age) to reſign his Office of Maſter of the Ceremonies; his Majeſty was graciouſly pleas'd, in Conſideration of his faithful Services to his Royal Father, Brother, and himſelf, to receive his Son Charles-Lodowick Cotterell Eſq; into the ſaid Office, and to conſtitute his Grandſon John Dormer Eſq; Aſſiſtant-Maſter of the Ceremonies, in his Place. On Jan. 21. his Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon James Tillie of Pillaton, in the County of Cornwall, Eſq;. And about the ſame time was pleas'd to conſtitute, by Commiſſion under the Great-Seal of England, Sir Thomas Jefferys his Agent and Conſul-General in the Kingdoms of Valencia and Murcia, and the Iſlands of Majorca, Minorca, Yvica and Sardinia, in Conſideration of his Loyalty, and the good Services perform'd by him. At the Beginning of Feb. his Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute the Earl of Yarmouth Treaſurer of his Houſhold; and the Lord Waldegrave Comptroller; and ſoon after, Colonel James Porter Vice-Chamberlain of the ſame.

State of Religion.

It is hard now to ſeparate the Affairs of Religion from thoſe of the State, becauſe the whole Buſineſs of the King and Court was to purſue the Ways and Means of introducing Popery. The Regular Clergy of the Church of England thought it their Duty not to be [a] ſilent in the common Danger, and therefore made their Sermons and publick Diſcourſes more expreſſly againſt the Errors and Corruptions of the Church of Rome. The King was taught to believe, that whatever was ſaid againſt his Religion, was a Reflection upon his Perſon and his Government: And therefore he was importun'd to reſtrain the Liberty of the Pulpit; and to that Purpoſe he order'd the Directions concerning Preachers, publiſh'd in 1662. to be now reprinted, and reinforc'd by a Letter of the King, directed to the Lords the Archbiſhops of Canterbury and York, given at Whitehall the 5th of March 1685. in the ſecond Year of his Reign, to prohibit the Preaching upon Controverſial Points.——

The King intent upon introducing Popery.

Would not bear the Clergy to Preach againſt it.

A late Author makes this proper Remark upon it: "An Order was directed to the Proteſtant Biſhops about Preaching: Which was, upon the "Matter, forbidding them to defend their Religion in the Pulpit; when it was at the ſame "time attack'd by the Popiſh Prieſts with all the "Vigour they were capable of, both in their Sermons and Books. This Order was taken from a "Precedent in Queen Mary's Time; for the firſt "Step ſhe made to introduce Popery, (notwithſtanding her Promiſes to the Gentlemen of Suffolk and Norfolk to the contrary, upon their appearing firſt of any, upon the Death of her "Brother) was to iſſue out a Proclamation, forbidding the Preaching upon Controverted Points "of Religion, for fear, as was ſaid, of raiſing "Animoſities among the People. But notwithſtanding this enſnaring Letter of King James, "the Clergy of the Church of England were not "wanting in their Duty: For, to their immortal "Honour, they did more to vindicate the Doctrine of their own Church, and expoſe the Errors of the Church of Rome, both in their Sermons and Writings, than ever had been done, "either at Home or Abroad, ſince the Reformation; and in ſuch a Style, and with ſuch an inimitable Force of Reaſoning, as will be a Standard of Writing to ſucceeding Ages.

Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion.

"To haſten on the Project againſt the eſtabliſh'd "Church, a new Court of Inquiſition was erected "under the Name of a Commiſſion for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs: And, to blind the People, there "were ſome Biſhops of the Church of England "named Commiſſioners; whereof one refuſed to "act from the Beginning; and another excus'd "himſelf, after he came to ſee where the Deſign "of it was levell'd. This Commiſſion was another manifeſt Violation of the Laws, and againſt "an expreſs Act of Parliament. And, as if that "had not been enough to mortify the Church of "England, there were ſome Roman Catholicks appointed Commiſſioners; and conſequently the "Enemies of the [b] Proteſtant Religion were become the Judges and Directors of a Proteſtant "Church, in its Doctrine and Diſcipline. ——

[The Commiſſion it ſelf, becauſe it is the laſt of that Kind that we hope will be ever given out, deſerves to be here inſerted.]

JAMES the Second,

By the Grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c.

Form of it.

"TO the Moſt Reverend Father in God, our "Right Truſty and Right Well-beloved "Counſellor, William Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Primate of all England, and Metropolitan; and to our Right Truſty and Right Well-beloved Counſellor George Lord Jeffreys, Lord-Chancellor of England; and to our Right Truſty "and Right Well-beloved Couſin and Counſellor "Lawrence Earl of Rocheſter, Lord High-Treaſurer of England; and to our Right Truſty and "Right Well-beloved Couſin and Counſellor Robert Earl of Sunderland, Preſident of our Council, and our Principal Secretary of State; and to "the Right Reverend Father in God, and our "Right Truſty and Well-beloved Counſellor "Nathanael Lord Biſhop of Dureſme; and to the

[a] See the Preſent State of the Controverſy, between the Church of England and the Church of Rome; or an Account of the Books written on both Sides. In a Letter to a Friend. Licens'd May 7. 1686. [Begun by the preſent Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and finiſh'd by Dr. Clagett.] London, for Thomas Baſſet, 4to.

[b] The Papiſts and the worſt of the Diſſenters, were made like Ox and Aſſ to draw together: An Eye-witneſs relates it as Now a Comical Sight, to ſee Mr. Lobb the Preſbyterian, and Father Peter the Jeſuite, caballing and contriving together, and as great Intimado's as if they had been of the very ſame Society: To ſee Pen the Quaker, and Mr. Brent, Mr. Alſop and Nevil Payne, ſettling and ſecuring Liberty of Conſcience, and Father Warner as obliging to them as can be. But whatever Profeſſions of Love and Sincerity were made to the Nonconformiſts by the Jeſuits, I can aſſure them at the ſame time, Father Warner the Jeſuite, the King's Confeſſor, look'd upon all the Diſſenters together as the worſt and vileſt of Men. Notes of Dr. Gee on Parſon's Memorial p. 46. It has likewiſe been obſerv'd, that the only late Miniſter, who kept up a great Intereſt in the Diſſenters, was Arthur Earl of Angleſey, who was coming into great Favour with King James juſt before he died in this Year 1686.

1686. 2 Jac. II.

“Right Reverend Father in God, our Right Truſty and Well-beloved Counſellor Thomas Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter[a]; and to our Right Truſty and Well-beloved Counſellor Sir Edward Herbert Kt. Chief-Juſtice of the Pleas, before us to be holden aſſigned, (Greeting.)

“WE, for divers good, weighty and neceſſary Cauſes and Conſiderations Us hereunto eſpecially moving, of Our mere Motion, and certain Knowledge, by Force and Virtue of our Supreme Authority and Prerogative Royal, do Aſſign, Name, and Authorize by our Letters-Patents under the Great-Seal of England, you the ſaid Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor of England, Lord High-Treaſurer of England, Lord Preſident of our Council, Lord Biſhop of Dureſme, Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, and our Chief-Juſtice aforeſaid, or any three or more of you, whereof you the ſaid Lord Chancellor to be one, from time to time, and at all times during our Pleaſure, to Exerciſe, Uſe, Occupy and Execute under Us, all manner of Juriſdiction, Privileges and Preheminences in any-wiſe touching or concerning any Spiritual or Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdictions within this our Realm of England, and Dominion of Wales; and to Viſit, Reform, Redreſs, Order, Correct and Amend all ſuch Abuſes, Offences, Contempts and Enormities whatſoever, which, by the Spiritual or Eccleſiaſtical Laws of this Realm, can or may lawfully be Reformed, Ordered or Redreſſed, Corrected, Reſtrained or Amended, to the Pleaſure of Almighty God, and Encreaſe of Virtue, and the Conſervation of the Peace and Unity of this Realm. AND we do hereby Give and Grant unto you, or any Three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid Lord Chancellor to be one, thus by us named, Aſſigned, Authorized and Appointed, by Force of our Supreme Authority, and Prerogative Royal, full Power and Authority from time to time, and at all times during our Pleaſure, under us, to Exerciſe, Uſe and Execute all the Premiſſes, according to the Tenor and Effect of theſe our Letters-Patents; any Matter or Cauſe to the contrary, in any-wiſe notwithſtanding. AND we do, by theſe Preſents, Give full Power and Authority unto you, or any Three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, whereof you the Lord Chancellor to be One, by all lawful Ways or Means, from time to time hereafter, during Our Pleaſure, to enquire of all Offences, Contempts, Tranſgreſſions and Miſdemeanors done and committed contrary to the Eccleſiaſtical Laws of this Our Realm, in any County, City, Borough, or other Place or Places, exempt or not Exempt, within this Our Realm of England, and Dominion of Wales; and of all and every the Offender and Offenders therein, and them, and every of them, to Order, Correct, Reform, and Puniſh by Cenſure of the Church. AND alſo, We do Give and Grant full Power and Authority unto you, or any Three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid Lord Chancellor to be One, in like manner as is aforeſaid, from time to time, and at all times during Our Pleaſure, to Enquire of, Search out, and Call before you, all and every Eccleſiſtical Perſon or Perſons, of what Degree or Dignity ſoever, as ſhall offend in any of theſe Particulars before-mention'd; and them, and every of them, to correct and puniſh, for ſuch their Miſbehaviours and Miſdemeanors, by ſuſpending or depriving them from all Promotions Eccleſiaſtical, and from all Functions in the Church; and to inflict ſuch other Puniſhments or Cenſures upon them, according to the Eccleſiaſtical Laws of this Realm. And further, We do give full Power and Authority unto you, or any three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid Lord Chancellor to be one, by Virtue hereof, and in like Manner and Form as is aforeſaid, to enquire, hear, determine and puniſh all Inceſt, Adulteries, Fornications, Outrages, Miſbehaviours and Diſorders in Marriage, and all other Grievances, and great Crimes or Offences, which are puniſhable or reformable by the Eccleſiaſtical Laws of this our Realm, committed or done, or hereafter to be committed or done, in any Place, exempt or not exempt, within this our Realm, according to the Tenor of the Eccleſiaſtical Law in that behalf. Granting you, or any three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, whereof you the Lord Chancellor to be one, full Power and Authority to order and award ſuch Puniſhment to every ſuch Offender, by Cenſures of the Church, or other lawful Ways, as is abovesaid. And further, We do give full Power and Authority to you, or any three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid Lord Chancellor to be one, to call before you, or any three or more of you, as aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid Lord Chancellor to be one, all and every Offender and Offenders in any of the Premiſſes; and alſo, ſuch as by you, or any three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid Lord Chancellor to be one, ſhall ſeem to be ſuſpected Perſons in any of the Premiſſes which you ſhall object againſt them; and to proceed againſt them, and every of them, as the nature and quality of the Offence, or ſuſpicion in that Behalf ſhall require: And alſo, to call all ſuch Witneſſes, or any other Perſon or Perſons that can inform you concerning any of the Premiſſes, as you, or any three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid Lord Channcellor to be one, and them and every of them to Examine, upon their Corporal Oaths, for the better Tryal and opening the Truth of the Premiſſes, or any part thereof.

“And if you, or any three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid Lord Chancellor to be one, ſhall find any Perſon or Perſons whatſoever obſtinate or diſobedient in their Appearance before you, or any three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid Chancellor to be one, at your Calling and Commandments, or elſe in not obeying, or in not accompliſhing your Orders, Decrees and Commandments, or any thing touching the Premiſſes, or any Part thereof, or any other Branch or Clauſe contained in this Commiſſion; that then you, or any three or more of you, as aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid Lord Chancellor to be one, ſhall have full Power and Authority to puniſh the ſame Perſon or Perſons ſo offending, by Excommunication, Suſpenſion, Depri-

[a] The Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter upon the Revolution, in a Letter to the Earl of Dorſet, dated 21 Feb. 1688. excuſes himſelf thus.---The Commiſſion was made, and my Name put to it altogether without my Knowledge, when I happened to be at Salisbury, holding an Archiepiſcopal Viſitation with the Biſhop of Cheſter.----I was ſtartled when I perceived my Lord of Canterbury ſcrupled to be preſent with us; whoſe Example it is true, I ought rather to have followed than the greateſt Lawyers in all Matters of Conſcience: Yet I hope his Grace will excuſe me, if I declare that I did not at firſt know he made a Matter of Conſcience of it. Nor did I underſtand his Grace took exception at the Lawfulneſs of the Commiſſion itſelf, till after my Lord of London was cited, and had appear'd and anſwer'd, and the unjuſt Sentence was paſs'd againſt him.

“vation,

1686. 2 Jac. II

"vation, or other Cenſures Eccleſiaſtical. And "when any Perſons ſhall be convened or proſe"cuted before you, as aforeſaid, for any of the "Cauſes above-expreſſed, at the Inſtance and Suit "of any Perſon proſecuting the Offence in that "behalf; that then you, or any three or more "of you, as aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid Lord "Chancellor to be one, ſhall have full Power and "Authority to award ſuch Coſts and Expences of "the Suit, as well to and againſt the Party as "ſhall preferr or proſecute the ſaid Offence, as to "and againſt the Party or Parties that ſhall be "convened, according as their Cauſes ſhall re"quire, and to you, in Juſtice, ſhall be thought "reaſonable.

"And further, Our Will and Pleaſure is, that "you aſſume our well-beloved Subject William "Bridgman, Eſq; one of the Clerks of our Coun"cil, or his ſufficient Deputy or Deputies in that "behalf, to be your Regiſter, whom we do, by "theſe Preſents, depute to that effect, for the "regiſtring of all your Acts, Decrees and Pro"ceedings by Virtue of this our Commiſſion. And "that, in like manner, you, or any three or more "of you, whereof you the ſaid Lord Chancellor "to be one, by your Diſcretion ſhall appoint one "or more Meſſenger or Meſſengers, and other "Officer or Officers, neceſſary and convenient to "attend upon you for any Service in this behalf; "our Will and expreſs Commandment alſo is, "that there ſhall be two Paper Books indented "and made, the one to remain with the ſaid Re"giſter, or his ſufficient Deputy or Deputies, the "other with ſuch Perſons and in ſuch Places as "you the ſaid Commiſſioners, or any three or "more of you, whereof you the ſaid Lord Chan"cellor to be one, ſhall in your Diſcretion think "moſt fit and meet; in both which Books ſhall "be fairly entred all the Acts, Decrees and Pro"ceedings made or to be made by Virtue of this "Commiſſion.

"And whereas our Univerſities of Oxford and "Cambridge, and divers Cathedral and Collegiate"Churches, Colleges, Grammar-Schools, and o"ther Eccleſiaſtical Incorporations, have been e"rected, founded and endowed by ſeveral of our "our Royal Progenitors, Kings and Queens of "this Realm, and ſome others, by the Charity "and Bounty of ſome of their Subjects, as well "within our Univerſities, as other Parts and "Places, the Ordinances, Rules and Statutes "whereof are either imbezell'd, loſt, corrupted, "or altogether imperfected; we do therefore give "a full Power and Authority to you, or any five "or more of you, of whom we Will you the a"fore-named Lord Chancellor always to be one, "to Cauſe and Command in our Name, all and "ſingular the Ordinances, Rules and Statutes of "our Univerſities, and all and every Cathedral "and Collegiate-Churches, Colleges, Grammar"Schools, and other Eccleſiaſtical Incorporati"ons, together with their ſeveral Letters-Patents, "and other Writings touching or in any-wiſe "concerning the ſeveral Erections and Foundati"ons to be brought and exhibited before you, or "any five or more of you, as is aforeſaid, where"of you the ſaid Lord Chancellor to be one; "willing, commanding and Authorizing you, or "any five or more of you, as aforeſaid, whereof "you the ſaid Lord Chancellor to be one, upon "the exhibiting, and upon diligent and delibe"rate View, Search and Examination of the ſaid "Statutes, Rules and Ordinances, Letters-Pa"tents and Writings, as is aforeſaid, the ſame to "correct, amend, and alter. And alſo, where no "Statutes extant in all or any of the aforeſaid "Caſes, to deviſe and ſet down ſuch good Or"ders and Statutes, as you, or any five or more "of you, as is aforeſaid, whereof you the ſaid "Lord Chancellor to be one, ſhall think meet "and convenient to be by us confirmed, ratified, "allowed and ſet forth, for the better Order and "Rule of the ſaid Univerſities, Cathedrals and "Collegiate-Churches, Colleges and Grammar"Schools, Erections and Foundations, and the "Poſſeſſions and Revenues of the ſame, as may "beſt tend to the Honour of Almighty God, "encreaſe of Virtue, Learning and Unity in the "ſaid Places, and the Publick Weal and Tran"quillity of this our Realm.

"Moreover, our Will, Pleaſure and Command"ment is, that our ſaid Commiſſioners, and every "of you, ſhall diligently and faithfully execute "this our Commiſſion, and every Part and Branch "thereof, in Manner and Form aforeſaid, and ac"cording to the true Meaning hereof, notwith"ſtanding any Appellation, Provocation, Privi"lege or Exemption in that behalf to be made, "pretended or alledged by any Perſon or Per"ſons reſident or dwelling in any Place or Places, "exempt or not exempt, within this our Realm; "any Law, Statutes, Proclamations, or Grants, "Privileges or Ordinances, which be, or may "ſeem to be contrary to the Premiſſes notwith"ſtanding.

"And for the better Credit and more manifeſt "Notice of your doing in Execution of this our "Commiſſion, our Pleaſure and Commandment "is, that to your Letters Miſſive, Proceſſes, De"crees, Orders and Judgments, for, or by you, "or any three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, "to be awarded, ſent forth, had, made, decreed, "given, or pronounced, at ſuch certain publick "Places, as ſhall be appointed by you, or any "three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, for the "due Execution of this our Commiſſion, you, or "ſome three or more of you, as is aforeſaid, "whereof you the ſaid Chancellor to be one, ſhall "cauſe to be put and fixed a Seal, engraven with "the Roſe and Crown, and the Letter J. and fi"gure 2. before, and the Letter R. after the "ſame; with a Ring or Circumference about the "ſame Seal, containing as followeth, Sigillum "Commiſſiariorum Regiæ Majeſtatis ad Cauſas Ec"cleſiaſticas.

"Finally, we Will and Command all and ſin"gular other our Miniſters and Subjects in all "and every Place and Places, exempt and not ex"empt, within our Realm of England, and Do"minion of Wales, upon any Knowledge or Re"queſt from you, or any three or more of you, "as is aforeſaid, to them or any of them given "or made, to be aiding, helping and aſſiſting un"to you, and to your Commandment, in, and for "the due executing your Precepts, Letters, and "other Proceſſes requiſite in, and for the due exe"cuting of this our Commiſſion[a], as they and "every of them tender our Pleaſure and Will, to "anſwer the contrary at their utmoſt Perils.

In Witneſs, &c.

[a] There was a ſecond Commiſſion of the ſame Tenor authorizing and appointing the Lord High-Chancellor of England, the Lord-Treaſurer, the Lord-Preſident of the Council, John Earl of Mulgrave then Lord-Chamberlain, the Lords Biſhops of Durham and Rocheſter, and the Lord Chief-Juſtice Herbert, or any three or more of which the Lord Chancellor to be one, to examine and judge in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical. T. M. apud Weſtm. xxii. Nov. Regni ſecundo, 1686. And I think another Commiſſion dated the 12th of January following, conſtituting and appointing the Lord High Chancellor of England, the Lord-Preſident of his Majeſty's Council, the Lord-Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, the Earl of Huntingdon, the Biſhops of Durham, Rocheſter, and Cheſter, Sir Robert Wright Lord Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench, Sir Thomas Jenner one of the Barons of the Exchequer.

2 "It

1686.
2 Jac. II.

Illegality of this Commiſſion.

[a] It muſt be obſerved, that King Henry VIII. by Virtue of a full Supremacy, was enabled not only to Delegate Commiſſioners, but to appoint a Vicar-General to act in Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes, after a manner too Abſolute for any Prince. And by Virtue of a Branch of an Act in 1 Eliz. the Queen was again impower'd to exerciſe the Eccleſiaſtical Supremacy, and did ſet up a High-Commiſſion-Court, to reſtrain the growth of Popery, and to ſupport the eſtabliſh'd Church of England. Now becauſe the Commiſſioners had proceeded in ſuch Cauſes with too much Severity, and, as commonly thought, with too much Arbitrary Power, therefore there was another Act, 17 Car. I. cap. 11. for a Repeal of the Branch of a Stat. 1 Eliz. concerning Commiſſioners for Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical; Enacting, That the ſaid Clauſe impowering the Queen to Commiſſion any Perſons to exerciſe Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, &c. ſhall be made void for ever; and that no new Court ſhall be erected with the like Power, Juriſdiction or Authority, as the ſaid High-Commiſſion-Court hath, or pretendeth to have. The High-Commiſſion-Court being thus put down, ſome Papiſts and ſome Diſſenters would have deny'd that there was any Power remaining in the Church; and did pretend, that all manner of Coercive Juriſdiction was taken from the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and other Ordinaries. To obviate this Objection, there was another Law made, 13 Car. II. cap. 12. Intituled, An Act for Explanation of a Clauſe contained in an Act of Parliament made in the 17th Year of the late King Charles, &c. reciting, That upon the ſaid Statute of 17 Car. I. ſome Doubt had been made, that all ordinary Power of Coercion and Proceedings in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical were taken away, whereby the ordinary Courſe of Juſtice in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical had been obſtructed; it was therefore enacted, That neither the ſaid Act, nor any thing therein contained, doth or ſhall take away any ordinary Power or Authority from any of the ſaid Archbiſhops, Biſhops, or any other Perſon or Perſons named, as aforeſaid.—— And further Enacting, That the afore-recited Act of Decimo ſeptimo Caroli, and all the Matters and Clauſes therein contained, (Excepting what concerns the High-Commiſſion-Court, or the Erection of ſome ſuch-like new Court by Commiſſion) ſhall be, and is hereby repealed.——— Provided always, That neither this Act, nor any thing therein contained, ſhall extend or be conſtrued to Revive or give Force to the ſaid Branch of the ſaid Statute made in 1 Eliz. and mention'd in the Act 17 Car. I. but that the ſaid Branch of the ſaid Stat. 1 Eliz. ſhall ſtand and be repealed in ſuch ſort as if this Act had never been made.

This Act 13 Car. II. was now interpreted, to reſtore to the Crown a Power of erecting a High-Commiſſion-Court, though with leſs Power of Fining, and Impriſoning, &c. But it had been formerly thought to extinguiſh all ſuch Extraordinary Courts, and therefore none ſuch had been erected in the Reign of King Charles II. So that the very granting of this new Commiſſion, was by many of the beſt Lawyers thought Illegal. And the very Creatures of the Court ſeem'd to be very conſcious of it: For though it was granted in the beginning of April, yet it was not open'd till the beginning of Auguſt following: And then it was thought ſtrange, that the Power of Excommunication, which is a pure Spiritual Act, ſhould be granted to mere Lay-men; for the Quorum in the Commiſſion were, the Chancellor and any other two. For theſe Reaſons, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who was firſt named, refuſed to act in it; and the Biſhop of Cheſter was put in, as a fitter Tool.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury refuſes to act in this Commiſſion.

1686.
2 Jac. II.

Suſpenſion of the Biſhop of London.

Theſe Commiſſioners thought fit to begin the Exerciſe of their new Power, with the Suſpenſion of Dr. Compton, Biſhop of London This noble Prelate, by a Conduct worthy of his Birth, and Station in the Church, had acquired the Love and Eſteem of all the Proteſtant Churches at home and abroad; and was, for that Reaſon, the Mark of the Envy and Hatred of the Romiſh Party at Court. They had waited for an Occaſion to ennoble their Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion with ſuch an illuſtrious Sacrifice; and ſuch an Occaſion was rather taken than given, in the Buſineſs of Doctor Sharp (now Archbiſhop of York.)

The Prieſts about the King, knowing how much it was their Intereſt that the Proteſtant Clergy ſhould not have Leave to refute the Errors of the Church of Rome, in their Sermons, had adviſ'd him to ſend to the Biſhops the enſnaring Letter or Order before-mention'd, containing Directions about Preachers. The Learn'd Dr. Sharp, taking Occaſion, in ſome of his Sermons, to vindicate the Doctrine of the Church of England, in Oppoſition to Popery; this was, in the Court Dialect, underſtood to be, The endeavouring to beget in the Minds of his Hearers an ill Opinion of the King and his Government, by inſinuating Fears and Jealouſies, to diſpoſe them to Diſcontent, and to lead them into Diſobedience and Rebellion; and conſequently, a a Contempt of the ſaid Order about Preachers. Whereupon King James ſent a Letter to the Biſhop of London, which was deliver'd at Fulham on Thurſday June 17. by Mr. Atterbury the Meſſenger, and was as followeth:

Offence given by Dr. Sharp.

JAMES R.

The King's Letter for ſuſpending this worthy Preacher.

Right Reverend Father in God, We Greet you well. Whereas we have been inform'd, and are fully ſatisfied, That Dr. John Sharp, Rector of the Pariſh Church of St. Giles's in the Fields, in the County of Middleſex, and in your Dioceſe, notwithſtanding our late Letter to the moſt Reverend Fathers in God, the Arch-Biſhops of Canterbury and York, and our Directions concerning Preachers; Given at our Court at Whitehall the 15th of March 1685. in the ſecond Year of our Reign; yet he the ſaid Dr. John Sharp, in Contempt of the ſaid Orders, hath, in ſome of his Sermons ſince preached, preſumed to make unbecoming Reflections, and to utter ſuch Expreſſions as were not fit or proper for him; endeavouring thereby to beget in the Minds of his Hearers, an evil Opinion of us and Our Government, by inſinuating Fears and Jealouſies to diſpoſe them to Diſcontent, and to lead them into Diſobedience and Rebellion. Theſe are therefore to require and command you, immediately upon Receipt hereof, forthwith to ſuſpend him from further Preaching in any Pariſh Church or Chapel in your Dioceſe, until he has given Us Satisfaction, and our further Pleaſure be known herein: And for your ſo doing, this ſhall be your Warrant. And ſo we bid you heartily farewel.

Given at our Court at Windſor, the 14th Day of June, 1686. In the Second Year of Our Reign.

By His MAJESTY's Command.

SUNDERLAND.

The Biſhop of London perceiv'd that the Deſign of this Letter was abſolutely to forbid all Preaching againſt Popery, and the Effect of it might be to ſuſpend all the eminent Preachers in England: His Lordſhip, however, endeavour'd to divert the [a] The beſt Exerciſe of this Authority (had the Authority been good) was in reſtraining the ſcandalous Practice of exempt Churches and Chapels wherein by corrupt Uſe and Cuſtom they married all Comers without Banns or Licence, as particularly in Duke's-Place and the Little-Minories. See an Order at a Court held by his Majeſty's Commiſſioners in the Council Chamber at Whitehall, November the 4th 1686. Strictly forbidding all Marriages without Banns or Licence; particularly in the pretended exempted Pariſhes of Trinity Minories, St. James Duke's-Place, and St. Butolph Aldgate. Single Sheet printed by Tho. Newcomb, 1686.

Storm

1685. 2 Jac. II.

Storm that threatned the[a] Church and Clergy, and therefore wrote this ſubmiſſive Letter to the Earl of Sunderland, to be communicated to the King, and made Dr. Sharp himſelf the Bearer of it to Hampton-Court, on Friday the 18th of June.

Anſwer of the Biſhop of London.

My Lord,

I Always have, and ſhall count it my Duty to obey the King in whatever Commands he lays upon me, that I can perform with a ſafe Conſcience; but in this, I humbly conceive, I am oblig'd to proceed according to Law, and therefore it is impoſſible for me to comply; becauſe, though His Majeſty commands me only to execute his Pleaſure, yet in the Capacity I am to do it, I muſt act as a Judge: And your Lordſhip knows, No Judge condemns any Man before he has Knowledge of the Cauſe, and has cited the Party. However, I ſent to Mr. Dean, and acquainted him with his Majeſty's Diſpleaſure; whom I find ſo ready to give all reaſonable Satisfaction, that I have thought fit to make him the Bearer of this Anſwer: from him that will never be unfaithful to the King, nor otherwiſe than,

(My Lord)

Your Lordſhip's moſt Humble Servant,

H. LONDON.

No Anſwer could be obtained to this Letter of the Biſhop; and therefore, on the Sunday following, Dr. Sharp carry'd this Petition to Windſor.

To the KING's Moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The Humble Petition of John Sharp, Clerk,

Sheweth,

Petition of Doctor Sharp to the King.

THAT nothing is ſo afflictive to your Petitioner, as his Unhappineſs to have incurred your Majeſty's Diſpleaſure: Which he is ſo ſenſible of, that ever ſince your Majeſty was pleas'd to give Notice of it, he hath forborn all Publick Exerciſe of his Function, and ſtill continues ſo to do.

Your Petitioner can with great Sincerity affirm, That ever ſince he hath been a Preacher, he hath faithfully endeavour'd to do the beſt Service he could in his Place and Station, as well to the late King your Royal Brother, as your Majeſty, both by Preaching and otherwiſe.

And ſo far he hath always been from venting any thing in the Pulpit tending to Schiſm, or Faction, or any way to the Diſturbance of your Majeſty's Government, that he hath upon all Occaſions, in his Sermons, to the utmoſt of his Power, ſet himſelf againſt all ſorts of Doctrines and Principles that look that way: And this he is ſo well aſſur'd of, that he cannot but apprehend that his Sermons have been very much miſrepreſented to your Majeſty.

But if in any Sermon of his, any Words or Expreſſions have unwarily ſlipt from him, that have been capable of ſuch Conſtructions, as to give your Majeſty Cauſe of Offence; as he ſolemnly profeſſes he had no ill Intention in thoſe Words or Expreſſions, ſo he is very ſorry for them, and reſolves for the future, to be careful in the Dicharge of his Duty; that your Majeſty ſhall have reaſon to believe him to be your moſt faithful Subject.

And therefore he earneſtly prayeth, that your Majeſty out of your Royal Grace and Clemency, wou'd be pleas'd to lay aſide the Diſpleaſure you have conceiv'd againſt your humble Petitioner, and reſtore him to that Favour which the reſt of the Clergy enjoy, under your Majeſty's Gracious Government;

So your Petitioner ſhall ever pray, &c.

This Petition was not admitted to be read; for a Reſolution had been taken to execute the Diſpleaſure of the King upon the Biſhop of London: And therefore, on Tueſday Aug. 3. the Commiſſioners opened their Commiſſion, and immediately ſent a Citation to the Biſhop of London, to appear before them in the Council-Chamber at Whitehall on Aug. 9.

The Biſhop of London cited to appear before the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners. Proceedings.

The Biſhop did accordingly appear: And the Commiſſioners then preſent, were the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Treaſurer, the Lord Preſident, the Lord Biſhop of Dureſme, the Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, and the Lord Chief-Juſtice Herbert. The Lord Chancellor charg'd the Biſhop with not obſerving his Majeſty's Commands in the Caſe of Dr. Sharp.—The Biſhop humbly begg'd a Copy of the Commiſſion, and a Copy of his Charge; and inſiſting upon this Deſire, he was bid to withdraw: And after a ſhort time, being call'd in again, was told thus by the Lord Chancellor; Their Lordſhips have conſider'd of what your Lordſhip deſired, and are of Opinion, That you ſhall neither have a Copy of, nor ſee the Commiſſion; neither will they give a Copy of the Charge.——The Biſhop then deſir'd Time to adviſe with Council, and to have them plead.——The Lord Chancellor ask'd what Time his Lordſhip deſir'd? ——His Lordſhip anſwer'd, Conſidering the Seaſon of the Year, and that there is not one Civilian in the Commons, I hope you'll give me till towards the Term.——But the Commiſſioners would grant but a Week only; and ſo adjourned to Aug. 15. on which Day the Biſhop appear'd again, and deſir'd longer time; for (ſays he) I wrote to ſeveral conſiderable Council out of Town, none of which are come up; and thoſe few that are here, the thing is ſo new to them, that they could not thoroughly conſider Matters in ſo ſhort a time. Then the Biſhop withdrew; and being call'd in again, was told, their Lordſhips were reſolv'd to give no time for pleading to their Juriſdiction, but for any other Anſwer they would grant a Fortnight;——and ſo they adjourn'd till Aug. 31. In the mean time the Biſhop ſent his Proctor to their Regiſter, for a Copy of what Orders and other Minutes they had ſet down concerning his Buſineſs. But it was refuſed: Though his Council told him, it was never deny'd in any Court.

The Biſhop's ſecond Appearance.

On the ſaid 31ſt of Auguſt the Biſhop appear'd, and begg'd their Lordſhips leave to offer his Plea to their Juriſdiction; for (ſays he) I am told, it is a Right every one has to make uſe of, when he finds it for his Advantage, I wou'd not hazard being ſo impertinent as to offer any thing upon my own head: Your Lordſhip gave me time to adviſe with Council; and they that are learn'd in the Laws of the Land, adviſe me to plead to your Juriſdiction, and will be ready to argue it.——The Commiſſioners refuſing, the Biſhop proceeded; I am far from diſowning any part of the King's Supremacy; I acknowledge it, and am ſo bound to do, in its juſt extent over all Perſons, and in all Cauſes: What I have to offer in Plea to your Juriſdiction, is, that I conceive, this Commiſſion you act by is not good, as being contrary to an Act of Parliament: Upon which Point, I beg my Councel may argue.——The Biſhop being over-rul'd, proteſted his Right to this Plea; which he would have given in, if the Lords Commiſſioners would have ſuffer'd it to be argued.

The Biſhop's third Appearance.

[a] Even Biſhop Ken highly incurred the Diſpleaſure of the Court for preſuming to preach againſt Popery: There was publiſh'd by Authority againſt him Animadverſions by way of Anſwer to a Sermon preached by Dr. Thomas Ken Lord Biſhop of Bath and Wells, preached in the Cathedral Church of Bath on Aſcenſion day laſt being the 5th day of May, 1687. With Allowance, 1687, 4*to*. Dedicated to the King, and telling his Majeſty that He had done more in one Day for God's Glory and the Propagation of the Chriſtian Faith, than moſt of the Chriſtian Kings have done in the whole Courſe of their Lives. Treating the Biſhop with very grave Reproofs, and concluding with a ſerious Prayer for his Lordſhip's Converſion——The Writer of the Biſhop's Life has ſince obſerv'd that King James entertain'd Hopes of Biſhop Ken's abſolute Obedience to his Will and Pleaſure, and altho' many of his Sermons were fram'd againſt the Church of Rome, yet it was thought worth while to attempt to gain him over to the Intereſt of that Party at Court; but ſo ineffectually, that upon preaching one of the two Sermons now publiſh'd, and in the King's own Chapel at Whitehall, and it being miſrepreſented to the King, who had not been preſent at Divine Service, but ſending for the Biſhop and cloſeting him on the Occaſion, receiv'd nothing in Anſwer, but this fatherly Reprimand, That if his Majeſty had not neglected his own Duty of being preſent there, his Enemies had miſs'd this Opportunity of accuſing him.

" I Henry

1686. 2 Jac. II.

The Biſhop's Plea againſt their Juriſdiction.

" I HENRY Biſhop of London do declare and " acknowledge, That the King's Majeſty is " the only Supreme Head and Governor of this " Realm, and all other his Majeſty's Dominions " and Countries, as well in all Spiritual or Eccle- " ſiaſtical Cauſes, as Temporal. Nevertheleſs, I " the ſaid Biſhop, by Proteſtation, not acknow- " ledging any juſt or legal Authority in your Lord- " ſhips (otherwiſe than as by Law I am bound) to " queſtion or cenſure me in any Matter or Thing " Eccleſiaſtical whatſoever; do offer and ſhew to " your Lordſhips, That at the Parliament of King " Charles I. (of bleſſed Memory) late King of Eng- " land, holden on the 3d Day of November, in the " Sixteenth Year of his Reign, a certain Act and " Statute was made, Intituled, [A Repeal of the " Branch of a Statute Primo Elizabethæ, concern- " ing Commiſſioners for Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical;] ſetting " forth, That in the Parliament holden in the Firſt " Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, there " was an Act made and eſtabliſh'd, Intituled, [An Act " Reſtoring to the Crown the Antient Juriſdiction " over the State Eccleſiaſtical and Spiritual;] And " aboliſhing all Foreign Power repugnant to the " ſame. In which Act, among other things, there " is contain'd one Clauſe, Branch, Article or Sen- " tence, whereby it was Enacted to this Effect, " namely,---- That the ſaid late Queen's Highneſs, " Her Heirs and Succeſſors, Kings or Queens of " this Realm, ſhould have full Power and Autho- " rity, by virtue of that Act, by Letters-Patents un- " der the Great Seal of England, to aſſign, name and " authorize, when, and as often as Her Highneſs, " Her Heirs or Succeſſors, ſhould think meet and " convenient, and for ſuch and ſo long Time as " ſhould pleaſe Her Highneſs, Her Heirs or Suc- " ceſſors, ſuch Perſon or Perſons, being Natural- " born Subjects to Her Highneſs, her Heirs or Suc- " ceſſors, as her Majeſty, her Heirs or Succeſſors, " ſhould think mete to exerciſe, uſe, ocupy and exe- " cute, under her Highneſs, her Heirs and Succeſſors, " all manner of Juriſdictions, Privileges, and Pre- " eminences in any-wiſe touching or concerning any " Spiritual or Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction within theſe " her Realms of England and Ireland, or any other " her Highneſs's Dominions and Countries; and to " viſit, reform, redreſs, order, correct and amend " all ſuch Errors, Hereſies, Schiſms, Abuſes, Offences, " Contempts and Enormities whatſoever, which by " any manner of Spiritual or Eccleſiaſtical Power, " Authority or Juriſdiction, can or may lawfully be " reformed, ordered, redreſſed, corrected, reſtrained " or amended, to the Pleaſure of Almighty God, " the Increaſe of Virtue, and the Conſervation of " the Peace and Unity of this Realm. And that " ſuch Perſon or Perſons ſo to be named, aſſigned " and appointed by her Highneſs, her Heirs or Suc- " ceſſors, after the ſaid Letters-Patents to him or " them made and deliver'd, as aforeſaid, ſhould " have full Power and Authority, by vertue of that " Act, and of the ſaid Letters-Patents under her " Highneſs, her Heirs or Succeſſors, to exerciſe, uſe " and execute all the Premiſſes, according to the Tenor " and Effect of the ſaid Letters-Patents; any Matter or " Cauſe to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtand- " ing. -------- And ſetting forth likewiſe,---- That, by " the colour of ſome Words in the foreſaid Branch " of the ſaid Act, whereby Commiſſioners are au- " thorized to execute their Commiſſion, according " to the Tenor and Effect of the King's Letters- " Patents, and by Letters-Patents grounded there- " upon; the ſaid Commiſſioners have, to the great " and unſufferable Wrong and Oppreſſion of the " King's Subjects, uſed to fine and impriſon them, " and to exerciſe other Authority not belonging to " Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, reſtor'd by that Act; " and divers other great Miſchiefs and Inconve- " niences have alſo enſued to the King's Subjects, " by Occaſion of the ſaid Branch; and Commiſſions " iſſued thereupon, and the Executions thereof. " And therefore, for the repreſſing and preventing " of the aforeſaid Abuſes, Miſchiefs and Inconve- " niences in Time to come, it was by the ſaid Act " made at the ſaid Parliament of the ſaid King " Charles the Firſt, Enacted, ---- That the aforeſaid " Branch, Clauſe, Article or Sentence contained in " the ſaid Act of Primo Elizabethæ, and every " Word, Matter and Thing contain'd in that Branch, " Clauſe, Article or Sentence, ſhould from thence- " forward be repeal'd, annull'd, revok'd, annihila- " ted, and utterly made void for ever; any thing " in the ſaid Act to the contrary in any-wiſe not- " withſtanding.------ And it was thereby alſo Enacted " by the Authority aforeſaid, That no Archbiſhop, " Biſhop, nor Vicar-General, nor any Ordinary " whatſoever, nor any other Spiritual or Eccleſiaſti- " cal Judge, Officer, or Miniſter of Juſtice, nor any " other Perſon or Perſons whatſoever executing Spi- " ritual or Eccleſiaſtical Power, Authority or Juriſ- " diction, by any Grant, Licenſe or Commiſſion of " the King's Majeſty, his Heirs or Succeſſors, or " by any Power or Authority derived from the King, " his Heirs or Succeſſors, or otherwiſe, ſhould from " and after the Firſt Day of Auguſt, in the Year of " our Lord, 1641. award, impoſe, or inflict any " Pain, Penalty, Fine, Amerciament or Impriſon- " ment, or other Corporal Puniſhment upon any of " the King's Subjects, for any Contempt, Miſdemea- " nor, Crime, Offence, Matter or Thing whatſoever, " belonging to Spiritual or Eccleſiaſtical Cogni- " zance or Juriſdiction; or ſhall ex officio, or at " the Inſtance or Promotion of any other Perſon " whatſoever, urge, enforce, tender, give, or mini- " ſter unto any Church-warden, Side-man, or other " Perſon whatſoever, any Corporal Oath, whereby " he or ſhe ſhall or may be charg'd or oblig'd to " make any Preſentment of any Crime or Offence, " or to confeſs or accuſe himſelf or herſelf of any " Crime, Offence, Delinquency or Miſdemeanor, " or any other Neglect, Matter or Thing, whereby, " or by reaſon whereof, he or ſhe ſhall or may be " liable or expos'd to any Cenſure or Puniſhment " whatſoever; upon Pain and Penalty, That every " Perſon that ſhall offend, contrary to this Statute, " ſhall forfeit and pay treble Damages to every " Perſon thereby grieved, and the Sum of an Hun- " dred Pounds to him or them who ſhall firſt de- " mand and ſue for the ſame: Which ſaid treble " Damages, and Sum of an Hundred Pounds, ſhall " and may be demanded and receiv'd, and urg'd by " Action of Debt, Bill or Plaint, in any Court of " Record; wherein no Privilege, Eſſoin, Protection " or Wager of Law ſhall be admitted or allowed " to the Defendant. ---- And it was thereby further " Enacted, That every Perſon who ſhould once be " convicted of any Act or Offence prohibited by " that Statute, ſhould, for ſuch Act or Offence, be, " from and after ſuch Conviction, utterly diſabled " to be or continue in any Office or Employment in " any Court of Juſtice whatſoever, or to exerciſe " or execute any Power, Authority or Juriſdiction, " by Force of any Commiſſion, or Letters-Patents " of the King, his Heirs or Succeſſors.---- And it " was alſo thereby Enacted, That from and after " the Firſt Day of Auguſt, no New Court ſhould be " erected, ordain'd or appointed within this Realm " of England, or Dominion of Wales, which ſhould " or might have the like Power, Juriſdiction or " Authority as the ſaid High-Commiſſion-Court " then had, or pretended to have: But that all " and every ſuch Letters-Patents, Commiſſions and " Grants made or to be made by his Majeſty, his " Heirs or Succeſſors, and all Powers and Authori- " ties granted thereby; and all Acts, Sentences and " Decrees to be made by Vertue or Colour thereof, " ſhould be utterly void and of none Effect.--------- " Which ſaid Act of Parliament, made at the ſaid " Parliament of the ſaid King Charles the Firſt, I " the 1686. 2 Jac. II.

"the ſaid Biſhop of London do plead, and object "to and againſt your Lordſhip's Juriſdiction; and "pray your Lordſhip's Judgment, Whether your "Lordſhips will think it fit, or ought to proceed "any further herein againſt me the ſaid Biſhop of "London.

After the rejecting of this Plea, the Biſhop ſpoke thus: I have another thing to beg your Lordſhips Advice and Judgment in. I have Right, as a Biſhop, by the moſt authentick and univerſal Eccleſiaſtical Laws, to be tried firſt before my Metropolitan precedent to any other Court whatſoever. ---- The Court ſaid, Still this was to plead againſt their Juriſdiction. ------ And the Biſhop went on thus: If I am over-rul'd in this, I muſt beg your Lordſhips Patience in one Plea more. Your Lordſhips, in this Commiſſion, after the general Words, are directed to proceed according to the Tenor of the Letters-Patents, &c. Now I conceive in the Capacity I am in, you are only warranted to try me for Offences after the Date of the Commiſſion. ------ But the Court Reſolved, That they had Authority to look back. ------ Then the Biſhop put in his Anſwer in Writing, which was read by Mr. Bridgman, in this Form:

The Biſhop's Anſwer to the Charge.

"TO the Queſtion which was propoſed to me "by your Lordſhips (viz.) Why did you "not Obey the King's Command, in his Letter con"cerning the Suſpending Dr. Sharp? I Henry Bi"ſhop of London do anſwer, That immediately "upon Receipt of his Majeſty's Letter from my "Lord Preſident, (the Tenor whereof follows, &c.) "I took the beſt Advice I could get concerning "Dr. Sharp; and was inform'd, That the Letter "being directed to me, as Biſhop of London, to "ſuſpend a Perſon under my Juriſdiction, I was "therein to act as a Judge, it being a judicial Act; "and that no Perſon could by Law be puniſh'd by "Suſpenſion, before he was call'd, or without be"ing admitted to make his Defence: I thought it "therefore my Duty forthwith humbly to repreſent "ſo much to my Lord Preſident, that ſo I might "receive his Majeſty's further Pleaſure in that Mat"ter. Nevertheleſs, that I might obey his Ma"jeſty's Command, as far as by Law I could, I did "then ſend for Dr. Sharp, and acquainted him "with his Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, and the Occaſion "of it, by ſhewing him his Majeſty's Letter. "But he having never been call'd to anſwer any "ſuch Matter, or make his Defence, and proteſting "his Innocence, and likewiſe declaring himſelf moſt "ready to give his Majeſty full Satisfaction therein: "In order thereto, I adviſ'd him to forbear Preach"ing, till he had apply'd himſelf to his Majeſty; "and, at his Requeſt, I made him the Bearer of my "Letter to my Lord Preſident; waiting for his "Majeſty's farther Orders to proceed againſt him "judicially, in caſe he ſhould not at that time give "his Majeſty the Satisfaction required: And the "ſaid Dr. Sharp hath not ſince Preach'd within "my Dioceſe.

HENRY LONDON.

The Biſhop's farther Plea.

The Biſhop being then ask'd by the Lord Chancellor, Whether he had any thing more to ſay? ---- He only ſaid, That the Words of his Majeſty's Letter were liable to two Conſtructions, upon a double Senſe of the Word Suſpend; either a Suſpenſion ab Officio, which was a Judicial Act, and he could not do but in a Judicial Manner. The other Senſe of the Word Suſpend, might be taken at large for Silencing: And therefore he had adviſ'd the Doctor not to Preach till he knew his Majeſty's farther Pleaſure. Which Advice (ſays he) from a Judge, the Learn'd in the Laws tell me, is Tantamount to an Admonition; and that if he had not ſubmitted to it, I could have cenſur'd him for his Diſobedience. So that if this laſt was his Majeſty's Meaning, I have, in effect, obey'd the Letter: Which is all I ſhall ſay at preſent; and beg my Council may be heard, to clear the Matter in Point of Law. ------ After this, the Biſhop's Council, who were Dr. Oldys, Dr. Hedges, Dr. Brice, and Dr. Newton, Argued ſtrenuouſly in behalf of the Biſhop. And after their learned Pleadings, the Biſhop ſpoke thus: I have but little more to ſay; I ſuppoſe my Council have ſatisfy'd your Lordſhips, that, in the ſevereſt Conſtruction, Malice or Wilful Diſobedience could not be imputed to me. But, as my Lord Chancellor has now explain'd it to Dr. Oldys, That the King's Meaning was, only to Silence, they have made plain to your Lordſhips, that I have effectually obey'd his Majeſty's Commands: And if in any Circumſtance I have been wanting, I am ready to make Reparation, by performing that likewiſe, and to beg his Majeſty's Pardon. ------ After this, the Biſhop was appointed to attend the Commiſſioners on Monday Sept. 6. when this Sentence was read againſt him:

By His MAJESTY*'s Commiſſioners for Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes.*

Sentence againſt the Biſhop.

"WHereas Henry Lord Biſhop of London hath "been convened before us, for his Diſobe"dience, and other his Contempts mention'd in "the Proceedings of this Cauſe; and the ſaid Lord "Biſhop of London being fully heard hereupon: "We have thought fit, after mature Conſideration "of the Matter, to proceed to this our definitive "Sentence; declaring, decreeing, and pronouncing, "That the ſaid Lord Biſhop ſhall, for the ſaid "Diſobedience and Contempts, be Suſpended du"ring his Majeſty's Pleaſure. And accordingly "We do, by theſe Preſents, ſuſpend him the ſaid "Henry Lord Biſhop of London; peremptorily ad"moniſhing and requiring him hereby to abſtain from "the Function and Execution of his Epiſcopal "Office, and from all Epiſcopal and Eccleſiaſtical "Juriſdiction, during the ſaid Suſpenſion, under "Pain of Deprivation and Removal from his "Biſhoprick. (a)

Given under our Seal, the Sixth Day of September, 1686.

The Biſhop would have ſpoken, before the Sentence was read, to have recapitulated the Heads of his CASE, and to have offer'd full Proof of his Compliance, in Silencing Doctor Sharp; And to have deſired, Since their Lordſhips had hitherto been his Accuſers and Judges, they would at laſt, according to the uſual Cuſtom, have been his Council, and order'd their Advocate to lay down the Nature of the Crime, the Law it offended, and the Law it was to be puniſh'd by; that he might have given in his Exceptions; But no Speaking was allowed, till the Sentence was read. And when, after the reading, the Biſhop ſaid, Have your Lordſhips any farther Service to Command me? - - - - - The Lord Chancellor anſwer'd, No. - - - - And im-

(a) The Biſhop of Rocheſter did afterward deny his concurring in this Sentence. I gave (ſays he) my poſitive Vote for the Biſhop's Acquittal both the times when his Suſpenſion came in queſtion. ---- After my Lord London was ſentenc'd, his Lordſhip knows, I was always upon the Watch to obſtruct all farther Proceedings againſt him; nay, his Lordſhip well remembers, I had once obtain'd to have his Suſpenſion taken off, if he would but have made an ordinary Submiſſion.

mediately

1686. 2 Jac. II.

mediately after, the Biſhops of Dureſme, Rocheſter and Peterborough were appointed Commiſſioners to Exerciſe all manner of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction within the Dioceſe of London, during the Suſpenſion of the Biſhop.

Juriſdiction of the See of London committed to others.

Dr. Sharp was likewiſe Judicially Suſpended; but, in pretended Mercy, was ſoon after reſtored to the Exerciſe of his Function. (b)

Other Attempts of introducing Popery.

There were many other violent Attempts in Favour of Popery, and in Prejudice to the Eſtabliſh'd Church; which are thus well deliver'd in the Memoirs of a late Writer. - - - - - " King James made " haſte to accompliſh the Grand Deſign, which a " headſtrong Party about him puſh'd on, as the " certain way, in their Opinion, to eternize his " Name in this World, and to merit an Eternal " Crown in the other. They foreſaw, that this " was the Critical Juncture, and the only one that " happen'd ſince the Days of Queen Mary, to re- " ſtore their Religion in England: And if they " were wanting to themſelves in making uſe of it, " the Proſpect of a Proteſtant Succeſſor would in- " fallibly prevent their having any ſuch Opportu- " nity for the future. King James was pretty far " advanc'd in Years; and what was to be done, " requir'd Expedition; for all their Labour would " be loſt, if he ſhould die before the Accompliſh- " ment. If he had been younger, or the next pre- " ſumptive Heir had not been a Proteſtant, there " had been no ſuch abſolute Neceſſity for Diſpatch; " but the Uncertainty of the King's Life call'd for " more than ordinary Diligence, in a Deſign that " depended merely upon it.

" The Party being reſolved, for theſe Reaſons, to " bring about, in the Compaſs of one ſingle Life, " (and that already far ſpent) what ſeem'd to be " the Work of an whole Age; they made large " Steps towards it. Roman-Catholicks were not on- " ly employ'd in the Army, but brought into Pla- " ces of greateſt Truſt in the State. The Earl of " Clarendon was forthwith remov'd from the Of- " fice of Privy-Seal and the Government of Ire- " land, to make room for the Earl of Tyrconnel in " the one, and the Lord Arundel in the other. Fa- " ther Petre, a Jeſuit, was ſworn of the Privy- " Council. And tho' by the Laws it was High- " Treaſon, for any to aſſume the Character of the " Pope's Nuncio; yet theſe were become too ſlen- " der Cobwebs, to hinder a Roman Prelate to ap- " pear publickly at London in that Quality: And " one of the greateſt Peers in England was diſgrac'd, " for not paying him that Reſpect, which the Laws " of the Land made criminal.

Ambaſſador ſent to the Pope.

" To bear the Publick Character of Ambaſſador " to the Pope, was likewiſe an open Violation of " the Laws: But ſo fond was the Governing Party " about King James to ſhew their new-acquir'd " Trophies at Rome, that the Earl of Caſtlemain " was diſpatch'd thither Extraordinary Ambaſſa- " dor, with a Magnificent Train, and a moſt Sum- " ptuous Equipage. (c) What his Secret Inſtructions " were, may be partly gueſs'd by his Publick ones; " which were, To reconcile the Kingdoms of Eng- " land, Scotland and Ireland to the Holy See; from " which they had, for more than an Age, fallen off " by Hereſy.

His Reception at Rome.

" Innocent XI. receiv'd this Embaſſy, as one that " ſaw farther than thoſe who ſent it. The Ambaſ- " ſador had but a cold Reception of the Holy Fa- " ther; and none of the Cardinals, but thoſe of a " particular Faction, and the good-natur'd Cardinal " of Norfolk, took any further Notice of it, than " good Manners oblig'd them. The Court of " Rome were too refin'd Politicians, to be impos'd " upon with Shew and Noiſe; and knew the " World too well, to expect great Matters from " ſuch haſty, ill-tim'd Advances as were made to " them. Not only ſo, but Innocent having an A- " verſion in his Nature to a Faction he knew King " James was embark'd in, which he never took " Pains to diſſemble, was not over-fond of an Em- " baſſy from a Prince, who was in an Intereſt he " had long wiſh'd to ſee humbled. King James " met with nothing but Mortifications at Rome, in " the Perſon of his Ambaſſador; which occaſion'd " his making as ſhort a Stay as was poſſible. In " which may be ſeen the vaſt Difference there was " betwixt the Politicks of Italy, and thoſe of a " headſtrong Party in England. And however the " World has been impos'd upon, to believe, that " the Pope's Nuncio at the Engliſh Court, who is " ſince made a Cardinal, was an Inſtrument to puſh " on Things to Extremities; yet certain it is, he " had too much good Senſe, to approve of all the " Meaſures that were taken; and therefore deſir'd " often to be recall'd, leſt he ſhould be thought to " have a Hand in them.

" Altho' the Earl of Caſtlemain was pleas'd, upon " his Examination before the Parliament, to ſay, " (d) That his Embaſſy to Rome, was only ſuch as is " between Two Temporal Princes, about Compliment " and Commerce; yet Father Warner, in his Manu- " ſcript Hiſtory, quoted by a Learned Author, gives " us another Account of it, in theſe Words: " Things being thus ſettled (ſays he) within the " Realm; the next Care His Majeſty had, was to " unite his Countries to the Obedience of the Biſhop " of Rome, and the Apoſtolick See; which had been " cut off (by Hereſy) about an Age and an Half " before. To try the Pope's Inclination, in the Year " 1685. he ſent Mr. Carryl thither; who ſucceed- " ing according to his Wiſhes, and being recall'd, the " Earl of Caſtlemain was ſent the next Year as Ex- " traordinary Ambaſſador to the Pope, in the Name " of the King and the Catholicks of England, to make " their Submiſſion to the Holy See.

" Caſtlemain had ſeveral Audiences of the Pope, " but to little Purpoſe; for whenever he began " to talk of Buſineſs, the Pope was ſeaſonably " attack'd with a Fit of Coughing, which broke off " the Ambaſſador's Diſcourſe for that Time, and " oblig'd him to retire. Theſe Audiences and Fits " of Coughing continu'd from Time to Time, " while Caſtlemain continu'd at Rome, and were " the Subject of Diverſion to all but a particular

(b) I have heard Archbiſhop Teniſon ſay, That He, as Vicar of St. Martin's, us'd ſeveral Endeavours with ſome of the Nobility in vain, to obtain a Liberty of Preaching for his Neighbour, Dr. Sharp; till at laſt repreſenting his Caſe to Mr. Pepys, as a good-natur'd Man with Wife and Children, Mr. Pepys went freely to the King, and prevail'd with his Majeſty to reſtore him to the Exerciſe of his Office; till which Time, he had a Guard, or Centinel to attend his Lodgings.

(c) The Earl of Caſtlemain, in his own Printed Account of what was ſaid by him before the Houſe of Commons, in the next Reign, did make his Embaſſy to have been juſt ſuch as is between Two Temporal Princes about Compliment and Commerce; and ſaid he could prove it, but that he had burnt his Papers. I can help him (ſays Dr. Gee, in his Notes on the Memorial of Father Parſons) out of Father Warner's Hiſtory, with a Breviate of his Inſtructions for his Embaſſy to Rome, which was in the Name of the King and the Catholicks of the Realm, to teſtify their Canonical Obedience, or to make their Submiſſion to the Holy See. That Father, (Warner) the King's Confeſſor, expreſs'd himſelf thus, in his Latin MS. Rebus intra Regnum utcunque ſtabili Concordiâ florentibus, proxima Sereniſſimo Regi cura fuit ſuas Ditiones cum Eccleſiæ Catholicæ Capite Romano Pontifice, Sanctaque Sede Apoſtolicâ connectere; à qua Hæreſis eas ante Seſquiſæculum divulſerat. Ad tentandum ergo vadum Anno 1685. Romam deſtinat Joannem Carillum, & ſtirpis Claritudine, & Opulentiâ Illuſtrem. Cui revocato, cunctis ex voto ſervis, Legatus Extraordinarius, eo deſtinatus eſt Anno ſequenti 1686. Illuſtriſſimus Comes de Caſtlemain, Obedientiam Canonicam Jacobi & Catholicorum Regni nomine teſtaturus.

(d) There was publiſh'd at London by the King's Printer, Henry Hills, A Relation of the Journey, Entrance, and Reception at Rome, of His Excellency the Earl of Caſtlemain, His Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary to His Holineſs.

1686. 2 Jac. II.

" Faction at that Court. At length he was adviſ'd " to come to Threats, and to give out, That he " would be gone, ſince he could not have an Op- " portunity to Treat with the Pope about the Buſi- " neſs he came for. Innocent was ſo little concern'd " for the Ambaſſador's Reſentment, that when they " told him of it, he anſwer'd with his ordinary " Coldneſs, E bene, ſe voul anderſene ditegli adon- " que che ſi levi di buon matino al freſco e che a " mezzo giorno ſi repoſi, per che in queſti paeſi non " biſogna viaggiare al caldo del giorno. --- i. e. Well ! " let him go : And tell him, It were fit he riſe early " in the Morning, that he may reſt himſelf at Noon ; " for in this Country, it's dangerous to travel in the " Heat of the Day. (e)

Ambaſſador recall'd from Rome.

" In the end, he was recall'd ; being able to ob- " tain of the Pope Two trifling Requeſts only, that " could hardly be deny'd to an ordinary Courier : " The one was, A Licenſe for the Mareſchal De " Humier's Daughter, to marry her Uncle : And " the other, A Diſpenſation of the Statutes of the " Jeſuits Order, to Father Petre, to enjoy a Bi- " ſhoprick : - - - - The want of which, (ſays my Au- " thor) was the Reaſon that the Archbiſhoprick of " York was kept ſo long vacant.

Little reſpected by the Pope,

But only by the Jeſuits.

(f) " Tho' the Pope carry'd himſelf in this manner " towards the Engliſh Ambaſſador, yet the Jeſuits " paid him the higheſt Reſpect imaginable ; which " did him no Service with the Old Man, for He " and that Order were never hearty Friends. They " entertain'd him in their Seminary with the great- " eſt Magnificence ; and nothing was wanting in " Nature or Art, to grace his Reception. All " their Stores of Sculpture, Painting, Poetry and Rhe- " torick, ſeem to have been exhauſted upon this " Entertainment. And tho' all the Inſcriptions and " Emblems did centre upon the Triumph of the Ro- " miſh Religion, and the Ruin of Hereſy in Eng- " land ; yet Care was taken, not to omit ſuch par- " ticular Trophies and Devices, as were adapted to " their new-acquir'd Liberty of ſetting up their " Publick Schools at London. Among a great ma- " ny other Panegyricks upon King James, the fol- " lowing Diſtich was plac'd below an Emblem of " England :

Reſtituit Veterem tibi Religionis honorem,

Anglia, Magnanimi Regis aperta fides.

[Thus Engliſh'd :]

The open Zeal of this Magnanimous King, has reſtor'd to England its Ancient Religion.

" There was alſo this Inſcription put round King " James's Picture :

Potentiſſimo & Religioſiſſimo
Magnæ Britanniæ
Regi
JACOBO II.
Generoſa
Catholicæ Fidei Confeſſione
Regnum Auſpicanti ;
ET
INNOCENTIO XI. P. M.
Per Legatum
Nobiliſſimum & Sapientiſſimum
D. Rogerium Palmerium,
Comitem de Caſtlemain ;
Obſequium deferenti
Collegium Romanum
Regia Virtutum Inſignia Dedicat.

[Thus Engliſh'd :]

To the Moſt Potent and Moſt Religious JAMES the Second, King of Great-Britain ; beginning his Reign with the Generous Confeſſion of the Catholick Faith ;

AND
Paying his Obedience to Pope
INNOCENT XI.
By the Moſt Noble and Moſt Wiſe (g)
Roger Palmer, Earl of Caſtlemain :
The Roman College
Dedicates
Theſe Royal Emblems of his Virtues.

" In the Great Hall, the Ambaſſador was ha- " rangu'd by the Rector of the College, in a Latin " Speech. And it may not be amiſs to mention a " Device, that related to King James's having a " Son ; which was, A Lilly, from whoſe Leaves " there diſtill'd ſome Drops of Water ; which, as " the Naturaliſts ſay, becomes the Seed of New " Lillies ; and the Motto was, Lachrimor in Pro- " lem - - - i. e. I weep for Children : - - - - And un- " derneath was this Diſtich ;

Pro Natis Jacobe ! Gemis, Flos candide Regum ?
Hos Natura Tibi ſi neget, Aſtra dabunt.

[Thus Engliſh'd :]

Doſt thou Sigh for Children, O James*! thou Beſt of Kings ? If Nature denies, Heaven will Grant them.*

" There was one Inſcription more this Author " takes Notice of ; which being one of the moſt un- " accountable things of that kind, afforded Matter " for the Wits of Rome to deſcant upon. Though " the Words are ill choſe, and ſtrangely harſh, yet

---

(e) Father Porter, Reader of Divinity in the College of St. Iſidore, at Rome, contracted a Friendſhip with the Engliſh Ambaſſador, the Earl of Caſtlemain, and dedicated an abominable Book to him, entitled, Securis Evangelica ; Licenſed by the Companion of the Maſter of the Sacred Palace, as a Book very uſeful for the Inſtruction of the Faithful. Therein the Author makes the Proteſtants God to be the very Devil, and their Heaven to be Hell it ſelf, p. 151: Colligitur Deum Religionis Reformatæ non differre à Diabolo, nec ejus Paradiſum ab Inferno.—— Nay, he makes the whole Plan of the Reformed Religion to be built upon this horrid Blaſphemy, That Chriſt Jeſus was a Falſe Prophet. Structura Religionis Reformatæ fundatur in hac horrenda blaſphemia, Chriſtum eſſe falſum Prophetam, &c.

(f) See what Dr. Burnet writes in his Reaſons againſt Repealing the Teſt, 1687.—— When Rome has expreſs'd ſo great a Jealouſy of the Intereſt that the Order of Jeſuits had in our Councils, that Father Morgan (who was thought to influence our Ambaſſador) was order'd to leave Rome. No Reaſon can be given, why Cardinal Howard ſhould be ſhut out of all their Councils, unleſs it be, that the Nobleneſs of his Birth, and the Gentleneſs of his Temper, are too hard even for his Religion and his People, to be maſter'd by them.

(g) See an Account of the vain Letters which the Jeſuits write from England to Rome, of the happy Progreſs of the Catholick Religion by the Zeal of the King, in the Three Letters of the State of Italy, 1688. 8*vo*.—— See there likewiſe a remarkable Story of Father Canne, a Jeſuit, belonging to the Engliſh Houſe at Rome, well known in England by ſome of his Writings, and in particular, by one againſt the Oath of Allegiance ; now a great Confident of the Earl of Caſtlemain, in his Embaſſy to the Pope, &c.—— The Reaſon why ſo little Reſpect was had to the Engliſh Ambaſſador, and to every Thing he propoſed, p. 113.—— The Pope's dry Anſwer to our Ambaſſador, when he threaten'd to leave Rome, &c. p. 124.

1686. 2 Jac. II.

" it's certain the Fathers had a peculiar Meaning in " them; and they refer to King James's Influence " upon his Brother to turn Roman-Catholick at his " Death. The Inſcription runs thus:

JACOBO Secundo, Angliæ Regi,
Quod ipſo Vitæ Exemplo præeunte
Et impellente Conſiliis
Carolus Frater & Rex
Mortem Obierat admodum piam,
Regnaturus à tergo Frater
Alas Carolo addidit:
ET
Ut Cælo dignum,
ET
Dignum ſe Rege Legatum, eligeret,
Fratrem Miſit.

[Thus Engliſh'd:]

To King JAMES the Second, King of England; for having, by his Example and his Counſel, prevailed with Charles his Brother to Die a Pious Death:

And being to Succeed him,

He gave Wings to Charles; And that he might make Choice of an Ambaſſador Worthy of Heaven and Himſelf, he Sent his Brother.

" I will not pretend to give the nice Senſe of " theſe Words; and though I would, I cannot, " there being ſuch a Perplexity in them.

" But for the Expreſſions that follow, I may " venture to give them in Engliſh, though they " ſeem to be as much out of the Ordinary Road " as the former:

Nuncii ex Angliâ Proceres
Retulerunt Regibus aliis Jacobum Regnantem
Cælo
Primus omnium retulit Carolus.
Nec immerito;
Reges alii Legatos ſuſcipiunt
Mittuntque Principes,
Legatos Reges Deum excipere decuit;
Jacobum mittere.

[Thus Engliſh'd:]

Engliſh Noblemen were ſent to other Kings, to acquaint them with King James's Acceſſion to the Crown: But Charles firſt of all brought the News of it to Heaven.

It was but reaſonable, (h)
For Kings to ſend and receive Princes as Ambaſſadors:
But
It became God Almighty to receive, and James to ſend no Ambaſſador but Kings.

K. James, before his Acceſſion to the Throne, had but little Intereſt at Rome.

" To ſee King James Neglected at Rome in the " Pontificat of Innocent XI. was not ſo ſtrange, " conſidering what has been ſaid of his Antipathy " to a Faction wherein that Prince was concern'd: " But that in the Time of Innocent's Predeceſſor, " and when he was Duke of York, he ſhould be " deny'd a common Favour, which that Court " ſeldom or never refuſes to any one, was a Thing " altogether unaccountable: Yet ſo it was, That " he having ſent the late Earl of Peterborough to " Italy, to Eſpouſe the Princeſs of Modena in his " Name; all the Intereſt he could make, was not " able to obtain a Diſpenſation for the Marriage. " The Account of this Matter being ſo little known, " and that Earl's Book wherein he mentions it, " being ſo rare, and, as I am told, but Twenty-" four Copies Printed, I ſhall give it in the Earl's " own Words:----

" But now from Rome there was Advice (ſays he) " by the Abbot of Angeo, of the great Difficulties " that aroſe in the Conſultations of this Affair, " (meaning the Marriage.) The French Ambaſ-" ſador (the Duke D'Eſtrees) favour'd the Mar-" riage, with all the Power of the French Faction; " ſo did Cardinal Barberini, and all the other " Friends and Allies of the Houſe of Eſté. But " His Holineſs himſelf was very averſe; and Car-" dinal Altieri, who was the Governing Nephew, " a profeſs'd and violent Oppoſer. The main " Pretence for this Obſtinacy, was the Duke of " York's not Declaring himſelf Publickly of the " Romiſh Church, though they knew that he was " of a long time reconcil'd to it.

" But now at laſt (continues the Earl of Peter-" borough) came from Rome the Abbot of Angeo " without the Diſpenſation, which he could by " no means obtain, by reaſon that Cardinal Altieri " was Inflexible; and Threats of Excommunication " were Iſſued out againſt any that ſhould undertake " to Perform or Celebrate the Marriage. Whereupon " we were all upon the Fears and Expectations of a " total Rupture. The Dutcheſs of Modena herſelf, " a Zealous, if not a Bigot Woman, was in great " pain about the Part that might ſeem Offenſive " to His Holineſs, or Neglective of his Authority: " And the Young Princeſs took Occaſion from " hence to ſupport her Unwillingneſs. But in " truth, Cardinal Barberini, upon whom the Dutcheſs " had great dependance, and all the other Adhe-" rents and Relations of the Houſe of Eſté, being " every day more and more poſſeſs'd of the Honour " and Intereſt they were like to find in this " Alliance, were ſcandaliz'd at the unreaſonable " Obſtinacy of the Pope and his Nephew; and " did frankly adviſe the Dutcheſs of Modena " ſuddenly to Make up and Perfect the Marriage: " The Peace and Excuſe of the Thing being eaſier " to be had after it was done, than any preſent " Licenſe to be obtain'd for doing it.

" The Biſhop of Modena was then applied to " (adds the Earl) for the Performance: But he " refuſing, a poor Engliſh Jacobine was found, " Brother to Jerome White, that afterwards ſerv'd " the Dutcheſs, who having nothing to loſe, and " on whom the Terror of Excommunication did " not ſo much prevail, did Undertake it, and ſo " he Perform'd the Ceremony. ---- (Thus far the Earl of Peterborough.)

Oppreſſion to the Church, in making New Biſhops.

But perhaps one of the moſt fatal Ways of Oppreſſing the Church of England, was by Bringing New Biſhops into it, for an Injury and Reproach to Religion. Thus, upon the Death of Two of the moſt Eminent Prelates of the Church of England, who had beſt defended it, and grac'd it with (h) The Earl of Caſtlemain, the King's Ambaſſador at Rome, preſs'd the Pope and the Cardinal Patron Cibo to admit the King of England to mediate a Reconciliation between the Courts of Rome and Verſailes; and ſaid, when that was brought about, the two Kings would effectually ſerve the Cauſe of the Church, and begin with the Deſtruction of Holland. This the Pope told to the Head of the Imperial Faction at Rome, who wrote it to the Emperor, and the Emperor wrote it to the Prince of Orange. Biſhop Burnet's Preface to Serm. 1713. 8*vo*. —— Thus by the wiſe Providence of infatuating wicked Councils, a Popiſh Embaſſy to Rome help'd to bring about a Proteſtant Revolution from Holland.

Puffendorf informs us, that this Pope Innocent XI. writ a Letter to the King upon his Acceſſion to the Crown, to this effect, " That He was highly pleas'd with his Majeſty's Zeal for the " Catholick Religion, but he was afraid his Majeſty might puſh " it too far, and inſtead of contributing to his own Greatneſs, " and to the Advancement of the Catholick Church, he might " come to do both it and himſelf the greateſt Prejudice, by " attempting that which his Holineſs was well aſſur'd, from " long Experience, could not ſucceed.

Piety

1686. 2 Jac. II.

Piety and Learning, (i) Dr. Richard Pearſon, Biſhop of Cheſter, and Dr. John Fell, Biſhop of Oxford; the King was pleas'd to pick out two Succeſſors the moſt remote from the Character of thoſe their Predeceſſors: For about the middle of Auguſt, the King nam'd Dr. Thomas Cartwright, Dean of Rippon, to be Biſhop of Cheſter; and Dr. Samuel Parker, Archdeacon of Canterbury, to be Biſhop of Oxford. And on Octob. 17. they were Conſecrated at Lambeth, and ſoon after made the unhappy Tools of Popery and Arbitrary Power; but, as it pleas'd God, to their own Deſtruction, rather than to the intended Ruin of the Church.

Caſe of the Diſſenters.

It is very plain, That if King James could have got the Biſhops and Clergy and Body of the Church of England to have Perſecuted and Extirpated the Diſſenters, he would have choſe that Way of utmoſt Severity, much rather than that of Indulgence and Toleration. The Diſſenters (by their own Confeſſion) were this Year Proſecuted in the wonted manner. "Their Meetings were frequently "Diſturb'd both in City and Country: Fines "were Levied upon them: The Informers broke in "upon Mr. Fleetwood, Sir John Hartop, and ſome "others, at Stoke-Newington, to Levy Diſtreſſes, "for Conventiclers, to Six or Seven hundred "Pounds; and many were Excommunicated, and "had Capias's Iſſued out againſt them: But particular Perſons, upon their making Application to "thoſe Above, were more favour'd than had been "uſual.

"Injunctions went out from ſeveral of the Biſhops, under the Seal of their Offices, to all Miniſters in their Dioceſes, ſtrictly to Enjoin and Require all Churchwardens to Preſent thoſe that did "not come to Church, or that receiv'd not the Sacrament at Eaſter. Theſe Injunctions were Publickly "Read in Hertfordſhire and Eſſex, and many "other Places: And it ſeem'd to be a prevailing "Opinion, That the Proteſtant Diſſenters muſt be "Proſecuted, or Popery could not be Suppreſſed. "And therefore the Juries in ſome Places at the "Aſſizes this Year, preſented it as their Opinion, "That unleſs the Diſſenters were effectually Proſecuted, their Dangers could not be Prevented "or Remedy'd. But the Unſeaſonableneſs of "ſuch Rigors, and the Scandalous Villanies and "Perjuries of many of the moſt Noted Informers "both in City and Country too, made Senſible "Men ſoon weary.

1686. 2 Jac. II.

"A Diſpenſation or Licenſe Office was Set up "this Year, where all Comers might have Diſpenſations, paying only Fifty Shillings for themſelves "and their Families. Many of thoſe who were Proſecuted as Conventiclers, took out Diſpenſations; "which not only ſtopt all Proceſſes that were commenc'd, but gave them Liberty to keep Meetings "for the future. Many were Releaſed from their "Impriſonment, and had their Fines remitted, by "the King's Pardon: Among the reſt, Mr. Baxter "obtain'd his Pardon, by the Mediation of the Lord "Powis: His Fine was Remitted: And on Wedneſday Nov. 24. Sir Samuel Aſtry ſent his Warrant to "the Keeper of the King's-Bench Priſon to Diſcharge "him. But he gave Sureties for his Good-Behaviour: His Majeſty Declaring, (for his Satisfaction) "That it ſhould not, in him, be interpreted a Breach "of the Good-Behaviour, for him to reſide in London; which was not allowable, according to the "Oxford Act: (k) And this was entred upon his Bail-piece, i. e. the Parchment in which his Bail was "given. Notwithſtanding this, he continu'd ſome "time after in the Rules: And on Feb. 28. following, removed to a Houſe he took in Charter-Houſe-Yard.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

The King reſolv'd to Repeal the Penal Laws and Teſt,

The King was now fully Reſolv'd upon Repealing, if poſſible, the Penal Laws and Teſt, and upon Diſpenſing with them in the mean time. So that Father Petre himſelf was now of the Privy-Council: And moſt of the Engliſh Papiſts were put into Offices Military and Civil; Popiſh Sheriffs, Popiſh Juſtices, without Oaths, or any other Qualification but that of the King's Religion. (l) Some of the Proteſtant Gentlemen, when they found the Laws were to Bind them only, not the Roman Catholicks, they put in for an Exemption

(i) To encourage the inferior Clergy to make open Profeſſion of Popery, without danger of incurring the Loſs of their Benefices; a Precedent was given of ſafe Apoſtacy in Mr. Edward Sclater, Miniſter of Putney near London, who declared himſelf a Papiſt, and triumph'd in publiſhing his Reaſons for it: Conſenſus Veterum, Or the Reaſons of Edward Sclater, Miniſter of Putney, for his Converſion to the Catholick Faith and Communion. Permiſſu Superiorum. London, printed by Henry Hills, 1686. 4*to.* He tells the World "he had not turn'd out of Intereſt, "for he was eaſily perſuaded to look upon Intereſt as a thing "worth nothing". But ſays his Anſwerer Dr. Gee, To be ſerious with you, With what Face can you write this? when almoſt all the Kingdom knows, that you hold both your Livings ſtill, tho' you diſown your being ſo much as a Member of the Church of England; and how briskly you hector'd and quarrell'd the Church of Worceſter when they only deſir'd to fill the Cure of Putney with a Miniſter of the Church of England; which you denied any longer to own your ſelf to be.

(k) The Proteſtant Intereſt ſuffer'd in all Parts of Europe, by Popery getting on the Engliſh Throne. 1. In France, See Order of the King in Council, on Complaint of the French Ambaſſador, that a Book entitled, Les Plaintes des Proteſtants cruellement opprimes dans le Royaume de France, tranſlated into Engliſh and printed here, be, with the Original, publickly burnt, &c. Dated Whitehall, May 8. 1686. The Author was the eminent Monſieur Claude, a Refugee in Holland, where he died ſoon after the Writing of this Book. A third Edition of the Tranſlation into Engliſh was publiſh'd at London in 1708. with a Preface, relating how the Original in French was firſt publiſh'd in 1686. and then tranſlated into Engliſh, a Copy whereof a Merchant of London ſent to one of his Brothers in France, and ſome time after acquainted him, that upon the Inſtances of the French Ambaſſador at this Court, the ſame had been order'd to be burnt, and the Tranſlator and Printer thereof almoſt ruin'd by Impriſonments and Fines, and that the Papiſts took a great deal of Care to ſuppreſs all the Copies, &c. 2. In Savoy. See the Hiſtory of the Perſecution of the Vallies of Piedmont, containing an Account of what had paſſed in the Diſſipation of the Churches and the Inhabitants of the Valleys, which happened in the Year 1686. London, Printed for Tho. Newborough 1688. 4*to.* 3. In our Engliſh Factories abroad. See a Petition of the Engliſh Factory at Liſbon, to the Lord Biſhop of London, complaining, that their Conſul and Chaplain had been ſummon'd to appear at the Council Board of the Inquiſition, where they were forbid the publick Practice of their Religion, and ſtrictly charg'd not to meet any longer for any Divine Service or Preaching, in Sept. 1686. Dr. Geddes's Tracts againſt Popery 1715. 8*vo.* The good Biſhop could do him no Service, and the Mind of the King was ſo well known, that ſoon after Mr. Michael Geddes, the Engliſh Chaplain at Liſbon, and Mr. Edward Hinde, Chaplain at Oporto, were both glad to eſcape with their Lives. —— The Publiſher of Dr. Geddes's Tracts, 1715. repreſents at large this Caſe of the Engliſh Factory at Liſbon, when in 1686. the Chaplain was cited with the Conſul of the Merchants to come before the Inquiſition, &c.

(l) The Progreſs of Popery in England is thus repreſented in a Letter of one Jeſuit at Liege to another at Friburgh, dated Feb. 2. 168$\frac{5}{6}$. —— The Biſhop of Oxford is a great Favourer of the Catholick Faith, he propos'd to the Council, Whether it did not ſeem to be expedient, that at leaſt one College ſhould be granted to the Catholicks at Oxford, that they might not be forc'd to ſtudy beyond Sea at ſuch great Expenes? but it is not yet known what Anſwer he had. The ſame Biſhop, having invited two of our Brethren, together with ſome of the Nobility, drank the King's Health to a certain Heretick Lord who was in Company, wiſhing his Majeſty good Succeſs in all his Undertakings; adding alſo, that the Religion of the Proteſtants in England did not ſeem to him in a better Condition than Buda was before it was taken, and that they were next to Atheiſts who defended that Faith. Many embrace the true Religion, and four of the moſt conſiderable Earls have lately made publick Profeſſion of it. —— Father Alexander Keynes, the Provincial's Nephew, to whom is committed the Care of the Chapel belonging to the Elector Palatine's Envoy, is continually taken up in ſolving and anſwering the Queſtions of Hereticks, who doubt of their Faith, of whom you may ſee two or three together walking by the Chapel Door, continually diſputing about ſome Point of Religion. —— We gradually begin to get footing in England: We teach Humanity Learning at Lincoln, Norwich, and York, and at Worceſter we have a publick Chapel, protected by a Guard of the King's Soldiers; and we are to buy ſome Houſes in the Town of Wigan in Lancaſhire. The Catholick Intereſt grows very ſtrong; at ſome Churches granted to the Catholicks, upon Holy-Days, there are often counted 1500 preſent at the Sermon. At London as

1687. 3 Jac. II.

And to diſpenſe with taking any Oaths.

as well as the others. It was pleaſant enough to read, from Whitehall, March 1. 168$\frac{6}{7}$. "The Right "Honourable the Earl of Craven, Cuſtos Rotulorum "for the County of Middleſex, this Day acquainted "His Majeſty, that the Bench of Juſtices of the "Peace for the ſaid County, had deſir'd his Lord-"ſhip (at their General Seſſion of the Peace) in "their Names, humbly to Beſeech His Majeſty "to be Graciouſly Pleaſed to Grant the ſame Diſ-"penſation from taking the Oaths to the Proteſtant "Juſtices, He has been pleas'd to Grant to the Ca-"tholicks; but in ſuch manner as His Majeſty "ſhall think fit. Which Method His Majeſty was "pleas'd to receive very Graciouſly; and was "pleas'd to ſay, He took kindly their putting their "Confidence in Him, and He would certainly take "Care of them.--- And ſo, by this means, the Adminiſtration of Country Juſtice, and the Magiſtracy in Cities and other Corporations, were put into the worſt of Hands, the moſt Bigotted Papiſts, and the Fierceſt Fanaticks.

The Beginnings of a Diſpenſing Power,

It is ſaid, "King Charles II. was the firſt "King of England that ever Aim'd at any thing "like a Diſpenſing Power.---- In the Year 1662 he was prevail'd upon, for ſome Reaſons of State, to Iſſue out a Proclamation, Diſpenſing with ſome few things that related to the Act of Uniformity, but without the leaſt Regard to Roman Catholicks. And though, in his Speech to the Parliament upon that Occaſion, he did in a manner acknowledge that he had no ſuch Power, by ſaying, That if the Diſſenters would Demean themſelves Peaceably and Modeſtly, He could heartily wiſh He had ſuch a Power of Indulgence to uſe upon Occaſion: Yet the Parliament were ſo jealous of this Innovation, that they Preſented the King with an Addreſs againſt the Proclamation, and plainly told him, That he had no Power to Diſpenſe with the Laws without an Act of Parliament.---- Notwithſtanding this Remonſtrance, King Charles made another Attempt, in the Year 1672. and in a Speech to both Houſes, did mention his Declaration of Indulgence, and acquainted them with the Reaſons that induc'd him to it; telling them withal, how little the Roman-Catholicks ſhould be the better for it.---- Upon which the Houſe of Commons made an Addreſs to His Majeſty, for Recalling this Declaration; wherein they told him, That in Claiming a Power to Diſpenſe with Penal Laws, His Majeſty had been very much Miſ-inform'd, ſince no ſuch Power was ever Claim'd or Exercis'd by any of his Predeceſſors: And if it ſhould be admitted, might tend to the Interrupting of the Free Courſe of the Laws, and Altering the Legiſlative Power, which has always been acknowledged to reſide in his Majeſty, and his Two Houſes of Parliament. King Charles was ſo far ſatisfy'd in the Matter contain'd in this Addreſs, That he immediately cancell'd his Declaration of Indulgence, tore off the Seal himſelf, and acquainted both Houſes that he had done ſo; with this further Declaration, which was entred upon Record in the Houſe of Lords, That it ſhould never be drawn into Example or Conſequence.

Under K. Charles II.

K. James claims a more Abſolute Diſpenſing Power.

And yet ſuch a Diſpenſing Power, and in a far larger Extent, King James would arrogate to himſelf; though a very Loyal Houſe of Commons had proteſted againſt it, in their Addreſs about the Popiſh Officers. The King had already carry'd this Point in Scotland with a high Hand; and the Privy-Council there had not only obſequiouſly ſubmitted to it, but ſeem'd to rejoice at it. For in a Letter to his Majeſty, 14. Febr. 168$\frac{6}{7}$ they boaſt to his Majeſty, That his Commands were exactly obey'd, and that his Royal Proclamation for Liberty of Conſcience was Printed and Publiſhed; And aſſur'd his Majeſty, That they believ'd his Promiſe, to be the beſt and greateſt Security they could have, That he would maintain the Church and their Religion as it was Eſtabliſh'd by Law.

This ready Compliance of the Scots, flatter'd the King into Hopes, that his Engliſh Subjects would be as complaiſant to his Will and Power. So on March 18. his Majeſty having aſſembled his Privy-Council, did open his Mind to them, by owning, "That he had reſolv'd to iſſue out a Declaration for a general Liberty of Conſcience to "all Perſons, of what Perſuaſion ſoever: Which "he was moved to do, by having obſerved, That "although an Uniformity in Religious Worſhip "had been endeavour'd to be eſtabliſhed within "this Kingdom, in the ſucceſſive Reigns of Four "of his Predeceſſors, aſſiſted by their reſpective "Parliaments; yet it had prov'd altogether Ineffectual. That the Reſtraint upon the Conſciences "of Diſſenters, in order thereunto, had been very "Prejudicial to the Nation, as was ſadly experienc'd by the horrid Rebellion in the Time of his "Majeſty's Father. That the many penal Laws "made againſt Diſſenters, had rather increas'd than "leſſen'd the Numbers of them. And that nothing could more conduce to the Peace and Quiet "of this Kingdom, and the Increaſe of the Number as well as of the Trade of his Subjects, than "an entire Liberty of Conſcience: It having always "been his Opinion, as moſt ſuitable to the Princi-"ples of Chriſtianity, That no Man ſhould be "perſecuted for Conſcience ſake: For he thought "Conſcience could not be forced; and that it could "never be the true Intereſt of a King of England to endeavour to do it."---. In purſuance of this Speech, the King preſently after publiſh'd this Declaration.

The King declares for Liberty of Conſcience.

1687. 3 Jac. II

His Majeſty's Gracious DECLARATION to all His Loving Subjects, for Liberty of Conſcience.

JAMES R.

Publick Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience.

"IT having pleas'd Almighty GOD, not only "to bring Us to the Imperial Crown of theſe "Kingdoms, through the greateſt Difficulties, but "to preſerve us, by a more than ordinary Providence, upon the Throne of our Royal Anceſtors; "there is Nothing now that we ſo earneſtly deſire, "as to eſtabliſh our Government on ſuch a Foundation, as may make our Subjects happy, and "unite them to us, by Inclination as well as Duty; "which, we think, can be done by no Means ſo "effectually, as by granting to them the free Exerciſe of their Religion for the Time to come; "and add that to the perfect Enjoyment of their "Property, which has never been in any Caſe invaded by us, ſince our coming to the Crown: "Which being the Two Things Men value moſt, "ſhall ever be preſerved in theſe Kingdoms, during our Reign over them; as the trueſt Methods "of their Peace, and our Glory. We cannot but "heartily wiſh, as it will eaſily be believ'd, that "all the People of our Dominions were Members our Buſineſs is carried on with the like good Succeſs; Sermons are preach'd upon every Holy-Day, and there are ſo many that frequent the Chapels, that they are not big enough to hold them. Two of our Society, Dormer and Bertue, preach continually before the King and the Queen; Father Edward Neville, before the Queen Dowager; Father Alex. Keynes, in the Chapel aforeſaid, others in other Chapels. There are many Houſes bought in the Savoy, near Somerſet-Houſe, towards the erecting the firſt College in London, for about Eighteen thouſand Florins: And they are hard at work to bring them to the Form of a College, that a School may be open'd before Eaſter.

"of

1687. 3 Jac. II.

"of the Catholick Church(m); yet we humbly thank Almighty God, it is, and hath of long Time been our conſtant Senſe and Opinion, (which upon divers Occaſions we have declared) That Conſcience ought not to be conſtrained, nor People forced, in Matters of mere Religion: It has ever been directly contrary to our Inclination, as we think it is to the Intereſt of Government, which it deſtroys, by ſpoiling Trade, depopulating Countries, and diſcouraging Strangers; and finally that it never obtain'd the End for which it was employ'd. And in this we are the more confirm'd by the Reflections we have made upon the Conduct of the Four laſt Reigns: For after all the frequent and preſſing Endeavours that were uſed in each of them, to reduce this Kingdom to an exact Conformity in Religion, it is viſible, the Succeſs has not anſwer'd the Deſign, and that the Difficulty is invincible. We therefore, out of our Princely Care and Affection unto all our loving Subjects, that they may live at Eaſe and Quiet, and for the Increaſe of Trade, and Encouragement of Strangers, have thought fit, by Virtue of our Royal Prerogative, to iſſue forth this our Declaration of Indulgence; making no doubt of the Concurrence of our Two Houſes of Parliament, when we ſhall think it convenient for them to Meet.

"In the firſt Place we do declare, That we will protect and maintain our Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and Clergy, and all other our Subjects of the Church of England, in the free Exerciſe of their Religion, as by Law Eſtabliſh'd, and in the Quiet and full Enjoyment of all their Poſſeſſions, without any Moleſtation or Diſturbance whatſoever.

"We do likewiſe declare, That it is our Royal Will and Pleaſure, That from henceforth, the Execution of all and all manner of Penal Laws in Matters Eccleſiaſtical, for not coming to Church, or not receiving the Sacrament, or for any other Non-conformity to the Religion Eſtabliſh'd, or for or by reaſon of the Exerciſe of Religion in any Manner whatſoever, be immediately ſuſpended: And the further Execution of the ſaid Penal Laws, and every of them, is hereby ſuſpended.

"And to the End, that by the Liberty hereby granted, the Peace and Security of our Government in the Practice thereof, may not be endangered; we have thought fit, and do hereby ſtraitly charge and command all our loving Subjects, That as we do freely give them leave to meet and ſerve God after their own Way and Manner, be it in private Houſes, or Places purpoſely hired or built for that Uſe; ſo that they take eſpecial Care, That nothing be preach'd or taught amongſt them, which may any ways tend to alienate the Hearts of our People from us or our Government; And that their Meetings and Aſſemblies be peaceably, openly and publickly held, and all Perſons freely admitted to them; and that they do ſignify and make known to ſome one or more of the next Juſtices of the Peace, what Place or Places they ſet apart for thoſe Uſes. 1687. 3 Jac. II.

"And that all our Subjects may enjoy ſuch their Religious Aſſemblies with greater Aſſurance and Protection, we have thought it requiſite, and do hereby command, That no Diſturbance of any Kind be made or given unto them, under pain of our Diſpleaſure, and to be further proceeded againſt with the utmoſt Severity.

"And foraſmuch as we are deſirous to have the Benefit of the Service of all our loving Subjects, which, by the Law of Nature, is inſeparably annexed to, and inherent in our Royal Perſon; and that none of our Subjects may, for the future, be under any Diſcouragement or Diſability (who are otherwiſe well inclined, and fit to ſerve us) by Reaſon of ſome Oaths or Teſts, that have been uſually adminiſtred on ſuch Occaſions; we do hereby further declare, That it is our Royal Will and Pleaſure, That the Oaths commonly call'd, The Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, and alſo the ſeveral Teſts and Declarations mention'd in the Acts of Parliament made in the 25th and 30th Years of the Reign of our late Royal Brother, King Charles the Second; ſhall not at any Time hereafter be required to be taken, declared, or ſubſcribed by any Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, who is or ſhall be employed in any Office or Place of Truſt, either Civil or Military, under us, or in our Government.

"And we do farther declare it to be our Pleaſure and Intention, from Time to Time hereafter, to grant our Royal Diſpenſations under our great Seal, to all our loving Subjects ſo to be employed, who ſhall not take the ſaid Oaths, or ſubſcribe or Declare the ſaid Teſts or Declarations in the above-mention'd Acts, and every of them.

"And to the End that all our loving Subjects may receive and enjoy the full Benefit and Advantage of our gracious Indulgence hereby intended, and may be acquitted and diſcharg'd from all Pains, Penalties, Forfeitures and Diſabilities by them, or any of them, incurred or forfeited, or which they ſhall or may at any Time hereafter be liable to, for or by reaſon of their Non-conformity, or the Exerciſe of their Religion, and from all Suits, Troubles or Diſturbances for the ſame (n); we do hereby give our free and ample

(m) And had this Reign been long, all the People (a few Sufferers excepted) muſt have been Members of the Catholick Church; and the very Children of Proteſtants ſhould have been drawn away to it. It was for this Purpoſe, not of training up the Popiſh Youth, but rather of Stealing the Proteſtant Children, that a Free-School under A. Pulton, a Jeſuit, was opened at the Savoy, aſſiſted by Thomas Parker, another Jeſuit. One Richard Burridge, ſeveral Times convicted of Blaſphemy, has told the World in his Religio Libertini, how inſtead of being entred a Student at Oxford, he was ſpirited away into the Savoy Seminary, and made a Latin Oration to King James when he viſited that School. —— Dr. Teniſon and Mr. Creſſener give Account of Proteſtant Boys that were kidnapp'd into this Foreign Place of Education. And they and ſome other of our Church Divines did all that was poſſible to recover them out of that Snare. The Reverend Mr. John Poſtlethwait, Maſter of the School at St. Martin's, heard of a Youth, whom he knew to be of an uncommon Genius and moſt excellent Parts, got into the Jeſuits School at the Savoy: This good Man (ſays Dr. Hancock in his Funeral Sermon) never left importuning his Parents who were Proteſtants, till he had got him out and under his own Care; and his Parents dying ſoon after, he maintain'd him both at School and in the Univerſity, till his diſtinguiſhing Parts had ſo preferr'd him, that he had no further Occaſion for his Aſſiſtance.

It was very remarkable, that Sir Roger L'Eſtrange, who had employ'd his Pen with great Smoothneſs and Succeſs againſt thoſe who had oppos'd the Meaſures of the Court ever ſince the Reſtoration, and even defended the Diſpenſing Power, and all Arbitrary Steps of King James, was ſo much an Enemy to Toleration, that he could not be allur'd or terrified to write in Favour of it: For which Non-Conformity all his paſt Services were nothing, and upon his offer of Excuſe, the King turn'd his Heel upon him with great Anger and Contempt.

(n) This was one of the proudeſt Inſults of Popery, not only to relax the Laws, but even to condemn the former Execution of them, and to ſet up a Court of Enquiry, who had been preſented by Law? And what had they ſuffer'd? That Satisfaction might be now made for all their Fines, Impriſonments, and Loſſes whatſoever. In the Gazette 2319. Publick Notice was given to all Roman-Catholicks and Diſſenters in the County of Eſſex, that his Majeſty's Commiſſioners for enquiring what Money hath been paid for Recuſancy or Diſſenting for Ten Years paſt, will meet at Chelmsford the 6th Inſtant, dated London, March 1. 168 7/8. In another Gazette Num. 2327. the like Notice was given for the County of Glouceſter: And in a Third, Numb. 2331. the ſame for the City of London. The true Intent of theſe Proceedings was plainly, 1. To bring Papiſts and Diſſenters into a new Alliance as Fellow Sufferers lately perſecuted by the Church of England. 2. To bring a new Teſt upon the Gentry of the Church of England, who had been chiefly concerned in putting the Laws in Execution: That they ſhould be now expos'd and puniſh'd for Perſecutors, if they would not take off

"Pardon

1687. 3 Jac. II. “ Pardon unto all Nonconformiſts, Recuſants, and “ other our loving Subjects, for all Crimes and “ Things by them committed or done contrary to “ the Penal Laws formerly made, relating to Reli- “ gion, and the Profeſſion or Exerciſe thereof. “ Hereby declaring, That this our Royal Pardon “ and Indemnity ſhall be as good and effectual to “ all Intents and Purpoſes, as if every individual “ Perſon had been therein particularly named, or “ had particular Pardons under our Great Seal; “ which we do likewiſe declare ſhall, from Time “ to Time, be granted unto any Perſon or Perſons “ deſiring the ſame. Willing and requiring our “ Judges, Juſtices, and other Officers, to take No- “ tice of, and obey our Royal Will and Pleaſure “ herein before declared.

“ And although the Freedom and Aſſurance we “ have hereby given, in Relation to religion and “ Property, might be ſufficient to remove from the “ Minds of our loving Subjects all Fears and Jea- “ louſies in relation to either; yet we have thought “ fit further to declare, (a) That we will maintain “ them in all their Properties and Poſſeſſions, as “ well of Church and Abbey-Lands, as in any other “ their Lands and Properties whatſoever.

Given at our Court at Whitehall, the Fourth Day of April, 1687. In the Third Year of our Reign.

The Diſſenters naturally fond of this Indulgence.

The Diſſenters were generally fond and proud of this Declaration, and caught greedily at the Bait, without diſcerning the Hook in it. They were not content with a ſilent Acceptance of this Liberty, but were drawn in to make Inſults of Joy for it; and preſented Addreſſes of Thanks ſo flattering and ſo fulſome, that ſome of them were thought offenſive to the very Ears of the King.

Their Addreſſes of Thanks for it.

The Anabaptiſts in and about London began the officious Courſe of Addreſſing, Apr. 14. telling the King; GREAT SIR! 'Tis the Senſe of this Invaluable Favour and Benefit, deriv'd to us from Your Royal Clemency, that compels us once more to proſtrate our ſelves at Your Majeſty's Feet, with the Tender of our moſt humble Thanks for Peace and Liberty. - - - - - Such Demonſtrations as theſe, of Your Majeſty's Tender Care of the Proſperity and Quiet of your Peaceable Subjects, will abſolutely command the Hearts of them all, &c.

Then came the Quakers, and ſaid; May it pleaſe the KING! Tho' we are not the firſt in this Way, yet we hope we are not the leaſt ſenſible of the great Favours we are come to preſent the King our Humble, Open and Hearty Thanks for. - - - - - We rejoice to ſee the Day, that a King of England ſhould from His Royal Seat ſo univerſally aſſert this Royal Principle, “ That Conſcience ought not to be reſtrain'd, “ nor People forc'd, for Matters of mere Religion, &c. 1687. 3 Jac. II.

The Independents follow'd with a like Harangue: SIR! The great Calamity we have been a long Time under, through the ſevere Execution of the Laws in Matters of Religion, has made us deeply ſenſible of Your Majeſty's Princely Clemency towards us your Diſſenting Subjects; eſpecially, ſince in the Indulgence vouchſafed, there are no Limitations hindring the Enjoyment of it with a good Conſcience, &c.

(b) The Presbyterians came not far behind the reſt, and made their grateful Acknowledgments, “ That His Majeſty's Princely Pity had now reſcu- “ ed them from their long Sufferings; and by the “ ſame Royal Act, had reſtored GOD to the Em- “ pire over Conſcience; and publiſh'd to the World “ his Royal Chriſtian Judgment, That Conſcience “ may not be forc'd; And his Reſolution, That ſuch “ Force ſhall not be attempted in His Majeſty's “ Kingdoms, during His Majeſty's Reign; which “ they therefore pray may be long over them, &c.

(c) And the Papiſts, as it was very proper, fell in with them; and in an Addreſs of May 28. They teſtified their Thankfulneſs to Almighty God, and His Majeſty, for ſo Happy an Expedient for the Eaſe and Comfort of all his Subjects: And tho' they were thought not to deſire the leaſt Eaſe or Good to thoſe that differ'd from them in Opinion; yet they did not only rejoice in the Univerſality of His Majeſty's Bounty, but that it flow'd from a Prince of their own Religion.

A late Author obſerves, “ The Presbyterians, “ Quakers, Anabaptiſts, and other Diſſenters, had “ lately been ſo haraſs'd and perſecuted, that 'tis no “ wonder they were ſo eager to lay hold of this “ Opportunity of ſheltring themſelves from Op- “ preſſion. And indeed, 'tis natural for People “ that labour under violent and racking Pains, “ greedily and thankfully to receive any Remedies “ that are offer'd them for preſent Eaſe, without “ conſidering whether it is a friendly, or unfriend- “ ly Hand that adminiſters the quieting Potion: “ But then again, as ſoon as the treacherous Effects “ of a palliative Medicine are over, and the old “ Diſtemper returns with redoubled Fury, Men are “ apt to curſe the Authors of their additional Tor- “ ments, and have recourſe to more effectual, tho' “ perhaps more violent Remedies. Thus the Preſ- “ byterians being releaſed from their Priſons, and “ allow'd the free and publick Exerciſe of their Re- “ ligion, thought no Praiſes too great to expreſs “ their Gratitude, no Bleſſings ſufficient to reward “ their Deliverer and Benefactor: Nay, ſo extrava- “ gantly thankful were ſome of them, in their Ad- “ dreſſes, as to fill them with Acknowledgments “ that nearly border'd upon Blaſphemy.

the Penal Laws. But in Truth, the hardeſt Teſt of all was, that People were to be now call'd to account by King James II. for putting the Laws in Execution againſt the Diſſenters, when in that Matter they had always acted by Inſtructions from the Court, and more eſpecially by the Counſel and for the Service of James Duke of York.

(a) See a Letter containing ſome Reflections on his Majeſty's Declaration for Liberty of Conſciences, dated 4. April, 1687. By Gilbert Burnet, D. D.

(b) There is a Printed Sheet of the Humble Addreſs of the Presbyterians, preſented to His Majeſty by Mr. Hurſt, Mr. Cheſter, Mr. Slater, Mr. Cox, Dr. Roſwell, Mr. Turner, Mr. Franklin, Mr. Deal and Mr. Reynolds, for His Majeſty's late Gracious Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience; with His Majeſty's moſt Gracious Anſwer.

(c) The Papiſts, who knew how to work the ſame Ends by contrary Expedients, thought a General Toleration in Britain would be as good an Engine for the Time, as an Inquiſition in Portugal and Spain. They pretended ſuch Indulgence to be their own Principle. They cited the Moderation of the Church-of-England Divines for it, and were out of Patience with the Diſſenters, who made any Scruple of addreſſing their Publick Thanks for it.—— See 1. The Judgment and Doctrine of the Clergy of the Church of England, concerning One Special Branch of the King's Prerogative, in Diſpenſing with the Penal Laws. Licenſed, May 2. 1687. 4to.—— 2. Reaſons why the Church of England, as well as Diſſenters, ſhould make their Addreſs of Thanks to the King's Majeſty, for his late Gracious Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience. Publiſh'd with Allowance; 1687. by Henry Hills, 4to.—— 3. A Letter, in Anſwer to Two Main Queſtions: 1. Whether Proteſtant Diſſenters ought to refuſe the propos'd Legal Toleration, including Catholick Diſſenters? 2. Whether Proteſtant Diſſenters ought to expect the ſaid Toleration, until the next Suggeſtion upon the ſuggeſted Hopes of excluding Catholicks? 4*to.* 1687.—— 4. Remarks on the ſeveral Sanguinary and Penal Laws, made in Parliament againſt Roman-Catholicks; with ſome Reaſons humbly offer'd, to obtain a Repeal of thoſe Laws, for the better Advancement of His Majeſty's Service, and the Eaſe of many of his moſt Loyal Subjects. Publiſh'd with Allowance. 4*to* 1687.

1687.
3 Jac. II.

Diſſenters, by degrees, perceiv'd the ill Deſign,

"But at laſt they open'd their (a) Eyes: They perceiv'd the Venom that lay hid in thoſe indulgent Declarations; and plainly ſaw, that tho' the King had granted a General Toleration to his Subjects, yet the Papiſts only were deſign'd to receive the Benefit of it; and that all the Places of Truſt (both Civil and Military) would ſoon devolve into their Hands. And as the ſudden Favours we receive from an inveterate Enemy, are always ſuſpicious; they likewiſe diſcover'd, that the Reaſon of this ſeeming Kindneſs of the Court, was only, becauſe their Efforts to engage the Church of England in their ſiniſtrous Deſigns had prov'd ineffectual. Then reflecting on this Fundamental Maxim of the Roman Catholicks, That they are not bound to keep Faith with Hereticks, but may uſe all manner of Equivocations and Retractations, either to convert or exterminate them; - - - - leſt they ſhould be acceſſary to their own Ruin, they held private Conferences with the Epiſcopal Party, about the moſt proper Means to diſpel the Storm that threaten'd them. To this End, a Reconcilement in Point of Religious Worſhip was chiefly thought neceſſary: And ſome Presbyterian Teachers preſs'd it ſo much in their Pulpits, that the Diſſenters of Canterbury, Rocheſter, and ſome other Places in Kent, declared, they were ready to join in Communion with the Church of England.

And began to come to a better Underſtanding with the Church of England.

Behaviour of the Members of the Church of England.

"On the other hand, The Church of England ſaw preſently thro' this Jeſuitical Contrivance, and dreaded the Conſequences: They look'd upon it as a juſt Judgment from Heaven, for the Rigor they had exercis'd againſt the Nonconformiſts in King Charles the IId's Time: They began to blame the over-ſtrain'd and indiſcreet Zeal of ſome of their Ambitious Prelates, which had reduc'd the Diſſenters (both in England, Scotland and Ireland) to the Neceſſity not only of accepting of, but even of ſuing for this General Indulgence. In ſhort, They were now made ſenſible, that thoſe who put them upon Executing the Penal Laws, did but make them Properties to hinder the Diſſenters from Uniting with the Church of England, and play them againſt one another; that their Diviſions might add Strength to the Papiſts, to deſtroy them both. Thus, by the (b) Liberty of Conſcience, King James loſt his Epiſcopal Party, who had ſet the Crown upon his Head, without winning the Presbyterians, that had endeavour'd to exclude him: (c) And both Churchmen and Diſſenters perceiving their common Danger, forgot (at leaſt ſuſpended) their old Animoſities, and join'd Counſel to prevent their imminent Ruin.

1687.
3 Jac. II.

Diſſenters Apology for themſelves.

The beſt Apology for the Moderate Nonconformiſts in the Uſe of this Liberty, is thus given by an Author of their own: "The Diſſenters were not ſo fond of hard Uſage, as to refuſe a Liberty ſo freely offer'd them; nor did they think it good Manners to enquire too narrowly how that Indulgence came about, ſo long as they were ſhelter'd by it from Oppreſſion. A Letter of Advice was hereupon publiſh'd, by that accompliſh'd Stateſman, the Marquis of Halifax, tho' without his Name. The Letter was written with a great deal of Artifice, with Deſign to inſinuate a Twofold Caution; That their New Friends were to be ſuſpected; and, It would neither be Chriſtianity nor Prudence, to hazard the Publick Safety, either by Deſire of Eaſe, or Revenge. - - - (d) His Cautions were regarded by the wiſer Part of them, notwithſtanding the Uncertainty with what Deſign this Application was made to them. As thankful as they were for their Eaſe and Liberty, they were yet fearful of the Iſſue; neither can any Number of them, of any Conſideration, be charged with hazarding the Publick Safety, by falling in with the Meaſures of the Court, of which they had as great a Dread as their Neighbours. And as for Revenge, tho' they had a fair Opportunity for it, yet could they not think it a Thing deſirable, either as Men, or as Chriſtians. If they over-did it in their Addreſſes, they thought the High-Church Party, who had been ſo us'd to topping Flights of Compliment, when returning Thanks for Diſſolving one of the beſt Parliaments, had little Reaſon to reflect on them. But they were not many that could be charg'd: Among the reſt, Mr. Baxter had no Concern in Addreſſing; but ſet himſelf at Rutland-Houſe, in Charter-Houſe-Yard, where he exercis'd his Miniſtry, in Conjunction with Mr. Sylveſter, to make a Peaceable Improvement of the Liberty afforded, ſo as to do all the Good he could, without Offence to any. The like did his Brethren in other Places. And therefore they waited in Expectation of ſeeing the Effects of the Marquis's Declaration on behalf of the Church Party; That all their former Haughtineſs (they are his own Words) towards the Diſſenters, was for ever extinguiſh'd; and that the Spirit of Perſecution was turn'd into a Spirit of Peace, Charity and Condeſcenſion:

(a) When K. James granted Liberty, by Proclamation, to Proteſtant Diſſenters, Mr. Richard Stretton made uſe of it; but he never did, or would join in any Addreſs of Thanks for it, leſt he ſhould ſeem to give Countenance to the King's aſſuming a Power above Law; and was inſtrumental to prevent ſeveral Addreſſes. Life of the Rev. Mr. Stretton, 8*vo*.

(b) This Diſpenſing, or (in effect) this Repealing Power in the Crown, was to be aſſerted by thoſe Lawyers who were now call'd to be Serjeants at Law; who gave this Motto in their Rings, A Rege Lex; as if our Laws were to be no longer Acts of Parliament, but Declarations of the King.

(c) Yet ſome of the Church-Men were courted to addreſs the King with Thanks, for the Specious Clauſe of Protecting and Maintaining the Archbiſhops, Biſhops and Clergy, and all the other Subjects, in the Free Exerciſe of their Religion as by Law eſtabliſhed: And even Five Biſhops, (ſaith Mr. Echard) Crew of Durham, Barlow of Lincoln, Cartwright of Cheſter, Wood of Litchfield and Coventry, and Watſon of St. David's, prevail'd upon ſome of their Clergy to ſign Addreſſes of Thanks for that Part of the Declaration.—— Biſhop Parker (of Oxford) attempted to do the ſame; but upon a Summons of the Clergy of the Dioceſe to St. Mary's Church in Oxford, and the producing a Form to that Purpoſe, the Clergy unanimouſly refus'd to comply, among whom was the preſent Writer.

(d) It is certain, the Court, by Toleration, did not mean the Union or better Agreement of Proteſtants, but rather kept up the Feud between the Church and the Diſſenters, and ſtudied to prevent an Accommodation among the ſeveral Parties of the Diſſenters. It has been ſince confeſs'd, that upon King James's Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience, an Expedient for Agreement was ſet on foot again between the Diſſenters. When the Congregational Brethren were beginning to debate among themſelves upon the Articles propoſed for Union, it was ſuggeſted to them, that the Work would not be grateful to King James's Court; and ſo it dropt. Hiſtory of Union between Presbyt. and Congregat. Miniſters, 1698. 4to.

Some of the Diſſenting Teachers did afterward honeſtly value themſelves, upon not accepting the illegal Liberty granted by K. James. We are told in the Life of Mr. George Troſſe, that he neither preach'd in Church-Time during King James's Liberty, leſt it ſhould be conſtrued as if he had favour'd the Diſpenſing Power, on which his Declaration was founded; nor would he join in any Addreſs of Thanks for it, that he might not ſeem acceſſary to the Deſigns of ſuch as were Patrons of Popery and Arbitrary Government —— See the like Boaſtings in the Life of Mr. Stretton, &c. And ſome Apologies were made for the Humble Addreſs of the Presbyterians, preſented to His Majeſty by Mr. Hurſt, Mr. Cheſter, Mr. Slater, Mr. Cox, Mr. Roſwell, Mr. Turner, Mr. Franklin, Mr. Deale, and Mr Reynolds, for His Majeſty's moſt Gracious Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience.

"That

2

1687. 3 Jac. II.

" That the Church of England was convinc'd of its " Error, in being ſevere to them ; and all thinking " Men were come to a General Agreement, No " more to cut our ſelves off from the Proteſtants " Abroad ; but rather enlarge the Foundations upon " which we are to build our Defences againſt the " common Enemy.

Deſigns of getting a Parliament to Repeal the Penal Laws and Teſt.

And yet, after all, this Declaration, however founded on an Arbitrary Diſpenſing Power, had kept Things ſoft and ſmooth enough, if the King had gone no farther. But it ſoon appear'd, that this Liberty was to ſerve and facilitate a greater Deſign, that of compounding a Parliament, to take off the Penal Laws and Teſt. For this Purpoſe the (a) Magiſtrates, Officers and private Gentlemen were meanly Cloſeted by the King himſelf, and were continued in, or diſmiſs'd from their Places, accordingly as they ſhewed a ſordid Compliance, or a generous Reluctancy to the private Teſt put by the King. Nay, the Judges in their Circuit, had ſecret Inſtructions from Above, to feel the Pulſe of the Gentry Commiſſion'd in the Militia, or in the Peace, and where they found any averſe to the King's Intentions, to turn them out of all Offices and Employments. And as if it were a Judgment on the King, to court an Oppoſition to this Project of Repealing the Laws, he muſt needs attempt to invite the Prince and Princeſs of Orange to join in it by their Aſſent and Approbation.

And to draw in the Approbation of the Prince and Princeſs of Orange,

On May 20. the Heer Van-Dyckvelt, an Agent from the Dutch, had his Audience of Leave of the King and Queen. The King told him, That he doubted not but that he ſhould have the Prince of Orange*'s Approbation for taking off the* Penal Laws, and Teſt ; and would have him acquaint the Prince therewith. ---- Dyckvelt Reply'd, That he was bound to acquaint the Prince with his Majeſty's Command, and would do ſo ; but he underſtood ſo much of the Prince's Senſe, that he was bold to ſay, His Highneſs was not of that Opinion. ---- The King would not be ſatisfy'd with the Freedom of Dyckvelt's Reply, but reſolv'd to ſollicit the Prince and Princeſs with the utmoſt Importunity: For they were then Preſumptive Heirs of the Crown, and their Concurrence would look like a Sanction to the Law of Repeal at home and abroad, to the preſent Age, and to Poſterity. But however, the King would not directly write upon this Subject to their Highneſſes, but he employ'd Mr. James Stewart a Lawyer (whom he had pardon'd, and receiv'd into Favour, after a long Exile, and who pretended to be intimately acquainted with Monſ. Fagel, the Penſionary of Holland) in whom the Prince repos'd an entire Confidence. So Mr. Stewart wrote to him on this Subject. But the Prince and Princeſs were ſo cautious in meddling with ſo nice an Affair, and ſo unwilling to allow Monſ. Fagel to return an Anſwer, which they knew would not be pleaſing, that Mr. Stewart was ſeveral times obliged to repeat his preſſing Requeſts, owning in his Letters, That he wrote them by the King's immediate Direction.

By means of Monſ. Fagel.

Upon this Demurr, the Papiſts induſtriouſly ſpread it abroad, That the Prince and Princeſs of Orange had fully agreed with his Majeſty's Deſign of taking off the Penal Laws, and Teſt: And the Marquis of Albyville (the King's Miniſter in Holland) ſent over ſeveral Letters, intimating, that the Prince had told him the ſame thing ; and the chief of theſe Letters was alſo made publick.

M. Fagel's Anſwer.

And therefore to diſſipate theſe falſe Reports, their Highneſſes were obliged to direct Monſieur Fagel to write to Mr. Stewart to this Effect. ---- " That ſince " he earneſtly deſired to know of him, what the " Prince and Princeſs of Orange's Thoughts were " concerning the (b) Repeal of the Penal Laws, " and more particularly of the Teſt ; he would " deal very plainly with him in that Matter, ſince " Mr. Stewart had ſaid, in his Letters, That they " were written by the King's Knowledge and Allowance. ---- Firſt, He moſt poſitively aſſured " him, That their Highneſſes had often declared, " as they did in a particular Manner to the Marquis " of Albyville, That it was their Opinion, that no " Chriſtian ought to be puniſh'd for his Conſcience, " or be ill uſed, becauſe he differed from the Publick and Eſtabliſh'd Religion ; and therefore, That " they could conſent, that the Roman-Catholicks in " England, Scotland, and Ireland ſhould be ſuffer'd " to continue in their Religion, with as much Liberty as allowed them in the United Provinces, " where it could not be denied but that they enjoy'd full Liberty of Conſcience. And as to the " Nonconformiſts, their Highneſſes did not only " conſent, but heartily approved of their having an " entire Liberty of Conſcience for the Exerciſe of " their Religion, without any Trouble, Hindrance " or Moleſtation upon that ſcore. And, That " their Highneſſes were ready to concur at any " time with his Majeſty in the ſettling and confirming that Liberty, and to protect and maintain " it as far as in them lay, according to the Language and uſual Form of Treaties, and likewiſe " to confirm it with their Guarantee, as Mr. Stewart " had mention'd in his Letters. And if his Majeſty thought fit to have their Concurrence in Repealing the Penal Laws, their Highneſſes were " ready to give it ; provided thoſe Laws ſtill remained in their full Rigor, whereby the Roman- " Catholicks were ſhut out of both Houſes of Parliament, and out of all Publick Employments " both Civil and Military ; as likewiſe all thoſe " other Laws which confirmed the Proteſtant Religion, and ſecured it againſt all the Attempts of " the Roman-Catholicks: ---- But their Highneſſes " could by no means agree to the Repeal of the " Teſt, and thoſe other Penal Laws laſt mention'd, " that tended to the Security of the Proteſtant Religion ; ſince the Roman Catholicks received no " other Prejudices from theſe, than their being excluded from Parliament, and Publick Employments ; and that by them the Proteſtant Religion " was ſheltred from all the Deſigns of the Roman-

(a) In April 1687. the King ſet out a Declaration, in ſhew only ſuſpending the Teſt Act, but in effect repealing it: Theſe Words being a Part of it, That theſe [the Teſts] ſhall not at any Time hereafter be required to be taken or ſubſcribed by any Perſon whatſoever: Upon this followed an open Violation of that Law. Many, indeed, ſtill took the Teſts ; but all thoſe who intended to merit, and pretended to Favour at Court, went on in this Contempt of the Law. Biſhop Burnet's Pref. to his Sermon. 1713. 8*vo.*

One of the Court Stratagems was to put in ſome of the moſt rigid Diſſenters into the Commiſſion of Peace ; and then to take their Petitions to be excuſed from Oaths and Sacramental Teſts, to be Partakers of the like Tenderneſs and due Favour ſhewn to the Roman-Catholicks. There was an Inſtance of this artful Way of managing put into the Gazette, to teach the Country. In the Beginning of March, 168$\frac{6}{7}$. A Requeſt of the Juſtices of Peace for the County of Middleſex, delivered by the Earl of Craven to his Majeſty, That he would be pleaſed to grant the ſame Diſpenſation from taking the Oaths to the Proteſtant Juſtices, he has been pleaſed to grant to the Catholicks ; but in ſuch manner as his Majeſty ſhall think fit.— With his Majeſty's Anſwer, That he took kindly their putting that Confidence in him, and he would certainly take care of them.

(b) A Letter written by Myn Heer Fagel, Penſionary of Holland to Mr. James Stewart, Advocate ; giving an Account of the Prince and Princeſs of Orange's Thoughts concerning the Repeal of the Teſt, and Penal Laws. Dated November 4. 1687. Printed 1687. 4*to.*

Six Papers containing Reaſons againſt the Repealing of the Acts of Parliament concerning the Teſt, &c. By Gilbert Burnet, D. D. Printed in the Year 1687. 4*to.*

Mr. Stewart was a Scotſman, whom King James had pardon'd, and received into Favour, after a long Baniſhment.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

" Catholicks againſt it, or againſt the Publick Safety. " That neither the Teſt, nor thoſe other Laws, " could be ſaid to carry any Severity in them againſt " the Roman-Catholicks, upon account of their Con- " ſciences, being only Proviſions qualifying Men to " be Members of Parliament, or to be capable of " bearing Office; by which they muſt declare be- " fore God and Men, that they were for the Prote- " ſtant Religion. So that indeed, all this amounted " to no more than a Securing of the Proteſtant Re- " ligion from any Prejudice it might receive from " the Roman-Catholicks.

" More than this, (added the Penſionary) their " Highneſſes have thought, and do ſtill think, it " ought not be ask'd or expected from them; " ſince, by that Means, the Roman-Catholicks and " their Poſterity would be for ever ſecured in their " Perſons or Eſtates, or in the Exerciſe of their Re- " ligion. And they thought the Roman-Catholicks " ought to be ſatisfy'd with that, and not diſturb " the Quiet of the Kingdom, under Pretence that " they were ſhut out of Parliament and Employ- " ments; and becauſe thoſe Laws wherein the Se- " curity of the Proteſtant Religion chiefly conſiſted, " were not repealed, by which they might be put " into a Condition to overturn it.

" As to what Mr. Stewart had writ, That the " Roman-Catholicks in Holland were not excluded " from Employments and Places of Truſt; he was " groſly miſtaken: For their Laws were expreſs in " that Point, excluding Roman-Catholicks by Name " from all Share in the Government, and from all " Employments whatſoever. It was true, he did " not know any expreſs Law that excluded them " from Military Employments: That had been hard " indeed; ſince in the firſt Foundation of their " State, they joined with them in aſſerting the " Publick Liberty, and did them eminent Service " during the Wars; therefore they were not excluded " from Military Employments. For the Publick " Safety was no ways endangered by that, both be- " cauſe the Numbers of thoſe of their Religion that " ſerved in their Troops were but ſmall, and be- " cauſe the States would eaſily prevent any Incon- " veniency that might ariſe from thence; which " could not have been ſo eaſily done, if the Roman- " Catholicks had been admitted to a Share in the Go- " vernment, and in the Policy and Juſtice of their " State.

He ſaid, " He was aſſured of this Truth, and " could give undeniable Proof of it, That their " Highneſſes deſired nothing more earneſtly, than " that his Majeſty might Reign happily, and in a " perfect good Intelligence with his Subjects; and " that his Subjects, being perſuaded of His Maje- " ſty's Paternal Affection towards them, might up- " on all Occaſions make ſuitable Returns to his " Goodneſs, by all poſſible Demonſtrations of Du- " ty and Loyalty: But Their Highneſſes were con- " vinc'd in their Conſciences, That both the Pro- " teſtant Religion, and the Safety of the Nation, " would be expoſed to moſt certain Dangers, if " either the Teſts, or thoſe other Penal Laws, of " which he had made frequent mention, ſhould be " repealed; therefore They could not concur with " His Majeſty in thoſe Matters; for They believ'd " they ſhould have much to anſwer to God, if the " Conſideration of any preſent Advantage ſhould " induce them to conſent to Things which they " believed would not only be very dangerous, but " prejudicial to the Proteſtant Religion.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

" Laſtly, (he concluded) That their Highneſſes " ever had, and were reſolved ever to preſerve a " profound Submiſſion to his Majeſty, as they " thought themſelves in Duty bound by the Laws " of God and Nature: But ſince the Matter that " was then in hand related not to the making of " new Laws, but to the total Abrogation of thoſe " already made both by King and Parliament; their " Highneſſes did not ſee how it could be expected " of them, that they ſhould conſent to ſuch an " Abrogation, to which they had ſo juſt an Aver- " ſion; as being a thing that was contrary to all the " Laws and Cuſtoms of all Chriſtian States, whe- " ther Proteſtants or Papiſts, who admitted none " to a Share in the Government, or Publick Em- " ployments, but thoſe who profeſs'd the Publick " and Eſtabliſh'd Religion, and endeavour'd to ſe- " cure it againſt all Attempts whatſoever.

(a) This Letter was communicated by Stewart to the Earls of Sunderland and Melfort, and even to King James himſelf; and he alſo let Monſieur Fagel know as much, without communicating to him whether the Court deſired it ſhould be kept ſecret, or made publick. In the mean time, it was printed in England; and a Pamphlet having been ſoon after publiſh'd in England, Entituled, Parliamentum Pacificum: Or, The Happy Union of King and People in an Healing Parliament, &c. wherein it was affirmed, That the Letter written to Mr. Stewart, was not only Suppoſititious, but alſo, that the Author miſrepreſented the Sentiments of the Prince and Princeſs of Orange, concerning the Repeal of the Teſt, and Penal Laws. Monſieur Fagel thought himſelf oblig'd to prevent the World's being impos'd upon by that Impoſture, and to that Purpoſe he not only printed ſome of Mr. Stewart's Letters, but wrote alſo to the Marquis of Albyville the following Letter; which he likewiſe cauſed to be made Publick.

My LORD,

Monſieur Fagel's Letter to M. d' Albyville.

" WE have ſeen here a Pamphlet in Engliſh, " call'd Parliamentum Pacificum, printed " this Year in London, with the Earl of Sunder- " land's Allowance; of which I cannot forbear " complaining, how averſe ſoever I am to make " Expoſtulations. The Author of it maintains, " That the Letter I wrote on the 4th of November last,

(a) About the Time of this Intercourſe, King James did not only ſollicit his Daughter, the Princeſs of Orange, to change Politicks, but even to change her Religion. I have heard the late Archbiſhop Teniſon give an Account how zealous King James was to pervert his Daughter, the Princeſs of Orange; and how he ſent over a large Letter by the Hands of one Father Goffe, earneſtly deſiring her to conſider of the Unity and Authority of the Catholick Church, and to confer with the ſaid Father upon thoſe Points. The Princeſs upon Receipt of the Letter, retir'd to her Cloſet, and drew up an excellent Anſwer, without any Aſſiſtance; giving the Reaſons of her being a Proteſtant, and of reſolving to continue ſo; and touching at moſt of the unſcriptural and irrational Tenets of Popery. She ſhewed a Copy of this Letter to Dr. Teniſon, Biſhop Burnet, and others, when ſhe came over to England, only declaring ſhe would ſuffer no Tranſcript to be made of it. —— After the Death of Biſhop Compton, I heard his Lordſhip's Chaplain Dr. G. telling me at Windſor, in November, 1713. That among the Papers of his Lord, he had ſeen an Original Letter of Mary Princeſs of Orange, acquainting his Lordſhip, that ſhe had lately received a Letter from her Father the King, brought to her by a Roman Prieſt, adviſing her to read and hear what might be ſaid for the Catholick Church of Rome, as impartially as he thought he had done on the ſide of the Church of England; and then informing his Lordſhip of the Subſtance of her Anſwer to the King, and her firm Judgment and Intentions to perſevere in the Proteſtant Religion.

The Letter from the Jeſuit of Liege to his Brother at Friburg, dated Feb. 2. 168$\frac{6}{7}$, undoubtedly genuine, writes thus— " Not long ſince, ſome of the Catholick Lords objected to " the King, That they thought he made too much Haſte to eſtabliſh " the Faith." To whom he anſwered, I am growing Old, and muſt take large Steps, elſe if I ſhould happen to die, I might perhaps leave you in a worſe Condition than I found you. When they ask'd him, Why then he was ſo little concern'd about the Converſion of his Daughters, who were the Heirs of the Kingdom. He anſwer'd, God will take care of that; leave the Converſion of my Daughters to me. Do you, by your Example, convert your Tenants and others to the Faith.

" laſt, relating to the Teſt, and Penal Laws, is " either a Forgery, or that I wrote it without the " Order of their Highneſs, or at leaſt of Her Royal
" Highneſs. Not that I pretend to enter into the " Particulars of that Pamphlet, with deſign to con-
" fute any thing in it, being little agreeable to my " Character and Inclination to meddle with Publick
" Diſputes of that nature. But you muſt not think it
" ſtrange if I put you in mind, That it was not of my " own ſelf that I engaged in writing the ſaid Letter;
" but rather, after I had been powerfully preſſed to it
" for ſome Months together, from or in the Name
" of his Majeſty. And when at laſt I was prevail-
" ed upon to write it, I did it with all the Precau-
" tion which ſo nice an Affair ſeem'd to require;
" inſomuch that in all that Letter, there is not one
" Period which I ought to fear might diſpleaſe his
" Majeſty. Neverthele, I ſee that in a Writing
" printed by Publick Authority, that Letter is " branded as Suppoſititious; altho' his Majeſty,
" and even all the Court, know the Truth of the
" Buſineſs: And beſides that, I have owned it here
" to your Lordſhip, as the King's Miniſter, and to " all thoſe that have ſpoken to me of it. But " what is moſt injurious to me, is, That I am
" charged therein with having abuſed their High-
" neſſes Names, particularly that of her Royal
" Highneſs; as if I were a Perſon capable of ſo in" famous a Cheat, and of a Falſity ſo unworthy of " all Men of Honour, and that too in an Affair of
" the higheſt Importance.

" You will not take it ill, my Lord, if in this " Matter I refer my ſelf to the Knowledge you have
" of it, and to what you have often told me your
" ſelf, to wit, That their Highneſſes, and in par" ticular her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs had de" clared her Thoughts to you concerning the Teſt,
" and Penal Laws, in the ſame manner as I had
" repreſented them; that you had acquainted the " Court with it a long time before I wrote my " Letter; and that you could not conceive what
" Reaſon there was for preſſing me to write to
" Mr. Stewart. I do aſſure you, that I would not " be much offended at that Pamphlet, nor at any " other of that nature, having already foreſeen I
" ſhould not fail being attack'd on that Score,
" wherein I could eaſily have allow'd every body
" the Liberty of pleaſing themſelves; but that " Writing being publiſh'd under the Authority of " the Preſident of the King's Council, and Secre" tary of State, my Honour is concern'd to clear my
" ſelf to the World, of ſo unjuſt an Accuſation as
" is laid to my Charge.

" I thought I could not do better than to addreſs
" my ſelf to you, My LORD, as being his Ma-
" jeſty's Miniſter, and a Perſon perfectly well in-
" form'd of the Buſineſs in Queſtion, deſiring you
" would be pleas'd to write to the Earl of Sunder-
" land about it. I believe he has neither ſeen nor
" examin'd the Paſſages of that Pamphlet which " reflected upon me; and I am alſo perſuaded, that " if he had, he would not have ſigned the Printing
" Allowance: For the ſaid Earl of Sunderland
" knows as well as any body, that the ſaid Letter
" of Mr. Stewart is no Suppoſition, ſince he has ſeen
" the Letter it ſelf, or the Engliſh Copy of it,
" which I had ſent along with it. He ought alſo to " be no leſs aſſured by your Letters, and by what " you have related by Word of Mouth, that their
" Highneſſes, and particularly her Royal Highneſs
" the Princeſs, have ſeveral Times told you their " Opinion concerning the Teſt and Penal Laws, as I
" have expreſs'd it in my Letter to Mr. Stewart.
" Therefore I do promiſe my ſelf from the Juſtice
" and Goodneſs of the Earl of Sunderland, that he " will take care that the Allowance which was ſur-
" reptitiouſly gained for the Printing of that Pam" phlet may be recalled, and the Author of ſo
" manifeſt and outragious a Calumny brought to " condign Puniſhment. Neither will I conceal
" from you, that I deſign to publiſh what has paſſed
" in this Affair, as well as what I now take the Li" berty to write to you; not with Deſign to engage
" any farther in the main Buſineſs, much leſs to " gratify any Body, but ſolely to ſhelter my Honour
" from ſo falſe and heinous an Imputation.

Some old Laws reviv'd and executed.

(a) The King was not more ready to Annull ſome Laws of preſent Force and Neceſſity, than he was to Reinforce others that were obſolete and dead; and to Revive them with a ſharper Edge than had been at firſt ſet upon them. Hence, becauſe there was found an old Act of Parliament, that made it Death for any Soldier taking Pay in the King's Service, in his Wars abroad, or on the High Sea, or in Scotland, to deſert from his Colours; the King would have this Law executed in time of perfect Peace, upon the Soldiers in his Standing Army, for a Terror to Hounſlow-Heath. And becauſe the worthy Recorder of London, Sir John Holt, would not expound that Law according to the King's Deſire, he was put out of his Place; and ſo was Sir Edward Herbert from being Chief-Juſtice of the King's-Bench, to make way for Sir Robert Wright, who ventur'd to hang two or three poor Soldiers upon that antiquated Statute, that, if in full Force and Virtue, would not have come up to the preſent Caſe.

Sir J. Holt turn'd out.

Some New Changes in Weſtminſter-Hall.

And though the Courts in Weſtminſter-Hall had been before ſufficiently purg'd of the ſtout Old Lawyers, and fill'd with new Men of Weakneſs or Wilful Compliance; yet a further Regulation was ſtill to be made, that the King and his Judges might be perfectly Unanimous. So in the beginning of this Eaſter-Term, His Majeſty was pleas'd to conſtitute Sir Robert Wright (one of the Juſtices of the King's-Bench) Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas; and Mr. Juſtice Powell was thereupon removed from the Court of Common Pleas to the King's-Bench; and Mr. Baron Milton from the Exchequer to the Common-Pleas. And in the ſame Term, to ſerve the Deſign before-mention'd, His Majeſty thought fit to remove the Lord Chief-Juſtice Herbert to the Common Pleas; and the Lord Chief-Juſtice Wright to the King's-Bench: And Sir Francis Withens (one of the Juſtices of the King's-Bench) had his Quietus. On April 28th Sir Richard Allibone (one of his Majeſty's Council at Law) an angry Papiſt, and Charles Ingleby, Eſq; both of Grays-Inn, were call'd by the King's Writ to the State and Degree of Serjeants at Law, and gave Rings with this triumphant Motto, A Lege Rex: And the ſame Day, Sir Richard Allibone was ſworn before my Lord Chancellor, One of the Juſtices of the King's-Bench; and Mr. Serjeant Powell One of the Barons of the Exchequer. (b) So that Legal Innocence might be now a Crime; and what was Popiſh Judges.

(a) One great Art of the Papiſts was to defame the Reformation and run down the firſt Reformers, to carry back the Church into the former State of Popery. Books for this Purpoſe were printed, not only at London, but at Oxford, where a Papiſt, Obadiah Walker, had the Command of a Preſs: And yet one Jeſt was, That while they were running down the Reformation, they were for reſtoring the firſt Engliſh Liturgy of King Edward VI. only for a Step to come nearer the Maſs-Book. This Trick has been twice tried, but in Imitation only of the Service now done for introducing Popery and Idol-Maſs. See the Primitive Rule of Reformation, according to the firſt Liturgy of King Edward VI. 1549. containing an Extract of the ſame, ſo far as it is Popiſhly affected: Together with honourable Teſtimonies thereof from Church and State, of that, and of ſucceeding Ages: As alſo, the Wiſhes of ſeveral Churches and Churchmen of the Reformation, for reſtoring the ſaid Liturgy in Parts. Printed with Allowance; for Mary Thompſon, 1688. 4to.

(b) The Popiſh Prieſts, under Royal Favour and Protection, were forward to challenge our Learned Divines to Conferences

Treaſon by the Law, might be now a Merit and a Reward.

A Nuncio ſent from the Pope.

And therefore, as an Ambaſſador had been the laſt Year humbly ſent to Rome; ſo a Nuncio from thence was this Year to be gloriouſly receiv'd. (a) Signior Ferdinando d'Adda, Domeſtick Prelate and Aſſiſtant to the Pope, who was the Queen's Favorite, had follow'd the Engliſh Court ever ſince the King's Acceſſion to the Crown: He had been privately commiſſion'd to be Nuncio of the Apoſtolick See; and to fill up the Character with more Pomp and Luſtre, he had been Conſecrated Arch-Biſhop of Amaſia, in the Royal Chapel at Whitehall, by Biſhop Layburn, Vicar-Apoſtolical in England, aſſiſted by two other Iriſh Biſhops. He was now to make his Publick Entry as a Foreign Miniſter, and the Government it ſelf was to glory in the Account of it: "The 3d of "July, Monſieur Ferdinand d' Adda, Arch-Biſhop "of Amaſia, Domeſtick Prelate and Aſſiſtant to "His Holineſs the Pope, and Apoſtolick Nuncio, "had Publick Audience of their Majeſties at "Windſor, being Conducted by His Grace the "Duke of Grafton, and Sir Charles Cotterell One "of the Maſters of the Ceremonies, in one of "His Majeſty's Coaches, with all the Honours "and Ceremonies uſually obſerved on the like "Occaſions. And on July 5th, he had Audience "of the Queen-Dowager at Somerſet-Houſe, being "Conducted by the ſaid Sir Charles Cotterell in "one of Her Majeſty's Coaches, in the uſual "Manner.

Account of his Publick Entry.

There having been no ſuch Sight in England for about an Hundred and fifty Years before, the Concourſe of People was extraordinary great upon this Occaſion: Yet their Surprize at the Pomp and Magnificence of this Solemnity was much leſs, than their Indignation to behold a Repreſentative of the Pope in all his Pontificalibus, preceded by a Croſs-Bearer, and attended by a Flock of Prieſts and Monks in the Habits of their reſpective Orders. This Ceremony occaſion'd the Diſgrace of that Illuſtrious Patriot the Duke of Somerſet, Firſt Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber to the King: For His Grace being then in Waiting, His Majeſty Ordered him to attend the Nuncio to his Audience; but he deſir'd His Majeſty to excuſe him from countenancing any Act which the Laws of the Land made Criminal. The King reiterated his Orders; and the Duke was conſtant in his Refuſal of them: Upon which his Majeſty told him (b) in a Paſſion, "That he would trouble him "no more with any Commands, and therefore ex"pected he ſhould reſign his Places of Gentleman of "the Bed-Chamber, and Colonel of Dragoons". The Duke immediately did ſo, without the leaſt Concern; as being abundantly ſatisfy'd that he kept his Conſcience and his Honour, while he loſt nothing but his Places. And yet a Biſhop of the Church (or rather of the Court) is ſaid to have made no Scruple in this Matter, but to have made up part of the Nuncio's Train, as if he had been One of the Roman Retinue: But however, his Lordſhip's Coach-man was a ſtout Proteſtant, and would not drive his Maſter that Way; and if the Man ſuffer'd, no doubt he meant it for his Maſter's Honour.

Duke of Somerſet refuſes to Attend.

A Proteſtant Coachman.

The Nuncio wanted an Opportunity to appear publickly in London; (c) and therefore it was contriv'd, that he ſhould be invited to come with the King himſelf to Dine at Guildhall on the Lord-Mayor's-Day: And he was accordingly receiv'd at Temple-Bar by Sir John Parſons and Sir Baſil Firebraſs the Two Sheriffs; and was complimented by Sir John Shorter the Lord-Mayor. And when a Publick Account was given of the City Entertainment, there was ſpecial Care taken to expreſs, that among the Foreign Miniſters who were invited, there were preſent the Pope's Nuncio, and the French Ambaſſador.

The Nuncio entertain'd by the City.

Some were of Opinion, that the Nuncio was an Inſtrument of puſhing Things to the fatal Extremities that were now upon the Anvil. Others again ſay, "'Tis certain that he had a greater Share in "the Intrigues of the Ruelle, than in thoſe of the "Cabinet, and had too much Senſe to approve of "all the Meaſures that were taken: And therefore "he often deſir'd to be recall'd, leſt he ſhould be "thought to have a Hand in them.

Character of him.

As to the Parliament now in being, the King intended they ſhould Sit again, if by Cloſeting and Tampering with Favours and Diſgraces, he could have bought up a Majority to be his Servants and Creatures in Repealing the Penal Laws and Teſt: But when His Majeſty ſaw that by all his Endeavours, he made but a ſlow Progreſs in captivating the Judgment and Conſcience of the Chief Members of Both Houſes, he reſolv'd to take a longer Time. So when on April 28. the Parliament Met at Weſtminſter, in purſuance of their laſt Prorogation; it was, by Commiſſion, further Prorogued till the 22d of November. But

The Parliament Prorogued, becauſe the Members would not comply.

---

and ſolemn Diſputes in Religion, which our Divines, under the Frowns of the Court, were not afraid to accept. See 1. A Conference between Mr. Peter Godeau a ſecular Prieſt, and Dr. Clagett, about Tranſubſtantiation, held on Feb. 21. 1686-7. Publiſh'd by the Reverend Dr. Wake, at the End of Dr. Clagett's Sermons, 1689. 8vo. 2. A Letter to Mr. G. giving a true Account of the late Conference at the D. of P. dated March 7. 168 6/7. Subſcribed E. S. (i. e. Edward Stillingfleet.) London, 1687. 4to. 3. A ſecond Letter to Mr. G. in anſwer to two Letters lately publiſhed, concerning the Conference at the D. of P. Licenſed Apr. 22. 1687. London, 4to (written by Dr. Stillingfleet.) 4. A true and full Account of a Conference held about Religion between Dr. Thomas Teniſon, and A. Pulton, one of the Maſters in the Savoy. Publiſhed by Authority, 1687. 4to. 5. A true Account of a Conference held about Religion, at London, Sept. 29. 1687. between A. Pulton, a Jeſuit, and Tho. Teniſon, D. D. As alſo all which led to it and followed after it, by Tho. Teniſon, D. D. 1687. 4to. 6. A Vindication of A. Creſner, School-Maſter in Long-Acre, from the Aſperſions of A. Pulton, Jeſuit, and School-Maſter in the Savoy, together with ſome Account of his Diſcourſe with Mr. Meredith, October 28. 1687. 7. A Letter from Dr. Humphrey Prideaux, in Anſwer to a Paper containing a Relation of the Conferences between Mr. Earbury and Mr. Kipping of the one Part, and Mr. Aſton and Mr. Brown on the other, at Norwich, concerning the Validity of Orders in the Church of England, &c. Nov. 11. 1687. London, 4to.

(a) By Report, He is now Archbiſhop of Milan, in Italy, and has there ſhewn great Civilities to Engliſh Strangers, and alway enquires after his Brother the Biſhop of Durham, and drinks his Health, but ſpeaks with great Contempt of the Bigotry of the Jeſuits in England, and of their puſhing King James to his Ruin.

(b) Mr. Prynne, upon the Reception of Mr. Con, as Popiſh Legate to the Queen, in the Reign of K. Ch. I. charged it as Criminal, becauſe done by the King's Privity and Conſent, and was admitted without a cautionary Oath required by the Ancient Law and Cuſtom of the Realm, even in the Times of Popery, not to bring or attempt any Thing, in Word or Deed, to the Prejudice of the Rights, Privileges, Laws and Cuſtoms of the Realm: And by later Statutes it was High Treaſon for ſuch a One to enter the Realm, &c. Rome's Maſter-piece, &c.

(c) The Sanguine Hopes of our Engliſh Papiſts abroad, are beſt deliver'd in a late Hiſtory of Doway-College, 1713. 8vo. p. 31. Enquiring how Affairs were now carried on by the Clergy of Doway-College: Both they and the Regulars muſter'd up all the able Men they could, to countenance their riſing Cauſe. The Laity were very free of their Money, in Erecting little Chapels in ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom. Four Biſhops, Leybourn, Giffard, Ellis and Smith, by Orders from the Pope, were immediately conſecrated; and England divided into Four Diſtricts, in the Nature of Dioceſes, in which every one reſpectively preſided. The four Biſhops had the Biſhop of Chalcedon's Fate ſtill freſh in their Memory, and how ſignal an Overthrow he had met with in his Conteſt with the Regulars. Now was the Time to prevent the like Diſaſter, which they effectually did by having the Nature of their Power more diſtinctly ſpecified. The Regulars gave no great Diſturbance upon this Head, beſides ſome clandeſtine Murmurs amongſt their own Parties. Here indeed they ſpoke their Minds, and made their Subjection to the Biſhops a Buſineſs of Compliance, for Peace Sake, not an Effect of Duty or Obligation. It was impoſſible to prevent their private Cabals, &c.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

And then Diſſolved;

before that Day, by Proclamation Given at Hampton-Court, July 2. (a) The King's Moſt Excellent Majeſty, for weighty Reaſons, hath thought fit to Diſſolve this preſent Parliament; And doth, by this His Royal Proclamation, Diſſolve the ſame accordingly. Nor was any Promiſe made of a New Parliament: This was to be lodg'd in the King's Breaſt, and was to depend on the Succeſs of the ſame Intrigues. Unleſs a Parliament could be form'd to Confirm and Sanctify the Meaſures of the Court, it could be to no purpoſe but to break, or at leaſt to retard thoſe Meaſures. And therefore ſome of the Miniſtry were againſt running the hazard of referring their Proceedings to the Approbation of the Two Houſes; and judg'd it more expedient, to truſt to a Set of Judges, and a Standing Army. "Yet, "(ſays a late Writer) as Men who follow wrong "Meaſures, are always fluctuating in their Coun-"ſels, it was not long before they conſider'd, that "the Superſtructure they were erecting upon an Il-"legal Foundation would tumble to the Ground, "as ſoon as the Legal Power ſhould take place: "That the Army and Fleet increaſing every Day, "the King's Neceſſities would at laſt inevitably "oblige him to call a Parliament: And that the "longer the Meetings of that Auguſt Aſſembly were "put off, and their Authority diſregarded, the more "fatal to the King's Deſign their Reſolutions would "prove". Theſe Reflexions made the Popiſh Party ſenſible of the Neceſſity of calling a Parliament; and therefore all the Methods and Artifices imaginable were uſed to procure ſuch a Lower Houſe, as would confirm all the King's Proceedings. In order to that, Writs of Quo Warranto were iſſued out againſt Corporations; and the Magiſtrates thereof terrify'd with his Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, if they dared to inſiſt upon their Legal Rights, and contend with him at Law. Beſides that, Judges were prepared to over-rule the Pleas of all ſuch Cities and Towns as would ſtand upon their Franchiſes and Privileges; witneſs the Cities of Oxford and Wincheſter, which were declar'd to be Diſſolv'd at the King's Pleaſure. In ſhort, by a Decree of the Court of King's-Bench, moſt Cities and Boroughs were ordered to ſurrender their Charters; which reduced them to that Condition, as to have no Magiſtrates or Officers but at his Majeſty's Will.

And the King to Reign without a Parliament.

Servile Promiſes of chuſing Members grateful to the Court.

To carry on this Servile Humour, many of the Officious Addreſſes did expreſly promiſe to chuſe ſuch Repreſentatives as ſhould be ready to obey the King's Deſire. Thus the Diſſenters in the County of Oxon: —— When your Sacred Majeſty, in your great Wiſdom, ſhall think fit to ſummon another Parliament, we will uſe our utmoſt Endeavours to elect ſuch Perſons as may abrogate and aboliſh ſuch Laws as have impeded the free Exerciſe of Religion. And even the High-Sheriff, with the Grand-Jury and Juſtices of the Peace for the County of Hereford, were ſo pack'd together, as to expreſs their great Hopes, That whenever your Majeſty ſhall pleaſe to call another Parliament, all Places will concur to elect ſuch Members as will be ready and diſpoſed to ſecond your Clement Inclinations to Aboliſh the Teſt and Penal Laws.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

The King takes a Progreſs.

It was to ſolicite this Cauſe, that the King took a large Progreſs this Summer; and one of his cloſeſt Attendants was his loyal Friend William Penn the reputed Quaker. His Majeſty's Intention in this Journey, was given out to be, the taking a View of his Ports and Harbours, and particularly of the Haven and Fortifications of Portſmouth; but the ſecret Deſign was plainly, to influence and prepare the Electors of every Corporation through which he paſſed. And as the Preſence of a Sovereign ſtrikes an awful and commanding Veneration on the Minds of thoſe who ſeldom approach Majeſty; it can hardly be expreſs'd with what Joyful Acclamations he was receiv'd, and what dutiful Acknowledgments were paid him at (b) Portſmouth, Bath, Glouceſter, Worceſter, Ludlow, Shrewsbury, Cheſter, Newport, Litchfield, Coventry, Banbury, Briſtol and Wincheſter. The Univerſity of Oxford diſtinguiſh'd themſelves upon this Occaſion, endeavouring by all poſſible Demonſtrations of Duty and Reſpect to remove the King's Prepoſſeſſions againſt them: But all their Elegance of Speeches and Entertainment were not able to attone for the Oppoſition given to the King's Command at Magdalen College; ſo that the King left Oxford very much diſſatisfied.

The King declares his Reſolution for Repealing the Penal Laws.

After his Majeſty's Return from this elaborate Progreſs, he was reſolv'd to make a more open Declaration, That he would have the Penal Laws repealed; and that he would endure none in any Place of Authority, but ſuch as would concur with him. This Reſolution he publickly declar'd in Council at Whitehall, on Sunday Decemb. 11. and then ſent it Abroad by Authority in theſe Words: "His Maje-"ſty having by his Gracious Declaration of the 4th "Day of April laſt, granted a Liberty of Conſcience "to all his Subjects; and reſolving not only to main-"tain the ſame, (c) but to uſe his utmoſt Endeavours "that it may paſs into a Law, and become an Eſta-"bliſh'd Security to After-Ages; hath thought fit to "review the Liſts of the Deputy-Lieutenants and "Juſtices of the Peace in the ſeveral Counties, that "thoſe may be continued who ſhall be ready to "contribute what in them lies towards the Accom-"pliſhment of ſo good and neceſſary a Work; and "ſuch others added to them, from whom his Ma-"jeſty may reaſonably expect the like Concurrence "and Aſſiſtance.

Ways and Arts to Influence Elections.

The Lord Lieutenants, upon this New Model, were order'd by the King, to ſummon, in his Name, the Chief Officers and Gentlemen in their reſpective Counties, and to lay the Caſe before them, ſo as to flatter or terrify them out of their Freedom in the Election of Parliament-Men. Another Sort of People, call'd Regulators, were commiſſion'd to the

(a) The Earl of Sunderland in his Letter of March 23. 1689. tells us, The great Trial was to take off the Penal Laws and the Teſts; ſo many having promiſed their Concurrence towards it, that his Majeſty thought it feaſible; but he ſoon found it was not to be done by that Parliament, which made all the Catholicks deſire it might be diſſolved; which I was ſo much againſt, that they complained of me to the King, as a Man who ruin'd all his Deſigns, by oppoſing the only Thing that could carry them on;—Yet I hindred the Diſſolution ſeveral Weeks, &c.

(b) Another Deſign of the Progreſs was to preach Popery through the Kingdom in Royal Preſence: See the Sermon preach'd before the King at Cheſter by Father Lewis Sabran Aug. 24. 1687. Printed by Henry Hills, 4*to*. Inſiſting much on the recommending our ſelves to the Bleſſed Virgin Mary's Interceſſion. Which ſeemed to direct Prayers to the Virgin for the Conception and ſafe Bearing of the Queen, gone to Holy-Well, for the Virtue of St. Winifred, &c. —— The Author of an Anſwer to the Compiler of the Nubes Teſtium, Octob. 11. 1687. takes notice in a Poſtſcript, of a very great Cheat put upon his Sacred Majeſty, as well as the reſt of the Auditors, by Father Sabran, in his late Sermon before the King at Cheſter.

Another Uſe of the Progreſs was to draw in People to be touch'd for the Evil, according to the Form of a Popiſh Office, pretended to be in Uſe in the Time of King Henry VII. and now printed with Rubrick Letter; wherein officiated Father Warner as Chaplain and Confeſſor to the King. —— A Third Deſign was to let the Popiſh Biſhops hold their Viſitations and Confirmations with the more Solemnity and greater Safety. See A Paſtoral Letter from the Four Catholick Biſhops to the Lay Catholicks of England. Subſcribed, John Biſhop of Adramite, V. A. Bonaventure Biſhop of Madaura, V. A. Philip Biſhop of Aureliople. V. A. James Biſhop of Callipoli. V. A. London, Printed by Henry Hills. 1688. 4*to*.

(c) The Court thought it would be a good Art to make a Biſhop conſecrate their ill Deſigns; and to help deſtroy the Church in the Name of the Church. For this Purpoſe they encourag'd Dr. Samuel Parker, Biſhop of Oxford, to put out Reaſons for Abrogating the Teſt impoſed upon all Members of Parliament, Anno 1678. Octob. 30. Firſt written for the Author's own Satisfaction, and now publiſhed for the Benefit of all others whom it may concern Licenſed, Whitehall, December 10. 1687. Subſcribed SA. OXON. London. 4*to*.

ſame

1687. 3 Jac. II.

ſame Purpoſe, (a) being ſent over all England to delude the People, either by fair Promiſes or Menaces, into a fatal Compliance with the King. But notwithſtanding all theſe Wiles and Weapons, his Majeſty found himſelf diſappointed of his Hopes of having a Parliament at his own Devotion. In ſome Counties almoſt all the Gentry diſappear'd on a ſudden, to avoid the Summons of the Lords Lieutenants. The Gentlemen of Dorſetſhire being aſſembled by the Earl of Briſtol, were no ſooner acquainted with the King's Intentions, but they anſwer'd, That an Affair of ſo great Importance deſerv'd to be diſcuſs'd in the great Council of the Nation; to which they would ſend their Repreſentatives, when his Majeſty ſhould think fit to call a Free Parliament. The like Anſwer was made in ſeveral other Counties: And in Cheſter, of about Seven Hundred Perſons, there were only Seventeen who could be made to promiſe a Conſent to the Repealing of the Penal Laws and Teſt.

Honours and Preferments.

And yet the King had all the Advantage in the World on his Side, by filling his Privy-Council and his Court with Creatures of his own making; and by diſpenſing all his Honours, as ſo many Pledges of Obedience to his Will and Pleaſure. On the Death of George Duke of Buckingham, who died in a moſt inglorious State of Poverty at a mean Houſe in Yorkſhire, on Apr. 16. His Majeſty, out of his Royal Favour to the Right Honourable the Earl of Sunderland (Lord Preſident of the Council, and his Majeſty's Principal Secretary of State) was pleas'd to give him the Garter, on Apr. 26. and he was inſtall'd at Windſor on May the 23d. The Duke of Berwick (the King's Natural Son) was deſign'd for General of the ſtanding Forces; and to qualify him with more Experience and better Reputation, he was ſent over into Hungary to paſs a Campaign in the Imperial Army: And his Majeſty Knighted Edward Vandrey, Eſq; who was to attend his Grace in that Campaign. Captain William Phipps being on June 28. preſented to the King by the Duke of Albermale, his Majeſty receiv'd him very graciouſly, and was pleas'd to confer upon him the Honour of Knighthood, in Conſideration of his Loyalty and good Services in a late Expedition, having brought home a very conſiderable Treaſure which was taken out of the Sea, after it had lain there Forty Four Years. On July 3. his Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood upon John Sparrow, Eſq; Clerk-Comptroller of his Majeſty's Board of Green-Cloth. The Lord Spencer was appointed in Auguſt, to go over Envoy Extraordinary, to make the Compliments of Condolance, in their Majeſty's Names, with his Highneſs the Duke of Modena, upon the Death of the late Dutcheſs of Modena, the Queen's Mother. Within the ſame Month, his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer upon Sir Francis Ratcliff of Dilſton in the County of Northumberland, Bar. the Dignity of an Earl of this Kingdom, creating him Baron of Tindale, Viſcount Ratcliff and Langley, and Earl of Derwentwater. On Sept. 25. Roger Earl of Caſtlemain (his Majeſty's late Ambaſſador Extraordinary to the Pope) was ſworn of his Majeſty's Privy-Council, and took his Place at the Board. On Octob. 14. his Grace William Duke of Hamilton, and Sir Nicholas Butler (one of the Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Cuſtoms) were ſworn, and took their Places at the ſame Board. On Octob. 25. his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood on Charles Carterett, Eſq;. And at the Feaſt in Guildhall, Octob. 30. his Majeſty conferr'd the ſame Honour upon Two of the Aldermen then preſent, John Boden and William Aſhburſt, Eſqs. On Nov. 11. the famous Political Jeſuit, (b) under the Title of the Honourable and Reverend Father Edward Petre (Clerk of the Cloſet to his Majeſty) was ſworn of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council, and accordingly took his Place at the Board. On March 6. his Majeſty was pleas'd to confer the Honour of Knighthood, as a Mark of his Favour, on William Hedges, Eſq;. His Grace the Duke of Albemarle was this Year ſent over Governor of Jamaica.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

Father Petre a Privy-Counceller.

There ſeem'd now to be but one Reſtraint upon the Papiſts, which was, a Senſe of the King's declining Age, and the Proſpect of a Proteſtant Succeſſor. They had but one Thing therefore for the Subject of their Prayers and their Plots, which was, that the Queen might have a Son. And therefore, at this very Juncture, they began the Whiſpers of the Queen's being with Child. Which was not much credited, till his Majeſty proclaim'd it to all the Nation, That it had pleas'd Almighty God, (who (in Signal Manner) had bleſs'd his Majeſty and this Kingdom, under his Majeſty's Government, with great Proſperity, Peace and Plenty) to give his Majeſty alſo apparent Hopes and good Aſſurance of having Iſſue by his Royal Conſort the Queen, who, through God's great Goodneſs, was now with Child. Wherefore, his Majeſty appoints, That on the Fifteenth of January next, within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and upon the Twenty Ninth in all other Places, Publick Thankſgiving and Solemn Prayer ſhould be offer'd up to GOD, on this Occaſion, in a Form of Prayer and Religious Service, (c) to be prepared by the Lords, the Biſhops of Durham, Rocheſter, and Peterborough.

Declaration of the Queen's being with Child.

(a) The Earl of Sunderland in his Letter March 23. 1689. When the Parliament was broke, the Cloſeting went on, and a new one was to be choſen. Who was to get by Cloſeting I need not ſay; but it was certainly not I, nor any of my Friends; many of them ſuffered whom I would fain have ſaved.

There being at Glouceſter a Popiſh Recorder, he obtained an Addreſs to be put in the Gazette, to the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty, The Humble Addreſs of the Grand Jury, for the County of Glouceſter, at the Aſſizes on Saturday 17th of March, $168\frac{7}{8}$. Giving Thanks for his Majeſty's tranſcendent Bounty in his Royal Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience, and promiſing to elect Members for the Abrogation of the Penal Laws and Teſt.

(b) See, A Letter from the Reverend Father Petre, Jeſuit, Almoner to the King of England, written to the Reverend Father le Cheaſe, Confeſſor to the moſt Chriſtian King, touching the preſent Affairs of England, dated St. James, Febr. 9. 1687. —— With the Anſwer of the Reverend Father le Cheaſe, Confeſſor to the Moſt Chriſtian King, to a Letter of the Reverend Father Petre, Jeſuit, and great Almoner to the King of England, upon the Method and Rules he muſt obſerve with his Majeſty, for the Converſion of his Proteſtant Subjects. Dated Paris, March 7. 1688. N. S. Printed in a Third Collection of Papers, 4*to.*

One of the Roman Arts was to repreſent the Engliſh Clergy as all ready to turn to the Communion of the Church of Rome. This Winter, 1685, (ſaith the Excellent Writer of the Miſſionaries Arts diſcovered) a Report went current through all the Countries in England, where there are many Romaniſts, that Dr. Burnet was at Rome become a Papiſt, and that great Preferments were beſtowed upon him. This hath been affirmed to me by ſeveral, for a certain Truth; when I made diligent Enquiry, thoſe Gentlemen affirming that they had it from very good Hands, and had ſeen ſome Letters from Foreign Parts which confirmed it. But more immodeſt was the Pretence of the Dean of Norwich's Converſion about Two Years ſince, which ſeveral Prieſts affirmed to a Servant Maid, whom they knew to be a great Admirer of that Divine. —— There is a certain Secular Prieſt, who not long ſince aſſured me, that he had ſeen an Original Inſtrument under the Hand of the late Archbiſhop of York, and other Prelates, with ſeveral Divines, among whom he named Dr. Wallis of Oxford, approving ſeveral of the Romiſh Doctrines, and particularly Prayer to Saints, or for the Dead: But though upon my earneſt Intreaty, he promis'd to procure me the Sight of it, yet he never perform'd it to this Day.

(c) The Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the proper Perſon, was not employ'd in drawing up this Form, though he was in another Form of Prayers upon the Deſcent of the Prince of Orange. The Omiſſion of his Name made People ſuſpect that he did not believe the Thing.

Two Toms and Nat
Together ſat,
To hammer a Thankſgiving, &c.

The

1687. 3 Jac. II.

The Papiſts, who ſeem'd already to triumph over the Proteſtants, were ſtill more elevated upon this News: Nay ſome of them had the Impudence to aſſert, That tho' the Child ſhould prove a Daughter, yet it would cut off the Princeſſes of Orange and Denmark from the Succeſſion, upon a fooliſh Suppoſal, That a Daughter born ſince the King's Advancement to the Throne, ought to take place before any others born while he was but Duke of York: But others of them choſe rather to be confident that it would certainly be a Son. And becauſe the Queen's Breeding was in a manner Miraculous, the Jeſuits gave out, That either it was the Effect of a Petition which the lately deceas'd Dutcheſs of Modena had put up Heaven to the Bleſſed Virgin Mary; or of a Vow the Queen had made to our Lady of Loretto, (a) with the Preſent of a Golden Image enrich'd with precious Stones.

The Papiſts very confident of a Son.

These fabulous Stories relating to the Queen's Conception, after ſhe had intermitted Breeding for ſeveral Years; the more credible Reports of her Phyſicians and Domeſticks, that they were not yet ſatisfied in the Signs of it; the Impatience of the Popiſh Party, in preſuming and propheſying the Birth of a Son; and ſeveral other concurring Reaſons, made the Proteſtants ſuſpect a pious Fraud; and they were confirm'd in their Suſpicion, by reflecting, that a like Deceit had been put upon the People in the Reign of Queen Mary: For then, to relieve themſelves from the Fears of a Proteſtant Princeſs in Succeſſion, the Romiſh Prieſts gave it out, That the Queen was with Child; and Prayers were order'd for her Safe-Delivery; and a Popiſh Preacher at St. Paul's pretended to tell of the Birth, and to deſcribe the Boy: When, after all, the Sham was carry'd no farther on, becauſe (as verily believ'd) King Philip was too juſt and generous, to conſent to any ſuch Impoſture. The Remembrance of that former Fact, gave now a natural Application of it; and the Story of that Mock Conception (as deliver'd by Mr. Fox in his Acts and Monuments) was now reprinted, and diſpers'd with the Title of Idem Iterum, or, Queen Mary's Big-Belly. - - - - - Let this Matter conclude with the Words of a late Writer of Memoirs: "The Fears of a Proteſtant Succeſſor, had been the only Allay that "render'd the Proſperity of the Roman Catholicks "leſs perfect. Now the Happineſs of having an "Heir to the Crown to be bred up in their own "Religion, quaſh'd all thoſe Fears, and atton'd for "the Uncertainty of the King's Life. It was ſo "much their Intereſt to have one, and there were "ſo many Circumſtances that ſeem'd to render his "Birth ſuſpicious, that the Nation in general were "inclinable to believe, that this was the laſt Effort "of the Party to accompliſh our Ruin.

The Proteſtants ſuſpect this Matter.

If this were deſign'd to divert the People of England from fixing their Eyes and Hearts upon a Proteſtant Succeſſor, it had not that Effect. (b) But, on the contrary, the Nation look'd more and more toward the Court in Holland, and the Princeſs Anne at Home. The King was ſenſible of it, and found the Prince and Princeſs of Orange to be more Popular, for refuſing to approve of the Repeal of the Penal Laws and Teſt. Under this Apprehenſion, the King began to give out Commiſſions for the Raiſing of New Troops, and was preparing a better Fleet with extraordinary Diligence, as foreboding, That on the Birth of a Son, he ſhould have Occaſion to aſſert his Title by Force of Arms. Hence, on January 17. His Majeſty wrote a Letter to the States of Holland, to demand the Six Engliſh and Scotch Regiments that were in their Service: And on the 2d of March, His Majeſty iſſued out a Proclamation, forbidding his Natural-born Subjects to Enter, or Liſt themſelves in the Service of any Foreign Prince or State, either by Sea or Land.

The People ſet their Hearts the more on the Pr. of Orange and Pr. Anne.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

The King begins to increaſe his Army,

And calls back his Forces from Holland.

The States return'd a Civil Anſwer to His Majeſty's Letter, but excus'd themſelves for not complying with his Deſire. They declar'd, by a Reſolution taken in their Aſſembly, Feb. 2. That having examin'd all the Treaties of Alliance, and all that had paſs'd thereupon, when thoſe Regiments were form'd, they could find no Agreement, or Capitulation, that could oblige them to grant His Majeſty's Demand, eſpecially in that Juncture of Time. They own'd indeed, That by the Treaties concluded between England and the States-General, it was agreed, That in caſe that Crown ſhould have War with any Neighbouring Prince, or ſuffer under any inteſtine Rebellion, the States ſhould be then obliged to ſend back the Six Regiments into England, as they did in 1685. upon the Rebellion of Monmouth: But that now His Britannick Majeſty was in Peace with his Neighbours, and had no Troubles at Home; and therefore they ſaw no Reaſon that could oblige them to ſend back thoſe Troops. However, to preſerve a good Correſpondence with His Majeſty, they offer'd Paſſes to all the Officers of the Six Regiments, that were willing to return Home; which about Forty of them accepted. The Marquis of Albyville preſented a Memorial to the States, to preſs them to comply with His Majeſty's Deſire: But they perſiſting in their Reſolution, a Proclamation was iſſued out, commanding a Return of all the King's Subjects, who had taken Arms under, and were then in the Service of the States-General of the United Provinces, either by Sea or Land; though upon no other Allegation, than that the King thought it fit for his Service. This Proclamation caus'd a Debate among the States General; the Reſult of which ſeem'd to be, an Unwillingneſs to let the Engliſh and Scotch Regiments return; alledging, beſides what has been already mention'd, That there was nothing ſo agreeable to Nature, as that he who is born free, ſhould have the Right and Liberty to ſettle himſelf whereſoever he ſhall think it moſt advantageous for him; and that it is in his Power to be Naturaliz'd, and become a Subject to them under whoſe Sovereignty he ſubmits his Perſon: And that any Government receiving ſuch, does thereby acquire over him the ſame Right it has over its own proper and natural Subjects. The Marquis of Albyville, by expreſs Orders from his Maſter, deliver'd a Second Memorial to the States, peremptorily demanding the Diſmiſſion of the ſaid Troops; - - - - for that pretended Natural Liberty could not ſubſiſt, after that Dominion and Obedience had been introduced; ſo that the Right of Sovereignty and Subjection were now only to be conſider'd: And that by virtue of theſe Rights, it had been the common Opinion, in all Times, That no Natural Subject can withdraw himſelf from the Obedi-

The States refuſe to ſend them.

The King very importunate with the States, to no purpoſe.

(a) The Papiſts upon their Principle that Miracles were not ceas'd in their Church, were now eſpecially pretending to them, as a Teſtimony on their Side. As is pretty plain in the Stir of the Writer of a true and perfect Narrative of the ſtrange and unexpected finding the Crucifix and Gold Chain of that Pious Prince Saint Edward the King and Confeſſor. Preſented to King James II. by Charles Taylor, Gent. Licens'd Febr. 6. 168$\frac{7}{8}$. wherein beſides the Miracle it ſelf of finding them, he brings forth the miraculous Circumſtances, that he found them on that Day whereon the late Rebellion began in the Weſt, and much about the ſame Hour in the Afternoon when they landed, the 11th of June being Thurſday in Whitſon-Week; and that he preſented the ſame to his moſt Sacred Majeſty on the ſame Day, within a few Hours after his Majeſty's Forces had gained an entire Victory in the Weſt, the 6th of July following.

(b) Many in England ſent over Meſſages to Holland, firſt upon Occaſion of the High Commiſſion, and then upon the Buſineſs of Magdalen-College; moving the Prince of Orange to think of Preſerving the Church and State; affirming, that many Divines thought it Lawful. Biſhop of Sarum's Vindicat. &c. 8vo. p. 34.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

ence he owes to his Lawful Prince; and therefore he inſiſted upon his Demand, as a Right the King would never depart from. But, it ſeems, few or none were willing to return; which juſtify'd the Reſolutions of the States-General, and render'd the Inſtances of His Majeſty's Envoy ineffectual.

The States of Holland thought the King of England in the French Intereſt.

Theſe mutual Jealouſies between the King and the States of Holland had another Foundation in them. The King was apparently in the Intereſts and Counſels of France; which the States had Reaſon to hate and oppoſe. A late Author has deliver'd this good Account: "While King James "was thus puſh'd on by a headſtrong Party to enſlave his Subjects, the other Princes and States "of Europe look'd on with quite different Sentiments, according as their own Intereſts and Safety mov'd them. The greater Part did commiſerate the Fate of theſe Three Kingdoms, and "wiſh'd for their Deliverance. The Proteſtants "ſaw, with Regret, that themſelves were within "an immediate Proſpect of loſing the moſt conſiderable Support of their Religion; and both "They and the Roman-Catholicks were equally convinc'd, that it was their Common Intereſt to "have England continue in a Condition to be the "Arbiter of Chriſtendom, eſpecially at a Time "when they ſaw they moſt needed it. On the "other hand, It was the Intereſt of another Prince, "that not only the King of England ſhould be his "Friend, but the Kingdom of England ſhould become inconſiderable Abroad, which it could not "fail to be when enſlav'd at Home.

"King James had been again and again ſollicited, "not only by Proteſtant Princes, but thoſe of his "own Religion, to enter into other Meaſures, for "the Common Safety of Europe; at leaſt, not to "contribute to its Ruin, by eſpouſing an Intereſt "which they judg'd was oppoſite to it. The Emperor, among others, had (by his Ambaſſador) "made repeated Inſtances to him to this Purpoſe; "but with no better Succeſs than the reſt, as appears by a Letter he wrote to him after his Abdication, which has been printed in ſeveral Languages, and was conceiv'd in elegant Latin, as "all the Publick Diſpatches of that Court are. "But all theſe Remonſtrances had no Weight with "King James; though they had this good Effect "in the End, as to put thoſe Princes and States upon ſuch Meaſures as ſecur'd to them the Friendſhip of England in another way.

"The Power of France was by this Time become the Terror and Envy of the reſt of Europe; and that Crown had upon all Sides extended its Conqueſts. The Empire, Spain and Holland "ſeem'd to enjoy a precarious Peace, while the "Common Enemy of the Chriſtian Name was making "War with the Emperor and the State of Venice, "and was once very near being Maſter of the Imperial Seat, whereby he might have carry'd the "War into the Bowels of Germany. The main "Strength of the Empire being turn'd againſt the "Turks, and that with various Succeſs, there was "another War declar'd againſt the Emperor by "France: So that it came to be abſolutely neceſſary for Spain and Holland to interpoſe; not as "Mediators, (for that they were not to hope for) "but as Allies and Partners in the War. Theſe "laſt, as well as the other Princes and States that "lay neareſt the Rhine, were expos'd to the Mercy "of a Prince whom they were not able to reſiſt, if "England ſhould look on as Neuters, or take Part "againſt them; the laſt of which they had Reaſon "to fear.

"Thus it happen'd, that the Fortune of England, "and that of the greateſt Part of Chriſtendom, "came to be link'd together, and their Common "Liberties muſt of neceſſity have undergone one "and the ſame Fate. The latter, from a Natural "Principle of Self-Preſervation, were reſolved to "make the laſt Effort to break the Fetters which "they ſaw were ready to be impos'd upon them; "and the other, animated by the Example of their "Anceſtors, and the Conſtitution of their Country, "(which is diametrically oppoſite to Tyranny) "were reſolv'd to venture All, to retrieve themſelves and their Poſterity from the Chains that "were already put upon them.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

"Both the one and the other might have ſtruggled in vain till this Day with the Ruin that "threaten'd them, if Heaven (in Pity to their "Condition) had not provided, in the Perſon of "the Prince of Orange, the only Sanctuary that "was left them to ſhelter their ſinking State. This "Prince, by his Mother, was a Nephew of England, and (in Right of the Princeſs his Wife) "the Preſumptive Heir of the Crown. By his Father's Side, he was Heir of an Illuſtrious Family, that eterniz'd their Name by delivering their "Country from Slavery, and laying the Foundation of a mighty Commonwealth, which has ſince "prov'd the greateſt Bulwark of the Proteſtant Religion, and the chief Support of the Liberty of "Chriſtendom. A Family born for the Good of "Mankind, to be the Scourge of Tyrants, and Deliverers of the Oppreſſed.

Perſecution of the Proteſtants in France.

The Perſecution of the Proteſtants in France, was as effectual as Wit and Tyranny could make it. Vaſt Numbers of thoſe diſtreſſed People were glad to fly for Refuge to other more merciful States and Kingdoms, till their very Flight was made Criminal, as well as their Profeſſion. Many of them came over into England, of whom ſome few brought, or had privately ſent over ſufficient Effects with them; but far greater Numbers came in a true State of Perſecution, empty and naked, to depend on the Hoſpitality and Charity of this good-natur'd Kingdom. And indeed, Divine Providence made Things and Perſons work here together for their Good. (a) The King was the more bountiful to them, that he might ſeem to condemn their Perſecution for Conſcience; the Liberty whereof, He profeſs'd to be his Principle and Practice. And the People of England were more eſpecially liberal on this Occaſion; becauſe they began to think, it might be their own Caſe, and muſt be every where the Effect of Popery and Arbitrary Power.

But tho' theſe miſerable French Refugees met with a kind Reception from the King and his Subjects, yet their own Monarch purſu'd them, as it were, into England; and by his Ambaſſador in our Court, reſtrain'd them from complaining of the Hardſhips they had ſuffer'd. So that here, in their Place of Refuge, they were to undergo another grievous Perſecution; which was, To be afflicted, without daring to bemoan themſelves. An Inſtance of this new Mortification to them, is thus related by Authority.----- Whitehall, May 8. 1686. The French Ambaſſador having by a Memorial complained to His Majeſty, That a Book, entitled, [Les Plaintes des Proteſtants Cruellement Opprimes dans le Royaume de France] was ſold and diſpers'd in this Kingdom, in which Book are many Falſities and ſcandalous Reflections upon the Moſt Chriſtian King; And that the ſaid Book was likewiſe tranſlated into Engliſh, and printed here: His Majeſty was pleas'd to order, That diligent Enquiry ſhould be made after the Tranſlator and Printer of the ſame, that they may be proſecuted according to Law. And that a printed Copy of the ſaid Book in French, and ano-

Not ſuffer'd to complain of their Perſecution.

(a) See the Order of King in Council, for the more effectual Collecting and Returning the Charitable Contributions, for the Relief of the Neceſſitous French Proteſtants. Whitehall, April 15. 1687.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

ther in Engliſh, ſhould be publickly burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman: Which was accordingly put in Execution on Wedneſday laſt, before the Royal Exchange.

Generoſity of King James, in Relieving them.

It is ſome Juſtice to ſet down what a late Hiſtorian obſerves: (a) “ At the ſame Time that K. James advanced Popery, it cannot be denied but that his Generoſity extended in a particular manner to the diſtreſſed Proteſtants, who had lately fled from France upon Account of Religion; for he not only granted them Briefs, but gave them alſo large Sums out of his Privy Purſe, to excite the Charity of his Subjects by his Royal Example. Nevertheleſs, thoſe Briefs had not all the good Effect which was intended by His Majeſty: Many People refuſing to contribute towards thoſe Charitable Collections, upon an ill-grounded Suſpicion, That they were deſign'd by the Court for the Maintenance of French Papiſts, that were invited over to ſerve the King's Deſigns. ---- Others endeavour'd to leſſen King James's Bounty, by ſaying, It was but a Piece of Policy, in order to curry Favour with his own Proteſtant Subjects. ---- All that an Hiſtorian can ſay in this Matter, is, That where the Benefit is real, 'tis a kind of Ingratitude too nicely to enquire into the Motive of it.

“ Some of the French Refugees had a better Senſe of the King's Favours: For Monſ. Dallon, one of their Miniſters, to compliment the Court upon their beloved Project of Liberty of Conſcience, ſollicited a Patent for the erecting a Nonconforming and Independent French Church in Soho-Fields; which was readily granted: And from hence it is, that the French call that Meeting-Houſe La Patente to this very Day.

“ The Miniſters of the French Church in the Savoy were not wanting in expreſſing their Gratitude to his Majeſty, but yet they did it with more Reſerve and Circumſpection; as appear'd upon the following Occaſion: The Jeſuits, ever ſince their Settlement in the Savoy, had a Deſign upon the French Chapel there; and Mr. Pulton, their Rector or Principal, tamper'd with Dr. Dubourdieu, in order to engage him to reſign that Church; promiſing, as from the King, to build them another on any Ground they ſhould think moſt convenient between Whitehall and Temple-Bar, with a large Sum of Money into the Bargain. —— Monſieur Dubourdieu made Anſwer, That being but one, he deſir'd Time to communicate his Propoſal to the other Miniſters and Church-Wardens of the Savoy. —— Theſe being met upon this Critical Affair, it was agreed, That before they ſhould give the Jeſuits a poſitive Anſwer, they ſhould conſult with ſuch Lords who were moſt conſpicuous for their Wiſdom, and their Affection to the Proteſtant Intereſt. — Accordingly Monſieur Dubourdieu waited upon the Lords Hallifax, Danby, Nottingham, and ſome few others; who all, as it were by Conſent, adviſ'd 'em after this Manner: Never hearken to any Terms with the Jeſuits: Let them purſue their violent Meaſures. Suffer not your ſelves to be thruſt out of your Church; for by that Means you'll do your own Buſineſs, and the Nations.

The State of Ireland.

The State of Ireland, under King James, is fully and juſtly deliver'd by Dr. King, at the Time of writing it, Biſhop of London-Derry; and a later Author has thus abridg'd his Lordſhip's Account: (b) —— “ Ireland was the inexhauſtible Source whence England was to be furniſh'd with a Romiſh Army; and an Iriſh Roman-Catholick was the moſt welcome Gueſt at Whitehall. They came over in Shoals to take Poſſeſſion of the Promis'd Land; and had already ſwallow'd up, in their Hopes, the beſt Eſtates of the Hereticks in England. Over and above compleat Regiments of them, there was ſcarce a Troop or Company wherein ſome of them were not plac'd by expreſs Order from Court. Several Proteſtants that had ſerv'd well and long, were turn'd out, to make Room for them; and Seven conſiderable Officers were caſhier'd in one Day, merely for refuſing to admit them. The chief Forts, and particularly Portſmouth and Hull, the Two Keys of England, were put into Popiſh Hands; and the Gariſons ſo modell'd, that the Majority were Papiſts.

“ As Ireland was remarkable for having furniſh'd King James with Romiſh Troops ſent into England, ſo was it much more for the bare-fac'd and open Invaſions that were made there, upon the Liberties and Rights of the Proteſtants. That Kingdom was the moſt proper Field to ripen their Projects in; conſidering, that the Proteſtants were much out-numbred by the Papiſts, and had been for ſome Ages the conſtant Object of their Rancour and Envy; which had been more than once expreſs'd in Letters of Blood.

“ King James did recall the Earl of Clarendon from the Government of Ireland, ſoon after he was ſent thither; and appointed the Earl of Tyrconnel to ſucceed him, who was a Gentleman had ſignaliz'd himſelf for his Bigottry to the Church of Rome, and his Hatred to the Proteſtants. The Roman-Catholicks had recommended him to King James for that Poſt, in a Letter, As one that did firſt eſpouſe, and chiefly maintain the Cauſe of the Catholick Clergy, againſt their many and powerful Enemies for the laſt Five and Twenty Years; and was then the only Perſon under whoſe Fortitude and Popularity in that Kingdom, they durſt with Chearfulneſs and Aſſurance own their Loyalty, and aſſert his Majeſty's Intereſt. Making it therefore their humble Requeſt, That his Majeſty wou'd be pleas'd to lodge his Authority in his Hands, to the Terror of the Factious, and Encouragement of his Majeſty's moſt faithful Subjects in Ireland; promiſing to receive him with ſuch Acclamations as the long captiv'd Jews did their Redeemer Mordecai. —— Which Letter ſhew'd they were no leſs miſtaken in their Hiſtory of the Bible, than in their Advice to the King; for it does not appear by the Story of Mordecai in the Scripture, that he was ever ſent to the Jews, or remov'd from the City of Suſa, after he came into Favour with Ahaſuerus.

(a) It is too evident, that the Royal Favours extended to the French Refugees, were chiefly to engage them to eſpouſe and abet the King's Power of Diſpenſing with all Penal Laws in Religion, and then taking them off in Parliament. —— See a Letter of ſeveral French Miniſters, fled into Germany upon the Account of the Perſecution in France, to ſuch of their Brethren in England as approved the King's Declaration touching Liberty of Conſcience. Tranſlated from the Original French. 4*to*. 1689.

(b) The Earl of Sunderland in his Letter March 23. 1689. writes thus; As to Ireland, my Lord Tyrconnel has been ſo abſolute there, that I never had the Credit to make an Enſign, or keep one in, nor to preſerve ſome of my Friends, for whom I was much concerned, from the laſt Oppreſſion and Injuſtice; but yet with Care and Diligence, being upon the Place, and he abſent, I diverted the calling a Parliament there, which was deſigned to alter the Acts of Settlement. Chief Juſtice Nugent and Baron Rice were ſent over with the Draught of an Act for that Purpoſe, furniſhed with all the preſſing Arguments that could be thought on to perſuade the King, and I was offered Forty Thouſand Pounds for my Concurrence; which I told to the King, and ſhewed him at the ſame Time the Injuſtice of what was propoſed to him, and the Prejudice it would be to that Countrey, with ſo good Succeſs, that he reſolved not to think of it that Year, and perhaps never. This I was helped in by ſome Friends, particularly my Lord Godolphin, who knows it to be true, and ſo do the Judges before-named, and ſeveral others.

1687. 3 Jac. II. “However, Tyrconnel fully anſwer'd the Hopes and Expectations of the Papiſts, and the Fears of the Proteſtants of Ireland; for by the Miniſtry of this Rigid Man, was the Ruin of the Proteſtant Engliſh Intereſt in that Kingdom, in a great Meaſure compleated.

“At King James's Acceſſion to the Crown, the Army of Ireland conſiſted of above Seven thouſand Men, all Proteſtants, and zealous to the Service: Theſe were in a little Time all turn'd-out, and the whole Army made up of Papiſts, moſt of them the Sons, or Deſcendants, or near Relations of thoſe that were attainted for the Rebellion in 1641. or others that had diſtinguiſh'd themſelves ſince that Time, by their notorious Villanies, and implacable Hatred to the Engliſh and Proteſtant Intereſt.

“Though in King Charles's Time, by the Influence of the Duke of York, there had been Grounds of Complaint againſt ſome of the Judges in Ireland, upon the Account of their Partiality to the Papiſts; yet when King James came to the Crown, theſe very Judges were not thought fit enough for the Work that was deſign'd. It was judg'd neceſſary to employ the moſt Zealous of the Party, thoſe that from Intereſt and Inclination were the moſt deeply engag'd to deſtroy the Proteſtant Intereſt; and accordingly ſuch were pick'd out to ſit in every Court of Juſtice.

“The Cuſtody of the King's Conſcience and Great Seal, was given to Sir Alexander Fitton, a Perſon convicted of Forgery, not only at Weſtminſter-Hall and at Cheſter, but fined for it by the Lords in Parliament. This Man was taken out of Gaol, to diſcharge the Truſt of Lord High-Chancellor; and had no other Qualities to recommend him, beſides his being a Convert to the Romiſh Church, and a Renegado to his Religion and Country. To him were added, as Maſters of Chancery, one Stafford a Popiſh Prieſt, and O-Neal the Son of one of the moſt notorious Murtherers in the Maſſacre in 1641.

“In the King's-Bench, care was taken to place one Nugent, whoſe Father had loſt his Honour and Eſtate, for being a principal Actor in the ſame Rebellion: This Man, who had never made any Figure at the Bar, was pitch'd upon to judge whether the Outlawries againſt his Father and Fellow-Rebels ought to be revers'd; and whether the Settlements that were made in Ireland upon theſe Outlawries, ought to ſtand good.

“The next Court is that of Exchequer, from which only, of all the Courts in Ireland, there lies no Appeal, or Writ of Error, in England. It was thought fit, that one Rice, a profligate Fellow, and noted for nothing but Gaming, and a mortal Inveteracy againſt the Proteſtants, ſhould fill the Place of the Lord Chief Baron: This Man was often heard to ſay, before he came to be a Judge, That he would drive a Coach and Six Horſes through the Act of Settlement. And before that Law was actually repeal'd in King James's Parliament, he declar'd upon the Bench, That it was againſt Natural Equity, and did not oblige. It was before him, that all the Charters in the Kingdom were damn'd in the Space of a Term or Two; ſo much was he for Diſpatch. A Learned Prelate (from whoſe Book all the Things that here relate to that Country are taken) does obſerve, That if this Judge had been left alone, 'twas believ'd, in a few Years, he would by ſome Contrivance or other, have given away moſt of the Proteſtants Eſtates in Ireland, without troubling a Parliament to Attaint them.

“In the Court of Common-Pleas, it was thought adviſeable, that a Proteſtant Chief-Juſtice ſhould continue; yet ſo, as to pinion him with Two of their own Sort, that might Out-Vote him, upon Occaſion. 1687. 3 Jac. II.

“The Adminiſtration of Juſtice and the Laws being in ſuch Hands, it was no wonder that the poor Proteſtants in Ireland wiſh'd rather to have had no Laws at all, and be left to their Natural Defence, than be cheated into the Neceſſity of ſubmitting to Laws that were executed only to puniſh, and not to protect them. Under ſuch Judges the Roman Catholicks had a glorious Time; and be their Cauſe never ſo unjuſt, they were ſure to carry it: When the Lord Chancellor did not ſtick on all Occaſions, and ſometimes upon the Bench, to declare, That the Proteſtants were all Rogues! And that among Forty Thouſand of them, there was not one that was not a Traitor, a Rebel, and a Villain!

“The Supreme Courts being thus fill'd up, it was but reaſonable all other Courts ſhould keep pace with them. In the Year 1687, there was not a Proteſtant Sheriff in the whole Kingdom, except one, and he put in by Miſtake, for another of the ſame Name that was a Roman-Catholick. Some few Proteſtants were continu'd in the Commiſſion of the Peace; but they were render'd uſeleſs and inſignificant, being over-power'd in every Thing by the great Number of Papiſts join'd in Commiſſion with them, and thoſe, for the moſt Part, of the very Scum of the People, and a great many whoſe Fathers had been executed for Theft, Robbery, or Murther.

“The Privy-Council of Ireland is a great Part of the Conſtitution, and has conſiderable Privileges and Powers annexed to it: This was likewiſe ſo modell'd, that the Papiſts made the Majority; and thoſe few that were Proteſtants choſe for the moſt Part to decline appearing at the Board, ſince they could do thoſe of their Religion no Service.

“The great Barrier of the People's Liberties, both in England and Ireland, being their Right to chuſe their own Repreſentatives in Parliament, which being once taken away, they become Slaves to the Will of their Prince: The Proteſtants in Ireland finding a Neceſſity of ſecuring this Right in their own Hands, had procured many Corporations to be founded, and had built many Corporate Towns at their own Charges; from all which, the Roman-Catholicks were by their Charters excluded. This Barrier was broken through at one Stroke, by diſſolving all the Corporations in the Kingdom, upon Quo Warranto's brought into the Exchequer-Court, and that without ſo much as the leaſt Shadow of Law. Hereupon new Charters were granted, and fill'd up chiefly with Papiſts, and Men of deſperate or no Fortunes: And a Clauſe was inſerted in every one of them, which ſubjected them to the abſolute Will of the King; by which it was put in the Power of the Chief Governor to turn out and put in whom he pleas'd, without ſhewing a Reaſon, or any formal Trial at Law.

“The Proteſtant Clergy felt, upon all Occaſions, the Weight of Tyrconnel's Wrath. The Prieſts began to declare openly, That the Tythes belong'd to them, and forbad their People, under Pain of Damnation, to pay them to the Proteſtant Incumbents. This paſs'd afterwards into an Act of Parliament; by which not only all Tythes payable by Papiſts were given to their own Prieſts, but likewiſe a Way was found out to make the Popiſh Clergy capable of enjoying the Proteſtants Tythes: Which was thus, If a Proteſtant happen'd to be poſſeſs'd of a Biſhoprick, a Dignity, or other Living, he might not by this new Act demand any Tythes or Eccleſiaſtical Dues from any Roman Catholick; and aſſoon as his Preferment became void by Death, Ceſſion, or

“Ab-

1687. 3 Jac. II.

"Abſence, a Popiſh Biſhop or Clergyman was put "into his Place. And the Act was ſo expreſs, that "there needed no more to oblige all Men to repute "and deem a Man to be a Roman-Catholick Biſhop "or Dean of any Place, but the King's ſignifying him "to be ſo, under his Privy-Signet, or Sign-Manual. "Aſſoon as any one came to be thus Entitled to a "Biſhoprick, Deanery, or Living, immediately all "the Tythes as well of Proteſtants as Papiſts, be"come due to him, with all the Glebes and Eccle"ſiaſtical Dues.

"The only great Nurſery of Learning in Ireland, "is the Univerſity of Dublin, conſiſting of a Pro"voſt, Seven Senior, and Nine Junior Fellows, and "Seventy Scholars, who are partly maintain'd by a "Yearly Salary out of the Exchequer. This Sala"ry the Earl of Tyrconnel ſtopt, merely for their "not admitting into a vacant Fellowſhip, contrary "to their Statutes and Oaths, a vicious ignorant "Perſon, who was a new Convert. Nor could he "be prevail'd with, by any Interceſſion or Intreaty, "to remove the Stop; by which, in Effect, he "diſſolv'd the Foundation, and ſhut up the Foun"tain of Learning and Religion. This appear'd "more plainly afterwards to have been his Deſign: "For it was not thought enough, upon King "James's Arrival, to take away their Maintenance, "but they were further proceeded againſt, and the "Vice-Preſident, Fellows and Scholars all turn'd "out, their Furniture, Library, and Communion "Plate ſeiz'd, and every Thing that belong'd to the "College, and to the private Fellows and Scho"lars taken away. All this was done, notwith"ſtanding that when they waited upon King James "at his firſt Arrival at Dublin, he was pleas'd to "promiſe them, That he would preſerve them in "their Liberties and Properties, and rather aug"ment than diminiſh the Privileges and Immunities "that had been granted them by his Predeceſſors. "In the Houſe they plac'd a Gariſon, and turn'd "the Chapel into a Magazine, and the Chambers "into Priſons for the Proteſtants. One Moore, a "Popiſh Prieſt, was made Provoſt; and one Mac"karty, alſo a Prieſt, was made Library-Keeper; "and the whole deſign'd for them and their Fra"ternity.

"One Archbiſhoprick, and ſeveral Biſhopricks, "and a great many other Dignities and Livings of "the Church, were deſignedly kept vacant, and "the Revenues firſt paid into the Exchequer, and "afterwards diſpos'd of to Titular Biſhops and "Prieſts, while in the mean Time the Cures lay "neglected; ſo that it appear'd plainly, that the "Deſign was to deſtroy the Succeſſion of Proteſtant "Clergymen. At length Things came to that "Height, after King James was in Ireland, that "moſt of the Churches in and about Dublin were "ſeiz'd upon by the Government; and at laſt Lut"terell, Governor of Dublin, iſſued out his Order, "Forbidding more than Five Proteſtants to meet to"gether, under Pain of Death. Being ask'd, Whe"ther this was deſign'd to hinder Meeting in "Churches? He anſwer'd, It was deſign'd to hinder "their Meeting there, as well as in other Places: "And accordingly all the Churches were ſhut up, "and all Religious Aſſemblies, through the whole "Kingdom forbidden, under Pain of Death.

"It were endleſs to enumerate all the Miſeries "that Reverend Author mentions, which the Pro"teſtants of Ireland ſuffer'd in the Reign of King "James: But to give a Deciſive Blow, there was "an Act of Attainder paſs'd in Parliament; in or"der to which, every Member of the Houſe of "Commons return'd the Names of all ſuch Prote"ſtant Gentlemen as liv'd near them, or in the "County or Borough for which he ſerv'd; and if "he was a Stranger to any of them, he ſent to the "Country for Information about them. When this "Bill was preſented to the King, for his Aſſent, the "Speaker of the Houſe of Commons told him, "That many were Attainted in that Act, upon ſuch "Evidence as ſatisfy'd the Houſe; and the reſt upon "common Fame.

"In this Act there were no fewer Attainted than "Two Archbiſhops, One Duke, Seventeen Earls, "Seven Counteſſes, Twenty eight Viſcounts, Two "Viſcounteſſes, Seven Biſhops, Eighteen Barons, "Thirty three Baronets, Fifty one Knights, Eighty "three Clergymen. Two thouſand one hundred "eighty two Eſquires and Gentlemen: And all of "them (unheard) delared and adjudged Traytors, "convicted and attainted of High-Treaſon, and ad"judged to ſuffer the Pains of Death, and Forfei"ture. The famous Proſcription of Rome, during "the laſt Triumvirate, came not up, in ſome Re"ſpects, to the Horror of this; for there were "condemn'd in this little Kingdom, more than "double the Number that were proſcrib'd through "the vaſt Bounds of the Roman Empire. And to "make this of Ireland yet the more terrible, and "to put the Perſons attainted out of a Poſſibi"lity of Eſcaping, the Act it ſelf was conceal'd, "and no Proteſtant allow'd a Copy of it till four "Months after it was paſs'd. Whereas in that of "Rome, the Names of the Perſons proſcrib'd were "affix'd upon all the Publick Places of the City, "the very Day the Proſcription was concerted; "and thereby Opportunity was given to many of "the nobleſt Families in Rome to preſerve them"ſelves, by a ſpeedy Flight, for better Times.

The State of Religion.

The Proceedings of the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners this Year, are thus faithfully abridg'd by a late Writer: (a) "The Thunderbolts of the Eccleſiaſtical "Commiſſion fell next on both the Univerſities, and "firſt of all upon Dr. Peachey, the Vice-Chancellor "of Cambridge, for refuſing to admit one Alban "Francis a Benedictine Monk, to the Degree of "Maſter of Arts, without taking the Oaths, accord"ing to the King's Mandate, wherein his Majeſty "diſpens'd with Francis, though not having that ne"ceſſary Qualification. This Mandate (b) being read "in the Conſiſtory, it was unanimouſly agreed, "That they could not admit the Monk to a Degree, "without taking the uſual Oaths, unleſs they broke "their own; and thereupon appointed Two of

---

(a) There was much other Work cut out for the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion, if it had held much longer, even to humble the whole Bench of Biſhops, and the whole Body of the Clergy. They were often threatned with the King's Power, to bring them to the King's Will. Particularly the Popiſh Writer of a Reply to the Reaſons of the Oxford Clergy againſt Addreſſing, Publiſh'd with Allowance, By Henry Hills, 1687. 4*to*. gives out theſe Menaces too ſoon. "Will any ſay, that though the Diſ"penſation, by which any of our Clergy hold their Plurali"ties, is deriv'd from the King, yet the King cannot revoke "them? Or, May not his Majeſty's Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſi"oners make Enquiry after thoſe who have about 8 l. per An"num, and by a Diſpenſation hold a Second Benefice, and "judge of the firſt Benefice, not according to the Value in the "King's Books, but according to the very Value of the Church, "as has been formerly adjudged? Or, May not the Treaſury "demand a Review of the firſt Fruits, according to the full "Value? In a word, may not the King ſend out a Quo Warran"to againſt the Biſhops, and demand by what Power they hold "Courts in their own Names, and finding nothing but Pre"ſcription to be their Plea, which can be no Bar againſt the "King, ſufficiently humble our Clergy? —— Should a ſtrict "Enquiry be made into our Clergy, it's to be fear'd, that too "many of them would be found ſo very Guilty, as to deſerve "not only a Suſpenſion, but alſo a Deprivation, if they pro"voke the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners to make a cloſe Search "after their Miſcarriages, eſpecially ſeeing Deprivations have "been anciently for Dilapidations, and ſuch like Offences.

(b) The King's Mandatory Letters requiring Anthony Farmer, A. M. to be elected and admitted Preſident of Magdalen College in Oxford. Given at Whitehall, 5. Apr. 1687. The Biſhop of Wincheſter's Letter on that Account, dat. Apr. 8. 1687. &c. the Earl of Sunderland a Commiſſioner endeavour'd to ſoften Matters; he declares in his Letter, March 23. 1689. I can moſt

"their

1687. 3 Jac. II
“ their Body to wait upon his Majeſty, and ac“ quaint him, how ready they were to obey all his “ Commands, where their Compliance did not “ claſh with their Conſciences: Humbly hoping “ his Majeſty would not force them to Wilful Per- “ jury; of which, by the Statutes of the Univer“ ſity, they muſt be guilty, if they ſhould admit
“ Alban Francis, thus unqualify'd, to that Degree.
“ When the Two Fellows came to London, they firſt “ made their Application to the Duke of Albemarle
“ their Chancellor, who us'd his Intereſt to ſerve
“ them, though to little Purpoſe; for at length
“ they received this Anſwer from the Secretary of “ State, That his Majeſty had ſeen the Vice-Chan- “ cellor's Letter; was offended at the Proceedings
“ of the Univerſity; and would take Order, ſhortly,
“ to give them a further Anſwer. What this An“ ſwer was, appear'd in a little Time; for Atter-
“ bury the Meſſenger came to Cambridge, to ſum-
“ mon the Vice-Chancellor to appear before the Ec-
“ cleſiaſtical Commiſſioners, and anſwer to ſuch “ Things as ſhould be objected againſt him, on his “ Majeſty's Behalf. —— The Vice-Chancellor, and “ Eight more of that Body, appear'd, and put in “ their Anſwer in Writing, in the Name of the “ Univerſity; alledging Three Acts of Parliament
“ in their Juſtification, with many unanſwerable “ Arguments againſt the Illegallity of this new “ Court: Which being read, the Court took ſome
“ Time to conſider of the Matter, and adjourn'd
“ till Saturday the 7th of May, 1687. That Day
“ being come, and the Vice-Chancellor and Dele“ gates appearing, after ſome trifling Queſtions “ propounded by Chancellor Jeffreys, they were “ commanded to withdraw; and being call'd in “ again, Jeffreys told the Vice-Chancellor of Cam-
“ bridge, That he being guilty of great Diſobedi-
“ ence to the King's Commands, and other Crimes
“ and Contempts, the Court had ſentenc'd him,
“ To be depriv'd of his Office of Vice-Chancellor, and “ ſuſpended him ab Officio & Beneficio of his Head-
“ ſhip of Magdalen-College, and that he ſhould not “ preſume to meddle in any publick Buſineſs relating “ to the Univerſity.

“ The Storm which ſoon after broke out upon
“ the whole College of St. Mary Magdalen in Ox-
“ ford, as it was a longer Time a gathering, ſo it
“ prov'd more furious and diſmal in its Effects.
“ And becauſe the boldeſt Strokes of that arbitrary
“ Spirit, by which King James's Counſels were ani“ mated, were ſeen in a particular manner through
“ the Courſe of this Affair, a full Relation of the “ whole cannot be thought foreign to this Hiſtory.
“ ——— St. Mary Magdalen's College is one of
“ the nobleſt Foundations that perhaps was ever
“ erected for Learning in the World; and 'twas no “ wonder the Popiſh Clergy look'd with an envious
“ and greedy Eye upon this rich Prize, and made
“ their utmoſt Efforts to ſnatch it from the Hands
“ of thoſe they call'd Hereticks. This Illuſtrious
“ Society, from repeated Grants of Kings, confirm'd
“ by ſeveral Acts of Parliament, and from their “ own Statutes, were in an uninterrupted, as well
“ as unconteſted Poſſeſſion of a Right to elect their “ own Preſident. That Place being vacant, by the “ Death of Dr. Clarke; the Vice-Preſident, Dr. Ald- “ worth, gave notice to all the Fellows preſent in
“ the Chapel to proceed to the Election of another,
“ on the 13th of April following, to fill up the Va“ cancy. But before the Day of Election, be“ ing inform'd that his Majeſty had granted his “ Letters-Mandatory in Behalf of Mr. Anthony “ Farmer, a Man of an ill Reputation, who had
“ who had promis'd to declare himſelf a Papiſt; 1687. 3 Jac. II.
“ They moſt humbly repreſented to his Majeſty, in “ their Petition, That the ſaid Mr. Farmer was a “ Perſon in ſeveral Reſpects incapable of that Cha- “ racter, according to their Founder's Statutes; and “ did moſt earneſtly beſeech his Majeſty, either to “ leave them to their Duty and Conſciences, accord-
“ ing to his Majeſty's late moſt gracious Toleration,
“ and their Founder's Statutes, or to recommend “ ſuch a Perſon, who might be more ſerviceable to “ his Majeſty and to this College. The Petition was “ deliver'd to the Earl of S   d, Preſident of “ the Council, by Dr. Thomas Smith, and Captain
“ Bagſhaw; and lay Four Days in his Lordſhip's “ Hands, with a Promiſe of his Favour; but at “ laſt his Anſwer was, That the King muſt be obey'd.
“ On Monday, April 11. his Majeſty's Mandate “ was deliver'd by Mr. Robert Charnock, Maſter of “ Arts, Fellow of the ſaid College, a New Con“ vert, and a Man wholly devoted to the Court,
“ directed to the Vice-Preſident and Fellows, re“ quiring them forthwith to elect the ſaid Mr. Far- “ mer, and admit him Preſident. This Mandate
“ the Vice-Preſident read, with decent Reſpect, in “ the Chapel of the College, before the Fellows
“ there preſent, and ask'd them, Whether they, in “ Obedience to his Majeſty's Letters, would forth-
“ with Elect Mr. Farmer Preſident? They all agreed
“ to defer their Anſwers till Wedneſday following.
“ All the Fellows being then met, the Vice-Preſi-
“ dent read the Statute concerning the Choice of a “ Preſident; and another againſt corrupt and irre“ gular Elections: Then he read the King's Letter
“ in Behalf of Mr. Farmer, and a ſecond Time de“ manded their Anſwer, which was to this Effect;
“ That having a Petition lying at that Time before
“ his Majeſty, they ought not to proceed to Election, “ till they had receiv'd his Majeſty's Anſwer to the “ ſame. And thereupon they all agreed, (except “ Mr. Charnock) That the Election ſhould be de“ ferr'd till the next Day. On Thurſday in the “ Morning, the Vice-Preſident told them, That the “ Choice of a Preſident had been put off upon Ac“ count of their Petition to his Majeſty; in Anſwer
“ to which, They had not then receiv'd his Maje-
“ ſty's Pleaſure: That the next Day was the utmoſt
“ Time they had Power to prorogue the Election
“ to, by the Statutes, and therefore it was neceſſary
“ they ſhould come to ſome Reſolution. He told “ them further, That the King had commanded
“ them to elect Mr. Farmer; and ask'd their Senſe
“ therein? Which was unanimous, (except Mr.
“ Charnock) That the Election ſhould be deferr'd “ till the next Morning. Accordingly, Friday, A- “ pril 15. at Eight a Clock in the Morning, the “ Vice-Preſident and Fellows being met, Dr. Thomas
“ Smith and Captain Bagſhaw, Two of the Fellows, “ acquainted the reſt, from the Lord Preſident of
“ the Council, That in Anſwer to their Petition,
“ His Majeſty having ſent his Letter to the College,
“ expected to be obey'd. After which, the Vice-“ Preſident read again the King's Mandate, and “ ask'd them whether they would comply with it?
“ They deſired they might proceed to an Election.
“ And the Vice-Preſident having propos'd, whe“ ther they would make any further Addreſs to his “ Majeſty: The Vice-Preſident Dr. Fairfax, Dr.
“ Pudſey, and Dr. Thomas Smith were for a ſecond “ Addreſs, but all the reſt declar'd immediately for “ proceeding to an Election. Then the Vice-Preſi-
“ dent propos'd, Whether they would go to an Ele“ ction Viva Voce, or by Scrutiny? The Vice-Preſi-“ dent, Mr. Thompſon, and Mr. Charnock were for truly ſay, and it is well known, that for a good while I defended Magdalen Colledge, purely by Care and Induſtry, and have Hundreds of Times begg'd of the King never to grant Mandates, or to change any Thing in the regular Courſe of Eccleſiaſtical Affairs; which he often thought reaſonable, and then by perpetual Importunities was prevailed upon againſt his own Senſe; which was the very Caſe of Magdalen College, as of ſome others.

“ pro-

1687. 3 Jac. II.

proceeding in it Viva Voce; but all the reſt were for a Scrutiny, (except Doctor Thomas Smith, who was for deferring the Election till they had once more petition'd the King.) Therefore it being the Senſe of the Majority, That they ought to proceed to the Election of a Preſident, according to the Statutes, and this the laſt Day limited; in order to it, the Holy Sacrament was ſolemnly taken by all, (except Charnock.) Then the Statutes relating to the Choice of a Preſident, and againſt corrupt Elections, were read by the Vice-Preſident. Every one took the Oath preſcribed in the Statutes, (except Mr. Thompſon and Mr. Charnock, who refus'd it;) and the Two Senior Fellows were ſworn Scrutators in the Scrutiny of the whole Society. For the Nomination of a Preſident, Dr. Hough and Mr. Maynard had each of them the Major Part of the Voices. And then the Thirteen Senior Fellows being met to elect one of theſe two, Dr. Hough had Eleven Voices, and was accordingly pronounc'd Preſident by the Senior Scrutator; and Mr. Maynard was appointed by the Thirteen Senior Fellows, to preſent him as Preſident-Elect to the Viſitor, in order to his Admiſſion. After this, Mr. Charnock and Mr. Thompſon declar'd viva Voce for Mr. Farmer, according to His Majeſty's Letter. The next Day, Dr. Hough being preſented to the Viſitor, was ſworn, and admitted Preſident by his Lordſhip, according to the Statutes; and on the Sunday next following, he took the ſame Oath again before the Society; and afterwards, as Preſident, took his Seat in the Chapel.

(a) "The King being inform'd of it, order'd the Lord Sunderland to write to the Fellows; which he did in the following Terms: Gentlemen, The King being inform'd, that notwithſtanding his late Mandate, ſent to you for Electing Mr. Farmer to be Preſident of your College, you have made Choice of another Perſon; His Majeſty commands me to let you know, He is much ſurprized at theſe Proceedings, and expects you ſhould ſend me an Account of what paſs'd on that Occaſion, and whether you did receive His Majeſty's ſaid Mandate, before you choſe Dr. Hough.

"Thereupon the Vice-Preſident and Fellows drew up their Caſe relating to the late Election of a Preſident; which was preſented to the Duke of Ormond, Chancellor of the Univerſity of Oxford, with a Letter, wherein they humbly begg'd His Grace to interpoſe with His Moſt Sacred Majeſty for them, that they might not lie under the Weight of his Diſpleaſure, for not being in a Capacity of obeying his Commands. This Submiſſion not being ſatisfactory, and the Duke of Ormond's Interpoſition little regarded, the Vice-Preſident and Fellows were cited to appear before the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners at Whitehall.

"On June 6. the Vice-Preſident and Dr. Fairfax, Dr. J. Smith, Mr. Hammond, Mr. Dobſon, and Mr. Farrer, deputed Fellows, appear'd before the Lords Commiſſioners, according to the abovemention'd Citation: And it being demanded of them, Why they refus'd to obey the King's Mandate? They deſir'd Time to conſider of it; which was granted to the 13th; at which Time appearing, the Vice-Preſident deliver'd in their Anſwer, which was read by Mr. Bridgman, and wherein they alledg'd, That the College of St. Mary Magdalen in Oxon is a Body Corporate, govern'd by Loyal Statutes, granted and confirm'd to them by His Majeſty's Predeceſſors. That by the ſaid Statutes of the College, (to the Obſervation of which each Fellow is ſworn) it is order'd, That the Perſon elected Preſident thereof, ſhall be a Man of good Life and Reputation, of approv'd Underſtanding, and good Temper, diſcreet, provident and circumſpect, both in Spiritual and Temporal Affairs. That at the Time of Election of a Preſident, the ſaid Fellows are bound by the ſaid Statutes to take an Oath, That they ſhall nominate none to that Office, but ſuch as are, or have been Fellows of the ſaid College, or of New-College in Oxon; or if they are not actually Fellows at the Time of Election, that they be ſuch as have left their Fellowſhips in their reſpective Colleges upon creditable Accounts. And when Two qualified Perſons ſhall be nominated at the Time of Election, by the greater Number of all the Fellows, to the ſaid Office of Preſident, the Thirteen Seniors alſo ſwear, That they will elect one of them, whom (in their Conſciences) they think moſt proper and ſufficient, moſt diſcreet, moſt uſeful, and beſt qualified for the Place; without any Regard to Love, Hatred, Favour or Fear. That every Fellow, when he is admitted into his Fellowſhip in the ſaid College, ſwears, that he will inviolably keep and obſerve all the Statutes and Ordinances of the College; and that he will not procure any Diſpenſation, contrary to his aforeſaid Oath, or any Part thereof, nor contrary to the Statutes and Ordinances to which it relates: And if it ſhall happen that any Diſpenſation of this ſort, of whatſoever Authority it ſhall be, be granted; that he will neither make uſe of it, nor in any ſort conſent thereunto. That on the 11th of April, they receiv'd His Majeſty's Letters Mandatory, to elect and admit Mr. Anthony Farmer Preſident of the ſaid College: But foraſmuch as the Vice-Preſident and Fellows apprehended the Right of Election to be in them, and believ'd His Majeſty never intended to diſpoſſeſs them of their Rights; and foraſmuch as the ſaid Mr. Farmer had never been Fellow either of Magdalen or New-College in Oxon, and had not thoſe Qualifications which by the ſaid Statutes of the College are requir'd in the Character of a Preſident; and in regard that they could not comply with His Majeſty's Letter, without the Violation of their Oaths, and Hazard of their Legal Intereſt and Property, wherewith they were by their Statutes poſſeſs'd, and which by their Oaths they are bound to maintain; They repreſented the ſame, by their humble Petition, to His Majeſty: And that having deferr'd the Election to the laſt Day limited by their Statutes, then they had made Choice of the Reverend Mr. John Hough, B. D. one of the Fellows of their College, and a Perſon every way qualified to be Preſident; who had been ſince confirm'd by the Biſhop of Winton their Viſitor, as the Statutes of the ſaid College direct. And that they might not lie under His Majeſty's Diſpleaſure by their Proceedings, they did make an humble Repreſentation

(a) In the Univerſity of Cambridge, (as before obſerv'd) there was a like Attempt of breaking in upon the Statutes and the very Laws of the Kingdom. A Royal Mandate was ſent to that Univerſity, to admit one Alban Francis, a Benedictine Monk, to the Degree of Maſter of Arts, without taking any Oaths. Upon which they ſent Two of their Body to wait on His Majeſty, to repreſent that they could not in Conſcience comply; and humbly hoping, that His Majeſty would not force them into wilful Perjury, &c. They applied to the Duke of Albemarle, their Chancellor, to little Purpoſe; and afterwards receiv'd this Anſwer from the Secretary of State; 'That His Majeſty had ſeen 'the Vice-Chancellor's Letter, was offended at the Proceedings of the Univerſity, and would take Order ſhortly to give 'them a further Anſwer.'——The Anſwer was, To proceed againſt them in the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion Court. There the Vice-Chancellor appear'd, and Eight more of that Body, and put in their Anſwer in Writing, alledging Three Acts of Parliament in their Juſtification, with many unanſwerable Arguments againſt the Legality of that Court. But on Saturday, May 7. 1687. Sentence was given againſt Dr. Peachey, Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, That He being guilty of great Diſobedience to the King's Commands, and other Crimes and Contempt of the Court, was hereby ſuſpended ab Officio & Beneficio of his Headſhip of Magdalen-College; and that he ſhould not preſume to meddle with any Publick Buſineſs relating to the Univerſity.

" there-

1687. 3 Jac. II.

" thereof to His Majeſty, by his Grace the Duke of Ormond, Chancellor of the Univerſity of Oxon, ſetting forth their indiſpenſible Obligations to obſerve their Founder's Statutes. All which Matters they humbly offer'd to their Lordſhips, and pray'd to be diſmiſs'd with their Lordſhips Favour.

" This Anſwer was ſign'd but by Five of the Delegates, Dr. Fairfax not conſenting to it; and therefore he deſir'd their Lordſhips to hear him apart, and take his Reaſons why he could not ſubſcribe. After the reading of the Anſwer, the Lord Chancellor Jefferies being in hopes he would ſubmit, gave him Leave to ſpeak, ſaying; Ay, this looks like a Man of Senſe, and a good Subject; Let's hear what he will ſay: --- But finding his Miſtake, and that Dr. Fairfax chiefly inſiſted, That in Eccleſiaſtical Courts there ſhould be a Libel given to the Party appeal'd, that he may know what he is accus'd of; that he deſir'd that Libel, and did not know what he was call'd there for; and that the Matter did not lie in that Court, but in Weſtminſter-Hall. The Chancellor endeavour'd to baffle his Plea, by telling him, He was a Doctor of Divinity, but not of Law. To this the Doctor reply'd, That he deſir'd to know by what Commiſſion and Authority they ſat? Which put Jefferies into ſuch exceſſive Paſſion, as made him cry out; Pray, what Commiſſion have you to be ſo impudent in Court? ---- This Man ought to keep in a dark Room; Why do you ſuffer him without a Guardian? ---- Why did you not bring him to me, to beg him? ---- Pray let the Officers ſeize him. ----- Then the Delegates were order'd to withdraw; and after a whole Hour's Debate, the Vice-Preſident was call'd in alone, and order'd to attend the Court, with the reſt of the deputed Fellows, on Wedneſday the 22d of the ſame Month.

" On the appointed Day the Delegates appear'd again, according to the Commiſſioners Order, and gave in their Allegations againſt Mr. Farmer; the moſt material of which were, That he had miſ-behav'd himſelf in Trinity-College in Cambridge, and had there receiv'd Admonition from the Maſter, in order to his Expulſion: ---- That having left Cambridge, he taught School at Chippenham in Wiltſhire, under a Nonconformiſt Miniſter, without Licenſe. ---- That in September 1683. he was admitted of St. Mary Magdalen Hall in Oxon; where ſuch frequent Complaints were brought againſt him to the Principal, for his troubleſome Humour, and unquiet Temper, that, to preſerve the Peace of the Society, he was deſir'd to leave the ſaid Hall. ---- That after his leaving Magdalen-Hall, he was admitted into Magdalen-College; where diſcourſing about Religion, he declar'd, That there was no Proteſtant but would cut the King's Throat: ---- Tho' at other Times he ſaid, That whatſoever he pretended, he was really a Member of the Church of England; and that he made an Intereſt with ſome Roman-Catholicks, only to get Preferment by their Means, and for that reaſon was willing to be thought of their Religion. ----- And that, in general, The ſaid Mr. Farmer had had the Unhappineſs to lie under an ill Fame, as to his Life and Converſation. ----- Theſe Allegations were confirm'd by ſeveral Letters and Certificates, produced in Court; which Mr. Farmer vainly endeavour'd to confute. But nevertheleſs, the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners depriv'd Dr. Hough of his Preſidentſhip, and ſuſpended Dr. Aldworth and Dr. Fairfax; and order'd the Fellows of the College to cauſe their Sentence to be executed, and affixed to the Gates of their College: Which they neglecting to do, they were cited to appear before the Commiſſioners at Whitehall, upon the 29th of June, to anſwer the ſaid Contempt.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

" The Court, by this Time, finding that Farmer was a Man of ſo profligate a Life, that tho' he had promis'd to advance the Intereſt of the Papiſts, and even to declare himſelf one of them, upon his Promotion to that Place; yet they began to be aſham'd of him: And therefore, inſtead of inſiſting on the former Mandate in his Favour, the King granted another, in Behalf of Dr. Parker, then Biſhop of Oxford, and one of the Court Creatures. The Place of Preſident being already, in a legal manner, fill'd up by Dr. Hough, (which tho' it had not been, yet the Biſhop of Oxford was likewiſe incapable, by the Statutes of the College, of being choſen) the Fellows did not think themſelves oblig'd to proceed to a Second Election.

" The King was ſo incens'd at this freſh Contempt of his Orders, that he came to Oxford in Perſon; and having commanded the Fellows of Magdalen College to attend him at Chriſt-Church, he ask'd Dr. Pudſey, the Senior of the Fellows that appear'd before him, Whether they did receive his Letter? When the Doctor anſwer'd, They did; the King, in an angry Tone, reply'd, Then you have done very Uncivily by Me, and Undutifully. ----- Here they all kneel'd; and Dr. Pudſey offer'd a Petition, wherein they humbly ſhew'd, It was an inexpreſſible Affliction to them, to find themſelves reduced to ſuch an Extremity, that either they muſt diſobey His Majeſty's Command, contrary to their Inclinations, and that conſtant Courſe of Loyalty which they had ſhewn upon all Occaſions; or elſe break their Founder's Statutes, and deliberately perjure themſelves. ---- Then they mention'd the Statutes, and the Oaths that every one of them had taken at their Admiſſion to their Fellowſhips; and concluded with an humble Prayer to His Majeſty, To give them Leave to lay their Caſe and Themſelves at His Majeſty's Feet; earneſtly beſeeching him, to extend to them that Grace and Tenderneſs which he vouchſafed to all his other Subjects. But their ſubmiſſive Poſture did not appeaſe the King, who refuſing to receive their Petition, vented his Reſentment in theſe paſſionate Words: Ye have been a Stubborn, Turbulent College; I have known you to be ſo this Six and twenty Years: You have affronted Me in this. --- Is this your Church of England Loyalty? One wou'd wonder to find ſo many Church of England Men in ſuch a Buſineſs. Go home, and ſhew your ſelves good Members of the Church of England. --- Get you gone! --- Know, I am your King! --- I will be obey'd; and I command you to be gone! --- Go, and admit the Biſhop of Oxon Head, Principal, What d'ye call it of your College; (One that ſtood by, ſaid, Preſident;) I mean, Preſident of the College. Let them that refuſe it, look to it; They ſhall feel the Weight of their Sovereign's Diſpleaſure! The Fellows offering again their Petition on their Knees, the King ſaid to them; Get you gone! I will receive nothing from you, till you have obey'd Me, and admitted the Biſhop of Oxon. Thereupon they immediately went to their Chapel; and Dr. Pudſey propoſing, Whether they would obey the King? They anſwer'd, They were as ready to obey His Majeſty in all Things that lay in their Power, as any of the reſt of His Subjects; but the Electing the Biſhop of Oxon being directly contrary to their Statutes, and the poſitive Oaths they had taken, they could not apprehend it in their Power to obey him in this Matter.

" Whereupon they drew up an Addreſs, expreſſing in moſt ſubmiſſive Terms the ſaid Reſolutions; which they gave to the Lord Sunderland, Preſident of the Council, and which was afterwards deliver'd to His Majeſty at Bath. Whereever His Majeſty came, he work'd a miraculous Con-

1687. “ verſion, (as his Flatterers expreſs'd it) except in 3 Jac. II. “ Oxford ; and therefore this being the only Oppo“ ſition he receiv'd in his Progreſs, it could not “ but provoke a Monarch, who expected to be “ obey'd in every Thing. Yet before he made
“ Magdalen College feel the Weight of his Diſplea“ ſure, William Penn, the Head of the Quakers,
“ or, as ſome then thought, an ambitious crafty
“ Jeſuit, who (under a Fanatical Outſide) pro“ moted King James's Deſigns, was induſtriouſly “ employ'd ; not to trepan them, (as he pretended
“ in his Letter to Dr. Bailey, one of the Fellows)
“ but out of a paſſionate Concern for their Intereſt,
“ to perſuade 'em either to a Compliance with His “ Majeſty's Letter, or to think among themſelves of “ ſome Expedient, to prevent the Ruin of their “ College and Themſelves ; and to offer it to His “ Majeſty's Conſideration, that the Order for the “ Quo Warranto againſt the Colleges might be re- “ call'd, before it was too late ; for they could not “ but be ſenſible, how highly His Majeſty was in- “ cens'd againſt them. Every Mechanick (adds “ Penn) knows the Temper of His preſent Majeſty,
“ who never will receive a Baffle in any Thing that
“ he heartily eſpouſes ; and that he does this, your “ ſelves have had too late and manifeſt an Inſtance
“ to doubt of his Zeal in the Affair. Where there
“ are ſo many Statutes to be obſerv'd, 'tis impoſſible
“ but ſome muſt be broken at one Time or other ;
“ and I am inform'd by the Learned in the Law,
“ That a Failure in any One Point, forfeits your “ Grant, and lays your College open to the Royal “ Diſpleaſure. I could (ſays he in the Concluſion) “ give many other prudent Arguments, that might “ poſſibly incline you to put an End to your Troubles, “ almoſt at any rate ; but I ſhall only ſuggeſt this
“ one Thing to you, That your fatal Overthrow would “ be a fair Beginning of the ſo much aim'd at Re- “ formation, firſt of the Univerſity, then of the “ Church ; and adminiſter ſuch an Opportunity to
“ the Enemy, as may not perhaps occur in His Ma- “ jeſty's Reign.

“ To this Letter the College return'd an Anſwer,
“ wherein, amongſt other Things, they declare,
“ They are not conſcious of ever having given His “ Majeſty any ſuch Offence, and therefore have no
“ Reaſon to fear the iſſuing out of a Quo Warranto “ againſt them : And as for the reſt, they believe no In- “ ſtance can be given of a Quo Warranto brought “ againſt a College or Hall in the Univerſities, or any “ other Eccleſiaſtical Corporation, for the Abuſes of “ ſome of the Conſtitutions and Franchiſes in them.
“ That the Miſdemeanors of particular Perſons, will
“ not deſtroy a College ; and that if the Corporation
“ of a College ſhould be diſſolv'd, the Revenues there-
“ of will return to the Founder's Heirs, and not de- “ volve to the Crown. That if their College muſt be
“ the firſt Example of that kind, they ſhall be better “ juſtify'd by the Obſervation of their Statutes, at “ leaſt to God and their own Conſciences, than they “ could have been by a voluntary and deliberate
“ Breach of them. They conclude, with mention“ ing their Loyalty to the Crown, particularly in “ Monmouth's Rebellion, when they rais'd a Company
“ at their own Charges, and, under Command of “ their Fellows, engag'd againſt him.

“ Several other Perſons uſed their Endeavours to “ bring the Fellows to a Compliance ; which pro“ ving ſtill ineffectual, they were cited before the “ Biſhop of Cheſter, Sir Robert Wright, Chief-Ju- 1687.
“ ſtice of the King's-Bench, and Sir Tho. Jenner, 3 Jac. II.
“ one of the Barons of the Exchequer ; theſe Three “ being added to the other Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſi-
“ oners, and particularly empower'd to Viſit Mag- “ dalen-College only. On Friday Morning, the Pre“ ſident (Dr. Hough) and the Fellows appearing,
“ the Biſhop of Cheſter made a Speech, and began
“ with ſevere Reflections upon Diſloyalty and Diſ-
“ obedience, particularly on their Undutiful Behavi-
“ our to His Majeſty when at Oxon, in denying “ Compliance with his juſt and reaſonable Requeſt.
“ He urged, That the Church of England taught
“ an Unconditional and Unlimited Obedience :
“ Then enlarged upon His Majeſty's Gracious Tem-
“ per, That would have no Man oppreſſed in “ Things againſt his Conſcience, but would ſuffer all “ Men to worſhip God in their own way. In the “ mean time, (continu'd he) we cannot but ſuppoſe
“ that His Majeſty will make uſe of all Prudent and “ Lawful Methods, to encourage thoſe of his own
“ Religion, without injuring the Church of England,
“ which is at preſent the Religion by Law Eſtabliſh'd :
“ For His Majeſty will maintain that Altar, at “ which he himſelf does not worſhip ; but at preſent
“ we are in more Danger of Prophaneneſs, than Po- “ pery. He told them, That their Corporation, as “ others, was a Creature of the Crown ; and that it
“ was Inſolence in their Local Statutes, to ſpurn
“ againſt their Maker : - - - - That their Diſtem-
“ pers had brought this Viſitation upon them ; the “ Conſequences of which, might be ill to the Church
“ and Univerſities. He exhorted them, by the Bow-
“ els of Chriſt, to conſider theſe Things : He told “ them, That the Eyes of the World were upon “ them ; and they ought to take care, that their Pra- “ ctices might not influence their deluded Admirers.
“ In ſhort, The whole Deſign of this Speech ſeem'd,
“ by Promiſes and Threats, to aim at the inducing
“ them to comply.

“ In the Afternoon, the Commiſſioners being ſat,
“ the Biſhop of Cheſter ask'd Dr. Hough, Whether “ they would ſubmit to this Viſitation ? To which “ the Doctor anſwer'd, in the Name of himſelf,
“ and the greater Part of the Fellows, That they “ ſubmitted to it, as far as it was conſiſtent with “ the Laws of the Land, and the Statutes of the “ College, and no farther : And deſir'd their Lord-
“ ſhips, that this Declaration might be recorded.
“ The next Queſtion the Biſhop put to him,
“ was, Whether they obſerv'd all thoſe Statutes ?
“ - - - And the Preſident anſwering, He hop'd they “ did : - - - You have a Statute there for Maſs, (re-“ ply'd he) Why don't you read Maſs ? - - - - This “ Queſtion from a Biſhop was a little ſurprizing ;
“ but the Preſident ſoon ſatisfy'd it, by telling him,
“ That the Matter of that Oath was unlawful ; and
“ in ſuch a Caſe, no Man was oblig'd to obſerve an “ Oath : And beſides, that that Statute was taken “ away by the Laws of the Land. - - - - After ſeve“ ral other frivolous Expoſtulations, the Biſhop of “ Cheſter demanded, Firſt, (a) All their Regiſters : “ Secondly, The Revenues of their College, with an “ Account of their Benefactors ; to what Uſe the “ Money was aſſign'd, how employ'd, and how far
“ converted to other Uſes ; or, in plain Engliſh,
“ how far it was deſign'd for Hoſpitality ? And,
“ Thirdly, A Copy of all the Leaſes they had Let
“ for Two Years laſt paſt.

(a) When the Revenues of Colleges were thus ſeiz'd for the Uſe of the Papiſts, the Proteſtant Nobility and Gentry began to be more jealous of their Church-Lands ; and tho' Dr. Johnſton was employ'd as a Tool to write The Aſſurance of Abby and other Church-Lands in England to the Poſſeſſors, cleared from the Doubts and Arguments raiſed about the Danger of Reſumption. In Anſwer to a Letter of a Perſon of Quality. By Nathaniel Johnſton, Doctor in Phyſick. Publiſh'd by His Majeſty's Special Command ; for Henry Hills, 1687. —— To which a Reply was given, entitled, Abby, and other Church-Lands, not yet aſſured to ſuch Poſſeſſors as are Roman-Catholicks. Dedicated to the Nobility and Gentry of that Religion. 1687. 4to. ——— The Writer of Reflexions upon the Petition of the Common-Council of London, in 1691. affirms it as a known Matter, That in King James's Reign, there were Four or Five Prieſts buſily every Day employ'd, in the Augmentation-Office, to take an exact Account of all the Lands and Livings in the Kingdom.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

"On Saturday Morning, Dr. Hough was ſeveral times requir'd to deliver up the Keys, and quiet Poſſeſſion of the Lodgings, to the Perſon whom His Majeſty had appointed Preſident: Which the Doctor refuſing to obey, alledging the Legality of his Election, the King's Proctor ſtood up, and accus'd him of Contumacy: And then the Biſhop of Cheſter admoniſh'd him Three times, To depart peaceably out of the Lodgings; and to act no longer as Preſident, or pretended Preſident of his College. The ſame Day in the Afternoon, the Biſhop of Cheſter ask'd the Fellows, Whether they would admit the Biſhop of Oxon Preſident, ſince Dr. Hough's Place was declar'd void? To which the greater Part anſwer'd, They could not do it without premeditated Perjury, and therefore would not do it.

"During this Examination, Dr. Hough came into Court, without any Attendance; and having waited till it was ended, (a) and the Commiſſioners at a Pauſe, he deſir'd Leave to ſpeak a few Words: Which being granted, he ſaid, That they having been pleas'd to deprive him of his Place of Preſident of that College, he did proteſt againſt all their Proceedings in Prejudice of him and his Right, as Illegal, Unjuſt, and Null; And therefore he appeal'd to his Sovereign Lord the King, in his Courts of Juſtice. Upon which the Strangers and Young Scholars in the Room gave a Humm - - - - Which ſo incens'd their Lordſhips, that notwithſtanding all the Proteſtations the Preſident and Fellows could make, (the Preſident, in particular, offering to purge himſelf by Oath, that he was no ways acceſſary to it) yet the Lord Chief-Juſtice was not to be pacify'd; but charging it upon Dr. Hough, bound him in a Bond of a Thouſand Pounds, and Security to the like Value, to make his Appearance at the King's-Bench-Bar the Term following. Moreover, the Lord Chief-Juſtice ſaid, They had met with nothing but Affronts from the College: That as for himſelf, he valu'd not what People ſaid of him, but was reſolv'd to vindicate the Honour of his Maſter, to the laſt Drop of his Blood; And if the Civil Power could not keep 'em in Order, the Military ſhould. - - - - Baron Jenner likewiſe ſhew'd his Reſentment upon this Occaſion, by punning on the late Preſident's Name, and ſaying to him, Sir, You muſt not think to Huff (Hough) us. About which Time, ſeveral Officers (then in Town) came into the Room.

"On Tueſday, the Court being met, Dr. Stafford, one of the Fellows, offer'd a Paper in Anſwer to what was objected the Friday before, That the King's Mandate in favour of Mr. Farmer, implied an Inhibition: Which their Lordſhips having peruſed, would not ſuffer to be read publickly; but ask'd the Fellows whether they would ſign it? bidding them do it at their Peril. The Fellows being withdrawn, and not thinking it was neceſſary to ſign a Plea which the Commiſſioners refus'd to have argu'd, they return'd the Paper into the Court, ſubſcrib'd only by Dr. Fairfax and Dr. Stafford. Their Lordſhips taking no further notice of that Paper, the Biſhop of Cheſter ask'd the Fellows, Whether they would Inſtall the Biſhop of Oxford Preſident, or aſſiſt at the Inſtalling of him? - - - To this they anſwer'd, as before, That as they could not do it without deliberate Perjury, ſo it was not in their Power to do it. - - - - Thereupon Mr. Wiggins, Chaplain to the Biſhop of Oxford, empower'd as a Proxy to be inſtall'd Preſident for his Lord, (then confin'd to his Chamber by ſome Indiſpoſition) was put into the Preſident's Stall by the Biſhop of Cheſter, none of the Fellows being preſent but Mr. Charnock, and took the Oaths which the Statutes enjoin the Preſident at his Admiſſion, and the Oath of Allegiance and Supremacy. Then their Lordſhips conducted him to the Preſident's Lodgings; where knocking Three times, and the Door not being open'd, a Smith was ſent for to force it open, and Mr. Wiggins took Poſſeſſion of the Lodgings. 1687. 3 Jac. II.

"Immediately after, the Biſhop of Cheſter ask'd the Fellows, Whether they would obey the Biſhop of Oxon, as now inſtall'd Preſident, by Virtue of the King's Mandate? - - - Doctor Fairfax anſwer'd, He neither cou'd nor wou'd obey him, having already a Lawful and Statutable Preſident. - - - Others comply'd with His Majeſty's Pleaſure; and others again deſir'd Time to conſider on ſo weighty a Queſtion; which was granted; the Biſhop of Cheſter bidding them go and conſult about it among themſelves. In the Afternoon, this Anſwer was given in by the Society, (except Dr. Fairfax) That whereas His Majeſty had been pleas'd, by his Royal Authority, to cauſe the Biſhop of Oxon to be Inſtall'd Preſident; they did ſubmit, as far as was lawful, and agreeable to the Statutes of the College, and no way prejudicial to the Right and Title of Dr. Hough - - - This Anſwer was accepted, except the laſt Clauſe, which the Lord Chief-Juſtice and Baron Jenner declar'd (as Judges) to be inſignificant; ſince nothing they could do, could any way invalidate Doctor Hough's Title, but left them ſtill at Liberty to be Witneſſes for him, or to be any other way ſerviceable to him in the Recovery of his Right: And upon this Aſſurance, the Society was prevail'd with to leave out the laſt Clauſe. Dr. Fairfax perſiſting in his former Anſwer, receiv'd Sentence of Expulſion; againſt which he proteſted, as null, unjuſt and unlawful. This Proteſtation was over-rul'd by the Commiſſioners; and a Copy of the Sentence deny'd, tho' moſt earneſtly deſir'd at the Inſtance of Dr. Hedges and Mr. Vice-Chancellor. Two Days after, their Lordſhips thinking they had gain'd their Point, declar'd, That they were well ſatisfy'd with the Anſwer the Society had given them; and tho' before they had laid a Libel to their Charge, yet that Night they declar'd they had met with nothing but Civility, and that they ſhould receive the ſame from them: That they had ſhewn themſelves Men of Excellent Tempers; and that they would repreſent it faithfully Above, to their Advantage; - - - and immediately diſpatch'd an Expreſs to Court, with an Account of their Proceedings.

"On Wedneſday Morning, the Fellows having been order'd the Day before to bring in their Anſwer to the following Queſtions; 1. What Gifts and Proviſions they had, for the Entertainment of Strangers? 2. What was the Value of them? 3. How they were apply'd? 4. And where was the Place of Entertainment? They made it appear very ſatisfactorily, That one Year with another, they gave almoſt a Hundred Pounds in Charity-Money, over and above what by their Statutes they were obliged to give. Upon which their Lordſhips expatiated upon their Generous Bounty and Liberality, ſaying, The Complaint on this Account was groundleſs; and that it would induce His Majeſty to entertain better Thoughts of them in all other Matters.

(a) See the King's Power in Eccleſiaſtical Matters truly ſtated; beginning, 'His Majeſty having erected an High-Commiſſion-Court, to enquire of, and make Redreſs in Eccleſiaſtical Matters; Qu. Whether ſuch a Commiſſion, as the Law now ſtands, be good or not? And I hold, that the Commiſſion is not good. 4*to*. 1687.

"On

1687. 3 Jac. II.

“ On Thurſday (a), the Fellows having preſented to the Commiſſioners a Liſt of Leaſes, which had been renew'd for Two Years laſt paſs'd; Mr. Charnock (the new Convert) ask'd their Lordſhips, whether theſe Leaſes ſtood good, which had been ſeal'd ſince Dr. Hough's Election? The Lord Chief-Juſtice anſwer'd, Yes; for Corporations always ſpeak by their Seals. Then their Lordſhips perus'd the College Regiſters; and finding nothing in them to object againſt, they were return'd, and the Court adjourn'd.

“ On Friday Morning, the Commiſſioners acquainted the Fellows, They had repreſented them fairly to the King, but that his Majeſty expected ſome farther Submiſſion; which they adviſ'd them to make, by acknowledging their Contempt to his Sacred Majeſty in Perſon, and to his Letters; That they ſhould promiſe to behave themſelves Loyally for the future; That they ſhould own the Proceedings and Legality of the Court, implore his Majeſty's Pardon, and lay themſelves at his Feet; And that they ſhould declare their entire Submiſſion to the Biſhop of Oxon as their Preſident. The Fellows anſwer'd in Writing, That they had endeavour'd, in all their Actions, to expreſs their Duty to his Majeſty; and being conſcious to themſelves, that in the whole Conduct of the Buſineſs before their Lordſhips, they had done nothing but what their Oaths and Statutes had indiſpenſibly oblig'd them to; they could not make any Declaration, whereby to acknowledge they had done any Thing amiſs; having acted according to the Principles, of Loyalty and Obedience, ſo far as they cou'd, without doing Violence to their Conſciences or Prejudice to their Rights, (one of which, they conceiv'd the electing a Preſident to be) from which they were ſworn upon no Account to depart. ---- Upon the Peruſal of this Anſwer, their Lordſhips expreſs'd their Diſlike of it, ſaying, It did not come up to the Addreſs ſent to his Majeſty at Bath, nor to the Paper they deliver'd in on Tueſday. Whereupon a freſh Queſtion being put to the Fellows, Whether they wou'd obey the Biſhop of Oxford as their Preſident? All, except one or two, anſwer'd, They cou'd not do it. --- Then Mr. Fulham being particularly interrogated; he alledg'd, That the Biſhop of Oxford had not Poſſeſſion in due Form of Law, nor by proper Officers: And that he was inform'd, that the proper Officers to give Poſſeſſion of a Freehold, was the Sheriff, with a Poſſe Comitatus. ---- To this the Lord Chief-Juſtice reply'd, in a Paſſion, Pray, who's the beſt Lawyer, you or I? Your Oxford Law is no better than your Oxford Divinity: If you've a mind to a Poſſe Comitatus, you may have one ſoon enough. --- Mr. Fulham endeavour'd to make an Excuſe for what he had ſaid: Which their Lordſhips rejected; and having thought fit to ſuſpend him from the Profits of his Fellowſhip, for his Contempt and Opprobious Language, they adjourn'd till the 16th of November, and immediately went for London.

“ The King having ſeen an Account of the Proceedings of the Viſitors, his Majeſty order'd them, That at their Return to the College, they ſhould ſummon all the Fellows to appear before them, and endeavour to make them ſenſible of their Offences; and if they ſhould refuſe to ſubſcribe the above-mention'd Submiſſion, immediately to expel them, for their Obſtinacy. Purſuant to theſe Inſtructions, the Lords Commiſſioners return'd to Oxford; and being Sate, the firſt Thing they did, was to ſend for the Buttery-Book; then they call'd for Mr. Joyner and Mr. Allibone, Two Roman-Catholicks, whom they entred actual Fellows; all Oaths being diſpens'd with, beſides that of the College. That done, the Biſhop of Cheſter made a Speech to the Fellows, wherein he told them, That their many Contempts and wilful Diſobedience had occaſion'd this Viſitation, which wou'd end at laſt in their Ruin: That their Society had been long exercis'd in the Methods of Quarelling; had always been troubled with Factious Spirits, and teſty Mutineers, ever ſince the Reſtoration of the late King: That they had encourag'd Quarrels, among themſelves; Quarrels, between themſelves and Preſident; Quarrels, at length, between themſelves and Viſitor. That by theſe Steps, from quarrelling with the Preſident and Viſitor, they had at laſt advanc'd to the higheſt Pitch of Inſolence, to quarrel with their Prince, and affront His Sacred Majeſty. Then he endeavour'd to make them ſenſible of their irregular Conduct, and heinous Offences, from their firſt diſobeying the King's Mandate, to that Day: He told them, They urg'd the Obſervance of their Statutes; of which they had not been ſo conſtant Obſervers, when their own Humour prompted them to a Diſpenſation; Witneſs (ſaid he) that of being ſerv'd per Maſculos;

(a) The Proceedings in this Commiſſion were ſo arbitrary and ſevere, that one of the Commiſſioners themſelves liv'd to value himſelf upon having the leaſt to do in them. The Biſhop of Rocheſter wrote thus to the Earl of Dorſet. I perſiſted immoveable in my Diſſent from every Vote that paſs'd againſt Magdalen College in Oxford, from their very firſt Citation before that Court, to the cruel incapacitating of the Preſident and Fellows. ———— I could mention many other Particulars, wherein I ſucceſsfully labour'd to relieve divers of the inferior and greater Clergy from Oppreſſion; to prevent ſome from being called before us at all; to preſerve others after they were accus'd by malicious Sycophants and Informers, that ſwarm'd then every where: Some in the Caſe of Tythes; ſome for preſſing Church-Wardens to take illegal Oaths; ſome for not reading, ſome for Preaching againſt the King's Declaration. But there are Two eminent Inſtances which I cannot omit; the one, that when the Biſhop of Lincoln was petition'd againſt by his Archdeacon; and there was at that Time Inclination enough in the Court to purſue him to Extremity; yet my Lord Biſhop of Peterborough by interceding for him with the King, and I with the Commiſſioners, ſo effectually wrought, that the Proſecution againſt him was diſcountenanc'd and fell to the Ground. The other Inſtance concerns my Lord of Canterbury; and I am confident his Grace will readily give me his Teſtimony, that I ſerv'd him honeſtly and induſtriouſly on ſome Occaſions, wherein he was like to be embroil'd with the Commiſſion: Which muſt inevitably have ended in his Grace's Suſpenſion at leaſt, ſince he was reſolv'd whenever he ſhould be brought before them, whatever the Pretence had been, to deny the whole Power and Juriſdiction of the Court.

It will not much contradict his Lordſhip's Account to add upon undoubted Information; that in the Caſe of the Biſhop of Lincoln, Dr. Thomas Barlow, he was indeed obnoxious to the Court for his Writings againſt Popery, and there were ſeveral Attempts to bring his Lordſhip under Proſecution; but that which ſav'd him from the Anger of the Court was really this, He was prevail'd upon to aſſert and vindicate the Regal Power of diſpenſing with Penal Laws, in an elaborate Tract with numerous Quotations, from Canoniſts, Civilians, and Divines. Whether he began to diſtruſt his own Arguments, or was check'd by the better Judgment of ſome of his Brethren, I know not; but the bare attempting it was a Protection to him. And he liv'd afterwards to be aſham'd of that Attempt, and to apprehend no Danger ſo great as that of his Amanuenſis offering to produce a Copy of thoſe Papers. Enquire of the Reverend Mr. William Oſley.

The Biſhop of Rocheſter oppos'd his Fellow-Commiſſioners in many other Particulars. “ I was zealous for Exeter College, in their Defence againſt Father Petre, in a Buſineſs of ſo great Importance, that if the College had been overcome in the Suit, the whole Society muſt have been ſoon abandon'd to Popery. I did my utmoſt to oppoſe the violent Perſecution upon the whole Univerſity of Cambridge, when the Vice-Chancellor was ſuſpended his Office, and his Maſterſhip of Magdalen College, becauſe a Popiſh Prieſt, who was one of the Miſſionaries to pervert the Scholars, was deny'd a Degree in their Convocation. I faithfully aſſiſted and ſerv'd Chriſt-Church in Oxford, when they were in Danger of having new Statutes impos'd upon them; which would infallibly have laid open that Royal College to the Ruins of their good Learning and Religion. I abſolutely reſiſted all the Alterations in the Statutes of Sidney College, and all other Changes and Abrogations of Oaths, &c.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

“ by which great Scandals have come to this Society,
“ by reaſon of Baſtards. (a) ---- His Majeſty (added
“ he) was extremely amaz'd, that his Clemency
“ ſhould be deſpis'd; but yet, to your Comforts be it
“ ſpoken, his Patience and Goodneſs extend as far
“ as your Provocations can: But if you ſtill perſiſt
“ in your Obſtinancy, thoſe that are too Tall to Stand,
“ and too Stubborn to Bend, deſerve to be Broken.
“ And now I think I have ſaid enough to let you “ know, That the Fig-Leaves you have ſo artificially “ ſtitch'd together, are not ſufficient to cover your “ Nakedneſs. I wiſh to God you had the ſame Ten- “ derneſs for your own Concern, as his Majeſty's “ Commiſſioners have for you. But if you ſtill per- “ ſiſt to oppoſe the Royal Power of the King; We,
“ who are come to vindicate the Right and Honour
“ of his Majeſty, reſolve to diſcharge our Conſci-
“ ences, and Duties to God and the King, without “ any Reſpect of Popularity; that's but the Para-
“ diſe of Fools, and Scorn of wiſe Men; and there-
“ fore, as for us, We have no more Regard to Peo- “ ple's Diſlike, than what they Dream. By reaſon
“ therefore of your late Hypocritical Submiſſion, the “ Commiſſioners have thought fit to draw up an In-“ ſtrument; to which if you ſhall immediately Sub- “ ſcribe, before you leave the Room, We ſhall leave
“ you to his Majeſty's Pardon: And this We expect
“ from you all, except Mr. Thomas Smith and Mr.
“ Charnock, with whoſe Behaviour the King is ſo
“ well ſatisfy'd, that he expects no more from them.
“ The above-mention'd Submiſſion being read to “ the Fellows; all (except Dr. Thomas Smith and “ Mr. Charnock) refus'd to ſign it. Mr. Thompſon
“ being call'd in his Turn, alledg'd, He had always “ been Obedient to the King's Commands; that he “ was not concern'd in the Election of Dr. Hough;
“ that he voted for Mr. Farmer, and was ready to “ ſubmit to the Biſhop of Oxon; and ſo he was ex“ cus'd. After a ſhort Time, all who refus'd to “ ſign the Submiſſion, being Twenty Five in Num“ ber, were call'd in, and by Sentence of their “ Lordſhips were depriv'd, and expell'd from their “ Fellowſhips, for their Diſobedience to his Maje-“ ſty's Command, and obſtinately contemning his “ Royal Authority; againſt which they all proteſt-
“ ed, declaring they would uſe all juſt and legal “ Ways of being relieved. This Sentence was con-
“ firm'd by a Decree made at Whitehall by the Ec-“ cleſiaſtical Commiſſioners, declaring, That Dr.
“ Hough, who had been depriv'd before, and the ſaid
“ Twenty Five Fellows ſhould be incapable of recei-
“ ving, or being admitted into any Eccleſiaſtical Dig“ nity, Benefice or Promotion; and ſuch of them
“ who are not yet in Holy Orders, they adjudged in- “ capable of receiving, or being admitted into the “ ſame. Thus by a Sentence of an Illegal Court
“ were a Society of Learned and Worthy Proteſtants “ turn'd out of their Freeholds, to make Room for “ a Popiſh Seminary; and thus was King James 1687. 3 Jac. II.
“ prevailed with by his Evil Miniſters to aſſume a “ Power, not only to diſpenſe with Laws, but with “ Oaths alſo. After the Expulſion (b) of the Fellows, “ moſt of the Demy's were likewiſe turn'd out of “ Magdalen-College by the Biſhop of Oxford, and “ Mr. Charnock his Vice-Preſident, and Roman Ca- “ tholicks put in their Places. To acknowledge the “ King's Favours, the Biſhop of (c) Oxford publiſh'd
“ a Book containing Reaſons for abrogating the Teſt
“ and Penal Laws, and his Majeſty commanded the “ Stationers not to print any Anſwer to the ſame.

Not only the Church-of-England-Men were abundantly ſatisfied that the King's Declaration of Indulgence (d) was to prepare the Way to Popery, but the very Diſſenters themſelves began to be convinc'd that this alone was the Deſign of it. Nay, the King himſelf was now conſcious that his Proteſtant Subjects generally underſtood his Meaning, and expected no Liberty, either to the Church or to ſeparate Congregations, any longer than till the Papiſts were able to exerciſe their full and abſolute Will and Power. To take away this Jealouſy of the People, the King repeated and confirm'd his former Declaration in a manner that did but increaſe the Fears of Popery. This New Declaration was in this Form. 1688. 4 Jac. II.

JAMES R.

New Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience.

“ OUR Conduct has been ſuch in all Times as “ ought to have perſuaded the World, That “ we are firm and conſtant in our Reſolutions: Yet
“ that eaſy People may not be abus'd by the Malice
“ of crafty wicked Men, We think fit to declare, That “ our Intentions are not changed ſince the 4th of “ April, 1687. when we iſſued out our Declaration
“ for Liberty of Conſcience in the following Terms.
[Here the Declaration was recited, and then it follows:] “ Ever ſince we granted this Indulgence we “ have made it our principal Care to ſee it preſerv'd
“ without Diſtinction, as we are encourag'd to do “ daily by Multitudes of Addreſſes, and many “ other Aſſurances we receive from our Subjects of “ all Perſuaſions, as Teſtimonies of their Satisfa“ ction and Duty; the Effects of which we doubt
“ not, but the next Parliament will plainly ſhew;
“ and that it will not be in vain, That we have re-
“ ſolved to uſe our utmoſt Endeavours to eſtabliſh
“ Liberty of Conſcience, on ſuch juſt and equal “ Foundations as will render it unalterable, and ſe-
“ cure to all People the free Exerciſe of their Reli“ gion for ever; by which future Ages may reap the “ Benefit of what is ſo undoubtedly for the gene“ ral Good of the whole Kingdom. It is ſuch a Se“ curity we deſire without the Burthen of Oaths
“ and Teſts, which have been unhappily made by

(a) See a Programma by the Vice-Chancellor of Oxford, Dr. Gilbert Ironſide, againſt Humming or Hiſſing, &c. occaſion'd by the Diſturbance given to the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners at Magdalen College, dated Octob. 24. 1687.

(b) Dr. Samuel Parker, Lord Biſhop of Oxford, in a Sort of broken Heart, died in his new Lodgings at Magdalen College, on the 20th of March 168 7/8; and Bonaventure Giffard, a Sorbon Doctor, and Secular Prieſt, Biſhop Elect of Madaura, was by Royal Nomination inſtall'd Preſident of the ſaid College by Proxy, on the 31ſt of March, 1688. And in the See of Oxford was put Mr. Timothy Hall, an obſcure Divine in the City of London, diſtinguiſh'd for the Merit of Reading the King's Declaration when his Brethren refus'd it.

(c) There were ſeveral other Arbitrary Acts of the diſpenſing and over-ruling Power of the King, in Favour of Popery, againſt Law and Conſtitution. See, 1. A Letter ſign'd by Eight Governors of the Charter-Houſe, directed to one of the Secretaries of State, to repreſent to his Majeſty the Reaſons why they could not comply with his Royal Pleaſure of requiring and commanding the Admiſſion of Andrew Popham, a Papiſt, into that Hoſpital, without taking the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy. ——— The King's Reſentment and declaring Reſolution to proceed againſt the Governors, and particularly againſt the Maſter for ſuch Contempt of his Authority, June 24. 1687. Enquire after the Proceedings in this Commiſſion by a Complaint of Father Petre againſt Exeter College in Oxford. By an Attempt of giving Statutes of Royal Will and Pleaſure to Chriſt-Church, with a Popiſh Dean Mr. Maſſey, &c. By the Encouragement given to Mr. Obadiah Walker, a Popiſh Maſter and his Creatures, in Univerſity College; and to other Apoſtates in other Houſes, Brazen-Noſe, Trinity, &c.

(d) It ſhould be remembred, that as good Laws ariſe out of ill Manners, ſo many excellent Deſigns owe their Foundation to Dangers and melancholy Proſpects. The Opening a Jeſuit's School at the Savoy, gave Occaſion to the moſt active and exemplary Divine Dr. Teniſon to found a Grammar School and Proteſtant Library at St. Martin's. And the very Original of Charity Schools in London was now laid upon the ſame Foundation. The very firſt Charity School at Norton Falgate, and the Blue-Coat School in St. Margaret's Weſtminſter, were open'd Lady-Day, 1688, to help keep out Ignorance the Mother of Popiſh Devotion.

2 “ ſome

1688. 4 Jac. II.

" ſome Governments, but could never ſupport any: " Nor ſhould Men be advanced by ſuch Means to " Offices and Employments, which ought to be the " Reward of Services, Fidelity and Merit: We " muſt conclude, That not only good Chriſtians " will join in this, but whoever is concerned for the " Increaſe of the Wealth and Power of the Nation. " It would perhaps prejudice ſome of our Neigh- " bours, who might loſe Part of thoſe Advantages " they now enjoy, if Liberty of Conſcience were " ſettled in theſe Kingdoms, which are above all o- " thers moſt capable of Improvements, and of " commanding the Trade of the World. In Pur- " ſuance of this great Work, we have been forced " to make many Changes both of Civil and Milita- " ry Officers throughout our Dominions, not think- " ing any ought to be employ'd in our Service who " will not contribute towards the eſtabliſhing the " Peace and Greatneſs of their Country, which we " moſt earneſtly deſire, as unbyaſs'd Men may ſee " by the whole Conduct of our Government; and " by the Condition of our Fleet and Armies, which " with good Management, ſhall be conſtantly the " ſame, and greater if the Safety or Honour " of the Nation require it. We recommend theſe " Conſiderations to all our Subjects, and that they " will reflect on their preſent Eaſe and Happineſs, " how for above Three Years that it has pleaſed " God to permit us to reign over theſe Kingdoms, " we have not appeared to be that Prince our Ene- " mies would have made the World afraid of; our " chief Aim having been, not to be the Oppreſſor, " but the Father of our People; of which we can " give no better Evidence, than by conjuring them " to lay aſide all private Animoſities, as well as " groundleſs Jealouſies, and to chuſe ſuch Members " of Parliament as may do their Parts to finiſh " what we have begun for the Advantage of " the Monarchy, over which Almighty God " hath placed us, being reſolv'd to call a Parlia- " ment that ſhall meet in November next at far- " theſt.

Given at our Court at Whitehall, the Twenty-Seventh Day of April, 1688. In the Fourth Year of our Reign.

This Declaration ordered to be Read in all Churches. The Biſhops and Clergy generally refuſe to do it.

The King was not contented to have this Declaration publiſh'd in the uſual Manner, but he was reſolv'd to have it ſolemnly read in all Churches, as the Political Goſpel of his Reign. The Biſhops and Clergy were of all others the moſt averſe to the Subject-Matter of the Declaration, as being moſt ſenſible of the ill Deſign and ill Effects of it; and therefore the Court ſeem'd the more willing to mortify theſe their Enemies, and make them become acceſſary to their own Ruin; and even to eat their own Dung, as Father Petre proudly threatned; and therefore this Order of Council was made and publiſh'd at the Court at Whitehall, the 4th of May, 1688.

1688. 4 Jac. II.

By the KING's moſt Excellent Majeſty, and the Lords of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council. (a)

Order of Council for it.

" IT is this Day order'd by his Majeſty in " Council, That his Majeſty's late Gracious " Declaration, bearing Date the 27th of April laſt, " be read at the uſual Time of Divine Service, up- " on the 20th and 27th of this Month, in all " Churches and Chapels within the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Ten Miles thereabouts: " And upon the 3d and 10th of June next in all " other Churches and Chapels throughout this " Kingdom. And it is hereby further order'd, That " the Right Reverend the Biſhops, cauſe the ſaid " Declaration to be ſent and diſtributed throughout " their ſeveral and reſpective Dioceſes, to be read " accordingly. (b)

W. BRIDGMAN.

The Biſhops meet at Lambeth to conſider; And agree to refuſe.

The Biſhops and whole Clergy of the Church of England were not ſo much ſurpriz'd, as they were troubled at this imperious Order, which they had reaſon to take as the greateſt Hardſhip and Oppreſſion that could be put upon them (c.) On this Occaſion there was a Meeting in the Archbiſhop's Palace at Lambeth, to conſult what ought to be done upon ſuch an extraordinary Juncture. After Prayers and mature Deliberation, it was agreed, That the " Matter of the " Declaration was altogether illegal, the Foot upon " which it ſtood being a Power not only to diſpenſe " in contingent and particular Caſes, which, if the " Lawgivers could have foreſeen, they would have " provided a Diſpenſation for them, but it was to " diſpenſe with all Sorts of Laws in Caſes contrary " to the very Deſign and End of making them: " That this was not properly a Diſpenſing but a Diſannulling Power, highly prejudicial to the King " himſelf, becauſe it took away that Faith and " Truſt, which the People repoſe in him when a " Law is made; which they look upon as their Se- " curity: That 'twas true, each Biſhop or Mini- " ſter was not a capable Judge in ſuch Caſes; but " however he was a Judge for his own private Con- " ſcience, againſt which he muſt not go: That this " Caſe was publickly adjudg'd in Parliament, 1672; " That the general Forbearance of Addreſſes, " grounded upon the Illegality of that Diſpenſing " Power, ſhew'd this to have been the Judgment " of the greateſt Part of the Clergy and others: " That the Declaration of the preſent Judges, went " no farther than the particular Military Caſe of " Sir Edward Hales, which, in whatſoever Words " it was expreſs'd, yet never came legally to the " Cognizance of the Subject: That an unlawful " Matter was not to be publiſh'd, if he, who pub- " liſh'd it, thought the Matter unlawful; for it " cannot come to him, being illegal, by any Au- " thority, for the King can do no illegal Thing;

(a) Biſhop Burnet in a Preface to the Sermons he publiſh'd in 8*vo*, 1713. ſays thus of this Juncture: " So inflexibly did " the King purſue this Point of repealing the Teſt Act, that " he now renew'd his Declaration with this Addition of re- " quiring all the Clergy to read it in their Churches. —— Till " this came out, I thought particular illegal Proceedings were " to be ſubmitted to, rather than that he ſhould venture on " an open Breach. But the Declaration when twice repeated, " ſo that it appear'd the Court was reſolved to purſue it, " ſeem'd to me to ſtrike at all, and to alter our whole Conſti- " tution.

The Earl of Sunderland in his Letter March 23. 1689, ſays; " In the Midſt of Preparations for a new Parliament, and " whilſt the Corporations were regulating, the King thought " fit to order his Declarations to be read in all Churchrs, of " which I moſt ſolemnly proteſt, I never heard one Word, till " the King directed it in Council.

(b) Upon this Occaſion his Majeſty was numbring the People of England, and had deliver'd to him what was afterward publiſh'd in a ſingle Sheet by David Edwards. A Liſt of the exact Number of Church-Men, Diſſenters, and Romans, as they were given in to King James on the Third of May, 1688.

(c) And yet the Biſhop of Durham went on to the ſeveral Penalties upon the Clergy of his Dioceſe for refuſing or neglecting to read the illegal Declaration. In the Memorial of the Engliſh Proteſtants to the Prince and Princeſs of Orange, there is in the Notes an Inſtance given of Arbitrary Proceſs, &c. the Suſpenſion of near Two Hundred Miniſters in the County of Durham, for refuſing to read to their People the King's Declaration for diſpenſing with our Laws.

" and

1688. 4 Jac. II.

"and if his Officers do it, they do it not by the King's Authority, and therefore the refuſing of it is no Diſobedience, being no illegal Refuſal: That if then, the Biſhops publiſh'd the Declaration, they did it voluntarily as their own Act, and conſequently publiſh'd an illegal Thing without legal Authority, and were puniſhable for it: That many and great were the ill Conſequences of Reading the Declaration: Firſt, That many would juſtly judge the Clergy either Cowards or Hypocritical Time-ſervers, in publiſhing what they thought illegal, and illegally ſent to them. Secondly, That many who had Votes for Parliament-Men, would take this for the Conſent of the Publiſhers, and be ſtrengthened in the chuſing ſuch Men, as ſhould be Friends not only to the Indulgence, but to the Foundation of it, the Diſpenſing Power. Thirdly, That the World would have Reaſon to take this Publication for an Approbation, becauſe there could be no other Intention in ordering it to be publiſhed, but to make the Clergy Parties to it; for it was as much known before it was read, as it would be after the Reading of it; and therefore the making it known was not the only Thing intended. And, Fourthly, That after this they muſt expect further Things to be publiſh'd by them, at which they muſt make a Stand; and their making a Stand when they had loſt their Reputation would be of no Force: That therefore in Prudence as well as Conſcience, they ought not to publiſh a Declaration, which they knew to be againſt Law, and which in its Nature and Deſign was levell'd againſt their own Intereſt, and that of their Religion. Some objected, That their Refuſal would be interpreted by the Papiſts, as a Failure in the great Principles of Loyalty, to which the Church of England made Pretence; others ſaid, That Diſſenters would conſtrue it, as a Declaration againſt all Tenderneſs to them; and others again, That Suſpenſion or Deprivation of the Refuſers might follow, whereby the People of their Church might be left as Sheep without a Shepherd. To the Firſt Objection it was anſwer'd, That their Non-Addreſſing had been reflected on in Books as well as Diſcourſes, but had no Effect to blaſt their Loyalty, tho' the Clergy refus'd to addreſs even in a Branch that made for themſelves, becauſe of that one Foundation, on which that Clauſe ſtood with the reſt, of the Diſpenſing Power: That Loyalty being Obedience according to Law, they were the Loyal Men who acted not contrary thereunto: That the beſt Friends to the Crown are thoſe who ſupport the Law, and that they ſtill maintain'd the Principle of Suffering without any unchriſtian Oppoſition. To the Second, (a) That the Diſſenters had never ſuch Aſſurances from Church-Men of their Inclination to Tenderneſs to them, as they then receiv'd; That they could not but ſee, that this Refuſal was not to hinder any Favours to them by this Indulgence, but the Diſpenſing Power; which, if it took place, they could not but diſcern, that a new Magna Charta for Liberty of Conſcience would be of no Validity to them, for a new Declaration might diſpenſe with it at Pleaſure: And that the wiſeſt and beſt of them would look upon their Refuſal as a Teſtimony of their Sincerity to the Proteſtant Religion, and not of any Diſaffection to them. To the laſt Objection it was anſwer'd, That the Church and their Religion would ſuffer leſs by the Conſciouſneſs of their Suſpended Prelates or Miniſters, than it would by their illegal Compliance in ſo Great and Fundamental a Point: That they have better Thoughts of the King's Clemency and Juſtice, when he ſhould be inform'd by Men of Conſcience, againſt the Counſels of Men of Intereſt; for how could the King, at the very Time he proclaim'd entire Liberty of Conſcience to all (b), even thoſe who formerly were look'd upon as his Enemies, do an open Violence to the Conſciences of thoſe who had ever been acknowledg'd to be his Friends? And in ſhort, That they ought to perform their Duty, and leave the Event to God; and that a certain Evil muſt not be done to avoid a contingent one."

Upon this Conſultation the Archbiſhop and Biſhops, conſidering how great a Penalty was falling upon the whole Clergy of England (c), if they ſhould be ſuſpended for not Reading the Declaration, and being unwilling to lay them under ſo great a Temptation, as to ſave themſelves from Ruin by a ſinful Compliance, choſe rather to take the Blame and the Puniſhment upon themſelves, in refuſing to ſend the Declaration to their Clergy. An Heroical Act becoming the Character of Biſhops of the Church of England, who dar'd to be Confeſſors, as their Predeceſſors had been Martyrs, for the Proteſtant

Their Lordſhips reſolve not to ſend the Declaration to their Clergy.

(a) The Popiſh Prieſts and Jeſuits were very familiar and gracious with thoſe diſſenting Teachers, who would come into Court Meaſures. Dr. Gee in his Notes upon Father Parſon's Memorial, 8*vo.* writes thus. It was now a comical Sight to ſee Mr. Lobb the Presbyterian, and Father Petre the Jeſuit, caballing and contriving together, and as great Intimado's as if they had been of the very ſame Society. To ſee Penn the Quaker and Brent, Mr. Alſop and Nevil Payne, ſettling and ſecuring Liberty of Conſcience, and Father Warner as obliging to them as can be. But whatever Profeſſions of Love and Sincerity were made to the Non-Conformiſts by the Jeſuits, I can aſſure them, that at the ſame Time Father Warner the Jeſuit, the King's Confeſſor, look'd upon all the Diſſenters together as the worſt and vileſt of Men.

(b) The wiſeſt of the Diſſenting Teachers were very ſenſible, that this Act of Grace was not for their Sake; and many of them declin'd the making uſe of a Liberty founded on the King's diſpenſing Power intended for the Benefit of Popery. Yet too many accepted the Favour againſt the Laws in being, and addreſs'd and applauded the King for it; the Presbyterians were in this, as in all other Steps, the moſt moderate. A late Writer ſays, There were but Two Presbyterian Parſons of the whole Sect that kept any Correſpondence with the Court, and thoſe were Lobb and Alſop, who had great Obligations to the King; the one having been himſelf pardon'd by him, for Practices againſt him; and the other having got a Pardon for his Son. The former kept cloſe to that King, to his laſt Hour at Whitehall, and was the only Fanatick Jacobite that I ever heard of. He ſaid himſelf, that he offered the King, as he was going off, to attend him, and that his Majeſty told him he ſhould ſtay, that he might do more Service to him. And accordingly he us'd, as long as he liv'd, to ſpeak reſpectfully of that Prince; and has been thought to have kept a Correſpondence with the Enemies of the Government.

(c) There were about the ſame Time ſeveral Conſults of the Clergy of London, how to act under the Difficulties put upon them. They met and conſulted (as one Preſent tells us) about Reading or not Reading the Declaration. Dr. Stillingfleet declar'd it his Opinion, and that of eminent Lawyers, that the Reading was againſt Law, becauſe it was the publiſhing of an illegal Act. Others profeſs'd it was againſt their Conſcience to read in the Church a Licenſe to ſeparate from the Church. They came at laſt to the drawing up a Form of Reſolution not to read it. But when they came to ſubſcribe, Dr. Stillingfleet refus'd to ſet his Name, becauſe he ſhould be mark'd out for the Leader by the Papiſts, who deſign'd to make him the firſt Sacrifice. At laſt Dr. Patrick offered to ſubſcribe firſt, if any one would follow. Dr. Fowler promiſed to be the next; and then the Paper being left with Mr. Chiſhull, it had ſoon above Twenty Hands of the Chief of the City Clergy.

See, 1. A Letter from a Clergyman in the City to his Friend in the Countrey, containing his Reaſons for not Reading the Declaration, dated May 22. 1688. 4*to.* ——— 2. A Letter from a Clergyman in the Countrey to a Clergyman in the City, ſhewing the Inſufficiency of his Reaſons therein contained for not reading the Declaration. Licens'd Aug. 15. 1688. 4*to.* ——— 3. The Miniſters Reaſons for his not Reading the King's Declaration, friendly debated, by a Diſſenter. Allow'd to be publiſh'd June 21. 1688. ——— 4. A Reply to an Anſwer to the City Miniſter's Letter. Allowed June 27. 1688. 4*to.* ——— 5. The Reaſons of the Oxford Clergy againſt Addreſſing the King for his Declaration of Indulgence. ——— 6. A Reply to the Reaſons of the Oxford Clergy againſt Addreſſing. Publiſh'd with Allowance. 1687.

1688. 4 Jac. II.

They draw up a Petition to the King.

Religion. And therefore before they parted they drew up an humble Petition, agreed to and ſubſcrib'd by all the Prelates who were then preſent, Dr. Sancroft, Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury; Dr. Lloyd, Biſhop of St. Aſaph; Dr. Kenn, Biſhop of Bath and Wells; Dr. Turner, Biſhop of Ely; Dr. Lake, Biſhop of Chicheſter; Dr. White, Biſhop of Peterborough; and Sir Jonathan Trelawney, Biſhop of Briſtol, in this Form.

To the KING's Moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The Humble PETITION of William, Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, and divers of the Suffragan-Biſhops of that Province (now preſent with him) in Behalf of themſelves, and others of their abſent Brethren, and of the Inferior Clergy of their reſpective Dioceſes,

HUMBLY SHEWETH,

" THAT the great Averſeneſs they find in " themſelves to the diſtributing and publiſh- " ing in all their Churches your Majeſty's late De- " claration for Liberty of Conſcience, proceeds nei- " ther from any Want of Duty and Obedience to " your Majeſty (our Holy Mother, the Church of " England, being both in her Principles and in her " conſtant Practice unqueſtionably Loyal, and ha- " ving to her great Honour been more than once " publickly acknowledged to be ſo, by your Graci- " ous Majeſty;) Nor yet from any Want of Ten- " derneſs to Diſſenters, in Relation to whom we " are willing to come to ſuch a Temper as ſhall be " thought fit, when the Matter ſhall be conſidered " and ſettled in Parliament and Convocation: But " among many other Conſiderations, from this " eſpecially, becauſe that Declaration is founded " upon ſuch a Diſpenſing Power, as hath been often " declared Illegal in Parliament, and particularly in " the Years 1662, and 1672, and in the Beginning " of your Majeſty's Reign; And is a Matter of ſo " great Moment and Conſequence to the whole Na- " tion, both in Church and State, that your Petitio- " ners cannot in Prudence, Honour or Conſcience, " ſo far make themſelves Parties to it, as the Di- " ſtribution of it all over the Nation, and the Solemn " Publication of it once and again, even in God's " Houſe, and in the Time of his Divine Service, " muſt amount to in common and reaſonable Con- " ſtruction. (a)

" Your Petitioners therefore moſt humbly and " earneſtly beſeech your Majeſty, That you will be " pleaſed not to inſiſt upon their diſtributing and " reading your Majeſty's ſaid Declaration;

And your Petitioners, as in Duty bound, ſhall ever Pray, &c.

Will. Cant.	Tho. Bathon. & Wellen.
Will. Aſaph.	Tho. Peterburgen.
Fr. Ely.	Jonath. Briſtol.
Jo. Ciceſtr.

The Biſhops deliver their Petition.

The ſame Evening, May 18th, the Six Suffragan-Biſhops went over directly to Whitehall, and being introduc'd by the Earl of Sunderland, deliver'd their Petition to the King, none but themſelves and their Metropolitan being privy to it. Upon the Reading of it the King ſtartled, and ſhew'd himſelf to be very much incens'd, and made this Anſwer in a very angry Manner:

The King's Anſwer.

I have heard of this before, but did not believe it. I did not expect this from the Church of England, eſpecially from ſome of you. If I change my Mind, you ſhall hear from me; If not, I expect my Command ſhall be obey'd. The Biſhops reply'd, We reſign our ſelves to the Will of God; and then immediately retir'd.

The King's Threatning Anſwer could not but ſtrike a Kind of Terror into the Minds of thoſe Reverend Prelates; yet it was not able to make them forget their Duty, or to depart from their worthy Reſolution. Indeed the New Biſhops made by King James, and Two or Three other of his Creatures and Commiſſioners, did for Love or Fear diſperſe the Declaration, and yet even in thoſe Dioceſes few of the Clergy would ſubmit to the Reading of it: Nay, and in thoſe Pariſh-Churches where the Miniſters comply'd with the Orders of their Superiors, the greateſt Part of their Congregation run out as ſoon as they began to read the ſaid Declaration. (b)

Some few Biſhops comply.

This Affair of the Biſhops made a great deal of Noiſe throughout the Kingdom: The Church of England was alarm'd, and upon the Ferment; The Diſſenters ſtood gazing at a Diſtance, and the Court was both uneaſy and unreſolv'd what Courſe to ſteer in ſo Critical a Juncture. Some thought the King would now exert his Arbitrary Power, and deprive thoſe Prelates of their Dignities, by his ſole Diſpenſing Authority; others, That he would be contented to deliver them to the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners and cauſe them to be Suſpended: And others again, That he would refer the Matter to the Enſuing Parliament: But the Popiſh Party had other Methods in View.

The Archbiſhop and Biſhops brought before the Council.

And therefore the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Six Biſhops were ſummon'd before the Council on June 8. and having made their Appearance, they were asked, Whether they own'd the Petition? They immediately anſwer'd, They humbly hop'd, (c) That if they ſtood there as Criminals, His Majeſty would not take Advantage againſt them, for they were always ready to obey his juſt Commands. Thereupon they were order'd to withdraw; and being call'd in a Second Time, they made the ſame Anſwer to the ſame Queſtion: But the Chancellor preſſing them to own or diſown the Paper at the Third Coming in, the Archbiſhop confeſs'd, That it was written with his own Hand; and the reſt acknowledg'd, that They had ſign'd it, and deliver'd it; adding withal, That they had done nothing, but what they were ready to juſtify. The Lord Chancellor fell into Anger and Reproaches, and pretended to endeavour to make them ſenſible of the ill Conſequences of their Diſobedience, which tended to diminiſh the King's Authority, and to diſturb the Peace of the Kingdom: And then at laſt ask'd them, Whether they would give their Recognizances to appear before the Court of King's-Bench, to anſwer this High Miſdemeanor? This they all refus'd to do, inſiſting on the Privilege of their Peerage, which they were reſolved to maintain, as well as the Rights of the Church; being equally bound by their Callings to oppoſe all Innovations, both in Government and Religion. This bold Anſwer put the whole Council into

(a) The Earl of Sunderland in his Letter March 23. 1689. tells us, what drew on the Petition of my Lord the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the other Lords the Biſhops, and their Proſecution, which I was ſo openly againſt, that by arguing continually to ſhew the Injuſtice and Imprudence of it, I brought the Fury of the Roman-Catholicks upon me to ſuch a Degree, that I was juſt ſinking, and I wiſh I had then ſunk: But whatever I did fooliſhly to preſerve my ſelf, I continued ſtill to be the Object of their Hatred; and I reſolv'd to ſerve the Publick as well as I could, which I am ſure moſt of the conſiderable Proteſtants then at Court can teſtify.

(b) Eſpecially in London, within the Churches of Mr. Hall, Dr. Thompſon, and Mr. Ellyot.

(c) Some few of the Biſhops diſſented from their Metropolitan and Brethren, upon an Opinion that the Rubrick would juſtify the Reading, though not approving of any Thing to ſome Amazement; and the Chancellor Jefferies threaten'd to ſend them to the Tower, unleſs they did immediately recant, and withdraw their Petition. They unanimouſly anſwer'd, That they were ready to go whitherſoever His Majeſty would pleaſe to ſend them; They hop'd the King of Kings would be their Protector, and their Judge: They fear'd Nothing from Men; for having acted according to Law, and their own Conſciences, no Puniſhment ſhould ever be able to ſhake their Reſolutions. Thereupon a Warrant was drawn, and ſubſcrib'd by Chancellor Jefferies, the Earl of Sunderland, the Lord Arundel, the Marquis of Powis, and others, to commit them to the Tower. 'Tis ſaid, ſome of the Judges there preſent, refus'd to ſet their Hands to that Warrant: But however, it was immediately put in Execution; but for fear the People ſhould be too much affected with ſuch a moving Sight, they were ſent away by Water. And yet for all this Caution, the Notice of their Commitment flew about the Town, and the People flock'd in Shoals to the River-ſide, and with loud Acclamations extoll'd the Conſtancy and Courage of the Biſhops, and crav'd their Benedictions. They were no ſooner landed at the Tower, but moſt of the Officers and Soldiers fell on their Knees, to beg their Bleſſings. Their Lordſhips were ſuffer'd to go immediately to the Chapel, to Evening-Prayer, where the Second Leſſon was (by the Courſe of the Church) extremely well adapted to their Condition; 2 Cor. vi. Giving no Offence in any thing, that the Miniſtry be not blamed: But in all things approving our ſelves as the Miniſters of God, in much Patience, in Afflictions, in Diſtreſſes, in Stripes, in Impriſonments, &c.

1688. 4 Jac. II.

The Bi-ſhops ſent to the Tower.

Repreſentation of this Matter, in the Language of the Court.

The Court, to put a Colour upon this Arbitrary Action, thus repreſented it to the World. "Whitehall, June 8. The Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Biſhops of St. Aſaph, Ely, Chicheſter, Bath and Wells, Peterborough and Briſtol, "being ſummon'd to appear before His Majeſty in "Council, to anſwer to ſuch Matters of Miſdemeanor as ſhould be objected againſt them; they "accordingly appear'd this Day: And the Petition "they lately preſented to His Majeſty being owned "by them, they were required to enter into Recognizance for their Appearance at the King's Bench, "the Firſt Day of the next Term. Which they refuſing to do, they were, by Warrant ſigned by the "Lords of the Council, committed to the Tower, "for Contriving, Making and Publiſhing a Seditious "Libel againſt His Majeſty and His Government. "And Mr. Attorney and Sollicitor-General were order'd to proſecute them for the ſame the next "Term.

1688. 4 Jac. II.

Preparations for the Birth of a Prince of Wales.

It was now high Time for the Jeſuit's Prophecy of the Birth of a Prince of Wales to be accompliſh'd. It had been for ſome Months uncertain, whether Windſor, Hampton-Court or Whitehall, was to be the Place where the Queen deſign'd to Lie in: But on the ſudden, (a) Her Majeſty had this Week given Orders for the Fitting up of an Apartment for that Purpoſe in St. James's-Houſe; and ſent many repeated Commands, That it muſt be finiſh'd by Saturday-Night. Accordingly Her Majeſty, on Saturday June 9. was carry'd in a Chair to St. James's, after ſhe had play'd at Cards at Whitehall till Eleven a Clock at Night: And the next Morning, between the Hours of Nine and Ten, People were not a little ſurpriz'd, to hear that ſhe was brought to Bed of a Prince. (b) Nay, the News was told with as much Confidence before the Delivery, as after it: As if it were a Secret committed to ſome People, who could not keep it. An Eminent Citizen, now living, Sir S. E. is ready to atteſt it upon Oath, That he was call'd up early that Morning, to come to an Iriſh Agent of the King's; and while he was with him, a Meſſenger came to him from the Court, in very great Haſte and Joy, and told him in a great Rapture, That they had got a Prince of Wales; which was ſome Hours before the Time that was afterwards given out. In ſhort, The former Suſpicions concerning Her Majeſty's big Belly, were now ſtrengthen'd by the Circumſtances of her Delivery, at a Time when moſt Proteſtant Ladies were at Church, the Biſhops impriſon'd, the Princeſs Anne of Denmark at Bath, and the Dutch Amballador never call'd to be a Witneſs in Behalf of the Princeſs of Orange. However, this Account was publiſh'd by Authority:

Suſpicions in this Matter.

be publiſh'd in the King's Name, not expreſly ſinful; not conſidering that the Proclaiming, or Publiſhing in the Church during the Time of Divine Service, what is enjoin'd by the King or by the Ordinary, could be meant only of Regular and Lawful Injunctions, not of any Arbitrary and Illegal Acts. The Biſhop of Rocheſter indeed had truſted to that Argument, but did afterward renounce it, by ſaying, 'I muſt frankly confeſs, I had 'then a Doubt in my Mind, ariſing from a Rubrick in the 'Common-Prayer, (which is, as much as any other, a Law of 'the Land) whether a Biſhop could lawfully deny the Reading of whatever the King ſhould ordain to be read in 'Churches: And it was merely upon that miſtaken Scruple of 'Conſcience, &c.—— Dr. Thomas Barlow, Biſhop of Lincoln, ſeem'd to be in earneſt with his Clergy for Reading the Declaration, and ſuffer'd his Officers to be very officious in it: But it was ſuppos'd owing to the timerous Old Age of the Biſhop, who liv'd to fear the Court which he had never lov'd. But the Prelate, who went in moſt roundly upon the Notion of Obedience to the King's Commandment, was one who had been a Papiſt, and had afterward been the Author of Naked Truth; Herbert Crofts, Biſhop of Hereford; who ſent up to the Court his Papers, to be publiſh'd by Authority, bearing the Name of, A Short Diſcourſe concerning the Reading His Majeſty's late Declaration in the Churches: Set forth by the Right Reverend Father in God, Herbert Lord Biſhop of Hereford.

(a) I have heard old Mr. Bulſtrode, who then belong'd to the Bed-Chamber, give ſuch an Account of the Hurry and paſſionate Orders of the Queen on Saturday Night, that ſeem'd perfectly to have made him conclude, it was then determin'd to ſtay no longer for a Son than till the next Morning.

A late Writer, after repreſenting the principal Allegations on both Sides, (i. e. of a Real Birth, and a Sham Impoſture) is pleas'd to obſerve, That notwithſtanding all Arguments to the contrary, the Belief of the Impoſture ſo ſpread in a ſhort Time, that among Proteſtants it became almoſt univerſal. And this Belief, tho' for the moſt part crudely and ſtupidly entertain'd, ſeems to have been the juſt Judgment of Heaven, for ſo many Violations and Breaches of Solemn and Publick Faith. There is a natural Puniſhment attends thoſe who are given often to deceive; which is, Not to be believ'd when they deliver the moſt important Truths. This way of wording has offended ſome People, as declaring too expreſly for the Truth of what will ever be a Queſtion at leaſt; and not mentioning the Impoſture depending upon the Change or Subſtitution of a Son, as well as upon the Suppoſititious Birth. The ſame Author tells us, We are aſſur'd, that the moſt perfect Account of this Matter, is in a Manuſcript written by the late Biſhop of Worceſter, and quoted by Dr. Burnet, which ('tis to be hop'd) will ſhortly ſee the Light. Echard's Hiſt. Vol. III. p. 864. Others think, that the Subſtance of that Manuſcript has been already printed, under the Direction of Biſhop Burnet; and that the main Drift of it was to prove, That beſides the Improbabilities of Birth, there was a double Shifting of Children; and the moſt apparent was that at Richmond, where the Phyſicians themſelves acknowledg'd the mighty Change; and many others thought, that from that Day, the Pretender was literally King James the Third.

The oddeſt Thing of all, was in the End of Queen Anne's Reign, when the Jacobites had again ſo far advanc'd the Belief of their Chevalier's Royal Birth, that the Whigs were content to ſay, That ſuppoſing his Birth true, he had ſtill no Title againſt Law and Settlement; The Tories, who would be then thought not Jacobites, were ſo angry at this giving up Hereditary Right, that they accus'd the Whigs of believing the Pretender; and made as if they themſelves were the only Party who dropp'd him, and believ'd nothing of him.

(b) It was Matter of Queſtion and Scruple Abroad, as well as at Home. 'I have read (ſays a late Writer) in ſome Foreign Papers, printed in Auguſt 1688. that Her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs of Denmark was ill us'd at Court, for being 'a little too curious, and offering to feel the Queen's Breaſts 'after the pretended Delivery.' La Princeſſe, ſays the French Author, a recû quelque chagrin pour s'atro montre un peu trop curieuſe l'on dit qu'aiant voulu later le Sein de la Reine peu de jours apres les couches, l'on tourne en mal ce qu'elle avoit fait comme ſi elle aut douté de ſon Acoouchement.

"White-

1688. 4 Jac. II.

Publick Account given of it.

Whitehall, June 10. 1688. "This Day, between "Nine and Ten in the Morning, the Queen was "ſafely deliver'd of a Prince at St. James's; His "Majeſty, the Queen-Dowager, moſt of the Lords "of the Privy-Council, and divers Ladies of Qua-"lity being preſent: And about Noon, the Coun-"cil being met, it was order'd, That there ſhould "be a General Thankſgiving, to be obſerv'd within "the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Parts "adjacent, on Sunday the 17th Inſtant; and Four-"teen Days after, in all other Parts of this King-"dom: And that Notice ſhould be given of the "Birth of the Prince, to the Lord-Mayor of Lon-"don, that Bonfires and Publick Rejoicings might "be made. Which was accordingly perform'd, af-"ter Firing of the Cannon of the Tower, with all "the Demonſtrations of the Extraordinary Joy, with "which ſo great a Bleſſing beſtow'd upon Their Ma-"jeſties, and all His Majeſty's Dominions, has "fill'd the Hearts of all his Subjects." On the ſame Day, His Majeſty publiſh'd a Proclamation, "That it having pleas'd Almighty God, of his "great and continu'd Mercy to His Majeſty and "his Kingdoms, to bleſs Him and his Royal Con-"ſort the Queen with a Son, and theſe his King-"doms and Dominions with a Prince; His Maje-"ſty thought fit to appoint a Time of Publick "Thankſgiving for ſo great a Bleſſing, on Sunday "June 17. within the Cities of London and Weſt-"minſter; and on July 1. in all other Places. And "for this Purpoſe, His Majeſty had ſignified his "Royal Pleaſure (a) to Thomas Lord Biſhop of "Rocheſter, to prepare a Form of Religious Ser-"vice and Publick Thankſgiving, ſuitable to this "Occaſion, &c." Theſe Days were ſolemniz'd with extraordinary Rejoicings by the Popiſh Party; but the Proteſtants were generally ſilent and re-ſerv'd, as doubting the Fact, and dreading the Con-ſequence. His Majeſty, to expreſs his Satisfaction, was pleas'd, by the Queen's Bed-ſide, ſoon after her Delivery, to confer the Honour of Knighthood up-on Doctor William Waldgrave, Her Majeſty's Phyſi-cian, for his Skill and particular Services to Her Majeſty: And the King, farther to ſhow his Exul-tation, beſtow'd great Preſents upon ſeveral of his Miniſters, and gave conſiderable Charities to the Poor.

Biſhops Tryal.

On June 15. came on the (b) Biſhops Tryal, the moſt important, perhaps, that was ever known before in Weſtminſter-Hall; not only Seven Prelates contending for the Rights of the Anglican Church, but Seven Peers of the Realm ſtanding up for the Liberties of England. The Court of King's-Bench being ſat, His Majeſty's Attorney-General mov'd for a Habeas Corpus, directed to Sir Edward Hales, Lieutenant of the Tower, to bring up His Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Six Biſhops; which was granted, and the Priſoners were accordingly brought up by Water. At their Landing, they were receiv'd by ſeveral Divines and Perſons of Quality, and by a vaſt Concourſe of People, who (with repeated Acclamations) utter'd Wiſhes for their Deliverance. On the Bench ſat Sir Robert Wright, Lord Chief-Juſtice, and Mr. Ju-ſtice Holloway, Two of the King's Creatures, Mr. Juſtice Powell, a Proteſtant of great Integrity, and Mr. Juſtice Allibone, a profeſs'd Papiſt. The Council for the King was, Sir Thomas Powis, Attor-ney-General, Sir William Williams, Sollicitor-Gene-ral, Sir Bartholomew Shower, Recorder of Lon-don, Serjeant Trinder, a Papiſt, &c. And for the Priſoners, Sir Robert Sawyer, Mr. Finch, Mr. Pol-lexfen, Sir George Treby, Serjeant Pemberton, Ser-jeant Levinz, and (the laſt, and greateſt) (c) Mr. So-mers. The Court was extremely fill'd, and with Perſons of the Higheſt Quality; as if they inter-pos'd in the laſt Tryal for the (d) Liberties of the Church and Nation: The Marqueſſes of Hali-fax and Worceſter, the Earls of Shrewsbury, Kent, Bedford, Dorſet, Bolingbroke, Mancheſter, Burling-ton, Carliſle, Danby, Radnor and Nottingham; Viſ-count Falconberg, and the Lords Grey of Ruthyn, Paget, Chandois, Vaughan and Carberry. The Re-turn and Warrant being read, the Attorney-Gene-ral mov'd, That the Information might be read to the Priſoners, and that they might immediately plead to it. This Motion the Biſhops Council op-poſed; objecting, Firſt, That the Priſoners were committed by the Lord Chancellor, and ſome other of the Privy-Council, without expreſſing in the Warrant, That it was by Order of the Privy-Council; And therefore, That the Commitment was illegal, and that the Priſoners were not legally in Court. And Secondly, That the Fact for which they were committed, was ſuch, as they ought not to have been impriſon'd for; becauſe a Peer ought not to be committed, in the firſt Inſtance, for a Miſdemeanor. Judge Powel refuſed to deliver his Opinion, before he had conſulted Books: But the Lord Chief-Juſtice, Judge Allibone, and Judge Hol-loway agreed, That the Fact charg'd in the War-rant, was ſuch a Miſdemeanor, as was Breach of the Peace; And therefore, That the Information ought to be read, and the Biſhops muſt plead to it. After the Reading the Information, the Biſhops Council deſir'd, that they might have an Imparlance till the next Term, to conſider what they had to plead. Sir Samuel Aſtry, Clerk of the Crown, be-

(a) Here again it was obſerv'd, that neither the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, nor any of the Petitioning Biſhops, (tho' not ſuſpended) was adviſ'd with, or allow'd to adviſe in this Mat-ter of a Form of Thankſgiving for the Birth of a Prince; tho' any one of their Names would have given a better Sanction to it.

(b) To help prejudge the Cauſe on the King's Side, there was another Court-Declaration, entitled, An Anſwer to a Paper, importing, A Petition of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Six other Biſhops to His Majeſty, touching their Not diſtributing and publiſhing the late Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience. With Al-lowance. By Henry Hills, Printer to the King; 4to. Calling their Lordſhips Refuſal, a Fire kindled from the Altar.—— The Biſhops making their Eye evil, becauſe the King's was good. ——They have the Voice of Jacob, and the Hands of Eſau. — They are fallen, and if they repent not, their Candleſtick muſt be removed, &c. And another Arraignment of their Lordſhips be-fore the People, in a fulſome Harangue, entitled, The Exami-nation of the Biſhops, upon their Refuſal of Reading His Majeſty's moſt Gracious Declaration, and the Non-Concurrence of the Church of England, in Repeal of the Penal Laws and Teſt; fully debated and argued. With Allowance. 1688. 4to. Beginning in ſuch a Strain, as would make it ſuſpicious that we were to loſe the Truth and Purity of our Language, as well as of our Religion. "It has pleas'd the Almighty Power, which rules the Hearts "of Princes, to enlighten and adorn His Preſent Gracious "Majeſty with ſuch peculiar Beams of Mercy and Clemen-"cy, thoſe truly Royal Virtues, that render him the neareſt "Pourtrait of that Deity, whoſe Vicegerent He is. To win "therefore the univerſal Love of his People, (a Conqueſt "worthy of, and indeed reſerved for His Great Self) He has "ſet up the Standard of Compaſſion, reſolving to recover the "alienated Affections of thoſe his Subjects, whom the Admi-"niſtration of his Predeceſſors may have any ways render'd "uneaſy, &c."

(c) I have heard one of the Biſhops declare, That Objecti-on was made among themſelves againſt Mr. Somers, as too young and obſcure a Man; but old Pollexfen inſiſted upon Him, and would not be Himſelf retain'd without the other; repre-ſenting Him as the Man who would take moſt Pains, and go deepeſt into all that depended on Precedents and Records.

(d) It was on this Proſpect of a General Storm upon the Church, that Dr. Sprat, Biſhop of Rocheſter, abdicated his Place in the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion, and took Leave of his Fellow-Judges in a ſolemn Letter.

"My Lords, I deſire a favourable Interpretation of what I "am going to write to you: Since your Lordſhips are reſolv'd "to proſecute thoſe who have not read the King's Declaration, "it is impoſſible for me to ſerve His Majeſty any longer in "Quality of a Commiſſioner.——— I earneſtly intreat you "to intercede for me with His Majeſty, That He would have "the Goodneſs to allow me Leave to withdraw from among "you; and to aſſure him at the ſame time, that I ſhall be al-"ways ready to ſacrifice All I have for his Service, except my "Conſcience and my Religion. I am, &c."

1688. 4 Jac. II.

ing aſk'd, What was the Courſe of the Court? Anſwer'd, That of late Years, if a Man appear'd upon a Recognizance, or was a Perſon in Cuſtody, he ought to plead at the firſt Inſtance; but that he had known it to be at the Diſcretion of the Court, to grant what Time they pleas'd. After this Anſwer, the Lord Chief-Juſtice declar'd, That the Biſhops ſhould now plead to the Information. Thereupon the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury offer'd a Plea, in behalf of himſelf and his Brethren, the other Defendants; alledging, That they were Peers of this Kingdom of England, and Lords of Parliament, and ought not to be compell'd to anſwer inſtantly, for the Miſdemeanor mention'd in the Information; but that they ought to be requir'd to appear by due Proceſs of Law; and upon their Appearance, to have a Copy of the ſaid Information, and reaſonable Time given them to imparle thereupon. The King's Council labour'd hard to have the Plea rejected. After a long Debate, Judge Powel ſaid, He was for receiving the Plea, and conſidering of it; but the reſt of the Judges declar'd for rejecting of it: So the Priſoners at laſt pleaded, Not Guilty. The King's Council pray'd, the Clerk might join Iſſue on behalf of the King; and deſir'd the Defendants to take notice, That they intended to Try this Cauſe on that Day Fortnight; adding, That they were Bailable, if they pleas'd. Sir Robert Sawyer deſir'd, that their own Recognizance might be taken; which was readily granted.

Plea of the Archbiſhop and Biſhops.

On June 29. the Biſhops appear'd before the Court of King's-Bench, according to their Recognizance; the Appearance being ſtill greater than a Fortnight before: For there were now preſent the Marqueſſes of Halifax and Worceſter; the Earls of Shrewsbury, Kent, Bedford, Pembroke, Dorſet, Bolingbroke, Mancheſter, Rivers, Stamford, Carnarven, Cheſterfield, Scarſdale, Clarendon, Danby, Suſſex, Radnor, Nottingham, and Abingdon; Viſcount Falconberg, and the Lords Newport, Grey of Ruthyn, Paget, Chandois, Vaughan, Carberry, Lumley, Carteret, and Oſſulſton. This Splendid Appearance was chiefly owing to the indefatigable Care and Solicitation of the Clergy, and eſpecially of the Reverend Dr. Teniſon. And indeed, the making ſuch a Figure in the Court, had poſſibly ſome good Effect upon the Jury, if not upon the Bench: And it was afterwards obſerv'd, by way of jeſting upon Words, That the Biſhops were deliver'd by the Nobilee before, and the Mobilee behind. The Information being read, and open'd to the Jury, the Attorney-General, to take off the Odium of this Proſecution, and in ſome meaſure to pacify the People, who could not forbear ſhowing their Reſentments even in the Face of the Court, began with obſerving, Firſt, That the Biſhops were not proſecuted as Biſhops, (much leſs for any Point or Matter of Religion) but as Subjects of this Kingdom, and only for a Temporal Crime, as having cenſur'd and affronted the King to his very Face. Secondly, That they were not proſecuted for omitting to do any thing; but as they were Actors in accuſing, and, in effect, of arraigning His Majeſty, and his Government, &c. A great deal of Time was ſpent in proving, That the Petition produc'd in Court, was the Hand-Writing of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; That it was ſign'd by him and the Six Biſhops; And that it was the ſame which was preſented to His Majeſty. After an elaborate Proof of theſe Particulars, by the Depoſitions of Sir John Nicholas, Mr. Bridgman, Mr. Muſgrave, and Mr. Blaithwait, and by the Earl of Sunderland, who in Court affirm'd, That he introduc'd the Biſhops, and was in the Room when they deliver'd the ſaid Petition to His Majeſty: The Fact being prov'd, the Biſhops Council were very Learned and Eloquent in Defence of their Clients. Mr. Somers ſpoke laſt, and mention'd the great Caſe of Thomas and Sorrel in the Exchequer-Chamber, upon the Validity of a Great Appearance of the Nobility.

Argument of the Attorney-General againſt the Biſhops.

Argument of Mr. Somers for the Biſhops.

1688. 4 Jac. II.

Diſpenſation; urging, That there it was the Opinion of every one of the Judges, That there never could be an Abrogation, or a Suſpenſion (which is a Temporary Abrogation) of an Act of Parliament, but by the Legiſlative Power: That indeed it was diſputed, how far the King might diſpenſe with the Penalties in ſuch a particular Law, as to particular Perſons; but that it was agreed by all, That the King had no Power to ſuſpend any Law: That by the Law of all Civiliz'd Nations, If the Prince does require ſomething to be done, which the Perſon who is to do it takes to be unlawful, it is not only lawful, but his Duty, Reſcribere Principi; which is all the Biſhops had done here, and that in the moſt humble manner: That as to Matters of Fact alledg'd in the ſaid Petition, there could be no Deſign to diminiſh the Prerogative, becauſe the King has no ſuch Prerogative: That the Petition could not be ſeditious, becauſe it was preſented to the King in private, and alone; nor falſe, becauſe the Matter of it was true; nor malicious, for the Occaſion was not ſought; the Thing was preſs'd upon them; nor, in ſhort, a Libel, becauſe the Intent was innocent, and they kept within the Bounds ſet by the Act of Parliament, that gives the Subject Leave to apply to his Prince by Petition, when he is aggriev'd.

When the Council on both Sides had done, Chief-Juſtice Wright ſumm'd up the Evidence, and told the Jury, That ſometimes the Diſpenſing Power had been allow'd, as in Richard the IId's Time, and ſometimes deny'd; but that it was a Queſtion out of the preſent Caſe. If they believ'd the Petition to be the ſame that was preſented by the Biſhops to the King, then the Publication was ſufficiently prov'd: And whatever tended to diſturb the Government, or make a Stir among the People, was certainly within the Name of Libellus Famoſus; and his Opinion, in ſhort, was, That the Biſhops Petition was a Libel.

The Evidence ſumm'd up by the Ld. Chief-Juſtice Wright.

Mr. Juſtice Holloway declar'd, That the End and Intention of every Action was to be conſider'd: That the Biſhops were charg'd with delivering a Petition, which (according to their Defence) was done with all the Humility and Decency imaginable: That the delivering of a Petition could be no Fault, it being the Right of every Subject to Petition: Therefore, if the Jury were ſatisfy'd, They did it with no ill Intention, but only to ſhew the Reaſons of their Diſobedience to the King's Command, he could not think it to be a Libel.

Opinion of the Judges.

Mr. Juſtice Powel more plainly declar'd, That he could diſcern no Sedition, or any other Crime fixed upon the Biſhops; ſince there was nothing offer'd by the King's Council to render the Petition falſe, ſeditious, or malicious. He admoniſh'd the Jury to conſider, That the Contents of the Petition were, That the Biſhops apprehended the Declaration to be Illegal, as being founded upon a Diſpenſing Power claim'd by the King; And that for his Part, he did not remember in any Caſe in all the Law, that there was any ſuch Power in the King; and if not, the Petition could not be a Libel. He concluded with telling them, That he could ſee no Difference between the King's Power to diſpenſe with the Laws Eccleſiaſtical, and his Power to diſpenſe with any other Laws whatſoever: That if this was once allow'd of, there would be no need of Parliaments, and all the Legiſlature would be in the King; and ſo he left the Iſſue to God and their Conſciences.

Mr. Juſtice Allibone was prepoſſeſs'd againſt Proteſtant Biſhops; and to deliver his Opinion of their Guilt, he laid down Two odd Poſitions: 1. That no Man can take upon him to write againſt the actual Exerciſe of the Government, (unleſs he have Leave from the Government) but he makes a Libel by what he writes, whether true or falſe. 2. That no private Man can take upon him to write concerning the Government; and therefore if he intrudes trudes himſelf into the Affairs of the Publick, he is a Libeller for ſo doing. Theſe Poſitions he back'd by a Reſolution of the Judges in King James IIt's Time; That to frame a Petition to the King to put the Penal Laws in Execution, was next Door to Treaſon; Which was a groſs Miſquotation, inſtead of a Petition againſt the Penal Laws, and for which, being taken up by Juſtice Powel and Serjeant Pemberton, little Heed was given to any Thing that he ſaid afterwards. Whereupon the Jury withdrew, ſat up all Night, and next Morning brought in the Reverend Prelates, Not Guilty.

1688. 4 Jac. II.

The Jury bring in their Verdict Not Guilty.

There were immediately very loud Acclamations through Weſtminſter-Hall, and the words, Not Guilty, Not Guilty, went round with ſuch Shouts and Huzza's, that the King's Sollicitor mov'd very earneſtly that ſuch as had Shouted in the Court might be committed; whereupon a Gentleman of Grey's-Inn was laid hold on, but ſoon diſcharg'd with this ſhort Reproof from the Chief-Juſtice; Sir, I am as glad as you can be, that the Lords the Biſhops are acquitted, but your Manner of Rejoycing here is indecent, you might rejoice in your Chamber, or elſewhere, and not here. But the Shouts were carry'd on through the Cities of Weſtminſter and London, and flew preſently to Hounſlow-Heath, where the Soldiers in the Camp eccho'd them ſo loud that it ſtartled the King, who was that Day entertain'd in the Earl of Feverſham's Tent: Inſomuch that his Majeſty ſent him out to know what was the Matter. The Earl came back and told the King, It was nothing but the Soldiers Shouting upon the News of the Biſhops being acquitted. The King reply'd, And do you call that Nothing? but ſo much the worſe for them. What his Majeſty meant by the laſt Words he had not much Time to interpret: He could only ſhew ſome Indignation, that the Biſhops had eſcap'd a Legal Penalty, and he threatned to deliver them up to the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners. And for the Two Judges, Holloway and Powel, he immediately turn'd them out, and would have meditated ſome farther Severity, if his following Reign would have allow'd it.

Great Rejoycings.

This Acquitment of the Biſhops encouraged the Clergy in their honeſt Reſolutions of not Reading the Declaration; but the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners were inſtructed to call them to an Account for it; for which Purpoſe on July 12. they met in the Council-Chamber and made an Order (a), That whereas they had received Information that divers Rectors, Vicars and Curates had omitted or neglected to read the ſaid Declaration, to the manifeſt Contempt of his Majeſty's Authority-Royal, They do hereby command and require all Chancellors, Arch Deacons, Commiſſaries and Officials, to enquire ſtrictly within their reſpective Juriſdictions (b), in what Churches and Chapels his Majeſty's ſaid Declaration was read, and in what Churches and Chapels the ſame was omitted, and to tranſmit an Account thereof upon the 16*th Day of* Auguſt next. The Commiſſioners met again on that Day, and finding that little or no Enquiry had been made, they were much divided what to do in the Matter. After a long Conſultation they were content to give longer Time; and therefore publiſh'd another Order, Commanding all Chancellors, Arch-Deacons, Commiſſaries, Officials, and others, having Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, ſtrictly to enquire of the Church-Wardens, as one of their Articles of Enquiry, at their reſpective Viſitations, (which Viſitations they were requir'd to hold and keep before the 15*th Day of* November next) in what Churches and Chapels his Majeſty's ſaid Declaration was read, and in what the ſame was Omitted, and to tranſmit an Account thereof to them on the 6*th Day of* December next: But Providence prevented a Return to this Enquiry. The Biſhop of Rocheſter finding by this Time the Drift of the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion, thought it inconſiſtent with his Profeſſion and Character to act any longer in it, and therefore he wrote a Letter to his Collegues (c), deſiring to be excus'd from Sitting amongſt them.

1688. 4 Jac. II.

Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners proceed againſt the Inferior Clergy.

The King continu'd to make his Honours and Preferments ſubſervient to his Religion and his Power. Upon the Day of the Birth of the Prince of Wales, the Lady Marchioneſs of Powis, was ſworn by the Lord-Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, Lady-Governeſs of their Majeſties Chil-

Honours and Preferments.

(a) Thoſe few of the Clergy in City and Country, who read the Declaration in their Churches were Men of the meaneſt Figure as well as Spirit. Some few ſuffered their Curates and Readers to publiſh what they wou'd not have done themſelves. The People went generally out of Church when it began to be read. And ſome Miniſters are ſaid to have concerted the Matter with their Congregations ſo as to let them depart and read it to the Walls. And yet by a general Connivance it was read in moſt of the Cathedral Churches by ſome Inferior Perſon: And ſo it was in Weſtminſter-Abbey, for which the Dean (Biſhop of Rocheſter) at the Turn of Times made this Apology. If it ſhall be objected, That I permitted it to be read in Weſtminſter-Abbey, I deſire it may be alſo conſidered, what dreadful Apprehenſions this Royal Church and School were then under, from our Neighbours the Jeſuits at Court, who lay in wait to take any Advantage, whereby they might ſtir up the King to ruin us. Beſides that a Quo Warranto was then actually iſſued out againſt us, and we were every Day threatned, that as we were the neareſt, ſo we ſhould fall the firſt Prey into the Hands of the Popiſh Prieſts. Second Letter to the Earl of Dorſet, dated March 26. 1689.

(b) Mr. Echard has honeſtly obſerv'd, that while the Archbiſhop and other pious Divines were promoting the Good of the Church and the Publick, ſome few Biſhops were moving in another Road, who inſtead of following the Example of their perſecuted Brethren, had publiſh'd and read the Declaration, even after the Acquittal of thoſe Heroes. Nay, the Biſhop of Durham carried the Buſineſs ſo far, that upon that Account he ſuſpended Thirty Miniſters of his Dioceſe, and amongſt them one of his Chaplains. And in the County of Cheſter Nine Curates, Rectors, and others, were not contented to read the Declaration, but preſented an Addreſs of Thanks for it.——— And becauſe it was by the Inſtigation of their Biſhop, that the Clergy of Cheſter had made this ſtrange Step, we are told that one of the Colleges of Oxford, refus'd to admit the Son of that Prelate to a Fellowſhip that had been given him; and about the ſame Time that famous Univerſity refus'd alſo to give the Degree of Doctor to Mr. Gifford, whom the King had nominated to fill the vacant See of that City ——— Theſe Two latter Facts are ſo far in general true, that the Biſhop of Cheſter's Son call'd the Ripponet, had the more Diſreſpect ſhewn him for his Father's Sake; and Mr. Gifford being thruſt into the Preſidentſhip of Magdalen College after the Death of Biſhop Parker, could expect no great Favour from the Univerſity; and I believe he had not the Favour of being nominated to the vacant See of Oxford, before Mr. Timothy Hall.

(c) A Letter to the Right Honourable my Lords, his Majeſty's Commiſſioners for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, by Thomas Lord Biſhop of Rocheſter, excuſing his farther Attendance at their Board, as reſolving not to ſit Judge of his Brethren who had not read his Majeſties Declaration; dat. Bromley, Aug. 15. 1688. ——— See the Biſhop's further Account of the Cauſes and Conſequences of his thus leaving the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion, in his firſt Letter to the Earl of Dorſet, dated 21. Febr. 1688. There it was, my Lord, that I was firſt convinced of the falſe Foundations and miſchievous Conſequences of ſuch a Diſpenſing Power, as that on which the Declaration was grounded. So that I have ever ſince been perſuaded, that from that Petition of theſe Biſhops, ſo defended by the invincible Arguments of their Learned Council on that Day, and ſo juſtify'd by the honeſt Verdict of their undaunted Jury on the next Day; from thence, I ſay, we may date the firſt great Step that was made towards the reſcuing our Laws and Religion. For my Part I muſt own, I was ſo fully ſatisfied by the excellent Pleadings of thoſe great Lawyers at that Tryal, that I confeſs I never had till then, ſo clear a Notion what unalterable Bounds the Law has fix'd between the juſt Prerogatives of the Crown, and the Legal Rights of the Subjects.

The Biſhops after their Releaſement from the Tower behav'd themſelves with Integrity and Courage in giving Directions to the Clergy how to expect and provide for the impending Storm. See the Articles recommended by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to all the Biſhops within his Metropolitan Juriſdiction the 16th of July, 1688. with ſome Heads of Things to be more fully inſiſted upon by the Biſhops in their Addreſſes to the Clergy and People of their reſpective Dioceſes, delivered by his Grace to the Biſhops who were preſent, and Copies ſent in his Name to the abſent Biſhops, 4*to*.

dren, and the Lady Strickland, Under-Governeſs. On June the 29th, his Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Thomas Jefford, Eſq; Mayor of Exeter, in Conſideration of his Faithful Services. After the Diſcharge of the Archbiſhop and Biſhops, the King, to condemn thoſe Judges who had ſpoke in Favour of their Lordſhips, was pleaſed to remove Sir Richard Holloway and Sir John Powel, from being Juſtices of the King's-Bench; and to place in their Stead, Sir Thomas Powel, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, and Sir Robert Baldock, one of his Majeſty's Serjeants at Law. His Majeſty was alſo pleaſed, in Conſideration of the great Age and Infirmities of Sir Chriſtopher Milton, one of the Juſtices of the Common-Pleas, to permit him to have his Writ of Eaſe, and put in his Place Sir Thomas Jenner, one of the Barons of the Exchequer; and in the Stead of Mr. Baron Jenner and Mr. Baron Powel, his Majeſty was pleaſed to place Mr. Serjeant Ingleby and Mr. Serjeant Rotheram in the Exchequer. And to prepare for a Succeſſion of Judges, in Trinity-Term, William Le Hunt, John Rotheram, Vincent Denn, Salathiel Lovel of Greys-Inn, Eſqs; Sir Henry Chancey, of the Middle-Temple, Kt. William Moſes, of Greys-Inn; Henry Trinder, and Francis Fuller, of the Inner-Temple; and William Thompſon, of the Middle-Temple, Eſqs; were called by the King's Writ, to take upon them the State and Degree of Serjeants at Law, and they gave Rings with this Courtly Motto, Rex, Princeps, & Chriſtiana Libertas. On July 6th, Sir John Trevor, Kt. Maſter of the Rolls, Chriſtopher Vane, Eſq; and Silas Titus, Eſq; were by his Majeſty's Command ſworn of the Privy-Council, and accordingly took their Places at the Board; and on July 13th, Sir Thomas Strickland, Kt. was admitted to the ſame Honour. On July 14th, his Majeſty being graciouſly pleaſed to beſtow a Mark of his Royal Favour upon Thomas Elmes, of Lilford, in the County of Northampton, Eſq; for his many Faithful Services, conferr'd upon him the Honour of Knighthood. Though the Duke of Ormond had been long out of Favour, yet upon his Death this publick Commendation was given of him, That on Saturday, July 21. at Kingſton-Hall in Dorſetſhire, in the Seventy Ninth Year of his Age, died his Grace, James Duke of Ormond, Lord-Steward of his Majeſty's Houſhold, one of the Lords of his Majeſty's Moſt honourable Privy-Council, and Knight of the Moſt Noble Order of the Garter. He ſerv'd the Crown as Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland ſeveral Times, as well under King Charles the Firſt of Bleſſed Memory, as ſince the Reſtoration of his late Majeſty, whom he faithfully followed during his Exile; ever behaving himſelf at all Times with great Fidelity and Honour. In Auguſt his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to conſtitute Sir Eneas Mackpherſon of Invereſſie, Kt. to be Lieutenant-Governor of Nevis, in America, in the Place of Sir James Ruſſel deceas'd. On Auguſt 12th, Sir Gilbert Gerrard Coſſine, Bar. and Samuel Gerrard, Eſq; were to pay their Duties to his Majeſty at Windſor, before they went into the Country, who, as a particular Mark of his Royal Favour, was graciouſly pleaſed, in his Bed-Chamber, to confer on the ſaid Samuel Gerrard, Eſq; the Honour of Knighthood (a). On Tueſday, Sept. 4th, died the Right Honourable Sir John Shorter, Kt. Lord-Mayor of London, about Eleven a Clock in the Morning; and on Sept. 8th, Sir John Eyles, Kt. being appointed Lord-Mayor for the remaining Part of this Year, and the next enſuing, was ſworn at the Guildhall, according to the Cuſtom of the City.

Death of the Duke of Ormond.

The King endeavours to New-Model his Army.

But the Royal Favours ſo beſtow'd did but help on a general Defection in the People of England. The King found he could depend on nothing but his Army: Nor could he be fully ſatisfied in their Fidelity. Therefore, to try how far he might depend upon them (b), he endeavour'd to make both Officers and common Soldiers ſubſcribe a Writing, whereby they ſhould engage themſelves to contribute, as far as in them lay, towards the Repeal of the Teſt and Penal Laws. To effect this, it was thought fit to propoſe the Thing to all the Regiments one by one, not doubting but that if Two or Three ſubmitted, the reſt would follow their Example. Accordingly the Major of the Earl of Litchfield's Regiment was order'd to open his Majeſty's Deſire to that Battalion, and to command all ſuch as would not inſtantly comply therewith, to lay down their Arms: But he was not a little ſurpriz'd to find, That except Two Captains and ſome few Popiſh Soldiers, the whole Regiment obey'd the latter Part of his Command. The King himſelf who ſaw it, was in great Aſtoniſhment, and after ſome deep Silence, he commanded them to take up their Arms again, adding, with a ſullen diſcontented Look, That for the future, he would not do them the Honour to ask their Advice. Upon this the King found he muſt new-model his Army before he could put any Confidence in them, and therefore upon ſome little Pretence or other, he caſhier'd ſeveral Proteſtant Officers and Soldiers, and fill'd them up with as many Papiſts as he could poſſibly procure. But this Regulation of his Troops was ſo far from a Security, that it brought on new Diſcontents and Dangers. For when ſeveral Popiſh Iriſh were put into the Duke of Berwick's Regiment, it was vigorouſly oppoſed by the Lieutenant-Colonel Beaumont and other Officers; the former in the Name of the reſt, declaring to the Duke, That he was deſir'd by thoſe Gentlemen (with whoſe Senſe he concurr'd) to inform his Grace, that they did not think it conſiſtent with their Honours, to have Foreigners impoſed upon them, without being complain'd of, that their Companies were weak, or Orders had been ſent to recruit them; not doubting, but if ſuch Orders had been given, they that firſt, in very ill Times, rais'd them Hundreds, could eaſily now have made them according to the King's Compliment. Therefore they humbly petition'd they might have leave to fill up their Companies with ſuch Men of this Nation, as they ſhould judge moſt ſuitable for the King's Service, and to ſupport their Honours; or otherwiſe, that they might be permitted with all imaginable Duty and Reſpect, to lay down their Commiſſions. An Account of this (as alſo of a Serjeant and 18 private Centinels, leaving their Colours upon the ſame Score)

To their great Diſſatisfaction.

(a) The King had knighted one Nicholas Butler, and made him a Privy Counſellor, and of the very Cabinet-Secrets. The Writer of the falſe Steps of the Miniſtry after the Revolution, 8*vo.* 1714. obſerves well, That among the reſt there was a vile Fellow Sir Nicholas Butler, whom King Charles II. took out of an Anabaptiſt Conventicle, to employ him as a Lion, and from a Quack rais'd him to be an Under Miniſter to his Prime Plot-Makers, whom King James Knighted, and made a Privy-Counſellor upon his turning Papiſt, who had had a Finger in almoſt all the Enormities of thoſe Two Reigns; and conſcious of his Guilt durſt not ſhew his Head for a Year after the Revolution; but finding the Coaſt was clear, and no Body call'd to an Account, he return'd peaceably to his Houſe at Edmunton, and died in his Bed as much againſt his own Expectation as other Men's.

(b) There was ſo much over-bearing in the Court, that they prevail'd with ſome few Places to addreſs for a ſtanding Army, as they had done for Repeal of the Laws, and Birth of the Pretender. There was one at leaſt procured from the City of Carliſle, particularly to thank his Majeſty for his Royal Army, which (ſays he) is really the Honour and Safety of the Nation, let the Teckelites think and ſay what they will. Another Addreſs from Glouceſter made the King an inſpired Prophet. Nothing leſs (ſay they) than a Celeſtial Inſpiration could fill the enlarged Soul of ſo great a Monarch with ſo ſublime a Thought, and prompt him to ſo magnanimous an Action. ——— With many the like ſordid, Servile Flatteries, enough to deceive any Prince who ſhould be weak enough to believe them, and to bring a Reproach and indelible Storm upon any Party that could be guilty of 'em.

1688. 4 Jac. II.

was forthwith tranſmitted to his Majeſty then at Windſor; who, fearing the ſpreading of this Example, immediately commanded a Party of Horſe down to Portſmouth, to bring up into Cuſtody, Lieutenant-Colonel Beaumont, Captain Paſton, and Four other Captains: and a Court-Martial was appointed to proceed againſt them as Mutineers. If the French Ambaſſador's Memorial had not come in that Morning, to ſhew the Danger the Popiſh Party was in, ſome of theſe Officers would, in all Probability, have loſt their Lives: But now the Court was content to caſhier 'em. About a Month before, another Captain who was quartered at Scarborough, caus'd the Mayor of that Town, tho' a Man devoted to the Court, to be toſs'd in a Blanket by his Soldiers, for being Saucy to him; which Indignity the King did not think fit to puniſh at this Juncture. Nor were the Sea-Forces more favourable to Popery, for the King having caus'd Maſs to be ſaid on Board his Men of War, there happen'd ſo great a Diſorder and Mutiny in the Fleet, that the Officers had much ado to keep the Prieſts from being thrown over-Board.

Under this Diſpoſition of the King to Popery (a), and of the People to a Self-Defence, this Memorial of the Church of England was preſented to their Royal Highneſſes, the Prince and Princeſs of Orange.

A Memorial of the Church of England to the Prince and Princeſs of Orange.

"YOUR Royal Highneſſes cannot be ignorant "that the Proteſtants of England, who continue true to their Religion and Government Eſtabliſhed by Law, have been many Ways troubled "and vexed by reſtleſs Contrivances and Deſigns of "Papiſts, under Pretence of the Royal Authority, "and Things required of them unaccountable before God and Man: Eccleſiaſtical Benefits and "Preferments taken from them, without any other "Reaſon but the King's Pleaſure: That they have "been ſummoned and ſentenced by Eccleſiaſtical "Commiſſioners, contrary to Law, deprived of "their Birth-Right in the free Choice of their Magiſtrates and Repreſentatives; divers Corporations "diſſolved, the legal Security of our Religion and "Liberty, eſtabliſhed and ratified by King and Parliament, annulled and overthrown by a pretended "Diſpenſing Power: New and unheard-of Maxims "have been preach'd, as if Subjects had no Right "but what depends on the King's Will and Pleaſure; The Militia put into the Hands of Perſons "not qualified by Law, and a Popiſh Mercenary "Army maintain'd in the Kingdom in Time of "Peace, abſolutely contrary to the Law; the Execution of the Law againſt ſeveral High Crimes and "Miſdemeanors ſuperſeded and prohibited: The "Statutes againſt Correſpondence with the Court of "Rome, Papal Juriſdiction, and Popiſh Prieſts, ſuſpended (b): That in Courts of Juſtice, thoſe "Judges are diſplac'd, who dare acquit them whom "the King wou'd have condemn'd; as happen'd to "the Judges Powel and Holloway, for acquitting "the Seven Biſhops: Liberty of Chuſing Members of Parliament (notwithſtanding all the Care "taken, and Proviſion made by Law on that Behalf) wholly taken away, by Quo Warranto's "ſerv'd againſt Corporations, and the Three known "Queſtions: All Things carry'd on in open View "for the Propagation and Growth of Popery, for "which the Courts of England and France have ſo "long jointly labour'd, with ſo much Application "and Earneſtneſs: Endeavours to perſuade your "Royal Highneſſes to Liberty of Conſcience, and "Abrogating the Penal Laws and Teſts; wherein "they fell ſhort of their Aim.

"That they moſt humbly implore the Protection "of Your Royal Highneſſes, as to the Suſpending "and Encroachments made upon Law, for Maintenance of the Proteſtant Religion, our Civil and "Fundamental Rights and Privileges: And that "Your Royal Highneſſes wou'd be pleas'd to inſiſt, "That the Free Parliament of England, according "to Law, may be reſtor'd; the Laws againſt Papiſts, Prieſts, Papal Juriſdiction, &c. put in "Execution, and the Suſpending and Diſpenſing "Power declared Null and Void; the Rights and "Privileges of the City of London, the Free Choice "of their Magiſtrates, and the Liberties as well of "that as of other Corporations reſtored, and all "Things return'd to their ancient Channel, &c.

People of England caſt their Eyes and Hearts on Holland.

At this Juncture, all the Proteſtant Eyes and Hearts in England were caſt and fix'd on Holland; and many of the Nobility and Gentry were ſoliciting the Prince, for the Redemption of their Countrey. The Earl of Macclesfield had withdrawn into Holland, whilſt the Duke of Monmouth was preparing for his unfortunate Expedition; and leſt he ſhould have the ſame Fate in Holland with Sir Thomas Armſtrong, he had retir'd into Germany; from whence he now came back to the Hague, to negotiate the common Cauſe. Dr. Gilbert Burnet, whom the Papiſts had maliciouſly accus'd of High-Treaſon in Scotland, had fled, for Protection, to the Prince's Court, where he had married a Lady of great Fortune and Intereſt, and had kept a ſecret Correſpondence with many of the great Families in England; and by his extraordinary Parts, and Zeal to the Proteſtant Religion, became one of the prime Inſtruments in the following Revolution. The Lord Wharton, though advanc'd in Years, took a Journey through Holland to Germany; and Colonel Sidney, afterward Earl of Romney, and ſome others, went over to the Spaw, giving out, That it was only for the Benefit of the Waters. The Earl of Devonſhire (who had an Indignity put upon him by Colonel Culpeper, and who, out of Generoſity, had pardon'd the Colonel, upon Condition, That he ſhou'd never appear in Whitehall; having afterwards met him in the King's Preſence-Chamber, contrary to Agreement, cou'd not forbear ſtriking him on the Face, for which he was adjudg'd to pay a Fine of Thirty Thouſand Pounds to his Majeſty) was zealouſly diſpos'd to invite the Prince of Orange; and, by degrees, the greateſt Part of the Lords implor'd his Highneſs's Aſſiſtance, to prevent their Ruin (c). Some zealous Gentlemen, particularly Mr. Hamden and

(a) The Town was by this Time full of Roman Prieſts and Jeſuits, and many of them near the Court appear'd in their Religious Habits, as if they were the Church and Clergy by Law eſtabliſhed, and they were looking for Religious Houſes: M. Gabriel d'Emillaine, Writer of the Hiſtory of Monaſtick Orders, 1693. 8*vo.* tells us, That ſeveral of the Order of the Black and Grey Friars had the Confidence not only to flock by Troops from beyond Sea into England, but alſo to appear publickly in their Monkiſh Habits. —— And beginning to hope for a Re-eſtabliſhment in theſe Kingdoms, theſe Holy Penitent Friars out of a Spirit of Mortification, not only did pitch upon the moſt delightful Places of Great Lincolns-Inn-Fields, of the Savoy, of St. James's-Park, &c. where they might build Monaſteries; but alſo were ſeen at the Temple, at the Black and White Friars; nay, at Weſtminſter-Abbey to make Projects and to take Dimenſions for the Rebuilding of their Convents; not deſpairing to ſee themſelves in a ſhort Time in a Condition to turn both Prebendaries, Canons, and Miniſters out of theſe Churches.

(b) At the ſame Time, with this Memorial of the Church, there was a Liſt ſent over to the Prince of Orange, of the Names of ſuch eminent Divines as wiſh'd for the Coming of his Highneſs to redeem them from the Danger they were in. Some Perſons were put in this Liſt, who were then ſenſible of the Danger, and yet would not afterward accept of the Deliverance. Biſhop Burnet writes thus, I can aſſure the World that in the Liſt of the Divines that were repreſented as wiſhing that the then Prince would engage in our Defence, the late Dean of Worceſter (Dr. Hicks) was named for one.

(c) The Lord Mordant now Earl of Peterborough is ſaid to have undertaken that Part of the Affair, which concern'd the City, and to have come privately from Holland to England on Pur-

Many of the Nobility retire to Holland.

and his Son, and even ſome of the Ladies, eſpecially the Counteſs of Sunderland, a Woman of ſubtle Wit, and admirable Addreſs, were privy to the whole Deſign. The Earl of Shrewsbury having quitted his Regiment of Horſe, and Mortgag'd his Eſtate for Forty Thouſand Pounds, went over to the Prince, to offer him both his Sword and his Purſe. He was ſoon after follow'd by Admiral Herbert (afterward Earl of Torrington,) Mr. Herbert (afterward Lord Herbert of Cherbury,) Mr. Ruſſel (now Earl of Orford,) the Lord Mordant (now Earl of Peterborough,) the Marquis of Wincheſter (afterwards Duke of Bolton,) and ſeveral other Perſons of Honour. (a)

Prince of Orange prepares for England.

The Prince of Orange, finding by this Time a general Concurrence in the Engliſh Nation to favour his Deſign, prevail'd with the States to join with him, and to prepare a good Fleet, and ſufficient Forces for a Deſcent upon England. Sir Bevil Skelton, whilſt he was at the Hague, had intercepted a Letter, intimating, That a great Project was ſecretly carried on againſt the King; of which he immediately gave an Account to his Majeſty: But it was either not well repreſented, or not at all regarded; and Skelton, being ſent ſoon after Envoy Extraordinary to Paris, entred there into a Correſpondence with one Monſieur De Verace, who was lately gone from Holland to Geneva, and there offer'd to reveal the whole Intrigue; and upon his Advices, Skelton is ſaid to have ſent over ſeveral Letters to the Court of England. But the King, in a Supine Negligence gave little Heed to them, though they were confirm'd with many of the like Conjectures from the Marquis of Albeville, the Engliſh Envoy at the Hague. Count D'Avaux, the French Ambaſſador in Holland, diſcover'd, from many convincing Circumſtances, That their great Preparations were intended againſt England, and gave notice of it to his Maſter at Paris, from whom King James had the firſt certain and poſitive Intelligence. But the Heer Van Citters, the Dutch Ambaſſador in England, is ſaid to have aſſur'd his Majeſty, That the States were indeed paeparing for ſome conſiderable Action, but France had moſt reaſon to be alarm'd at it.

Preparations of the Dutch.

Intrigues of the French King:

The French King thought he could not meet with a fairer Opportunity, to engage King James in an Offenſive and Defenſive League, than the preſent Dangerous Condition of his Affairs; and therefore he immediately diſpatch'd to him Monſieur De Bon Repoſe, to offer him Thirty thouſand of his Men. This gave a Jealouſy to the Spaniſh Ambaſſador Don Pedro Ronquillo, who, in a Cloſet-Conference with the King, aſſured him, The Dutch could have no Deſign upon England; and then repreſented to him, the fatal Conſequences of his entring into Alliances with France (b); and how ill it wou'd ſound in the Nation, That whilſt he pretended to call a Free Parliament, he ſhou'd introduce Foreign Troops into the Kingdom. But it is certain, the Earl of Sunderland contributed much more to the Refuſal of the French King's Offers; which ſome of the Popiſh Cabal were for accepting, and which perhaps Providence alone prevented.

He offers K. James an Army.

Enquiry into theſe great Preparations.

During this Amuſement, the Engliſh Envoy at the Hague was order'd to Demand of the States-General, what they meant by their great and ſurprizing warlike Preparations both by Sea and Land, at that Time of the Year when no Expedition, eſpecially at Sea, cou'd be thought ſeaſonable? To which the States made Anſwer, That they Arm'd, in Imitation of his Britannick Majeſty; and might with more reaſon Demand a better Satisfaction about the Alliances into which his Majeſty was lately entred. This bold Anſwer, which at another Time might have occaſion'd a Rupture, was now left without Reply. The King of France ſeem'd impatient, that his Brother of England wou'd not accept his Aſſiſtance, nor his Advice (c): But to ſhew himſelf ſtill heartily concern'd for him, he commanded his Ambaſſador Count D'Avaux to deliver a Memorial to the States; which he did on Septemb. 9. to this Effect; "That many Circumſtances inclin'd "the King his Maſter, with Reaſon, to believe "that their Preparations threatned England: There- "fore his Majeſty had commanded him to declare "to them, That the Ties of Friendſhip and Alli- "ance between him and the King of Great-Britain "wou'd oblige him not only to aſſiſt him, but alſo "to look on the firſt Act of Hoſtility that ſhould "be committed by their Troops or their Fleet "againſt his Majeſty of Great-Britain, to a mani- "feſt Rupture of the Peace with his Crown.

Bold Anſwer of the States.

Memorial of Count D'Avaux.

The States-General return'd no Anſwer to this French-Memorial, but charg'd the Heer Van Citters to complain thereof to the Court of England. Whereupon a Council was held, wherein it was Reſolv'd to diſown the Proceedings of Count D'Avaux. This Reſolution the Earl of Middleton (Secretary of State) immediately communicated to Diſown'd by the Engliſh Court.

Purpoſe, being lodg'd at Mr. Houblon's in Wincheſter-Street, where were held ſeveral Conferences with the chief Citizens.

The Earl of Wiltſhire, now Duke of Bolton, was one of the firſt who went to the Hague on the glorious Errand of Liberty, and he was accompanied by the Lord Pawlet his Brother.

The Lord Eland, Son to the Marquis of Hallifax, was a voluntary Hoſtage to the Prince of Orange, for his Father'e Sincerity in this Matter: As was alſo the Lord Dunblain for his Father the Earl of Danby.

Mr. Echard expreſly affirms, that ſeveral of the Biſhops ſeriouſly reflecting on the imminent Danger, to which the Proteſtant Religion, as well as the whole Nation was expos'd, writ Invitations to his Highneſs the Prince of Orange, to ſuccour them in this Emergency.

(a) And yet there aroſe up an ungrateful Generation toward the End of Queen Anne, who boaſted and thank'd God, they had no Hand in the Revolution; and who would have had a Hand in deſtroying the Glory and all the Bleſſings of it. And they even condemned all the Reaſons and Motives tending to raiſe up a noble Spirit for it, under the reproachful Name of the Revolution Principles; when yet Dr. Sprat, Biſhop of Rocheſter, whom they ſometimes applaud, produces it for an Argument of Honour to the Church of England, by affirming once for all, that the main Body of thoſe, who made ſo brave a Stand, were ALL of the CHURCH of ENGLAND, and the Principles on which they ſtood, ALL CHURCH of ENGLAND PRINCIPLES. His Letters to the Lord Dorſet, &c. My Lord, ſays he, it was by theſe PERSONS and theſe PRINCIPLES that Popery was ſtopp'd in its full Career; by THESE it was hindred from conquering, and put in a Condition to be ſhortly after conquered it ſelf in this Nation.

(b) Mr. Echard has well enlarg'd upon this Hint, and after obſerving that the Emperor and the King of Spain had us'd their utmoſt Endeavours here to bring King James into the German League againſt France; he ſays, Don Pedro de Ronquillo the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, made uſe of the moſt prevailing Arguments to engage King James to break with France; aſſuring him, that Nothing would more endear him to his Proteſtant Subjects, nor more powerfully incline his Parliament to give Eaſe to the Roman-Catholicks. But his Majeſty was already ſo ſtrongly united with France, that he anſwered the Spaniſh Ambaſſador, That he would faithfully obſerve the Alliances he had made with his Maſter, but that he was oblig'd as religiouſly to maintain the Amity that was between him and the King of France his near Relation; that he deſir'd to live in Peace with all his Neighbours, and would endeavour to preſerve it amongſt them. —— The ſame Writer intimates this Partiality of King James to his Couſin of France to have been very Providential. For (ſays he) the Courts of Vienna and Madrid ſaw the Tendency of this unſatisfactory Anſwer, and were the more diſpos'd [in Conjunction with the Pope himſelf] to hearken to the Propoſals made them by the Prince of Orange, not only againſt King Lewis, but againſt the King of England his devoted Ally.

(c) The Earl of Sunderland in his Letter March 23. 1689. tells us, Indeed French Ships were offered to join with our Fleet, and they were refuſed. Since the Noiſe of the Prince's Deſign, more Ships were offered, and it was agreed how they ſhould be commanded, if ever deſired. I oppoſed to Death the accepting of them, as well as any Aſſiſtance of Men; and can ſay moſt truly, that I was the Principal Means of hindring both, by the Help of ſome Lords, with whom I conſulted every Day, and they with me, to prevent what we thought would be of great Prejudice, if not Ruinous to the Nation.

Van-

1688. 4 Jac. II.

Van-Citters (a); and the Engliſh Miniſters at the Hague, Bruſſels, and Madrid, were order'd to declare, That the French Memorial was preſented without his Majeſty's Knowledge or Approbation: And more effectually to pacify the Dutch, Skelton was recall'd from France; and upon his Arrival, was committed Priſoner to the Tower, for going beyond his Inſtructions, and diſcovering his Maſter's Secrets: Yet he was ſet at Liberty a few Days after, and made Colonel of a Regiment; nay, and ſhortly after was made Governor of his late Priſon the Tower. Which was indeed too quick a Way of revealing the Secret of feigning Anger and Puniſhment.

Skelton Recall'd, and committed to the Tower.

After all theſe Diſcouragements, Monſieur Barillon the French Ambaſſador made another Propoſal to the Engliſh Court, That France ſhou'd abandon the Deſign of Beſieging Phillipsburgh, and carry the War into Holland. Four or Five of the Council highly approv'd the Overture; but others warmly oppos'd it, alledging, That ſuch a Violation of former Treaties with Holland, wou'd be ſufficient to raiſe the Clamours of the whole Nation, and to alienate the Minds of all the Engliſh Proteſtants from his Majeſty. It was again very providential, that this Offer was likewiſe rejected; for the Acceptance of it, muſt have prevented, or at leaſt retarded the Deſigns of the Prince of Orange.

New Overtures of France.

King James was too late convinc'd of the Truth of an intended Invaſion; and therefore he now (too late) began to ſoften Matters, and, if poſſible, to reconcile the Hearts of his People to him. To this Purpoſe, after having declar'd in Council, on Aug. 24th, That he had reſolv'd to call a Parliament to meet on the 27th of November next; he publiſh'd a Declaration on Septemb. 21. That it was his Royal Purpoſe, to endeavour a legal Eſtabliſhment of an univerſal Liberty of Conſcience for all his Subjects. That it was alſo his Reſolution, inviolably to preſerve the Church of England; and that he ſhou'd be willing (b) the Roman-Catholicks ſhou'd remain incapable to be Members of the Houſe of Commons. And he did likewiſe aſſure all his Loving Subjects, That he ſhou'd be ready to do every Thing elſe, for their Safety and Advantage, that becomes a King who will always take Care of his People.

K. James at laſt convinc'd of an Invaſion from Holland.

He publiſhes a Declaration,

On Septemb. 26. He was pleas'd farther to declare, That he had authoriz'd and empower'd the Lords-Lieutenants of the ſeveral Counties, to grant Deputations to ſuch Gentlemen as had been lately removed from being Deputy-Lieutenants: And that he had farther given Directions to the Right-Honourable the Lord-Chancellor of England to put into the Commiſſion of the Peace, ſuch Gentlemen as had been laid aſide. And on Septemb. 28. the King publiſh'd a Proclamation, That he had receiv'd uudoubted Advice, That a great and ſudden Invaſion from Holland, with an Arm'd Force of Foreigners and Strangers, wou'd ſpeedily be made, in an Hoſtile manner, upon this his Kingdom; and that no leſs Matter, by this Invaſion, was propos'd and purpos'd, than abſolute Conqueſt of theſe his Kingdoms, and the utter ſubduing and ſubjecting him and all his People to a foreign Power; which was promoted (although it may ſeem almoſt incredible) by ſome of his Subjects, being Perſons of Wicked and Reſtleſs Spirits, Implacable Malice, and deſperate Deſigns. (c) — That although he had Notice ſome Time ſince, That a Foreign Force was preparing againſt him; yet he had always declin'd any Foreign Succours, but rather had choſen, next under GOD, to rely upon the true and ancient Courage, Faith and Allegiance of his own People. —— That he had intended to have met his Parliament in November next; but in regard of this ſtrange and unreaſonable Attempt from his neighbouring Countrey, (without any Manner of Provocation) he found it neceſſary to recal his ſaid Writs. And foraſmuch as the approaching Danger, now at Hand wou'd require a great and vigorous Defence; he do's ſtrictly charge and command all his Loving Subjects, both by Sea and Land, to be prepared to defend their Countrey, &c.

And many fair Promiſes,

1688. 4 Jac. II.

And a ſevrious Proclamation.

On Septemb. 30th, the King gave this farther Satisfaction, in theſe Words; from Whitehall (d): "Several of my Lords the Biſhops having attended "the King on Friday laſt, His Majeſty was pleas'd, "among other Gracious Expreſſions, to let them "know, That he wou'd ſignify his Pleaſure for taking off the Suſpenſion of the Lord Biſhop of London, which is done accordingly.

Other ſoftning Methods.

And becauſe there had been a confident Report, That there was a ſecret League between the Kings of England and France, in Prejudice to the Intereſt of Holland, and the common Liberties of Europe: Therefore, on Octob. 6th, N. S. the Marquis D'Albeville (Envoy Extraordinary from his Majeſty) had a Conference with Eight Deputies of the States-General, and deliver'd them the following Memoal.

THE under-written Envoy Extraordinary from the King of Great Britain, has receiv'd Order to repreſent to your Lordſhips, "That although "his Majeſty had believ'd, that what he had al"ready declar'd to your Ambaſſador in England, "and the Orders he had given to his ſaid Envoy Ex"traordinary upon the ſame Subject, might have "ſatisfy'd your Lordſhips, That there is no other "Treaty between his Majeſty and the Moſt Chriſtian King, than thoſe that are Publick, and in Print: "Yet ſince a great deal of Artifice and Induſtry has "been made uſe of, to make the World believe "that the King his Maſter is entred into other Trea"ties and Alliances with the Moſt Chriſtian King, "his Majeſty, to ſhew the great Regard he has to "the

A Memorial to the States, denying the Treaty betwixt England and France.

(a) It was now generally believ'd, that France and England were engag'd in a ſtrict Alliance. It is true, the Alliance was for ſome Time deny'd, but at laſt it was own'd by the French Ambaſſador, in a Memorial that he gave in to the States, upon the Reports of their deſigning to invade England; in which he told them, that the Alliance between his Maſter and the King of England was ſuch, that he muſt look on what was attempted againſt him as done againſt himſelf. This was a ſolemn Act by which the Alliance was own'd and publiſh'd. It is true, the Court of England did ſeem diſpleaſed with their Envoy; he was recall'd, and ſent to the Tower. But that appear'd only to be a Shew of Diſpleaſure; for in few Days from being a Priſoner, he was made a Lieutenant of the Tower. Perhaps his Importunity in getting the Alliance to be own'd was beyond his Inſtructions. Biſhop Burnet Pref. to Sermons, 1713. 8*vo*.

(b) This mighty Condeſcenſion of the King's being now willing that the Roman-Catholicks ſhould remain incapable to be Members of the Houſe of Commons, did but ſerve to betray what a kind of Houſe of Commons he had before intended to form; and what a Houſe of Peers was ſtill capable of being.

(c) On September 27th, his Majeſty ſet forth his moſt Gracious and General Pardon for all Manner of Treaſons, Felonies, Miſpriſions, &c. excepting Perſons particularly mentioned, viz. Robert Parſons, Edward Matthews, Samuel Venner, Andrew Fletcher, Colonel John Rumſey, Major John Manley, Iſaac Manley, Francis Charleton, Eſq; John Wildman, Eſq; Titus Oates, Robert Ferguſon, Gilbert Burnet, and Sir Robert Peyton. —— Theſe were moſt of them in the Court of the Prince of Orange ready to come over with him.

(d) The Letter to the Archbiſhop requiring this Attendance, runs thus. My Lord, the King thinking it requiſite to ſpeak with your Grace, and ſeveral others of the Biſhops, who are within a convenient Diſtance of this Place; his Majeſty commands me to acquaint you, That he would have you attend him upon Friday next, at Ten in the Morning. Sunderland P.

Accordingly (ſays the Biſhop of Rocheſter) All of us that were in Town, except the Archbiſhop, who was then Ill, waited on the King the Friday following, being the Day appointed. But little or nothing paſſing betwixt his Majeſty and us at our firſt Attendance, beyond general Expreſſions of his Favour and our Duty; we intreated my Lord of Canterbury to procure for us a ſecond and more particular Audience; wherein we might all deliver our plain and ſincere Senſe of Things, as we ſaw the dangerous Condition of the Church and State, then

1688. 4 Jac. II.

"the Friendſhip and Alliances which are between "him and your Lordſhips, and his Deſire to con-"tinue the ſame, has commanded the ſaid Envoy-"Extraordinary, in his Name, to aſſure your Lord-"ſhips, That there is no other Treaty between his "Majeſty and the Moſt Chriſtian King, than thoſe "that are Publick, and in Print. And farther, "That as his Majeſty extremely deſires the Preſer-"vation of the Peace and Repoſe of Chriſtendom, "ſo he will be alſo glad to take ſuch Meaſures with "Your Lordſhips, as may be moſt convenient for "maintaining the Peace of Nimeguen, and the "Truce of Twenty Years, concluded in 1614.

Given at the Hague, the 5th of Octob. 1688.

M. D'ALBYVILLE.

And yet this Memorial was ſuſpected to be another Blind, at a Juncture when every Thing was thought lawful that could gain a Point. There was afterward publiſh'd, An Account of the Private League betwixt the late K. James II. and the French King. In a Letter from a Gentleman in London, to a Gentleman in the Country.

Offer of Services to the King.

To encourage the Principal Nobility and Gentry to come in to the King's Aſſiſtance, it was publiſh'd, Sept. 30. "That his Grace the Duke of "Newcaſtle, the Earl of Lindſey, the Earl of Der-"by, the Lord Germaine, and others of the Nobi-"lity had, upon the News of the intended Inva-"ſion, humbly offer'd their Services to His Ma-"jeſty; who received very graciouſly that Tender "of their Duty, and had ſent Commiſſions to ſe-"veral of them to raiſe Men in their Countries." And within Two or Three Days, Publick Notice was further given, "That ſeveral of the Nobility "and Gentry had daily offer'd their Service to the "King, and were raiſing Men: And that His Ma-"jeſty had been pleaſed to give a Commiſſion to "his Grace the Duke of Newcaſtle, to raiſe a Re-"giment of Foot; to the Lord Brandon, and the "Marquis de Miremont, Nephew to the Earl of "Feverſham, each a Regiment of Horſe; to Co-"lonel Henry Gage, and Colonel Solomon Richards, "Regiments of Foot; and many Independent "Troops and Companies to ſeveral of the Nobili-"ty and Gentry." And after this, other Advertiſements were given, "That among ſeveral of the "Nobility and Gentry who continued to offer their "Services to His Majeſty, were, the Lord Marquis "of Wincheſter, the Earls of Pembroke, Weſt-"moreland, and Denbigh, and the Lord Hunting-"tower.

1688. 4 Jac. II.

Other Arts of Sweetning the People.

To (a) ſweeten, and, if poſſible, to ſecure the City of London, Information was given, October 2. "That the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen and Sheriffs, "with ſeveral other Eminent Citizens, had attend-"ed the King that Evening; and His Majeſty was "pleaſed to tell them, That out of his Concern "for the Peace and Welfare of the City, and as a "Mark of the great Confidence He had in them at "this Time, that the Kingdom is threaten'd with "an Invaſion, He had reſolved to reſtore them to "their (b) Ancient Charter and Privileges, and to put "them into the ſame Condition they were at the "Time of the Judgment pronounced againſt them "upon the Quo Warranto; That ſo they might be "the better enabled to ſerve him with that Duty "and Loyalty, which they had given the King his "Brother and Himſelf ſo many Teſtimonies of, "and upon which His Majeſty would now depend." Accordingly, within Four Days after, the Lord Chancellor himſelf carried into the City, the "In-"ſtrument of Reſtitution and Confirmation under "the Great Seal of England; and Sir John Chap-"man, thereby conſtituted Lord-Mayor, was ſworn "in the Guild-Hall with the uſual Solemnity; and "the Aldermen then in being, that were at the "Time of the ſaid Judgment, took their for-"mer Places, and the Vacancies were to be ſup-"ply'd by the Election of the Citizens, according "to the Ancient Cuſtom of the City.

The King adviſes with the Archbiſhop and Biſhops.

On Wedneſday, Octob. 3. the (c) Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Biſhops of London, Wincheſter, St. Aſaph, Ely, Chicheſter, Rocheſter, Bath and Wells, and Peterborough, waited upon the King, according to an Invitation and Encouragement of His Majeſty; who had lately told them, That He deſir'd the Aſſiſtance of their Counſels in this preſent Exigency; aſſuring them, That he was ready to do whatever they ſhould think neceſſary for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion, and of his Peoples Rights, without derogating from his own Prerogatives. And therefore He deſir'd them to conſult together, and bring their Opinions to Him. (d) They came therefore now, with the Archbiſhop at the Head of them, who addreſs'd himſelf to His Majeſty in this manner.

May it pleaſe Your MAJESTY;

Their Anſwer to His Majeſty.

"WHEN I had lately the Honour to wait "upon You, You were pleaſed briefly to "acquaint me with what had paſſed Two Days be-"fore between Your Majeſty and theſe my Reve-"rend Brethren: By which, and by the Account "which they themſelves gave me, I perceived that "in truth there paſſed nothing, but in very ge-"neral then requir'd from Men of our Character.—— On Saturday, Sept. 29. the Biſhop of Wincheſter (who had been one of the Biſhops called by Letter to attend the King) went out of Town. ——On Sunday, Sept. 30. my Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury obtain'd of the King, that He and the Biſhops ſhould be admitted to a full Liberty of Speech with Him the next Tueſday Morning.——All Monday, Octob. 1. we ſpent at Lambeth, in preparing the Humble Advice we thought fit to offer the next Day: But the King being otherwiſe accidentally diverted on Tueſday Morning, our Attendance on Him was put off till Wedneſday.

---

(a) By this Time, there was come to ſome private Hands, The Prince of Orange's Letter to all Commanders of Ships, and all Seamen that are now employ'd in the Engliſh Fleet: With another, to all the Officers and Soldiers in the Engliſh Army. Given at our Court at Dieren, the 29th Day of September, 1688. With the Form of a Prayer for the Preſent Expedition.

(b) The Earl of Sunderland, in his Letter, March 23. 1689. "Upon the firſt Thought upon the Prince of Orange's coming, "I laid hold of the Opportunity to preſs the King to do ſeveral "Things, which I would have had done ſooner; the chief of "which were, To reſtore Magdalen-College, and all other Ec-"cleſiaſtical Preferments, which had been diverted from what "they were intended for; to take off my Lord Biſhop of Lon-"don's Suſpenſion; to put the Counties into the ſame Hands "they were in ſome Time before; to annul the Eccleſiaſtical "Court; and to reſtore entirely all the Corporations of Eng-"land. Theſe Things were done effectually, by the Help of "ſome about the King; and it was then thought I had de-"ſtroyed my ſelf, by enraging again the whole Roman-Catho-"lick Party to ſuch a Height as had not been ſeen: They di-"ſpers'd Libels of me every Day; told the King that I be-"tray'd him; that I ruin'd him, by perſuading him to make "ſuch ſhameful Condeſcenſions; but moſt of all, by hin-"dring the Securing the Chief of the diſaffected Nobility and "Gentry, which was propoſed as a certain way to break all "the Prince's Meaſures; and by adviſing His Majeſty to call a "Free Parliament, and to depend upon that, rather than upon "Foreign Aſſiſtance."

(c) "Had we (ſays the Biſhop of Rocheſter) been ad-"mitted to His Majeſty that Tueſday, we could not have fail'd "of getting ſome Credit to our ſelves and to the Church.—— "On Wedneſday Morning we had our Second Audience, when "my Lord of Canterbury deliver'd our free and honeſt Advice, "with ſuch a becoming Meekneſs, Gravity and Courage, as "indeed were admirable."

(d) The Account of the Biſhops who waited upon the King with their Propoſals, was (within a Day or two after) ſent to the Preſs by Dr. Sherlock, and begins in theſe Words: "SIR, I am much ſurprized at the ill Conſtruction ſome Peo-"ple make of the Actions of thoſe Biſhops who have lately "waited upon the King; eſpecially conſidering that moſt of "them are the very Men, who not many Months ago appear'd "ſo

“ neral Terms, and Expreſſions of Your Majeſty's “ Gracious and Favourable Inclinations to the “ Church of England, and of our reciprocal Du- “ ty and Loyalty to Your Majeſty : Both which “ were ſufficiently underſtood, and declared before ; “ and (as one of my Brethren then told You) “ would have been in the ſame State, if the Biſhops “ had not ſtirr'd one Foot out of their Dioceſes. “ SIR, I found it grieved my Lords the Biſhops, “ to have come ſo far, and to have done ſo little ; “ and I am aſſured, they came then prepared to “ have given Your Majeſty ſome more particular “ Inſtances of their Duty and Zeal for Your Ser- “ vice, had they not apprehended from ſome Words “ which fell from Your Majeſty, That You were not “ then at Leiſure to receive them. It was for this “ Reaſon that I then beſought Your Majeſty, to com- “ mand us once more to attend You all together, “ which Your Majeſty was pleaſed graciouſly to al- “ low and encourage. We therefore are here now “ before You, with all Humility to beg your Per- “ miſſion, That we may ſuggeſt to Your Majeſty “ ſuch Advices as we think proper at this Seaſon, “ and conducing to your Service, and ſo leave them “ to your Princely Conſideration.” Which the King being graciouſly pleaſed to permit, the Arch-biſhop proceeded as followeth.

“ 1. Our Firſt Humble Advice is, That Your “ Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed to put the “ Management of your Government in the ſeve- “ ral Counties, into the Hands of ſuch of the No- “ bility and Gentry there, as are legally qualified “ for it.

“ 2. That Your Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed “ to annul your Commiſſion for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, “ and that no ſuch Court (as that Commiſſion ſets “ up) may be erected for the future.

“ 3. That Your Majeſty will graciouſly be plea- “ ſed, That no Diſpenſation may be granted or “ continued, by virtue whereof any Perſon, not “ duly qualified by Law, hath been, or may be “ put into any Place, Office or Preferment, in “ Church or State, or in the Univerſities, or conti- “ nued in the ſame ; eſpecially ſuch as have Cure “ of Souls annexed to them : And in particular, “ That You will be graciouſly pleaſed to reſtore the “ Preſident and Fellows of St. Mary Magdalen Col- “ lege in Oxford.

“ 4. That Your Majeſty will graciouſly be plea- “ ſed to ſet aſide all Licenſes or Faculties already “ granted, by which any Perſons of the Romiſh “ Communion may pretend to be enabled to teach “ Publick Schools ; and that no ſuch be granted for “ the future.

“ 5. That Your Majeſty will be graciouſly plea- “ ſed to deſiſt from the Exerciſe of ſuch a Diſpen- “ ſing Power, as hath of late been uſed ; and to “ permit that Point to be freely and calmly debated “ and argued, and finally ſettled in Parliament.

“ 6. That Your Majeſty will be graciouſly plea- “ ſed to inhibit the Four Foreign Biſhops, who ſtile “ themſelves Vicars Apoſtolical, from further inva- “ ding the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, which is by Law “ veſted in the Biſhops of this Church.

“ 7. That Your Majeſty will be pleaſed graci- “ ouſly to fill the vacant Biſhopricks, and other Ec- “ cleſiaſtical Promotions within your Gift, both in “ England and Ireland, with Men of Learning and “ Piety ; and in particular, (which I muſt own “ to be my peculiar Boldneſs, for 'tis done with- “ out the Privity of my Brethren) That You will “ be graciouſly pleaſed forthwith to fill the Archi- “ epiſcopal Chair of York (which has ſo long ſtood “ empty, and upon which a whole Province de- “ pends) with ſome very worthy Perſon : For “ which (Pardon me, SIR, if I am bold to ſay) “ You have now here before You a very fair “ Choice.

“ 8. That Your Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed “ to ſuperſede all further Proſecution of Quo War- “ ranto's againſt Corporations, and to reſtore to “ them their Ancient Charters, Privileges and Fran- “ chiſes, as we hear God hath put into your Maje- “ ſty's Heart to do for the City of London, which “ we intended to have made otherwiſe one of our “ principal Requeſts.

“ 9. That if it pleaſe Your Majeſty, Writs may “ be iſſued out with convenient Speed, for the Cal- “ ling of a Free and Regular Parliament, in which “ the Church of England may be ſecured according “ to the Acts of Uniformity ; Proviſion may be “ made for a due Liberty of Conſcience, and for Se- “ curing the Liberties and Properties of all your “ Subjects ; and a mutual Confidence and good “ Underſtanding may be eſtabliſhed between Your “ Majeſty and all your People.

“ 10. Above all, That Your Majeſty will be “ graciouſly pleaſed to permit your Biſhops to offer “ You ſuch (a) Motives and Arguments, as (we “ truſt) may, by God's Grace, be effectual to “ perſwade Your Majeſty to return to the Commu- “ nion of the Church of England, into whoſe moſt “ Holy Catholick Faith You were baptized, and in “ which You were educated, and to which it is our “ daily earneſt Prayer to God, that You may be re- “ united.

“ Theſe, SIR, are the Humble Advices, which “ out of Conſcience of the Duty we owe to God, “ to Your Majeſty, and to our Country, we think “ fit at this Time to offer to Your Majeſty, as ſuit- “ able to the preſent State of your Affairs, and “ moſt conducing to your Service ; and ſo to leave “ them to your Princely Conſideration. And we “ heartily beſeech Almighty God, in whoſe Hand the “ Hearts of all Kings are, ſo to diſpoſe and govern “ yours, that in all your Thoughts, Words and “ Works, You may ever ſeek his Honour and Glory, “ and ſtudy to preſerve the People committed to your

“ ſo publickly and ſo couragiouſly, even to the Hazard of all “ the Intereſts they had in this World, in Defence of our Pro- “ teſtant Religion, and the Laws of the Land.”——And in the Concluſion of Dr. Sherlock's Paper are theſe Words : “ I do aſ- “ ſure you, and I am certain I have the beſt Grounds in the “ World for my Aſſurance, That the Biſhops will never ſtir “ one Jot from their Petition ; but that they will, whenever “ that happy Opportunity ſhall offer it ſelf, let the Proteſtant “ Diſſenters find, that they will be better than their Word “ given in their famous Petition.”—— Theſe Advices were diſlik'd by ſome People, for fear they might have taught King James to pretend the Reforming of Abuſes, till he had been out of Danger of the Expedition of the Prince of Orange. —— Mr. Sam. Johnſon wrote thus of them : “ As ſoon as “ ever I ſaw them, I plainly perceiv'd they were all of them “ deceitful and Mountebank Remedies ; and being urg'd for “ my Opinion of them, I gave my Thoughts freely concern- “ ing them ; and the rather, becauſe they were ſaid to be ve- “ ry much applauded Abroad. I ſaid, that I was ſure the King “ would comply with them, but not all at once ; but he “ would make his Conceſſions ſo, as to garniſh the Gazette with “ them Twice a Week, and to amuſe the People with a Suc- “ ceſſion of Favours, as if there were to be no End of them. “ That theſe Grievances being thus redreſs'd, there would be “ no need of the Prince of Orange's Expedition, to take care “ of that which was already done to his Hand. That theſe “ Conceſſions would ſtand, till the King had recover'd his “ Fright ; and then all Things would return into the old “ Channel.”

(a) We are aſſur'd by Mr. Echard, that this laſt Point of Re-conciling the King to the Communion of the Church of England, the Archbiſhop afterwards reinforc'd in a Private Conference with the King, by a Diſcourſe full of convincing Arguments, and which ſavour'd of all the free Breathings of the Primitive Times of Chriſtianity. But the Romiſh Religion had now taken too deep Root in his Royal Breaſt.—— A Reader of this, from the Event of Things, would think it a great Providence, that neither the Father, nor the pretended Son, would hearken to any Counſel of forſaking Popery.

1688. 4 Jac. II.

“ Charge, in Wealth, Peace and Godlineſs, to your “ own both Temporal and Eternal Happineſs. A- “ men.

W. Cant.

We do heartily concur,

Fran. Eli.	Tho. Petriburg.
Jo. Ciceſtr.	H. Londin.
Tho. Roffen.	P. Winton.
Tho. Bath. & Wellen.	W. Aſaph. (a)

The King promiſes to comply with their Lordſhips Advice.

Theſe Propoſals would at another Time have rais'd the King's Indignation, but the Neceſſity of his Affairs obliged him now to thank their Lordſhips, and to promiſe that He would comply with them. Accordingly, on Octob. 5. “ His Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to declare in Council, That in Purſuance of his Reſolution and Intentions to protect the Church of England, and that all Suſpicions and Jealouſies to the contrary may be removed, He had thought fit to diſſolve the Commiſſion for Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical; and accordingly did give Directions to the Lord Chancellor, to cauſe the ſame to be forthwith done.” And on October 10. it was farther declared, “ That His Majeſty having received ſeveral Complaints of great Abuſes and Irregularities committed in the late Regulations of the Corporations, has thought fit to authorize and require the Lords Lieutenants of the ſeveral Counties, to inform themſelves of all ſuch Abuſes and Irregularities within their Lieutenancies, and to make forthwith Report thereof to His Majeſty, together with what they conceive fit to be done for redreſſing the ſame; whereupon His Majeſty will give ſuch farther Orders as ſhall be requiſite.” On Octob. 12. it was again publiſh'd from Whitehall, “ That the King having declared his Reſolution to preſerve the Church of England in all its Rights and Immunities, His Majeſty, as an Evidence of it, has ſignify'd his Pleaſure to the Right Reverend Father in God, the Lord Biſhop of Wincheſter, as Viſitor of St. Mary Magdalen College in Oxford, to ſettle that Society regularly and ſtatutably.

He diſſolves the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion,

And ſeems to reſtore the Corporations,

And Magdalen College in Oxford:

And actually reſtored Corporations to their Ancient Charters;

On October 17. the King publiſh'd a Proclamation for reſtoring Corporations to their Ancient Charters, Liberties, Rights and Franchiſes: And Orders of the Council were the ſame Day made, for removing and diſplacing all Mayors, Sheriffs, Recorders, Town-Clerks, Aldermen, Common-Council-Men, &c. which had been put in by the late King, or his preſent Majeſty, ever ſince the Year 1679.

And yet no depending on theſe Favours.

It ſoon appear'd how little the Nation was to depend upon theſe (b) haſty and forc'd Conceſſions of the King. On October 16. the Biſhop of Wincheſter cauſ'd a Citation to be fixed on the Gate of Magdalen-College, to recal Dr. Hough, and the former Fellows of that Society, by the Second of November following; but an Account coming that very Poſt, that the Dutch Fleet had ſuffer'd very much in a Storm, and that they would hardly be able to put to Sea again till the Spring; the Biſhop, upon a frivolous Pretence, was recall'd to London, and the Reſtoration of the College deferr'd. Yet ſoon after, that News being contradicted, and the Dutch Fleet reported to be in a ſailing Poſture, the Affection to the Church of England reviv'd, and ſo the Buſineſs of the (c) College was effected on the 24th of that Month. This Paſſage is the more remarkable, becauſe it loſt King James many Friends, and leſſen'd him in his Character and Intereſt; as if his Politicks were to change with the Wind; and as News varied, He was playing faſt and looſe with his Subjects.

Some Things done not popular: Making a ſorry Man Biſhop of Oxford:

In the mean Time, ſome Things were done that were not at all popular. Upon the Death of Dr. Samuel Parker, Biſhop of Oxford, and the illegal Preſident of Magdalen-College, His Majeſty gave the Biſhoprick to Mr. Timothy Hall, one of the meaneſt and moſt obſcure of the City-Divines, who had taken no other Degree than that of Batchelor of Arts; and had indeed no Merit, but that of Reading the King's Declaration in his Church, when all his Brethren of Conſcience and Honour did refuſe it. The Advancement of ſuch a Perſon to the See of Oxford, could be nothing but a Deſpite to the Univerſity, and a Contempt upon the Church of England. Yet this unworthy Biſhop Elect was, on Sunday Octob. 7. conſecrated at Lambeth, by his Grace the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, aſſiſted by the Biſhops of Chicheſter and Cheſter. It was another unpopular Thing, to baptize the Prince of Wales into the Roman Communion, and make the Pope his Godfather; as if it were done with a deſign'd Inſult upon the Proteſtant Religion; and to give this Publick Account of it:

Popiſh Baptiſm of the Prince of Wales.

“ Whitehall, Octob. 15. This Day, in the Chapel of St. James's, His Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, being before Chriſten'd, was ſolemnly Named (amidſt the Ceremonies and Rites of Baptiſm) James Francis Edward: His Holineſs, repreſented by his Nuncio, Godfather, and the Queen-Dowager Godmother. The King and Queen aſſiſted at the Solemnity, with a great Attendance of Nobility and Gentry, and Concourſe of People, all expreſſing their Joy and Satisfaction, which was ſuitable to the Place and Occaſion.

General Belief of an Impoſture, in the Prince of Wales.

This Triumph of Popery did but ſerve to increaſe the General Suſpicion and Report of an Impoſture; and a common Fame was ſpread, That the Mother

(a) The next Day, being the 4th of October, 1688. there was publiſh'd, by His Majeſty's Pleaſure, A Form of Prayers, in Three Collects; One for Repentance, a Second for the King, a Third for Peace and Unity: To be uſed in all Churches and Chapels within this Kingdom, during the Time of Publick Apprehenſion of Invaſion. 4to. The Author of the Hiſtory of Deſertion ſays, “ I am fully perſuaded, theſe Prayers contributed very conſiderably to the late Revolution, and taught Men they were no more bound to promote any of the late King's Undertakings with their Swords, than with their Prayers, but what tended to the Honour and Service of God. And the very Supplicating God to preſerve our Holy Religion, together with our Laws and Ancient Government, neceſſarily put Men in Mind they had been endanger'd, and by Whom was as well known. And it ſeemed Nonſenſe and Hypocriſy, to pray to God to preſerve theſe, and in the mean time to aid and aſſiſt the Enemies of both to deſtroy and ruin them.”

(b) One of the now Fellows of Magdalen College becoming afterwards Rector of Slinbridge in the County of Gloceſter, publiſh'd a Sermon on St. Barnabas Day, in 1713. in the Preface whereto he tells us: ‘ I happen'd to be Fellow of Magdalen. ‘ College,—when their blind and greedy Zeal began with ſome of the Heads of the Univerſity, and a Society thereof—— All the reſt muſt ſoon have taken their Turn likewiſe out of their Freeholds, had there not been a Proteſtant Wind. Thereby hangs a Tale, which hath not been told publickly, that I know of; and I think it not unſeaſonable to tell it now, that we may thence learn how to truſt Popery another Time. “ When the Prince of Orange, our late Sovereign of Glorious Memory, was almoſt ready to embark, a kind of General Intimation was diſpatch'd after us, to return from the ſeveral Counties whither we were ſent a grazing:—— But when ſome of us were come back within Four or Five Hours of the Univerſity, a certain Notice was ſent us on the Road, that we need not make much Haſte, for that the Wind was chang'd at Court. But when after ſome few Days, it was fear'd again there that the Prince would ſhortly arrive, we might go forward; and the Biſhop of Wincheſter (the Local Viſitor) was ſent down to reinſtate us in our College: But his Lordſhip had ſcarce refreſh'd himſelf, before a Courier came and beat up his Quarters, and requir'd his Return to Court, without reſtoring us to our own again: Tho' it was done at laſt, when there was a Proteſtant, or rather Providential Wind again.”

